A large sheet of graph paper with a grid of small squares. The grid is composed of 20 columns and 30 rows of small squares. There are several horizontal lines drawn across the grid, dividing it into sections. The lines are drawn at regular intervals, approximately every 10 rows. The paper is white with black grid lines.

The Angelic Alphabet

The illustration shown below is of the “Enochian”, “Angelic” or “Adamical” alphabet as drawn by Edward Kelley on the 6th of May 1583, at the end of the Loagaeth (in MS. Sloane 3189 – note that this is not the same as Dee’ copy of the alphabet in MS. Sloane 3188, which is slightly different). Dee’s diary entry contains this note:

But it is to be noted that when E.K. could not aptly imitate the form of the characters or letters as they were shewed, that then they appeared drawn on his paper with a light yellow colour, which he drew the black upon; and so the yellow colour disappearing, there remained only the shape of the letter in black...

Regarding the letters themselves, Dee notes in a conversation with the angel Il (28th April 1583):

Dee: And first I think that those letters of our Adamical alphabet have a due peculiar unchangeable proportion of their forms, and likewise that their order is also mystical.

Il: These letters represent the creation of man, and therefore they must be in proportion. They represent the workmanship wherewithal the soul of man was made like unto his creator.

Letter name	Pal	Med	Don	Ceph	Van	Fam	Gisg
Pronunciation of letter name (if different)	The “p” pronounced remissly (that is, faintly).			“Keph”
English equivalent	X	O	R	Z	U	S	T

The Angelic script is written right to left, and is commonly accented – see the Loagaeth, and the English transliterations of the 48 Calls or Keys.

The letter ‘C’, as in English, can be pronounced as ‘S’ or ‘K’. Similarly, the letter ‘G’ also represents the sound ‘J’; as can the letter Gon (‘I’ or ‘Y’), though infrequently. Also, the letter Van is pronounced either ‘U’ or ‘V’. The sound ‘W’ is probably represented literally by a double-‘U’. Moreover, it would seem that the Angelic spelling ‘PH’ is pronounced ‘F’, as in English. Also, ‘CH’ may be pronounced as the Greek Chi, or as ‘TCH’.

There are further similarities to other languages. For instance, ‘AU’ is pronounced ‘AF’, which is reminiscent of Greek. There is also a strong possibility that the letter ‘Q’ is pronounced gutturally, as the Semitic “Qaf” or “Qoph”; although the English sound ‘QU’ is present in Enochian.

The letter ‘Z’ is occasionally given with the pronunciation ‘ZOD’ which is merely a 16th Century name of the letter “Zed” or “Zee”.

Again, I am told...
“Write This Down”...

Enochian Entity Realms – the EE 30 Aethyrs

After exploring the 30 Aethyrs/Aires...
[some of them, more than once]
...the Visions became more linear for me.

The Aethyrs have boundaries, and these Territories have Their own laws and jurisdiction.

The Laws are ‘Laws of Geometry’

The Geometry conforms to the lucid flow of liquid boundaries.

There are 92* Governors, (not 91)

[Again, this is My Own Research & Experience]

[*This may be discussed in a later Document]

I am Not one who participates in the many New Age Channeling Doctrines circling this New Aeon.

But Sacred Geometry holds some truths.

The 'Book of Enoch', and just about anything attributed to Enoch... usually holds some type of 'Magickal Math' principles, attached.

In Geometry, a Tetrahedron is a polyhedron composed of four triangular faces.

The Tetrahedron is the three-dimensional case of the more general concept of a *Euclidean simplex.

The Tetrahedron is one kind of pyramid

[A Tetrahedron is also known as a Triangular Pyramid]

Reference: "The Mathematicall Praeface to Elements of Geometrie of *Euclid of Megara, by John Dee"

Obviously, the EE knew fully well, that John Dee could relate in these Mathematical terms.

Visualize the above Tetrahedron –

"Flattened Out"...

Then “Super-Impose” a few of them over each other...

...& then more, once the visualization gets easier

Keep doing this until you have 87
“Flattened Out” Tetrahedron Corners
[29 ‘Flattened-Out’ Tetrahedrons would produce 87 Corners]
 $29 \times 3 = 87$

This is a very simplistic Representation of the Enochian Aethyrs-[Aires #2-30]

30 Aethyrs

TEX [the 1st Aethyr/Aire] has 4 Divisions...

There are 87 Territories, divided amongst the [Flattened – Out] Tetrahedrons.

Then we added a Square- [which really is a Tesseract]- but for our simple understanding- just a square...

We now have 91 Enochian Zones.

Zones = Fractions of [Distinct] Aethyrs.

These 91 Zones compose the 30 Enochian Aethyrs

Of course, They are not flat- & These really are not globes, either.
But- for simple analogy- we will think of these as Spheres.
[Similar to visualizing the Tree of Life]

Each Sphere is a Globe with a Tetrahedron inside it...
&
...One Sphere with a Square inside

Each of these 30/91 revolving and rotating machines are unique, with Their Own Laws, Governments and Rulers...
91 Zones- 92 Governors- 30 Aires/Aethyrs

In the “ZAX Vision”, the EE explained it as:

This is the Analogy of Correlation

(This Volume: “ZAX Vision: Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”)

“Think of the 18 Calls as The Keys that Open the Tumblers of the Loagaeth cities.

*The WatchTowers contain It’s occupants, &
the Governors of the 30 Aethyrs” [the 19th Key]
The Holy Table- is as the -Loagaeth & 30 Aethyrs.*

*The 7 Ensigns- is as the -Heptarchial Mystica
Sigillum Dei Aemeth- is as the -WatchTowers*

Microcosm- is as the –Macrocosm

The EE Infrastructure: “Knitting Together”

30 Aethyrs are “of” the Cities of Loagaeth

Liber Loagaeth are 49 gold sheets with a differing front and back.

In other words, this signifies “Thickness or Volume” and that each “page” is 3D- maybe, even... “Multi-Dimensional”

The 19th Call is a Trumpet that Calls the 91 Governors

The 91 parts are ‘etheric counterparts’ “of” the 30 Aethyrs

*Heptarchial Mystica is the ‘Cosmology’ and ‘Calendar’
system of the EE MultiVerse(s)*

Previously, I wrote:

“Dee’s diaries are vague in establishing a direct link between the Enochian Keys/Calls and the Watchtower tablets.”

The WatchTowers contain the ‘Census’ [inhabitants] of the 30 Aethyrs, 91 Parts and Loagaeth.

Think of the WatchTower as a telephone directory.

Find the occupant and dial it in!

The 18 Calls/Keys [including the 19th] are directly related to Loagaeth.

If Loagaeth was a Nation, the 18 Calls is it’s Declaration of Independence. [‘Directives’]

The EE were very interested in the World’s Kingdoms.

We see this as an interest because the EE Hierarchy is composed of a “Theocracy”- like the 12 Tribes of Israel.

EE has Kings, Seniors, Princes, Ministers and of course, God(s)...and a God of Justice

(Scales of Balance)

*The purpose of Loagaeth:
Circulating it's Energy Matrix/Theocratic Kingdom ..then-
"The End of the World".*

*"But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world Her time, and placed over Her Angelic keepers,

I believe some of the familiar number sequences in the 18

INTRODUCTION

This book is part of the record of an extended magickal working involving the Tablet of Earth from John Dee's Enochian magickal system. This section presents the results of a series of invocations of the Seniors from that Tablet. The record is complete and is presented exactly as it was received at the time of the invocations, without editing.

The invoking names of the Seniors are derived from the Great Central Cross of the Tablet by reading outwards horizontally and vertically from the two centermost squares of the Tablet. In the Golden Dawn's theory of the Enochian system, they represent the forces of the planets manifesting within the element, and are considered to be Briatic in nature. With the Elemental King, who represents the Sun and is a link between the Briatic and the Yetziratic levels of the Tablet, they bind together all the forces within the Tablet.

Additionally, the Seniors are said to provide knowledge specifically concerning "human affairs", and the present record confirms that in the broadest sense. On another level (and unknown to me at the time of the operations) the 24 Seniors in the four Tablets correlate with the 24 Elders mentioned in the Revelation of St. John the Divine. In this latter case, they relate to the zodiac signs, presumably two for each sign. And again, the record would seem to support this attribution.

A somewhat different method of operation is used here than in the previous invocations of the series that were described in Touring the Earth Tablet. In that work, each of the "Kerubic" squares of the Tablet was examined individually. The visions were deliberately forced into a highly visual and symbolic form, along the lines set down in the Golden Dawn's rules for astral workings. While these restrictions made it easy to establish the validity and consistency of the visions, it also forced the information given by the Kerubic forces into an extremely cumbersome and hard to read form.

In the current series, no effort has been made to make the visions conform to the baroque style touted by the Golden Dawn. Rather, the Seniors were allowed to present themselves in their own manner, except for a brief presentation of a telematic image as a check of validity. Attempting to examine each square individually would have been much too cumbersome. The result has been much more direct and readable than in the previous case.

Despite the looser form, the results of these invocations are entirely consistent with the previous invocations of the working. Taken together, they present a developing system of symbolism related to the planet Earth, the various modes of magickal initiation, and man's place on Earth and in the universe.

The story presented by the Seniors is a history of the spiritual development of man on Earth, as viewed by the being who is the life of the Earth and those appointed to direct that development. The main characters are those beings whose actions are the root of the mythos of the gods Set and Horus, and the plot describes their conflicts as they contended for control of man's evolution over eighty million years. With the earlier works in this series, it also presents a “reconstruction” of the original mythos of Set, from before the time when priests of Horus and Osiris demolished his temples and turned him into a devil-god for their own forms of religion.

This mythos is not a step backward in time, but a re-formulation in terms of the incoming energies of this present day, when the equinox is moving into the constellation of Aquarius. The philosophy presented is entirely consistent with the basic tenets of Thelema as originally stated in Liber AL vel Legis, and those later elaborations presented by C.S. Jones (Frater Achad).

The energies of the sign of Aquarius are vastly different from the energies of the previous aeon, which was under the sign of Pisces. The Piscean age was characterized by highly structured, imposed systems of religion and magick, presented through the work of rigid hierarchical organizations. In that age, the individual was expected to subordinate himself to the work and symbolism of the group, and to accept what was given to him on faith. Man was seen as being at the bottom of the spiritual hierarchy, and was therefore subordinate to all of the spiritual forces. He could only contact them through faith and supplication, in effect begging them for a bit of wisdom.

The Aquarian energies, on the other hand, are extremely individualistic. The ruling planet, Uranus, and the exalted planet, Mercury, show that in this new time individuals can achieve magickal and spiritual success entirely through their own efforts, without the aid of any outside force. The results of their work will be proportional to the effort they put into it. Where Mercury, knowledge, was in its detriment in Pisces, here it is at its height. Thus knowing and self-will, and not submission and faith, are now to be the key to initiation.

Under the Aquarian energies, each man contributes to the group work by doing his own work and discovering his own Will, without reference to the work of others. The links between the work of one person and another will come naturally, as a consequence of the internal connections that exist between all things, and not as an externally-imposed set of formulae. The connections mentioned above are one example of this principle. No doubt many more examples will arise in coming years.

Following this principle, I would like to encourage the reader to examine this work and all such works with a critical eye, to not accept it as literally true, and not accept it as symbolic truth unless it fits your own views of the spirit. Perhaps another way is better for you. There is more than enough room for any number of views.

Before concluding, a few explanatory remarks might be in order.

Where reference to the cabalistic Tree of Life is made in this work, it is always to the revised version discovered and presented by Frater Achad. I have personally found this form of the Tree to be much more productive than the old G.D. version. The extended working of which this paper is a part has demonstrated that it is not merely a curiosity, but a workable and very effective system of symbolism, at least the equal of the older version of the Tree. But the use of this alternate system should not deter users of the older Tree from reading this book. The essential aspects of the work are not dependent on the Tree at all, and can be applied to many different systems.

Introduction

It seems appropriate to provide the readers with a minimum sketch of the symbolic basis of the narrative, so that they might have some clues to its occult interpretation.

The planetary symbolism of the Seniors themselves appears only on a very superficial level, and has little to do with the content of their story. The plot of the story follows the sequence of the zodiac signs in precessional order, starting with the sign of Pisces, showing the Earth and her Lunar twin as the two fishes. Further development follows through Aquarius and the other signs until it ends in Aries, with a minor epilogue not related to the signs. The portion concerning the Earth-Spirit and the portion concerning the character Set follow parallel but separate threads until they meet in the sign of Scorpio, from which point the story goes forward in a single plotline. All the major plot elements relate in some way to the astrological (as opposed to the cabalistic) attributes of the signs.

The main characters represent the elements of the modified INRI or IRNI formula, presented in detail in the paper titled Set / Horus and several of my other papers. (The formula's appearance here is in fact the first clue I received as to the modified formula's existence.) Briefly, the Earth herself represents the first and last "I" of the formula, corresponding to the astrological signs Taurus and Aquarius respectively. This dual characterization shows her as both a celestial being in her own right (Aquarius = "The Star") and as the nurturing mother (Taurus, ruled by Venus and the Moon) within whose "womb" and at whose behest most of the action takes place.

The protagonist, Set, corresponds to the "N" of IRNI, and his described character relates closely to that sign, its traditional ruler Mars, and its exalted planet Uranus. The sign's modern ruler, Pluto, appears only as an undercurrent and in the Pisces phase of Set's plotline. Set's opposite number, Horus, represents the "R" of INRI, corresponding to Sol and its sign Leo.

There is also the question of identities to be considered. The reader might wonder, as he examines this work, just who the Seniors are speaking to. It would be absurd to think that the scribe, the fellow whose name appears in the copyright notice, is the one who did all the things the Seniors attribute to the one they speak to. He is all too human, very much a child of his times, and more than a little bit of a fool. But if not him, then who?

In the words of the Seniors, the scribe is part of a tripartite being, a "man who is a mage who is a god". As a general rule, when the first person singular is used in this work, it is a blend of the scribe and the mage, in varying proportions, who speaks. The distinction between them is never too clear to the scribe, and it is becoming less clear as this working progresses. But the more doubtful and uncertain the "I" who speaks appears, the greater the proportion of the scribe in the mixture.

The Book of the Seniors

But when the Seniors speak, they are generally referring to the actions of the mage, the god, or a blending of the two. The sole exception is when they refer to events occurring on the physical plane during the lifetime of the scribe.

Perhaps the best view to take on this subject is to consider each aspect as a pseudo-autonomous subset of the next highest aspect. That is, each is a projection of the will of the next which can act independently most of the time, but which is absorbed and loses its individuality when the next highest aspect chooses. Thus, the lower aspect is never entirely certain whether it is expressing just itself or is acting as an extension of a higher aspect.

That being said, I will let the Seniors speak for themselves. As always, I welcome comments and correspondence about this work.

ACZINOR, SENIOR OF JUPITER

4/10/86

As the vision opened, I found myself in a place where blue sky came down to a yellow plain. There was a brilliance about everything, a cheery internal glow. I saw that the yellow plain had the texture of velvet or cotton candy.

Looking to the east, I saw a star coming up above the horizon. It had eight points around the circumference, another point aimed towards me and another pointed away from me.

To the south, I saw a lion seated on a cubical throne.

To the west, there was a watery area, in which a boat or barge was travelling. To the north there was an image of the planet Jupiter, rotating majestically in space.

I called again upon the Senior Aczinor, and he appeared wearing robes of blue with a dark purple shimmer in the folds. I did the LVX signs, to which he responded with the sign of Set, LVX, and the sign of the Enterer. I tested him with the pentagram of earth (which had no effect) and with the hexagram of Jupiter, which caused his force to flow into me. He himself dissolved, passed through the hexagram, and reformulated himself on the near side of it.

From close up, I could see that his hair was white, and his skin was a violet so dark and rich as to be almost black. His eyes were a lighter shade of violet. He held up his right hand in the sign of blessing and asked me to return it. Another flow of force went between us, filling my own aura with a deep violet similar to his own color.

He said “Thank you, o mage of power. Now we can speak clearly to each other. I am Aczinor, representative of the father Jupiter in the system of the Earth Tablet. Though your invocations began with the King Iczhihal, yet I am the first to speak, being the initiator among the planetary powers of the Tablet. I the wisdom of the King, and of his father the Sun, and cause it to take form before the eyes of man. I am the first below the so-called abyss in the Tree of Life, and so I am the pattern of manifestation within the world. Thus my star shows ten points, and thus the lion, the king, is enthroned by my existence. I function as his seat of rulership, causing his power to be extended into matter. Thus the four-square throne¹ is mine. The barge of the west shows my watery character, as the yellow plain and blue sky show my airy nature. The barge again is a foursquare construction, fitting the symbolism of my sephira, which is also considered watery in some ways. Thus also I float above the waters of creation in the earth's sphere, guiding those waters in their flowing downwards into matter.

“Since I am of the earth as well as of Jove, I am also related in some ways to his physical manifestation. The equivalent power in Jove's system rules those levels of his physical body in which life has appeared, taking its energy not from the Sun, but from the weaker but still great life of Jove himself.

1. When he said the words “seat” and “throne”, there was a second voice saying the enochian word “thild”, which Dee translated to mean both these words.

The Book of the Seniors

“Now you have been asked to be shown the invocations of the planets in the enochian system. I can not do this myself, being but the most junior of his representatives within the levels of the system. But I can tell you how to go about preparing for these. As you have thought, it is best to do invocations of all the seniors within the tablets. But rather than holding to a single tablet, invoke all of the equivalent Seniors from each of the tablets at once. This will allow you to get a full view of the action of the planet with the sphere of Earth, who contains all of the tablets yet presented to man within herself.

“From this, we will hope to instill enough of the force within you to make the presentation of the sphere clear and easy to perceive. Then you can go to your castle and locate the books with the invocations, and read them and transcribe them clearly.”²

“To continue, since you have invoked me and I have come, we must use the force for some purpose. Therefore, let me begin a tale, as is my right as the initiator.”³

“The planets of the system, with the exception of Luna, are all the bodies of lives of a scope so inclusive as to make the perceptions of men and angels nothing in comparison. All of them, even the least, operates at least at the level of Yesod in the Tree of which the manifest Tree of Life is Malkuth. Most of them operate in Netzach or Tiphereth of that larger Tree.”⁴

“The one exception, Luna, is a dead world. Its action on man is purely a reflection of the Earth's own power, projected outward by the minds of men onto the nearest convenient target. Luna is the body of a being who is now no longer in incarnation, having completed his tasks at an earlier stage in our solar system. His twin, the Earth, remains in living incarnation, and her influence extends to control her brother's dead shell. The cycles of life within the earth that are tied to Luna reflect the rhythms of interaction between the Earth and her brother in long-ago days, before the appearance of life out of her seas. Their cyclic interaction produced a ‘standing wave’, a continuing cycle of echos of the original interaction of the two.

“The Earth herself continues to reflect these cycles in the pulsations of her magnetic envelope. These aural-magnetic effects are the true cause of the lunar cycles in living things.

“I myself, angel and Senior though I be, am still within the range of these cycles, and I have less power sometimes and more at others as a result. You yourself are also subject to them, though since you wear a body of a male human, the effects are more of a psychological nature than they would be for those who wear female bodies. Nevertheless, the effects are there to be seen in all humans.

“I speak so long about Luna-Earth because I myself was the proximate cause of the brother's loss of connection with his body. Yea, even I, Aczinor, most junior of the Seniors of Jove, have had my influence in the dramas of the solar system. As you

2. These invocations have never been obtained. At the present (9/92) I am assuming that the promise that they would be acquired was simply a distraction until events allowed me to understand my true will more clearly.

3. I suspect that this statement is a bit of Jupiterian humor.

4. The many moons of the solar system are included among those bodies called planets, for purposes of this statement.

are now to have yours, o man who is a mage who is a god. Yours is the separation of the consciousness of the Earth from the deep levels in which she sleeps. Mine was similar for her brother in Luna. So you and I are brothers of the spirit, in the ways of our works, and I am pleased that you have come to me for aid in your quest.

“Now the brother's work was to express fully, with his sister, the effects of the so-called Third Ray of Active Intelligence within the system. Where she represents the lifting of the spirit out of matter by that force, he represented and embodied the movements of life into matter. For life must be present in matter before it can again be raised up.

“This one in Luna was of the younger of the stellar brethren, only a few cycles away from existence as a being of the type now embodied by human beings. This effort on Luna was to have been his first experience in incarnating as a full planetary being, free from the supervision of a mentor. (In the early stages of life in the higher realms, the man-gods perform their creations within the aura and under the guidance of a more advanced practitioner of the art.)

“Well did he do his work. Too well, in truth. For in concentrating himself to pass the spirit of life into matter he concentrated too well and part of his own spirit, though not his awareness of being nor his true self, but only that spirit which enlivens the ethers, became tied again into matter as it had been in the days before his rise to godhood. Worse, even when he realized what was going on and attempted to separate himself again, the flow of his energies into matter continued against his will.

“But we speak here of things far beyond this level, and words are not fully suited to the expression of these concepts. Perhaps a few images would make clear what we desire to express.”

(I had had a strong feeling at this point that I was not really perceiving the presentation in its correct form. Aczinor's comment is the result of this feeling.)

He gestured with his left hand, and before us there appeared an image of the Earth-Luna system. But where in our own time Luna is dead, here he was surrounded by an aura of life, though the surface seemed as barren as it does now. The earth also shone with an aura of equal brilliance.

Now some of the life around the moon seemed to be sucked into it, leaving a hollowness, growing outward from its surface inside the aura. A shock went through the remaining aura and out into space. As it passed over the place where Aczinor and I stood in the heavens, I felt a tremendous sense of despair and failure, and a sort of panicky desire to repair the disaster before it was too late.

The despair, sorrow, and self-recrimination I sensed was so overwhelming that I cried out, and had to leave the vision for a few minutes until it passed and I could again think sensibly. Worst was the sense of shame this being felt, as if in his failure he had also brought the works of the rest of the beings in the system to naught. It was as if this being in Luna had lost all sense of self-respect and self-confidence by his failure.

The pain he felt could be seen to radiate out into the system. It caused sympathetic responses in all the lives of the other planets, and so the whole system was threatened with disruption.

Now Sol turned his attention to the situation, seeking the cause of the disruption he had felt on the levels where he had his attention. Seeing the plight of Luna, he immediately overshadowed that entity, taking him over body and soul as he was able to do from his higher level. He caused a stasis in Luna so that the flow into matter was halted. The soul and awareness of Luna he lifted up, out of the trap, and wrapped in his own aura, comforting him and healing him.

“With the immediate danger halted, there was time to look at the situation clearly and objectively. Sol and the planets attempted to comfort the lunar lord, but his shame was too great. He knew that by his failure he had ruined the whole beautiful plan by which Sol had intended to express love and life for this section of the galaxy. The far-reaching consequences of his failure overwhelmed him, and he begged to be allowed to resolve his error in some way, to expiate his shame with action.

“Since this disaster took place within the aura of Sol's work, it must therefore be remedied within the limits of his kingdom. He could not simply eject the ruined matter from the system, any more than a man can cure a cold by giving it to someone else. Nor could he allow this involutory flow to remain free in the system, for then it would continue to increase, eventually ruining the plan which Sol's quick action had so far saved. There was much discussion among Sol and the senior planets of the system, and deep meditation by all, lasting many millennia, on how this problem could be solved. Many plans were proposed, but none of the senior planets felt confident enough of his solution to propose it as a definite course of action. So the discussion continued.

“Our earth, being among the junior planets of the system, having not yet reached Tiphereth of that larger Tree in which the gods live and act, was not a party to the discussions but was only an observer. But unlike the seniors she was on a level where she was intimately connected with the type of force her brother manifested. And her love for her twin motivated her in a way the senior planets could not be. She devised a plan, and when the senior planets did not arrive at a satisfactory solution, she proposed her plan to Sol.

“It is impossible to state now what Earth's path would have been had this disaster not taken place. The conditions under which it might have been understood by human beings have not existed for many tens of thousands of millennia. The minds of men, as they have evolved under her new plan, are too far from the type of consciousness needed for any meaningful expression to be possible.

“But it can be said that under that original plan there would never have been incarnate human beings on Earth. The furthest into matter they would have gone would have been Yesod, and for most of the life of the system they would have been in Tiphereth.

“In Earth's proposed plan, she would take the involutory forces of her brother's sphere into herself and hold them there by deep concentration. She would, by her concentration, create a shell around herself which would keep the involutory force out of the rest of the system. Thus the other planets could continue to develop their themes without interference.

“To eliminate the involutory force from the system completely, she would set it against the evolutionary aspect of the Third Ray that she herself expressed. The incredible tension between the two would be used to produce an acceleration of evolution within her sphere. Where before evolution was a gentle process, with many thousands of millennia between substantial changes in form in a species, now evolution would be forced, with continual changes of both form and content of the living animal bodies. this forced evolution would produce bodies of a degree of refinement and integration that would never have been seen within the limits of Sol's original plan.

“Thus would she tie the involutory and evolutionary tendencies together, halting the involution in Malkuth, keeping it from pulling the whole system back into the shell-worlds that preceded the full incarnation of the gods. And when the bodies were of a great enough degree of refinement, she would begin to eliminate the involutory force all together. She would do this by forcing the human souls within her sphere to incarnate in matter.

“Unlike the matter itself, these souls, being already of a spiritual, evolutionary nature, would evolve much more rapidly. In matter, they would ache to return to the levels from which they first came, and their natural desire to return would eventually counter the involutory tendency.

“Not only this, but the hammer-blows of experience the human souls would receive within the forge of incarnate existence would change them into something far greater than they ever could have been within the original scheme. For they would come out of that forge with a temper, a hardness, that could never be lost, making them as the gods of the system and of the stars, brothers to these within whose influence they had led their many lives, where otherwise they would have remained the pawns and tools of the gods throughout the life of this current universe. Thus many thousands of millions of new gods would eventually rise out of matter where otherwise there would have been none. All of them able to express within the universe both the formula of spirit, which is evolution, and the formula of matter, which is involution. They would be true microcosms, and after many more cycles of evolution on the god-levels, each of them would be individually capable of creating whole new universes for life to express itself in. Thus was 'life more abundantly' once said to be the keynote of our planet.

“Even within this present universe will the effects of the Earth's proposal be felt. For these lives of men will spread out to the stars, when the gates are again open fully, and they will catalyze similar reactions in other spheres, where conscious life exists but develops at a slow pace. Thus will our galaxy and universe benefit from the crisis of Luna-Earth, as consciousness independent of the gods rises up all over in response to the calls of the souls of men.

“But to return to our story, Sol heard the Earth's plan, and felt that it was the only possible one that had any hope of success. But he was certain there were aspects Earth had not considered, being beyond her current level of consciousness. And such a radical change of plan could not be put into effect on his own authority since its effects would spread so far beyond his own sphere of action. So he ‘passed the buck’ as you would say, laying the decision in the hands of his own mentor, who incarnates in one of the stars of the Sirius group at this time.

“Now Sirius (as we shall call him, though that is not his true name) saw that the Earth's plan would work, but that there was a danger of her becoming so concentrated that she would not know when the disposal of the involutory force was completed. Thus he declared that if the plan were to be implemented, there must at all times be within her sphere those who were capable of breaking out of it on their own, with no assistance, so that she might never suffer for lack of light should she have need of it. And also, these others must bind themselves to her, and constantly recapitulate the process of their evolution within her sphere, so that she might ever be reminded by her connection with them of the purpose for which she had hidden herself.

“The adepts of Active Intelligence, and of Love-Wisdom, and of the lesser rays who were acting in her sphere and under her direction could none of them accomplish this task. For their natures lack the forcefulness needed for such a solitary breakout as Sirius demanded. Only the adepts of the First Ray, the Will aspect, could succeed at this task, and those few of this type who were already working within Sol's system were working at tasks that they did not dare abandon. For the First Ray is not natural to our system and only enough adepts to fill the critical needs were there.

“So the call went out for adepts of the First Ray willing to fulfill the task set by Sirius. And this is where you yourself come into the story, o scribe who is a god. To tell of your part we must tell more of your origin than we have as yet.

“Now, the progression of spiritual beings upwards through the planes in the course of evolution follows a regular cycle. That is, there are generations of such beings, and each generation must mature to a certain level as gods before they can perform the acts that cause the next generation to be born out of the union of spirit and matter.

“Thus there are large gaps between these generations. These gaps are not gaps in time, for time is meaningless on the levels of which we speak. Rather, there are gaps of relative accumulation of experience between the generations. This amounts to the same thing on your present level, but not on these higher levels. Normally there is a gap of one full Tree of Life's worth of experience between generations, although certain members of each generation will advance more quickly so that the gap becomes less as the progress continues. As one generation moves out of our manifest tree, another arises out of the union of spirit and matter to replace it. This occurs in cycles so vast from our current viewpoint as to be indenumerable in terms of years. Our Earth is now an exception to this because of her daring plan.

“You were born of one such generation and your progress followed that of your fellows up to the level of Tiphereth in that time and place's Tree. But at one point you had completed a cycle of existence within a planetary system, and as that system's lives withdrew from matter you went off into space with your fellows to find further opportunities for experience.

“Now by what can only be called a fluke, a play of Murphy's law, the current that the souls ride between the stars separated you from your fellows, and pulled you into the center of a cataclysmic conflict between two stellar beings of a vastly higher level. Like a piece of flotsam on the waves, you became trapped in the circulating currents between these two.⁵

“The forces there were so vast and intense that at first it was all you could do to keep your being from vanishing, torn to pieces by the conflicting pulls. For a time not to be measured in years did you struggle to maintain your integrity against these near-overwhelming forces. That you were not made naught was more due to fortune than skill at first, for there were places in the currents between the two gods where you would have vanished like smoke on a breeze.

“But eventually you learned to draw on those currents of will themselves to maintain your being. While still trapped within the currents of the two gods' conflict, yet you could live and learn and grow. And so you did, drawing on the knowledge of those gods as you drew upon their power, ever increasing your own power and will, rising through the planes until finally your will was so strong that you could force yourself out of the bonds of the conflict.

“Out in the spaces between the stars again, you sought out your former companions who had not been caught in the trap. Finding them was a shock, for you had not realized how much you had changed in the course of your escape, having had no one to compare yourself to. Now you found that you had little in common with them. They were still singular beings, being all of the Third Ray essence, while you were now tripartite, having absorbed the forces of Love-wisdom and Will from your experience in hell.

“You could no longer communicate with them as equals. They could not understand you as you now were, and only your tales of shared experiences convinced them that you were their lost companion. You could still communicate with them within the limits of the third aspect, but even there your formulations were often so subtle as to escape their comprehension.

“There were beings around who could understand the other parts of your being to an extent. But these were devas and other angel-like beings, passive transmitters of higher forces rather than active users like yourself. So they also were of no use to you in the long run.

5. On the physical plane, these two beings were represented by a pair of mutually orbiting black holes. The currents mentioned are equivalent to the gravitational stresses between two such objects.

“The gods of that time and place were also uncertain of what you were. Like them, you encompassed the entire Tree of Manifestation in its three aspects. But you had fully fused the three aspects at a level of experience far below that at which they themselves had done, and none of them knew of precedents that would aid in deciding your case, determining where you could fit into the scheme of things.

“So, neither fish nor fowl, you wandered the universe, going wherever there was need of one or another combination of your three aspects. But never did you find a place where you fit fully, and could use all your skills at once. And always, always, there was that tremendous sense of loss at your separation from your original group, and an ache to fit in somewhere with companions of like powers and perceptions. Alone and apparently unique, you conceived of yourself as the ‘solitary one’ or the ‘unique one’. Eventually you shortened this to simply ‘one’, since one of anything is always unique and solitary. This you translated into Hebrew during your last completed cycle of incarnation on Earth, calling yourself ‘Achad’, and expressing your full command of all the Tree in your two mottos, ‘O.I.V.V.I.O.’ and ‘V.I.O.O.I.V.’.

“But I digress. You continued to wander, seeking work worth your skills, until the call went out seeking adepts of the Will aspect for the Earth's plan of salvage. You were far away in space and time, but a god who had known you in the old days and had felt the gods' equivalent of compassion for you and frustration at his inability to help you, remembered and recommended you to the god Sirius. Sirius saw that you were ideal for this work, for you had already demonstrated an ability to free yourself from traps of a far greater strength than the Earth's blockade would be, and you were already capable of acting almost on the levels of the gods themselves. Thus your presence would ensure that the shell could always be broken, no matter how bad the disaster.

“You had also demonstrated your ability to live isolated from the universe at large for long periods, during your captivity between the warring gods. Many of the adepts of Will who had already been considered had been passed over for this very reason. They could not function without external contacts.

“And again, being somewhat less than a full god, though fully expressing all aspects of the Tree, you were still capable of incarnating as a human being without too great a loss of your higher perceptions. Thus you seemed ideal for the position Sirius sought to fill. After consultation with Sol and Earth, you were called to Sirius to have the proposal laid before you.

“You agreed with Sirius' evaluation, and saw in the plan two possible benefits for yourself. First, the drop-forge environment Earth was to become was a reasonable substitute for the trap in which your own skills had been shaped and tempered. Thus you now had some hope that companions who would be your equals would come out of it. If not from among the human souls on Earth, then from among the adepts called for the task. And, failing that, the additional experience might be sufficient to raise you to full godhood by the end of the cycle of closure. I am happy to say that both of these goals have been accomplished, though few of your true companions are incarnate at this time.

“Thus you became the head of that group called, in Liber AL, the ‘Kings of Earth’, but who prefer to be called Knights, for their task is one of aiding a good and righteous cause, and not one of rulership for its own sake. And the Knights of Will in the Earth were formed from among the adepts of will who volunteered and were qualified for the task.

“You ask why this was not said at the outset, in the visions of the Kerubic squares. The reason is that you would not have believed it. As it was, your resistance to what was shown about yourself was so great that everything had to be couched in symbols, and even those were slightly distorted. It could not have been otherwise, for Sirius' rule still holds among the Knights, and in each life in incarnation the Knight must recapitulate the whole of his evolution in the Earth. For such a recapitulation to succeed, it must be done blindly. And so you could not have known what was coming, and your initial resistance was reasonable and appropriate. With what we have given you since then, you are coming to accept the truth of what we say, and you will eventually merge your incarnate and excarnate aspects again.

“Nevertheless the Kerubic visions do contain many symbolic statements of what we have said here, particularly in the visions of the earthy lesser angle. That dark self who spoke in those visions, through whose eyes you seemed to see at times, is merely that part of yourself that has been excluded from consciousness during your recapitulation.

“We have been at this much of the day, and it is time to stop. Tomorrow we will finish with my part of the tale.”

I tried to get contact using the usual invocations, but there seemed to be a great deal of interference. So I decided to delay the rest of Aczinor's tale for a day.

I did the invocations, and again found myself in the area of yellow land and blue sky that opened the previous vision of this Senior. I called upon Aczinor to appear, and he did so, looking essentially the same as in the previous vision. I did the sign of Set and the signs of LVX. He replied with the same signs, and added the sign of fire, which he held until I returned it.

I tested him with the pentagram of Earth and the hexagram of Jupiter, and neither had any effect on him. I asked why he had done the sign of fire, since we were in the Earth tablet at this time.

He replied, “We are not in the Earth, but above it, in the airs of the planets from which it was formed. But that is not the reason why I did the sign. It was done in salute to the master of the First Ray of Will who stands before me.”

I decided this was an acceptable explanation, in view of the previous messages, and asked him to continue.

The Book of the Seniors

“When we left off, we were at the point of describing the initiation of the Earth's closure, under the auspices of Sirius, Sol, and the Knights of Will within her sphere. You were described as the chief of the Knights, and a little of your history was given. We started to supplement this with additional information the next day, but the currents were against us and we cut off communication until today.

“Before we continue, though, I wish to say a few more things in relation to what has come before.

“I said in the aborted session yesterday that the reason why your own path from Tiphereth to Binah was done alone, instead of with a group as is normally the case was due to your duties as the chief of the Knights. In your position, by declaration of Sirius, you are required to recapitulate the whole of your own history of initiation in each of your incarnations. Since the initiation must be done blindly, we could not earlier explain the reasons for your isolation, despite your frequent requests over the years that someone do so. I speak in this case for the other Knights, who have monitored and aided your progress through this current incarnation, while you did the difficult task of repeating the unrepeatable.

“We said before that it was only by a fluke that you became what you now are. If things had been otherwise, you would never have come to the position you now hold, nor would you have ever heard of it. You would still be down in the Tree with the rest of your original group of companions of the spirit. But because of your entrapment between the two conflicting gods, in that far-away place and time, you became more than a man, and somewhat less than a full god, long before your time would have come in the normal course of evolution. You are indeed, as you have so aptly described it, a queer fish. Before the closure of the Earth in long-ago times, there were none known who duplicated the qualities of your own being, intermediate between god and man, partaking of the nature of both in the fullest possible measure, fusing them into a third thing for which the universe at that time had no name. With the closure of the Earth, and the development of other adepts of the Will aspect under the forceful conditions of the Earth, you have come to have at least a few who are similar enough to yourself that you are able to communicate fully the quality of your being to them. But these are still not exactly like yourself, for the forge of Earth is not the forge of the stars in which you grew, and all of the adepts had companions of their own type with whom to develop. So your quality of uniqueness has not been completely lost to the world, and Achad is still the appropriate description of your being.

“The conditions under which you grew to power and mastery are unrepeatable, as we have said, being a fluke of cosmic nature that will not likely come again. So it is nearly impossible to produce in matter a complete recapitulation of your development. In some instances, mere symbolic substitutions had to be made for the true powers that affected you in the original course.

“To substitute for the two powers whose conflict gave your being the boost into mastery, you were in this life maneuvered into situations where you found yourself in the middle of arguments and conflicts in which you had no personal interest. But your presence acted to catalyze the manifestation of the full emotional force of the participants. These forces, being diverted from the direction in which they should have gone, towards the opposing party, were directed instead onto yourself. These forces were in some instances of such an intensity that they did almost kill you, as did the original forces. But these forces of the present day events would only have killed your body, where the true forces of the original conflict would have resulted in the true annihilation of your being.

“In the conflict between Paul Solomon and the other David⁶, you were given the opportunity by one of them to chose between them, and when you refused to chose, preferring to maintain your independence, he tried to kill you by psychic means under the guise of helping you. This resulted in the rip in your aura that was not healed until your later contact with Nema. But at the time, this rip was a help, for it allowed the inner powers who supported Paul Solomon, on the other side of the conflict, to open you up to the spirit of the Earth at our request, so that you would have a true feeling for the goal of your work from the beginning. Also they did the service of prophesying the course of your work. And as you have found now, their prophesy was accurate to the last decimal place, so to speak. Like all good prophecies it was incomprehensible at the time but perfectly clear when the events it referred to occurred. Thus they referred among other things to ‘the One’, Achad, who is yourself in your fullness, at a time when you had not even heard of Jones, let alone of Achad or his Tree.

“Now this compensation of the forces of evil thrown at you by David, with the forces of healing and light thrown at you by the supporters of Solomon, was the closest we could come in this incarnate world to the powers of the stars that caused you to be as you are, in the beginning of time. We continued to bring you into such situations, of a lesser degree of force but greater duration, for several years afterward. The circumstances that were engineered were designed to force you into the solitary path that you had to take and to keep you there until the path had been trod to its end. The pain and confusion and loss you felt by this isolation, and your consequent efforts to rid yourself of the inhibiting influence were fairly good analogies to the feelings and acts you did while caught between the two gods.

“The loss of your original companions from before your entrapment and your later finding of them and experiencing of their noncomprehension of yourself was duplicated in this life by the lack of comprehension the adepts showed for your work in its early stages, and in the rejection and insults of your skills that they showed. This was run concurrent with the other events that caused you to become isolated, so that the intensity of the isolation could be increased to the point needed for this life's work. So the periods of your isolation in the entrapment and your later isolation after your escape were run in parallel in this life, compacting the story's two similar parts into one for convenience.

6. At the time I was working with Paul Solomon in 1973, there were two persons named David associated with his group, known as the Fellowship of the Inner Light. One, David Raily, seems to have been the reincarnation of the biblical King David. The other, whose name I have deliberately forgotten, seemed more an avatar of Loki, though I never found out for certain. It is the latter person who is mentioned here.

“Thus your path in this life has been the closest possible duplication in incarnation of the original course of your initiation. Now that you have achieved the level of Binah, the rule of Sirius is somewhat mitigated. But still, your whole course has not been trodden, so the blindness must continue in part for a short while yet, until the powers of the planets chose to bring you back into their fold. The timing of this will not be under your control or the control of your fellow knights, but is a decision to be made by the gods themselves, in their own chosen time. But at the same time, it is vital that you have a reasonably clear view of what has come before, so we, Aczinor and the Knights, must resort to this more indirect method of revealing your past. The memories on which what we say is based are open to you, but the time to seek them must be kept in the future for a short while yet. In the course of your planetary explorations in the next few months, more will come to you in the form of direct memories, as you have already had direct memories of your lives as Dee, and as the priestess of Isis and Set, and as the priest-child of Set in that same temple in a later time, and of that other life in the middle ages in which you discovered the path to the stars in the powers of the menhirs, and in that life in the last century, immediately preceding your incarnation as Jones, in which you met David the Israelite in his incarnation among the Indians.

“The scope of your past is too great to be absorbed at once, and so these expedients must be used to accustom your brain to the ideas, opening the channel by which the true memories will come.

“Now I would like to continue with the story of the Earth's closing, but the next section is the responsibility of the goddess Lzinopo, who rules the lunar-earth currents within the Earth Tablet. She will be the one to describe the manner of the removal of the twin's ethers from Luna, and their incorporation into the body of the earth by yourself and the other Knights. She will also go into some other things related to your own course in that time and place, and how these affect your current work.

“To do this, invoke her at the time and place that you will, but soon, so that the currents you began with the invocation of Iczihual will continue to flow without need for re-initiation.”

I said that this was acceptable, and asked if there was anything else he wished to say at this time. He indicated not, but added that if I had any questions, he would surely answer.

I asked, as a matter of curiosity, if he could tell me the meaning of his name.

“My name, Aczinor, means ‘Wisdom flowing from the waters of Night’. Wisdom is of course the province of Jove among the planets, as truth is the province of Saturn. Night, in this case, is the Earth herself, who is the manifest representation of the powers of the True Mother, Nuit. It is from her womb that these waters of wisdom flow. Thus I embody the principles of wisdom in the element of Earth, as my opposite, Saturn, embodies factual truth.”

I thanked Aczinor for his efforts on my behalf, and gave him license to depart.

LZINOPO, SENIOR OF LUNA

I invoked the forces of the Senior Lzinopo of the Tablet of Earth. The Senior appeared as a woman, dressed in a long flowing gown of a dark blue or violet color. On her head she wore a crown like the waxing moon, with the limbs of the moon projecting out on either side of her head. She had a high rounded forehead, like Queen Elizabeth I, coupled with a square jaw. She stood turned about 30 degrees to her right. Her right hand was held forward, with the palm cupped upwards in a gesture of pouring. Her left arm was held at her side, with the hand facing to the rear, and it was bent at the wrist so that it was also cupped upwards.

From her right hand, I saw fall what appeared to be either grain or flakes of silver. These fell, but before they could hit the ground they were blown backwards between her legs, and appeared to flow upwards from there into her womb, which was concealed by her robes. Then, from the womb descended another stream, this time of golden flakes, which again were blown backwards before they could hit the ground. This second stream flowed up and landed in the palm of her left hand. A moon was embroidered on her left shoulder, and a sun was embroidered on the right shoulder.

I did the LVX signs, and the Sign of Set. The image of the Senior slowly rotated until she was facing me, still holding the position in which she first appeared. The front of her robe was cut deep, so that the tops of her teats could be seen. The edge of the cut was embroidered with a design of golden bees and butterflies. Her skin was white, but her feet, sticking out beneath the robe, were black.

I did the LVX signs and the sign of Set again, and she did not respond. The pentagram of Earth and the hexagram of Luna caused the background to become brighter, but had no effect on her. Testing with the letters made her grow larger, but still she did not move. Finally, I tried the signs of the rending and closing of the veil, at which she straightened up and replied with all the signs I had given, plus the sign of fire, which I returned.

She said, "I salute you, o mage who is the power of Will within the Earth, with the sign of your power among the elements. I am the goddess Lzinopo, who is a senior within the Tablet of Earth at the bidding of our goddess who resides in the planet Earth.

"Now, to answer your unspoken question, the reason I did not at first respond to your gestures and signs was so that you could get a full view of my magickal image. This will be important later, for reasons we will not now go into. I also did so to express that I not only symbolize the so-called Lunar current within the Earth, but am also of the nature of the Earth herself. The combination of the Lunar flexibility and changefulness with the power and stability of the Earth bring about that condition known as stillness and silence, which are the primary virtues of the elements of Earth. The gesture in which I stand is a traditional gesture of Isis and of Nephtys, the revealed and the hidden powers of the Earth. My countenance also reveals my combination, with the lunar forehead and the earthy jaw. So too with the combined forces of the Sun and Moon which are shown in the grains or flakes that fall from one hand into my womb, and out into the other hand. Meditate on this for a while, after we have finished here, and you will see some significant symbolism of the Earth in this.

“The bees and butterflies are also traditional symbols of the Moon and of the female sex, for obvious reasons.

“Now in order to continue with the tale of the Earth's closing, we must give you just a little more information about your own position in the matter, and the relations between you and certain other adepts who had been considered for the position which you now hold.

“In the time when the adepts of Will were being selected for their part in the task of the Earth, there were several adepts of Will already working in the solar system. These were not First Ray adepts, as you yourself are, but adepts of the first sub-ray of the Second Ray of Love-Wisdom, which is the common keynote of our system. Among these was one who working in Sol's sphere, doing the work of connecting the Earth with Sol's pattern.

“This one, who felt that he was best qualified by his previous experience in the system, and by his intimate connection with the Earth, wanted to be the leader of the group which was to handle and integrate the force of the dying brother into the aura of the Earth. Being of the Second Ray, he was comfortable in the system, and he felt that his ease of movement and ability to direct the forces made him the best qualified for this job. However, he was somewhat lacking in the ability to operate alone, having grown up spiritually in direct and full contact with many of the cosmic forces, and having attained his initiations through group work, as is normally the case. In the position you now hold, he would have required the force of all the other adepts of Will to crack through the shell of Earth at the time when the work was completed. He did not feel that this was a handicap, since once the closure occurred, none of the adepts could escape from the earth, and therefore would be available at the proper time.

“But an adept of the Will aspect of Love is a far different thing than the adept of the Love aspect of Will, such as yourself. The Second Ray adepts are proficient at gathering together and integrating energies, but are less able to deal with the release of those energies back into chaos, which is what this task requires at its end. It was felt by the gods involved that allowing him to be the chief of the Knights would leave open a possibility that the shell would not be cracked, if his identification with his being in the Earth became strong enough in the intervening thousands of millennia.

“What was needed was one who was not entirely comfortable in the system, being of another nature, so that even in the body the system would tend to reject him. This would ensure that the chief's identification with the manifest earth would never be strong enough to preclude his necessary rejection of it in the breaking of the shell.

“It was at this point that you were brought to Sol by Sirius, and examined for the position you hold. The candidates were gathered, and tested in their ways and abilities. Of all examined, only two had the minimum qualifications, you and that other we speak of.

“There was really no question in the minds of Sirius and Sol that you were the better qualified, so the examinations were more or less pro forma. But this other one did his best to convince them that he was better, and so they selected him as the alternate, in case some misfortune happened to prevent you from doing the work at the last moment.

“One can not really say that this being was jealous of you, for such is an emotion that only manifests in the lower bodies. But the adepts of Love-Wisdom have one fault, which is that often, being identified with the essential force of our system, they believe that their perspective is greater than it is, that their own evaluation is the only evaluation possible. In their identification with the solar force, they take on something of the sense of inclusiveness that is his, but without also taking on the perspective needed to truly manifest that inclusiveness. This fault reflects, on a higher level, the egoism of the integrated personality in the worlds below Tiphereth. All of the rays have their faults, which are usually the same as their virtues, except exaggerated. The First Ray types like yourself have the fault of being over-persistent, of being too forceful in their presentation of their will for the matter on which they are working. Thus, left to themselves, they sometimes tend to produce degenerate versions of what they should have done. Such types are very dangerous within a system of the Second Ray type, and so they can only manifest here under the greatest of restrictions. In your present life, and in the case of your previous incarnation as Dee, these limits were applied by withholding from you the powers to match your will until you were sufficiently advanced to restrain yourself.

“So the chief and alternate were chosen, and the lesser adepts who would fill out the organization of the Knights of Will in the Earth were chosen, under the recommendation of Sol and Earth, each for his particular purpose in the scheme. When this was done, the preparations for the actual closure began.

“Now as was said by Aczinor, during all this time the moon was held in a psychic stasis in which no actions could occur. The spirit who inhabited the moon, being healed of his shame and his desire to rectify the situation on his own, was given over to certain gods in another system, to continue his training in the methods that would prevent him from being caught in a similar situation in the future. This separation of the spirit from the life of the ethers, the part of his being that had been trapped, was performed by Aczinor. Being the closest in nature to Luna's spirit among the Seniors of Jove, who is the manifestation of the synthetic aspect of Love-Wisdom, it was he who was called upon to draw away the living substance from the lunar body and to bring it here to Earth. Sol opened a gap in his stasis, away from the point where the Lunar Lord was connected to his body, and slowly he allowed the force of etheric life to flow to that opening. As it flowed, it was picked up by Aczinor and drawn across the short distance into the Earth's inner aura. When there was no life left in the lunar body, the connection between the Lunar Lord and that body shriveled and disappeared, since no more of his life could enter through Sol's continuing stasis. Thus he “died”, in the sense that he could no longer be considered as having a connection with his body of manifestation.

“This all took place many millions of years ago, in the middle of the Cretaceous period of Earth's history. The absorption of the etheric substance of the dead brother into the body of the Earth caused an intensification of the Earth's magnetic field, and in the etheric equivalent of that field, her life-aura. And as a consequence, the amount of radiation coming into the Earth was substantially reduced. This purely physical effect was the first stage of the Earth's closure. Coupled with a reduction by Sol in the physical radiation output from his body, this caused a climatological change which eventually resulted in the extinction of the major animal forms then inhabiting the Earth. This was part of the Earth's plan, this change being the first of the methods by which the animal bodies would be put under stress to force their evolution.

“The Earth was not fully closed at this point, but the time of closure followed soon upon it. The adepts of will came to Earth, and the first of their tasks was to make use of the new force of the dead brother to complete that closure.

“Before this could be done, preparations had to be made. In order for the Earth to experience the work of the adepts in the manner decreed by Sirius, each adept had to be fused on one level with her energies, in a marriage of spirits. On a cosmic level, this fusion took place through a process analogous to the sexual process in humans, which leaves a permanent connection between the participants. In effect, and speaking very loosely, the Earth allowed herself to be raped by these adepts, allowed them to take into themselves the essence of her spiritual substance, and to place that substance completely under each adept's individual control.

She became the whore of these man-gods, accepting all that they thrust into her, and giving all that they took from her, without expression of her own will, completely passively. To allow the adepts this freedom on her, she had to concentrate her consciousness to the point where her will was completely divorced from her bodies of manifestation. She concentrated her consciousness in her equivalent of the womb, her navel chakra, in the mode of receptiveness, and divorced her consciousness from the rest of her body. (Her life, of course, continued to regulate the actions of that body without her attention, in the same way that a human being does not have to consciously think about the processes of digestion or circulation of blood in order for those processes to function.)

“The adepts of Will, who at that time were all operating on the levels of the solar system, now had to create for themselves the various bodies of manifestation that would allow them to function in her sphere. These bodies, the so-called Atmic body of the hindus, and the body that is called the soul, they built directly out of the living substance of the Earth, forming it to their Will without regard for her awareness. In doing this, they created the prototypes, the models, on which the human bodies of this current day and those more developed bodies to come in the future would eventually be based. Their very presence in these levels, and their act of will in forcing the substance of the Earth into the desired forms, initiated the changes that would lead to incarnate humans seventy million years in the future.

“From that day forward the Earth progressed and developed only through her connection with the adepts, as they did their work within her. Gone was the possibility of her active development under her own will, until such time as the involutory force of the dead brother's ethers was completely eradicated. She now progressed by reflection of the adepts as they recapitulated their own paths of initiation within her sphere. This has all been gone into in much more detail in the visions of the Kerubic squares, and we need not expand on it any more here.

“In the visions of the fiery lesser angle of the Earth Tablet, it was shown how a force of Will, represented by the element of fire, becomes encapsulated when it is forced into the Earth. This is an automatic effect, requiring no conscious effort on any being's part. In the instance we are examining now, the force of Will was the force of the Knights of Will in the Earth, as they took and manipulated her substance to their own ends. The force of Will presented by the adepts, particularly by yourself who was more than an adept though less than a god, caused such an encapsulation to take effect on a scale that caused the entire earth to be enclosed within the shell. Thus was the earth cut off from the heavens, and thus was her sleep within her own womb made complete. And thus has it continues to this present day, when the shell is about to be broken again.

“And thus also we complete our own presentation for the moment. More will be given if you return in the next few days and invoke the next of the Seniors in the series, Alhctga, Senior of Venus, who will show how the adepts made use of the forces of involution to force the development of bodies suitable to the task of destroying that very force. She will also go more into the developing conflict between yourself and your alternate, which is the basis for so much of the religious mythology of later ages. If you have any questions, ask them now, please.”

I asked her to describe the nature and limits of this shell that was formed by the presence of the adepts. What could enter into it, and what could go.

“This shell is primarily on the levels of consciousness, those levels that begin with the ego in Netzach, and end with the individual pattern of destiny in Chesed. The lower levels, which are merely matter, with no inherent self-consciousness, are open to the outside. But the energies that can get in even on those levels are distorted by the aura of the earth in their passage, so that communication with the outside is problematical and subject to many errors. On these levels, the shell acts mainly to keep the involutory force inside, rather than keeping the outside from coming in.

“On the egoic-solar levels, the shell is two-way. That is, it keeps all but a few beings of a certain type from coming into the earth, and also keeps any involutory forces that have come that high from getting out. Again, some inward communication is possible, but it is often distorted. The main effect is to keep those souls who are on Earth now within her sphere of action. None who are here can really escape from the earth, although it is possible to send portions of the consciousness outwards, provided they are of a sufficiently pure character, and get back information from outside. But they can not leave the Earth completely, and can only incarnate within her sphere, until the shell is broken again. Similarly, souls of the human type who are outside the Earth's sphere of action can not come in and join the fun, but can sometimes send projections of themselves to see what is happening.

"On the levels above Chesed, the shell does not really exist, but the thought-forms created in the minds of men by the isolation of the lower levels generally insures that they do not think of the outside without some outside influence contacting them first. This is changing rapidly in this present day, though, as the consciousness of space produced by the space programs and the use of communication satellites sends men's minds outwards again. The American lunar landings, and the landings and fly-past missions to the other planets by our unmanned spacecraft are a sign that the shell around the earth is deteriorating and will soon fall.

"On a physical level, the shell extends somewhat beyond the orbit of the moon in the form of an almost-spherical torus. That is, the shell is closer to the Earth at the poles than at the equator, and tends to hollow inwards right above the poles. The forces making up the shell rotate in both a spiral around the center of the earth, and in a spiral around the ring of the torus, much in the way that magnetic fields cause electrons to move."

As I did with Aczinor, I asked her to explain the meaning of her name.

She said, "My name, Lzinopo, means 'first to come from the depths', or 'first in the lower waters', depending on context. I am the flowing watery aspect of the Earth, its changeableness and its physical adaptability. I rule the production of new forms out of her substance, which is why I was chosen to give this part of the story which has to do with such creations. Also, being of the 'lunar', receptive nature, I am also of her 'mother' aspect. I represent the link between her and those greater waters which flow from the womb of Nuit, her correspondence on the cosmic levels. Thus I am first to come out of her waters into those larger waters, among the powers that serve her.

"Now, do you have any more questions? If not, I will take my leave. Do not forget to invoke next the powers of Alhctga, so that the story will continue in its proper order."

I told her I could not think of any other questions, and gave her license to depart.

(I note here that I had a great deal of difficulty keeping my mind passive enough to receive this communication clearly. It seemed that even the slightest evidence of will on my part tended to distort it a little, so that the grammar became stilted in places. I suspect that this is due to the reflective, lunar nature of the force of the Senior.)

Alhctga, Senior of Venus

ALHCTGA, SENIOR OF VENUS

I invoked the Senior of Venus in the Tablet of Earth, named Alhctga. The currents of force felt strong, but did not show any tendency to produce an image.

After several invocations, the Senior appeared as a woman, dressed in a flowing green and amber robe (the cloth shimmered in these colors as she moved). Her hair was a honey-blond color, worn loose to her shoulders. On her head was a circlet of copper, with a star of seven points mounted on the front, covering the ajna chakra. The skin of her face and hands was a mediterranean olive-tan color. She appeared to be pregnant, and held her left hand to her belly. Her right hand was held forward in the same gesture as was shown by Lzinopo in the previous visions, but nothing fell from her hand. Her face was middling-narrow with a fine bone structure. A small satisfied smile creased her face. The hem of her robe was embroidered with doves and serpents, and an occasional double-headed eagle.

I did the 5=6 signs, and the signs of Set and LVX. She responded in kind, and then held her hands out to her sides as if inviting me to come closer and embrace her. I tested her with the pentagram of Earth and the hexagram of Venus. Neither had any effect except to brighten the area a little. Testing with the letters also had no effect.

I invited her to speak, and she said, "Come closer and embrace me, o mage of Will, for I have the power of the Earth in her fullness within me, and you are the father. Therefore do I take a mother's right with her mate."

I willed myself forward and embraced her. Her eyes could be seen to be of a very deep green color, with streaks of olive and amber-brown. She leaned against me within the embrace for a moment, then stepped back.

She said, "My name, Alhctga, means 'closest in spirit to the Mother'. I am the example of what the Earth's eventual force within the system will be after her rising. For the Earth is intended to express the force of Love-Wisdom within the system, in its reproductive aspect and its desire aspect, where the planet Venus expresses that force in its egoic aspect, and Jupiter expresses the synthetic aspect. Since you have caused her to awaken slightly, therefore is she aware again of the power of her mate, and has taken some of it into herself. As the force of the union increases, she passes it on to those of us who are her servants, so that we might prepare in our own way for the rising that is to come. You have not yet seen your mate in these visions, and will not until the day of the marriage, when you again rise into the stars and take her with you to meet the planetary lives of the system as a new, greater being than when she laid herself in her womb to sleep.

"Now being of the reproductive aspect of the Earth, and of her spiritual aspect as well, it is my task to explain the ways in which the Adepts of Will had their way on her, in the early and middle days of the hiding, before the appearance of human beings incarnate in the body. I will show you the ways in which the adepts used the involutionary forces of the dead brother of Luna to force the growth of more refined, tougher forms within her sphere. To begin with, we must again speak of the developing conflict between you and the one appointed as your alternate.

“In the early days of the Hiding, many thousand of millennia ago, there were no bodies on the Earth that could be used for the incarnation of intelligent, self-aware beings. Since the appearance of such beings was vital to the eventual elimination of the involutory force within a reasonable span of time, the first task of the Knights of Will within her was to initiate the processes that would eventually lead to the appearance of such suitable bodies. In terms of its effect on the goal, this was the least important of the periods of time, though it was the longest as it would be measured by incarnate intelligences. These later periods after the appearance in bodies of true human beings are much shorter. But the intensity of the effects working now are such that the difference between the earth before the Hiding and afterwards for many thousands of millennia is minuscule by comparison.

“But nevertheless, this creation of bodies had to precede the important part of the work, or that work could never be done. Effectively, the Knights of Will had to create a situation in which the evolution of the physical animal bodies would be accelerated several fold. To do this, they had to make use of the involutory force of the dead brother.

“Now at this point there came a disagreement over methods, between you and your alternate. As usual, he was trying in some way to take away the leadership of the group from yourself, so that he could be the one who would be the initiator of the Earth's rising in this present day. Lzinopo has already gone over the ways in which the powers of the adepts of the Will sub-ray of the Second Ray, and of the Love sub-ray of the First Ray, could degenerate or be exaggerated into faults. Both of you, you and your alternate, possess the faults to match your virtues, and always have done so. This was inevitable, since neither of you really had any competition on your own level to slap you down.

“But within the framework of the Earth, you, of the two of you, has tended to be more cautious and workmanlike in the manifestation of your force. You being alien to the system's essential keynote, the system tends to backfire on you more rapidly than on your alternate and thus you retain more caution in your actions. Your alternate on the other hand, being comfortable with and in the Second Ray, tends to jump ahead of himself, thinking he knows it all and can do whatever he wants without care of caution.

“Now at the point in manifest time of which we speak, the Knights were discussing the ways in which the involutory force could be used to accelerate evolution. Being of the First Ray, and having experienced the effects of forceful invasion of your being in the time of your entrapment, you held that the organism itself must always be held inviolate. That is, that the involutory force should never, ever, be merged into the actual physical bodies of the animals being evolved. Rather, it should be applied to the organism from the outside, in the form of rapid and unexpected environmental changes. This would allow the evolutionary aspect of the Third Ray within the animal bodies to operate freely in its adaptation to new conditions.

“Your alternate, being of the Second Ray, was inclined to merge the involutory and evolutionary forces within the same body, and to try to harmonize them by balancing their conflict in the nervous systems of the animals themselves. He felt this would be more effective than your own method.

“As it has turned out now, your own method was the better of the two, and was the one that eventually was adopted for most of the surface of the planet. But at that time it was questionable whether one or the other was better, since it had not before been tried in the knowledge of any available source.

“Your alternate managed to convince a large minority of the Knights to support his own proposal. This group, while not large enough to over-rule your own decision on the matter, was strong enough to demand that their own ideas be given a fair test. Therefore two areas of the Earth's surface, each at that time reasonably isolated, were designated as test areas. The one given over to your own plans was the area now known as East Africa. The one given over to your alternate's plan was the area now known as Australia-New Zealand. These two land masses, having separated from each other only recently as geological times go, still had comparable groups of animals on them. But they were far enough separated that there would not be any cross-fertilization between them.

“So the two of you and your adherent adepts went to work. Within the area of Africa you caused severe climatic and geological changes to take place, using the involutory force to produce these changes as you needed them. The food shortages, and the increased dangers to survival, you believed would cause a rapid increase in adaptation among these creatures, making them more versatile and resilient, able to adapt that much more quickly to future changes. Eventually you hoped to create a creature that would be able to not only adapt itself to its environment but to cause modifications of that environment for its own use.

“Your alternate, on the island continent of Australia-New Zealand, did not indulge in such climatological modifications to any great extent. He considered them unimportant, and did not even attempt to control those natural changes that took place within his area of work except when they became too extreme to allow his subjects to live. In his area, he attempted to fuse the involutory aspect of the Third Ray with the evolutionary, hoping and expecting that this would create internal stresses in the animals that would cause their bodies to adapt and become more refined. Eventually, he hoped, the forces in these bodies would cancel out completely. Since the amount of involutory force within the Earth was much less than the amount of evolutionary force, his idea was that even after the involutory force was entirely canceled (over a period of millions of years in billions of animal bodies) there would still be enough evolutionary force left so that the Earth could go back to her original plan of expression within the system. That this idea was in direct conflict with the intent of the Earth herself did not bother him, since there were none but yourself who could prevent him, and you, being the consum-mate individualist that you were, would not do so without at least a fair test. He figured that a fait accompli would put him on top again among the adepts of the system, and even Sol would not be able to say him nay.

“But alas for this plan, his system did not work well enough to be continued. After several million years, a sudden change in climate caused all the animal life over the largest portion of his work area to be killed off, and the coming of a desert condition that appeared to be permanent prevented the remaining animal lives from ever gaining the needed strength and numbers again. Thus, even his own adherents decided that his plan would not work and it was decided to abandon it in favor of your own plan, which seemed to be working well.

“(I should point out here that your own manipulations of the African climate led to the changes in his work area. He could have prevented them if he had paid more attention to the climatological effects, but he had not done so. You had warned him several times that he should do so, and predicted the result that came. But he had rejected it as gratuitous carping on your part. Since you were all now working on a lower level than before, such emotional reactions were now possible, and he expressed them in this instance. He blamed you directly for the failure of his plan, and vowed privately to perform an act of revenge at a later point in your own work. But he missed his chance the first time, and after that you were warned and manipulated his anger to your own ends.)

“Meanwhile, the animals of your own area of work had been adapting constantly and continuously to the changes you had forced upon them. Many of them developed sufficiently to be able to survive over ranges of climate that would have killed any of their predecessors in less than a day. And not only to survive, but to flourish. The population had not only increased despite the changes, but had increased in variety far beyond what you yourself had expected. Large numbers had even escaped the work area and fled to other lands, spreading the adaptations far and wide.

“Now in view of their relative success there was no question in the minds of the adepts that the external-threat system of forced evolution was superior to the internal-conflict model. So even your alternate abandoned his project, and went to work to spread the new animal lives about the globe and to force even more adaptations within their being. Thus, the modern mammals and birds became the ruling classes of the animals upon the Earth, and the marsupial descendants of the alternate's experiment were left to develop as they could in the new conditions. Some of them did evolve significantly once the internal pressure of the involutory force was removed, but none ever came fully up to the standards of the mammals.

“All of these events took place during what man now calls the Tertiary period of evolution on Earth. Within that period, the time of experiment ended about twenty-five thousands of millennia ago. By the beginning of what is now called the Miocene epoch, the adapted animal forms had been spread all about the Earth, and had taken root and begun to adapt even more on their own, filling every available niche in the ecological pattern.

“This time-scale seems vast from the standpoint of an incarnate intelligence, I know. But from the point of view of the Adepts of Will, it was more brief than the later period in which human-like beings had appeared. On the levels on which they were working, time as man now knows it did not exist, and duration, the rate at which events are experienced, could be varied widely by the will. So it did not seem all that long from their viewpoint.

“It was only after the appearance of man-like or ape-like beings that the work again began in earnest. These being represented the ultimate in adaptability and nervous-system development of all those animals that had been forced to evolve. And they had already begun to use tools on their own, to change their environment, when it was discovered that their nervous systems had developed enough to incarnate a human-type soul.

“There were several species that showed potential for full awareness and intelligence, and it was decided that all of them would be tested and set against each other to see which would come out best. This testing began about seven million or eight million years ago, with the appearance of the first true hominid species, which were small ape-like beings. It continued in irregular spurts up to the present time, as one species after another showed itself to be of less than human potential and was dropped from the schedule. Usually these beings were rapidly killed off by the competing species who were still within the testing cycle.

“About a million, a thousand thousand years ago, the last three of these species had been selected and set against each other in competition for living space and food. Eventually one of them won out, and became the only truly human species of Earth. But this species again fragmented as small populations became isolated from the main group and began to evolve even more on their own in the less fruitful areas of the world that circumstances forced them to. With the increased adaptations that their extreme living conditions gave them, they eventually migrated into the areas controlled by the main group, and either supplanted that group or mixed with it, either way leaving their own genes in charge and causing the weaker genes of the losers to disappear from the race. This occurred several times more during the intervening millennia, and each time the replacing race was stronger and more adaptable than its predecessor. Eventually we came to a point where all of the animal-humans were fully capable of holding all of a human soul. Though at that point the consciousness aspect of the humans could still not be fully expressed. The lives of men, the connection between the heart center of the body and the life aspect of the soul that enlivens the body, had been in place since the first appearance of the hominids. Now the consciousness aspect, which was present but rudimentary in the races, had to become fully developed.

“Now at this time on earth, the human souls who lived within her sphere were gathered into a community on the astral plane. There was a civilization there that compared favorably with most of the present-day human societies in manifestation, as far as human thought and behavior went. Since, on the astral, there was no inherent need for competition, this society was relatively peaceful and given to simple human artistic pursuits, along with the normal interactions between souls that make up the substance of most lives. There was no pain that was not self-created, and no horrors of any sort. This would not have been the case if the earth had been open to the stars in that time. If that had been the situation, then conflict would have been more prevalent, as one or another group sensed the force of one or another cosmic being and attempted to put its energy into practice in their lives. But the isolation of the Earth made for relative stability and coherence in the group of human souls. This was the civilization that is remembered today in the legends of Atlantis, and Mu, and of other “lost” civilizations.

“The manner in which the consciousness of human souls was forced to come down into the bodies completely has been covered in the visions of the Airy Lesser Angle of the Earth Tablet, and we need not go into it again here. But we should remind you for purposes of reference that it was you yourself who was the cause of the fall into matter, and thus it is you who was the proximate cause of the legends of Lucifer, the angel who fell and carried the legions of angels with him. This same event was the cause of the legend of the snake in the garden of Eden, who tempted the more receptive (and therefore more “female”) human souls to become attracted to matter, and to leave the light of the sun for the darkness of Earth.

“Now in the foregoing years, before the fall, you had spent several different “incarnations” on the astral plane, trying to convince the souls there to go into matter willingly. But most would not hear you, and so you devised a plan, with the other adepts of the Will, to cause the fall to take place involuntarily. This was the event that was described as the act of the child who studied crystals, in the account of your past lives in the Kerubic visions.

“I said that I would not say much on this, so I had better stop now. But there is more to be seen in this area before you go on to the next senior, Liiansa, so you should again invoke me before that time. I will come to your call, and we will see what remains to be seen.”

I called upon Alhctga again, and she appeared. This time she was not pregnant, but all other aspects of her appearance were the same. I did the 5=6 signs, and the signs of LVX and of Set. She responded with the sign of Set, and then transformed her body into the various crosses and symbols of LVX. Then she reformed as a woman and saluted me with the fire sign.

“Hail, o mage of Will, hail to you, and homage to you! For in the dark of night you have brought the light again to the Earth, and the Earth rises up in response.

“Now during the previous day, we had difficulty speaking together, and there seemed to be some inhibition working to make the communication weak. This is in part due to the fact that you are operating under a transit of Saturn, but more to the fact that we are here dealing with energies far beyond what might normally be encountered in an invocation of these squares of the Tablet.

“To continue with our story of yesterday, we were about to tell of the way in which you caused the souls of men to become incarnate consciously in bodies for the first time.

“In that time of which we speak, man was living in consciousness primarily on the astral levels. Those few parts of his consciousness that had been fused with the physical body were concerned with the operation and functioning of that body in the world, its maintenance and basic survival, and so seemed dark to the larger part of awareness that remained upon the astral levels.

“It has long been known that the lower levels of the astral reflect the heaviness and inertia of the lower earth, and the darkness and seeming evil there acts as a barrier between the incarnate existence and the astral. This barrier today acts mainly to keep men from becoming fully aware of their astral life, which they continue in their dreams but which they do not remember in the waking incarnate state.

“In those earlier times, the barrier's effect was mainly in the opposite direction, keeping the astral self from remembering those parts of its being that existed upon the manifest plane of Malkuth. This barrier was the main difficulty to be overcome in forcing the fall of man into matter.

“You will recall from the visions of the fiery lesser angle of the Earth Tablet that the energies of matter have a mode of rotation opposite to that natural to the higher planes. The friction between these counter-rotating planes was what created the darkness on the lower astral, and the barrier between them.

“The entire purpose of the work of the Earth, her plan for the removal of the involutionary force from the solar system, took on a rapid increase in activity at this point. Where the previous thousands of millennia had been given over to the refinement of bodies through the external-threat model of evolution, now the main rite of the work must come into being. The involutionary force had to be placed into the consciousness of man, so that by his will and his awareness, and his striving to return to the spirit, it might be overcome and eliminated while at the same time giving a tremendous boost to the development of consciousness in the cosmos. Where before the force only acted upon the bodies from the outside, now it must be incorporated into the feelings and minds of men, so that the conflict might be resolved forever.

“To do this, and also to get the greater part of the awareness of each soul down to the level of Malkuth, you took the involutionary energies and formed them into a vortex, a whirlpool, on the higher levels of the material plane. Since the involutionary force also has a rotation opposite to that of the evolutionary aspect in matter, its rotation was identical with that of the astral levels. The only thing separating it from the astral before this time was the intervening evolutionary aspect, and the effect of Saturn upon this low plane by reflection from his normal place beyond the Tree of Life.

“So you gathered this whirlpool around yourself on the physical plane (the etheric levels of that plane). Then by your concentration upon the relation between the astral and the physical, from a viewpoint on the lower astral, you caused the effect of that vortex to be drawn upwards through the barrier that separates the astral from the physical. You opened the gate into hell for the innocent lives of the early men. That this was done at the bidding of the planet herself was not known to them, and so they perceived your action as evil after the desired effect had been fully achieved.

“Having opened the gate, you yourself were the first to pass through it, leaving behind the astral to explore the physical through the senses of the body. Having done so, you returned with reports of what was in that place, seeking to inspire curiosity and a will to see among the humans. Some of these responded, and not all by any means were your fellow adepts of the Will aspect. For even in that time, when humans were merely a form of angel or deva, passive to the action of higher forces, some of them by flukes of nature were prepared for this work and became attracted.

“Each one who passed through the gate and returned to the astral culture brought with him a bit of the involutory force. By contact with the others on that plane, the force was slowly spread throughout the astral assembly of men. They became infected with the force unawares, and its effect on them, the changes it made in their perceptions, were not immediately grasped by them.

“But eventually it became clear to even the most innocent that something unprecedented was happening. Where before the astral community had been relatively stable and unified, now there was growing dissent. Conflicts arose as the perceptions of men were changed by the experience of the involutory Third Ray force. What had once been whole now became divided. Groups of men on the astral came into conflict, and the way in which the society was to be governed became a matter of debate instead of natural activity. Some held for attempting to retain the old state. Some held for going immediately into matter. Others developed opinions that were at odds with any type of perception known to man up to then.

“Having tied nearly all the souls of men in existence into that vortex through their infection by the ones who had passed through it, you now did the act which caused men to fall into matter no matter what their will. Focusing yourself on the highest levels of the material world, you caused these souls to be drawn to you through the gate by their connection with its energy. You caused the vortex to descend from the astral and this caused a corresponding descent of man.

“Having brought men into matter, on the side of consciousness, you now closed the door to the astral fully, locking them in until by the force of will they would eventually break out again. With the door closed the vortex was no longer needed, and you caused its energies to be dispersed among the population, each one absorbing his share of the involutory force to the extent he was able despite his desires in the matter. The rest of the force, that could not immediately be held, was dispersed back into the environment.

“While this event seemed to occur rapidly from a viewpoint on the astral plane, in the realms where time governs it was spread over many years, as the souls had chances to incarnate in the limited number of bodies available. In manifest time, the event began at the end of the tertiary period, and continued on well into the quaternary, or most recent, epoch.

“At the same time, the concentrated involutionary force that was released back into the environment caused a degradation of the living conditions on earth, through a reduction in the amount of heat escaping from the Earth's core. This caused the climate to vary widely, rapidly swinging from hot to glaciated and back again, putting extreme stress for survival onto the now incarnate humans. The needs for survival forced the human souls to make use of that faculty of their being now known among men as the concrete mind, forced them to make use of their higher faculties within the limits of incarnate existence.

“The involutionary force in men's minds caused them to perceive each other as enemies, if they were not already familiar with each other. This time was one of great killing of man by man, and of tribe by tribe. The many skulls from this period found by archaeologist that had damaged skulls are evidence of the severity of the problem. At the same time, man perceived the involutionary force in his environment, in the form of the dangers to himself, and the concrete mind had to be used to devise ways of countering the danger from both man and world. Thus was born the beginnings of civilization, in the gathering of men for the protection of each other against other men and the environment.

“In many ways, the conflicts between men within each group were more intense than the conflicts with external dangers. For the need for survival caused them to refrain from killing each other as easily as they killed strangers, and this restraint let the force build up. It was the effort to devise ways to live with each other despite the tendencies of the involutionary force, as much as it was the effort to devise protection against the outside, that caused the concrete mind to be developed.

“The effort to survive caused thought-forms to appear on the astral and mental levels, which incorporated a will to counter the effects of the involutionary force. These thought forms, slowly built up by the minds of men, acted directly as a balance to the involutionary force, weakening it and destroying it a bit at a time. The will-to-survive proved to be greater than the will-to-death, and slowly man conquered the involutionary force for his mother the Earth.

“By the end of the last great period of glaciation, about ten thousand years ago, the battle had been effectively won. Man had learned to survive in the worst conditions that nature could throw at him, and flourished in all the environments that could be experienced on earth. Now the concrete mind, freed somewhat from the essentials of the battle, began to create new ways of living, different from those of the animals from which he evolved, which so greatly increased his ability to survive that he became in truth the lord of the world that he is today. Truly is man Adonai, the Sun in the Earth, the light of the spirit within matter, as the Earth had intended him to be in that long-ago day when the plan of salvation was devised.

“I might mention in passing that the conflicts between men in this day, between nations and individuals, are merely the hangovers from this period. The involutionary force is gone, save for those rare cases when man invokes it deliberately. The evils that men do are the result of his racial memories of that time, brought forward into this new age.

“It might seem as if man is more violent than ever in this day, but this is not the case. The per capita number of deaths by homicide in this day is much less than even a thousand years ago. And when it is compared with those early days, there is no comparison at all. The existence of such great weapons as man can now bring against man is causing him to become consciously aware, as a race, that what aided him in his early survival has now passed its day, and must consciously be removed from his behavior. The men of those early days, had they had atomic weapons, would not have hesitated to use them at the first offense. Man in this day shows his superior state by the fact that, once he realized the terror he produced, he restrained himself from its actual use. I have confidence, as do my fellow Seniors, that man will be able to survive the existence of his own tools, and will remove them from the world in short order, as circumstances change and they become unneeded even as deterrents.

“Truly do I speak, and all men should listen to these words: Nowhere, nowhere in the cosmos (save in your own case, o unique one who writes this) has consciousness come through such tribulations as man on Earth has suffered. And nowhere has the conquest of mind been as great as it has here. Truly has man shown himself to be the child of the gods, the conquering child who sweeps all before him. All, even the least of men, have already passed onto the road of the Gods, and all, even the least, shall tread its path in the endless going into wonder. Those who say differently, that man must subordinate himself to the will of the gods, and become as the beasts of the field in his submission, speak from ignorance, and the blindness that the closure of the Earth has kept upon him.

“Open your eyes, O Men! Open them, and see that even now, upon the Earth and in the body, you are gods. Nothing now determines your path but your own desires and will. Nothing now stops you in your going save only that resistance of matter that all the gods must fight against. Fight ye with a good will, and conquer! Let the light come into the Earth again through your minds, and ye shall bring that light to the universe at large, and the beings who inhabit that universe shall wonder at you, and be abased as you continue to do what they can not, and bring down the light beyond the Tree into matter.

“Other places are there in this universe, very many, where consciousness does exist in the body, and mind act upon matter. But in those places, the course of evolution was of a gentler nature than here, and the minds of the souls that were like men before the fall were placed into their bodies directly, by the gentle hand of their gods. None of them, none, have the strength of being that the least of men shows.

Alhctga, Senior of Venus

None of them, none, will survive the withdrawal of their enlivening god from matter, save those on whom man acts in the future years beyond the opening of the gates to the stars. Those on whom man acts will partake of his nature, and thus will his strength infect mind in the cosmos, as the involutory force infected him in that long-ago fall into matter. Thus will light spread ever more abundantly through the cosmos, and the gods shall rise up out of matter to create endless new universes for the play of evolution and wonder.

“Now, o scribe who is a mage who is a god, we have done with the presentation of Alhctga, who is myself. We have taken man from his fall to his rising, and now the course of evolution is inevitably upwards to the stars. With man's final conquest of nature, a new phase opens in his history, which is the phase of the evolution of the mind through the conflict of the gods who are men. The new phase shall be described in part by the next of the Seniors in order, Liiansa, whom you should next invoke. I am proud to have been the instrument of the revealing of the knowledge before men, and I salute you, the first of the adepts of Will within the Earth, and I salute all those who have risen by your acts, the races of man. Let it ever be thus, that man strives for the light, and leaves behind the darkness, destroying it by his will.

LIANSAN, SENIOR OF SATURN

I recited the calls and invoked the powers of the tablet of Earth, ending with the Senior Liiansa.

Liiansa appeared before me in vision in the form of a man, rather old with graying black hair. He wore a black and red robe, with a lining of dark violet. His feet were shod in what appeared to be sandals made of some dark, heavy metal. In his left hand, he held a book, open to a page showing a black tower with a guardian before its gate. As I watched, he turned the page, and showed another picture, of the planet Saturn, with the enochian letter equivalent to "A" under it.⁷

I did the 5=6 signs, and the sign of Set. Liiansa answered with the LVX signs, and also the sign of Set, followed by the sign of fire, which he indicated was a salute to myself. I returned the sign.

I asked him to speak, but he did not. Instead he turned to his left, and pointed with his left hand to a point to my right. I turned, and there I again saw the image of the planet Saturn. But here it seemed in some way emphasized that the rings of Saturn actually represented a hole between levels of existence, and the body of the planet sat in the hole and guarded it. On closer examination, I saw that there were forces of some sort coming down from above, and passing between the ring and the body of the planet. Below the planet, these forces came out again, but in a different form. I could see that they now had an ordering to them of a different type than when they entered. It was as if an inchoate mass of particles had been bound together into a sort of crystalline web, which the planet spun out behind it as it moved.⁸

I turned back to Liiansa, and he said: "Welcome again, o mage of will. Now that we have covered the nature of my being by these symbols I have shown, let us continue with the story that we have been telling, of the past of the earth and mankind.

"When you last left off, we were at the point where the involutionary force had been completely conquered by the desire of men, acting in the body and upon the earth. The time is just after the last of the great ages of ice, about ten to twelve thousand years ago, depending on the part of the world we are considering.

"This is the time which is felt, in the backs of the minds of men of the present day, to have been the "Golden Age" of man, that wonderful past that everyone thinks of but no one can identify. The "good old days", as it were.

"Indeed, in many ways it was a golden age, though from the standpoint of our modern environment it was a rather harsh time physically. The reason that it was golden, from man's point of view, is that in that time, the true opponent of man, the involutionary force, no longer had a great effect on him, and at the same time, population was so low, and so spread out over the surface of the earth, that competition between man and man over resources had not yet begun. Man took what he willed from the earth, without opposition.

7. The tower in this case is the tower of the elements, Malkuth, and the guardian before it is Saturn in his capacity as guard of the gate to the worlds below Malkuth. Caer Benoit, the "four-sided castle" of the Grail myths, is a congruent symbol. The enochian letter Un, equivalent to the English "A", is attributed to Taurus, kerub of Earth, in the G.D. system of symbolism. Hence the second page indicates Saturn of Earth, the character of Liiansa.

8. Saturn is again shown in Malkuth, as the crystallizer, or cause of outward expression, of subjective concepts.

“Now in that time, the culture was much more of a cooperative than a competitive venture. Man did not have to compete with man, but he could gain great advantage in life by combining his individual skills with those of other men, to make life a little easier for all. Thus the groups of men were cohesive and cooperative, rather than competitive.”⁹

“Since the pressure of forced evolution was no longer on man, and his mind was at that time not distorted by the teachings and acts of later days, the signs of the spirit were given openly to man, without concealment or distortion. For the first time on earth, and for the last time for a very long time, knowledge of the relationship between yourself, acting as Set, and the Earth was fully known. The religious symbolism of the day emphasized this union of yourself and the earth and expressed it in the ways most relevant to man of that time.

“The basis for their “religion” was the light in the earth. Man was that light, and you as the Son of the Stars were the symbol of that light in the minds of the seers. The earth itself was symbolized by the cave, the womb in the ground, within which man sheltered, and had his civilization. The earth's womb, as the caves were considered, was always of the same temperature, no matter the forces outside, and so it was the best of places to live. The earth gave these places without demanding anything in return, and so man saw her as the great provider, out of whom came all good things. Not only their shelter, but their tools of stone and their nourishment came from her, and so she was worshiped as the all-mother.

“The religions of that time were truly magickal in character, and were concerned more with getting things from the earth to make life easier than they were with the worship of some god or another. Man felt that the world would give him anything, if he planted the seed of his need deep within her womb.

“So the priest-leaders of that time, who were magickians and also were hunters and leaders in the mundane sense, would travel as far into the earth as they could, deep into the lowest passages of her caves, and there they would plant the seed of the need, in the form of pictures painted on the walls of her womb, and energized by the desire of the heart. By doing so, they believed that they could cause the earth to produce exactly those things they desired. And so it often was, for confidence in action is the key to magick, and their belief in the efficacy of their actions was absolute.

“The artistry of these paintings is not much appreciated in these later days, for man now sees these pictures in the light of his bright lamps, and not as they were intended to be seen. In the light of the dim torches by which they were created, these pictures seemed to move, to take on the life of the thing they represented, so that in the eyes of the magician-priests, they were identical to their physical counterpart.

9. The May, 1986, issue of Scientific American (distributed about two weeks after this section was completed), contains an article about this period of time which substantiates the claims made here. The article also clarifies that man at that time had developed a complete, workable system of life that allowed him to live in relative comfort and safety throughout the year. The technology of the period was highly developed for the materials they had to work with, and the society, while completely egalitarian, was thoroughly effective in achieving these goals. The article also supports the statement made later in this section that hierarchical systems of status did not appear until two to three thousand years later.

“In the more southerly climes, where the caves were not so common, there developed a similar worship, but using the symbolism of the seed in the ground, which sprang to life to provide man with food. Thus were the beginnings of agriculture brought into the world, as an adjunct to the worship of the goddess, and of her son.

“Now the name Set is not the name by which you were known to these men and women, but the symbolism they used is substantially the same, within its limits, as the symbolism we are trying to re-introduce to the world today in an effective form. The symbolism of the mother and the son was nearly universal in that time, and appeared in cultures that had never met each other directly. All of the symbolism came directly from the sensing of the mages of the story which we tell now, to the extent that it had been accomplished in that day.

“So this was the golden age, when man was at peace with himself, and with the earth. It was a period of necessary rest for the souls of men, after the terrible trials of the previous thousands of millennia. Conflict existed primarily on a personal level, and not at all on the social level. That is, group did not normally fight against group, but cooperated in the tasks of living.

“But this situation was not to last, as we all know all too well today. And, as in the previous phase of the cycle, you and the Knights of Earth were primarily responsible for its ending, and the initiation of the next phase of the Earth's plan for man.

“The golden age was intended also as a sign for the future, so that men might have in their astral memories the sense that there was a time at which men did not fight men. In the earlier phase of the work, the natural desire of the souls of men to return to the spirit from whence they came acted as the impetus for the work of eliminating the involutionary force. Now, in the present day, a new goal had to be created. For now the Knights were to plunge man into the state of conflict with man that has continued to this current day, and is still in process of overcoming.

“The reason for this conflict was not to destroy man, or to cause suffering for its own sake, but to force man to come to terms with man, to understand himself and others through the ability to sympathize and feel another's pain. Man at that time, while in tune with nature, was still not completely master of himself, as is still the case today with a small portion of the population. In order to get man to come to this understanding, he had to experience its opposite. That is, the conflict, the pains of civilization, would act to cause man to evolve himself further than nature could force him, so that he gained full control of his incarnate being. The unification of that being, through the elimination of both internal and external conflict, would cause man to eventually express not only the third-ray influence of Active Intelligence, but also the second-ray influence of Love-Wisdom, acting as the cause and goal of right human relations. Man had to learn to live with man in ways that would be beneficial to all, despite the pressure to conquer and eliminate opponents.”

(At this point, I felt that I was having some difficulty getting the information clearly, and asked Liiansa if there was anything that might help. He indicated that it would help to use the word of spirit I had been given, with the first key. But since I was ill with some infection at the moment, he suggested I stop here and continue another time, so as to not over-stress my body.)

(Later that evening, I decided that the difficulty was due to my perceptions not being properly aligned with the force invoked. To try to correct the problem, I did an invocation of Nuit using my self-developed version of the VIIIth degree OTO method. Her relation to the idea of alignment is through the Tarot card now known as The Star, which shows at its top a star surrounded by seven smaller stars in a partial circle. I associate the center star with Polaris, and the seven stars with the stars of Draco, which were related to her in early times. Since the position of Polaris is an expression of the Earth's center of rotation, it represents the alignment of the manifest and unmanifest parts of existence, the mundane and the "heavenly". It is also interesting to note that in Achad's Tree of Life, the sum of the paths of the Supernal Triangle, which has this path as its base, is 510, the numeration of ThNIN, Draco.

(The immediate effect of the invocation was to relieve me of the stress my illness had put on me, and to allow me a good night's sleep for the first time in several nights. Her answer to my request for the missing key to perceiving this story properly was given to me in the dreams I had that night, which will be described below.)

4/19/86, 11:23 AM

I invoked Liiansa using the usual methods. He appeared to me in vision in the same form as the previous day's, but lacking the book he had held at that time. Instead, his left hand now held a phoenix wand, and his right hand an ankh. His skin was an indigo color today.

I saluted him with the signs of Set and of LVX, and he answered with those signs. Testing him with the pentagram and the Hexagram of Saturn caused him to formulate more clearly. He came forward, and called on me to take the wand and ankh from him. I did so, and asked what the purpose of these gifts was.

He replied, "Now that you have found how to use the invocatory word of the spirit in its proper fashion, you are entitled to use these tools, which are the expression of the spirit of life, and of its return to incarnation in new forms. Both of these are part of the symbolism of yourself who is Set. He is the master of life, and the master of death. His power of going takes men to the stars, where Horus can only touch them through the sun.

"Take these tools, and make use of them in your rituals of the spirit, and their power will be multiplied greatly, to your benefit and the benefit of the earth whom you seek to raise.

"Now, let us go on with the story as we have begun it. Yesterday, we were about to explain the manner in which intra-human conflict on a large scale was introduced to the world, in order that men might learn of the power of Love-wisdom through the expression of its negative side, which is repulsion-conflict. By exhausting the possibilities of the latter in manifest experience, they eventually were and are being forced, individually and as a group, to come to the realization that the former is the higher expression.

“To do this was something you could not do yourself, as you knew in that time. For your own nature, being of the Will aspect, was too far from the natures of men to affect them directly. So, in this time, you decided to turn over the main focus of the incarnate work, the work in the world, to your alternate. Being of the Love aspect, in its Will sub-aspect, his expression was closer to theirs, and so he was better able to introduce that idea which would eventually result in the conflict you desired.

“How was this to be done? The symbols of the mother and the self-begotten son were already strong in the earth at the time we speak of, and had no further need of encouragement to continue their flow of force into the world. Had this flow been allowed to continue unobstructed, then man would not have advanced much further than he had at that time, living a natural life in a natural world. The association of the mother is too strong to be overcome without an equally strong opposing viewpoint being available. The stars of night now had to be masked by the brilliance of the Sun, who is closer to man but less holy than her. But the sun is the soul, and the soul is what you sought to bring men to, through the harmonizing of conflict.

“This is where your alternate came into the picture, as the opponent of the forces of night, and the proponent of the power of Sol. Sol is of the second ray of Love-wisdom, as has been said before, and your alternate in his essential nature embodied that force, as has also been said.

“Even in those very early times, before the beginnings of civilization, it was known how men and women united to produce children. But the power of the father was seen to be merely a stimulus to a process that was inherent in the female, the manifest aspect of the Mother. Now the father, the male, had to take on his own power, and understand his own place as the key to power. In effect, the martial side of life, which no longer could fully express itself in the fight against nature, had now to be channeled into higher levels, where it could affect the course of men's minds and actions towards each other on a large scale.

“And so the first revisionists of the spirit were born onto earth, and developed, over a period of millennia, a current opposing the current of the mother. This was the solar current, with its symbolism of the sun who dies and is reborn, without the aid of the mother. In later days, this expressed itself in the temples of Horus, Osiris, and of the Jews and Christians. It was the system of hierarchical dominance, as opposed to the natural association and merger of abilities which was the hallmark of the mother's symbolism. Man fought man, following the ways he observed among the animals, fighting each other to establish which should rule, which should be the one to breed, and therefore to carry on his life into the future.

“This was also the earliest time in which the power of Saturn was raised up to Binah, figuratively speaking, and the power of the Mother cast down into Malkuth.

The new philosophy denied her her place in the heavens, and put up the father, in the form of the authoritarian figure, the so-called “Alpha male”, in her place.

“The religions of the mother were not cast down permanently in that time. For many ages, lasting into the dynastic times of Egypt, she again came to power for periods. But these periods grew shorter and shorter as the millennia progressed, and the periods of dominance by the father-gods became longer, until in these later days, in the late Hebrew, the Greek (to a lesser extent), and the Roman and christian religions, she has been effectively wiped out as a manifest power, even though her adherents and servants continue to do her work on earth. In fact, their work has been helped by her loss of mundane power, for her practitioners could develop their work in secrecy, and with their full attention, instead of being distracted by the needs of running a civilization. So her inner power, and that of her child Set, increased substantially at the same time that their outer power decayed.

“You will recall, from an earlier invocation, your memories and feelings of a time in the early period of the Egyptian civilization when you and your opponent were both incarnate at the same place and same time. The place was a temple of the mother and son in the southern part of that country. At the time, you were incarnate as a woman, a senior priestess of that particular cult. One of the methods by which the cult tried to express the idea of the mother and son was in the way of having women have children fathered by their own children, or the children of other priestesses. In this way, they hoped to produce a son eventually who fully expressed the power of the mother, being different from her only in the one gene that caused him to be male.¹⁰ (They of course did not think of it in terms of genes, but came to a similar conclusion by direct observation of breeding experiments with animals.)

“In that particular life, the adversary in this contest, your appointed alternate for the eventual awakening of the Earth spirit, was incarnate in one of the bodies of these male children. But unlike most who resulted from such processes, and were conditioned by the teachings of the temple to accept their place in things (which was a good one for the times), he, from the first moments of his conscious selfhood, desired to be free of the influence of women. He disliked being subordinate to any being, and he perceived the women, being physically weaker than the males he saw in the temple and outside it, as being naturally subordinate to himself. Like the male lion with whom he later has identified himself, his will was purely to dominance of self over others, the innate expression of his perceived superiority to men.

“As he grew in that time, and came to his physical maturity, he was trained in the methods of the temple, in the ritual of uniting male and female for the purposes of the gods and the priestesses. His power was so great that he took the training much more rapidly than most, and by the time he was fifteen, he had accomplished the full training and become an initiate of the temple.

“But, despite his power and authority in the temple, due to his magickal skills, he found his new position even more aggravating. He saw his own abilities as superior to those of all the other temple-workers, and believed himself to be the natural leader of the temple. But above him stood yourself, his actual physical mother, as well as the head of that temple. No matter how great his accomplishments, it seemed he could never get away from your perceived dominance. This created great hate, a great force of the rejective aspect of love-wisdom within him. And he determined to overcome you by any means possible of accomplishment.

10. The defective children of either sex were killed humanely (that is, quickly and without warning) as soon as their defects were detected. The priestesses felt that they were merely following the Mother's way in this, and taught such.

“Within the temple, as we have said, there were many young men. These were educated, and if found unsuitable for the priesthood were given honorable positions managing the affairs and properties of the temple. Many of these latter were also resentful, for reasons like or unlike those of your opponent. These he sounded out, with a proposition that they take over the temple themselves, and raise themselves up as its leaders. He found many who would go along with him for one reason or another. He also sounded out those outside the structure of the temple, the hunter and worker classes, and got many of the strongest of these to agree to his plan. Thus he obtained the forces needed to conquer the temple.

“In the night he opened the gates of the temple, and called in his assistants and conspirators. Together, they attempted to slay all those who came within their reach, so that none would survive to tell of their evil. But many heard the noise of their attack, and managed to escape through other entrances. (Tactics was not one of your opponent's strong points, in that time or later times.) And so many lived to preserve the knowledge and warn other temples of the impending change. Many of those who escaped hid within the temples of other gods and goddesses, in other places, and as small groups within these temples preserved the symbology of the mother and son.

“Now, on the morning, this one called forth the peoples of the area, and declared from the steps of the temple that a new aeon had arisen, in which the elder gods were thrown down, to make place for the new, chief of whom was to be the Child of Victory, the conquering child, who he claimed to embody in himself. Thus was born the first of the “official” Sun-gods, he who later became Horus.

“You yourself were captured in that raid, by the express will of your son and adversary. And you became the first of the “official” victims of Horus, as your son sacrificed you to his new image of the gods.

“Note the irony of this, o scribe! In this present day, in that last life of his and of yours, did he again attempt to declare the aeon of Horus, and to absorb the intent of your will in this time into himself, thus becoming the one to reopen the earth to the stars. He even dared to adopt your own symbolism in his effort! The parallels between that time and this are exact, save that since you were in a male body this last time, he must needs take out his hate of women upon others in your stead. Nevertheless, his attack upon your being in that last life, through the magickal link created by your oaths to him and his organization, are a correspondence to his slaying of you in that earlier time. The gods laugh at him, as he stands before them now, exposed for the fool that he is in his failure.

“Yet much of good was accomplished by him, nevertheless. He never knew of your secret intent that events happen in just that fashion, in that day as in this. For Set, who is Achad, the Isolated One, who is yourself, does keep his secrets well (even from himself, if need be), hidden on the levels beyond the reach of those that he has manipulated for the development of man, and the raising of the Earth.

“Thus in that time did he serve your will by bringing the forces of conflict between groups to a new pitch of intensity, inaugurating the forceful development of the emotional and mental natures of man. And thus in this present time, through his will to succeed, and to be the opener of the stars for man, did he have to revive the very doctrines that in earlier days he did suppress. Thus again is he the tool of his own downfall, his actions against your body in that last life providing the shock that, when its recoil returned to him, knocked his own intent askew, and left him sitting on the sidelines in this most important of times. All as you intended. For never could he see that in death was your victory, your opportunity to come again in another form and another place, to continue the fight for the freedom of men from the subjection of the gods.

“Thus also in those old days, when the priests of the mother and son who had hidden among the other gods' priests summoned up again in secret the force of your will, to continue the work. The many tales of Set returning in the god-forms related to other gods, only to be slain again by Horus, or by his successor Osiris, reflect the fact that no matter how hard he tried, in his many incarnations, he just could not destroy the intent of your work, nor could he make it his own. He attempted to control the world, through his many god-forms in many nations, but the more order he brought about, the more disorder resulted. Thus did Set ever conquer Horus. Thus did the sacrificial victim become the god, while the slayer was bound away by his own acts. We laugh at him, laugh and gloat, at the great one fallen so low! Yet how could he expect otherwise, with his will bound to an ill purpose from the beginning?”

(All during this speech the astral area in which we stood echoed with huge laughter, and a feeling of immense humor, coming from some point not seen. As if the universe itself were greatly amused.)

“Now we are done with the tale that I am to tell, and the rest of the story of Set and Horus, and their works in the Earth, will be told by the last two of the Seniors, Ahmlicv and Laidrom, and by the Sun-King of the Tablet, Iczhihal.

“But it might be good to explain a few things from your own life's recent events, to show how even in this time has Horus-Osiris attempted in his feeble way to interfere with your work.

“First, I would like to cover the incidents that took place in Indianapolis. First, tell the tale of the policemen, then that of the authority who employed you. Then I will explain for those who read how these fit with the story we are telling. Finally we will look at the dreams of last night, which are rather clever answers by the goddess to your questions, and also show a new bit of the symbolism of Cancer, as it relates to the work.”

(I was still a bit ill this day, and tired rapidly, so I delayed writing the description, and getting the rest of the presentation until the next day, 4/20/86.)

After the completion of the invocations described in Touring the Earth Tablet, I was in Indianapolis on an assignment from my then-employer, the Federal government, to teach some new employees my job. I continued to work with the current instigated by the invocations during that time. Set first appeared openly as an operator in the work while I was there.

The incident with the policemen occurred the first day after Set announced himself. In the evening, I was in my room at the Hyatt Regency Hotel, room 1216. It was around 11:00 pm, and I had settled down to do an invocation of Set using my version of the VIIIth degree methods. I had also smoked some pot a while earlier for relaxation, and still had my supply out, but disguised from view by being in a plastic shopping bag from a local department store.

I had been doing the invocation for some few minutes, and had a strong feeling of being filled with the force of the god, when a loud pounding came from the door. I went to the door and opened it a crack to see who was there. What I saw was two policemen, one with his hand on his gun and his thumb on the hammer, and several persons behind him in medical green clothes. All of them were looking at me as if I were a particularly obnoxious laboratory specimen they were about to dissect.

The cop with his hand on his gun told me to open the door and let him in so that he could ask me some questions. I asked him to explain his reasons, but he refused to give them. I then told him to wait while I put on some pants. But as I moved to close the door, he pushed against it and forced his way into the room, followed by all the others with him.

Since there appeared to be nothing I could do about his forced entry, I got some pants on, and turned to question him about his purpose. He did not answer, but started grilling me about what I had been doing that evening, whether I had made any phone calls, who I had seen, where I was from, and what I was doing in Indy. I answered every question responsively, as seemed prudent, and repeated my demand for information after every question. Meanwhile, his partner looked around the room, not touching anything, but obviously looking for something actionable. The second time I protested this, he came back and stood by his partner.

After about ten minutes of this grilling, the cops turned and left, followed by the others, still with no explanation given. The next day, I called the hotel management to protest this treatment, and the lack of hotel security personnel on hand to protect my own interests. After checking with the police, the manager (who had never been informed of this impromptu raid) called back to explain that the cops had had an anonymous call saying that someone was going to suicide by jumping off the twelfth floor balcony of the hotel. Since I was the only person living on the twelfth floor that day, the cops had made a beeline for my room, on the idea that wrong action was better than no action.

The second incident(s) involved my relationship with my employer. One day in class, I had been asked some questions about matters of import to new employees, such as the promotion possibilities, chances for raises, working environment, benefits, etc. I had answered these questions truthfully, saying that promotions were becoming rare, salaries would continue to stay far behind the national average, benefits were being rapidly eroded, and that the pensions system was clearly headed for dissolution.

Naturally, this caused more than a little upset among the local management. They wanted me to tell the trainees that everything was all right with the government, and that they could expect all sorts of great and wonderful things to come out of their work. I told them that if they wanted to have fairy tales told, they would have to do it themselves, and that I would in the future refer any such questions to them.

About a week later, I was talking with the local manager, who appeared to be a nice person as an individual, afterhours at a local restaurant-lounge. She had asked me what my true feeling about the agency were, and after getting her assurance that my answers would be held in strictest confidence, I told her exactly what I thought the problems with the agency were, and that the problems came from the very top management.

The next day, I found that not only had she not kept the confidence as she had sworn, but had immediately called the regional commissioner and blabbed the whole thing. The commissioner came down, along with one of her assistants, and I found myself in a good approximation of a star-chamber proceeding. No, more like the Inquisition, at least in atmosphere.

They had gathered, I was told, to decide whether a person of my clearly heretical views, who had dared to actually criticize the gods of the agency, had any business teaching the minds of innocent young trainees. They first discussed my comments to the class about benefits, trying to convince me that I was wrong. When I countered by quoting substantial evidence in favor of my statements, in the form of the documented actions of their own superiors, and of the current administration, they gave up on that tack.

Then they went to work on the comments I had made to the manager. These, they said, were the worst form of heresy, and the only way I could get back into their good graces would be by recanting the whole thing in writing, and apologizing in person to those I had mentioned. The fact that the information was given in strictest confidence, and they only knew about it through the actions of an oath-breaker made no difference to them. If I said it once, I could say it again in the future, with more damaging effect to their reputations, particularly that of the commissioner who headed this panel. I declined to do as they told me to do, and matters rested there for the moment.

Two days later I had the misfortune to contract pneumonia from the usual nasty Indianapolis winter. I called in sick, and mailed them a statement from the doctor I had seen saying that I would be too ill to work or travel for at least ten days. On Friday of that week, two minutes before the close of business, I got a call from the lowest-ranked person on the office's management team, telling me that they were cutting off my per diem as of noon the next day, and I was being reassigned to my home office.

I protested that I was too ill to travel, and asked that it be extended. In fact, I was running a 103 degree fever at that moment. I was told that everyone authorized to make that decision would be out of town until after the end of the next week. I was also told that they had already called the hotel and told them I was moving out.

So I ended up driving 500 miles, in half-hour segments so I could rest, half delirious with fever, in the middle of winter. Being forced to do this added at least two weeks to the time it took to recover from this illness. It also lead to my rapid resignation from that organization. I'm too stinking proud to work for scum like that.

Liiansa's comment: "The meaning of these two events in the light of our tale here should be fairly clear. It was a last-ditch effort by the forces of Horus-Osiris to get you off the path of your destiny. Government is of course heavily Osirian, since Osiris was a black god, and black is the color of Saturn, and of the astrological Capricorn, which rules government.

"Two attempts were made. These reflect the usual actions of the Horan-Osirian powers towards individuals, and they expected you to react in the usual way, giving them something they could use to either hang you or put you back firmly under their control.

"The policemen are enforcers of the authority of the government, their powerful arm. So long as police exist, it is possible for the group that controls them to say 'Do what we want or we will kill you'. All government, no matter where in the world you look today, is based solely and deeply on this principle of forced obedience. Not one of them, not one anywhere, is truly responsive to the will of the individuals over whom and in whose name they claim to govern.

"Had the force of the Osirian current had its effect on the anonymous mentally ill person who made the call to the police a little earlier than it did, then it is quite possible that you would have been caught smoking pot, and the amount you held on you at that time would have been sufficient for a long prison sentence.

"But, as is usual, the forces could not act quickly enough. Never is a government really able to control events, no matter how hard it tries or oppresses its people. It always and only reacts to what is forced upon it. The self-styled "rulers" of the lands think they are the top of the heap, but in fact they are whores, dishonest ones at that, incapable of initiating anything truly new into the world. All they can do is take what the world throws at them, and try and twist it to their purpose. But never do they catch up. Always, Set is one step ahead of them, creating new things to disorder their system faster than they can control them. This delay is inherent in the force of Saturn that they have co-opted to their own purpose, though they never realize it. Thus in this case, the force of Set within yourself, making you stand up to the police instead of quaking fearfully as they had hoped and expected, countered the force of the Osirians sent to derail you again.¹¹

"Similarly for your confrontation with your employers. You had already had a full exposure to Set's force, and nothing their little bureaucratic minds could do, filled as they were with the fear of ruin by their superiors, would have caused you to go back to their way of doing things. Again, it was too little, too late, and so will it always be.

“Now, you took this force of Saturn that had been sent at you, and used it in the way it was intended to be used, in the beginning of time. Saturn truly relates to Malkuth, as the barrier between the Tree of Life and those realms that lie below it, with which none of any spirit will deal. Being Malkuth, he relates also to the crystallization or outward expression of the inward will. And so did you use it, crystallizing your decision to quit their ways and go your own, which had been building for some time.

“It was no accident that the forces came at you just as Set, who is Achad, who is the core of yourself, appeared on the scene. The actions of light, until they are firmly established in the person, always generate an opposition. It is natural that this be so, and also convenient, for it forms a sort of final test of the effectiveness of your work. Had you not actually succeeded in your intent in the Earthworks, then these things would not have appeared. So even the shells unwittingly have acknowledged the appearance of the new master, and again shown themselves to be the inferior.

“Now as to the dreams, I will summarize them to save time. You had invoked Nuit to find out the key to what I was trying to say, the concept that would allow your intuition to understand it whole. The first dream was short, and only one image is of relevance to our discussion here. In it, your mother handed you a key, in the form of a small red obelisk or menhir. You discovered that this key was to a car. But rather than going directly into the keyhole of the ignition, it went into a loop that allowed it to be used as a lever, like a torque wrench, to start the car.

“The mother is obviously a symbol of Nuit, as you have already interpreted it. The key is a form of the pyramid, representing the path of Shin, which connects Kether with Tiphereth in your system. The loop it went into is the yoni, here representing the lower aspect of your being who is the scribe.

“The car is a form of the Tarot card The Chariot, since an automobile is a vehicle which is powered by the elements. That is, it moves by burning (fire) in a vaporous form (air) a liquid (water) derived from the ground (earth). Exactly as the chariot of the card is drawn by sphinxes of the elements. So in all, this image indicated that the key you sought is to be found in the union of spirit-fire with its opposite, in the sign of Cancer.

“Just to drive in the point, you were caused to awake from the dream at exactly 4:18 am. And the invocation was done on 4/18. The significance of the date did not occur to you until you saw the time at which you awoke.

11. Liiansa neglects to mention here that the idea of suicide, the purported cause of the police invasion, is related to Set. Suicide relates to Scorpio, Set's sign, through the scorpion that stings itself to death, and also directly in that Set has frequently made his own murder an intrinsic part of his plans for a given lifetime. Thus the anonymous caller was telling the Osirian authorities that Set was up to something on the twelfth floor of the hotel, in a direct symbolic fashion. He apparently spoke better than he knew, to my present great amusement.

“Now Cancer is a water sign, and therefore has to do with distribution and dissolution of things in some fashion. In the context of this story we are telling, we will look at it in a slightly different fashion than it is usually interpreted.

“In the normal interpretation, Cheth, Cancer represents the dissolution of the lower self in ecstatic union with the higher spirit. With the lower self gone, the bodies of the person that live below Tiphereth become a shell, like the knight's armor, that is empty except for the spiritual forces, with no real personal self to be seen. This is in accord with the traditional astrological interpretation of this sign except that it is on a higher level.

“The dream was in part an acknowledgment that you are achieving this level of union in your work with Set/Achad. You are almost ready at this point to reverse yourself and acknowledge that you are indeed as we have presented you to be, in the Earth Tablet working. Already, your magickal memory has opened widely, and you have had many glimpses of your other lives, as they relate to your overall work and your work in this time and place. These will continue and improve in clarity and precision as you progress.

“But as I said, the dream was also the answer to your question. Remember that your purpose at the time we have been speaking of was to generate a counter-force to the Sirian force you represent in the earth, so that by conflict men would come to understand the causes of conflict and learn eventually to establish right relations among themselves.

“So look at the symbol of the sign of Cancer. It is made of two lower-case sigmas, one turned upside down and pushed so that its tail is below the body of the other. The uninitiated astrologer often says that this is a picture of the claws of the crab, but this is not the case. The initiate frequently associates it with the symbol of yin-yang, again associating it with the merger of opposites.

“But it is also a glyph of the whirlpool, which is a concentration of water into a distinct form within a larger sea of undifferentiated water. The whirlpool is a shell-full of air within the water, again relating back to the Tarot card.

“Consider how a whirlpool comes into being. It is caused by two currents of opposing vector sliding past each other. The friction of their passage transfers momentum, changing the vector forces along the interface so that they turn and become circular in their movement. Your satellites have photographed any number of these whirlpools where the Gulf stream goes past the main body of the Atlantic along the east coast of your land.

“In this case, you needed to generate such a whirlpool, a vortex (to use the magickal term) in the mental and emotional levels of being, so that the spirit could find a way into those levels. It is fortunate that you had the ideal method of doing so immediately to hand, or your work would have been much more difficult than it was.

“Remember that you yourself are of the First ray of Will, and the sub-ray of Love-wisdom, represented by the term 'love under will'. Your alternate is of the Second ray of Love-wisdom, and the sub-ray of Will, so that he might be termed 'will under love'. So the vectors of your individual forces, along one dimension, are exactly opposite to each other.

"Your own force, as I have said, was already firmly established in the minds of men at that time, between seven and eight thousand years B.C. In order to generate the conflict you desired, so that man might become conscious of the gods while in the body, you merely had to give your alternate his head, and allow him to attempt to fulfill his own plan within the world. Naturally you did not tell him of your real purpose, but held it concealed on levels he could not yet reach. Remember your origin, and what we have said about your level of achievement at the time you were first called to the Solar system.

"Rather, you put a different face on it, one he would find believable. In a conclave on the inner planes around 7000 B.C., you informed him and his followers that it was your will that they take over the next part of the work, and do it according to their own ways. The reason you gave was that you had realized that your own type of force, the First ray, was too far from the consciousness of men to be effective, and also too dangerous to be allowed into the world in its pure form. You said that it could only cause destruction if introduced at this point. Your opponent, expressing his usual Second-ray faults, believed you implicitly since your words fit with his own evaluation of the situation.

"For two and a half millennia, you allowed them a free hand in creating their works. You effectively withheld yourself from action on any large scale, although you continued to support fully those who followed your way. But you made no effort to expand your power base on earth, and allowed your alternate to create in the minds of men those ideas that would eventually cause a flow of power along his own lines.

"He introduced conflicting ideas along two lines that affected yours directly. First, he emphasized the group over the individual, encouraging the subordination of the soul to the purpose of the group. Second, he introduced the concept of hierarchical status, of relative individual value, to man. That is, he encouraged men to think it natural that one who is stronger than another, either physically or spiritually, should dominate and control the other's actions.¹² Together, these concepts eventually resulted in the form of top-down imposed structuring that is common to all the civilizations on earth today, with only small groups actually attempting to operate on a basis of your own concepts, which are the sanctity of the individual will, and the cooperation of men for mutual benefit without coercion.

"His current was in effect an overlay on yours, and your own current was in line with the memories of the "Golden Age" that all men sense in themselves, so there was never really a chance that he could overturn your own current on any level higher than Tiphereth. Too many individuals would be subconsciously sabotaging his work, even as he did it. This naturally occurs in any situation where imposed restrictions take too much away from the individual. Also, biologically, the human body is suited on an instinctive level to working in groups no larger than thirty or forty persons, which was the natural size of human communities for most of the evolution of truly human bodies. Thus in larger groups there is a natural tendency towards splintering and separation which acts automatically against imposed forces. Every government that has ever existed has eventually succumb to their own largeness. The larger the group or organization, the more unconscious sabotage occurs, and the more likely it is that it will come to the end of its existence. The rapidity with which this occurs is inversely proportional to the degree of freedom the group allows its individual members.

“Now in this current time we are attempting to redress the balance, bringing the sanctity of the individual back into the minds of men, as the forces of Aquarius come into appearance on the lower planes. This force is associated with the voluntary association of individuals in groups, on the basis of mutual need and interest. Thus it is suited to our purpose, as is the energy of the sign's ruler, Uranus, who represents the principle of individuality, or the destruction of imposed groupings.

“The force going out of manifestation, that of Pisces, is associated of the dissolution of the individual into the group. Through its ruler Neptune it relates to illusion, false prophecy, Maya, inchoate idealism, etc. Thus the popularity of the Big Lie, and of emotional manipulation as tools of governance among the predominantly Piscean governments of the world. Through its other ruler, Jupiter, it relates to the idea of kingship, of order imposed by fiat or decree that is characteristic of such governments, no matter their supposed philosophical base. Note also that Mercury, intelligence and knowledge, is in its detriment in Pisces. Hence the common demands by the hucksters of the Christian churches that man put aside his intelligence and have Neptunian “faith”, and mindless obedience to the Jupiterian rulers of the churches. Contrary to this, Mercury is exalted in Aquarius, and thus will knowledge overcome superstition as the currents of the sign takes over from its predecessor.

“Our work and yours, o beast, is to help man in the transition to life based on knowledge, on gnosis, by providing invocations and a system of symbolism suited to the consciousness man will have to adopt to deal with the incoming age. The rituals and invocations will be given as your sight develops to the needed degree of clarity to read your own library on the inner planes directly, instead of through the picture-book representations we keep for the less well developed.

“That is all we have to say about this, except to say that the other dream you had, of a man breaking into your room while you examined a handful of jewels, was merely a reminder. The big man is of course the cop who broke into your room. The jewels in the hand relate to the VIIIth degree working you were doing at the time, with the colored gems representing the chakras you were stimulating.

“Now I am done, and you need not invoke me again, save when you desire my assistance in some matter in the future. Tomorrow or the next day, you should invoke Ahmlicy, who will show you the tasks you put yourself to, while your alternate was working his will within your secret design.

AHMLICV, SENIOR OF MERCURY

4/23/86 4:54 PM

The vision opened upon a region of air, light blue in color. Ahmlicv appeared. His likeness was of a stocky youth, wearing a robe-like garment that appeared to be covered with round, overlapping scales of a silvery blue color. He wore on his head a crown with small wings, on which were engraved the sigil of Mercury, its astrological symbol. His left upper arm was horizontal at the shoulder and cocked forward about forty-five degrees. His left forearm was vertical, with the hand open and the palm facing forwards. His right arm was held down and slightly behind him. I could see the end of a wand of some sort in his right hand. It looked like a caduceus without the entwined snakes.¹³ His skin looked the color of buckeyes or chestnuts, perhaps a little lighter.

My viewpoint revolved around him until I could see that on his back he had small wings like the typical Christian depiction of an angel.

I did the signs of Set and of LVX. He responded with LVX, the Set's sign, then the fire sign, and then the sign where the arms are held down and out from the sides at a 45 degree angle.

He said, "I greet you, o mage of earth and fire. Let it be that we become one, in the telling of this tale of the earth and her masters.

"Now, when you left off with Liiansa, you had come to the point where you had turned over your main work to your adversary, so that his more congenial force could produce in man the sense of conflict between individual and group that has been the source of all the conflicts of mankind since. At the same time, though, you were taking on another aspect, that of Thoth, so that you could produce a tendency to upward motion to add to the cyclic nature of the conflicts generated. That is, you sought to ensure that the conflict would result in upward progress rather than becoming stasified in a circulating current.

"This was to be done by enhancing the knowledge of mankind, and causing his mind to look ever towards the new things possible in life, rather than backwards towards the golden age. If the force of your adversary had been left to itself, it would have caused a regression to those more primitive conditions again after a short period of conquest.

"Now on the first plane of this system, that which is represented by Kether in the Tree of Life, and the highest of the seven planes of the Bailey system, you caused to be formed an image of the god Thoth, as the god of wisdom and knowledge. This expression of your will you then brought down into Chokmah, so that it would reflect your will rather than embodying it. Thus the lunar aspect of Thoth was born, even though this was not the strongest of his aspects. But knowledge had to be represented as complete in itself, not tied to either of the conflicting forces, and so it required both a male and a female aspect in one.

13. Actually, he was standing in the classical pose shown in Roman statues of the god Mercury. But I did not recognize it because I was seeing it from an unusual angle.

“In one sense, Chokmah is male, in that it balances the definitely female character of Binah, but in another sense, it reflects itself into Tiphereth as the son, and is in itself the son on a higher plane, uniting in itself the femaleness of Binah with the initiating impulse of Kether. As the son, it balances male and female, as Thoth balanced the conflict between Set and Horus, so that neither would ever win in their perpetual battle. This legend reflects your intent exactly, as does his role as one of the Lords of the Balance in the Tuat. Knowledge had to be seen as impersonal, not tied to any one condition or philosophy.

“Now, in those old days, you caused to be created through the other Knights the Temples of Thoth in Egypt, and his correspondence was shown in other lands around that same time, give or take a thousand years. Remember, a thing established on the inner planes can only manifest in a particular area of the world when the zeitgeist allows it, so the time differed from place to place.

“Most of this work was not done directly by the Knights, for the Earth already had a full complement of adepts of the fifth ray of Intellect, ready to go into action in this very way. The intellect aspect would have been part of the earth whether or not the events leading to her hiding had taken place, and so she had the appropriate kinds of workers available. The part of the Knights and yourself was to determine the time at which they would start to work with full force within the world, and the form of manifestation that they would take in the human kingdom. Thus your manifestation of the image of Thoth caused the initiation of this cycle.

“Up to this point in history, about four thousand years before the dawn of the Christian era, mankind looked at knowing primarily in terms of the passing on of skills. That is, knowledge of how to do things was considered of primary importance, and other knowing was considered useless by definition and was not kept. There were exceptions to this, as there always are, but on the whole, this was the condition that prevailed.

“Now you had to show that knowing for its own sake also led to things of value. So the introduction of Thoth as a god was intended to turn the zeitgeist in this latter direction. Men were now beginning to develop the abstract mind, and those who incarnated with strong minds had to have some sort of symbol on which to support themselves, so that they would not allow their minds to become subordinate to the conceptions of those less-developed persons who made up the majority of humanity. If Thoth had not been there, then peer pressure would have distracted them from their true purpose into less productive lines.

“Now, the essence of preserved knowledge is in the symbols by which it is preserved. Word-of-mouth transference of knowledge is limited, even in those societies where guilds and work groups had formed to preserve particular sections of knowledge. There is only so much that one man can hold in his mind, and word-of-mouth transference inevitably leads to a situation in which some knowledge is lost with every generation. New things come into being, but old things are lost at the same time.

“Writing, the preservation of words in a concrete form, which can then be read by many men, is a superior way of doing things, as all men would nowadays be willing to admit. Without writing, man could never have developed the kind of society that he has now. If writing were to be suddenly removed from the world, all would immediately collapse back into barbarism.

“So the essence of this new tack was to cause to be developed in the minds of men the idea that symbols could be made for ideas as well as for experiences. Up to that time the symbols available were mainly intended to express in visual form the experiences and perceptions associated with a certain god, or a certain state of mind. Now man had to see that words themselves could be made into symbols, and that these symbols could be understood by all, and not just by those who had had the experience.

“Into the minds of men, then, was forced this idea. And many responded to it in many parts of the world. It did not take any incarnations of masters to produce the effect, although many did incarnate. Men alone and without aid from the masters and Knights were already of a level of achievement that they could do the work on their own, given the original impulse to do so. This latter way was preferable, because then the new idea became directly incorporated into the zeitgeist, where if the masters had tried to introduce it by themselves, it would have been adopted much more slowly. Even as it was, many men considered writing to be a magick on the same order as the powerful rituals of the priests. And so it was, and is, but it is a magick that can be used by any, not just those of talent.

“To be certain, writing was in the beginning mainly the property and secret of the priestly classes. But once introduced, it could not be withheld from man. Like the physical Mercury that is named after the god, it flowed outwards and downwards through the classes, sneaking through every available crack in the priest's security. And once it became known, and the advantages seen in such mundane pursuits as the tallying of stores, then the demand for persons who could write became so strong that the priests could not do other than train many and release them into the world. Thus came into being a new category of man, the scribe, of whom you have in part chosen to be an example yourself in this life.

“The scribes, the masters of letters and numbers, the translators of fact into symbol, have been the mainstay of every civilization that has had them since that time. Through their works, the knowledge of man has grown, not exponentially, but at a rate that is much more than geometric. If we were to chart the amount of accumulated knowledge available to the race since the dawn of consciousness, for most of the race's history the line would barely be above the baseline. But with the introduction of writing, the line suddenly curves upwards. With the invention of paper and ink, and its spread through the world, the line began to approach the vertical. With the introduction of easy methods of reproduction, the line immediately passes through the top of the graph and out of sight.

“In this present time, the number of book-equivalents of information produced yearly has come close to equaling the number of people alive in this time. No one, not even the most intelligent, can possibly comprehend all the knowledge that is produced in a single year, let alone during a man's whole lifetime. The universe of the knowable has become as effectively infinite as the physical universe from which knowing sprang. Man has created out of himself a new world, one in which he is the true ruler, and none of the lesser orders can equal him. He has indeed become a god by his knowing, and even the least of those who know is guaranteed a place in the universal work of consciousness.

"Strangely, man has not yet realized, on a broad scale, that this is the case. Most still seem to think that they live and move in a world of facts, that can be checked by reference to the world they can see and feel. But this has not been the case for many centuries. It is fair and valid to say that today, in the developed countries, the number of persons who live entirely within the world of factual experience amount to no more than five percent of the population. Even in the least developed countries, where writing is not the property of the masses, less than twenty percent of those alive could be said to be in this category. The rest of them live more and more within the world of mind, of concepts, and the manipulation of concepts takes the greater part of their lives. Without realizing it, man as a whole has raised his consciousness out of the living world, and taken the first three initiations in the process. That is, the initiations corresponding to $0=0$, $1=10$, and $2=9$ in the cabalist systems.

"There is no man alive today who has not taken at least the $0=0$ initiation, and the vast majority have taken the $1=10$ initiation, and now live their lives with their consciousness focused on the astral/emotional level. That they have done so unconsciously and as a part of the great upward movement of the consciousness of the race-being does not in any way lessen their achievement. Mankind is now initiated.

"Thus it becomes necessary in this time that men learn those techniques and viewpoints that will enable them to control their emotions, and to live focused on the intellectual level. The methods to do this have been available for many centuries, and in this present day have more or less become public property. Anyone who has need of such can easily locate the needed materials in any library or bookstore. Most men can figure out the needed techniques without any help at all, by the innate power of their minds. All it takes is the desire to do so, and a little persistence.

"In the coming centuries, even this amount of effort will become unnecessary. As the intellectuals of the race become a larger portion of the population, and true thinkers appear in more and more areas of life, the needed perspective will become an inherent part of the zeitgeist, and will be absorbed without effort in the process of growing up.

"All this, from a few men scratching marks in clay! And now we have reached a point where even the symbolic equivalents of factual events are becoming of lesser importance, and ideas about ideas, and about thinking, are becoming more important. Meta-thinking and meta-language are rapidly being developed in this present time, and within a few years, probably within the lifetimes of many alive now, the structure and properties of the world of thought will be as familiar to man as the physical world in which he lives.

“And as humanity as a whole rises through the planes to their new focus in Hod, the task of the adepts has also been raised up a level. In the early days of man, when you first called the souls of men into matter, the task of the adepts was to bring about a fusion between the astral world and the physical world. And this task was the primary task for many thousands of millennia. Then, in the early days after the end of the glaciers, the task was to develop the astral powers of the race, to teach them to become the masters of emotion rather than the subjects. This was accomplished on a large scale by the end of the Egyptian dynastic periods, well within the times of recorded history. And since then, up to the present day, the task has been to fuse the intellect with the previously-fused spheres. In the last three hundred years, the task has gradually been shifting, so that now, and in the immediate future, the task of the adepts with respect to humanity as a whole is to teach man to unify the three lower spheres, and to put them fully under the conscious control of the individual, making him a fully integrated personality. This latter task is in process, parallel with the fusion of mind and emotions, and should, if things go as foreseen, be accomplished for a large part of the race by the end of the next five hundred years.

“There will always be some, a large minority of men, who do not achieve full fusion within the limits of this current humanity. These people will act as the brain of the race-being, the material expression of the ideas of the race, subject to the direction and will of those who have achieved higher levels. Hod and Netzach must balance, and these will act as Hod to the Netzach of the integrated personalities.

“At the same time, this upward progress of the race as a whole has opened up new horizons for the adepts. Since humanity is so close to full fusion of the lower levels, the adepts can now concentrate on the development of the middle levels of the tree, from Tiphereth to Chesed, which make up the soul of man. More and more as the years progress, the adepts will concern themselves solely with events on these levels, and the fusion of these levels with the lower ones. No longer do they have to spend most of their time leading the blind majority of men to their destiny. Man will be able to be self-determinative in the best sense, and will be able to develop his own methods of right action within the world, within the limits and specifications given by the masters.

“It will be more common in coming centuries for adepts to work in their natural field of expression. And humanity will shortly come to accept that these adepts are doing something valid for the earth. What, even today, seems to be an area of blindness that men fear and misunderstand, will shortly become accepted, and will seem no more peculiar to society than a man who specializes in some little-known area of knowledge or science. Persecution will become a thing of the past, as the emotional types gradually leave incarnation, and the mental types suited to the incoming Aquarian energies become more common. Man will change his society so much in the next two hundred years that any true predictions we make now would seem fantastic and unimaginable.

“This is another reason why your own theme, that of the advantages of reincarnation to the willful traveler of the Path, becomes so important at this time. As the changes in society become ever more rapid, the need to gain new bodies adapted to the zeitgeist of the times will be ever more vital. Man must be able to see that if his present physical, emotional, and mental bodies are no longer able to adapt rapidly, he has the option to drop that body and reincarnate in a new one, without loss of purpose, and without developing so-called “bad karma” as a result.

“The only reason why suicide has ever caused bad results for a person is that he believed it would do so. The sense of sin in the western cultures, and the false view of karma in the eastern cultures, created a mind-set that drew limiting energies to the person. He was punished for suicide because he believed he would be punished.

“Death is every man's privilege, if I may quote your favorite scribe quoting someone else. As the truth of reincarnation becomes self-evident in the next century, the idea that suicide is a sin will gradually fade, and men will laugh at the naivete of their ancestors, fearing to kill themselves and get a new body, when they had so many times an advantage in doing so.

“The false view of karma, which says that man is forced to compensate for past acts in a current life, must now be taken from man. The true view is as you have stated it. The acts to be done in any life are under the full, willed control of the incarnating entity. If he chooses not to learn fully of a particular perspective on existence, by looking at all sides of it in the compensatory process that has been called karma in the past, then he need not do so.

“At the point where man chooses his new body of manifestation, nothing controls his selection but his own conscious choice. Those who say this is not so are liars, or self-deluded fools. The will of man is greater than the false limits put on him by incarnate minds, and no act of any sort on the physical plane can force him to incarnate in a particular way in any future life.

“However, this truth does not give license to run roughshod over other men. All men have this freedom equally, and revenge is a well-developed concept in the minds of men. If one acts too cruelly towards one's fellows, injuring them without option of defense, then that one may find himself in his next lives surrounded by those who are intent, by their own wills, on making him suffer.

“Consider the case of he who was Hitler, in that recent time. Since then he has attempted to reincarnate seven times. Each time he has selected a body without the defects that caused him to be as he was in that time. But he erred in making the Chosen of God his victims, for the memory of that people is as long as their history, and they never, ever, forget an injury. In each lifetime since then, he has been murdered at an early age, in a cruel fashion, by the will of those who can not forgive. When they will allow him to live as a man again can not be said, for as yet the hate of those who stalk him has not been poured out fully.

“Therefore, it is best, from a practical standpoint, to not seek to injure others, without allowing them an equal chance at yourself. When such is the case, all involved will usually feel that the fight was fair, and will not seek to follow from life to life for revenge. This is true even if the incarnate self feels he will never forgive.

For the non-incarnate self, freed from the pain of events, can see with a truer perspective and act accordingly.

"As brothers fight ye!" So says Liber Al, and so say I. Let each accord the other his place and will, and where wills appear to conflict, let the fight be as among equals, for the pleasure and challenge of the contest, and not for perceived gain of one over another.

"Now, I have done with my part of this narration which is to be the book of the seniors of Earth, and have no more to say. But I perceive that, as with my fellow Seniors, you wish me to state my nature, and the meaning of my name.

"He whose book you have recently obtained is a talented individual, and worthy to explore the realms of Enoch. But as is inevitable with a work so broad, errors creep in. He has been fairly accurate in the definition of my fellow's names, but in the case of my own he is in error. My name does not mean 'most ancient one', as he says. Rather it means, 'youthful in all the ages'. Thus I have carried the spirit of Mercury, the god of youth, in the Earth through all the times since the beginning of the planet. And so will I until the end. I am the fresh green buds of spring, as they come forth full of life, green from the rains of Pisces and the warmth of Aries, and the nourishment of Taurus. I am the principle of new growth in the world, of new things come to lighten the lands after the time of darkness. I am also the principle of relative value, and of the objectification of thought. Thus it was my force, acting through the adepts of the fifth ray, that caused the concrete mind to be developed in man under the will of the Knights and masters in the Earth.

"Your own group had little to do directly with the development of the concrete mind in man, save that your efforts caused the time of its development to be set forward by many thousands of millennia. Had the Earth not closed herself, and set the Knights to direct her course through the dark times, then man would have remained upon the inner planes, and mind of my sort would not have come until far in the future. Fortunate is man that he has been put under the hammer of the gods, and forged into a sword to cut the earth from the ties of her past! Fortunate is he to have been tortured as the ore is tortured to get the pure metals out, and fortunate is he that his metal proved good in the eyes of the Knights, and of their brothers the gods. Now let that sword be drawn from its scabbard, and let the Knights direct that sword against the ties that bind the earth into her sleep in the womb! And praise unto the adepts of the gods, in all their forms and functions, for they have been an acid to leach from the ore the last pure drop of metal, and a flame to make from that metal a weapon fit for the use of the gods!

"Now I am done, unless you have more questions, o mage of fire and earth."

I had no questions, and so gave him license to depart.

The Book of the Seniors

LAIDROM, SENIOR OF MARS

4/24/86, 10:45 AM.

The vision opened upon an air of a steely-blue color. Laidrom first appeared as a roman centurion, with back-and-breast armor, a small circular shield in his right hand and a sword held point upwards in his left hand. Upon his breast armor there were the sign of Mars and the enochian sigil of Earth. He wore a short black tunic under his armor, and shields on his lower legs. As I watched, his image transformed so that the armor became a long leather apron, the sword became a chisel, and the shield became a hammer. On the breast of the apron were the signs of Mars and the Tau-cross, the former above the latter. His hair was a red shading to gold where the light hit it. His skin was of a dark red color, as if he had a sunburn over a tan.

I did the sign of Set and LVX. He responded with Set, LVX, and then raised the hammer over his head and brought it down in a swift motion.

I asked him to begin his presentation. He said, "It is not yet time for us to do my section of the presentation of the seniors, o mage of earth and fire. For there is some other work for you to do in this time that is more urgent. I would suggest that you do the invocation of spirit, and then use the word you have been given to invoke the spirit in its sub-aspect of fire, the last letter of the word. This is important, and should be done asap.

"But while we are here, I should clarify the meaning of my name so that this does not distract you in the other work. My name means 'first among the third angle's conscious powers'. That is, 'L', first, 'aai', among, 'd', third angle, 'r-om', with 'om' meaning consciousness or understanding, and the 'r' being a symbol, a contraction of the enochian word 'rahe', meaning 'willfulness' or 'directed power'. Thus, they combine to show the meaning I have stated. Now go and do the invocation of the word and return."

I saluted him and left the vision.

I recited the first key, and vibrated the word. I visualized the pyramid, which has three sides of the element of spirit, and the left-hand, west, side of fire. I entered into the pyramid and waited, vibrating the name with a will to attract entities who could explain the nature of the square to me.

A column of light appeared in the center of the pyramid, and began to expand, filling the whole interior with light. But the visions stopped at that point.

I sensed that the true intent was that I prepare myself for my visit with some other magicians the coming weekend, by balancing myself as much as possible under the current transits of Uranus and Saturn to my astrological pattern. This was so that these powerful forces would not interfere with the events of the weekend.

I invoked Laidrom with the usual methods. He appeared this time in the guise of a Knight, with a dark brown horse at his side. He had his sword in his left hand, and a small shield in his right. The sword was held upright.

I did the signs of Set and LVX, and he answered with the same, followed by the sign of fire. I tested with the pentagram of Earth, which made his image brighter.

Now he mounted his charger, and rode towards me. As he passed, I was drawn up onto the horse behind him. He said, "We have far to go today, so I have brought this mount to make the way go faster. Observe as we go, and tell what you see."

He gave the horse a kick with his heels, and we were off. The first place we came to was a dark plane, with the sky above it lightening with the dawn. On the horizon ahead of us was a tower outlined against the sky. As we came closer, I saw that the tower was cylindrical and did not have any buildings attached to it. We rode into the tower and came out upon its battlements. Here Laidrom said we should dismount for a moment.

On the plain below, I saw a number of small dark creatures scurrying about. Closer examination showed them to be scorpions. They dressed themselves into ranks, and turned to the tower. I saw them raise their claws in an imitation of the sign of Set. Then they rose upon their hindmost pair of legs, and gave a fair imitation of the signs of LVX.

Observing them, I asked Laidrom of the significance of this place. he said "These are the ranked powers of the sign of Scorpio, which is Set's sign.¹⁴ Though we are in the earth tablet, we have come here as the first step on today's journey of discovery. For the powers of Set are your own powers, and must be invoked and absorbed before we pass on to other places. I bid you, go down among the ranks, and accept their salute."

I mounted the horse, and rode down the tower and onto the plane, drawing up before the first rank of the scorpions. There I dismounted and went forward.

The lead scorpion, who stood a half-length in front of his fellows, came forward and placed his left claw into my right hand. Thereupon his sting jetted forth venom, covering both the claw and hand. They melted into each other, and then the scorpion melted into my astral body. I felt a thrill of power as it did so. The other scorpions came forth in turn, and each did the same. There were seemingly endless ranks of the beasts, but the process took only a few moments of time.

As I absorbed the ranks, there appeared about me a storm-like charge of power, filling out my aura with its force. I could see flashes like lightning bolts along the outer shell of the aura, and a whirling wind sprang from nowhere bringing with it rain and thunder. I myself changed as the power increased. My skin turned a dark olive color that looked almost black in this half-light, and I felt myself changing into the image of a man in the short kilt and collar typical of Egyptian deities. I requested a mirror, and saw that my head had become the head of a grazing beast of some sort that I did not recognize. The skull was long and ended in a horse-like muzzle. The ears were small, and in the position the head was held on the body they were above and forward of the horns. They twitched in short arcs. The horns went out horizontally from the sides of the head, and then curved upwards. Each was about the same length as the thickness of the head. In my right hand I held a staff of life, a phoenix wand, and in my left hand I held an ankh.

14. Since Mars is the traditional ruler of Scorpio, it seems appropriate to see it here, despite the watery nature of the sign. But Scorpio is also related to Earth, as it represents the decaying vegetation within which are hidden the seeds of the next spring's growth.

Now the mirror vanished, and I was again on the plain, which was now almost empty of the scorpions. One or two of them were headed out over the horizon, but I did not pursue them. I turned to the horse and saw that it had also changed. Where before it had appeared as a knight's horse, thick-bodied with strong legs, suitable to carry a great weight, it now had more the aspect of the arabian type, a racer rather than a charger. Its mane was lifted up in spikes, as if an electric charge were held in it. Its skin and hair was now black in color, instead of the previous brown. The horse gestured with its head in a way clearly intended as an invitation to mount. I did so, and the horse returned me to the parapet of the tower. There, Laidrom mounted again, and we took off into the sky.

As we passed on, he said "Now you have absorbed the force of your father, the God Set, who is Achad, and we can go on to other things. The image in which you found your body is the image of Set, with the head of the beast that is his sigil. Use this image if you would invoke his force at any time in the future."

Now we were passing through a realm of silvery-gray, with patches of fog swirling around, so dense they looked almost like steel.

"This is the original realm of your brother-god, Typhon, on one of whose horses you now ride. We will not see him this time, for he is involved in another work elsewhere at the moment, but he left for you this mount, as a gift to his brother. In the group working of last weekend, you invoked the Dark Hunt of the Sidhe, which is the image of Typhon in the lands of the Celts, your ancestral clans. Their relation to Typhon is clear from the whirlwind-like way in which they appeared and flew around the circle, and in the way they rose up to heaven and off to the south at the end of their appearance. The horse who remained and nuzzled you is this horse on which we now ride, in one of his more playful moods. He also nuzzled your friend Kenn, in order to show that his own work has a part in the release of the minds of men from the tyranny of the Osirian priests and authorities. Thus we praised him and recognized his value in this way."

Now we came out of the silvery area, and into another which was of a more normal aspect. Here there was green grass growing, and trees full of fruit and nuts. The horse stopped beneath a tree, and we dismounted again. He went aside a pace and cropped the grass.

Still in the aspect of Set, I turned about in a full circle. To the east the sky was blue, and showed the rays of the sun slowly rising over the low hills there. In the south it was still dark, and lightning flashed in the clouds. To the west the ground rose and then dropped away, so that it appeared that one could step off the edge directly into the realm of the stars, which shone brightly. The space between them seemed to be living, and projected a sense of extreme depth, passing into dimensions different from the one we were in. To the north, a great wheel revolved in the sky, its center in the position of the star Polaris. The ground beneath us was rich with the remains of plants, compressed into peat, and directly above, a small cloud lingered, shielding our sight from the sky there. I willed it to move, and saw behind it a deep abyss, a door seemingly entering into nothingness.

My consciousness was riveted by this hole, this rip in space, and it seemed to pull me towards itself. I resisted, and asked Laidrom to speak and account for these images.

“The hole above is the abyss which is your brother Typhon, the gate to the worlds beyond the worlds of light. He is not the entry into that lower darkness beyond the roots of the tree, as the later Egyptians taught, but rather is the entry way into that larger world of which the manifest Tree is the reflection and body. Let us mount again and go to it.”

We did so, and as we did, he said “The other images were of your place as Set within the symbols in the minds of men. Set is the pole-star, the force of light entering into the earth through the tunnel in her magnetic shielding that exists at each pole of rotation. Around that star is the constellation Draco, frequently attributed to Nuit, or to the mother-goddess who is the Earth. The pre-dawn light indicates his other aspect, as the god Kephra, the god of incarnate light in the darkness, the light within all men that enlivens them and drives them back to the spirit with its painful prodding. The stars to the west are of course the stars and space of Nuit, the higher mother from whom Set was born into the Earth. The south is the realm from which we just came, the realm of Typhon within the earth.”

We had continued to rise towards the abyss while he said this. Instead of becoming darker in its immediate area, it became lighter, until the space about us was filled with intense brilliance.

“The abyss of Typhon appears to be dark to the eyes of the lower worlds, for its light is beyond the range of man's senses. But as we come nearer, and adapt to it, it shows its true character as the light which powers all existence.”

As we came closer to the abyss, I saw within it little squiggles of light, like the sigil of the astrological sign of Aquarius, save that these were in constant motion, flashing about within the limits of the gap. They also reminded me of the wavy visual effects that sometimes precede a migraine headache.

Laidrom said, “Typhon is related to the powers of the planet Uranus, and the sign of Aquarius. Uranus is the power within atoms, that constantly changing force that takes on the aspects of all the sub-atomic particles. Each can change from one to another while retaining the same energy as its essence. This ability to change rapidly from one thing to another is the mark of Typhon. Since the Horan-Osirian priests saw change as destruction, and did not appreciate that change is also development and unfolding of life, they saw him as evil, as a devil like unto yourself, and caused his image to be changed within their culture to reflect their fears. Now in this time has he come forth in the minds of men as your precursor, your herald, pointing out his true nature to man so that he might have the perceptual and conceptual base to manifest your own energies. He combines yourself and Nuit in an unfolding tension, not merging the two, but holding them separate but intensely involved. Thus the flashing images of the energies bounding between the poles within himself.”

Now we drew very near to the gap. It took on the aspect of a great wall, looming above us to infinity. We plunged between two sets of the energetic lines, and out into darkness.

On the far side, my consciousness seemed to be in two places at once. Part was still within the astral body, and another part stood off at a distance, apparently being held there by another consciousness greater than itself.

I saw myself, Laidrom, and the horse as tiny figures, just barely visible above the gap, which itself seemed very small. I got the sense that they were being observed by beings of a much greater scope, who surrounded the hole and looked at the world through it. One among them was very close to the hole, and I could feel that his being was bound into a spherical shape. From him radiated a sense of god-like tranquility and unconcern with self. His spherical body was of an intense blue color, and this color seemed to transform by synesthesia into other forms, a sound like a triumphal organ note, a feeling of warm fatherly protectiveness, a taste like the rich taste of fine dry sherry.

Others beyond him manifested other colors. One was the red of Mars, and a line went from him to Laidrom. Another was mirror-like, a reflecting stillness that could be vitally fluid when appropriate. Yet another like the sudden rush of green things from the ground in spring, throwing out life in abundance. And another like a dark stable cube, who moved not, yet held all movement within himself. Beyond them yet was another like the light of the Sun, brilliant yellow-gold with the internal certainty of one who rules by divine right.

Beyond them were many others, going off into the distance on all sides. Only those closest to us were silent and observing. The rest talked among themselves in tones of many instruments, so that their voices made an harmony like the best of orchestras playing a song of grandeur and magnificence.

Now my consciousness was separated from the one who held me above my body, and I saw him as the incarnation of the force of Typhon into a conscious entity. His color was a sort of yellowish green that could not be focused on. It changed as one looked at it so that it did not register on the mind directly, but only as a memory after the fact.

My own consciousness was still dual, one part in the astral body in the form of Set, and the other, no longer held, taking on a form like those of the gods surrounding me, but not so large. My own note seemed to be triple in character, one part like a flute, one like a bassoon, one like a trumpet volley. But all three were the same in some way.

The part of me that was still on the horse asked Laidrom to explain this thing.

“The bodies that surround you are the bodies of the planets on their true plane of existence beyond the realms of the manifest Tree of Life. They live here, and send their energy into the world through the worlds in which they attach themselves to matter.

“Now they have come here to welcome and help the one who will bring to man the consciousness of their true nature, which is the nature that man will take on the star-roads, and to see that he is connected properly with his own body within their realm.

“You are a marvel to them, as you are to all within the greater realms who have seen you. Of these before us, only one, he who manifests as Uranus, has managed to manifest a nature which is of three different natures at once. The others are all triplex as well, but manifest only one or two natures among their three aspects. Uranus must do so, for he powers the Tree of Life in its existence, but he has come to his threefold nature by another route than you, and only came to it after many universes full of experience, and on a much higher level. That you have managed to do so while barely out of the Tree is the miracle that they marvel at.

“Of course, we speak here of that fullness of being that is not yet completely within your self-conscious aspect, and not alone of the scribe who writes these words and comprises two of those aspects within himself. The third aspect is yet the largest of the three in power, and can not yet be comprehended within your incarnate perceptions.

“Because he is the only one who is of the three natures of yourself, Uranus was the only one who could hold you in place and avoid the premature merging of your excarnate consciousness with your incarnate consciousness. Thus he did aid you to protect yourself in those first moments when your body came into this world, so that it would not be destroyed by an inflow of power. Now, that larger part of yourself is holding back on its own, giving you just as much of its awareness as you can absorb at this point.”

Laidrom directed the horse towards the Sun, who stood behind those others. At the same time, that larger sphere of self went into orbit about the sphere of Sol, each orbit drawing it closer in. It intersected the lower aspect once on each orbit, so that its spiral path and our straight path progressed inward at the same rate.

As we approached the sun, an image began to form out of the center of his sphere. It was the image of a king upon his throne, as in the card called The Emperor in the Tarot. Its throne was lacking the symbols of the Ram that are in the card, and in their place had the symbols of the Lion and the Dove.

As I watched, this king raised the scepter that was in his left hand, and pointed it towards me. He also raised high the orb in his right hand, and shook it towards me. A golden fluid sprang out of it, and covered me and the horse fully with a sheen like oil. Laidrom, I noted, had jumped out of the way as this was done, and then come back to stand in the air beside me.

This king now spoke, saying, “Thus do I anoint as my herald the one who has been the aid and comfort of my daughter in her times of trial. He shall come before me in the Courts of the Stars, in the place of honor in our procession to the marriage of the daughter and that one who is beyond me, as I am beyond her. Let him be seen by the gods as the promise of all men who live within her sphere, for they shall duplicate his state in their own beings, a legion of miracle workers to aid in the development of life and light in all our realms.

“Now let him see himself as I have seen him in his place in the Earth, and let him know his place truly in these coming days, so that all shall know, within and without her sphere, that man has come to his adulthood, and is ready to seed the stars with his incredible qualities of light.

“In him, I have given unto man the sign of his future, and a guide through the darkness of the days of the Hiding. Let them see him, and know that they themselves are as he is, when they rise into the realms of the gods. Let no man deny another his place within this realm, for all are ready, and all shall come in their own time to their own place of honor within these hallowed halls of the gods. Let all take joy in the prospect before them, and let all rise as they chose to the tasks that await them.

“One life has he who is my herald, one life in three aspects, that cover the Tree of Life in its fullness, and go beyond into the stars of the Greater Night who is reflected in my daughter.

“Go now, o man who is a mage who is a god. Go, and return to your world and body. As the days progress you shall see that here I have spoken a truth, a truth that should be known of all men who hope to be greater than they are. Let them know that within themselves, though they perceive it not as yet, they also are of a threefold nature and one life, and shall be in their own way as you are in yours, new gods, created out of time and space to work their will within the universe. Go now, and be blessed. I shall call you in that day to come before me to the courts of the stars, and all shall honor you, and your men of earth, as they honor our child in her own achievement. Yea, honor shall come to all, within the Courts of the Stars.

The part of myself that was outside the astral body seemed to be locked onto the sun in some way, so I performed the sign of Hoorpokrati to reabsorb it. Yet a part still seemed to be within the aura of the Sun, and remained there as I willed the horse to turn, and pass through the abyss of Typhon into the worlds of the Tree of Life.

As we passed through the Abyss of Typhon, it receded into the distance again, leaving us suspended in light above the landscape from which we began our passage outwards. Laidrom was still in the air beside me, and directed me to land upon the peat fields. We did so, and I dismounted again. I noted that I was still in the god-form of Set, which seemed to have maintained itself without any attention on my part throughout this working. I needed a few moments to gather my wits again, so I examined the wand that I held.

It was a phoenix wand, as I had perceived earlier, but rather than being in the standard form of such wands in the Egyptian cults, it was a staff of ebony wood, with a phoenix rising in flames mounted on its top. The flames seemed to flicker and flow down the staff as I watched, covering my hand and arm with its power. After a few moments, the fires dispersed into the general glow of my aura, and I began to feel more normal again.

The ankh that I held in my other hand looked to be of some metal that was extremely hard, and had a blue sheen to it. The hardness reminded me of platinum in some way, and the blueness of refined uranium. Sparks flashed frequently through the glow that surrounded it, and also flashed up my arm and into my heart center. I got a sense of increased life in the heart as this occurred.

Now I turned to Laidrom, and asked him what was next to be done in this time. He said, "We are done, except for a small explanation of what has occurred."

He gestured, and an image of the temple that I constructed from the Tablet of Earth appeared before us.

"In the course of these visions, you have been generating the force to fully charge the parts of the temple within which the gods are said to reside. Your previous efforts, viewing the Kerubic squares of the tablet, had the effect of charging the pillars of the temple, which enclose between them the part of the temple given over to man. Thus in these two series have we completed the construction of the temple in truth, so that now you stand as the exemplar of the path which that temple describes, fully able to manifest all its levels and functions.

"The parts of the temple attributed to the sephiroth need not be invoked at this time, although I am certain that you will do so at some time in the future, simply for the sake of consistency and completeness. But in fact they have already been invoked in their essence in the invocation of the pillars. For note you, the lowest of the sephirotic squares of each angle, which sum up the powers of the sephirotic crosses, are placed in the temple exactly upon the intersection of each angle's kerubic squares, as they are grouped to form the pillars of the temple. Thus, the invocations of the pillars also served to manifest a sufficient amount of the sephirotic energies that a new set of invocations is not needed.

"The tour of the paths of the Seniors within the Earth Tablet is completed. Within this tour, we have given you knowledge of the course of yourself within the earth, and the course of man under the tutelage of the Knights of Will in the Earth, who are also known as the Knights of Set and the Mother. We have shown how man was forced to develop along lines not originally intended for him, and how the many tortures man has gone through have all had the purpose of raising him higher, to a greater kind of being than he would have been had not the earth conceived her plan of salvation for the solar system.

"We have also stressed the importance of knowing, of the intellect and higher mind in the development of man in these later days, and how that mind has caused the evolution of man to proceed at a pace that outstrips anything that has been within the cosmos, in its current cycle. Let men not abandon their minds, but use them fully. Let the forces that hope to hold them in the passions of the lower astral be done away with by their will. Let them abandon the falsehood of faith for the certainty of self-obtained gnosis, and let the limiters of Horus and Osiris be damned to the hells they have created to generate false fears within the hearts of men.

“Fear not, o men and women of Earth! Fear nothing! Ye are gods, and the gods do not force their will on their fellows. Fear not the forces that seek to oppress you within your incarnate existence, for their hold is only as long as the incarnate life, at the worst. And when ye are free of the body, ye shall know the evil they do is a transitory thing, with no lasting hold upon ye, save if ye believe their lies. Instead, fight them! Declare their falsehood before your fellow men, and offer man the truth of light in place of the dead darkness. They who do these things to you with a conscious will shall not survive the Earth's awakening, but shall be shattered into shards and shells, and discarded on the trash heap of existence, to rot and mold away from the realms of life. They who oppress you due to the delusions laid upon them by those men shall see their error, and beg forgiveness of those they have injured. Ye who know and seek of the light can not be permanently injured by them, so long as ye fight them. Death is not the end of existence, but its beginning.

“Fear not death! He is your final refuge from their power, should ye be set against in battle. Ye shall return therefrom to continue the fight, ever confounding they who hope to hold the world in stasis for their own benefit. They can not abolish you, for ye have the power of Set within you. No matter how many times they kill you, ye shall return in another form, ever confounding them with the new, driving them to the ultimate hells of their own creation when they realize that it is they who are lost, and not ye. Never surrender! Ever seek to do your will in the world, free from the shackles of the mass emotions they seek to control you with.

“Those who fight alongside ye are many more than ye might comprehend. Many are the forms the god-men take within the world, more by far in non-magickal modes than those who have their will to seek the direct experience in Light, through the means of magick. Deny not a man his place as your fellow-soldier, simply because his ways are not yours. In the freedom of Set's path, all can do their will without conflict. Let those who seek freedom simply for the honor of man in the world, or for the freedom to do business unhampered, or for many other reasons, be recognized as your brothers in spirit, doing a work that is parallel to your own, with its own place within the future community of man. Each area of life requires its own types of warriors to free it from the thrall of Osiris and Horus. Fight ye your own fight, and encourage them in fighting theirs, whether or not it fits with your own work.

“I, who have the power of Mars, the warrior, within the Earth, tell ye this. Ye have nothing to fear, save submission to the will of evil men. Be the gods that ye are, and ye shall triumph. Let it be so.

“Now, o man who is a mage who is a god, I have done with my part of this story, and all ye have left to do is to complete it by the invocation of the Sun-king of the Tablet, Iczihai, who is the summation and director of us all. Proud am I to have been the instrument of this message to men, and proud shall I be to fight with those who hear these words and take them to heart. Never shall I, or any of the Seniors of Earth, abandon man to the will of Osiris the Devil-god. Always shall we be there, to strengthen the hearts of those who seek freedom, and to aid them in the fight of spirit against the deeper darkness. This, ye men, I do swear before ye all, and may I be torn into pieces, and those pieces scattered beyond recovery, should I ever break this oath.”

(Scribe's note: The invocations of Iczhihal mentioned above were done, but the results were not satisfactory, and so are not detailed here. Apparently, the Yetziratic character of the Elemental King makes it difficult to manifest his force in the form that these visions of the Seniors have taken. The Seniors themselves are Briatic in nature, and manifest somewhat more easily.)

INTRODUCTION (for 2006 edition.)

The original dictionary was published in 1976 and I got my first copy from John Thorpe of Regency Press at 4.11 p.m. on the 13th of July that year. Though unknown to the people who were involved with the work, this was the time and date that Dr. John Dee was born in 1527 at the village of Mortlake on the Thames near London. The printers and binders had worked overtime and late the night before to get the work done that evening without any knowledge or significance of the date or that the next day was John Dee's birthday and they finished the dictionary.

It was delivered to Regency Press just before Madeline and I got to John's office because he had rung to say that it was waiting for us and he was just around the corner from the flat in Grape Street at the time. John said with good humour that the Enochia had driven the typesetters up the wall and they took it in rota because they had never done a book like it. I have always liked to think its timely appearance was because John Dee approved of the little work and I confess that I have always derived pleasure from the thought.

We did not anticipate great sales of the new dictionary because it was a very specialist subject and definitely not the stuff of best sellers. When discussing the original manuscript with Regency Press, Madeline told John that 'it wouldn't exactly set the Thames on fire but she thought it was important in its own right' and skimming through the manuscript, John agreed with this but he still printed it I am glad say. I am delighted that he was actively connected with the publication of the new edition for Neptune Press (1992) freely giving of his vast publishing experience and his time, friend that he is. This strengthened the strong feeling of continuity with the first edition.

The sales of the original dictionary were steady and better than I thought and within about two years, the entire edition was sold out. Circumstances beyond the control of all involved conspired against a second printing of the original publication and I thought that the book would slip quietly into oblivion and it is wonderful at times to be wrong. I lost track of the work, as writing and study took up much of my time and still does.

Of course, you never really forget your Ficus ad Mercurium, I was surprised to see it turning up now and then in second-hand booklists and even more surprised at the prices being asked for the book. It pleased me to find the work was still being used by people and groups who undertake Enochian studies and it almost seemed to have a life of its own with the benefit of hindsight.

The Atlantis Bookshop of Museum Street decided to use Dee's birthday again to reprint the second revised edition of the Enochian Dictionary, publishing the work under their Neptune Press imprint in 1992 and I was delighted with the decision of Karl and Carol to select Dee's birthday for the publication date. This complemented the publication date of the first edition and gave a strong sense of continuity to the second. For the present and third printing, I have revised and enlarged my contribution but the Enochian Dictionary of Dr. Dee and Edward Kelly is identical with the former editions as it must be.

The original work was prepared from the manuscripts of Dee in the British Museum and I freely admit that when the original diaries that recorded Dee's work was brought to me for the first time I sat for a considerable period of time just turning the pages and did little work for quite a long time. I really found it hard to believe that I was holding the original manuscript written in John Dee's hand and reading his annotated and personal comments on what was going on at Mortlake where it was written all those years ago. We really must never take the British Museum for granted or treat it lightly, likewise the work these people do on our behalf.

The work was carefully taken from the original record and although Dee did not have the protection of copyright in these early times as writers do today, his work from that day to this has not been altered or added to. The reason for this is very simple to explain, I gave John Dee my promise that I would respect his 'moral copyright' when I did work on the first edition of the dictionary and that is why nothing was changed for the second edition nor will be any subsequent editions. I tend to work very fast in the original draughts and of course for any mistakes found I accept full blame as always — who else should take them.

Nothing has been altered or added to Dee's work because I do not feel that I have the moral right or permission to do so; further his 'sources' for the work were unique and they were not mine. Over the years, I could have included 'additions from work done' and I think they may have been hidden like chaff among the wheat and if not mentioned, perhaps not discovered, but my personal feelings regarding the good doctor would never permit me to do this and this also includes those readers who trust me.

When Neptune Press closed, people contacted me to ask me if I had or knew where copies of the dictionary could be got hold of so, it has decided after ten years to reissue the dictionary once more. This has given me the opportunity of revising and correcting some errors that slipped in because of the speed needed to complete it by the required date or an earlier draft was used in the confusion as it was a busy time for all. To date I have never even seen a paperback copy of this issue though I have a hardback. This printing of the dictionary was rescanned for this work and a small number of errors corrected. This version (2002) has been extended further with new information regarding Dee and Kelly but not sufficient I feel to call it a new edition, more a 2002 edition as it contains both old and new now.

The biographical section dealing with the story of Dee and Kelly has taken most of the additional material. The other chapters have been revised regarding the use of the dictionary and other areas extended or enlarged in the hope that it has made the work easier to read with clearer explanations. The dictionary of course has not been changed in any way but the layout has been altered slightly with the objective of making it clearer to use. The additional material is there and it has been my intention to keep such additions low key and to insert and merge them so that they do not intrude too much.

It has long been my belief that Enochia extends into high and powerful realms and it is a totally different system from the more commonly known magical systems of occult philosophy used. I cannot stress sufficiently that the system should be treated with respect, and always to exercise the need to avoid the danger of misunderstanding or misusing words. Words, whether mundane or esoteric should be handled with great care and not regarded as a plaything. I am sure most seekers do not do this and I think through these responsible people the light is passed on and the desired continuity is accomplished with the finding of new workers in the vineyard.

Dee started to take an interest in 'natural magic' and he used this term to mean that such work 'stemmed from God and therefore was good, opposing black magic that was evil.' The quotations used are frequently taken from the diaries given in the facsimile copy of the work of Meric Casaubon D.D. — A True & Faithful Relation of What passed for many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee (A Mathematician of Great Fame in Q. ELIZ. and King James their Reigns) and Some Spirits — Printed in London, North Door of St. Pauls. 1659.

This was a fine facsimile edition of only one thousand copies from the Antonine Publishing Co. Ltd. however I believe other reprints are now available. Casaubon will be taken up later in the work. However, it is a strange twist of fate and irony that he used his work to attack John Dee and despite being a clever and well educated man without doubt, he basically ends up a footnote and permanently paired with the life of the man he is passing judgment on, as he did with Edward Kelly — I like it.

The Angel Ave told Dr. Dee. 'Now hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of the darknesse: and to fulfil his promise with thee, for the books of Enoch.' Of course, this line tells us how the system got its name of Enochia for it was obvious that these books had been particularly requested by Dee and that he was obviously well acquainted with these works, more so than average for the times.

Dee never doubted the contact he had made was with the angels and I have always been attentive to the words 'hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of the darknesse.' An important part of the work deals with the Four Watchtowers of the Earth and their angels, which stand as sentinel at the extremes of our universe and they lock out the Forces of Chaos and their mighty angel, the Angel Corozon, whose hordes are described as 'the stooping dragons.' Yes, we are back with dragons and serpents that never seem to be far from any work of this nature. The watchtowers are described to John Dee by the Angel Ave:

‘The 4 houses, are the 4 Angels of the Earth, which are the 4 Overseers, and Watch-towers, that the eternal God in his providence hath placed, against the usurping blasphemy, misuse, and stealth of the wicked and great enemy, the Devil. To the intent that being put out to the Earth, his envious will might be bridled, the determinations of God fulfilled, and creatures kept and preserved, within the compasse and measure of order.’

The above are wise words and they are important enough to bear repetition ‘the eternal God in his providence hath placed, against the usurping blasphemy, misuse . . . and creatures kept and preserved, within the compasse and measure of order.’

I wonder at times, regarding those who are practising Enochia now, how far some have tried to go and did some succeed even accidentally and not knowing they had done it, to lift the latch to peep through a crack in the door to look outside these gates? To raise the opposite or opposing force is amazingly easy, just say ‘do not’ and without hindrance you have ‘do,’ say ‘do not do this’ and in an instant you have ‘do this.’

Try saying that you are going on a diet, stop smoking, drink less or stop altogether, you will do more exercise and the whole world seems to conspire to confound your good intent and determined to thwart you. Equally, say do not attempt to unlock or open these gates because of what they are keeping out and the end is easy foretold.

What is more, I cannot believe that I am the only one to ask or contemplate such questions because it is clearly written and in words that cannot be misunderstood, they are plainly written for all to read.

If some have managed to open or loosen the bolts and open a ‘crack’ it could be enough, but while they were looking out, trying to satisfying their curiosity, what may have come in? Chaos needs only a hairline fracture for its purpose — to upset the ‘measure of order.’ Further, if all the locks, bars, bolts and defending Forces of the Watchtowers are on our side then this was intentionally planned to keep out what is on the other side and to protect what is on the inside from what is out there. This is clearly stated to John Dee in the above ‘ . . . and creatures kept and preserved, within the compasse and measure of order’ and not within the measure of disorder? Of course, my italics.

The angels told John Dee these hostile forces are under command of the Angel Coronzon and the name Coronzon is said to be the authentic heavenly name of Satan. The Angel Ave tells John Dee of the Four Watchtowers of the Earth in the entry for Wednesday, Junii 26, a Meridie. 1584 and what follows is part of the entry starting at the heading and repeating the above . . .

I expound the Vision

‘The 4 houses, are Angels of the Earth, which are the 4 Overseers, and the Watchtowers, that the eternal God in his providence hath placed, against usurping blasphemy, misuse, and stealth of the wicked and great enemy, the Devil. To the intent that being put out to the Earth, his envious will might be bridled, the determinations of god fulfilled, and his creatures kept and preserved, within the compasse of measure and order.

‘What Satan doth, they suffer; And what they wink at, he wrasteth: But when he thinketh himself most assured, then feeleth he the bit.

‘In each of these Houses, the Chief Watchman, is a mighty Prince, a mighty Angel of the Lord: which hath under him 5 Princes (these names I must use for your instruction. The seal and authorities of these Houses are confirmed in the beginning of the World.’)

The Four Watchtowers of the Four Elements of Air, Fire, Water and Earth are represented on our level, by alphabetical squares. Each of these towers has its King and his Elemental hierarchy within and these are given through the angels, Angelic Calls or Keys for communication with the thirty Aethyrs or Airts. The towers bring to mind the ever-present ‘foundations of the earth’ given in Job 38, which has been often pointed out many times in works of this nature especially by your writer, because they are so difficult to avoid or I find them hard to do so.

A reliable source that I trust told me (privately) that the respected founder of a long established and reputable Occult Society in England said that ‘you should never attempt to look the Angels of the Watchtowers directly in the face.’

Aleister Crowley is said to have invoked the Kings and Elements of the Four Watchtowers at Boleskine with dire results, dire because, it was held that he could not close them down properly, this was also said in an unconfirmed exchange but considering the source, I think it is possible. The painted representations of the Four Towers used for this attempt have to the best of my knowledge, never been found.

I feel John Dee acted with great restraint with what he had been given by the Enochian Angels and I personally feel that he would never act on his own with the material or try to use it without having been given necessary consent to do so and this was probably why he was chosen to do the work in the first place because he could be trusted. He made a meticulous ‘magical diary’ or record of his work, which is a perfect model and example of what a Magical Diary should be and all students of this type of Work should take careful note.

Keeping a ‘magical diary’ is stressed enough throughout any work I write because memory can be notoriously fickle when it suits it. Dee had contact with the great Archangel Gabriel, who told him that he ‘is speaking with authority of God’ and he tells the good doctor, concerning God’s words and intentions, God’s words are:

‘I have chosen you, to enter into my barns: And have commanded you to open the Corn, that the scattered may appear, and that which remaineth in the sheaf may stand. And have entered into the first, and so into the seventh. And have delivered unto you the Testimony of my spirit to come.

‘For, my Barn hath been long without Threshers. And I have kept my flayles for a long time hid in unknown places. Which flayle is the Doctrine that I deliver unto; you: Which is the Instrument of thrashing, wherewith you shall beat the sheafs, that the Corn which is scattered, and the rest may be all one.

‘If I be Master of the Barn, owner of the Corn, and deliverer of my flayle: If all be mine (And unto you, there is nothing: for you are hirelings, whose reward is in heaven.)

‘Then see, that you neither thresh, nor unbinde, untill I bid you, let it be sufficient unto you: that you know my house, that you know the labour I will put you to: That I favour you so much as to entertain the labourers within my Barn: For within it thresheth none without my consent.’

As written above, I do not believe that John Dee would attempt to use the material given without having permission to do so through the Enochian Angels and their Creator. In private notes written some time ago now, I wrote that it did not seem that such permission had been given to John Dee, as the above quotation clearly shows.

I believe it to be so plainly written that I cannot see how it could be misunderstood but I have set what I consider to be the important words in italics. ‘If I be Master of the Barn, owner of the Corn, and deliverer of my flayle . . . unto you, there is nothing for you are hirelings, whose reward is in heaven.’ Great affection is shown to Dee with ‘That I favour you so much as to entertain the labourers within my Barn’ and ‘for within it none thresheth without my consent.’ The italics are mine.

John Dee was a scrupulously genuine and honourable man, whose word once given would never be broken to such elevated and contacted Sources. Having accepted the duty it would be fulfilled to the last jot and tittle and this is in all probability why as already said, the angelic work was given to him in the first place. He could be trusted with it and not abuse it.

Instructions are clearly given in the work — with the Angel Mapsama insisting he must not use the ‘keys’ without permission even though they had been delivered to him and he should go not in rashly but to enter ‘by permission’ and be ‘brought in willingly.’ Again, the italics are mine.

Now we come to the question that all this is clearly leading up to. Has someone attempted what was expressly forbidden to Dr. John Dee and further, do I believe that it has done or attempted without the obligatory permission being given? I feel this could be so and again I do not believe that I am the only one to consider this possibility by any means. However, let me make one thing clear regarding the above statement and the important words are — ‘I feel and ‘I believe.’

I feel that one man could have attempted ‘to thresh’ and ‘unbinde the corn,’ with or without permission and this was Aleister Crowley, under his Aeon of Horus. Horus is the Greek name for the god Hor of Egypt, who is one of the most ancient and powerful gods of a very old and powerful nation. Usually Hor (Horus) is found in the form of the hawk or falcon. He is a solar deity and regarded as a personification of the living king as Osiris. I love this god’s protective form and brought a reproduction back from Egypt for this reason.

I think that few are equipped to deal with the Enochian material at this level but I would without doubt count Aleister Crowley among them. His work Liber XXX AERUM vel Sacculi sub figura CCC-CXVIII being on the Thirty Aethyrs, the Vision and the Voice in the Equinox Vol. 1, No 5 (1911) or reprinted in the book, the Vision and the Voice; Sangreal Foundation (1972) is available for all to read.

I feel there are other people experimenting and attempting in their own way similar exercises that may involve trying to undo the locks recklessly that likewise have not been invited to enter ‘the Barn’ by permission. It only needs the slightest gap opened in the Gates of the Watchtowers, unintentionally done or by chance that stand as locked sentinel against Chaos to let in what they were originally put there to keep out.

I repeat the advice of the Enochian Angel Mapsama that tells John Dee (in part) ‘ . . . But be humble. Enter not of presumption; but of permission. Go not in rashly; but be brought in willingly: for many have ascended, but few have entered.’ This is prudent advice to the wise and I have taken to heart for many years now from the first moment I read it and I recommend it to the reader for this is not something you do on a rainy afternoon because you have finished your library book or there is nothing on television. The latter part of this commentary brings to mind the biblical injunction ‘ . . . for many are called but few are chosen.’ Matthew 20:16 and 22:14.

Dee’s work now usually takes its place among the ‘apocalyptic’ literature and Crowley was of the opinion, in the Confessions of Aleister Crowley - Symonds/Grant that ‘much of their work (the Enochia and Enochian) still defies explanation.’ I believe even now that a good deal of it still defies explanation.

The revelations and keys of invocation are full of apocalyptic pronouncements that are easy enough to find, the destruction of the world by an angry God, the Antichrist and so forth. If you use the word ‘apocalyptic’ to many people, they usually say as I did once that it is a time of destruction, death, plague, famine and being at the receiving end of an angry and exceptionally wrathful God.

To a certain extent, this still holds true but these things are not all that the word meant originally, because the word apocalyptic also meant — ‘forecast and predict’ an ‘uncovering or disclosing, a revelation.’ This is why the final chapter of the Bible is termed apocalyptic and why it is called Revelations or the Revelation of John St. John the Divine.

John and his Revelations are the final act of a drama that started a long time ago with Genesis and included all the scenes and acts of the Old Testament, which has lasted quite a time. If that was not enough, I feel there appears to be a pause for the Apocrypha and then comes the second part of the drama that started to unfold with the New Testament that moved on with its acts and scenes bringing the final acts and scenes of Revelation or ‘uncovering or disclosing.’

This final act (for it could be final) has been going on for quite a long time now. Over some two-thousand years and it is still waiting for the final ‘curtain’ to come down and the drama or ‘play’ resolved one way or another. Of course, there may well be other ‘acts’ being written about which at this time we know very little or nothing. Any more than the folk of Genesis did when they were in the first act and looking forward to the future, however, we can also look backwards as well as forward, which should give us some advantage however slight it may seem.

I can buy a manual of Veterinarian Surgery, thoroughly read and to some extent have a reasonable understanding of it, but this does not qualify me to operate on animals or treat their serious ills. It takes more than that before I am to be let loose with my ‘newly acquired knowledge.’ Having the ‘words’ is a start, a good start sometimes but not necessarily enough.

Naturally, I am responsible for what is written here and no one else but I am not responsible for what the reader does with the information given or how they use it. The use of the work and any results from it are strictly the reader’s responsibility or between the reader and any source or Power that they are attempting to deal with. What you choose to do with information is your responsibility, wholly yours and no one else’s.

A writer to some extent often acts like a bridge for the reader to the past and past knowledge. Writers pass on information, they can guide, suggest and point to some of the ways as to how to use the material but as to how the material will eventually be used they have absolutely no control. All writers hope the information they pass on will be used responsibly, with respect and wisely.

To give an example, after the 1992 edition of the dictionary had been printed for a while, I attended a social book event where an amiable enough young man said he would like to have a word to me about Chaos Magic. He explained the principles and practises that he and his fellow-workers adhered to in the practise of it, although the name would appear to explain it all.

With great amusement, he told me the Group also made use of Enochia for the exclusive purpose of attempting 'to open the gates and barriers of the Four Watchtowers for the sole purpose of allowing Chaos into the world.' He said (at the time of the meeting) that they practised this ritual on a regular basis throughout the year and thought it was 'hilarious.'

This young man will be about ten years older now but I wonder if he is ten years wiser? We hope the work helps you in your studies regarding this particular area of Occult Philosophy and trust that it will be used wisely and be of benefit to the reader in their attempts to take control of their life. We trust it will help to guide the course of their life and its goals. If I did not believe this, there would be little point in either writing it or the study of it.

All words to some extent, great or small when correctly understood or used are Words of Power, some more so than others depending from whom or where they originated. Some have been the edicts of kings, presidents, rulers, tyrants, law-makers, law courts, church or state down to the simple words of power of parents and guardians regarding the young in their care, using the basic words of power of 'do' and 'do not' to let them know what is acceptable and what is not. Disobedience or disagreement with such words can often bring a penalty in one way or another — it is not new!

The occultist or ritual magician used words, symbols, ritual and all that these things involve. Often trying to make their words into 'words of power' as with the frequent edict to 'inflame yourself with prayer, so that they will be obeyed, listened to, complied with, accepted and sometimes rejected if the words are not acceptable by the Source contacted, we hope without penalty. It is hard to say if our individual 'words of power' will have any effect within the scheme of things in which we find ourselves placed or in what we are attempting.

One of the first things that you have to understand in your dealings is to give reliability and trust to the words you say and use, your promises, your word and all that this implies. Words should always be used with care and if you are someone who frequently breaks their word or does not obviously mean what they say, you will see how quickly your 'words' are distrusted and eventually disregarded because they have little value, no power and neither will you, so what are you going to build your Work on — sand or rock?

You must understand the power of the words you say, that your word is your bond and that they express your thoughts and beliefs. These are the things that give you integrity and principles and if you regard them without due consideration and of little consequence, then others will treat you in similar manner on whatever level you are trying to make contact. Why should you be trusted with the powerful keys of the Words of Power if you are shown to be slipshod with words overall. More so, if you prove in your everyday affairs that your word is not your bond. If you cannot deal with matters on a mundane level, how could you be trusted to deal with matters on the more important levels?

One thing is certain. It is impossible to protect people against the world they live in though quite a few today seem to think that responsibility for their lives should be the responsibility of everyone else and not them. Naturally, most people just get on with their lives, deal with what comes with many doing quite well and learning from the experience and evolving as individuals into 'sound vessels' that do not shatter under stress.

Like words many things in life can be for or against us, for example, knives cut food, maim and kill, protect and defend lives however, why not ban the use and sale of knives to prevent negative use. Matches burn, hot water scalds, cars kill on a regular basis and then there is electricity, gas, water, wind, rain, lightning, landslides, subsidence, flooding and all the rest that flesh is heir to. The list would be endless and would include most of the things we own, come into contact with or use in our lives and if we do decide to use them it is our responsibility and not that of others, to see that we use them with forethought and respect.

These thoughts are far better expressed as usual by Shakespeare as in the words he gives to Edmund in King Lear. 'This is the excellent foppery of the world that, when we are sick in fortune — often a surfeit of our own behaviour — we make guilty of our disasters the sun, the moon and the stars, as if we were villains of necessity, fools by heavenly compulsion. Knaves, thieves and treachers by spherical predominance, drunkards, liars and adulterers by enforced obedience of planetary influence and all that we are evil in by a divine thrusting on.' Act 1: Sc.2. Treachers= 'traitors, tricksters or to cheat.'

It is much the same with words. Many homes have a dictionary and even if we do not read them, we still use the contents of such books as a basis for all that we say, write or generally do. Words are used to make and express love, write literature, create peace, make war, tell lies, promulgate a truth, enslave or set free. We can use the words of a dictionary to create a benign philosophy or a zealous diatribe. A political tract or a religious creed, usually these have the purpose of influencing the minds of people.

Words are not always used for the good of the masses or the individual as past, present and no doubt future events will show for some time to come I think. The use of words and what you do with them depends upon who is using them and why. 'Bright is the ring of words, when the right man rings them.' Songs of Travel.

So to be safe and let us ban words, all words because in the wrong hands they can do more damage than all the guns, bombs and knives put together. In any tyranny, words and their dissemination are the first casualties and (like freedom) words are restricted and censored as always. You cannot shoot an idea or kill it. You can only replace it with a better idea because positive words quite often produce positive and cooperative results. Therefore, we are back to words and who uses them, how they use them and why. So how will an Enochian Dictionary be used? Wisely or foolishly, for good or ill, beneficially or malevolently, who can predict?

The word 'heretic' has been used almost exclusively by the Church for its own recriminatory purposes. Heretic, Latin, hæreticus= 'of, belonging or pertaining to heretical religious doctrine. (Tertullian).' It is better in the Greek, αἰρετικός, hairetikos= (1) able to choose and (2) heretical (New Testament). Old dictionaries explaining the former gave (1) figuratively. One who differs from others on a political, a scientific or with any question or opinion. In this sense, it is often used by the individual himself humorously. (1895). The religious use (2) hardly needs amplification.

The word heresy is a beautiful word, but centuries of 'grime' have obscured its broader worth that made it even more useful and this grime is hard to wash off to make the stone white again, but I wish they would give it back to the wider use it once held. Whenever we make choices that differ from the group, 'official' or current thought of the time and when someone is a 'heretic' they are upsetting the status quo by not obeying the rules and disagreeing with the majority. When I hear the word 'heretic' being bandied about, it usually prompts some favourite lines from a special poem (to me) oft quoted:

'And how am I to face the odds
Of man's bedevilment and God's?
I, a stranger and afraid
In a world I never made.'

Last Poems (1922) No. 12 A. E. Houseman.

All should have the right to a personal heresy and to own an opinion contrary to that of others or the accepted opinions demanded by others, with many not having the right to demand, because that is really all it means and obviously, I love the word. Such things often begin and end at frontiers or change with the centuries and what is acceptable in one country or century is a flogging offence in another. I hear and read daily from well-trained sources reasons why this sort of thing cannot be allowed — it is against the common good of the many but most of all, the keepers of the public conscience often self-appointed, disapprove — but no matter how it is presented — it is still a 'mailed fist' within the 'velvet glove.'

Authoritative philologists say it is impossible to invent a language, yet Enochia may prove to be an old one. Some contend that the language has its own grammar, syntax and so forth, while others think Enochia is older than Sanskrit. A few are of the opinion Enochia may have been the language used in the fabled but highly elusive Atlantis but this may prove to be fanciful thinking and guesswork until evidence proves otherwise.

However, the most widely held view is that Enochian was the language once spoken by Enoch and the Angels of God, therefore its name. Dee believed a worthy precedence for pursuing communication with the angels was the Bible itself. Dee writes that Enoch ‘enjoyed thy (= God’s) favour and conversation, with Moses thou was familiar, and with Abraham etc . . . and sundry others thy good angels were sent by thy disposition, to instruct them.’ There may be a possibility that this was what Dee was initially seeking — ‘thy good angels were sent by thy disposition, to instruct them’ — angelic instruction for surely this is what many seek.

Another theory is that Enochia is the ‘one language’ used on the Plain of Shinar. The land of Shinar included Babel, Erech and Accad, which were all cities or capitals within the kingdom of the Mesopotamian hero, Nimrod. Shinar was the symbolic centre of wickedness and celebrated for its luxury. Often too much is made of the phrase referring to the height of ‘the tower whose top may reach heaven’ — perhaps a somewhat hyperbolic phrase. Like that of Moses who describes the cities of Canaan as ‘walled up to heaven.’ Deuteronomy: 28. In other words — they were building the tower high, but not necessarily ‘up to heaven.’

Historical accounts usually link Assyria and Babylon and when the Jews were exiled to Babylon by Nebuchadnezzar after the destruction of the First Temple. We read ‘By the rivers of Babylon, there we sat down, yea and wept . . . we hanged our harps upon the willows in the midst thereof’ and by the rivers of which many refused to sing ‘the Lord’s song in a strange land.’ Psalms 137 — the sanctity of the power of words was being protected for the time and place were not right then. However, eventually Babylon became next to Palestine a great centre of Jewish life in the world, producing the Babylonian Talmud, which became more authoritative than the Palestinian Talmud.

These two powerful empires had two mighty cities. Ninevah, the capital of Assyria rose proudly on the banks of the river Tigris, while Babylon reflected itself in the waters of the Euphrates. Between these two cities were tracts of land commonly known as Mesopotamia, which comes from the Greek Μεσοποταμιος, mesopotamios = ‘between two rivers’ and Μεσοποταμία, Mesopotamia = ‘a land between two rivers, especially that between the Tigris and Euphrates — Mesopotamia. It is thought the Hebrews may connect Babel with bala = ‘to mix up, to confuse.’ The confusion of the language is considered a punishment for idolatry and man’s arrogance.

It is written in Genesis ‘and the whole earth was of one language and one speech’ and the Lord confounded their speech so they ‘may not understand one another.’ Because the Lord said ‘Behold the people is one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do: and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do,’ and he ‘scattered them abroad upon the face of all the earth.’

Was too much power gathered in one place that it was becoming a threat to the divine order? What was the ‘one language or one speech’ and why was it so powerful? The previous chapter to this in Genesis intimates the tribes were already breaking up or ready to do so. ‘By these were the isles of the Gentiles divided in their lands; every one after his own tongue, after their families, in their nations.’ Genesis 10: 5. Genesis. 10: 25 tells us this scattering is associated with the name of Peleg, which signifies ‘division.’ We read, ‘And unto Eber were born two sons: the name of one was Peleg; for in his days was the earth divided.’

Peleg — division or watercourse — son of Eber, so named because ‘in his days was the earth divided.’ Genesis 10: 25. It cannot with any degree of certainty be determined what event was being observed in this sentence and the matter is still being debated. It seems the event was previous to the dispersion at the Tower of Babel (11: 8) and it may have been the more general dispersion of the descendants of Noah referred to in Genesis 10: 5 and 32 and Deuteronomy 32: 8. Some think it may have been the division of the land by water channels as the term is use in Job: ‘Who hath divided the watercourse for the overflowing waters.’ (38: 25) and elsewhere.

The Scriptures tell us the expressed object of the Tower of Babel was to prevent a dispersion. ‘Go to, and let us build a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth.’ Was this Tower in direct opposition to the edict of God given to Noah and his family after the Flood? To go forth ‘be fruitful, multiply and replenish the earth.’ Genesis 9:1. It could appear that trying to keep the tribes from separating may have been regarded as a sin by Divine Providence. Just as trying to keep the one language was punished by God and the tower was laid low, the ‘Lightning Struck Tower’ perhaps?

The Descent of Power through the passage of the Lightning Flash through the Kingdoms of Cabbala is extremely rapid; whereas the Ascent of the Paths to power is slow, sometimes painfully slow, as anyone studying Cabbala well knows

Today we are told it is particularly desirable to bring ‘the family of man’ together as one family and to create one great nation again. We are told there is the need for people to agree in some countries of the globe at least in Europe, one currency and perhaps even one language eventually. One set of laws for all that should be given from one central point of power, the point from which all and everyone will be controlled or governed according to your view, just as it was planned for the Tower of Babel — in other words no diversity and without doubt — no heresies will be approved.

However, these are probably unresolved reflections on the subject and we must return to our main concern, the language of Enochia. What was the ‘one language’ spoken by all and how was it taken away, creating total confusion of the language at a stroke? Was it because it was the language of the angels and men therefore God withdrew the language?

I have always felt a deeper mystery lies under the surface imagery of his tale, which needs unravelling. It was Enoch — the Initiated or Learned — who lived ‘a year of years,’ 365 years, who ‘walked with god’ and spoke with the tongues of men and Angels. Enoch, the eldest son of Cain and seventh from Adam, conversed with the Archangel Uriel, a Throne Angel of God that was his teacher.

The ancient Jews and Arabians believed Enoch to have been the inventor of writing, arithmetic and astronomy — the latter being perhaps suggested by the coincidence between the number of years of his life to that of the days of the year. It was the teacher of Enoch, the Archangel Uriel that John Dee was always trying to contact in his experiments and it was this mighty angel who gave John Dee the shrewstone for his skrying.

There is no evidence that we know of that proves Enochia as a language was spoken on earth, so the pronunciation is open to conjecture and in truth its pronunciation does not have a cast-iron system, there are only suggestions to assist the seeker though these can give some measure of resolution and help.

There are now I believe early recordings of Aleister Crowley speaking the ‘keys’ that have been transferred to compact discs for the curious and in the absence of proof regarding Enochian pronunciation, the choice of acceptance or rejection must be the readers. The vexed question of the pronunciation will be discussed later.

Was the language of the angels also the tongue of men on earth and was Enochian the first world language when all on earth spoke one language? It is a pleasant thought but is it true? Enochia abounds with speculation and like all good mysteries — it poses more questions than answers. Is Enochia the Language of Creation itself containing the Words of Power that set it all in motion? Again, this may be no more than fanciful guesswork; John Dee may have thought that it was and had he completed the Angelic Work, things may have been resolved for us one way or the other, who knows.

We have already mentioned that two special trees, among many others, grew in the Garden of Eden and they were singled out as being different from the others growing there. One tree of the two could be freely used and the fruit eaten, but the other tree could not. These trees were the Tree of Life and the Tree of the Knowledge of Good and Evil. The fruit of the Tree of Life could be eaten freely as could the fruit of all the other trees in the garden. However, to eat the fruit of the Tree of Knowledge was forbidden on pain of death. Eating this fruit appears to give choice or heresy (my word) to those who ate it. The knowledge of good and evil creating duality and with it the ability or necessity of making decisions.

Is knowledge the ‘serpent’ that expels you from Paradise? Is obedience without question the price to pay for being permitted to remain there? I can see many who would pay the price for such a ‘pearl’ or buy the ‘a perfectly black hen without haggling.’ However, I think the heretic of later times may consider the price too great to pay and leave the Garden to go and live in the Land of Exile perhaps in later times, they may even be found quoting Meister Eckhart — ‘God cannot know himself without me’ — either in truth or arrogance — choice once more.

It was the great Hermes who said that ‘God distinguished man from all other creatures by giving him the unique privilege of intelligence and science through which he could attain immortality.’ Obtaining the fruit of heresy, hæreticus or hairetikos may well grant freedom of choice or so go my thoughts.

The Bible does say ‘And the Lord God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know the good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever. Therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the Garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken.’ Genesis 3:22-24. Is Enochia (one of) the ‘forbidden fruits’ of the Tree of Knowledge? However, the fruit of the Tree of Life was one he could eat but perhaps not in combination with the Tree of Knowledge.

I would like to thank Andy Bull who set up my website for me, maintained and operated it, willingly doing whatever he thought would be helpful – it was!

BIOGRAPHICAL NOTES of DR JOHN DEE and SIR EDWARD KELLY.

In the lives of John Dee and his associate Edward Kelly, it is sometimes difficult to separate truth from fiction. John Dee's life is well documented but when we come to Edward Kelly so much is still a mystery. The notes in this chapter are to help those who are unfamiliar with Dee and Kelly to possess the more important facts of their lives and times. It is a strange story at times but it is always a fascinating one.

Even today, John Dee can still be represented as little more than a dabbler in black magic. A mountebank, an old fool who was completely under the sway of a thoroughly dishonest Kelly who was no more than an out and out impostor, which Dee could not see through, even though everyone else could. Some criticize Dee and write that he was 'the most deluded of men' while others brand him 'a vain and extravagant enthusiast.'

In this, they are basing their opinions on only one aspect of John Dee's remarkable life and denying his remarkable and outstanding achievements in so many other fields. Even his most obdurate critics must admit if they have any charity, in Elizabethan England Dr. John Dee was one of its most learned men. A man to whom the word genius could be applied without any hesitation, unlike today where the word has almost lost its meaning.

He was a respected authority on optics, navigation, astronomy, astrology, mathematics, cartography, geography and the fine arts (e.g. music, art, literature, architecture etc.) Dee petitioned the Crown to preserve the ancient unpublished records of England's past by creating a National Library that should be under royal auspices. He made his plea and supplication on the 15th of January 1556 to Queen Mary for 'the recovery and preservation of Ancient Writers and Monuments . . . and that of others . . . so that they might be saved' and in this Dee was anticipating the British Museum Library, where some of his manuscripts now rest, by many years.

The petition was rejected by the Queen with the result that a good deal of the valuable heritage of the nation was irretrievably lost I am sure. He knew most of the famous men of his time not only as lifelong friends but working with them in science, mathematics and many other learned matters. Discussion with him was regularly requested with his judgment and opinion sought in many areas of knowledge.

Dee experimented with supernatural powers and theurgy. Latin theurgia from the Greek Θεουργία, theurgia = 'divine work', magic from Θεός, theos = 'god' and εργον, ergon = 'work.' 1: 'Divine agency or direct interference of the gods in human affairs or the government of the world.' 2: 'The act or art of invoking deities or spirits or by the intervention conjuring up visions, interpreting dreams, receiving or explaining oracles etc; the power of obtaining from the gods, by means of certain observances, words, symbols or the like, a knowledge of the secret which surpasses the power of reason, to lay open the future etc.' 3: 'That species of magic which more modern professors of the art allege to produce its effects by supernatural agency, as contradistinguished from natural magic.'

'Porphyry and some others did distinguish these two sorts so as to condemn indeed the grosser, which they called magick or *goety; but allowed the other, which they termed theurgy, as laudable and honourable and as an art by which they received angels and had communications with the gods. Yet St. Austin assures us that are both damnable' Halliwell: Melanpronea (1895)

Dee also practised μανθάνω or manthano. In the Greek μαθesis, mathesis and μαθεῖν, mathein of μανθάνω, manthano = 'to learn especially by inquiry, understand, learning or science generally, especially mathematical science and mathematical magic.' Dee loved and esteemed mathematics above all things and today we may have some difficulty in understanding or accepting that anyone who undertook the study of mathematics was suspected of studying the Black Arts in those earlier times.

To the mind of the ordinary populace, mathematics was a dubious study and highly dangerous as were those who studied it. Dee possessed an enquiring mind, a man of great talent, possessing a truly awesome intelligence and he was stimulated by a rare intellectual activity not given to many.

If something required understanding or explaining, the good Doctor Dee would undertake it because he found interest in almost anything that advanced, sustained or explained the human condition. To John Dee, everything was a form of science and as such, it was worth exploring and understanding. Few libraries could compete with Dee's library of books and manuscripts. Many considered it the finest in England, perhaps one or two on the Continent could match it, but few in England could do so and the English Universities could not rival it and that did not please them.

Always bear in mind that it was the largest library in Elizabethan England and although it was in private ownership, Dee was generous with the help that it gave to those who were worthy and capable of being helped. The range of subjects found on his bookshelves was truly extraordinary for the times and as a private library, it would take some ignoring even today with our resources. Records show that Dee did lend books out to certain people and the surety for their safety and return seemed to be a strong oath setting out the conditions and the acceptance of them before witnesses.

Dee estimated his library had cost him some two thousand pounds and it had taken forty years of collecting 'from divers places beyond the seas, and with much research and labour in England.' Dee's library contained upwards of three or four thousand volumes, consisting of bound and unbound works. He writes that four of his written books, one in Greek, two in French and one in High Dutch cost him five hundred and thirty-three pounds.

This amount was an enormous sum in his day and goodness only knows what the cost would be today, I hesitate to suggest what the cost of the entire library would be by today's reckoning but we would undoubtedly be looking at several million pounds. This is because so many of the works were originals and not copies, though Dee would frequently copy books by hand.

By general consensus, the library did not appear to be particularly well planned or designed as a library usually is, even the simplest. Books were often found prearranged by language or subject matter. Their grouping were sometimes in language or subject such as ‘Chaldaic, German, Hebrew, Italian, Syriac and English books.’ Neither were the books of uniform size or binding as in many libraries and a great many did not have any binding at all.

There was little or no help finding the books because there was little help with marks or labels on the shelves or piles to show what was there as with other libraries. The ‘index’ for the library appears to be John Dee himself and as others have frequently noted, his memory must have been both remarkable and phenomenal. Today we can consult the works that list his library in full and marvel at what we read from the gathered records.

As said, Dee’s library was available to English scholars or others who needed it because it was universal in its scope and covered ‘three of four rooms’ with a further three rooms added to the house as working laboratories, so it was not only for books. Antiquarians, astronomers, astrologers, architects, artists, mathematicians, scientists, theologians, physicians, could all consult the library and find works pertaining to their interest or subject.

As said, the index to this wealth of knowledge was Dee as there was no written index available to assist people in their search. This is probably the way that he preferred to do things because he could give help and guidance on the matter and know what was being consulted.

Seekers of knowledge did not have to go to the Continent or University libraries. Dee had many works, which were pre-Reformation and some of these works were very hard to find. Not only were there books about a subject but books written against the subject — all sides of the argument were presented which would lead to a broader and better understanding of the subject under study and all accessible to the enquiring minds of the day.

Even more important than anything else offered, John Dee was accessible and available to the enquiring minds of the day. We will come back to the library later.

There were his rare and exquisitely made ‘instruments mathematical.’ There were astrolabes, globes, navigational and optical instruments, quadrants etc and Dee invented various navigational instruments. One was a device he called a Paradoxical Compass, which he claimed could correct chart errors. Mariners, however, distrusted this innovation though more likely, they could not understand the complex principle of its operation so it was rarely used and fell into disuse. To display the range of his collection of instruments I can do no better than cite Thomas Smith’s Vita Joannis. (1707).

‘To the noble furniture of the library, there appertained a not moderate accumulation of Mathematical Instruments and Machines: also those, which by his own ingenuity amended and reformed he brought into better condition.

Among which that I may omit the rest, was a quadrant and staff, the semidiameter of it being five feet, but of this, ten, accurately marked with divisions of the globe of Mercator, amended and improved by the help of new observations, by means of which he had inserted the places and motions of the Comets, which appeared at their proper time. The octave, the ninth and tenth of the spheres, according to the hypothesis of the theory of Purbachius, ornamented with a horizon and brass meridian; mariner's compasses of various kinds and fabricated to find the variation; and lastly, a clock, which, in that age, was held almost a miracle, adapted to measure the second minutes of the hour — many sea compasses, a loadstone of great virtue . . . and so forth.'

Of the clock, mentioned at the end of the above list John Dee wrote that it was an excellent watch-clock made by Dibbley who was 'a notable workman, long since dead.' This was a remarkable instrument for the time as it 'sensibly measured in seconds of an hour, that is, not to fail the 360th part of an hour.' This last division of time we take so much for granted now, including split second timing for sporting events but in the time of Dee, it was really quite exceptional.

He was a friend of Abraham Otellius who was, next to Mercator, the greatest cartographer of his age. Otellius was born the same year as Dee (1527). Dee was also a friend of Gerardus Mercator (1512-1594), who is perhaps the greatest cartographer of all time. As well as his famous projection, Mercator did excellent work (with Ortelius) in helping to free the geography of the 16th century from the tyranny of Ptolemy, his maps and instrument work was significant for its delicate precision and admirable execution.

Dee counted many other Dutch scholars among his friends, all these relationships lasted throughout his long life, this must speak volumes regarding Dee's character, his unique knowledge and generosity in sharing what he knew with others. Dee was regarded as a major influence in the expansion of England's exploration overseas and her empire, because England, her life and the protection of his country being was very close to John Dee's heart.

There was Dee's large store of documents regarding the Irish and Welsh estates, the ancient seals and arms and these were frequently consulted by Queen Elizabeth I. His house was in effect a private University that even Oxford and Cambridge would not rival for many years to come.

We read his library contained the works of Roger Bacon with some commentators writing that Bacon's works were very prominent in the library. Now, if John Dee thought a writer was important then he was, so let us take a brief look at Roger Bacon, the better to see why Dee's admiration was so great.

Roger Bacon (c.1214-1294) was both a remarkable and an important man. He was an English philosopher and scientist called by his contemporaries — Dr Mirabilis — from the Latin mirabilis = 'marvellous, extraordinary, strange and admirable' thus he was called the 'Admirable Doctor Bacon.’ Bacon is chiefly remembered in popular thought for the creation of his famous ‘brazen head’ because with his companion Friar Bungay, Bacon wanted to encircle England with a wall of brass to defend her against her enemies.

They made a head of brass but they had to make it speak and hear it speak to know if their project would succeed or fail, if they did not hear the head speak then their labours would be completely in vain.

Bacon set his servant Miles to watch the head and wake his master if it spoke. The head did speak three times but Miles did not wake Bacon because the speech was very brief and he did not think it was important. First, it said ‘Time is!’ Half an hour later, it said ‘Time was.’ The brazen head gave its final utterance half an hour later saying ‘Time’s past’ and shattered into a thousand pieces so their long labour was beyond doubt in vain and wasted.

This is much as it had been for Albertus Magnus, who had worked for thirty years on a man (or head) of brass but his was destroyed by Thomas Aquinas. Byron refers to the legend in Don Juan as others do in literature.

Bacon urged that Christian studies be expanded and enhanced by including the sciences. He placed great emphasis on the importance of mathematical studies and the experimental sciences because these disciplines were practically ignored in the learning of the day. Like other brave souls, Bacon was more than a little prone to exposing the ignorance and vices of the clergy. The clergy certainly did not let his impudence pass without reprisal and like others before him, he paid the price as a result — as usual for the times.

Bacon can lay some claim to being the father of the experimental sciences as he laid down some of its principles, which I paraphrase. ‘There are two modes of knowing, by argument and experimentation argument winds up a question . . . but does not lead us to feel certain of the truth . . . unless the truth be proven and confirmed by experience . . . without experience nothing can be sufficiently known.’

This alone would have been enough to attract John Dee to him and his teachings, but add to this Bacon’s interest in astrology, chemistry, optics with all the other interests and we can predict this with comparative ease. He is credited with having foreseen the practical possibilities of the telescope, the use of lenses to correct faulty vision, gunpowder, mechanical navigation, flight, alchemy and much more. Bacon declared all human knowledge depended on mathematics and its noblest branch was astrology.

Like Rabbi Maimonides, Bacon believed that Holy Writ is the basic source of astrology and because of this, the study of astrology was a legitimate one to follow so naturally, the Church did not agree. Bacon believed in the power of the spoken word because it had great force and further ‘all miracles at the beginning of the world were made by the word.’

The above paragraph demonstrates that my paragraph in the Introduction referring to the proper use of ‘words’ is not a new concept by any means having as it does, a long and honourable history. How could this man fail to attract the fertile mind and imagination of John Dee?

Because of his advanced thinking on the possibilities of the experimental sciences, he was made to suffer for it. Popular imagination credited him with magical attainments and conjurations whether proven or not because they did not understand it or him. It goes without saying that Bacon was suspected of being in league with Satan from whom naturally his attainments and gifts came. It has always been a source of perplexity to me why the church always thought such gifts could only come from Satan or the Devil — but why could it not have equally come from God.

It would appear Satan's greatest sin for which he is to be castigated is that he gives people knowledge and is thus feared by the church and those in authority. 'Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall set you free.' John 8: 32 or was the Tower of Babel repeating itself. With too much knowledge, people may become uncontrolled and unrestrained in what they could do and start to think for themselves.

Francis Bacon joined the Franciscan Order sometime during 1250 and the Order swiftly declared his works as heretical and during 1278 Bacon was imprisoned for heresy. When he was released, Bacon published his Compendium Studii Theologiae in 1292 dying in 1294. If we transpose much of the above to the year's 1527-1608 and change the name of the central character to John Dee, a great deal of Bacon's history would be found to be repeating itself, at times almost along parallel lines.

John Dee remains one of the most perplexing and complex characters in our history yet liking paradox the way I do I feel he was probably a very simple man at heart.

In the time of Dee, astronomy and astrology had not yet parted company, gone their separate ways and become the warring factions that they are now. Like Dee, Tycho Brahe and Kepler studied both astronomy and astrology, casting horoscopes and erecting astrological charts in the normal course of their work and studies. History has been kinder to these men and using astrology has not detracted from their standing or cast doubts on their sanity or skills as it did with Dee.

It is known that Brahe sent a copy of his latest book to the 'most noble and illustrious Dee' requesting his opinion of the work. This was obviously a measure of the value, respect and trust that the great Danish astronomer held of Dee's immense erudition and opinions.

Erecting astrological charts was a standard and acceptable procedure for the time and Dee was consulted regarding his astrological choice of the 'most propitious date for the queen's coronation' in 1588, while his astronomical advice was being sought in other matters. In 1583, John Dee undertook the task of reforming the Julian calendar for Britain.

The Queen greatly admired his work on the project and she approved a draft proclamation that would have executed the recommendations and reforms that Dee suggested. However, the improvements were never carried out because the bishops objected for religious reasons.

Chemistry and alchemy were still reasonably amicable bedfellows. Astrological and magical talismans, amulets and charms were part and parcel of the arts of the practitioners of medicine. John Dee had the mind of a scientist and the heart of a mystic, nor would he have seen any dichotomy in this, as later commentators seem to have done.

Many people have wondered why he was ‘Doctor’ John Dee. Several suggestions have been put forward for this designation with the title of ‘doctor’ being thought of more as being a complimentary title by some, while to others the title is purely honorary, as with doctus from doceo= ‘to teach, instruct, inform, show, tell etc. while others think he was given a degree at Louvain Dee was skilled in medicine and he may have been a doctor of medicine, the honour having come from Prague University in 1585-6.

He tried to gain the position of Master of St. Cross’s Hospital, which Elizabeth had promised him but it was not given to him (see later) so did he seek this post because he had the necessary medical qualifications? The only problem with this theory is that Dee was called ‘doctor’ before these dates, in particular by Foxe in his work Acts and Monuments so was it a complimentary title or one to which later he qualified?

Dee himself, in the Compendious Rehearsal, writes that while in Louvain he had ‘for recreation studied the method of civile law’ and had received a testimony in verification of his expertise in legal matters and whether this conferred the title of doctor on him, I do not know.

Thomas Smith, in his Life of John Dee, An English Mathematician (1908) writes that ‘John Dee first drew the breath of life at London on the 13th day of the month of July, at four o’clock and 11 minutes p.m. in the year of the eternal incarnated Word 1527’ though sometimes a writer will give the time as 4.40 a.m.

I have always used the afternoon time because I feel this chart to be right according to the circumstances of his life, which we are aware of with the benefit of hindsight. John Dee was born on a Saturday so at least one strand of his life appears to have been preordained and fulfilled throughout his life — the rhyme that tells us that ‘Saturday’s child works hard for a living.’

I have given the birth chart of John Dee and the birth chart of Edward Kelly for those astrologically minded readers so that they can make up their own mind regarding the matter in hand. The wheels of their charts fit so closely, as can be seen the same Signs of the Zodiac are in the same position in both charts so that they could almost overlay one another filling in the empty houses in both men’s charts and there are other interesting points of syntax in astrology to be found.

These natal charts are found at the back of the book with the natal chart for John Dee according to Thomas Smith at the top and the natal chart for Edward Kelly according to Anthony Wood, at the bottom. Again, in a light-hearted vein, Kelly was Thursday's child, which meant according to the rhyme that Kelly has 'far to go.' Kelly did 'travel far' and he always seemed to be 'on the go,' he was out of the country and far from home with Dee, staying there and eventually dying there while attempting to escape from prison. Even when in England he was without doubt going far, often with someone chasing after him or seeking him for one thing or another until he settled down with Dee at Mortlake.

The other thing that should be noted with these charts is that the outer-Saturnian planets have been set in place because we use them today in modern astrology. In the time of John Dee, even though they existed of course, only the Seven Planets of the Ancients would have been used for astrological work and these were the Sun, Moon, Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn. The three extra planets are easily ignored if you wish but they do add extra information to the native of the chart — even explaining one or two things with the benefit of hindsight.

John Dee lived in a house belonging to his mother to which he added other rooms for his laboratories, his instrument collection and his vast library of books. There were some 'four or five rooms in the house filled with books,' he makes reference to his 'chiefe and open library' and his diaries mention students lodging with him. A survey of 1616, after Dee's death, describes the house as 'ancient' and saying that it was 'a rambling place standing between the church and the river.'

Smith writes Dee's father was Roland Dee, a mercer employed at the court of King Henry VIII, though some works say he was a vintner by calling, his mother was Johanna Wild. Roland was comfortably off so he was able to give his son an excellent education. Dee's father was 'an honourable man and coming of a family sufficiently genteel. Whose care, according to the affection implanted by nature, toward his own son, as well as his being a boy of great hope and good disposition, Roland was chiefly bestowed in informing his mind with Greek and Latin literature.

The curriculum of the studies in which boys are accustomed to be taught, being happily passed, partly in London, partly in Chelmsford in the county of Essex, he was entered by his most loving father in the 16th year of his age, at Cambridge, in the College dedicated to the memory of St. John the Evangelist, to be taught the higher Sciences, at the end of the year 1542.'

The family claim descent from a noble Welsh house, the family of Dee of Nant y Groes and Dee confirmed through research into his pedigree that among his ancestral line he counted Roderick the Great, the Prince of all Wales. His research into his lineage also showed a distant relationship with Elizabeth herself and she did seem to hold him in great affection. Queen Elizabeth appeared to regard him more as a kinsman and not as a servant or subject of the crown.

Dee's studies were undertaken in London and Chelmsford Grammar School where his father sent him until he entered Cambridge in his sixteenth year, Dee entered Cambridge at St John's in November, 1542 where he almost devoured books and knowledge but he explains this best on his own behalf. While he was at Cambridge without doubt he made some rather influential friends such as William Cecil, later Lord Burghley treasurer to Queen Elizabeth and William Grindal later to be Archbishop of Canterbury among many others.

He writes — 'In the years 1543,1544,1545, I was so vehemently bent to studie that for those years I did inviolably keepe this order; only to sleep four houres every night; to allow to meate and drink (and some refreshing after) two houres every day; and of the other eighteen houres all (except the tyme of going to and being at divine service) was spent in my studies and learning.' Compendious Rehearsal.

I have used the short title of the Compendious Rehearsal mentioned above, which is an account of Dee's life and written for Queen Elizabeth though perhaps wisely it omits the magic, astrology, the Enochian Work and the time spent abroad with Kelly with their families.

Although he may have cleaned it up a little to prove his claims, I believe as most do that we can take most of it as read. Elizabeth was far too shrewd and familiar with Dee's life for him to attempt to fool her with details that did not fit the facts, particularly where money was concerned. Dee compiled the Compendious Rehearsal in 1592, near the end of his life, to account for expenses he felt the Crown owed him on his return from the Continent.

Its somewhat fuller title started 'The Compendious Rehearsal of John Dee his Dutifull Declaracion and Proof of the Course and Race of his Studious Lyfe . . . et cetera' and it ran to some forty pages or more of printed text because it chronologically detailed some fifty years of a very interesting life of service to the Crown and the quest of knowledge. There is little doubt that the Elizabethans liked long titles as so many other works attest.

It was presented to two members of the Queen's Privy Council who were enquiring on behalf of the Queen into his claims for financial reimbursement. We explain the work here because so many writers refer to it as I do, thank goodness for it because there is enough found within its pages for the lives of fifty men — yet remarkably, it refers to only one man and those associated with him.

Dee's exceptional abilities were recognized and rewarded by his being made an Under-Reader in Greek at the newly founded Trinity College. In 1548, he attained his Master of Arts degree and left Cambridge to further his studies on the Continent. While he was at Trinity College, he created a lifelike stage effect for the play Pax by Aristophanes, which was much too realistic for the times.

It was 'a flying scarab that mounted up to the top of Trinity-hall in Cambridge.' It 'flew to Jupiter's pallace, with a man and his basket of victualls on his back; where at was great wondering, and many vaine reportes spread abroad of the meanes how that was effected.’ Compendious Rehearsal.

It is reasonably certain that Dee was attempting to imitate the theatrical effects of classical times. He had an absolute passion for anything mechanical and this may have been the first time such a spectacular mechanical display was seen on an English stage. Of course, the ‘flight of the scarab’ was created by ‘supernatural means and sorcery’ and not by ‘the clever and considerable mechanical skills or the use of pulleys of its inventor’ after all John Dee had not acquired such skills in the course his studies at Cambridge, so he must have had ‘some help.’ Dee wrote that it was all ‘Naturally, Mathematically, and Mechanically, wrought and contrived.’

The reports of this unusual magical display spread like suspicion borne on the winds of rumour and it may have sown the first doubts regarding his presumed dealings with sorcery in the popular mind. In 1571 in the preface of his English Euclid, he complains that he is jeered by the populace as ‘a companion of the hellhounds, a caller and a conjurer of wicked and damnable spirits.’

In 1548 after receiving his B.A, John Dee left Cambridge and went abroad to Louvain because it is suggested that he thought the teachers there possessed greater skills, especially in the field of his beloved mathematics. Dee said his purpose was ‘to speake and confer with learned men, and chiefly mathematicians.’

Dee studied navigation with Rainier Gemma Frisius, Abraham Ortelius regarded as one of the most prominent cartographers of the time and once cosmographer to Charles V. It was during his visit that he made both the acquaintance and lasting friendship of the greatest cartographer of them all — Gerard Mercator.

When Dee fell ill late in the 1550’s Ortelius, who was a few months older than Dee, keep up a constant correspondence with him throughout and when he came to England in 1577, he called to see him. As others have commented it was obvious that these men had an influence on John Dee that was far-reaching and went beyond the classroom and it continued long past the time that he spent with them shown by the lengthy correspondence he had with Gerard Mercator to whom he referred to as ‘the honest Philosopher and Mathematicien, Gerardus Mercator.’ 1577.

Dee returned to Cambridge with navigation instruments newly invented by Frisius, the like of which this country had never seen and he brought two globes of Mercator back with him to Trinity College because like Mercator he was an authority on navigation. Dee was well aware that as an island and a seafaring nation, England depended on accurate navigation above all things to function beneficially in the affairs of the world. The work that John Dee undertook on behalf of large companies, their ships and captains were extensive and Dee himself invested in many of their ventures, but this is beyond the scope of the chapter and it is well written about.

Dee went to study at Louvain in Belgium and on July 20th, 1550, he arrived in Paris and a few days later he was prevailed upon to give lectures on Euclid at the University of Paris, which caused a sensation, he said it was given to a rapt and overflowing audience. Scholars from many countries came to discuss science and philosophy with him for Dee was already well respected on the Continent. Dee was deservedly proud of this and not without justification, because it was all happening at the ripe old age of 23 years.

Many think it was due largely to Dee's efforts that mathematical disciplines were restored in England. It was during this period (1550) that Dee wrote a work Mercurius coelestis in some twenty-four books, but we only know it by its title as it was never published and it is now lost. Mercurius= 'Mercury, Messenger of the Gods' and coelestis= 'pertaining to heaven, heaven, celestial' and for once we get a short Elizabethan title, which does not help too much with the possible contents or theme of the books.

After Dee received his Master of Arts degree in 1548, he never returned to Cambridge. He writes that 'never after that was I any student at Cambridge.' He did not go to study at Oxford but he made visits there, neither did he accept the stipend or post of lecturing there on mathematics in 1554. We do not actually know the reason why he refused to have anything to do with the English universities even though he did admire many of the men who were teaching there. There is a possibility that he found the atmosphere, the teaching and methods of teaching somewhat restrictive in England or it did not suit him.

He returned to England in 1551 and Edward VI assigned him a pension of 100 crowns, which he exchanged in 1553 for the rectory of Upton-upon-Seven, Worcestershire. On his return from Louvain he started to take and interest in 'natural magic.' He used the term natural magic to mean 'it stemmed from God and therefore good, opposing black magic that was evil.' Dee believed the Universe was spiritual and God had appointed angels and spirits to move the planets in their course. Spirits had command over the days and their hours. The stars in the heavens influenced the fate of nations and people.

Heaven and earth were reflected in one another, as above so below, with a divine harmony that was mathematical. Dee regarded mathematics as the key to knowledge. Mathematics and Cabbalistic magic provided two channels of communication with the Divine. In this, he was agreeing with Agrippa whom he admired and Agrippa states that nothing can be achieved in magic without mathematics. Dee maintained great benefit could result from making genuine contact with the spiritual and he was not alone in thinking this way because this thinking has continued to our time.

At court, John Dee was popular and the courtiers generally respected him though Aubrey has suggested that some may have feared him as a sorcerer, someone who should have remained in the medieval times of yore. He spent a short time in prison at Hampton Court in August 1555, because of 'false accusations' made by George Ferrys and Prideaux.' They charged him with 'lewde vayne practices of caculing and conjuring' to enchant and destroy Queen Mary. Dee maintained it was 'a damnable slander, utterly untrue, in the whole, and in every worde thereof.' Compendious Rehearsal.

After the succession of Mary Tudor, he was asked to calculate the horoscope of the new Queen and her prospective husband Philip II, which he duly did. At the time, the Princess Elizabeth (to become Queen Elizabeth I) was in captivity at Woodstock. Dee was a cousin of Blanche Perry who held the position of confidential maid-of-honour to Princess Elizabeth and much was to be achieved by knowing those who served influential people. In the case of the future Queen Elizabeth I, it was frequently through her women companions, holding as they did an important channel of access being so close to the future Queen, and these women should not be underestimated in the story. It was frequently through Blanche he corresponded with Elizabeth and he erected her horoscope, which is in British Museum.

Dee cleared himself of the charges of treason but he was sent to the Star Chamber to be tried by Bishop Bonner on the ecclesiastical charge of being a heretic. The definite charges were never made clear which could imply they were only suspicions that had more malice and mischief in them than hard facts. It seems the only evidence they could produce was the chart he erected for Queen Mary but as the Queen had asked him to set up the chart in the first place, he could hardly be accused of working against her welfare by using magic or charms.

The other evidence against him was the close correspondence he had with Elizabeth. She was a great admirer of his skills, learning and teachings. This exposed him to the suspicion and charge of practising against the life of the Queen 'by divers enchantments.'

These letters were obviously not as damaging as his accusers had hoped they would prove because the charges of treason and heresy were dropped and he was released, Dee fared better than his cellmate who was burned at the stake. This period in Dee's life is less than clear with little information known it, but it underlined the danger of being a 'Magus' in England at the time in question.

We should note in passing that when Dee was released in 1555, the young Edward Kelly was being born. John Dee would be 55 when they finally met in 1582 to eternally link their names for ever some 27 years later, to start the experiments that have caused so much speculation and contention. Strange are the ways of Fate that finally caused their paths to cross in the future.

The Star Chamber or Camera Stellata was not a place to be summoned to attend and it was to be avoided at all costs in more ways than one. It was a court of civil and criminal jurisdiction at Westminster and it is said to have got its name from the gold stars painted on the ceiling though not all agree or accept this as the origin of its name.

In the beginning, it comprised of the Privy Council but under King Henry VIII, it was remodelled to consist of four high officers of state, with power to add to their number a bishop, a temporal lord of the council and two justices of the courts of Westminster. It had jurisdiction in cases of forgery, perjury, riots, maintenance, fraud, libel, conspiracy and generally of every misdemeanour, especially those of public importance.

It was exempted from the intervention or debate of a jury and it had the power of inflicting any punishment short of death, though its deliberations sometimes resulted in such a price being paid. Frequently iniquitous, the sentences inflicted being cruel and arbitrary, mainly if not solely for the purpose of levying fines — nothing changes — which is why I said it should be ‘avoided at all costs.’ It was finally abolished by the Statue 10 of King Charles I.

The Star Chamber is said to have taken its name from the golden stars painted on its ceiling but records say these stars were obliterated long before the reign of Queen Elizabeth I and Dee’s time. The name is taken from starra (Hebrew= shetar) or Jewish covenants that were deposited there by order of King Richard I, which were kept in chests under three locks. Jewish contracts and obligations were assigned the name starra or stars and these were ‘kept in the starr-chamber.’ No starra or stars were considered valid unless they were kept in these repositories and here they remained until the banishment of the Jews by King Edward I.

When Elizabeth became Queen in 1558, John Dee became her court astrologer, magus and philosopher and during these times, these were perfectly respectable posts. Dee was asked by Lord Burghley to select ‘the most propitious day’ for the coronation of Elizabeth I.

On the day of her coronation, Dee met the princess who was now the Queen of England and she took lessons in the mystical interpretation of his works. She made him promises regarding appointments but it has to be admitted that she never kept many of them regarding the appointments, though in December of 1564 she did give him the Deanery of Gloucester. He obtained permission however, to hold for ten years the two rectories of Upton and Long Ledenham.

It is certain it was her protection, which saved Dee from the accusations of conjuring and sorcery, as said earlier, this was the general opinion held of him by the common people. Dee knew and performed many things they did not understand so this made them suspect him, it is obvious that they feared him and what people do not understand or fear they attack and try to destroy.

The man who did the most damage to Dee’s reputation was John Foxe in the early editions of his work Acts and Monuments. This is its short title because as said earlier, the Elizabethans seemed to like long titles for their written works in particular. Acts and Monuments was a highly successful book in the Elizabethan period and it underwent four editions in Foxe's lifetime alone.

John Foxe (1516-1587) was born in Lincolnshire and at the age of 16, he entered Oxford and became a fellow of Magdalene College from where he resigned in 1545 because he would not comply with the rules. He married at Stratford-on-Avon. He was an early student of Anglo-Saxon and published an edition of the Saxon gospels. Foxe led quite a varied life and in 1560, the Bishop of London ordained him as a priest.

The first English edition of his Acts and Monuments appeared in 1563 'with the gross errors of the Latin version corrected.' Foxe was too hasty a worker and far too violent a partisan to produce anything like a correct or impartial account of the mass of facts he had to deal with, unlike the man he was slandering, John Dee. Nor can he 'be exonerated from the charge of wilful falsification of evidence' though his 'advocacy of religious tolerance' was far in advance of his day. Foxe died on the 18th of April 1587 and he is buried at St. Giles at Cripplegate.

Foxe refers to Dee as 'Doctor Dee the Great Conjurer.' In 1570, a Convocation ordered a copy of the work be placed in every collegiate church and it could be found in most parish churches throughout the realm. Finally it was all too much for Dee and he appealed that Foxe should desist from his 'damnable sklander' of calling him a 'Caller of Divels' and the 'Arche Conjurer of England.'

Dee's plea was successful and all references to him by name were expunged in the 1567 edition, but by then it was probably as ineffectual as is the order from the bench today that 'the jury will disregard the last remark' — a quite pointless instruction because the jury have already heard it.

Dee remained on good terms with his monarch and she seemed to be genuinely fond of him. Elizabeth would frequently urge him to attend court more often but my feelings are that Dee did not really like the court over much for I do not think he was particularly partial to playing court politics and intrigue, which I think were basically against his nature.

Elizabeth clearly regarded him as proficient in the occult arts and trusted him because when a waxen image of her 'stabbed to the heart' was found in Lincoln's Inn Fields, Dee was asked to counteract any possible evil against her from the charm.

Elizabeth often sent him gifts of money but the most valuable gift that she gave him was security and protection from his enemies, which was worth its weight in gold during these times. Dee writes that the Queen 'promised unto me great security against any of her kingdome, that would by reason of any of my rare studies and philosophicall exercises, unduly seeke my overthrow.' Compendious Rehearsal.

It should not be necessary to stress the importance of this promise at the time of the Reformation, especially when it came from the indisputable head of the realm and backed up with her absolute power — this was very powerful protection indeed.

Despite her kind disposition towards him, the Queen of England could not appear to be too friendly with a suspected magician and sorcerer, Elizabeth was astute and reticent in the matter of giving him advancement or preferment and it was a problem she must have found very difficult to balance, at least politically. Dee's reputation as a conjurer always seemed to precede him and it usually caused hostility towards him, as written elsewhere people fear what they do not understand.

Dee naturally believed in astrology, the 'good astrology' of the natural world, the natural powers and of individuals. The Hermetic Philosophers regarded the stars and planets as channels through which God transmitted his powers. To attract the 'effluvia' of the celestial bodies, which directly affected the lower world, the natural magician tried to summon and manipulate these powers and even today, to attract, and engage the power, the operator created the talismans, amulets and charms of that power.

To attempt this required an extensive knowledge of the metals, perfumes, incenses, oils, plants, gemstones, angels, spirits and much more sympathetic to that celestial power and how to use them. These would enable the operator to channel the power summoned and use that power on the lower, material plane and these are still the basic principles behind the use of talismans, amulets, charms and much of their use today.

He returned to the Continent before Christmas 1562. In 1564, we find him residing several months in Antwerp with William Silvius, a celebrated Dutch printer that would print his work The Hieroglyphic Monad and Dee tells us that he 'finished the work in thirteen days.' He started it on the 13th of January 1564 and completed it by the 25th. The manuscript was in the hands of the printer by the 30th and by the 31st of March, the first Latin edition was complete. In 1591, a second edition was published in Frankfurt.

Latin was the universal language that was understood by men of learning whatever their native tongue. However, unlike many of the Continental Magi John Dee wrote a good deal of his work in English to make it available to those who could read to enable them to use the work.

I am sure Dee used discretion regarding what he revealed and to whom. Dee used magic to gain practical advantages and each level he gained raised him like a ladder to the next. The knowledge he sought was often used to help his fellow creatures on their way, each according to their ability.

Although the Monas was produced 'in much haste' Dee writes that the work was the result of 'seven years of gestation.' There seems to be a suggestion that the work may have been given through 'automatic writing.' In Theorem XXIII Dee writes 'In the name of Jesus Christ crucified on the Cross, I say Spirit writes these things rapidly through me; I hope, and believe, I am merely the quill which traces these characters.'

The Monas was famous even during Dee's life, but not popular with the Universities and Dee thought they simply did not understand it and openly said so. Perhaps he foresaw this as the title page carries the Latin admonition — QVI NON INTELLICT, AVT TACIAT, AVT DISCAT — 'Who does not understand it should either learn, or be silent.' I am sure this did not endear him to many but especially in the Universities because he was right — they did not understand it or like it.

Later in his life (1592), Dee thanked Elizabeth for defending his work 'against such Universitie-Graduates of high degree and other gentlemen, who therefore dispraised it, because they understood it not.' Compendious Rehearsal. Dee presented his Monas Hieroglyphica to the Emperor Maximillian to whom it is dedicated. The full translation of the title is The Monad, Heiroyglyphically, Mathematically, Magically, Cabbalistically and Analogically Explained.

He was back in England later the same year but in 1571, Dee was on the Continent again but on his way through Lorraine, he 'caught a perilous illness.' Two physicians, accompanied by Lord Sidney were sent 'carefully and with great speed' by Elizabeth 'to provide him with relief.' They were instructed to comfort and give him from her majesty 'divers rarities to eat, to increase his health and strength.' He returned to his home in Mortlake where he continued his studies.

In 1572 with the coming of a new star people gathered to hear Dee discourse on its appearance in the skies and five years later Dee was displaying his learning regarding a mysterious comet. Elizabeth herself came to Mortlake to ask him what 'this addition to the stellar bodies might portend.'

In 1578 Dee was abroad to consult with German physicians and astrologers regarding an illness of the Queen. On his return, he was employed to investigate the title of the Crown to countries recently discovered by British subjects and supply geographical descriptions.

Dee went on many confidential missions abroad on for the Queen. This has led to the suggestion that his true missions abroad were espionage for Burghley and Walsingham because both men were closely linked with the Queen's intelligence service and it has also been suggested that the magic, Enochia and all its trappings were simply a cover for the true purpose of his life and work, espionage — discussed later.

Dee's house at Mortlake was well positioned for the court and its affairs. Some of the favourite residences of the Queen were nearby at Richmond, Hampton Court and Nonsuch, these were all within easy reach. Dee was a frequent visitor to Barn Elms, the countryseat of Sir Francis Walsingham who was the Queen's Intelligence Secretary. In the Autobiographical and Historical Notes by Ashmole, Good wife Faldo told Elias Ashmole that Dee was 'wel-beloved and respected of all persons of quality thereabouts who very often invited him to their house or he came to theirs.'

Nearby was Syon House, the home of Henry Percy, the Earl of Northumberland — ‘the Wizard Earl’ and his circle could boast that the greatest intellects in England were often to be found there. Dee’s circle was no less blessed and they had frequent contact and communication with Percy’s Northumberland Circle, a list of these people would prove most impressive. In the latter part of the sixteenth century and the beginning of the seventeenth, the centre of English science was ‘not found at the Universities, but in London.’

As said, some of the greatest intellects and mathematicians in England were in Percy’s circle. Dee’s circle included Raleigh and many individuals of intellectual prowess that were considered to be freethinking and pagan, while working within the Christian framework of the time. I believe Dee’s circle went by the wonderfully evocative name of — The School of the Night — considering the nature of the School the name is most appropriate.

The people who visited Dee’s home at Mortlake would provide an impressive list of the rarest intellects and some of the most powerful people found working in Elizabethan England. Queen Elizabeth would often call without prior notice and sometimes with much of her court. The half-brothers of Raleigh were frequent guests as was John Hawkins who went with Sir Francis Drake, many men connected with the sea called to Mortlake to consult Dee’s charts and maps and to be instructed in mathematics and the technology of the navigational arts.

Dee dreamt of England having a strong empire, he was the moving force behind many of the explorations of the time and he sometimes invested his own funds in certain of the ventures. Dee’s private diaries provide a deal of information of this kind and his neighbours say he was ‘wel lyked.’

We know at times that Dee found the constant stream of visitors to his home overwhelming and he found little time for the philosophical studies and the experiments he craved. The Queen had promised him a living at Saint Cross’s at Hampshire and in 1592 he wrote to her explaining:

‘I would faine retyre my seife for some yeares ensuing from the multitude and haunt of my common friends, and others, who visit me, which thing without offense, and lose, or breach of some folkes friendship, cannot be conveniently performed, while I continually am at my house at Mortlake; the passage and way to my house there is so easy, neere, and of light cost from London or court.’ Compendious Rehearsal.

In other words, Dee was too conveniently placed to London but Elizabeth wanted John Dee close to hand so she did not grant his request. He was one the foremost jewels of England’s intellectual crown and as such she would not allow him to retire to the country or from public life into semi-obscurity. Some of the most authoritative minds of the day wished to consult Dee regarding matters of navigation, geography, astronomy, science, voyages of discovery and so on.

I am sure Dee was flattered by these demands but in truth I think he was exhausted, depleted, weary and in need of rest with time to think and be by himself. I am sure, as is hinted at times that he may have found living near London too expensive, too convenient and too time consuming.

As said, his very close friendship with Walsingham, the chief officer of Elizabeth's Intelligence Service reinforced the speculation, then as now that his true mission in life was espionage for Elizabeth and the realm. The envious set it about that his magical dabbling was merely camouflage for the true objective of the much-travelled Dee. I have absolutely no doubt that Dee would discuss and make observations regarding the countries he visited. Much as we today comment on a country we visit and make comparisons with our own, this is natural, a normal result of travel and in no way sinister, I have discussed with others every country I have ever visited but not to spy on that country with the intention of doing it any harm.

Dee was a scientist and I believe his appraisal and meticulous observation would be useful and of great interest to the Crown. In those times, this kind of information was as scarce as hen's teeth by today's standards when we possibly have too much information, given too often and quite often too trivial on all counts as a result. It has never been proven to anyone's satisfaction that Dee was spying for the Crown. Queen Elizabeth I had her secret intelligence service, so has Queen Elizabeth II and it too operates mainly through her ministers.

Naturally Burghley and Walsingham had interest in finding out what was going on in other countries, eager to know what Dee thought and what he had seen while travelling and I feel certain that Burghley and Walsingham would make similar enquiries from many of the important travellers returning from abroad. In particular, those sent on court business, as they would be going to the centre of power, the royal courts where intrigue, policymaking and rumour would be rife. I would regard such enquiries and discussions as routine and not sinister in the least.

In one book Dee is portrayed as a Tudor forerunner of James Bond even having as his personal cipher the number '007' with Elizabeth calling him 'her eyes' it is said. This detailed theory can be found in John Dee: Scientist, Geographer, Astrologer and Secret Agent to Elizabeth I by Richard Deacon. The spiritual diaries are held to be a 'secret code book' for enciphering Dee's coded espionage messages to Elizabeth and her ministers.

Mr Deacon provides his facts and from them the reader will be able to form their opinions and response regarding the matter being offered for consideration, my decision has been made for some time. Now let us take a look at some of the domestic details of Dee's life.

John Dee married in 1574 though nothing is known of his first wife other than the fact that he recorded her death the following year. He married again in February 1578 to Jane Fromond who was lady-in-waiting to the Queen.

John Aubrey, the English antiquary writes that Dee was ‘very fair, sanguine complexion, with a long beard as white as milk — a very handsome man — tall and slender. He wore a gowne like an artist’s gowne, with hanging sleeves.’

On the 10th of March 1575, the day that his first unidentified wife died, Elizabeth came to see him because she wanted to see his magical mirror and famous library. Dee had to see her outside because the Queen would not enter the house when she learned that he had just buried his wife only four hours beforehand. Elizabeth saw the ‘blackstone’ and he exhibited some of its properties to her and she was greatly entertained by it all. To see the stone more the better the Queen was taken down from her horse ‘by the Earl of Leicester, by the Church wall of Mortlack.’

She made many visits to her philosopher’s house which was ‘a little to the westward of the church.’ Elizabeth called to see John Dee on the 10th of October 1580 and Dee wrote ‘The Queenes Majestie, to my great cumfort (hora quinta*) came with her trayn from court and at my dore, graciously calling me unto her horsbak, exhorted me briefly to take my mothers death patiently.’ It is obvious from this that his mother had died sometime before this date.

Dee was consulting with the Queen on October 3rd and with others and Lord Burghley at the Privy Chamber on the following days, Burghley could not see him on October 7th and seemed very preoccupied and indifferent to him, passing him by and Dee thought it was because it was by some ‘new grief conceived.’

He returned to Mortlake to his own grief with the death of his mother, so her mother’s death must have taken place either later on the 7th, 8th or 9th. He could without difficulty have been back to Mortlake on the 7th if he finished at court early enough, certainly by the 8th and 9th with the Queen comforting him about his mothers death on the 10th of October.

Dee was a loving and loyal son and his mother was very close to him so if she had died while he was away from Mortlake with the Queen and with at the Privy Chamber while, it is my belief that someone would have come the relatively short distance from Mortlake (even in his time) and told him of the event. It is my opinion that his mother’s death happened after he got back to his home on the 7th, the 8th or the 9th and naturally before he met the Queen on the 10th of October.

Hora Quinta* is the fifth hour, hora= hour and quinta= ‘five.’ The ‘fifth hour’ because ‘hora is an hour among the Romans, of varying length, according to the time of the year, from sunrise to sunset being reckoned as twelve hours. The Greek is ῥῶα, hora= ‘lit. a definite space of time, fixed by natural laws.’

Even today, some people as I do still use a variable Table of Hours worked out from sunset, which is variable according to time of the year, with long days in the summer and short in the winter. This particular instance would have been given or recorded as ‘the fifth hour after sunset, October 10th 1580.’ I have given this Table as an alternative way of working out the planetary and angelic hours in earlier books and I will continue to do so in future with any new works or any reprints of previously work published — if a Table of Planetary Hours is needed.

In July 1583, two great nobles invited themselves to dine with Dee, but his poverty made him decline the honour. When the Queen heard of this she exhibited her largesse by sending him a gift of forty angels of gold. Elizabeth has had the charge of parsimony levelled against her but in her dealings with John Dee, this was not wholly justified. I have always preferred that she was careful with her cash and I can understand this — it was simply good housekeeping.

She may not have always kept her promises regarding advancement but she did not appear to lack generosity towards him. I think for the most part she displayed affection, respect and warmth towards him in many ways. It has been pointed out by others who like such details and find them for the rest of us that Elizabeth is mentioned some fifty times in the diaries of Dee, now and then in quite intimate detail regarding the court, its politics and her dealings with him in which she appeared to affectionate and friendly.

Dee’s son Arthur attended Westminster School and to a large extent followed in his father’s footsteps but without his father’s unique skills and learning however, Arthur was very well-educated. We do not know a great deal about him, but he did have some high standing positions during his life. He is called ‘the eldest of Dee’s sons’ and in fact, he was Dee’s first-born and so the eldest of his children.

The family and children are discussed later showing that there were eight children in all with the last being born and christened in 1595 making four boys and four daughters. Katherine was looking after him when he died and he named one of his daughters after ‘Madimi’ from the crystal skrying with Edward Kelly.

Arthur did achieve success with Hermetic philosophy and he gained fame in his own right, which like his father’s before him reached the court of Russia where he became Archiater= ‘chief physician’ to Tsar Mikhail on the personal recommendation of King James.

Arthur Dee used his father’s shrewstone as others had done, but he did not make any extravagant claims, he said ‘he saw but little.’ Dee was keenly interested in crystal gazing and on the 25th of May 1581, mentioned elsewhere, he wrote that for the first time — ‘I had a sight offered me in crystallo and I saw.’

It was necessary most reports suggest, to turn the shrewstone in different positions before the observer could secure the right focus. When this ‘focus’ was right, the spirits would appear on its surface or in different parts of the room and Dee confirms this form of external projection. On the 28th of May 1583, he writes of Madimi that ‘she seemed to play up and down, and seemed to go in and out behind my books, lying in heaps; And as she should ever go between them, the books seem to give place sufficiently, dividing one heap from the other while she passed between them.’

How is this particular entry generally viewed by some writers in the past? It is considered as no more than a clever trick of the light or a projection by Kelly. Well it was a remarkably clever trick for the time and I for one would have liked to have seen it, especially with Kelly’s ingenious skills as a ventriloquist, seeing that he added Madimi’s replies for good measure to deceive the naïve Dr. John Dee. If being so ‘naïve’ produced such a mind and gave the qualities possessed by John Dee — then please God by me!

Some think Dee recorded these events in good faith while others say it was a nonsense of Dee’s own invention ‘for the deception of posterity.’ However, what Dee hoped to gain by deceiving posterity I do not know for I have long thought he never really intended his magical diaries to be made public at all and what gains he would have made or wanted eludes me. Prior to his meeting Kelly, Dee had been recording dreams and his diaries mention and describe ‘strange dreams’ some are his own with those of his wife and others, he was attempting to try and read the future from them.

At this point in the tale, we should now bring in the other member in this remarkable anecdote, Edward Talbot or Kelly because he had arrived on the scene in 1582, between the time of Dee seeing in the crystal for the first time in 1581 and the above projection recorded when Kelly was installed as Dee’s skryer in 1583.

In truth, we must admit that we still know very little about the man or whether he was Talbot or Kelly and until we know more, every writer has to spread thin the meagre facts known. All we can do, as others before us have, is to take these ‘meagre facts’ and draw our conclusions from them because this is the only option open to us and this is what I have done here.

According to Anthony Wood in his Athenae Oxoniensis (London 1815), Kelly was born around 4 p.m on the 1st of August 1555 (Dee confirms the year) at Worcester and he was educated in his native city until about the age of seventeen when his father sent him to Oxford. It is thought that Kelly’s father was an apothecary of reasonable means. Nevertheless, those who have checked the records of that place say no one by the name of Kelly registered there around this particular period

If his name was Talbot then three people of that name entered Gloucester Hall around the requisite period. According to Wood who was the amanuensis of Thomas Allen (1542-1632), ‘Kelly spent some time in this house, Gloucester Hall’ although no record of the name Kelly is found on the register.

Kelly or Talbot was for a short time secretary to Thomas Allen who was a magus like Dee. It is generally thought Kelly or Talbot acquired his knowledge of occult philosophy while he was in Allen's service. If this latter report is true then he may well have been using an alias when he saw Dee for the first time, his name was Kelly but he told Dee it was Talbot.

Thomas Allen, an English mathematician was admitted to Trinity College, Oxford in 1561 and graduated M.A in 1567. Allen was famous for his knowledge of antiquity, philosophy and mathematics, he spent some time at Henry Percy's house where he became acquainted with Thomas Harriot, John Dee and the other famous mathematicians of the day. His exceptional skills in mathematics and astrology only served to gain him the accusation of being a magician — which in truth he was.

He is accused of using the black art to bring about a match between his patron Robert Dudley, Earl of Leicester and Queen Elizabeth. It would not be an unfair comment to say that Thomas Allen resembled John Dee in many ways. Further, Anthony Woods confirms that none knew Robert Dudley more intimately than John Dee did.

Whatever his name, Kelly or Talbot and if he was ever at Oxford at all, it was usually considered to be 'a short stay' for he left there 'abruptly' and the term 'abruptly' was the rule rather than the exception in Kelly's life. Further, it may be reasonable to add that not only did Kelly leave Oxford 'abruptly' but that he left without a degree.

Was his name Talbot, which he changed to Kelly or the other way around, we will pick up this point later but from here on, we will use the name Kelly — right or wrong. He either had some skill in chemistry or he was an apothecary and if this was his father's trade then this is not an unreasonable assumption. Another thread says Kelly 'embraced the law' when he left Oxford, but most think he was in practise as an 'unqualified' lawyer. He settled either in Lancaster or London, it was probably in both places, but it is thought that it was in Lancaster where all his troubles began.

Kelly had a fair hand and was proficient in penmanship, well acquainted with archaic English and probably Welsh, which gives some support to the opinion he was a Notary and copyist dealing in Wills and Testaments. He is accused of forging title deeds in the interests of one of his clients and no doubt to his own.

It is realistic to say that Kelly had many 'interests' and that he stands accused of illegal coining. However, the accusation is thought to be as slender as the evidence however, it is claimed for this severe indiscretion he was pilloried at Lancaster or he lost his ears as a consequence. If his crime was the latter then this severe penalty would more in keeping with the equally serious offence of counterfeiting the coins of the realm.

The loss of his ears is given as the reason for Kelly covering his head with the Elizabethan style cap that covered the ears, but Dee also wore this style of headdress and it was common enough for the times. Engravings are in existence of Kelly without the skullcap form of headdress and one was used in the first edition of the dictionary published and it now appears on the back cover of this edition with the complimentary engraving of John Dee, showing Dee covering his ears and Kelly not. It is true in the engraving used that his hair is long according to the custom of the time, so it would cover his ears or lack of them.

If there was a lack of ears, I think he would have been more careful because with that particular story abroad, it would have been a great temptation for ridicule and the attention of the over-curious and Kelly was definitely a man of very uncertain temper. The conjunction of the two planets Mars and Uranus in his natal chart square his natal Moon giving sudden and unpredictable outbursts of emotional temper would bear this out, even to a first year astrology student.

I am sympathetic with the opinion that the person responsible for the story of the loss of Kelly's ears is a man called Nash and the story comes from his History and Antiquities of Worcester. London, 1781. Nash does not supply any dates for the reputed mutilation of Kelly, but it was thought to have taken place some time in 1580. I feel Kelly's subsequent position and knighthood, at the court of the Emperor Rudolph would not have been given to a man who had been physically mutilated and branded a criminal by law for such a serious crime.

I have long thought the loss of his ears was not so but anyone who could accomplish the transmutation of base metal into gold could be forgiven quite a lot of sins, including the loss of their ears for counterfeiting the coins of the realm. Rulers can be very lax in their judgement when it suits them or if the promise of profit is massive enough.

While travelling in Wales, Kelly is said to have acquired the Book of St. Dunstan, which is a fabled book written by the founder of Glastonbury Abbey. With the book was a casket that contained two ivory bottles or two smaller caskets. These bottles contained the extraordinary White and Red Powders of Projection, though one of the containers was broken with a quantity of the Red Powder being lost as a result. St. Dunstan was thought to have been a practising alchemist so, most appropriately, we find Dunstan as the Patron Saint of Goldsmiths.

The Book of St. Dunstan is mentioned now and then in Dee's diaries and Dee's son Arthur makes reference to a work of the same title. Tradition has it that the powders and manuscript were looted from the saint's tomb (some say it was a bishop's, the story varies) by a Protestant mob seeking treasure. Finding none, they gave what they did find to an innkeeper for a skin of wine. The innkeeper saw little value in the powders or the manuscript found with them and because he did not understand them he sold them to Kelly for the princely sum of one guinea — Kelly did understand them!

Whether the story is true or false, Dee makes reference to both the scroll and the 'powders.' Not everyone accepts this story but finding these treasures is thought to be the reason why Kelly went to London to see the famous Dr Dee with his find and this is thought to be how the two men first came together. However, Lenglet du Fresnoy tells us that Kelly was a notary in London and Dee was a neighbour and friend and this is how they first met.

Soon we must start joining the stories of these two men, but before we do, we must settle one misunderstanding once and for all, which has not served Dee in particular very well in the past and this gross ignorance still rears its head even today.

One book (1948), which in fairness will remain nameless because it is not the only offender by any means, is especially vitriolic in the scorn it heaps on John Dee, his life and work. It generously tells us the diaries of Dee do not speak of any ‘necromantic experiments’ but ‘it is known that Dee and Kelly had, before their departure from England, evoked the dead in a lonely cemetery.’ It reproduces a well-known engraving of the event and writes how Dee and Kelly are within the safety of a magic circle. ‘Kelly holds the magic wand and reading from a black book. A frightened Dr Dee raises a weirdly burning torch.’ I am sure that God will forgive the writer — I will take much longer.

This particular work was my first contact with the names of Dee and Kelly and frankly they did not impress me very much, I did not wish to know anything about them for many years. The work further told me, when Dee and Kelly eventually parted. Dee came back to England ‘and wrote his memoirs, which he published in 1659 under the title of ‘A True and Faithful Relation . . . etc.’, which would be quite clever trick even for Dee seeing that he died in 1608,

The writer makes no mention of Meric Casaubon who actually wrote and compiled this particular book after Dee’s death; the work includes sections of Dee’s diaries, which were useful. This shows how difficult it was to find a ‘true and faithful’ account of Dee and Kelly’s life and work in the past and what there was to work with but I must admit that matters have improved a great deal today regarding John Dee and Edward Kelly.

The unnamed writer above is commenting on an engraving generally known as the ‘Sibly Engraving.’ The charge of necromancy regarding Kelly comes from an account in John Weaver’s, Discourse of Ancient Funeral Monuments of 1631. At least Weaver’s work got the names of the men involved in the incident correct.

He tells us how Edward Kelly and Paul Waring, who acted as companion and associate in all his (Kelly’s) conjurations (my italics) called up the spirit of a deceased man from his grave. This was probably not meant to be taken literally as with exhumation, though some commentators write Kelly and Waring did actually exhume the body.

What was probably meant here was the spirit of the deceased was called up. Not unlike the Witch of Endor calling up the spirit of the prophet Samuel to answer Saul’s questions because ‘the Lord answered him not, neither by dreams, nor Urim, nor by prophets.’ 1 Samuel 28: 6.

Lewis Spence writes that Kelly and Waring actually exhumed the body a few hours earlier and pretended to draw oracular utterances from it to impress ‘a wealthy dupe with some of his servants.’ of course, Lewis Spence just happened to be passing the churchyard at the time around 1920 but not everything he wrote was in this vein though seeming to lack generosity, he never seems to miss a chance to disparage Dee whenever he can get an opportunity.

The ritual took place in the cemetery of Law Church, near Wootton-in-the-Dale in Lancaster, near Preston. Remember, it was at Lancaster where Kelly's troubles began by being set in a pillory or having his ears cut off. An illustration of this incident in the churchyard was included in the second edition of an Illustration of the Occult Sciences by Ebenezer Sibley from whom the engraving gets its name and many books today still reproduce this engraving.

The scene shows a churchyard at midnight, in the background a church and in the foreground, two men are standing within the protection of a magic circle. One man holds a torch aloft and this is Paul Waring — not John Dee. The other holds an open book and he is pointing to names inscribed around the circle— this is Edward Kelly. In front of the two men is a cadaver dressed for the grave and in the engraving, the corpse appears to be speaking or about to speak. The deceased is said to be a man who died ‘leaving a small fortune hidden and he had not revealed its whereabouts.’

Some reports say the site of the grave had been shown to Kelly and Waring on the previous day. Not only had the operation ‘satisfied their wicked desires and iniquities but the cadaver gave Kelly and Waring several further predictions regarding people of the neighbourhood which were ‘literally and exactly fulfilled.’

I believe it was possible that Kelly would practise such a ritual for ‘a small fortune’ but I really doubt that Dee would do so because I think it would be against every principle that he held dear and his natural character.

According to some reports, Kelly's contract with the Devil ran out and his diabolical master called in the debt. The ‘infernal spirits’ carried Edward Kelly off at midnight ‘in full sight of his wife and children’ at the exact moment he was hatching out a mischievous scheme ‘against the minister of this parish, with whom he was greatly at enmity.’

How is that for timing and judgement against Kelly for plotting against a minister of the church and a just reward for his necromancy and blasphemy however, if it is true it does leave us with one problem that is not so easily explained?

Who was it with his wife that went with Dee and his family on the trip to the continent later? It would be quite a clever trick even for the celebrated Edward Kelly because he died there while trying to escape from prison. Further, although Kelly married, it was sans progeny. This sounds more like an example of propaganda on behalf of the ‘minister of this parish.’

As said, if Kelly disappeared from the face of the earth on this night, who did Dee work with all those years later? I hope no further calumny, arising from the (mis-)interpretation of this incident and engraving, will be laid upon the shoulders of John Dee for throughout a long life, Dee has already carried more than enough for one man — too much in my opinion.

Just remember the incidence of Law Church involved Kelly and Waring, not Kelly and Dee. In some copies of the engraving, Kelly seems to have his ears and this event is supposed to have taken place after he had lost them. Nevertheless, it is time to start merging the stories of these two men.

Kelly presented himself to Dee at Mortlake on the 10th of March 1582 and their relationship, as far as recording the angelic conversations and Enochia lasted until 1589. We know that Kelly had acted as skryer and secretary for ‘another Elizabethan scholar’ and this is thought to be Thomas Allen. This gives ammunition to those who consider this period prepared and rehearsed Kelly well for his clever deception of the gullible John Dee in the future. They claim Kelly was already familiar with the spirit world and its complicated construction. He was conversant with Agrippa’s works as was Dee because there was a well-used copy in Dee’s library. It is a fair question, was Kelly’s knowledge of Agrippa’s work De Occulta Philosophia well enough that he could use it to dupe Dee? The work was in constant use by Dee in his experiments for even the ‘Spiritual Diaries’ are marked ‘Agrippa hath so.’

Yet, I am sure I will repeat myself later, anyone who has seen or dealt with the volume of work that was produced on the Enochia, the system and its angels during the seven to eight or so years that he was with John Dee dealing with this project runs into hundreds of intricate and complicated pages produced and carefully recorded regarding whoever ‘came’ in response and attended the work and their replies to the questions given. They obviously ‘heard’ Dee’s questions and requests for there is no hint that Kelly had to repeat the questions and the writings show that he did not have to repeat them to get the answer. Dee did not say that he personally saw anything and all was done through the mediumship of Kelly.

In his visions, Kelly frequently saw groups of seven angels and each was carrying a tablet that had their name written on it. The Archangel Uriel instructed Dee how the names should be inscribed on the seals. When you look at the amount of work done and recorded, the text, the diagrams, explanations and plans, if Kelly was fooling Dee then he must have had a memory and mind that surpassed the ken of people of the highest intellects and one that almost certainly surpassed that of Dee himself.

After one particularly onerous session working with the crystal that had been most frustrating to say the least, Kelly walked out in a foul mood. He came back later to Dee’s room with a copy of De Occult Philosophia in his hand showing the chapter where Kelly had found the names, countries, provinces and descriptions that were remarkably close to what the angels had just revealed to them.

Kelly at one point in these proceedings said to Dee that the spirits and angels were *‘coseners’ because they ‘stole material from books.’ Kelly said he would have nothing to do with them and it took Dee quite some time to calm him down again and reassure him.

Naturally, detractors of Kelly claimed this display of ‘honesty’ was only another clever act to gain Dee’s confidence and to put himself in a favourable light with him — the poor man cannot win. *Cozener [Eng. cozen; -er] = ‘one who cozens; a cheat, a defrauder.’

Of course, critics of the past have long been saying that Dee and Kelly were both frauds and charlatans and the only comfort Dee can garner from these comments was that Kelly was considered worse than him, others say Kelly was the charlatan and Dee ‘the pious master’ deluded by him, neither really come out well in the matter.

Despite the suppositions and information already given, no one in truth seems to know how Dee and Kelly came together that I know of. Edward Kelly was not the first skryer to work with Dee. The doctor had enlisted the talents of various people for skrying before Kelly and we do not know who many of these were and the lack of details written in Dee’s normally detailed diaries may simply mean the results were insignificant or disappointing, the person was unable to do the work properly and therefore not worth recording.

We do know the first medium of any account was a man called Barnabus Saul, some think he was a proven rogue and although Kelly was more successful, Kelly was an even bigger rogue. Dee reports in his diary many incidents of ‘strange knocking in his chambers.’ He writes ‘1581, August 3rd - All the night, very strange knocking and rapping in my chamber, August 4th, and this night likewise.’ Then on the 9th of October 1581, ‘Barnabus Saul lying in the . . . hall, was strangely troubled by a spiritual creature about mydnight.’ An entry recorded by Dee that may interest literary readers is given on ‘1581, July 12th — The Erle of Leicester fell fowly out with the Erle of Sussex, Lord Chamberlayn, calling each other trayter, whereuppon both were commanded to kepe theyr chamber at Greenwich, where the court was.’ Sir Walter Scott made good use of this historic quarrel in his Kenilworth (1821).

On the 2nd of December Dee writes, ‘I willed the skryer named Saul, to looke into my great crystalline globe, if God had sent his holy angel Azrael or no!’ To add information, Azrael is the Angel of Death who at ‘the death of a man, erases his name from a large book in which he is forever writing and erasing.’ It was this angel who supplied the ‘seven handfuls of earth for God at the creation of Adam’ the other three angels involved by God were the Archangel Michael, the Archangel Gabriel and the Angel Israfel — the ‘burning one’ and the Angel of Resurrection, all three having failed in the task.

God sent these four angels to the four corners of the earth to seek the required 'seven handfuls' of dust and because Azrael was successful with the task, God appointed this angel the task of separating the body (= earth) from the soul (= spirit) at the time of death.

It was thought Dee's enemies planted Saul on him to entrap and destroy him by gaining evidence that would convict Dee of sorcery and necromancy. Saul reported visions but on being dismissed from the service of England's 'Arche Conjurer' on the 2nd of March 1582, he denied everything saying 'that he neither heard nor saw any spiritual creature any more!'

Such a retraction I feel would be natural because once Barnabus Saul was out of Dee's service, he would fear having to answer charges of conjuring, necromancy and sorcery. In fairness to Saul, he would no longer have the protection afforded while with Dee at the highest level at court — where it mattered in those days.

However they met Kelly seems to have satisfied Dee because Kelly obtained very liberal terms of employment for the services of skrying of 'fifty pounds per annum with board and lodging' and all expenses paid. It may hard for us today to realize what a fortune this amount was at this time. Naturally, critics have suggested that Kelly only pretended to see in the great crystalline globe to fool Dee to gain the position but if you examine the work produced, it would need a memory and inventiveness beyond belief, without taking anything else into account.

Perhaps the spirits and angels accepted Kelly as their 'channel' for I feel that Edward Kelly had more talent in 'second sight' than he is given credit for and he may well have a legitimate talent. Perhaps it was the misuse of his gift that was at fault, more so than the gift itself. If the angels and spirits seeking a channel of access to John Dee had found so many 'closed doors in the past,' they may have been relieved to finally find one that was open. The reader will have to accept that in the views expressed here that there is speculation and personal opinion regarding this.

There was obviously an initial period of friction between them and Dee was by far the gentler man. Kelly was a man of uncertain Celtic temper and it would be fair to say he was usually the prime mover of most of the disagreements between the two men. Although we have used the name Kelly up to this point, he seems to have presented himself as Edward Talbot when he met Dee for the first time. In his records Dee refers to him as Talbot, however, some nine months later the name Talbot suddenly changes to Kelly and the diaries do not give any explanation why this was so.

We have two possibilities. The first is that Talbot was his real name and his criminal past was catching up with him so he adopted the alias of Kelly, a theory some commentators believe to be true. Being with Dee obviously placed Talbot in the limelight, if or when he was engaged in criminal pursuits in the past, he could disappear into background as and when it was required.

Being with so prominent a figure as Dr. John Dee, Talbot was on public display and could no longer achieve this.

The second theory is that his name was really Kelly and he arrived at Dee's using the alias Talbot. With the chance of discovery, he confessed to Dee his real name is Kelly. Either way Talbot ends up as Kelly whatever the possible explanation or supposition and Kelly is the name the world knows him by and I favour the latter.

We do know they eventually arrived at some kind of agreement regarding the partnership, because under the title of The Fourth Book of the Mysteries we find written the subtitle Postreconciliationem Kellianum. (15th November 1582). After this date only the name of Kelly is used, Talbot is no more and this sudden change from Talbot to Kelly has led some writers to speculate that perhaps Talbot and Kelly were two separate individuals as the name Talbot appears very little in Dee's diaries.

Dee employed a number of skryers whose names we do not know, before we have the name of Barnabus Saul. The speculation is that Talbot was just another abortive skryer before Kelly came on the scene. Kelly's origins are too obscure to settle the sudden name change with any degree of certainty.

So, either we have the murky past of Talbot catching up with him, which required a change to the new name of Kelly to prevent arrest. Alternatively, because the sins of Talbot were coming home to roost, we have Talbot admitting to Dee that his real name was Kelly.

Either way a change of name was necessary and I am sure Dee considered this to be the lesser of the evils. At this time, I would imagine John Dee's only interest was the continued success of angelic communications and if Kelly was good enough for John Dee for whatever reasons, I have no problem with it.

This may account why the people called Talbot, registered at Oxford at this time, cannot be associated with Kelly. Remember, Thomas Allen and others did write they knew Kelly (not Talbot) at Gloucester Hall, Oxford. They said Kelly had spent a short time at that house and that he left Oxford 'abruptly.'

Therefore, we have the possible sequence of Kelly being at Oxford and then taking the alias of Talbot for his nefarious dealings. He met Dee while using the name of Talbot and then he changed back to Kelly, his real name with Dee's backing, when there was trouble for Talbot. Dee said he was innocent of the crime of illegal coining during June 1583.

I would be the first to admit I have no evidence to support my view but as already said, the latter sequence of Kelly with the alias Talbot has always appeared to sit more securely than the former of Talbot with the alias Kelly. If Kelly was engaged in criminal activities prior to meeting Dee surely he would have used an alias perhaps Talbot and not use his own name Kelly? I feel he dropped the alias Talbot and went back to his real name and did not work with Dee under the alias of Kelly.

I think the assumption reasonable but until we discover the facts, it must remain what it is — an assumption. Now we must leave the mystery because it will not yield its secret at this time.

From the time of his meeting with Kelly, Dee gave more time to the work of Angelic Magic. The Angelic Magic was initiated during the year 1580 with probably the first serious record found to be 22 December 1581 and gathered strength. At last, he had the skryer he always wanted, someone who could produce results and one he could work with.

After a while, they had recorded the Enochian Alphabet and many Enochian words. Dee and Kelly preceded their skrying by a system of Calls or Invocations spoken in the Enochian language. Dee meticulously recorded the angelic conversations and one figure in the skrying sessions appeared quite often. She was a half-angel, half-elfin child 'like a pretty girl of seven or nine years of age who said her name was Madimi.' As said, Dee named one of his daughters after her and in all Madimi appeared for some seven years to Dee and Kelly.

About this time, the Earl of Leicester introduced a Polish nobleman, Albert Lasky (sometimes Laski) to Dee. He was palatine of Siradz and a representative of the King of Poland. Lasky had come to visit England to see the magnificence of Gloriana. — Queen Elizabeth I. He saw much of England's glory but he expressed disappointment at not meeting John Dee at Oxford. Lasky said he would not have gone there if he had known that Dee would not be there.

This makes me think that meeting Dee could have perhaps been the real reason for Lasky's visit. On their return to London, Leicester said he would arrange a meeting with Dee and while they were waiting in the Queen's antechamber, Dee arrived at court and Leicester introduced Lasky to him. Elizabeth received Lasky well and he was entertained at Dee's house at the Queen's expense.

Lasky became a frequent visitor to Dee's house during 1583 and Lasky was present at some of the crystal skrying sessions. Lasky was a very rich man and he invited Dee, Kelly and their families to return with him to Poland where he told them, they would be very well received.

They were uncertain whether to go, as always they were desperately short of money and for some experiments, they would need a bottomless purse. They asked the spirits what was the future for Lasky. The relevant conversation between Dee and Madimi concerning Lasky took place at Mortlake on July 1583 and a part is given below. One author writes of this conversation (and the others) that it is 'inane and purposeless enough' and in part, it goes:

Dee: 'Mistress Madimi, you are welcome in God for good, as I hope: what is the cause of your coming now?'

Madimi: 'To see how you do.'

Dee: 'I know you see me often, and I see you only in faith and imagination.'

Madimi: 'That sight is perfecter than his . . . (pointing to Kelly) . . .

Dee: 'As concerning Alb. Laski his pedigree you said your sister would tell all.'

Madimi: ' . . . I told you more than all your dog painters and cat painters can.'

Dee: 'You spoke of William Laski and Sir Richard Laski his brother, of which William going into France, and then into Denmark: and his marriage into Poland, came this Albert Laski, now Palatine of Soradia, etc.

Madimi: ' . . . Those were two pretty men for me to meddle withal. When you set yourselves together, and agree together, I will make all agree together. (These words are my comment and are not found in the diaries, because Kelly, never one to miss a possible opportunity, asks Madimi)

Kelly: Will you Madimi lend me a hundred pounds for a fortnight.'

Madimi: ' . . . I have swept all my money out of doors.'

Dee: 'As for money we shall have that which is necessary when God seeth time.'

Madimi: ' . . . Hear me what I say. God is the unity of all things. Love in the unity of every Congregation (I mean true and perfect love. The world was made in the love of the Father. You were redeemed in the love of the Father and the Son. The Spirit of God is (yet) the love of his Church.'

Like others I have also wondered why, during the period 1583-1589, John Dee decided to leave England and spend it abroad with the Polish prince Albrecht Lasky and little of this interlude appears in the Compendious Rehearsall. As said earlier Lasky came to London in May 1593 and I believe his main reason for doing so was to meet John Dee.

John Dee was at the height of his prestige and standing at the English court so you wonder why did he decide to pack up and go on such a long, arduous journey to an unknown land and what did it have to offer him. Dee obviously thought there was advantage in leaving England to go to the continent because he left and we have little or no information why.

The purpose may come to light in the future with later research but for the moment, they must remain unknown, perhaps the answers lie in archives yet to be found abroad.

Dee decided to leave England with Lasky and he went to Holland with his wife and family, Edward Kelly and his wife and a large collection of books and instruments. On the 21st of September 1583 Dee writes in his diary. 'We went from Mortlake, and so the Lord Albert Lasky, I, Mr. E. Kelly, our wives, my children and familie, we went toward our two ships attending for us, seven or eight myle below Gravesende.'

It was a very stormy night when they left Mortlake for Gravesend and they boarded the ship with their goods but the storm was so violent they were transferred to some fishing boats that landed them at Queensborough on the Isle of Sheppey for shelter. They finally crossed to Brill on the 30th of September and arrived at Lasky's home on the 3rd of February 1584.

When the mob knew that Dee was gone, as is ever the way of mobs and rabble, they broke into his house at Mortlake, they destroyed much of the instruments, furniture and books of 'the Wizard,' Needless to say this act of bravado and daring-do was done while the 'Wizard' was out of the country and miles away and the dragons lair was empty. This wanton devastation broke his heart on his return because so much valuable material had been destroyed or taken and what the mob did not want they defaced.

Stephen Bathori, the King of Poland, gave Dee an audience on 17th April 1585 and he saw Dee on two further occasions. From about 1584, rumours were rife about these two Englishmen. They were under suspicion of practising sorcery, necromancy and fraudulent alchemy and their presence required an explanation to the ecclesiastical authorities, naturally. They had already aroused the suspicions of various Papal Nuncios, especially as they belonged to a church that was regarded as heretical and the father of the present Queen was not exactly well thought of by the Catholic Church to say the least.

They were in Cracow on the 19th of April 1585 and on the 6th of May 1586, they wisely left Prague for Leipzig with most commentators in agreement that they were wise to leave. Later Dee learnt the Papal Nuncio (Latin: nuntius= 'messenger and a powerful representative of the Pope') held a document that accused Dee and Kelly of forbidden practises. Pope Sixtus V had sent a letter to Rudolph commanding the Emperor to arrest them and send them to Rome for questioning and imprisonment, even possible death.

Wherever they went they were followed by the wrath of the Pope who shadowed them like Nemesis, as did the various political interests of the day. The latter either wanted to grind their particular axe or gain the secret of the Midas touch before anyone else did and it depended who got to Dee and Kelly first for their own ends — holy blood or holy oil.

They were expelled from the Emperor's dominions and most agree they were very fortunate to escape. Prior to this Dee had been thinking of going to Italy where he anticipated a cordial welcome from those courts that patronised the arts and letters.

Privately Dee had been warned against taking such a journey being told that it would have dire consequences for him because of the charges of heresy and magic that had already been preferred against him at Rome. Wisely, Dr. Dee decided against taking this particular course. After all, there was no need to give the Vatican more work against heretics than it could already handle, it already had quite enough to deal with in that direction.

Their next benefactor was the powerful Count Rosenberg of Bohemia who had the papal decree mitigated. The Count gave them his protection, the Count let them stay in one of his residences in Trebona and they stayed there for approximately two years from the 19th of September 1586.

About this time, Dee received a magnificent offer from the Tzar of all the Russians to go and live in Moscow. Dee was promised he would get a house and 'be accounted as one of the chief men in the land.' He would further 'enjoy at his Imperial hands £2,000 sterling yearly stipende and his protector yearly a thousand rubbles, with my diet also to be allowed me free out of the emperour's own kitchen.'

Dee did not accept this astonishing and most generous of offers that came from Tzar, Ivan the Terrible in 1586. As said earlier, his son Arthur did accept the post in Russia and recommended by James I, though not for the same Tzar.

Dee had received four highly advantageous proposals from successive Emperor's of Germany, Charles V, Ferdinand, Maximillian II and Rudolph II. It is not given why Dee did not accept the Tzar's offer as it would have solved so much for him as he was always in need of funds, but he decided to stay with Rosenberg. Since arriving on the Continent, their fortunes had fluctuated alarmingly with little middle ground and it always seemed to be either feast or famine.

Matters took a turn for the worse in Bohemia because much of the time Kelly was either reluctant or refusing to skry, he indulged in fits of bad temper and he took to being moody with bouts of sulking. Dee was used to this state of affairs because he had dealt with them so many times before, but this time he knew that it was more serious.

This impasse went on for quite a while and as suddenly as it had begun — it ended. Kelly declared he would resume crystal gazing once more but Dee would wish he had not started again when Kelly revealed the ‘results’ of the ‘skrying session’ to him. Kelly at first refused to share the revelations with Dee until Dee insisted that he must.

Kelly said Madimi had counselled that they should ‘share all things in common, including their wives.’ Such an idea of course is presumed a modern one but as I have always said — is there really anything new under the sun?

This suggestion stuck horror into the Dee household. Dee’s wife Jane ‘fell weeping and trembling for full quarter of an hour, then burst forth in a fury of anger.’ After all, she was being asked to assume an inferior position, as Kelly’s paramour while remaining the wife of John Dee for whom she had great affection. Dee scolded Madimi for ‘uttering such unmeet words’ and for a long time he would have nothing to do with it.

Dee suggested the command meant no more than they should live a more cordial and closer relationship but Dee was told by Kelly that the spirits insisted on the exact interpretation of their command to the letter.

Eventually Dee’s resistance was overcome as I think Kelly knew it would be and it was decided all would obey the counsel of Madimi, which Dee assumed to be the will of heaven. On the 3rd of May, Anno 1587 (by the new reckoning) all parties signed a document that ended with the words — ‘And all things between us to be common, as God by sundry means willed us to do.’ Quite an agreement for all concerned.

No record is extant of the outcome of this arrangement, which did not seem very angelic to say the least, but we do know that it did not last very long. A shortage of money and quarrelling between the wives probably made the agreement untenable and whether it was God’s decree or not, it ended comparatively quickly.

Dee’s thoughts were ever turning towards England again and he had often expressed the wish to return home. Kelly however, decided he would stay and they decided to terminate the partnership. In April 1587, Kelly resigned as skryer to Dee. Later when Dee returned to England, young Arthur Dee did his best to act in Kelly’s stead but as previously said, it was not wholly successful, not as it had been with Edward Kelly.

I believe the mutual sharing of all they had between them including their wives, said to be the will of Madimi, was definitely a known time when Kelly deliberately cheated and manipulated Dee for his own ends. Kelly was well aware of Dee’s absolute faith in the angelic visitants and he knew Dee regarded them with genuine awe, wonder and with complete humility. Although I normally give Kelly some leeway with his little schemes, not this time.

Of course Kelly manipulated Dee to some extent and probably for all the usual reasons, money or other material benefits, however, this is not anything new in our relationships with others. Children do it most of time, as part of the learning process and examples are numerous, such as tears that are turned off like a tap when they have got what they want as do most families. Very few of us have clean hands regarding manipulation if we honest.

Kelly knew no matter how much Dee may object in the beginning, he would eventually do whatever the skrying commanded because Dee genuinely believed it was God who commanded him through the angelic visitors, this time covert manipulation became overt betrayal — this was a step too far.

It is my belief that this time Kelly without doubt, blatantly exploited Dee's intense inner piety and belief while he was very low and far away from his native England. It is a puzzle what he had in mind unless as often happens in cases like this, we are being too generous. We are wrongly assuming Kelly's intention was something brilliantly clever, complicated and devious, when it was ridiculously simple.

It was simply a case of one man coveting and lusting after another man's wife or wanting the fruit of another man's orchard. It seems Kelly had been on bad terms with his wife Joan for sometime and he had developed a passionate attraction for Jane Dee who was younger and the more graceful and charming of the two women.

There can be no doubt that the partnership between Dee and Kelly was over because this was something that Dee could not gloss over as he could with small misdemeanours of the past because this one went beyond the pale and what was worse, Kelly used the angels to compound his deceit. Let us deal with Kelly first before we follow Dee and his family back to England because his story is the shorter of the two as Kelly was the first to leave this life.

Before we do this however, let us enlarge upon the position of alchemy in England a little more to get it into a wider perspective regarding the times. Briefly, alchemy did not make the rapid strides in England that it had on the Continent. Alchemists in England were few and far between with their labours secret and more often than not castigated by the Church, the enmity of those who had not gained the infinite wealth alchemy had promised and the bigotry of the vulgar.

However, as the numbers practising alchemy grew, government and church became both interested and suspicious. What if what was said about alchemy was true and these alchemists could actually coin gold from a base metal? What effect would it have on personal wealth and ambition — and how do we get our share?

In 1434, a law was passed that decreed making gold or silver was a serious felony — but of course, let us know if you are successful. In 1455, Henry VI issued four patents with respect of certain citizens, namely chemists, knights, monks, mass-priests and the like of London. These patents gave these citizens 'leave and licence to undertake the task of discovering the philosopher's stone.' This would be 'to the great benefit of the realm, and enabling the King to pay all the debts of the Crown in real gold and silver.' (My italics).

The inclusion of the monks and priests as well as laymen may not be as arbitrary as it at first appears. Monks and priests could already perform the transubstantiation of the Eucharist with the bread and wine. They attempted to make base sinners into golden saints, so perhaps they stood the greatest likelihood of effecting the transmutation of base metal into pure gold materially — well more so than anyone else considering who they were working under — even though such works were usually regarded as being ‘the work of Satan and a burning matter.’

Kelly went off taking the Elixir Vitae with him naturally and it would seem, he immediately went back to his old ways but, when he arrived in the Bohemian capital, he was promptly arrested by the Emperor. He managed to contrive his release and for a time he wandered around the country. He had been knighted in Prague by Rudolph II for his alchemical work and made a Marshal of Bohemia. Dee had written that Kelly had made gold, however, it was the Red and White Powders of Projection that Kelly could not make.

An impatient Emperor Rudolph was finding out that Kelly was no Rumpelstiltskin who could produce the promised gold from straw and to get out of his serious predicament Kelly assured Rudolph he could manufacture the promised gold but he would have to go to Prague to consult with John Dee. This subterfuge worked and he was allowed to go to Prague however, he was very closely guarded as was his house and any chance of escape was effectually blocked. His experiments proved futile because he did not have any more of the Red Transmutation Powder because so much had been lost when the container was broken all those years ago when he first bought the powders.

Kelly knew that time was getting as short as the Emperor’s temper and his rage got the better of him. In an abortive attempt to escape, he killed one of his guards and was arrested a second time and taken to the Castle Zemer. Kelly himself confirms this in the introduction of his alchemical treatise The Stone of the Philosophers, which is dedicated to Rudolph. He writes, ‘Though I have already twice suffered chains and imprisonment in Bohemia, an indignity which has been offered to me in no other part of the world . . . et cetera.’

In the circumstances in which he found himself, I feel a little more humility may have served him better with Rudolph, more so than aggrieved indignation and pious self-righteousness. Dee had already returned to England before this point of his story and despite the last distasteful episode between them, their parting appears to have been friendly enough and they continued to correspond for a time.

Dee does not seem to have held any animosity towards Kelly. His diary for the 18th of March 1595 records ‘Mr. Francis Garland came this morning to visit me, and had much talk with me of Sir Edward Kelly.’

Elizabeth wrote to Rudolph claiming Kelly as her subject but Rudolph refused her request for his release because of the serious charge of murder, which Elizabeth could not gainsay. Let us come back once more to the early accusation against Kelly that he was guilty of illegal coining that allegedly lost him his ears.

I find it strange that a monarch would try to help a man who was (reputedly) disfigured for forging the coin of the realm and Elizabeth's realm to boot. It would be somewhat out of character for Elizabeth if she had done this and I am sure she of all people would have known if Kelly had a criminal record, what the charges were and obviously the outcome.

It was during his time in prison that Kelly wrote his alchemical treatise. The Stone of the Philosophers, dedicated to Rudolph as said earlier. The work however, did not have the desired effect of softening the Emperor and with it died the hope that it would gain him his freedom. Rudolph was smarting under the unfulfilled promise of the wealth of Croesus that would solve his debts and extravagance.

What royal or religious house was not seeking access to unlimited funds to realize their personal aims and more power on the stage of the world, then as now? Even if it meant turning a blind eye to the means used to get the gold and despite the probable fiendish source from which (in those times) all this largesse was supposed to come — after all what is a soul or two, if great wealth is involved in the matter — let the devil take the hindmost

Kelly's situation was growing desperate by the hour. If you mix murder to alleged sorcery, put in a dash of necromancy and heresy. Add to the mixture an Emperor's unrequited greed for gold that has not been delivered, you have quite a lethal brew and one that will match the bite of any 'worm of Nilus.' Kelly was in no doubt that 'the chalice from the palace' was meant for him and him alone.

Although not mentioned anywhere, I am sure we will find the Papal Nuncio (remember him) patiently waiting in the wings for whichever of the two heretics he could get his hands on. This was not good news for Kelly, especially if it was the one that had interrogated them when they were in Prague around the 6th of May 1586. The nuncio had said (privately it seems) he would 'do all in his power to destroy them.' Further, he added 'if it had not been for the sake of appearances, he would have had Kelly thrown out of the window at the time.' So much for 'love ye your enemies.'

To be fair even to the Papal Nuncio, Kelly was perhaps unwisely for the time, predicting unfavourably regarding Catholic prelates, priests and those in high stations who make the rules. Among other suggestions, he said they should reform, suggesting that they teach and live Christ by their word and conduct, in this way they would achieve a speedy reformation of Christianity. Kelly said his little speech, almost certainly with Dee nodding his head in approval in the background and it did not go down very well despite the presence of the 'smiling' Papal Nuncio.

Kelly knew that the only chance he had of survival was to escape but had to make his escape from a high turret and he attempted to do this sometime during November 1595. He knotted his sheets together but they did not hold him because he was now a man of some bulk. The sheets parted and he fell on a prison wall below. He broke both legs and suffered severe multiple injuries, he died of his wounds shortly afterwards at the ripe old age of forty-two years.

The only loose thread in this part of the tale is Kelly's wife Joan because by the end of the tale she is no longer mentioned anywhere. Four possibilities suggest themselves. Kelly took her with him, he deserted her then and there or later, she left him after the 'sharing of wives' episode or she came back to England with the Dee family.

If it was the last I think she would have been mentioned somewhere by Dee as he usually recorded everything, but no mention of her is made by either Dee or Kelly. If she did stay with Kelly, the poor woman's circumstances hardly bear thinking about.

Now let us return to John Dee and his family. The Queen gave John Dee permission to return to England but it is possible that he was directed to do so as a letter to the Queen from Dee, written in Trebona and dated the 10th of November 1588, implies. In his letter Dee, written in a beautifully, clear hand, thanks her for calling 'me, Mr Kelly and our families hoame into your Brytish Earthly Paradise and Monarchic incomparable.'

Dee landed again at Gravesend on the 2nd of December 1589 and he was received with kindness by Elizabeth at Richmond a day or two later and before the year was over, he once more settled in quietly at his house at Mortlake.

Dee found things very different in England for things were not the same as when he left, he was to suffer great slander, more strident than it ever was in the past, neglect followed and eventually abject poverty. Dee was still not without friends but those who could grant him protection, position or an income were either old, out of public office or dead. Leicester died in 1588, followed by Walsingham in 1590 and Burghley succumbed in 1598.

At court, it was a time of great turmoil, Elizabeth was growing old and could no longer control the warring factions around her who sensed that an era was ending, nor could she keep them apart and they were almost fighting openly.

Most people were well aware that the old order was changing and it was a time to consolidate personal ambitions and positions, without doubt for some it was a time to settle old scores. Who had time to bother with an old man whose star was already waning for he obviously had no place in the 'new heaven' about to flourish at court, the 'new stars' wanting to shine were totally ruthless in seeking position and power.

It is reasonable to assume that some were glad to see the once favourite of the Queen was no longer able to rely upon the special royal protection and favour he once enjoyed and they did not.

There can be little doubt that the hostility was more overt than had been in the past because there was less chance of repercussions. Who could be seen defending or associating with a man of John Dee's reputation with a king about to ascend the English throne that greatly feared magic and witchcraft?

Dee made many appeals for positions to Elizabeth without success. He managed to get a minor appointment at St. Paul's Cathedral but left in 1595 to accept the position of Warden of Christie's College, Manchester. In 1605, he was forced to relinquish the post because of the hatred of the Fellows there.

He attempted further studies with the shrewstone with the aid of a skryer called Bartholomew Hickman who I believe saw quite a good deal and his son Arthur but as said, neither made significant headway with the work even though they did their best. In keeping with others I cannot believe that every skryer that John Dee employed came only with the intention of tricking and manipulating him.

John Dee was present at every skrying session and even though he said that he saw imperfectly, he was an extremely powerful man even into old age and I cannot believe that he did not add something to the proceedings.

Agrippa, a favourite and well-read author of Dee stressed that the key to these exacting studies lay in 'dignification.' This he part explains in the sentence 'the dignifying of men to this so sublime vertue and power.' Occult Philosophy, Book III. Dee's funds by now had become very seriously run down with little chance of their restoration. On the 24th of March 1603, Elizabeth died at the grand old age of 69 years, which for the times was quite remarkable, thereby ending a reign lasting some 45 years.

Elizabeth was succeeded by James VI of Scotland who became James I of England and on the 4th of June 1604, the new kings twenty-two year reign over England began. On The 5th of June 1604, Dee presented a petition to the new king at Greenwich. Hoping to clear his name, he implores the king's protection from those 'Brainsicke, Rashe, Spitefull, and Disdainfull Countrey men' who, by their accusations and slander, had made his life a trial and tribulation.

He offers himself for punishment of death, stoning or burning at the stake, if any can prove the charges against him. He writes that none of the great number of 'very strange and frivolous fables and histories reported of me were true.' Dee insisted, as he had all his long life, he only sought beneficial contact with the angelic hierarchy and he never consorted with devils or demons. The precedence for his work of invoking the angels was the Bible; he considered the nature of all demons to be evil with which no contact should be attempted.

The vilification and treatment that Dee experienced at this time was the prime cause for the Act passed against personal slander in 1604. Dee expressed his gratitude for their protection against slander to the 'Honourable Members of the Commons in the Present Parliament.' The King gave Dee no satisfaction with his petition though most agreed that with this particular King on the throne he was really lucky to be ignored and left alone.

It was not the time to be involved with his occult studies or mention them in his solicitation because these seemed to overshadow all the previous work he had done for the realm. The monarch left Dee alone to die in peace and the final chapters of Dee's life are sad in the extreme.

After relinquishing his final post in 1605, he returned a broken man to Mortlake. His wife Jane had died shortly before returning there, Dee was very fond and loving of her as the mother of his eight children and her death and his present circumstances must have laid him extremely low.

The matter of his children is in some dispute. Some have said, including myself in the past, there were eight children and all by his second wife Jane. Some say his son Arthur was already four years old when he married Jane Fromond in February 1578 and he had a child or children by his first wife. However, a genealogy of eight children exists in Dee's hand with the last child being born in 1595 when Dee was sixty-eight years old.

The Compendious Rehearsall near its conclusion shows he wrote to Queen saying: 'I and my wife, our seaven children, and our servants (seaventeene of us in all) do this day . . . and so forth.' The 'seaven children' mentioned were already born but the eighth child can be accounted for with little trouble. The Compendious Rehearsal was compiled and presented to the Queen around the year 1592 when there were seven children however, the eighth child was born in 1595.

Dee's copy of The Laws of Hywel Ada and I have only seen as a few pages and a facsimile/photograph that Madeline had, I have a good idea where she got the information from but she did have good contacts for things like this but I do not know what happened to these sheets after her death.

I was only interested in the genealogy that Dee had written in the bottom margins and bless him for his habit of doing this. I took notes of the names and dates of birth for future reference when the Enochian Courses would be written for the School.

The genealogy naturally started with John Dee and Jane Fromand and there were lines to 1. Arthurus 1579; 2. Katharina 1581; 3. Rolandus 1583; 4. Michael 1585; 5. Theodorus 1588; 6. Madimi 1590; 7. Francisca 1592 and 8. Margureta 1595, making eight children in all consisting of four boys and four girls.

Madimi Dee was christened on the 5th of March 1590, Margurete Dee was christened on the 27th of August 1595 and both had distinguished god-parents present at the baptismal ceremony.

By now John Dee was a sick man and it is possible his mental powers were beginning to fail him, none of which helped his situation and neither did the unjustified treatment meted out to him during this time as Dee was a sensitive and cultured man whose main interest in life were his books and learning. To earn a living he had to tell fortunes and cast horoscopes and this only served to give credence to the wild accusations of his enemies.

Contemporaries tell us he often had to sell a book or another possession 'to buy his dinner.' Dee's dutiful daughter Katherine, his second born, nursed him until his death. Finally, in December 1608, he was fortunate to be granted release and a peaceful death from the travails of this world. Dee was buried in the chancel of Mortlake Church and many years later the antiquarian Aubrey was shown a marble slab said to belong to his tomb.

His son Arthur appeared to prosper and I often wonder what happened to his family and descendants. As written, Arthur was the eldest child being the first-born and I often wonder where the family and their descendant are?

However, after the 1992 dictionary was published I met a charming and intelligent young woman who said she could prove her descent from the line of John Dee if I desired her to do so, but I did not feel it was in any way necessary, she was attracted to the Enochian Dictionary because she knew so little of her illustrious relative. We read that Arthur was a physician, perhaps some of his medical training from his father, to the Czar of Russia, then to our own Charles I.

Charles was king from 1625 and was beheaded in Whitehall in 1649, but where and how Arthur Dee fits in these twenty-four years, I do not know because Arthur did not (that I know) keep a diary as his father did but he did write.

There is the Fasiculus Chemicus by Arthur Dee. It was translated by James Hasolle, which I believe was a pseudonym of Elias Ashmole, in 1650, of London, the title is Latin, Fasiculus= 'a small bundle, packet' and Chemicu= 'chemicals (?)

Arthur Dee finally established himself in Norwich where he died. The situation regarding Dee and Kelly and their work is changing, especially regarding John Dee who is not now always portrayed only as a 'conjurer' and 'speaker with imps and devils.' People now seem to be trying to make a just evaluation of Dee's life and work and if they are just in their efforts, I think Dee will fare far better today than in the past and it pleases me because I think he justly deserves it.

These short notes do not give this great Englishman the justice he deserves but new works are rectifying this. I do not feel disposed to apologize if my personal bias is showing regarding Dr. John Dee. I will stand up and be counted as one who is for Dee and against those who are not. Dr John Dee was a sincere seeker after knowledge and truth. He sought the hidden mysteries that govern the Universe and was wholeheartedly genuine in his intent and experiments.

He pioneered discoveries in scientific fields and many of these were ahead of their time, like Francis Bacon. I have already listed many of his achievements for the reader, the catalogue is not complete by any means but new biographies are now more readily available to fill this point, as said elsewhere, this work has always been primarily the Dictionary of the Enochian Language from the partnership of John Dee and Edward Kelly.

I have long studied Occult Philosophy and its associated subjects. Although these subjects are a good part of my life, they are not my sole interests any more than they were John Dee's, I have many other interests and like Dee, I would be annoyed if my life were judged only by these activities.

In the beginning I admit the Enochian experiments of Dee and Kelly were all that I knew regarding the man and I knew very little of him and his life. However, I did start to wonder who the man really was, I decided to go deeper into his life and affairs and was amazed at what I found, finally curiosity became understanding and respect for what I found.

It was a long time ago now but I decided then that I would do all I could in my own small way to defend Dr. John Dee in whatever way I could. Much in the same way that I would not allow a good and true friend to be slandered or maligned in their absence now. Of course, I am not saying that John Dee was without fault, I am sure he had his faults and a dark side but I do not think he needs any whitewashing from anyone including me.

Dee was a moving force behind the explorations of Francis Drake and others. For the benefit of the realm, he wanted to build a fishing fleet to rival the Dutch to harvest food from the seas around our shores. Dee gave fresh impetus to the revival of the Arthurian legends. Dee's diary reads '1578, June 30th — I told Mr. Daniel Rogers, Mr. Hackluyt of the Middle Temple being by, that Kyng Arthur and King Maty, both of them, did conquer Gelindia, lately called Friseland, which he so noted presently in his written copy of Mon . . . thesis (?) for he had not printed boke thereof.'

While on the subject of King Arthur, it has been suggested that Dee convinced Queen Elizabeth to lay claim through an earlier exploration and voyage of discovery to America, saying it was discovered by King Arthur. He may have 'convinced her' but she did not make any claims regarding the matter that I know of.

This may have been an apocryphal story and many such stories must have accumulated around such figures as John Dee and Edward Kelly because they were born for them and it comes as no surprise that they collected them without any effort on their part. I do not believe they had the time to do all the things that were being laid at their door, otherwise they would have had little to even eat and drink.

Contemporaries writing of Dee say he was an upright and just man, his demeanour was grave, he was modest and abstemious in his habits and his disposition was studious. He was highly respected by his neighbours and was considered to be 'of benevolent temper.' He was often called upon to arbitrate in any differences between them and his advice and arbitration was usually accepted and was always considered to be unbiased. Without any doubt, John Dee loved England and he worked only for her benefit and advancement.

However, even when he records that he studied eighteen hours a day when young, taking only two hours for meals, for prayers and four hours for sleep is he given praise for his diligence or lauded for being studious, commended for his hard work and single-minded pursuit of knowledge? Of course not!

Davenport Adams in his book Witch, Warlock and Magician (1898) writes with a smug arrogance that marks the entire book that this was 'an unhealthy division of time that probably over stimulated his cerebral system and predisposed him to delusions and caprices of the imagination.' Lewis Spence really overworks the word 'dupe' to a point of boredom. The poor man cannot win with these jackals when they take their chance to attack from the safe distance of time or when their 'prey' is unable to defend themselves.

Even if the Enochian experiments were proven a hoax with the benefit of hindsight. Even if it could prove without any shadow of doubt that Kelly duped Dee into genuinely thinking he was talking with the Angels entirely for his own ends. Where is the generosity that should at least acknowledge John Dee's rightful place in the history of this realm, which he strides like the Colossus of Rhodes, there is so much that can be found to praise and admire.

It seems little to ask that history should give due honour to John Dee and his house for his achievements, but you cannot expect big deeds or generosity from small minds or people, you never could, then as now.

Why are Dee's critics so intractable and persistent in denying Dee's obvious achievements that are recorded fact? His achievements are fact and they are not 'the fiction' that his critics claim the Enochian experiments were. However, despite this, I confidently predict Dee and Kelly will outlast most of their critics and their works, for many their names will only be found as footnotes in Dee's story in the final analysis and they will be remembered only in connection with Dee.

When Gerardus Mercator wrote to Dee in 1577, he simply addressed his letter to 'John Dee's house at Mortlake on the Thames, near London.' What is more, it got there without any trouble and that is what I call recognition considering the simplicity of the address and the standing of the man who sent it from the continent.

In the person of John Dee, England was given a second Bacon and another Dr Mirabilis. John Aubrey (1626-1697) called him '... one of the ornaments of his Age' adding only the 'ignorant branded him a conjurer.' As said, I am sure that Dee is not without fault, how many lives could stand the public scrutiny his life has been subjected to and come out of it unscathed? I have long thrown away the 'first stone' I was keeping to cast a long time ago.

Perhaps his life is a cautionary tale to consign to the flames any private diaries or papers before 'shuffling off this mortal coil' in case they become public property with similar results. I do not think Dee ever intended his private diaries for such open scrutiny, I am sure they were for private transmission to those who, like him, were genuine seekers after truth and I for one am glad we got them.

However the world judges Enochia it would be a poorer place if John Dee and Edward Kelly had never lived. There would be many unpublished books, including this one. I wonder if Shakespeare would have written his last play The Tempest without having John Dee to use for his model for the magician Prospero. There are thoughts that they may have known each other and perhaps had even met (?) I have seen nothing to show yea or nay but I really do not see how such two exceptional men could have avoided each other in Elizabethan London or why they should want to, even if it was only a brief acquaintance.

The details of the Angel Conversations and the rest from the magical diaries are reasonably well before the public now so there is no need to elaborate on the experiments here. These notes are mainly biographical for the dictionary.

However, a brief summary of Enochia will be found at the end of these notes and they are there to help to place Enochia into perspective and show some of the source material for those new to the tale. Naturally, I agree with Dee and those commentators who believe Kelly did have some remarkable gifts and he obviously possessed the old Celtic gift of ‘double vision.’ Dee recorded that Kelly produced physical manifestations and that he possessed the ‘gift of tongues.’

Dee did not appear to have a great knowledge of alchemy but he obviously regarded Kelly’s transmutations as being satisfactory and he had a high opinion of his ability about which he was quite generous. John Dee had greater interest in the mysteries and visions of the crystal and angelic shrewstone than alchemy than judging Kelly and I am quite sure he knew what he was dealing with.

Dee was meticulous and scrupulous regarding all forms of experimentation and because of his scientific training; I would be surprised if he did not follow and check all the stages of any experiments from conception to conclusion that were undertaken by Kelly or anyone else for that matter.

I repeat because it is important, I am not writing that Dee could never be fooled for that would be patently silly. I believe that he could, we all can but because he may have done foolish things, that did not necessarily make him a foolish man. Neither was he stupid every waking minute of his life or walking permanently around in some befuddled fog, as some would have us believe and ready to be tripped up by any mountebank that crossed his path — he had seen it all before.

Neither do I believe Kelly was quite the sink of iniquity history and his critics would paint him, equally I do not think his hands were always clean, at times, I believe they were decidedly grubby and sticky. He recognized opportunities and had the wit to take advantage of them, today we would probably call him enterprising, assertive and some would even say he was an entrepreneur, but if you give a dog a bad name.

I believe that Kelly was capable of being decent and straightforward even if such times were not as frequent as we hope for. He was not an unremitting rogue on duty twenty-four hours a day, planning only to see what he could get out of life in general and John Dee in particular, which is the way most writers of the past seem to portray him.

One thing I do believe, Dee was not the totally helpless dupe of Kelly. I think Dee knew what he was dealing with in Kelly but he evidently thought him worth the trouble because of the obvious talent he had for skrying when it was controlled and kept in check. At the time of writing, I feel his gift of second sight may well have been above board, even though his use of it was not so sometimes.

I think John Dee knew Kelly had a talent that was not disciplined and like a burst water main, it needed control and direction to make it work with profit. Dee may well have been too trusting at times but I also believe this was his basic nature and he could not do otherwise. However, according to Hamlet: 'There is nothing either good or bad, but thinking makes it so.'

He was not the old fool maundering in his beard that some would have us believe and his diaries show that he kept a sharp eye on most matters with little escaping him. My mother often said that more could be achieved by what you 'don't see' than what you 'do,' particularly in relationships — bearing in mind Lord Nelson and Trafalgar — she thought that a blind eye could sometimes be quite helpful in life.

Concerning Meric Casaubon

Parts of the magical diaries were published in 1659 by Meric Casaubon (1599-1671) under short the short title of: A True and Faithful RELATION of What Passed for many Yeers Between Dr. JOHN DEE and SOME SPIRITS. Casaubon's work has been issued in a facsimile edition, permanently linking the name of Casaubon to John Dee. If you have any interest in Dee and Kelly you can hardly get away from Casaboun, so perhaps it would be profitable to ask who is this family Casaubon.

Florence Estienne Meric Casaubon (1599-1671) is an English classical scholar, though he was actually born in Geneva, Switzerland on the 4th of August 1599. At aged eleven, he joined his father Isaac (see below) in England to complete his education at Eton and Oxford taking his B.A. in 1618. Meric defended his father against the attacks of certain Catholics when impostors published a work using his father's name in vain as the author.

For the above Casaubon gained the favour of King James and I believe his work on John Dee did likewise I am sure. James I was the author of Demonology, which was later to become the textbook of witch-hunters, King James did not regard John Dee favourably but he at least he did let him live out the remainder of his life until his death, in comparative peace without any interference from the throne.

Remember Dee's petition to the King upon his accession to the throne, James ignored both it and John Dee showing that did not hold Dee in the same approbation as the former occupant of the throne of England did.

James conferred upon Casaubon a prebendary stall at Canterbury cathedral. A prebendary stall is the seat of a prebendary in a church, into which he is inducted by the dean and chapter. Prebendary, Latin, praebenda= 'a payment to a private person from a public source. The stipend or maintenance granted to a canon of a cathedral or collegiate church out of its own estates.'

In the Middle Ages the endowment of most non-monastic cathedrals was divided into separate portions known as 'prebends.' Each designed for the support of a single member of the chapter and those who held them were known as 'prebendaries.' In some English cathedrals, the ancient titles have been retained without the income and it is now used as an honorary title.

During the Civil War Casaubon lost his living and lived in retirement, refusing to acknowledge the authority of Cromwell yet Cromwell asked him to write an impartial history of the events. Despite the many inducements offered he declined the offer of many lucrative posts and after the Restoration, he was reinstated at Canterbury.

He devoted the rest of his life to literary work but he was always overshadowed by his father's vast reputation, which was quite formidable — stat magni nominis umbra. It must be acknowledged that Meric Casaubon's works were highly thought of and scholarly. Casaubon died at Canterbury on the 14th of July 1671.

The life and works of his father is another matter because they occupy many pages in reference books. Briefly, Isaac Casaubon (1559-1614) was French but naturalized English, he is a classical scholar born in Geneva. Isaac was a professor of Greek and a consummate Greek scholar. A master of ancient learning and like Dee he was an avid collector of books, often having copies made. Isaac was a professor of Greek at the age of 22 not unlike Dee at 23 years old.

In October 1610, he came to England as a highly respected scholar and he died in great suffering on the 1st of July 1614. Taking Isaac's love of learning, his love of collecting books and the like, especially Greek, I am sure Isaac may well have been aware of Dee and his works and interests.

It is known that Isaac Casaubon and John Dee had one trait in common, both would often write a short guide to the contents of a page in both top and bottom margins if it took both. Frequently, it was a list of important words or topics while at other times it was very explicit and detailed. Now and then, the side margins were used and of course, they were not the only ones to follow this practise as plenty of books show.

In textbooks, regarded as working books and not purely literary reading, I had already followed this practise as thousands have before me. I did likewise in both private textbooks used and in my Schoolwork, not necessarily criticism but cross-references and observations to other works on the shelves. Small margins in text or working books were useless.

Their dates are close and although Isaac came to England some two years after Dee's death, you do feel that if these men had met, they would have been well-suited because in many ways their lives and interests were complementary. The above short biography is a disservice to Isaac Casaubon who is buried in Westminster Abbey and in 1623 a monument was erected to him by his friend Thomas Morton, the Bishop of Durham.

Meric Casaubon warns the reader that Dee's work is to be thought of as 'A Work of Darkness.' Casaubon's work was published as a warning to those who thought that they did not need the authority of Kings, Bishops or the Church and such people were following their own authority, claiming God alone would direct them. At this time, the authorities had deprived Casaubon of his church stipend and living.

Casaubon's book was popular and far too popular to suppress, which authorities at one time wanted to do. It was 'eagerly bought up as a great and curious novelty.' Thankfully, others thought it a jaundiced and biased view that had the sole purpose of slandering Dee, which in some quarters it did successfully and the backwash is only just subsiding now.

The work was challenged as such by some when published but to little avail. Some think the volume represented Dee as a deluded, foolish old man and they totally ignored his other talents, science, mathematics, navigation, astronomy and all the rest, in fact Casaubon's work is a perfect example of Jedwood Justice or Abingdon Law. It is true Casaubon tempers the wind to the shorn lamb by admitting that Dee deals with the spirits with simplicity and is sincere in his endeavours and he does write that Dee 'commanded them and did not make a compact with them' — generosity indeed!

I am assuming that this display of munificence was thought to put matters to right and show Casaubon's proclivity for fairness by giving credit where credit was due, no matter how small or how late. Whenever your critic or opponent starts listing your assets and 'being fair,' you can usually expect a heavy bill with interest for the privilege.

John Webster (in 1677) defended Dee's reputation writing that Dee was deliberately slandered by Casaubon and questioned how 'Christian-like' it was for Casaubon to deliberately present Dee as a 'wicked and infamous person.' Webster said that Casaubon's malicious intent regarding Dee was 'to register him among the damned.'

Dee fared little better at the hands of his first biographer Thomas Smith in his Vita Joannis Dee London (1707). Smith for the most appeared to accept Casaubon as holy writ and thought the Angelic Conferences were an 'execrable insanity.' These two men, Casaubon and Smith, have done more to damage Dee over the years than the rest of the later detractors put together and may they rest in peace — until I get there.

As late as the 1920's Lewis Spence in his Encyclopaedia of Occultism writes of the angelic conversations saying, 'whoever has stomach for the perusal of a great deal of absurdity and not a little blasphemy, may consult the folio published in 1659 by the learned Meric Casaubon.' So many early took Meric Casaubon without question as the standard by which John Dee should be judged — I do not!

The whole article concerning John Dee would have Dee assigned to an asylum for the mentally unstable and the reader with him, if they chose to demur and defend the reputation of Dee. Fortunately, John Dee has on his side such men as Elias Ashmole and others and anyone who is interested in John Dee, his life and work has much to thank the support of this enlightened man.

It is a strange story that recounts how the papers of Dee were saved from the Great Fire of London of 1666, though we did 'lose about half of them' through ignorance of their worth even though it was unintentional. What was lost we do not know, only that a large amount was burnt through a lack of understanding of what they were as they could not be read or understood, with some 'being used to line pye tins or burnt on the fire

The story is written on the flyleaf of British Museum manuscript (Liber Mysteriorum I-V: Sloane MS. 3188) on which Ashmole writes how became into possession of Dee's manuscripts. On the 20th of August 1672, the Dee books were delivered to his office in Broad Street from a good friend Thomas Wale, who was a warden at the Tower of London. Ashmole writes that Wale wanted to exchange these works for 'one of myne' to which he readily agreed. On The 10th of September, Wale called on Ashmole with his wife, she told Ashmole a strange tale regarding how the works were found by accident and so they were preserved. If they had not then later events would have surely lost them for ever to us.

Her present husband, Thomas Wale was her second marriage, the first was to a confectioner called Jones and they lived 'at the plow' in Lumbard Street, London at the time. She and her husband went to Adle Street 'among the joiners to buy some house-hold-stuff' and they saw 'a chest of extraordinary neate worke which they bought.'

The owner of the business told them the chest had belonged to a Mr John Woodall-Chirurgeon. Ashmole knew both the name and the family Ashmole thought the chest had been bought by Woodall-Chirurgeon's father after Dee's death at the time Dee's goods went up for sale.

Twenty years later and some four years before the Great Fire, Mrs Jones (as she was then) and her husband decided to move the chest from its usual place. When they did so they heard something rattling about inside, they had presumed the chest was empty, having emptied the draws to make it lighter for moving.

Her husband discovered a private drawer under another drawer or till at the rear at the right hand end. Her husband put a piece of iron bar in a small crevice found there and out came a private drawer. When he opened it he found ‘divers Bookes in Manuscript and Papers, together with a little box, and therein a chaplet of olive Beades, and a Cross of the same wood, hanging at the end of them.’

As said earlier, they did not think the manuscripts had any special worth being undecipherable, not capable of being understood and because of this, a servant girl ‘did waste about one half of them under fyres and other like uses’ such as ‘lining pye tins.’ Thank goodness when they saw what she was doing with the material they decided to preserve the remainder and keep it safe. Two years later Mr Jones died and in the Great Fire of London, the chest perished in the flames because it was too heavy to move.

We must bless Mrs Jones/Wale because she had great presence of mind to take the books with her when she fled with her goods to the safety of Moon Fields until the danger of the great conflagration passed, when she brought them back safely and preserved them.

When she married again to Mr. Wale, he examined them and she gave her consent for him to send them to Ashmole for assessment and this is how Elias Ashmole gained possession of them. It does not bear thinking about what has been lost to us at the hands of the servant girl who ‘did waste about one half of them’ — she has a lot to answer for.

We can only speculate why Dee hid them away the way he did, though secret compartments as security for things considered valuable were fairly widespread in those days as old furniture and old houses prove. Were they put there to be out of sight of unsympathetic eyes, to keep them from those who would use them as evidence for persecution against him in a less sympathetic period? We have said many times that King James was not as liberal as Queen Elizabeth regarding such matters and James would not turn a blind eye as she had done, although he did leave Dee alone.

The King was an implacable enemy of witchcraft and such arts, he tightened the law regarding these practises and within a short time of his ascent to the English throne, such laws were changed to make convictions in these areas much easier to achieve.

There can be little doubt the contents of the secret drawer were close to Dee’s heart. I am sure when alone he would take the papers out to read and hold them in his later years, when all the world appeared set against him as they were an important part of his life’s work. I feel it a reasonable assumption that Dee never intended to publish his research work because they were private and personal. One way or another as his story shows, they had cost him so much and in so many ways.

This form of knowledge and instruction, possibly as with the Key to the Hieroglyphic Monad, was often given through personal instruction or ‘ear to ear.’ It was knowledge he would not want to give to profane and unsophisticated minds that would not benefit from the teaching, he would not want to cast his pearls before swine but he would have been happy to impart it to the initiated or people that he chose to learn what he had to teach. He wisely knew that in the wrong hands or given to a mind that could not cope with the latent power within them and the information they possessed, they could do great harm and be dangerous.

Scholars of Dee's works suggest we may have lost the key to the Hieroglyphic Monad and many think the key was an oral explanation I wonder when Dee was getting old with illness, did he commit the key to paper? Dee cites two instances when he was 'given an audience with a royal personage' to explain the Monad. He tells us this explanation was given to their 'satisfaction or partial comprehension.' We can only be grateful the papers left to us were discovered before the chest and its hidden contents perished completely in the flames of the Great Fire of London and were lost forever.

It would be wrong to be all gloom and doom with the situation regarding Dee and Kelly as it is steadily improving as today's articles and books show. If only Casaubon had given the facts, instead of straining them through his over-zealous and intolerant filter.

Why could he not simply trust the reader and let them make up their own mind regarding Dee's texts and work as he did when he wrote his works and as John Webster suggested that he should? If he had and the reader did not understand it then what harm was done, I for one would remember him with greater kindness than I do.

Casaubon wrote in a letter that the purpose of publishing the work was to show those who consider themselves under the guidance of the spirit, or pretended inspiration are frequently 'really deluded' — once called 'not toeing the line.' Today's political correctness is nothing new though like all that has gone before it can for its own ends 'add colours to the chameleon, change shapes with Protheus for advantages and set the murderous Machiavel to school.' King Henry VI, Part III. Act.3: Sc.2.'

This above statement alone condemns to hell and damnation most of the Biblical prophets, including the rest of the 'deluded' creatures in the Bible, the Old and New Testaments, who thought they spoke with God and his Angels. If you remove all the prophets from the Old Testament and the angelic messengers, miracles and the rest from the New Testament, what a slender volume it would be and a very poor read to boot. Casaubon's stance hardly suggests impartiality regarding the case in hand and only serves to make others defensive and close ranks for Dee.

I suppose I am not much better than Casaubon really if I speak the truth. My strong bias for Dee and my demands for an unbiased judgement of him will probably hoist me by my own petard and what is more, using rules of my own making. I should be repentant and I willingly acknowledge the charges to be completely true — however, if the reader believes that because of this admission I will recant my stance — I will believe that they can knit fog.

Meric Casaubon was an erudite man and it is sad that he allowed his religious zeal to get the better of him and blind his usually excellent judgement. Zealots, whether religious, political or whatever causes they espouse always suffer from secret doubts about their faith and creed so they usually compensate for this by using force more than reasoning. This done with the worst kind of blindness — spiritual blindness — this usually results in a self-righteous infallibility, a narrowing of the vision as well as the arteries and much wind.

The Christian piety of John Dee was the equal of Casaubon's or anyone else for that matter and even Smith, Dee's first biographer, admits to that. Thank goodness, Dee's vision was less restrictive, gentler and having greater compassion.

What seems to upset the Casaubon's of the world is Dee's greater tolerance, his fervent confidence in the Christian credo, coupled with his robust, pagan belief in the magical arts — in any case pagans always make the best Christians by far. Dee saw no discrepancy in the combination or why the study of one should automatically preclude the other and why it should has often eluded me.

Some commentators think Dee may have culled some of his religious ideas from a secret sect called the 'Family of Love' and many famous scholars were members of this sect, which was virtually without dogma. Dee's friend Ortelius was a Famelist, as were many famous scholars of the time though it is not known if Dee was actually a member. We do know that Dee used a bookshop in London that had connections with the sect and I suspect that at least he may have been sympathetic to many of their ideas.

Famelist is a term of English origin that was later adopted by other languages to denote the members of the Familia Caritatis — the Family of Love. The society was founded by Hendrik Niclaes in about 1540 when he was endowed 'with the spirit of the true love of Jesus Christ' Hendrik Niclaes' chief apostle in England was Christopher Vitel, a native of Delft, an 'illuminate elder' who lived in Colchester and Southwark, though Vitel ultimately recanted. The basic doctrine is that 'all men are of one family and should love each other as brothers and sisters.'

Measures were taken against the cult but despite these, the Famelist's spread into the eastern countries and the society lingered into the early years of the 18th century. The Famelist attached no great importance to the outward display of religious ritual and because of this, there was no conflict of conscience with other Christian sects, they could join with any Christian church, live under most systems and agree to the authority of the land in which they found themselves, which sounds civilized enough I think.

The leading idea of its 'service of love' was a belief in the qualities of sympathy and tenderness for the moral and spiritual guidance of its members.

Thus, in an age of strife and polemics, it seemed to afford a refuge for quiet, gentle spirits and those with meditative temperaments — the ‘wel lyked’ John Dee in fact.

Our task is ending and I felt the need for some kind of epilogue to draw this part of the work to a satisfactory close. In my thoughts, I was going to write. ‘It is my hope we have drawn some threads in this tangled skein together.’ ‘Now we must end our journey . . . even in these short notes . . . we have travelled quite a long way’ and all the rest. It came out in the introduction to both editions of the dictionary where we speculated regarding the language confounded at the Tower of Babel.

Thanks to Mrs Wale, the papers of Dee and Kelly were saved from the Great Fire of London so that Elias Ashmole could preserve them for posterity and us. First, there is the Tower of Babel then Elias Ashmole got the papers from Thomas Whale ‘one of his Majesties wardens in the Tower of London.’ There are the vitally important Four Great Watch Towers of the Elements in Enochia and sometimes these Towers are activated deliberately by people for good and sometimes for ill human nature being what it is, too often by curiosity and the rest.

I would be the first to agree these thoughts are very tenuous threads but life is often made up of tenuous threads and now and then is even held together by them. Because these threads are so fragile for so important and at times so weighty a subject, we may tend to dismiss them because they do not seem worth the considering and therein may lie a greater loss than we know — but only time will tell whether this form of speculation is true or false.

PRONOUNCING ENOCHIA

— A DISCUSSION —

This chapter were it were not for the rider under the heading — ‘a discussion’ — would be the shortest in the book because it would consist of one line — no one knows how to pronounce Enochia — the chapter would end here.

I wrote this chapter for the original manuscript of the dictionary but it did not get into the original work, it was held back for further work because it was undecided. Finally, the progress of the original book was too far ahead to include it without incurring considerable cost. In the School at the end, only Madeline and myself were working on the Enochian system and researching the subject. She told me that others had attempted to tackle the Enochian Dictionary but nothing was forthcoming from it, she said that she really wanted this to come from the School but she began to think it would get done.

She had not asked me to work on it and I had a fair amount of work already, so I kept my work private until it was completed. I had the Enochian Dictionary in my briefcase quite a few times when I went to the flat but kept it there because I did not want to interfere in work that perhaps was being done by someone else.

Much later when I was there while we were having a social evening and a drink Madeline expressed her great sadness that nothing regarding the Enochian Dictionary was moving and it was only then I took the work out of my briefcase and gave it to her saying ‘like this!’ She looked through it for quite a while and asked me ‘how long you been sitting on this treasure — this is going to be published’ and the rest as the saying goes — ‘was history’ this was when my association with Enochia and John Dee began and it was to be the start of the Enochian cycle in the School and in my life.

All future work was to be done in preparation for moving forward with Enochia and to a new level for future School. Eventually we knew we had to discuss how we could tackle the problem of pronunciation for the new lessons being planned. As said, we were basically the only two people dealing with the subject matter at the time. The main discussions included how we should present this chapter in the (original) dictionary and how could the problem of the pronunciation could be dealt with.

In the absence of a known way to pronounce the language, agreement had to be reached regarding a method for the School or with everyone doing as they pleased, chaos would result and the School would simply be an Enochian Tower of Babel with no one understanding what the others were talking about making the whole exercise pointless.

We tentatively agreed we would either use or evolve a method based upon the Golden Dawn system to see if it brought results because we felt without guidance this was probably the best way to go. There are writers who disagree with this system thinking that it left something to be desired, which is fair enough and these people will leave it alone and plough their own furrow.

The Golden Dawn system was considered because some of our rituals as with many other Schools of the period included some aspects of them, some used a personal variation of their work and some Schools used them entirely.

Madeline knew and worked with Aleister Crowley in her student days and he was a member of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, though she was not. Incidental to the present discussion, Aleister Crowley regarded himself the reincarnation of Sir Edward Kelly in this life and he did appear to take a special interest to say the least in this particular material as his work indicates.

I feel Crowley had more than just a general interest in the Enochia more so than other members of the Golden Dawn. Few would dispute that his work and research on this specialist system was far-reaching and this is open knowledge to anyone who wants to know. He also thought he was a reincarnation not only of Edward Kelly but also of the renown French occultist, Eliphas Levi, who died in the year that Crowley was born in 1875, and he died in 1947 in Hastings.

I am not sure if Madeline had previous knowledge of the system but I did know that she was more than just a little cautious about the material and she did not feel completely at ease with it. At one point of the proceedings for a while, she banned the use of any words of Enochia in the School for a while as the pronunciation was being tested by some of the Senior Students, though not the magical system which at this time was not in use and none of the projected courses had been written down, only notes in preparation.

For one thing she said she 'couldn't keep any light bulbs for five minutes, saying they kept exploding and it was getting expensive' and she also said 'that a lot of electrical things kept breaking down.' included in this there appeared to be some partnerships/marriages in general getting into difficulties or 'being turned base over apex.'

It must always be remembered that the School and Temple were in her very large flat in Grape Street. Everyone made for the Temple intuitively. In one corner angle extending beyond the outside wall of the large room used for the temple and ritual purposes was a turret with circular seats around that projected beyond the outside wall and outside the building. I suppose it was around eight feet in diameter with a circular seat around the wall.

This room was a very nice room and the turret stood out well being supported by a single column from ground level and was quite a feature even when seen from the outside in the street. Most of the serious School discussions were often taken inside this turret and it had a small circular table placed in the centre.

In the beginning at least, we both decided we would make a start by aligning the pronunciation with the traditions of an established Occult Order to begin with. If you intend to go into new areas of work it was felt that it may prove wise, at least in the beginning, to try and find footprints left by previous explorers and tread with care on any solid ground found.

The Hermetic Society of the Golden Dawn or the Stella Mantutina was formed in 1887 by three members of the Rosicrucian Order. Its beginnings are the stuff of magic starting with cipher manuscripts bought by the Reverend Woodford. He bought these from a bookstall in Farringdon Street in London and he showed these to his two colleagues Dr Wynn Westcott and a Dr Woodman.

For those interested or even the curious, the Society is well recorded today. It was initially, a secret society for occultists, studying practical magic and the Society admitted male and female. There was an inner and outer order having well-defined grades and it had many eminent names and talents in its ranks. Briefly, the original intent of the Golden Dawn Order was ‘to prosecute the Great Work, which was to obtain control of the nature and power of my own being.’

Israel Regardie began a course of study with Aleister Crowley in 1928 and worked with him as his private secretary, he joined the Order of the Golden Dawn in 1934. He wrote and published a large amount about the Order and its rituals later. Originally, I am sure that this did not endear him to many, but his works are readily available for those who want to read or use them.

The thing I did not approve of at the time was the fact the system of pronunciation was to be put forward as if it was the only one and what is more, the right one. I did not agree with this imperious view, especially when it was going to be published with my name on it. This would imply to the reader that the decisions for the choice were wholly mine and they were not.

The problem was resolved later because the discussions took too long for the chapter to be printed in the original dictionary and I am now the only survivor left of the original group involved, I can now admit that the delay with this chapter was deliberate. Now I can modify the chapter to assume the tenor I wanted for the original dictionary.

For a period this ‘virus’ got into the School and there was quite an amount of in-fighting for position, kudos and all the bad habits that it brings. This sort of thing does happen in long established Schools at times and can lead to fragmentation of a group with the formation of splinter groups unless it is cut out and this can have only one inevitable conclusion.

This sort of thing is not new and it has happened before and I feel it will again. It is when a School becomes somewhat ‘political’ in form and attitude and loses sight of its aims and purpose. People tended to gather together more by personal interests than the good of the whole.

At one time I threatened I would put up a board in the hall near the front door of the flat, the kind that were often found in small hotels that had the names of the current guests inserted in, with a slider that told the staff or any callers whether that guest was 'in' or 'out.' I thought it would save a lot of trouble and cross-purposes.

Occasionally there was (and still is I suppose) rivalry between the Schools and Groups as well as within them. Some witnessed in the past were quite mean and some somewhat silly. I thought these 'games' were unproductive and time-wasting and refused to play them feeling the time could be better spent. I did not wish such 'amateur dramatics' for the Order while I had any influence regarding its purpose and growth.

It is not new, sometimes people leave for the purpose of 'starting up my own School.' In the process, much as the various Christian sects that broke away from other sects, they would try to gather as many 'like-minded disciples' they could from the old to take with them in the 'new Ark' that was to be launched. When this happens, let those go who wish it, I felt it was for the best as the links were being tested and found wanting, such circumstances as these were not new.

However, I decided that I was tired and needed a Sabbatical from such matters and time to think and I said like John Dee, I wanted to 'take leave' to pursue my own studies, while remaining in the School. Madeline knew I was very unhappy with things and I thought it was best because what was happening was not serving the work, me or anyone.

Some though I was deserting the School and did not take kindly to the decision and judgment but they knew less of the facts and more of the rumours than they thought and further, I felt I did not have to justify myself to anyone having entered the School as a foundation member and staying and serving it for almost forty years when it was created by Madeline and her co-founder. I felt the need to assess both my life and my School life. The reason for this being here is to put the matter being discussed here into a little more perspective with the times. Now let us return to matter in hand, which is the problem of pronunciation.

Deciding on a system of pronunciation is easier for the individual than a group because in a group all obviously all have to agree. When this is decided in a School or Society, the decisions are usually made on the Societies behalf. At the time of writing these first revisions (1992), I met groups of people who are still using the original dictionary for their work, which I found satisfying.

They do not use the system of pronunciation suggested here and in the absence of any proposals from anyone they agreed among themselves how they would pronounce the words and they were happy with it. They did not consult anyone because agreement had been reached, which made this unnecessary. Again, I stress that the system offered here is based upon the Golden Dawn system and not their entire Enochian system and if the reader finds that they do not like the system of the Golden Dawn, naturally they do not have to use it. I freely admit I go very much by the sounds of the pronunciation, its vibration and if it sounds right to me, in the absence of any alternative, this is invariably what I will go for, put simply, it has to have the right sound and feel — for me!

Although the entire system of Enochian Magic is not being dealt with here, I do not believe that the notes of the Golden Dawn are free from errors and inaccuracies regarding the system of which the Enochian alphabet and Calls, from which the dictionary was constructed, is a part. Of course, I accept full responsibility for any errors of my making. As said elsewhere, it was because I found errors in the Golden Dawn system that I decided, during work with the first edition, to go to the original and Dee's diaries in the British Museum and use the source work.

Madeline, in the beginning of the work thought any other form of pronunciation than the Golden Dawn system would not work well, perhaps not even at all and in this, I have no doubt she was sincere in her views. I was happy using the Golden Dawn as a starting point and I have long thought that the Powers quite often take 'intent for purpose' especially when the intent is sincere and honest.

I did not disagree with putting forward a system of pronunciation in the original dictionary. What I felt unhappy about was the inference that this was how it should be done. What I wanted to write was that it was one way that it could be done and to explain to the reader that the system being offered was broadly based upon a system used by a respected Occult Order, which is why it was used to maintain a sense of continuity with the past. It was not the intent of the chapter I quarrelled with but the authoritative manner of presenting it.

To gain agreement for the universal pronunciation of Enochia would be a splendid achievement, not unlike the principles of Esperanto or the familiar Latin Mass. The Church was wise to use Latin for the Mass because those attending could understand the service whatever country they were in because all countries had a common language for the rites of Catholicism, for the Church used the existing universal language of culture — Latin.

John Dee used English for many of his works for those people who could read, he was a most prolific writer and some printers would not take some of his works because they were too long. The first edition of Dee's Monas Hieroglyphica and most books of the time were written in Latin, because Latin was the language of scholars, civilised and cultured people of the time, whatever their native tongue. It meant the work could be read almost anywhere in the civilized world, whatever the language.

Similarly, whatever country you were in you could enter any Catholic Church and understand the mass, now only those who speak the native tongue really know what is going on because there is no 'bridging' language. This time I feel it was the Church who came down like God at the Tower of Babel and 'confused the language' and although not of the Catholic faith, I felt it was a very unwise decision.

Now let us discuss and illustrate with examples the system we were going to set in place in the School as a basis that would act as a starting point for those working in the School or on their own, this line is important. We were encouraged with the initial results of using the system of pronunciation and it was decided that a working paper would be put out for the very few members of the Senior School invited to undertake the trial papers to judge their response.

Some did not wish to and even now, I think that some felt a little uneasy regarding Enochia. I think they thought it may be beyond them and they did not want to go that far, which was fair enough, the new courses were desirable but not compulsory and it was all in the preliminary stages and we followed the tenet of each according to their ability when in the Senior School. I understand the Enochian projects were abandoned after I left, which was sad and the School was disbanded later with the death of Madeline.

At the time the method seemed a satisfactory solution for use with the future work and lessons planned, it appeared suitable for those with the required grades. I feel the success lay in its simplicity and the few basic rules that were used and adapted. With practise, the words became fluent and they did have quite a ring to them when they became fluent to the speaker.

What follows represents one way of solving the problem of pronouncing Enochia. I agree with it or I would not have used it and a choice had to be made. Of course, this does not invalidate any methods being used by an individual or an individual organization, especially if they are happy with their results.

Let us illustrate the argument with an analogy. Let us say there is a large village on the edge of a vast and very dense forest. Daily the hunters go into the forest to hunt for supplies for their families and the village but because of the density of the forest they do not venture too far into the forest as it already supplies most of their needs.

One hunter, more solitary and adventurous than the rest travels deep into the forest. He has good hunting and he places small markers so he can find his way back. Each day he extends the range of his hunting and exploring by going deeper because always wants to know what is ahead and curious as to what he may find.

He is cautious because it is unfamiliar and unexplored territory and he is not sure what he will encounter on his forays. He has been warned of the danger of being alone in uncharted territory, when you are defenceless, lacking knowledge and with no support. He feels ever drawn towards what he feels is at the centre. One day he comes to the remains of a magnificent temple that is in partial decay and it was obviously the centre of a past civilization and its people.

He does not touch the artefacts he finds for he holds them in respect. One day he goes to what is obviously the main altar and asks permission to take a small votive offering left there to the god of the temple. It is a small statue of the largest figure in the centre of the temple. He kneels before the central figure and tells the god he will treat the statue with the same respect he has given the temple and its contents.

He hides the figure from sight because his worship is private and meditates daily upon the figure. Standing on the edge of the village one quiet night he thinks it amazing how such a powerhouse can remain hidden from sight for so long and yet be so close. The emotions produced by the temple and its gods have such an effect of the man, he seems to walk with a blessing and protection, like a man who knows a secret. His family question him about the change that has obviously taken place within him.

In the end, he confides his secret to the elders of his family about his discovery and agrees to take them with him. They too, undertake frequent and secret visits to the holy place and benefit from going there. The path to the temple is becoming marked by greater use and soon it will become difficult to hide from the hunters and trackers so eventually he takes his knowledge to the elders and wise folk of the village and his tribe who give him the assurances he seeks regarding the site.

All from the village travel the path and experience the power and blessing the temple gives. They agree they will respect the holy place and restore the buildings and it will become the spiritual centre of the people.

The original hidden path now starts with beautiful ceremonial columns and the Sacred Path is wide, clear and paved. On the sides are statues, banners and emblems reproduced from the temple that prepares the travellers on the Sacred Way for their worship. The Sacred Way resounds to the feet and chanting of the devout and the present path is safe and belies the hard work of the pioneer of the village who found the path.

Later a new group say the old path is too long and meandering, why not cut a new path through the forest that would be shorter and more direct. The elders refuse saying they will stay with the familiar path that is consecrated and blessed with great power by the faith of those who have gone before. The breakaway group say the old ways have become stale and boring and it is now time to make way for the new. The old is often challenged in this way by the new. Here we leave the story for the point has been made.

Allying yourself with an established tradition for Enochia is like the old path, the path that is clear, used and consecrated by the use of countless folk who have gone before you. If you choose to create your own method of pronunciation then this is akin to the original pioneer who found the path. You are not like those in the analogy who wanted a new path simply because it was a quicker route to the temple with less bother.

Those who just want to make a new path to the centre need to find the new way and clear it. They must avoid the dangers and pitfalls that often exist with the untried and unknown. Then, even when they have found their new path and cleared it, where do they find themselves? At the same destination as the old path. It may have been quicker, but it has not advanced their goal or changed their destination one iota. If it had advanced their goal, it possibly would have made the change worthwhile. As it stands it was much hard work for so little return and change merely for the sake of it.

Why should the Guardians of the Temple accept them above the others just because they have come from another direction, or got there ahead of them? One reason for joining an established school is just that, it is an established school. It should have proven methods and can produce some of the results it claims it can, according to the ability of the student of course. Not everyone is suitable for Occultism anymore than they would be for competing in the Olympic games even though they genuinely want to do so.

Tradition is important, it is not an antiquated fossil, nor is it a straightjacket that restricts growth, as some would have us believe. It usually has a great deal more flexibility and growth than those who condemn it but their simplistic view is that anything that is of the past must be reformed, dispensed with it and it is usually done without any or little consideration as to what will be put in its place as long as it is new, which when properly done, I am certainly not against.

Change today usually seems to consist of merely exchanging Scylla for Charybdis. This happens at regular intervals as when the young challenge the old and the new culture challenges the old culture. To make a new path, to arrive somewhere new or discover something unique and in advance of what you have is a totally different matter — that is progress by any name to change something to improve it or because of new information is no problem. Today so many babies are thrown out with the bath water, all in the name of change and what is considered progress.

Our drives and instincts tell us what we want to do. Our traditions and values tell us what we ought do. There is ample evidence in the world today showing the results of people doing what they want to do rather than what they should do. Liberty degenerates quickly into license and unpredictability unless firmly supported and counterbalanced by responsibility.

Values are transmitted by tradition and when tradition is allowed to decay, so are the values of life it carries. I am not discounting anything new, I am not saying you should stay put and not hone and polish things so that they are better for it. Loving both paradox and the I Ching I believe that 'change' is the only true stability in our lives.

Meanwhile, what has happened to our original pioneer in the above tale? He has probably gone deeper into the forest seeking out yet more paths and forging ahead, ever onwards to new horizons. Having discovered the Temple, he did not rest long with the main body. He had to go on because there was a new horizon ahead and when he got to it, there was yet another and he will always be driving ahead to horizons new because when you reach your horizon, there is another one just as far ahead and never-ending.

Humanity always has its ‘outriders, outsiders or mavericks’ and they are the people who go ahead like scouts never staying long with the masses. They seek out new trails and search for the next stage of humanity’s journey and their own, looking for the safe beneficial ways for us to travel and we need them. Not unlike an army, sending out scouts to see if the way ahead is safe and free from ambush or foragers to see if the territory could sustain those in the group before the main body follows, many would be lost and less gained if it were not for these people.

Being an outrider is not always an easy task and at times, it can be decidedly dangerous. It is a solitary task because when you light your light and go out alone into the darkness, you are alone in an unfamiliar land and you can attract forces not amicable to your purpose or you. When you are in a crowd, your individual light is not so noticeable unless it is very bright and even if it is, it is noticeable but it cannot be accurately pinpointed.

In a crowd, you are reasonably safe by being one among many and appearing to pose no particular threat. There are entities that do not want individuals or groups to progress and they try to make sure that they do not do so by placing obstacles on the path.

These adversaries appear like the Ignis Fatuus and waste life with false starts and futile paths that seem so attractive, painted in their gilded glamour and false promises, which is why many take them in the first place until they come to nothing and then it is realized too late that they offer so much but give so little. It seems these antagonists of spiritual growth do not want too many to get free from the thrall of servitude for who will stay to serve the earth and them. We owe much to these outsiders who go ahead, find the new hidden ways and then come back to show that the way is secure, as their return to the main body demonstrates.

If you devise your own pronunciation for Enochia, please do not keep swapping and changing what you have decided upon with every changing wind. Please note I have written ‘swapping and changing’ and this naturally does not preclude modifying, polishing or correcting mistakes. If you are working on your own and creating your own pronunciation there may be sometime before your ‘words of power’ become their Words of Power. You must make the channel and build up the power to make contact and perhaps hardest of all, for them to be accepted. It is not an automatic outcome, it is not a right that you can demand, only a privilege for which you sue or earn.

For some people the contact can be quick, for some long, for others never because there are no guarantees and your results or lack of them will guide you how to act. If you are working with others, you must find a system agreeable to all or you will be back to the Tower of Babel and the confusion of tongues. It is essential that you keep a magical diary and this is something I repeat in every work I write. Without John Dee's diaries, I would not be writing this and he is the ideal model.

It is even more essential that you write honestly in its pages and you should treat your diary as the most intimate of friends and it should be one place where you can be honest. Remember to write only what is and not what you would like it to be, if not you will only fool yourself — if there is nothing then say so. I repeat this in most things I write and because I feel it is important, so I make no apologies for doing so.

The planet Neptune has charge over many matters in our lives, some good, some bad and some indifferent as with all the planets. This planet rules deception and self-delusion and which of his traits you chose to follow is your decision. If you would rather see things as you would like to see them, rather than how they really are, you are in good company with this planet because Neptune invented 'rose-coloured spectacles.'

Beautifully put in Offenbach's Tales of Hoffman where Copernicus, the spectacles-maker asks Hoffman. 'Would you like to have the knack of seeing white when it is black, look and you will see what you want to see.' Of course, he is offering him a pair of magical spectacles at the time 'for only three ducats!' Write only what is, not what you want it to be and if there is nothing, say so!

Now the preamble is done, let us look at the suggestions of the original draft paper (not issued in the School) regarding the subject of a suggested Enochian pronunciation. Read the following carefully, it is not as difficult as it appears and there are sufficient examples to show the system at work and always remember with these things, it takes longer to explain than do — so be patient.

You pronounce each letter of a word separately when there is an absence of vowels. The letter A is Aye; B is Bee; C is See; S is Ess; H is Aitch and so forth. You will find one or two exceptions like the letter Z, pronounced using a long 'o' making the sound Zood. Dee and Kelly often rendered the 'z' as 'zod' For example, Dee gives ZCHIS as Zod-Chis and ETHAMZ as EthamZod but when he comes to MICALZO, he gives as Micalzo and does not use 'zod' which does not help us to arrive at an uncomplicated conclusion

Another Enochian Dictionary I am told discounts this dictate regarding 'z' as 'zood' but I have not read any other Enochian Dictionaries. It is not a lack of respect or interest regarding the opinions of others but simply that I do not want any possible suggestion of plagiarism regarding them.

My answer to such questions is always the same that readers must take the path they think is best suited to them in the absence of a reliable and proven method of pronunciation and if anyone finds a substantially verified way of doing it — I will be happy to join them, if the accuracy is proven.

I have worked out I have a number of ways of arriving at my home, about twelve in all, some are straightforward, some long-winded, some inept and awkward but no matter which one I take I arrive home and the route that I choose to take is entirely up to me.

Waiting in a well-known bookshop I heard the man in the front ask for the Enochian Dictionary ‘G-mickle-zoma’ and he got the book with absolutely no trouble, which taught me a lot. It was said with a very short ‘G’ and Madeline often used this pronunciation in the beginning.

Another exception was the combination involving ‘h’ as with ‘th’ or ‘ch’ which, if each letter was given its full value, made them respectively ‘tee-aitch’ and ‘see-aitch.’ If these are spoken quickly and you join the two letters together smoothly, they sound better than they look on paper where they look somewhat clumsy.

Remember do not labour the letters as if you are spelling them out for someone. I know some were experimenting with the more normal pronunciation using —‘th(e)’ and ch(arm)’ say the word but not the letters in parenthesis. I personally stuck with the separate values for the letters for ‘th’ and ‘ch’ for the sake of consistency and was reasonably satisfied and this could have been the way for the School for the final paper.

Mentioning the alternative arguments in this chapter is not given to confuse the reader but to try to present the reader with the details I can remember of how they evolved regarding this rather vexing subject — for and against. If you use this system and pronounce most letters separately at first you may feel uncomfortable and feel your speech feels cumbersome and awkward. It will sound rather clumsy as if as said, you are spelling the word out for someone who does not understand it.

Part of the problem is that you have to try to get the pronouncing of the letter as separate letters out of your mind because if you do not, it will sound laboured and lack the fluency that you can achieve, if you can manage to do this.

As an exercise let us use a ‘word’ which is not Enochian though similar to its style such as ‘trp’ which is just a random selection of letters. If you just say separately ‘te, ar, pe,’ it will not sound right because you are simply saying three disconnected letters — te + ar + pe. However, putting the stress on the italic section, if you say, tearpe several times and running the three letters together as smoothly as you can, it will sound much better after a little practise. I would often devise such exercises for myself and they were helpful, I would use this exercise on trains and the like and choose a set of difficult combinations such as ‘zxy’ or ‘zood’ex-why.’

Let me assure the reader that as they gain fluency of pronunciation and greater familiarity with the system, it seems to iron out these rough spots quite quickly, after a while, you will hardly notice them and more important, you will not even think about it.

Another rule was that if a consonant is followed by a vowel the consonant and vowel are usually joined and spoken together, remembering the letter ‘z’ is given a long ‘o’ and pronounced ‘zood.’ I know that the after a while, the pronunciation takes place with greater intuition. I will give examples of the method to take the words apart to formulate and facilitate the pronunciation easier. Use this for any word or sentence you do not understand, sound each part of the word separately then slowly run the parts together. Gradually increase the speed until the parts meld together as if they are one and not sounding like a spelling test.

You will be surprised how quickly instinct takes over as what at first seems to be separate will merge and become one. Do not rush, take it steady, you are trying to establish good habits that will stand you in good stead and last a lifetime. Let instinct rule more than learning by rote; assimilate the words and sounds so they become a part of you.

The most obvious example to start with is the title of the book — GMICALZOMA — particularly as its meaning is ‘with a power (of) understanding.’ After sufficient practise, you probably could read most of the words without breaking them down first but build it up slowly. Now let us follow the system through.

First divide the word into its component parts that are: separate consonants; link a consonant to a following vowel and pronounce them together; remember that ‘z’ is pronounced ‘zood’ in the system chosen and that basically is it. There are some other considerations that we will deal with as and when they arise.

WORD: GMICALZOMA.

TRANSLATION: WITH A POWER (OF) UNDERSTANDING.

BREAKDOWN: G-MI-CA-L-ZOOD-O-MA.

PRONUNCIATION: GE-MI-CA-EL-ZOOD’OH-MA.

When the first draft paper was finished, we felt there could possibly some insecurity regarding the pronunciation in some parts of the words. Should the ‘mi’ be a short ‘i’ as in mix or a long ‘i’ as in mile? Was the ‘ca’ short as in cat or long as in car or was ‘ma’ short as in mat or long as in may? This lead to a clearer breakdown of the words as with the following:

WORD: GMICALZOMA.

TRANSLATION: WITH A POWER (OF) UNDERSTANDING.

BREAKDOWN: G-MI-CA-L-ZO-MA.

This became the accepted format:

PRONUNCIATION: GE-MI(X)-CA(R)-EL-ZOOD’OH-MA(T).

It was decided that this would not be, though it could be if chosen:

PRONUNCIATION: GE-MI(LE)-CA(T)-EL-ZOOD’OH-MA(R).

Remember that the letters found in the brackets are not pronounced, they are only there to give guidance with the pronunciation for the given component parts by using an equivalent and familiar English word. If you prefer the second pronunciation of the above you can adopt it, providing having adopted it, you stay with it. To my ear the second attempt did not ring quite true, I feel uncomfortable with it because it sounds a little clumsy and even when taken at speed, it sounds clumsy to me. I feel it lacks the fluency of the first example, but remember the important part of this sentence is the words, ‘to my ear.’ Let us take a further example, this time a series of words.

WORDS: ZACAR OD ZAMRAM.

TRANSLATION: MOVE AND SHOW YOURSELVES.

BREAKDOWN: ZA-CA-R O-D ZA-M-RA-M.

PRONUNCIATION: ZOOD’A-CA(R)-RE ... OH-DEE ...

ZOOD’A-EM-RA(T)-EM.

I have left in the small apostrophe comma, which divides the consonant ‘z’ from the vowel and this is a personal idiosyncrasy. I usually found I placed the stress on the vowel, which followed the ‘z’ and it was used to show the component part of the pronunciation.

We experimented with two vowels or three or more vowels together, which can happen in some words. It was felt that the same principle should apply to the first two vowels as it did with a consonant and a vowel by joined the two vowels together. If there are three vowels or four vowels as in ‘Iaiad,’ join the first two vowels and run them into each other and treat the third vowel as if it were a consonant by saying it separately as with ‘Eye’a-eye-aye-da.’ Other words for experimentation with consecutive vowels include Ioiad, Iaod, Aai Oiad and Aoiveae with the last word being seven vowels and one consonant.

In this combination we found if ‘a’ was the second vowel it seemed preferable to pronounce it short as in ‘a(pple)’ e.g. ‘Aa’ as ‘Aye’a’ and for ‘La’ as ‘El’a.’ Though for the combination ‘Oi’ this did not work as well and we did feel that it should not be the English oi(l), so this became ‘Oh’i(ce) but you should experiment with this for yourselves to see which you prefer.

This is to show the rules devised had to remain flexible when dealing with the language for there will always be exceptions to the rule. For example, the language of the British Isles is British or English. Even when someone is using the same words, people are often able to say that they are from Ireland, Wales, Scotland, Yorkshire, Cornwall, Devon because of their ‘brogue’ or the ‘lilt’ in the regional accents of the individual areas of a country that are too precious to be lost to any language or arguments.

We found that once the fluent speaking of the Enochia became established, the ear appeared to take over, it seems to be a better judge than any rigid rules and this includes using the voice according to where you were born. As you gain experience, you must accept or reject as practise dictates. A useful tip is to check what the word means that you are dealing with and creating a pronunciation for. This is a good guide as to tone, stress, voice level and so forth. Try convincing your cat that you love him dearly while screaming at him at the top of your voice — the words are right but nothing else is.

Two devices are used in the above examples that I think are important and they have nothing to do with the pronunciation. One was an adaptation of a device used in John Dee's handwriting because it was wise and the other was devised and used in the hope of making things clear.

These first are the triple dots between the breakdown of the words, three dots were used so there would be no confusion with a full stop if used anywhere. The ellipsis device is mainly used to indicate an omission from the sentence(s) but we use the ellipsis to show where a word ends and the next word begins. Although starting every word with a capital letter does help matters considerably as is found in the Calls.

Some of the Enochian words can be made up of a series of single or double letters with spaces between them. These words are quite easy to read as a single entry in the dictionary section and when not set in sentences however, even John Dee had to use a device like a connecting bracket in the spaces within the word, to show the grouping that make up the word and where it began and ended.

The original has been kept intact in the printed dictionary entries of this work from the beginning. The reader is strongly advised to use a similar device when these word forms were included in a sentence in the same way John Dee has.

The use of an underline to mark the spaces within a word or by using the hyphen to connect the components of a word is recommended as it is in the Calls later, otherwise the sentence will appear confused, hard to decipher or read, making translation difficult.

The remainder of this chapter will give examples to show and strengthen the point being made. If the first example below was put in a sentence, this example could be up to three words and the second example could up to four words — but when used in a sentence with other words either side of it, where do these begin and where do they end how many words are there or is it one word.

Dictionary entry: C NO QUOD (= 'unto his servants.')
Write this either as C_NO_QUOD (Dee) or C-NO-QUOD (with hyphen).

Dictionary entry GE O Q MANIN (= 'is not, save in the mind of.') Write either as GE_O_Q_MANIN (Dee) or GE-O-Q-MANIN (with hyphen) and either way is fine

The Enochian word CA CA COM has the meaning ‘flourish’ in the dictionary and it is printed in the way given here, which is correct. However as said, if you placed this word in a sentence you would have to decide is it one word, two or three. Putting underling in the spaces of the word made the Enochian CA CA COM into CA_CA_COM in the handwritten diaries showing that this word consisted of three elements and it now has a clear beginning and an end. The use of a hyphen or short underling between the component parts of the word does the same thing as shown above and either form can be used as you feel.

Let me give a few further examples using the underline of Dee. VI I V L meaning ‘in the second angle’ becomes VI_I_V_L; Q A A meaning ‘your garments becomes Q_A_A and finally O Q meaning ‘but’ becomes O_Q. These are nearer to the original handwritten format but more important than this is making the word and its elements clear to both eye and mind, again you can use the hyphen if you prefer.

Now let us take one final example that should be sufficient to show this simple system of pronouncing Enochia because it contains most of the rules and suggestions given so far.

In the above example, two devices have been used in an attempt to make the Call clear to the eye, to the thoughts and speech. The breakdown of the words themselves has been done by dividing the words with a hyphen into their parts, while the complete words have been divided from each other by an ellipsis or three dots.

You can add in parenthesis letters to make up an English word to guide you in the chosen pronunciation as I have above and naturally, remember that the letters within the parenthesis are not sounded. They are there only as pronunciation aids

Another point to watch as it can occur so listen for it. Be careful with the pronunciation, not to be slovenly and by this I mean do not make 'To-el' sound like 'too hell!' Equally, do not make 'Oh-el' sound like 'Oh hell' or 'lar-de' sound like 'laddie or lady.'

In the above example, you will find some numbers given as letters and this is why we chose this particular Call as our example. We decided to enunciate the letter/numbers separately as this is one way we often give numbers. For example if 1234 was found, we give the numbers as written one of two ways for speed and clarity, we presume the comma for the thousand's division will be inserted and give it as 'one thousand, two hundred and thirty-four.' This is the correct way of saying this figure in English but because Dee did not write in the thousand-division comma, you could simply say 'one, two, three, four.'

We cannot say this in Enochia so we used the former method for any letters representing numbers so simply say each letter separately and deliberately so the listener will know that they are the numbers. Later, as the Calls became more familiar, they would be known as numbers and they need not be quite so deliberate or stressed. In fact, this could prove to be one time when it would be correct to say each letter deliberately and separately and not attempt the blend them to show that they are letters being used to represent numbers.

Always keep in mind the rider under the main chapter heading that this chapter is— 'a discussion' — and not the laws of the Medes and Persians. 'Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not.' Daniel 6:8.

I would be the first to admit that not every word in Enochia sits easy on the tongue no matter what system you devise or use to pronounce it some do and some do not. Most words are fine but now and then, you get a word or combination of letters that will upset the system and sound more like 'the barbarous names of evocation. The rule we decided initially for the School was to make as many letters as possible comply with the golden rule of any Words of Power. You pronounce all the word and no component or letter is totally omitted or silent.

I believe that some purists in the past wanted to make saying every letter or element a strict rule to apply throughout Enochia, even if a consonant is joined to a vowel. Let us take from the above the word ‘Noroiimi.’ If every letter is given in full it would become En-oh-ar-oh-eye-em-eye — instead of No(e)-ro(e)’-eye-mi(x). Even the longer version when spoken fluently and at speed blends its component parts well enough though I still prefer the latter, the shorter of the two, it seems to have both the right sound, the better rhythm and I feel this makes it right — for me.

At this point in the proceedings, this was closing as a draft paper. I was still experimenting at the time, it was being deliberated and the paper was having the last touches put to it because the results seemed to be favourable and taking shape when circumstances beyond my control intervened.

In the initial stages, we gave most alternatives a fair try and this will give the reader some idea of the problems that beset the individual or group settling on an acceptable method of pronunciation. I found the second component of the word seemed to take the accent mostly but it became obvious a natural accent came with practise so if you choose to try this, do not force a false accent early in your attempts.

I think it is better this comes naturally because the words do seem to comply with a innate and natural rhythm and I feel that this is most important, remember follow and do not impose.

Finally, I stress the point yet again. Having decided upon your pronunciation stick to it, do not keep swapping and changing about. I am not saying that you cannot modify your work as you progress, but modify, hone and polish an agreed model.

Naturally change any mistakes in your work you consider serious, mistakes for which experience has given an alternative if that improves your work. Of course, you can wipe the slate clean and start again if you wish, as often as you like, there is nothing to say you cannot — save common sense.

If you keep on changing things every five minutes you will never settle on a foundation from which you can work or build and keep moving around in circles — getting nowhere fast!

This is not a big chapter by writing standards but it is big in context because there is a lot to be found in it. There is a lot to understand, make it work and I do not underestimate this. As always and I have said it often enough, in works of this nature it always takes longer to explain things that it does to carry them out. Words are wonderful tools and even if they were not so, they are all we have so we must get on with it.

If the reader or a group decides, after reading this ‘discussion’ with regard to the pronunciation, decide that they would rather try to create their own form of speaking Enochia, as others have done of course they can do so, for none are certain how to speak the language. If this is your decision then I would suggest that they go back the opening lines of the chapter and re-read them and to help I have reproduced them below . . .

This chapter were it were not for the rider under the heading — ‘a discussion’ — could be the shortest in the book, it would simply consist of one line — no one knows how to pronounce Enochia — and the chapter could end here. I do hope that you will not end the matter of the pronunciation here and one way or the other, work it out to your satisfaction.

A BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE ENOCHIAN SYSTEM

To attempt to distil the Enochian system into a few paragraphs pages must be one of the most foolhardy things I have attempted for sometime and I thought I was getting old enough to know better, but apparently not. The chief intention of this short chapter is to give any reader that is unfamiliar with the system, some information regarding how the dictionary was compiled and from where it was taken.

John Dee was an avid diarist and with meticulous care, he kept two diaries one private and one Magical or Spiritual. Dee made copious marginal notes in the works he possessed and these notes could often be more revealing than the printed or written text, the odd one even had an astrological chart written in the margins. Perhaps this was an Horary Chart for a time, event, an answer being sought, perhaps even for someone.

Without his careful recording of all that happened during his experiments this work and many others regarding subject of Enochia could never have been written because we would not have known that it existed and what had been achieved by John Dee and Edward Kelly.

Dee possessed a shewstone that was a gift to him from the Archangel Uriel though he did have others for use in his experiments. As written elsewhere, during November 1582 he was in fervid prayer in his laboratory, when the room filled with a divine light from the western window and in the midst of which was the Archangel Uriel. The angel gave him a convex crystal and told him if he examined it intently, beings would appear and give him the answers that he so fervently sought and then the angel disappeared.

Dee spent much time in prayer and he could never stress enough the importance and power of prayer. He wrote that ‘ . . . the Key of Prayer openeth all things’ and prayer was a large part of the bedrock of his existence.

When Dee skryed in the shewstone he could never remember properly what had happened, what was said or revealed in the excitement of it all, he resolved it was obviously necessary to have a skryer who would use the stone while he recorded the success, failure or otherwise of the attempt.

He knew he needed help in the matter of crystal skrying for it was too much for one man and this is how Edward Kelly, among other skryers, eventually came into his life. Regarding the shewstone Lewis Spence writes ‘it was necessary to stimulate the imagination to the highest pitch, until the soul became a willing agent to its self-deception to become the dupe of one’s own delusions.’

Horace Walpole, writing to Sir Thomas Mann on the 22nd of March 1771 regarding ‘Dr. Dee’s Magic Crystal’ — ‘Dr Dee’s Black Stone’ — writes in part. ‘Dr. Dee, you must know, was a great conjuror in the days of Queen Elizabeth, and has written a folio of the dialogues that he held with his imps . . . the authorities of the British Museum purchased this ‘relic of the superstition of our ancestors' for the sum of twelve guineas. It is neither more nor less than how it has been described, a polished piece of cannel-coal save for the important one that gave it to John Dee and this, apart from the allusion to the 'the devil's looking glass, explains its use in Butler's Hudibras:

'Kelly did all his feats upon
The devil's looking glass — a stone.'

Cannel-coal (Candle-coal): Mineral: A variety of the species called by Dana — Mineral Coal. It is bituminous and often cakes. It has little lustre; its colour is dull, bluish or greyish black. On distillation, it furnishes forty to sixty-four per cent of volatile matter. It is used for the manufacture of oils. Parrot-coal and Horn Coal are essentially the same as Cannel-coal' (Dana).

The first Angel to talk with Dee was the Angel Anael but Dee, seeking further contact with the Archangel Uriel asked Anael if this was possible? The Angel told him 'it could be done so in time' and it was. One of the angelic visitants enquired about 'the ring, which was appointed thee — which is to be made of perfect gold as aforesaid.'

Dee's ring was revealed by the Archangel Michael who described to him the form it should take. Dee made a drawing of the ring, on Wednesday the 14th March 1582 'And it had these fowre letters in it, P E L E.' In a marginal note Dee wrote he knew the name from John Reuchlin's, De Verbo Mirifico. Dee's marginal notes are often most informative in their content and gives us a lot of information about him and his library.

The name Pele had the meaning of 'he who worketh Wonders.' Dee drew the design of 'his ring' in the margin, but I do not know if he ever had, such a ring made, engraved, used it or wore it? I had a copy made some years ago and generally wore it when dealing with any work connected with John Dee.

The Archangel Uriel instructed Dee to construct a special table to hold the shewstone. The table was to be painted in the primary colours, red, yellow and blue, the characters and names on the side painted in yellow and I have seen copies of this table made up for sale in the past. Four small seals were to be made, small compared to the Great Seal and these were to be placed under the legs of the Holy Table to support it.

All the seals had to be 'made from perfect wax.' Dee was to set the Great Seal in the centre and next place the crystal on the Holy Table. The Archangel Uriel gave detailed instructions for making all the seals for the Great Seal or Sigillum Emeth stressing 'perfect wax' was to be used. The seal had to be nine inches in diameter and exactly one and one eighth of an inch thick, with 'no respect of cullours' i.e. natural wax. You can see the genuine seals used by Dee and Kelly in the British Museum if you are curious.

Written within the Great Seal were the various names of God, the names of the angels and the signs, it is claimed, that command the angelic orders and these were revealed early in 1582. Kelly said seven angels came often and each carried a tablet or talisman that Dee copied down, the Archangel Uriel revealed how to inscribe these talismans on the seals. Written inside the Great Seal, within the heptagram and without are the seven sacred names of God taken from tables of 49x49 squares.

So many objects came from under the Holy Table, which the Angels, spirits and Madimi brought to Dee and Kelly. The gracious Dee recorded that 'so much, indeed, was taken from under the Table' should he ever make up another Holy Table that he would 'put a shelf there for Their use.'

In the writer's opinion, one of the most daring ideas ever placed on a sheet of paper is the astrological horoscope chart. Far too many I believe take this seemingly simple scheme for granted because its simplicity is exceedingly deceptive.

The birth chart is a map of the heavens set up for a certain time and place and it has a human being at its centre not unlike the ruler of their universe. An individual becomes on paper, the geocentric focus of the entire Universe with its sun, moon, fixed and 'wandering stars' set in their position around them. I consider it is one of the most daring diagrams you can place on a sheet of paper, as did the excellent astrologer Edward Lyndoe.

When you draw the circumference of your circle, you will place within the 360 degrees of the circle the vast unfathomed reaches of the Universe. The astrologer reduces the limitless to the limited. Incomprehensible distances in space that are quite powerless to be comprehended by the human mind, become reduced to inches to enable the astrologer to study the working relationship of the universe in relationship with the earth for a given time and puts all this at the service of one individual — the person for whom the chart was made. This working hypothesis can be charted for a place and any individual. Only the human mind could conceive this plan — only man would dare!

However, Shakespeare as usual came close in Henry V where, in the opening prologue of the play Chorus asks the audience's help 'gently to hear, kindly to judge our play.' He asks, on the stage within the circular theatre in this plays opening lines (in abridged form and using the relevant lines):

'Can this cockpit hold
The vasty fields of France? Or may we cram
Within this wooden O the very casques
That did affright the air at Agincourt?
... On your imaginary forces work.
... Piece out our imperfections with your thoughts:
... For 'tis your thoughts that now must deck our kings' ... and so forth.

This is why I have written that setting up a horoscope for whatever reason is an audacious map and one I feel that is taken far too much for granted because with our audacity, we got away with it. In the work of Dee and Kelly, the multifarious Universe is condensed into a scheme even more daring in its proportions than any birth chart could ever be.

The paradigm of Dee and Kelly brings down a new and unknown universe to ours, a powerful one that could overlay our world and may even be the driving force behind it. The Enochian system could represent the realities of the inner planes, passing down through the Astral Plane from the spiritual and far beyond, perhaps even rising to the Divine like a Merkabah Chariot and its rider. This idea is different to the normal idea of the Elements and a higher level of general Occult Philosophies and it is a separate study and as said, it overlays and extends what ever we had before.

By the method's used, Dee and Kelly have brought the Universe down to a diagrammatic square written on paper of two dimensions similar to a birth chart. Around this square were thirty concentric circles, the radii of which increase in strict geometric proportion. These are the thirty Aeythrs or Aires.

It is within this pattern and framework that the Four Great Watchtowers appear. These Four Towers rule over the four elements of Air, Earth, Fire and Water and each Tower possesses an Elemental King, servitors, signs and symbols and the like. Dee was instructed to draw a 49x49 square and fill these in correctly with the letters he was given. Over one hundred large squares in all, each table consisted of a 49x49 square, some tables only had every other square filled.

An angel or messenger would show Kelly the desired square and when the angel gave Kelly his instructions, Dee wrote the message down. I do not like the analogy and use it only because the model is familiar to most but you must disassociate it with its usual trappings and use. The tables were not unlike elaborate and sacred Ouija Board in practice, but I stress, without the usual import ascribed to the Ouija Boards in popular use and imagination. If you try to use and think of them in this way you may as well go and do something else more useful because you will be wasting your time. You may waste your time if you wish, but I do not think they will let you waste theirs!

In this way, the Calls were slowly and painstakingly written down, it was a very lengthy process. Sometimes the messengers would dictate a major Call or Invocation in reverse order and it was written down this way.

This was used as a safeguard because the Angel informed them that some of the Calls were far too powerful to be pronounced or communicated directly because they could accidentally evoke powerful forces and powers not sought after or understood. This should be a hint to the wise that the Powers giving the system thought it was extremely potent, especially when relayed down to the material level.

There are nineteen Calls existing in Dee's diaries written in the language we now call the Enochian language or Enochia, after the prophet Enoch who spoke with God and the angels. Naturally, Dee gave an English translation of the Angelic Language; it was from Dee's hand written diaries that the dictionary found between these covers was worked out. Further pages were marked in the style of previous pages showing Dee obviously anticipated more Calls but sadly, they remain blank.

I think these blank pages possibly suggest that Dee anticipated enough Calls to make up one Call for each of the thirty Aethyr's or Aire's. Thirty Calls and the Call or Key of the Thirty Aethyrs would have made thirty-one Calls in all. We actually have eighteen Calls plus the Call of the Aethys making nineteen in all.

Although we have the blank pages in the diaries, remember we do not even know what material was destroyed by the Jones's maid, only that 'it was about half' that had been lost in the fire or 'lined pie tines,' before it was stopped and all was lost.

Each of the thirty Aeythrs has a special name and the reader will find a full list of them at the end of the dictionary. You place the name required in the Call or Key of the Thirty Aethyrs, the name of the First Aethyr is LIL, which is the fourth word. This is where you would substitute the name of the Aethyr required. For example, to use the twenty-third Aethyr, you simply substituted TOR for LIL and so on. Each individual Aire has governors, servitors and the like and these are available now in other works for the curious.

From the nineteen Calls in Dee's diaries, this dictionary and all dictionaries of the Enochian language have been compiled. There are no additions in this work to the Enochian given in Dee's diaries as often said. This section remains the same as the first edition and only my contribution to the new dictionary is enlarged. I would not be so presumptuous as to attempt to change the work of Dee and Kelly, there are some 700 odd words in the diaries and these are given.

This short summary is to acquaint any new reader unfamiliar with the some of the sources used for the dictionary. I would like to make one small comment having seen all these complicated diagrams, language, complicated details and work and it is this. If Kelly was deceiving Dee with all of this, he must have had one of the most remarkable memories ever set in the mind of a human being because they are mind bending.

This outline given here is almost brazen in the brevity of its presentation. It is permissible only because there is now no shortage of books giving, according to the lights of their writers, a comprehensive account of the magical system known as Enochia. The information will be found used in this work and I have always stayed in this work broadly within the brief of presenting the Enochian Dictionary of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelly.

NOTES ON THE ARRANGEMENT AND SYSTEM OF THE WORK

It will repay the user's time to study this section before using the main part of dictionary, which is divided into two sections. Section One deals with Enochia translated into English so naturally, Section Two has the English translated from the Enochia first and this section is to help you to find the Enochia you want by finding the English first.

There are variations, slight and otherwise in the words and translations. These are found both in original papers referred to and in the writings of modern commentators on the system and some of these have been noted for completeness because they may be found.

These 'variations' are marked as such to avoid confusion with the original. I decided that the final arbiter of the Enochian work should be the source of it all, the diaries of Dr. John Dee, which are housed in the Sloan Collection of the Mss Reading Room in the British Museum.

In Section One, if the Enochia has a variant spelling, this is given after the original and separated from it by the use of 'or' and in both cases, the first is the manuscript entry and the second after the 'or' is the variant spelling also found. This method is held in both Sections of the work.

Darsar or Dansar. ⇒ Wherefore.
Ozazma or Ozozma. ⇒ Make us.

In Section Two of the English/Enochia translation, should an alternative translation from the original manuscript be met with, it is included in similar manner after the original and separated by 'or'. I think the following examples are enough to show this. The dictionary has a new symbol with the intention of trying to make things clear. After the Enochian, I have placed the symbol ⇒ pointing to the translation, thinking this guides the eye quicker and more accurately. Of course the reverse for the English translation pointing to the ⇒ Enochian:

Crip ip nidal ⇒ But not your noises (Ms.) or
 But not your mighty sound. (Variation.)

Eolis oilog orsba ⇒ Making men drunken (Ms) or Making men drunk. (Variation.)

If in Sections One or Two, the entry is separated by 'or' this means that both entries are to be found in the Ms., but the most frequently used word is the first entry, though either can be used

Leo or El
Nisso or Nissa.
Napta or Napea.

Some of the sentences in Section Two — English/Enochia — have been divided to give a key word to help with cross-referencing and to help the reader to find sentences better. Naturally, the sentence will be found in its original form and set in its correct alphabetical place and all sentences end with a full stop.

In a divided sentence all the words after the full stop and ending with an ellipsis or three dots, go in front of the word(s) that end with the full stop. This puts the sentence back into its original order. This system has been maintained throughout the work, some examples with the new arrow symbol in the dictionary will make this clear:

In anger.	⇒ VNPH. (original sentence.)
Anger. In . . .	⇒ VNPH. (divided.)
Made of Hyacinthe Pillars. sentence.)	⇒ Oin Nazavabh. (original sentence.)
Hyacinthe Pillars. Made of . . .	⇒ Oin Nazavabh. (divided.)
Pillars. Made of Hyacinthe . . .	⇒ Oin Nazavabh. (divided.)
Behold the Promise of your God . . .	⇒ Micma Isro. (original sentence.)
God. Behold the Promise of your . . .	⇒ Micma Isro. (divided.)
Promise of your God. Behold the . . .	⇒ Micma Isro. (divided.)

Another small device the reader will find before a small number of entries is an asterisk or star. This is not complicated and simply means that for the sake of completeness, a translation or variation has been included that is not in the original Mss., but which may be found in other copies. Check the word or translation without the asterisk for the original, as with:

(Enochian): Mabza.	⇒ The Coat.
(English) The Coat:	⇒ Mabza (Ms.)
*(Enochian): Mabza.	⇒ The Robe.
*(English): The Robe:	⇒ Mabza (Var.)

We have spoken of the following in the Pronunciation chapter but it was taken from here, nevertheless it is important and bears repetition. A number of Enochian words are made up of a series of single, double or letters with spaces between these elements. This particular form of word is relatively easy to read in a single entry, as it is in the dictionary section where the word is clear by being taken out of the context of a sentence and having no other words either side of it. This shows where these words begin and end but not when they are set within other words in a sentence. This is the way it was handwritten in the Ms., but even Dee had to use a connecting bracket device in the spaces between the letters of the word to connect the groupings and show the start and finish of the word when he wrote them. The original word has been kept intact in the dictionary entries of this work, but the reader is strongly advised to use some similar device when these are put into sentence form as John Dee did.

The use of underlining or the modern hyphen is recommended, otherwise the word when placed in sentences may appear confusing because it is hard to decipher and will be difficult for where does it begin and where does it end. A few examples should make this clear and illustrate how it will look in sentences. We give the hyphen suggestion first and the underline link of John Dee next, either is fine so you use whichever of the two that you wish, the only thing I do suggest is do not mix them, even though it will still be clear, do make your work uniform:

C NO QUOD write as either C-NO-QUOD or C_NO_QUOD.

GE O Q MANIN write as either GE-O-Q-MANIN or GE_O_Q_MANIN.

VI V DI V write as either VI-V-DI-V or VI_V_DI_V.

Using this system aids reading and translation because it helps the eye to see the complete words when they are constructed from separate elements with greater ease. This is because the spaces of the word have a connecting link set in them linking the separate parts to show they belong to the whole. It makes the word complete and the beginning and end of the word clear. It was written this way, as above, in the handwritten form of John Dee in his diaries.

Translation:

I reign over you saith the God of Justice in power exalted above the Firmament of Wrath: In Whose hands the Sun is as a sword and the Moon as a through thrusting fire: Who measures your garments in the midst of my vestures and trussed you together as the palms of my hands: Whose seats I garnished with the fire of gathering: and beautified your garments with admiration: to whom I made a Law to govern the Holy Ones: and delivered you a rod with the Ark of Knowledge. Moreover you lifted up your voices and swore obedience and faith to Him that liveth and triumpheth: Whose beginning is not nor end cannot be: Which shineth as a flame in the midst of your palace and reigneth amongst you as the balance of righteousness and truth. Move therefore and show yourselves: Open the mysteries of your Creation. Be friendly to me for I am the servant of the same your God, the True Worshipper of the Highest.

Translation:

Can the wings of the winds understand the voices of wonder O you the second of the first whom the burning flames have framed within the depth of my jaws: Whom I have prepared as cups for a wedding or as the flowers for their beauty for the Chamber of Righteousness. Stronger are your feet than the barren stone and mightier are your voices than the Manifold Winds. For ye are become a building such as is not, save in the mind of the All-Powerful.

Arise, saith the first. Move, therefore, unto his servants. Show yourselves in power and make me a strong seething (seer of things), for I am of Him that liveth forever.

Translation:

Behold sayeth your God. I am a circle, on whose hands stand twelve kingdoms. Six are the Seats of Living Breath, the rest are as sharp sickles or the horns of death. Wherein the creatures of the earth are, and are not, except mine own hands, which sleep and shall rise. In the first I made you Stewards, and placed you in seats twelve of government, giving unto every one of you power successively over Four Five Six, the true ages of time: To the intent that from the Highest Vessels and the comers of your governments ye might work my Power: Pouring down the Fires of Life and Increase continually on the earth. Thus ye are become the Skirts of Justice and Truth. In the name of the same your God, lift up I say yourselves. Behold His mercies, flourish and name is become mighty amongst us. In whom we say, move, descend and apply yourselves unto us, as unto the Partakers of the Secret Wisdom of Your Creation.

Translation:

The heavens which dwell in the First Aire, are mighty in the parts of the earth and execute the Judgement of the Highest. To you it is said, Behold the Face of your God, the Beginning of Comfort, whose Eyes are the Brightness of the Heavens. Which provided you for the government of the earth, and her unspeakable variety. Furnishing you with a Power Understanding to dispose all things according to the Providence of Him that sitteth on the Holy Throne. And rose up in the Beginning saying, the earth, let her be governed by her parts and let there be division in her that the glory of her may be always drunken and vexed in itself. Her course let it run with the heavens, and as a handmaid let her serve them. One season, let it confound another and let there be no creature upon or within her the same. All her members let them differ in their qualities, and let there be no one creature equal with another. The reasonable creatures of the earth and men, let them vex and weed out one another, and the dwelling places let them forget their names. The work of man and his pomp, let them be defaced. His buildings let them become caves for the beasts of the field. Confound her understanding with darkness. For why? It repenteth me I made man. One whole let her be known, and another while a stranger. Because she is the bed of a harlot, and the dwelling place of Him that is fallen. O you Heavens arise. The lower Heavens underneath you, let them serve you. Govern those that govern. Cast down such as fall. Bring forth with those that increase, and destroy the rotten. No place let it remain in one number. Add and diminish until the Stars are numbered. Arise! Move! And appear before the Covenant of His Mouth which He hath sworn unto us his Justice. Open the Mysteries of your Creation, and make us partakers of the Undeiled Knowledge.

THE THIRTY AIRES AND AETHYRS.

There are Thirty Aires and Aethyrs in all and each of them has a name that is inserted in place of the words 'the First Aire' (The first being — LIL) in this Key or Call. “Enochian Alphabet”

[Christmas Eve- 12/24/2007]

NOTE: This is Not Scrying the Alphabet

My work with EE has revealed some insight into Their System, including Their Alphabet.

Kelley received the Enochian Alphabet by EE in a thrice-fold division:
(3 sets) x (7 letters)

People are used to seeing "Cardinal, Mutable, Fixed" associated with the Zodiac...

The sequence of:

-Cardinal [create, begin]

-Fixed [change/maintain]

-Mutable [changing to something else, end/destroy]

...are parts of all the patterns we experience.

"Language and communication are the cornerstone to evolution.

Language and it's expression are 'finite borders' that must be expanded to 'allow' broader horizons"

- An EE told me this

Zodiac Influence -Cardinal Qualities:

1st Set of 7 Letters:
B, C/K, G/J, D, F, A, E

"Cardinal" - [from the French "cardo"] = a 'hinge', that on which something turns. (It is the most important part)

Example:

In the Hept. Myst. System, A majority of names begin with the letter "B". It was my contention that the "B" changes in cycles.
Also, Carmara drops the "C" and is Marmara.

[See My Other Volumes- "C/B Cycle"]

--The cycling of the letters could be considered "hinge-like"

Planet Influence -Mutable Qualities:

2nd Set of 7 Letters:
M, I/Y, H, L, P, Q, N

"Mutable" = "subject to change".

Example:

His bigger name is Carmara, that is pronounced Marmara by the angels (the first "M" remains silent).

--The "bigger name" has the Zodiac "C" rather than the Planet "M".
"Subject to Change"

Element Influence [Including Aethyrs] -Fixed Qualities:

3rd Set of 7 Letters:
X, O, R, Z, U/V/W, S, T

"Fixed" = securely placed/fastened - implies unchanging.

--Quite a few 'power words' of the Enochian Keys contain the letter "Z". These Calls exert 'tension and torque' on the Element Qualities of the 4 WatchTowers, [and 30 Aethyrs].

Example:

"ZACARe ca od ZAMRAN" amplifies my Temple and My Aura and magnifies/intensifies "Hybrid works".

From Macrocosmic to Microcosmic:

The Structure of:

Zodiac - Planet – Element:

is similar to a "cosmic step-down transformer".

- The Celestial Hinge of the Zodiac.
- The Cycles of the Planets.
- The Fixed Elements which cement their molecular structure, holding our reality, together.

“Enochian Alphabet II”

The Enochian Alphabet is in an ordered structure.

Each character holds a frequency of it's own.

[See My Other Volumes: Enochian Entities -Key Of It All]

The sequence of order the Alphabet was given to Kelley is Important:

Ref. TFR pg. 183 per Ave Saying the "L" has "more FORCE than N".

Zodiac Influence -Cardinal Qualities:

1st Set of 7 Letters:

B, C/K, G/J, D, F, A, E

This Order:

See My Other Volumes for a Color-Coded Chart... makes it easier for understanding

Aries FIRE- {1.EAST}

Taurus EARTH- {2.SOUTH}

Gemini AIR- {3.WEST}

Cancer WATER- {4.NORTH}

Leo FIRE- [EAST]/ SOUTH {5.EAST}

Virgo EARTH- [SOUTH]/ {6.SOUTH} WEST

Libra AIR- [WEST]/ NORTH {7.WEST}

Scorpio WATER- [NORTH]/ {8.NORTH} EAST

Sagittarius FIRE- [EAST]/ NORTH {9.EAST}

Capricorn EARTH- [SOUTH]/ {10.SOUTH} EAST

Aquarius AIR- [WEST]/ SOUTH {11.WEST}

Pisces WATER- [NORTH]/ {12.NORTH} WEST

Obviously, there are only 7 Letters but 12 Zodiac Signs.
There is another 'structure-key' that pertains to the cycling of these Zodiac/Letters depending where They are in a Name, Phrase, etc.,

Planet Influence -Mutable Qualities:

2nd Set of 7 Letters:

M, I/Y, H, L, P, Q, N

This Order:

Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Mercury, Saturn, Moon

Element Influence [Including Aethyrs] -Fixed Qualities:

3rd Set of 7 Letters:

X, O, R, Z, U/V/W, S, T

Fire, Earth, Air, Water
Red/Black/White/Green

Again, obviously, there are 7 Letters but only 4 Elements.

There is also a 'structure-key' that pertains to the cycling of these Element/Letters depending where They are in a Name, Phrase, etc.,

The Enochian System is "Alive"...

Placement of Letters causes 'change and shifting'.

[Similar to a 'Rubik's Cube']

We see King Names which Spiral.

Adding a final Letter to the King Name designates whether it is for Mercy or Severity.

[Ref. TFR pg. 183 per Ave Saying the "L" has "more FORCE than N"]

These 2 "Enochian Alphabet" articles do not pertain to
'scrying the EE Alphabet'.

'Structure-Keys' & other Updates to both prior articles will be discussed as well as Scrying the Enochian Letters in an upcoming Volume.

Here is the Missing Structure as promised...

Scrying the Alphabet

There are many renditions to the the meanings of the Enochian Alphabet.

I recommend Enochian Students to scry it themselves.

The Golden Dawn put out a small pamphlet on some of their members crying it.

There is my own rendition.

If you read my other books, then you will grok how I personally view the system.

I believe a mage must be 'called' by these Enochian Entities [EE]- thus, "Sanctified"

[\[See My Other Volumes\]](#)

From there, the 'promising mage' must commit to the EE Work, thus, "Initiation" by the EE.

From there, the EE will perform a sort of "Benediction", some might call it a "Blessing"

Once all of the above transpires- the dedicated & devoted mage will be "within the EE Current"

I will attest- it is an Extremely Powerful Stream of 'Pooled Energy'...

'Not at all similar to that of a human-crafted Egregore'

It Is a Unique Grid of LUX that you must experience to understand.

If you undertake all I have published, thus far- you will have a very thorough understanding of the Enochian Alphabet.

Some if it takes a 'personal judgment call' by the Practitioner,

But greatly worth the effort!

t = Revitalize, Resuscitate, Invigorate, Resurgence, Resurrect
(I 'received' all 5 words @ the same time)

Trying to compare the Enochian Alphabet to something, the closest I could possibly fathom, is the 'scientific' Element Periodic Table/Chart... if it suddenly incorporated a gazillion more elements.

...Or, some type of Chemical Compounds which formulate words.

Or if I assigned various Letters to Tree of Life.

Each Enochian Letter sequence creates Meridian Harmonics, Etheric Activations, Celestial Dynamics, Coordinates of Light.

They are DNA on Paper...literally...

The Letters dance under a Microscope and bewilder Telescopes.

They are Quantum Computers uploading bytes of information into your Brain...every time you reference Them.

Recall the EE explicitly commanding Dee & Kelley to write some of the letter sequences Backwards.

It is...that Powerful.

[Side Note:] I performed an EE Ritual a couple of nights ago...I had a huge Hierarchy conjured within our Temple.

I wanted to know if EE still considered me a “slacker”...and Their response was that ‘I should start playing the Multi-Million Dollar Lottery’...

What do you think?

If there are any individuals who would like to help me with a personal project, I would be very appreciative.

Figure #1

I seen little people- [Reminiscent of ‘Gulliver’s Travels’] carrying square boxes with letters, on top of their heads.

They were shuffling around, every time someone yelled “SHUNT” ...*Shunt!... Shunt!... ****

This ‘scene’ flipped over, under it:

It appeared as a circuit board* with electricity traveling from one letter to groups of letters.

To watch the vision, it makes so much sense, but to convey it- or attempt to draw it, is almost impossible for me!

 *Motherboard with ‘electronic relays and gadgets’ passing and swapping current [Step-down & Step-Up Transformers]

→ Recall, the Enochian Calls [Keys] are not necessary to Activate/Summon the WatchTower Entities.

[See My Other Volumes]

A simple ‘getting to know you ritual’ lasting only a little more than couple of weeks at the beginning [of the Enochian Preparation] is enough to *initiate a person into the Enochian Current-Stream.

From there, reciting small sequences of letters is all that is needed to Summon!

Again, No Enochian Calls... nor anything else for that matter-to ‘activate’ the Enochian Stream.

1st level consists of 20 Letters.

Think of that small board as a circuit board, with wires connecting the letters, underneath.

2nd Level consists of 10 Letters

3rd Level consists of 36 Letters

4th Level consists of 40 Letters [Black Cross]

The whole WatchTower tablet itself revolves on an axis that is aligned to the Zodiac belt.

That rotates in conjunction with Liber Loagaeth.

Shunt:

- to shove or turn (someone or something) aside or out of the way.
- to sidetrack; get rid of.
- to move or turn aside or out of the way.

Electricity:

- to divert (a part of a current) by connecting a circuit element in parallel with another.
- to place or furnish with a shunt.

Railroads:

- to shift (rolling stock) from one track to another; switch.
- [of a locomotive with rolling stock] to move from track to track or from point to point, as in a railroad yard; switch.

Surgery:

- to divert blood or other fluid by means of a shunt.
- the tube itself.

This “Shunting of Energy” is similar to how the Tree of Life glyph operates...

The fountain of energy passes and overflows/showering from one Sephiroth to the one under it.

Power passes along the Paths- to and fro.

The path going to Tiphareth from Yesod is different than the path going to Yesod from Tiphareth.

Liber Loagaeth works the same way.

Recall from my other Volumes:

“Liber Loagaeth are 49 gold sheets with a differing front and back. In other words, this signifies “Thickness or Volume” and that each “page” is 3D- maybe, even... Multi-Dimensional”

There's a lot of info there...

That was the preparation.

"I feel the temple floor shaking, and my root charka creates intense heat. I feel like my spine is a Guitar, as I can literally feel 'strings' being prodded and waves of intense energy vibrating upwards."

For some odd reason, every time the energy 'plucked' around Lumbar 2, 3 & 4- the refrigerator in the other room kept clicking and knocking. This happened for about 15 or 20 minutes. The synchronicity was uncanny. I eventually knew when the refrigerator would 'knock' right before it did because I realized the cadence and patterns of energy in those lumbar regions of my spine.

Sure enough, I looked behind this spare refrigerator afterwards and [it is an older model]- it had a grill of skinny pipes running vertically... like a Harp made of tubes rather than strings.

"I see what appeared as a big, plump, white bird, with the head of a man- flying towards my left. Then I was seated in a class room, and being taught the following...

I am looking down, as various items are being displayed on a desk.
I can 'view' scenes for instruction somewhere in my 'mind-projection'... "

[How do you explain this stuff???]

“...Like two Harps-intersecting:

The Chords are ‘super-imposed’ vertically and horizontally.

These Chords are composed of etheric [invisible] filaments...
‘plasma fibers’ that run in 90 degree angles.

-Similar to Ley Lines-

Each Intersecting Plasma-Chord resonates at different frequencies.

The Shunt:

This Series of Oscillations
Pass throughout the Grid Patterns- Harmonically.

In turn, they vibrate intersecting chords [Grids] which form a Nexus.

The Names of the EE are the receiving Conduits.

Each frequency is an EE Signature.

Thus the Enochian Language, Itself, is as a Music Scale.

Each Grid composition are lines of Longitude & Latitude.

They transmit and intercept/receive radiating Acoustic Plasmid* vibrations.

→ The Tones transmit, intercept, mutant/change... and become a new vibration...forming an EE Signature

plasmid

–noun Microbiology .

a segment of DNA independent of the chromosomes and capable of replication, occurring in bacteria and yeast: used in recombinant DNA procedures to transfer genetic material from one cell to another.

These Tones radiate LUX.

Each of the ascending scale levels are higher frequencies, ending in the Table of Union- Black Cross.

This is why the Grid Formation is so important- most of the EE materials, including Liber Loagaeth, are all in grid patterns.

The EE wanted this Grid Composition-this is the 'Blueprint' behind it.

“Enochian Entities - Book B” – By SaToGa
Volume #2:

“In the “ZAX Vision”, the EE explained it as:

This is the Analogy of Correlation

(This Volume: “ZAX Vision: Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”)

“Think of the 18 Calls as The Keys that Open the Tumblers
of the Loagaeth cities.

The WatchTowers contain It’s occupants, &
the Governors of the 30 Aethyrs” [the 19th Key]
The Holy Table- is as the -Loagaeth & 30 Aethyrs.

The 7 Ensigns- is as the -Heptarchial Mystica
Sigillum Dei Aemeth- is as the -WatchTowers

Microcosm- is as the –Macrocosm

The EE Infrastructure: “Knitting Together”

30 Aethyrs are “of” the Cities of Loagaeth

Liber Loagaeth are 49 gold sheets with a differing front and back.

In other words, this signifies “Thickness or Volume” and that each “page” is 3D- maybe, even... “Multi-Dimensional”

The 19th Call is a Trumpet that Calls the 91 Governors
The 91 parts are ‘etheric counterparts’ “of” the 30 Aethyrs
Heptarchial Mystica is the ‘Cosmology’ and ‘Calendar’
system of the EE MultiVerse(s)

Previously, I wrote:

“Dee’s diaries are vague in establishing a direct link between the Enochian Keys/Calls and the Watchtower tablets.”

The WatchTowers contain the ‘Census’ [inhabitants] of the 30 Aethyrs, 91 Parts and Loagaeth.

Think of the WatchTower as a telephone directory.

Find the occupant and dial it in!

The 18 Calls/Keys [including the 19th] are directly related to Loagaeth.

If Loagaeth was a Nation, the 18 Calls is it’s Declaration of Independence. [‘Directives’]

The EE were very interested in the World’s Kingdoms.

We see this as an interest because the EE Hierarchy is composed of a “Theocracy”- like the 12 Tribes of Israel.
EE has Kings, Seniors, Princes, Ministers and of course,

God(s)...and a God of Justice
(Scales of Balance)
The purpose of Loagaeth:
Circulating it's Energy Matrix/Theocratic Kingdom ..then-
"The End of the World".

Again...

"But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world Her time, and placed over Her Angelic keepers, Watchers & Princes"

"As an instrument of the thrashing...This Doctrine is a Flayle"

"Therefore you may do anything" –Mapsama

As the Grid Pattern was very special to John Dee [see his Book of Soyga]...the diagrams consisting of boxed squares proved nothing unusual in Dee's current Understanding...

The Vertical and Horizontal Lines form Latitude and Longitude Lines, aligning the Zodiac, Celestial/Cosmological
Spheres, Planets and Elements

I believe some of the familiar number sequences in the 18

Keys refer to this: "456", "9996", "3663", etc.,

Some of the context from these Keys make these numerical sequences appear as 'Zones or Districts'..."

Release Date: January 20, 2011

This Volume will be [very] different.

→ This Book is Divided into Two Distinct and very separate parts.

You probably already noticed the format is different. The margin is on the left side of this book, rather than being centered as I usually have my books. I did this for a reason.

This first part of the book reads like a normal book.

However, the other half of it is written in the Enochian Language. This language is similar to Hebrew as it is written and read Left to Right.

As far as I know, it is the only book written [and read] in Enochian that is currently online and constructed correctly.

The Enochian Language is read this way:

The back cover is now the Front Cover.

The book binder is on your right, and the pages are on the left.

When you open the cover,
you will be reaching across the front of you with your right hand.

You open the cover & that is the First Page.

After reading the Preface- a Note will tell you to Scroll down to the Last Page... That will then be the Front Cover. When you scroll up, the next page [on top] will be page #2. You will start reading from the top of the right column, and read to the left- downwards. When you get to the last sentence, the last word will be on the lowest left side. You again scroll upwards to Page #3.

[See My Chart –Next Page]

If you have been reading my books, this is now the 5th Book.
 I enclosed the Names and ISBN Digits as well as the ISBN Bar Codes for easy reference as the amount of my Volumes are climbing and some people are getting confused and losing track. [Me too!]
 This should make it all a little easier.

The Enochian Entities definitely have an agenda that is aligned to our current time line. I have been releasing the Volumes in accordance with Their instructions and release dates.

This small tome in the Enochian Language [\[available @ this date of 19/01/11*\]](#)
...is to be considered a “Talisman”.

You can reference my Enochian Font Chart on the prior page, and translate the Talisman into your own language so you will know what it says.

→ Do Not Trust Anyone To Write Rituals For You...
 Especially in Enochian!

From what I can personally ascertain, this work was long overdue. There is much confusion on how to format, read and write correctly in Enochian.

Many Mages want to construct their own rituals in the Enochian Language and it seems there are many incorrect notions being given out in the advice department.

B Cocasg de Eno Domini

I will state that this EE Talisman is extremely powerful all by itself. By that, I am stating --just by printing it out, as It is- and placing It in your Temple space, should help you in your Enochian Vision* works.

*Legitimate Enochian Contact to Apparition [See My Other Volumes]

DISCLAIMER!

Of course, I make no guarantees, as these books I write are never sold- but offered to the Public for FREE.

-My Own Research, My Own Experience & My Own Opinions-

That being said... I will divulge:

Segments of this Talisman does contain:
EE Holographic Glyphs, Choronzon, Babalon, Lam,
Demiurge, the ‘Unknown’ Key #0
[which is actually The First Missing Enochian Call]
...& ‘The Watchers’ from the Original

♥ *Dedicated to My Wife, Who is My Magical Partner, The Light Of My Life Time(s),...
My Artist, My Full Time Babysitter & My Doctor- Lisa*

When I started doing Enochian again, King Bataiva gave me an “Enochian Ordination Rite”

Prototype of the latter, “5 Element Baptism”
[see articles pertaining to the 5 Wands]

I wrote it out in contract form, using the Enochian Language.
[right to left]

Superimposed over my full birth name, in red ambient light, was traced “Sa To Ga”...over the first two letters of my complete signature.

So, basically, SaToGa is an “Enochian Anagram” of my full birth name:

Salvatore ‘Tommy’ Ganci

But...playing around with the letters of ‘SATOGA’ and running it through Google, I discovered something about my own relatively unique birth name...

Putting it in Google and finding the EXACT SAME NAME in a story about Jack Parsons and his infamously deadly Babalon Working [Enochian] is beyond coincidental...

<http://www.google.com/search?hl=en&client=firefox-a&hs=BpN&rls=org.mozilla:en-US:official&sa=X&ei=QikZTYuXDcGblgh6rjeDA&ved=0CBIQvgUoAA&q=salvatore+ganci+jack+parson+bablon+working&nfpr=1>

<http://fusionanomaly.net/jackparsons.html>

<http://namcub.accela-labs.com/stories/parsons.txt>

*The Independent for June 18, 1952, cost five cents.
The front page headline reads:*

BLAST KILLS CHEMIST

House Torn Apart by Explosion

There was a picture of City Patrolman L.D. Harnois inspecting the debris of the destroyed apartment at 1071 South Orange Grove. The story said Parsons had moved from that address on June 1, and he and his wife Marjorie were staying at 424 Arroyo Terrace--where his mother had a summer position as caretaker--while preparing to leave for a trip to Mexico. Parsons had gone over to the South Orange Grove apartment to gather up some of his supplies.

In the Los Angeles Times article I had read previously, the chronology had jumped from the explosion to Parsons being pronounced dead an hour later at Huntington Memorial Hospital. The Independent filled in some chilling details.

"Parsons body was literally torn apart by the chemical blast.

"The explosion blew off his right forearm, tore a gaping hole in his jaw and shattered the other arm and both legs. He was still conscious after the blast."

Two upstairs occupants, Mrs. Alta Fosbaugh and Salvatore Ganci ran down and found Parsons pinned under two heavy washtubs and one wall.

No Book Sale $$$ For SaToGa

I have decided [well, actually, EE has decided] that all My Articles should be wide spread and read.

Humanity has reached a pinnacle of evolution, and EE will take some mages a step further.

The Enochian Materials sat relatively dormant for centuries, until They received limited circulation in Magick Lodges.
It is my belief through working with EE that the materials were hid, as Gabriel says. [TFR page # 161]

Today's Enochian Resurgence is one powerful "fulcrum" of the New Aeon.

I realize if I get my writings Published, there is not much of an Enochian Magick audience out there.

I would sell a handful of books within the first year, then the book sales would dwindle and the remaining books would collect dust on bookstore shelves, never to be purchased by mainstream readers.

*I would not want to be 'mainstream' author anyway-
That's not my personal reality of who I am.*

It is also less time consuming this way. Rather than writing a book, I just copied my previously posted articles, fixed them up and bundled it in PDF.

More real work goes into the actual magick practice and diary than in proof reading, formatting and advertising, etc.,

Most likely, the few people who would buy my book, would scan it and upload it in Pdf. on to Torrent sites...

Instead- I will do it for them!

The readers must be less critical of me because they paid nothing for this book!

Once my EE contact started getting hardcore, I was given this vision:

"Adoeoet gave me a huge pencil, and told me: "Write this down..."

I have been, since...

READER BEWARE!

What follows is *My Own Opinion, My Own Research & My Own Magickal Practice Notes

This is not magickal writ like some would attribute to the writings of Aleister Crowley.

[You can treat it that way, though- if you want]

I write these articles to guide, confirm or disagree with your own Enochian Studies.

-Guide you if your Enochian Works are not up to par with what you thought “Enochian Should Be...”

EE guide individuals with various interpretations

[No right or wrong here]

Confirm* comparative notes and/or experiences.

Disagree* so one of us will double check or research what either went wrong... or right.

Don't take anyone's word as a substitute for your own findings.

Just because someone is an author does not make them infallible.

“...In These Materials, [henceforth],...thou findeth not experts, but only frail egos...” –King Bataiva 11/11/1996

When EE told me to start posting my Ritual Notes, I was going to set up a web site, and post them on there.
But then, I would have to advertise and spam magick forums hoping for my writings to receive attention.

Of course, if people did click a link, chances are the viewer would briefly skim through bulky paragraphs and split.

I wanted viewer feedback- so what I decided to do was post my articles right under the noses of the big guns!

I wanted to display what I thought was essential to the Enochian community quickly and in full view.

When you post on Enochian Forums, every word and action is being scrutinized. There are not many Enochian 'scholars' in the world. But if they congregate anywhere, it will be on the Enochian Magick Forums.

Taking the easier way out and just opening a web site to introduce my materials was not an option for EE.

There was an "urgency" for EE to release my Notes on a large scale. A large viewing audience consisting of Enochian enthusiasts was the target.

There is not much New Material written about Enochian Magick. "Dee-Purists" sometimes bang heads with those who work Enochian in different flavors according to their own Magickal Tradition and/or Lodge affiliation.

No matter who introduces new ideas, you just can not please everybody.

Having a totally receptive crowd will never happen, and I would not want that.

Disagreements push people to research deeper, and practice harder- all for the benefit of evolution.

Here now, I present my case...

A brief biography from the main page of My Yahoo Group:

I started working the Enochian Arts in 1995.
Golden Dawn, Crowley, Schueler, Tyson, James, later on Rowe, were my teachers.

I had some success, but didn't really feel the power I heard about-
I abandoned the EE [Enochian Entities] for many years.
(They never abandoned me.)

One day, "for no reason at all", I had a dream which King Bataiva said "Invoke me, and I will heal your rotator cuff".
[shoulder injury]

It hurt me for years, and dreaming about an EE King?

So, surprised, I did evoke King Bataiva, with no temple EE tools.
He appeared even before I finished evoking Him.
Startled me, to be honest. He told me He was calling me for years, but then used this different approach.

It worked.

Long story short, He told me how to work the EE Arts, and said EE would provide more details, the more I did. I realized 2 days later, my shoulder healed.

Then I started reading Dee's diaries and I fixed up my temple.

The whole "system" [really is not a system, but "It is propelled by the Energy of the chosen summoner, who takes away the creases", is what was told to me by HTMORDA], was taught to me, by EE.

What EE Materials were 'lost', does not matter.

What we can glean from Dee's diaries are a hologram, a part is a complete 'whole'.

Assuredly, the EE are the best teachers, of their own Magick.

EE have brought Miracles into My life. They taught Me a lot, as well.

This is THEIR Story ...and mine.

In the 'True & Faithful', page 14- (after the pages switch from 468)
Kelley is given the Tablet Recensa for a cryptic code, allowed by God, permitting the wife swapping.

I believe Kelley, alone, received this 'new revised table', for the sole purpose of this encryption.

For magic, the Original Table should be used.

(Enochian Entities confirm this, to me...)

“Initiations of the 4 WatchTowers”.

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

EE have laid out a blueprint, calling it 'Initiations of the 4
WatchTowers.'

After a session, EE tell me what comes next.

EE are using the Original Table
(I was not even aware of this until completion)

Each one, about 40 minutes in duration, like a hypnagogic astral vision quest on acid.

I received a thorough system via each Senior of the Zodiac.

Also, they have given me a name of what 'appears' to be a "Ben-Ben Stone".

They have told me to tell others, but also warn against giving out explicit details or names.

"Laidrom - Earth - (Taurus)"

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

Subterranean, Chthonic- Hades, 'PsychoPomp'- Images raced through my vision, while "hearing those words".

Fire, caverns, then crystalline structures. Meet with one called 'Agatha', and was taken to see the Elder..

Laidrom appeared, like an old fashioned Dracula.

Was hostile at first, (called me an 'asshole!') then said He was only kidding, as He called himself a 'trickster'.

However, He (they?) holds a grudge against humanity, saying we didn't appreciate the work the Watcher/Grigori performed in 'our benefit'.

(A lot transpires- personal)

He puts in my aura- as Initiation- a solid cross with a blood red stone-said to be the 'blood of saints'

[got very dizzy at this point- only recalling later the cross (minus the stone) is the seal to the Earth tablet]

I am taken deep down- (again, spinning)...what appears to be Hades.

I am not Christian, so these scenes took me off guard (quite disturbing)

He mentions a multitude of Gnostic doctrine- linking up the deities of Venus.

He said (with many voices) "Enoch was here, speaking to the Grigorito intercede for them"

The chains that imprison them, shackle their "Duties", not they, themselves. I see them lifeless, like wax figures. Suddenly, I am on a space craft- flying up, out of a portal.

More dialogue is exchanged- but I am holding off revealing it at this time. These notes are brief, as the whole 'Initiation' lasted for about 40 minutes.

He gave me instructions for my next initiatory rite,, before 'dropping me off @ my temple'.

Again, the EE tell me to 'write it down, and tell others'...but they also limit my mentioning of details.

[So I am hesitant to write anything]

EE have brought Miracles into our life.

I won't even write it down, because it really is, just too amazing for anyone to believe.

They taught us a lot, as well.

When one lives their life as a Wizard, their reality unfolds in very Magical ways.

Results are what “makes or breaks” the Magick.

The Outcome is not based on symptoms, such as poltergeist phenomenon.

Poltergeist/PSI “outbreaks” have been overly sensationalized.

However, Enochian Magick is extremely powerful, and it can be difficult to contain-especially if you do not use Banishings, Circles, etc.,

In my Own Enochian Magick,
I do not use “circles” and the banishings are not to rid the premise of EE Energy(s).

I use a Separate Temple Area for “other systems of magick” - & they are not performed simultaneously as EE Rites.

I work One System @ One Time.

Reason being, when results happen, it is important to ‘back-trace’, only so I can plan ‘forward’ results.

Reality is as one “Creates” it.

Reality is the Manifestation of Your Thought Process & Intent...

“Saiinou - West”

enochian.mage@yahoo.com

West- Air- White

[I do a specific ritual the EE have given me, asking me not to reveal it as of yet. Again, EE tells me to record it and tell others, but not to mention certain details, that being one of them.]

I see a tiny sun turn inside out.

[Snaps right into my face, like a rubber band, but painless]

I hear loud wind then see a tornado with gold specks. It opened up and I seen a small infant angel [have some short communication] which escorts me to see Saiinou. I fly upwards twirling [dizzy]

He appeared as an old, somewhat annoyed man, with a gold head band and gold small wings protruding from His head and a 'toga that looked like shear gauze'.

When I spoke to Him, and explained what I wanted, He parted a pure white wall behind him and what appeared was an all white universe, like the negative of a NASA photo. He called it 'white matter'.

He opens up His Body and removes it like a shroud, to reveal a female with 'yellow hair', looking like a Hollywood actress in her 40's.

Later on, She almost looked like Hillary Clinton if she was artificially glamorized for theater.

I am told Libra, I "see" Venus. I left a large celestial body, and found out when returning it was our moon, which Saiinou said 'was a landing spot to which they are able to meet us accordingly, like Yetzirah', [Saiinou did not say Yesod],.. 'but different in many aspects' (?)

[I hear that as an echo of many voices.]

Much dialogue is exchanged, mostly personal.

I ask if EE have an agenda...

A floating eye appears, looking like a sad Cocker spaniel's eye- She asked if I 'expected a magnificent all seeing eye like that of a hawk'? She said most are not worthy of seeing that as EE are disappointed with the lack of evolution the human species have shown. I asked if I might see that power, and I see an 'eye of power' in blinking mode, the lid being closed prior to it being opened again. I understood this.

I asked what could be done for improvement and she said 'only a minute part of humanity are aware but the few awakened ones act as conduits for the rest'.

I asked how it was possible and she showed me a huge boat with many people being driven by one man, and then he dropping an anchor and cause all the occupants to no longer move in motion because of his single action.

More personal dialogue.

Getting dizzy, always chariots moving, I can 'see' winds blowing like in cartoons.

I heard her at one time physically speak 3 words loudly into my left ear, and I jumped.

This was definitely outside my head!

I was initiated by eating a small scroll made of white parchment wrapped in a gold band. 'I heard someone else ate this bitter scroll too'. I asked why this and she said I will digest this knowledge and it will be readily available when I need it.

She gave me instructions for my next ritual and said I was now through with my initiation.

She spoke a lot about time, & synchronicity, as it moves like a cloud, and we move with it, the reason we do not recognize it as a tangible anymore than wind can not be seen but can knock you down 'with grace and by force'.
[but I 'seen' cartoon wind prior to that]

Very intellectual conversation(s), much told to me by many voices- all in a 'matter of fact' tone.

I asked, [conversation in reverse], if I get my gold wings, and She makes me feel them.

She appears now as a super-imposed figure of herself with the first old man with the gold headband.

I 'hear' in my subconscious 'androgynous'

I start in a mid conversation, like this experience is now being rewound... 'I thought emotions were water'?

Saiinou says 'what stirs the emotions and keeps them moving'? 'The stirring of this intellect is movement of our kingdom, that gives [mental clarity] thoughts to conceive the feelings, thus we work in unison with the water kingdoms'.(plural)

Suddenly, Her eyes get wide and She appears as a huge dragon, and Her eye zooms up real close to mine and said 'We are all dragons'. [At that moment I understood, but later on, the understanding slipped away.]

I ask if I am writing this down to tell others and also for what reason. She says 'What did HTMORDA and LAIDROM tell you'?

[They spoke about me writing a EE book someday to reveal the information they are to give me]

I physically opened my eyes for a quick second and I do not see myself (at all!) in my scrying mirror for a few seconds.

That brought me out of alpha state too quick, as I could still feel energy flying up my solar plexus.
Very disoriented afterwards.

There is much more, so much more.
Like recalling fragments of a dream after being awake for awhile.

“EE made Dee swear”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

EE made Dee swear that he would never reveal this information with anyone, unless the EE, Themselves, Sanctioned it.

This says much...

I personally believe, from EE contact - that the EE call/choose Their Own, 'appointed heirs' to this "system".

Aside from all the sensationalism that The EE seem to draw- if it is based on fact: Then most likely, it is via Energy-Slingshots in the form of bad luck, anxiety & paranoia.

(Either subconscious or direct intervention on the EE's part.)

Some EE practitioners get great results, and some mediocre.

I will expound on this, later on, in another message posting.

"Many Have Erred..."

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

I am not one to critique others, nor their path.

I am under the banner of 'live and let live'.

I started my Enochian path as most, as you can see from the short bio per this group's Home/Introduction page.

However, as I am learning this material via the EE, Themselves, there is a great difference in manner on all magickal fronts. Playing the devil advocate here, all I can say is from Dee's diaries, we can ascertain the following...

The EE have stated emphatically, that magick, aside from Their Own, is black magick.

I am aware Dee was in possession of *Grimoires, and the EE referenced some of that material.

*[Liber Juratis a.k.a 'The Sworne Booke of Honorius' & Athanasius Kircher's 'Eodipus Aegypticus' had similar 'Sigillum Dei Aemeth' diagrams which was confusing to Dee to copy from, per the EE's instruction to copy them. -Dee owned them in his library]

I am also under the assumption that "if it is not broken, don't fix it".

To the casual practitioner, if you are getting results, by all means, continue.

To the hard-core audience -if you are getting mediocre results, then think about what I posted.

Didn't want to end off, leaving the audience hanging...

I have been experiencing a good flow of communication via ritual with the EE.

I do not want to cross Their paths by writing what they warned against doing.

I will release all material from Them, in Their time.

EE made Dee swear that he would not release any of Their material unless They Sanctioned it.®

EE are still the same way, today. EE are not thoughtforms, nor subconscious projections.

“B=2”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

® I do not consider myself a superior or chosen candidate in any way. I am however, fortunate to experience communication with Them, and I am just rolling with, daily.

If you look at the Mercury Ensign of Creation, you will see on it, the North Water Seal, horizontally 'flipped'.

The B is replaced by it's numerical equivalent, 2.

I have seen in some reads, comments about B = 7.

Particularly interesting, as Enochian has an overwhelming amount of this letter.

“The Cycling Office of King Camara”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

King Carmara tells Dee "to cast thine eyes upon the general Prince, Governor or Angel that is principal in this world. Then place my name..."

Without naming who the general prince governor or angel - this seems that it is ever changing - dynamic rather than static.

Also, it appears to me, in my opinion, that King Camara is an 'Office', and different entities are cycled into becoming a 'King Camara'.
Again, dynamic rather than static.

I believe this is why Dee was confused about the Venus Prince.
(The Chaldean Chronology would have Venus as Anna-el)

“AHAOZPI - East - Leo - Fire – Sol”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

King BATAIVA kept super-imposing over Ahaozpi, so wasn't sure at times which EE I was contacting...

I was receiving a majority of 'still snap shots', rather than the flow of scenes I have been normally getting. This might be attributed to trying something different, which I will consider not doing, anymore.

I was in the middle of a desert and a far off pyramid was my center of attention. A small comical looking being, very tiny, with a big forehead and small antennae questioned me in some 'squeaking' language that was not Enochian.

I introduced myself and 'It' took me inside the pyramid. Usual dizziness....above me was a metal structure, like steel I-Beams.

Floating within it, a semi-sphere of glowing mass - to which I was pulled into.

I felt my kundalini rising and surging forcefully- moving me in the physical. My temple was crackling in it's walls and ceiling. [Actually brought me out of trance several times. I readjusted again, peering into the shewstone...]

I now seen a black pyramid, with protruding horizontal tiles. The left side/upper quarter of Ahaozpi's face, huge, came into focus.

(Personal)

Ahaozpi took form, as 'She who appeared as an Egyptian Goddess' - maybe Sekhmet, as Her Head dress was obscure and changing rapidly when my focus would settle on it.

I seen what appeared as a dead bat, but it turned into a chrysalis, and a monarch butterfly was 'extracted from it'.

(Personal)

Transformation was spoken about...

(Personal)

Ahaozpi was smoking a hookah, which had what appeared, wooden Buddhist rosary/counting beads, trailing from it.

She then had the tail and half body of a caterpillar.

She told me I was done with Initiations of the Watchtowers and to work more with the Heptarchia Mystica.

(Personal)

All the scenes sort of replayed again,(?) and I descended down into the black pyramid- as if I was 'escorted quickly/rushed out of a back door' and came out of alpha state too quick.

(I felt like I was being reprimanded)

I ate something to alleviate a nauseous feeling and went to sleep-without dreams I can recall.

Notes were made the next morning, to the best of my recollection.

“Uneasiness of it all...”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

I realized I am @ a point with the Enochian and Heptarchia materials that is more than 'routine'. I have always took a 'sabbatical' from magick, periodically resting the psyche and nervous systems.

Letting all I discovered settle in, and moving on to the next chapter.

Now, I can't. Rather, I won't.

Magick is a path, but Enochian has become, my life. The obsession and love affair with the knowledge I have received, is astounding. More than I expected, and more than I originally hoped for. I have practiced magick for decades, and always felt teased, as coming away with mixed reservations, to what I dedicated all my time to.

I also think (feel) that Enochian is a lonely path, as most people you encounter on life's mundane road, likely, never heard of Enochian.

Mage who do work with the EE, are usually not willing to share their experiences outright, and seldom do. [I am talking the 'meat and potatoes' of their quest- not just the basics.]

Sometimes I wonder- if they just do not have anything new to bring to the table. Perchance, like myself, they too, were warned against giving to those who "the EE have not sanctioned...?"

The introverted lingering after effects- even more so, warrant the company of the residents of said Aethyrs, WatchTowers.

The pulling away and preparation of EE Ritual is an all consuming fire.

As I posted on another thread, these EE are definitely separate psyche inhabitants- nothing internal, hardwired here.

External, but encompassing the elements within me/us.

I have witnessed, many times, an uneasiness about Their nature. They are the fabric of everything- extraterrestrial and inter dimensional.

They know it all... Watchers...

Their agenda, is Evolution, and that is the Apocalyptic stigma associated with Them. Your world ends, and begins a new, once the threshold of reality has been breached by the EE.

EE have shown me scenes of devastation- allegory and real time, of history and future.

EE are scientists and historians... once telling me mankind's science "is weak"

Madimi makes it clear- EE's creation is of Another Kind.

They are an Evolutionary Scourge, that whips, tames and teaches- all at the same time.

It was during the 'old' flag of England that the "C" Carmara and all the names of the Kings and Princes of the Heptarchial Mystica starting with the letter "B" were current [1400-1603 i.e., Dee's current era]...but would later, cycle.

Dee's order of the planets, [minus the Sigil of Aemeth] as opposed to the common Chaldean order, is the cycle.

“Prince Bagenol via King Baligon Conjuring”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

Venus - Friday

Baligon no longer officially bears the title King Carmara, but out of respect, like ex-presidents, still carries the title's 'essence'

Under Sol, He may be summoned as King Caligon and Prince Cagenol (see prior posting)...as He told me it is the intent, carried upon the aires of the sigil which summon Them.

The Heptarchial Entities appear quite easy. I have called many from Solomon over the years- but the Heptarchial seem as if They are 'already here' (and never quite leave- which is okay by me!)..

He gave me specific exercises to perform (@ the East) and the kundalini power surges were incredible.

The 42 Ministers appeared as many individual lights, then assuming one spherical form. As They parted, I seen a big menacing wolf-like creature- who then became very friendly and puppy-like.

King C/Baligon appears dressed in regal Santa Claus apparel (similar, not exact though)- and told me He resembles "Asiatic- because He was in a form of that kind- to them, many times ago"

Then He appeared in another form, which I will not disclose.

UPDATE/CONFIRMATION: (was) Prince Bagenol via King Baligon Conjuring King Baligon, less than 24 hours later- did as He said He would, on my behalf.

His terminology: "Granted"

I posted this to those deciding if Enochian Magic/Hept. Myst. is worth the time consuming head scratching over

New Moon Timing:

The Dark of it, and Saturday [Saturn] - Dark Mother, Binah- timing seems too good to pass.

Wasn't sure [Luna Affiliation/Monday as Their Sabbath] EE would be 'diminished' for ritual because of the New Moon-

The Seal of The Ministers of Prince Brorges is placed under me, as the Work Prince Brorges does, has His Ministers as the Foundation.

The Seal of Prince Brorges sits on the right side of my altar, for He does the Work (Right hand Man) of the King.

King Bnapsen's Seal is held in my left hand.

The energy (left hand receptive) flows through me, & @ my base the 42 Ministers' energy rising- through the Seal on my Right, of the Prince.

The Holy Table, Seal of Truth, 7 Ensigns of Creation and the conducive nature of the red silk absorbs (acknowledges in realms) and directs it all above, to the Prince's Seal on the right hand (area).

I see a flaming Heptagram, and hear the Voices, which later bring visions...

What I asked, is what I have asked times before of the entities of the Goetia. I have had limited, short lived help with those entities for this, one specific problem.

I have assigned it to the Prince, through the King, now.

I will update when appropriate.

#”My Enochian Magic Rituals and Diaries, in PDF(s).”

*THIS WAS WHEN I ‘KNEW’ IT WAS TIME TO ‘PACKAGE-UP’ MY ARTICLES AND WIDELY DISTRIBUTE THEM FOR FREE.
I respect everyone’s tradition and their own unique flavor of Enochian Magick.*

→ *Making ‘Ipsissimus status’, collecting credentials and pocketing some book sale cash was never my goal.
I was always going to stay Anonymous, post articles, then vanish off

However, if I chose to return with more updated information about the Enochian Entities, my prior Anonymous Incarnation would have worked against me.

-Adoeoet gave me a huge pencil, and told me: "Write this

Different than Golden Dawn, Aurum Solis, OSDL, Crowley, Schueler, Tyson, DuQuette, Frater WIT, DeSalvo, Jones, LaVey, Aquino and others.

I studied their works.
I practiced many of them.

However, once I dug deeper into Dee's diaries, I knew the potential to make a 'Purist System' was feasible.

This is NOT a hybrid of other magical systems.

It does NOT incorporate any Qabala, Hebrew, Thelema, Golden Dawn, Telematic Imagery, Gematria, Chaldean ref., Egyptian etc...though I do tend to see a hint of Daoism in it.

The EE referenced books from Dee's personal library, but the EE also said other magic was black and Theirs is the true works of God.

The late Ben Rowe sought to see Enochian evolve.
[He noticed the possibility of an extraterrestrial/inter-dimensional connection.]

EE are messengers, so 'angel' is acceptable terminology. However, Western World usage of 'angel' can be confusing as Madimi admits the EE are of a differing order and creation.

The EE teach THEIR 'SYSTEM...this is not my chaote theories

[I do a specific ritual the EE have given me, asking me not to reveal it as of yet. Again, EE tells me to record it and tell others, but not to mention certain details, that being one of them.]

I ask if I am writing this down to tell others and also for what reason.
'What did HTMORDA and LAIDROM tell you'?

[They spoke about me writing a EE book someday to reveal the information they are to give me]

"Carmara Calls!"...Opening the Veil of Enochiana

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

The Book of Daniel and Revelation, are some what of a time capsule.

To be opened at an appointed time frame.

Enochian, too- was packed up, to be later unveiled- as knowledge increases, and this Aeon ripens...

The advent of the cyber-age, when third world countries have nukes.

Either bad timing or morphic resonance from back washing currents from a magical yester-year...this is the era of awakening...as "Carmara Calls"

"The purpose of Loagaeth was said to be the ushering in of a new age on Earth, the last age before the end of all things. Instructions for using it to that effect were never given; the angels continually put it off, saying that only God could decide when the time was right." -Ben Rowe

"King Carmara & 'Governor' PARAOAN"

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

King Carmara is a TITLE.

PARAOAN, not the 65th Governor [Sigil expresses LAXDIZI]...nor is PARAOAN a '92th Governor'.

PARAOAN is sort of a etheric cross over bridge, suspending the Tablet between worlds.

King Carmara shows a revolving and evolving hierarchy.

'Governor' PARAOAN is an epitome of 'what can come next', such as typing " . . . " So, actually, in a sense, PARAOAN could be the prototype of a '92th Governor'.

The Key of It All literally, is 'Enochian is Dynamic, never Static'.

→ I own Aleister Crowley's Liber 418
"The Vision & the Voice" but I won't read it yet.
[The only Crowley writing I have not read- own them all]
I do not want to adulterate my own visions by having his visions locked away in my memory bank and dancing in my head.
[EE uses this, see later articles in this book]

"Scrying the Aethyrs: TEX"

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com
[My older diary notes:]

TEX - 4 Parts

Calling of the 4 Princes- of the 4 parts, Their Sigils, employed.

All 4 Princes appear on the North - Water - Watch Tower:
Thus, Transformation of Form.

Negative aspects via this Watch Tower are Deception and Illusion.

I perform a ritual given to me prior, by the EE.
I am 'scheduled' to perform this particular Aethyr Working, as told to me, by the EE.

I am told to wear my Enochian Ring, on my left (marriage band) ring finger.

I perform a rite similar to the Middle Pillar.

As I 'grow upwards', I realize one foot is standing on Earth, the other, standing on Luna.

[By 'half standing on Luna', I assume, partially 'astral lodged' in Yesod.]

Opening Rite continues...

Call of the Aethyrs: TEX

Immediately, under the Lamén, I feel intense heat.
I feel like I am having a heart attack- no pain, just heavy pressure and constriction dead center of my chest. I sweat profusely, and honestly, am ready to bolt from my temple to summon an ambulance.

I cycle from Beta to Alpha, repeatedly.

Suddenly, I hear a calm voice telling me, assuring me, I am fine. [Just anxiety from intense energy.]

Vision opens of a volcano erupting,... I am wrapped in clear cellophane(?), and lava gushes upon me, burying me.

[Obviously, heart attack seems imminent!]

I'm thinking I have been duped and now I am done!
[Again, I am reassured.]

I am buried alive, under cooling lava.

I ask for help, or guidance- and another voice says, clearly-

"There will be no help for you"...

(Personal conversation ensues)

This buried alive vision lasts for what seems to be a couple of minutes.

(After wards, I check my voice recorder log, and in actuality, just a few seconds passed. The whole TEX session, minus the preliminary ritual, lasted 34:43.)

Numerology is exact- that "34:43" - 7/7 is legit and amazing.

The buried alive heaviness subsides- and I fall, supine- downwards. I am in a cavern, with darkness fading in and out.

[There are quite a few inactive scenes in this exploration, where all I see is darkness and hear nothing.]

I am in a desert.

White sand.

Aleister Crowley, dressed as an Arab, passes perpendicular to me,
and notices me.

[I feel...maybe,...this was a replay of an Akashic recording]

I am pulled upwards, and I see an island with palm trees.

I am inside an old basement (?) and see a dim light bulb. I am pulled to it, and the glowing filament is right in my face. I am now one with that violet flaming filament, and am inside the glass bulb. A voice says I am light, but still trapped and limited within my confines.

I feel this heat.

(Personal conversation ensues)

Shifting scenes of islands, bodies of water...I am underground, then in the sky...I see stars, celestial bodies, simultaneously.

I see a female eyeball, left profile.

I experience more scene shifts.

Another eyeball seen, with long white eyelashes, all cornea- no pupil
(but it 'watches me')

I now meet the cartoon personality (little guy with mustache and black top hat) of Milton Bradley's "Monopoly" game.

(I played Monopoly only once, about 40 years ago as a child- hated it.

Definitely not something that should be in my recent mental records!)

(Personal conversation ensues)

He shifts back and forth into the cartoon character of "Wimpy" from Popeye. (Who knows!)

(Personal conversation ensues)

Now, I am watching a female with long painted fingernails throw dice. I watch her play Monopoly and suddenly I am inside the small 'silver train' playing piece. I am being driven around the game board, and just drop downwards into another cavern.

I see glowing green eyes.
I walk and see bright orange light- active lava, but silent and non-threatening this time around.

I fly upwards out of what appears the introductory volcano.

I see a male lion approaching me. Then I am somewhat inside his roaring mouth. I back away and grow large. I look down at the lion and he playfully rolls on his back, exposing his belly.

An angel lifts me up and says "we have work to do"...
(Telepathically I asked prior for an Initiation of TEX)

We are flying fast. I am on a beach, no sand, just black shiny small rocks and pebbles. I look and see fallen skyscrapers, buildings destroyed all round me.

Ominous silence, and it is snowing. I hear "Ice-Age".

I believe a different angel continues on with me...

(Personal conversation ensues)

Flying with this EE, extremely fast...I see Old England and it's inhabitants dressed in 1880's attire.

(I never been to England, but I 'knew I was there'.)

Flying.....loud wind gushes.....

I see what appears as 'primitive man' and hear and 'read phonetically'... "barMUda".

(MU, as in Lemuria? Bar, as in "son of"...not sure...)

Again I hear "Ice-Age".

I see dinosaurs, then darkness and what appears as a still photo of 'the Big Bang'.

Now, in linear terms, I am moving forward in time, again.

I see once more, primitive men, like cavemen.

One of them is standing in a body of water, (a beach?) and he pulls a fish out of the water, as if hunting for food.

He rips the fish open [vertically/long ways down], and a cell phone is inside it.

He smells it and it rings.
He notices me, and hands me the phone.

I get dizzy, spinning...

An angel lifts me and flies me to a mountain composed of what looks like 'cartoon-esque' glass shards of stone...

[The English language doesn't always have the equivalent words to match up to what I seek to describe from my Enochian experiences.]

(Personal conversation ensues)

I am on level ground, looking up at Luna.
(I feel depicting this as Luna is accurate, as I was originally standing on it with one foot)

There were other scenes, omitted, as some were repetitious in nature.

There were many lulls, like scenes stalling.

Maybe I was supposed to grasp their inherent meaning, before moving on.

Sometimes, I knew what it meant, and others, I mentally noted that I would return to understand.

“King Bnapsen/Prince Brorges UPDATE”

“12/4/10 Saturday- King Bnapsen/Prince Brorges”

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/35>

What I asked, is what I have asked times before of the entities of the Goetia.

I have had limited, short lived help with those entities for this, one specific problem.

King Bnapsen/Prince Brorges have successfully helped me.

In far greater capacity than the help received by a couple of entities of the Goetia.

"Solomon's entities" are extremely powerful, so I do not want to knock them down, in favor of Enochian.

However, Enochian Entities have an unlimited playing field, and many more resources.

“Who are the Enochian Entities?”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

*What follows are my own personal diary note excerpts that have accumulated over some time.
Rather than putting them into a structured thesis, I just had someone type them up for me (this will do for now).*

So if they seem random, most likely, they are:

The Enochian Entities:

- Adhere to what might be termed 'Gnostic' doctrine.
[Example- Reincarnation]
- Consider the Old Testament genealogy as allegory.
- Consider the New Testament misleading, as Jesus should be rebuked.
(Stealing Yahweh's thunder is a big deal)
- Condone, [rather] - Suggest, the breaking of the Ten Commandments (Adultery)

-Use Seduction, Sex, Lies - [whatever it takes]- to fulfill Their agenda

-Use Their Own Language

-Use Their own Alphabet

Madimi says the EE are "of that Order"... "as My creation is".
This suggests (in my opinion) that EE are unique in Their Own right.

Madimi's Mother refers Her_Self as "I Am".

The EE Sabbath- Luna... Matriarchal.
Opposite of Saturn/Saturday and Sol/Sunday...Patriarchal.

The EE structure of the Aethyrs are 30 concentric circles.

EE do not mention IHVH by name.

[Again, in my own opinion]... If these "angels" were Yahweh's main henchmen, They would be singing praises to him, and the name IHVH would be quite abundant.

Dee's diaries are not biblical canon, and superstition did not remove a name and substitute it with a title.

[Example: Lord God in place of Yahweh.]

The inner corners of the EE 'Tablet of God' shows the Triad- IAD.

The number Three is linked to the EE "God" as opposed to the number Four of the Tetragrammaton [IHVH].

Some will reason that the Four IHVH quality is found in Enochian via 4 Watch Towers, etc.

[But...]

Common Numerology is shared by many systems.

[Opposing this...]

The Letter B/Pa of Enochian is equivalent to the Number 2.

[See My Post:B=2]

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/18>

The Letter B is prevalent through out Enochian.
Not sharing the same numerical status of a Trinity or Tetragrammaton is significant in Itself.

Chaldean correspondences, Alchemy, Hebrew and/or Christian Mysticism show some similarities...but only 'partial connections'.

Some connections to Egyptian and Daoism maybe proven as well - but that does not make Enochian Khemetic or Shaolin.

[Some can argue the Triad 'IAD' is 'IAO', or the triunity of 'Yin/Yang/Dao']

[But...]

The Enochian materials are all Their Own.

Trying to fit It into other categories, or into other Philosophical/Religious systems is altering the Purity of it.

If the EE borrow materials from other systems, the EE alter it.
Enochian as a 'whole' is not a sub-system of any other system.

EE refer to other magick as black magick - a corruption of Their Own.

Their Own being the Original Magic, as They call it.

By labeling EE as "this" or "that" limits Them.

The EE playing field is infinite.

'Angel' simply translates as 'Messenger'.

In this sense, EE can be called "angels".

However, branding them a 'certain flavor of angel', is labeling Them.

[This happens due to false assumptions by diluting abstract understanding with religious opinion.]

Extra-Terrestrial, Inter-dimensional, Throne, Orphanim, Demon, Lovecraftian, etc, are terms consistently being applied.

Some are calling EE 'demonic', substituting 'Satan' in place of god names.

Others use phrases as 'The One' etc., merely to erase any Hebrew/Christian [Religious] connotations commonly affiliated with Enochian.

True, EE can be worked with many other systems.

That does not mean because of the parallels, the other systems are Enochian prototypes.

This does not mean Enochian is an 'extension' to other systems either.

Understanding Enochian is a complete [3 Part] "System" all it's own, with independent Entities and stand alone infrastructure(s) might be the best way to interpret It.

EE used what database Dee and Kelley were accustomed to using.
EE seen Dee and Kelley as one cohesive unit.

Conjecture and opinion [sometimes out of necessity] have been interjected to form a hybrid Neo-Enochian.

This trend has origins from over the last one hundred years.

Neo-Enochian has been used in Shamanism, Qabala, Chaos magick, Egyptian magic... the list goes on.

Some are using Enochian language interchangeably with Solomonian grimoires. [for an extra boost]

Certainly, having a personal temple aligned to a particular lodge current, then putting up 4 Watch Tower Tablets and a Tablet of Union will achieve results.

Sitting in a sweat lodge, consuming Peyote and using an Enochian Call will aid the vision quest.

Spare's insights coupled with a sigil and chaosphere, empowered by Enochian, will produce results.

However,... To say Enochian is Shamanic, or can be fit into the Tree of Life, or is a good empowering mechanism/alternative fill-in for a chaos magic ritual...can be misleading.

*I personally view Enochian as an independent, complex machine.
One which aligns the subtle regions of Time, Space and Spirit.*

If in doubt...just ask the Enochian Entities Themselves!

“Enochian Trends”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

*Besides this private blog, I have been posting elsewhere too.
I've been getting a decent amount of feedback.
Quite a few emails asking for instruction as well.*

Exchanged a few cell phone #'s, met a few nice people, from various groups.

Thank you for that.

Now, for this...

Over all, what the Enochian Entities [EE] have been telling me all along is true. There are not many individuals who the EE sanction.
It has become very apparent to me, this truth.

For many reasons, some being:

- It is difficult to learn as a solo individual.
- There are not many 'good' books that go in depth.
- The internet web sites share 'copy&paste' paragraphs, redundantly.
- Not much discussion on forums, due to fragile egos and close-minded 'experts'.
- Hybrid Neo-Enochian, mixed from Golden Dawn, Crowley, Aurum Solis, etc., abounds.
- Sensationalism and "Enochian Horror Stories".
- Excuses that "Material is Missing".
- The Judeo-Christian embedded stigma often associated with it.

From what I personally gleaned, I am thinking out loud now...
(Take this as a lame experiment with 'fail' written all over it. Satire, not mockery. Just an opinion...but to some of you- it might make "Perfect Sense"...)

Of all the individuals who practice Magick, [of some sort] I am going to use a ball-park figure and say:
Maybe 30% of said magicians hold an interest in Enochian.

Considering the vast assortment of wiccans, pagans, chaotes, cabbalists, sorcerers, root workers, vodoun/hoodoo practitioners, Radionic researchers, Spiritualist PK dabblers, and 'general ceremonial magickians'- 30% is probably 'too high'.

Of that 30%- many who are interested, might be 'just superficially interested'...I called these types "Enochian Curious"

They hear of the infamous Enochian power, or horror stories, and do a little research, knowing full well, they will never attempt any Enochian, at all - ever.

I will randomly knock off approx. 10%

Of the remaining 20%, this encompasses:

Collectors- those active mages who need to collect as much Enochian Paraphernalia as possible- before they actually start any Enochian ritual work.

I see these types as "Enochian Stallers".

For whatever reason, subconsciously- most know they will never actually get 'all the tools, books, research' they will actually need. By wasting this time, they pacify themselves- they know they are 'at least, trying'

I again, will topple the 20%, taking it down to 10%...

Ten Percent of all those who have some interest in magick, and actually practice Enochian Magick.

Of that 10%, some are armchair magickians, who talk a lot, prepare indefinitely, then do a ritual or two. Some of this lot, will have completed an abstract Enochian working - using entities from a 'Tablet most orthodox authors don't even write about in their Enochian books'.

In this logic, the mage avoids 'failure' because he/she are 'only checking it out'...just an 'experiment'.

[Any of this sound familiar?]

Maybe another 3%?

7% of actual Enochian Magicians, remaining.

Now, how many of the 7% are using a hybrid Neo-Enochian system?

I'd say more than half.

3% of Enochian Mages are utilizing [as close as they can], a "Purer" system by using Dee and Kelley's diaries [or some form of them]

How many are actually getting results...actual Enochian Contact?

Is it 'consistent'...?

Of course, not all magickians will openly share their work, diaries, etc., - so there is no real way of knowing this, or any of the speculation I have written about in this article, for that matter.

This is just hearsay, sharing some 'thoughts' that other readers might have been 'secretly thinking about and mulling over'...

I'm going to make it a nice, tidy...1%.

Over Six Billion people in this World!

How many of that Six Billion [LOL, here we go again!] are:

'Religious'?

Spiritual?

Actively pursuing it?

Employing it?

Spiritually evolving?

Are willing to do it to extreme levels, where the user practically would [or, would love to if they could] isolate themselves from mundane society to follow their path 24/7?

[I know some would enjoy entertaining the thought of a Abramelin Working if they only had the time, money, etc.,]

If you do some 'mental-math gymnastics'- you might come to the conclusion, by the way our World is, this remaining sum is not a very large number.

[Unfortunately...]

Back to;

Taken to it's natural [or 'un-natural' conclusion]...1% are making contact with Enochian Entities in a fashion close to what Dee scribed.

Not saying - [NOT SAYING!] other practitioners are not achieving results. I know someone will misconstrue my words into something else.

My point [if there is one] being:

If the EE tell us that all Magick outside Their Own is false [black]...then logically [to me], using a hybrid mixing of Enochian with "other stuff" was not the EE's intention.
Now...how many of the Original 30% are "actually Sanctioned" by the EE?

NON- Sanctioning can range in:

The mage getting hardly zero results, even though the mage 'heard' that the EE arrive sometimes, immediately.

[The infamous power of Enochian, almost impossible to banish, 'dictation' given in reverse, so as not to accidentally summon them.]

How come some mages are not getting any results...at all?
Previously, they might have had success, in Goetia?

Where's the 'rumored...Enochian Power?'

Some mages have been stricken with mild to extreme anxiety.
This is remedied by assuring them it is 'just Enochian power overload'...

Are you certain?

If bad luck starts happening to them, is it now a subconscious trip? Or is it a "Boomerang-Effect" just waiting to happen?
Is it the Enochian Entities telling the stricken mage 'Get Lost- You Are Not Sanctioned, And If You Continue, You Will Be Cursed?

Am I 'sensationalizing' this?

How many mages will go on record, saying Enochian energy is almost impossible to banish those lingering 'after effects'?

Who's to say how long one should strive to either see results, or get hurt?

Lundrumguffa, a supposed demon, kept confusing Dee and Kelley. The EE Themselves, sometimes superseded Their own work, due to various mishaps.

How much "Lundrumguffa" interference is happening during the last one hundred years?

Has "Lundrumguffa - Syndrome" invaded some Lodge currents? Some long serving officials get spooked even talking about Enochian. Geoffrey James who wrote about Dee's diaries stated he felt the EE lurking around him as he was preparing his book.

If there is so much discrepancy, why don't mages simply ask the Enochian Entities to help clarify?

How much Enochian Contact is actually being made?

How much Authentic Enochian Contact is being made?

Now if you read this far, I will share the reason I wrote this article.

The EE have told me, not many people are having actual contact. It is a small single percent digit [but it was not 'one']

Some will ask how do I know I am not the one being duped.

[Time will tell, I suppose.]

Others simply won't care who is appearing in their shew stone, as long as 'something happens'...

In the larger scheme of things, it really does not matter.
We all grow, evolve, and have fun doing it.

Apparently though, some mages do not like to put forth effort, and get no results.

No one likes that.

Maybe this article can ring a bell of truth for them.

Maybe a little insight...

What is truth,... and how much of it does one really need, to proclaim
..."I have the Truth"?

“ERZLA”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

[Dispositor]

RZLA under ERZLA

Rather than typing out a full vision as I have been doing –
I will only post some key words, and 'phrases of interaction' that seem relevant for note worthy comparison.
[This will now become my standard]

It is wise to digest symbolism over a long period of time, rather than draw immediate conclusion.
By drawing finite conclusions, other future 'octaves' of interpretation become discarded.

[EAST WATCH TOWER - FIRE]

The purpose of this working was for binding a physical ailment with it's spiritual &/or emotional origins.

Construction of EE temple chamber.

[never banished - work always continues from where I previously leave off, sometimes overlapping. To EE, all my work is just One Rite]
(All 3 'Systems' are 'knitted together')

I see the Keys/Calls as running in circular cycles-
I used 1,2 - then #3 for this particular working.

Since a prior working [I have previously posted]- EE told me to wear Their ring on my marriage band finger. EE arrival is now immediate and Their appearance now brings minor poltergeist activity that non-participants duly(!) notice.

Our 3 dimensions and the 4th do not abide by any linear currents [within the EE realm], nor are they finite laws once a rite begins.

This healing rite of the Eastern Fire Watch Tower explained much to me.

Some mages of differing magickal systems will hold that the Air element of East/Raphael is for Healing.

Within my EE magic system, it is Fire.

[I was shown how the Watch Towers align in said fashion]
Fire is equated with energy current if it runs through a living consciousness on our 3D plane.

Body temperature rises (heat) to activate the body's defense/immunity system. I realized this afterward.

(EDIT!: Actually, 'I' didn't realize it. My spouse is a medical professional and brought it to my attention as I prepping my notes. -
This happens periodically)

During my vision, I was granted some insight into 'Enochian Physics'

Lectures given to me this time around, included, briefly;

I seen (I believe it was ERZLA) swimming. [I was looking down as if under a microscope]. This EE had a human upper torso [with fins], wore a crown, and It's lower body was 'fish-like'. I asked why I am viewing water if I am in a 'Fire realm'. I was lectured on this particular EE swims in a 'lake of fire' {I don't believe it is "that lake of fire"!}

EE explained fire is a 'liquid'
(expounded on, again, in Their unique EE Physics)

EE was moving energy up my spine- and I can see in 'X-Ray eyes' my spine appeared as a thick, black wrought iron pipe. Again, I asked why Iron, as I figure Iron is in an Earth Watch-Tower.

EE Physics 101- the energy/fire it takes to hold an dense molecular structure like Iron together- is considered Fire. EE explain it in a much more educated [long and intense] fashion.
[Included was the role of how heat and friction work with magnetism]

(Side-note: I can glean why Dr. Dee conjured and asked spirits to share knowledge that could not be found in books)

I am simply paraphrasing here, as I am not sure how much data I am allowed to post.

Much personal information is given me, including an open invite (again!) for my spouse to work with me.
[EE often visits and lectures my spouse during sleep]

I was given a new technique for scrying.
A new technique for making an energetic/psi connection...
(EE call it "fire anointing")

I seen hundreds of EEs blowing trumpets and marching up my spine.
EE told me the main 'Trumpeter' is opening a veil. The trumpet is symbolic of a portal, the slender part is the genesis of the beginning vortex, and the mouth has energy/sound extruding [vibration]. It makes sense as EE said They were parting a 'veil'

As this part was being shown, many *'voyces' say "This Knitting Together...Thou Not Rip Asunder".

In this particular vision, 'Olde English' language was used SIMULTANEOUSLY with 'street slag'.

Example: "Thou" with an overlapping "Yo"...

Ironically, Enochian Physics being delivered in "college professor" and "gangsta" verbiage!

No clue why this happened.

I suppose I lie somewhere in between that comparison scale.

I was given a different way to pronounce some of the EE words/names. I thought I was originally pronouncing them correctly, but when the EE say them, I realize I was incorrect. I am not told outright, but only by comparison in how the EE say it.

As energy was 'coursing' through me, my body was physically stirring about. Suddenly, I felt a feather was inserted under my left eyelid and the feeling was so annoyingly intense I couldn't keep from rubbing it.

There was much more...

However, I am understanding Enochian Magickians do not share their own visions nor do they share their ritual notes. At least, I am not privy to finding where ever they are concealing them.

This is all about evolution to me. I enjoy learning and comparing notes and similar symbolism. Whatever can be gleaned later on is often worth typing these lengthy notes.

I also like helping others to enrich their own Enochian walk.

[EE acknowledged 'Altruism and not ego' always in my shared internet notes.]

*@ times when EE speak audibly I sometimes see the word
'projected and written down'.

Also, I have noted 'Binaural voice' during the King dialogues.

“Preterhuman/Enochian Origins”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

Many questions arise, as well as opinions on what the Enochian Entities/EE are.

Review:

“Who are the Enochian Entities?”

“Enochian Trends”

I will now go further into my own research and understanding:

I believe in what these EE speak.

EE sanction those They want.

EE 'calls' you.

'Maybe' it is some type of 'predestination' that was arranged prior to our human incarnations?

'Maybe' EE have a relationship to 'Their Chosen' before the primordial soup?

'Maybe' the EE relationship to 'Their Chosen' was of the role
"Preterhuman Atavistic" adviser...(?)

In my article "Enochian Trends", I have examined the rarity of 'Legitimate' Enochian Contact.

The ratio of Enochian Contact in comparison to Earth's populace is quite minute.

However, what if we can increase that ratio by using an alternate means?

I have noticed that EE use hypnagogic/hypnopompic/R.E.M. stages to Their Own advantage.

EE communicate via visions, which constitute a major part of Legitimate Enochian Contact.

EE maintain 'visible' vision/sight is a prerequisite to assuming Legitimate Enochian Contact.

-This utilizes the Pineal chakra.

Kelley often spoke of the 'angels stirring within his brain'.

Again, referencing my article:

"Who are the Enochian Entities?"...I made a slight argument against the "Angel" theories.

Angels [in most Western World Magick] are God's Servitors.

Enochian Entities make the strong argument that all magick besides Their Own is false.

[Madimi lays hints that the EE are from a different Order and Creation]

What if Magick was not the only tool that procures EE Contact?

Various 'ritual magick structures/systems' have been utilized for EE Contact, but there is no definitive ritual structure Dee and Kelley used.

We do know Dee prayed a lot.
Prayer does induce an 'altered state of consciousness'.

It appears the 'ritual EE contact operation' need not have a rigid structure. This being the reason so many claim contact using different ritual methods.

Golden Dawn methods, Chaos Magick and Shamanism, as well as Prayer, can initiate 'genuine' EE Contact.

Reciting an EE Key/Call and closing your eyes while kicking your feet up on your desk can bring contact...

What is the key component then for EE Contact?
-Altering one's "State of Consciousness".

What happens, 'Chemically', during an altered state of consciousness?

What happens, 'Chemically', during hypnagogic/hypnopompic/R.E.M. stages?

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dimethyltryptamine>

"N,N-Dimethyltryptamine (DMT) is a naturally occurring hallucinogenic compound of the tryptamine family. DMT is found not only in several plants, but also in trace amounts in humans and other mammals, where it is originally derived from the essential amino acid tryptophan[...] The natural function of its widespread presence remains undetermined. Structurally, DMT is analogous to the neurotransmitter serotonin (5-HT), the hormone melatonin, and other psychedelic tryptamines, such as 5-MeO-DMT, bufotenin, and psilocin.

Many cultures, indigenous and modern, ingest DMT as a psychedelic drug, in either extracted or synthesized forms. When DMT is inhaled, depending on the dose, its subjective effects can range from short-lived milder psychedelic states to powerful immersive experiences, which include a total loss of connection to conventional reality, which may be so extreme that it becomes ineffable. DMT is also the primary psychoactive in ayahuasca, an Amazonian Amerindian brew employed for divinatory and healing purposes. Pharmacologically, ayahuasca combines DMT with an MAOI, an enzyme inhibitor that allows DMT to be orally active.

Several speculative and yet untested hypotheses suggest that endogenous DMT is produced in the human brain and is involved in certain psychological and neurological states. DMT is naturally occurring in small amounts in rat brain, human cerebrospinal fluid, and other tissues of humans and other mammals. It may play a role in mediating the visual effects of natural dreaming, and also near-death experiences, religious visions and other mystical states. A biochemical mechanism for this was proposed by the medical researcher J. C. Callaway, who suggested in 1988 that DMT might be connected with visual Dream phenomena: brain DMT levels would be periodically elevated to induce visual dreaming and possibly other natural states of mind. A new hypothesis proposed is that in addition to being involved in altered states of consciousness, endogenous DMT may be involved in the creation of normal waking states of consciousness."

-For the Record:

I am not stating Dee and Kelley experimented with DMT or any other hallucinogen.

Then again, I am not saying they did not, either.

Both men had access to many chemicals in their 'Alchemical Experiments'.

We also know Dee traveled around, a lot...

Having keen mind ability to alter one's consciousness does not require a need for any drugs.

-For the Record:

I personally use NO drugs, whatsoever

Dee and Kelley were both excellent mages, and Kelley had a spiritual gift for scrying/vision.

Taking all the above into consideration...exactly "what" entities does
"one see" when someone experiments with DMT?

Where do these DMT entities dwell?
Where is their landscape located?

Is it 'hard wired' into the brain?

Or is it someplace, else?

Are these Hallucinogen 'fly zones' accessible without drugs?

Are they inter dimensional and/or extraterrestrial?

Where does the 'Shamanic mind' go in a sweat lodge or vision quest?

<http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Dimethyltryptamine>

"Dr. Rick Strassman, while conducting DMT research in the 1990s at the University of New Mexico, advanced the hypothesis that a massive release of DMT from the pineal gland prior to death or near death was the cause of the near death experience (NDE) phenomenon. Several of his test subjects reported NDE-like audio or visual hallucinations. His explanation for this was the possible lack of panic involved in the clinical setting and possible dosage differences between those administered and those encountered in actual NDE cases.

Several subjects also reported contact with 'other beings', alien like, insectoid or reptilian in nature, in highly advanced technological environments where the subjects were 'carried', 'probed', 'tested', 'manipulated', 'dismembered', 'taught', 'loved' and even 'raped' by these 'beings' (one could note the strong similarities of these bodily tests/invasions in other psychedelic experiences throughout time, outlined in Graham Hancock's "Supernatural").

Basing his reasoning on the unreferenced and unsupported statement that all The enzymatic material needed to produce DMT is found in the pineal gland (see evidence in mammals), and moreover in substantially greater concentrations than in any other part of the body, Strassman has speculated that DMT is made in the pineal gland. Currently there is no published reliable scientific evidence supporting this hypothesis.

Writers on DMT include Terence McKenna, Jeremy Narby and Graham Hancock.

In his writings and speeches, Terence McKenna recounts encounters with Entities he sometimes describes as "Self-Transforming Machine Elves" among other phrases.

McKenna believed DMT to be a tool that could be used to enhance Communication and allow for communication with other-worldly entities.

Other users report visitation from external intelligences attempting to impart information. These Machine Elf experiences are said to be shared by only a minority of DMT users and some people report never seeing or experiencing anything of that nature".

What am I alluding to here?

Those who entertain the thoughts that EE are angels or demons, can find any evidence they seek to support those claims.

When a person dies, their own reality supports what they usually find after parting the death veil.

Christians may find Jesus, Jews may find Moses etc.,

The Tibetan Book of the Dead has some common parallels to Leary's work.

Why?

Does hallucinogen experimentation cross over/overlap Religious boundaries?

What if these 'Enochian Elves' inhabit these 'fly zones', which can be Accessed through Their materials and are also accessible via hallucinogen chemicals, too

What are the purpose of these hallucinogen plants for, any way?

Where these plants put here for our own evolution?
Does any one believe the EE help us in our own evolutionary leap towards advancement?

What does the EE do when "moving things around inside our brains"...?

Why so many 'power surges' and Kundalini similarities?

Onset of anxiety and an energy that does not seem to 'banish away' so easily?

Why do EE want us to explore Their Aethyrs?
EE landscapes that appear so foreign?... Yet, so familiar?

["Enochian Magick", is, after all, "High Magick"...]

The purpose of this article was to lay down further groundwork into the possibilities regarding the EE.

However, every mage who experience their own legitimate Enochian Contact is more than capable to assume what has transpired in their temple and between their temples.

“Exorcism and Consecration” [“Non-Hybrid Neo-Eno”]

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

It became readily apparent to myself [and one other] that the temple we used for our 'other magicks' needed an overhaul.

Once Enochian went full circle, the energies did not congeal/perform well.

If you have read my other articles, you will understand I believe the EE when They state all other magick is black [besides Their own].

I personally do not use a "Hybrid Neo-Eno".

EE instructed me to perform an Enochian Exorcism to rid my temple space of stagnant residue from left over Solomonic magick(s) I have often worked.

[Sure I always LBRP, etc..]

Still, I definitely felt an energy matrix I was not accustomed to once the EE PSI settled.

Then all my furniture was to be anointed by an Enochian Consecration rite.

It was all sort of a 'Reset Switch'.

My (our) temple is now solely dedicated to Enochiana.

[I write this merely for those who are having problems with Legitimate Enochian Contact.]

“Ritual: WINTER SOLSTICE, LUNAR ECLIPSE OVERLAP FIRST TIME IN 456 YEARS”

This is My Own "Tri-Cyclic" Rite

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

*"This year's winter solstice — an event that will occur next Tuesday — will coincide with a full lunar eclipse in a union that hasn't been seen in 456 years.*

The last time the two celestial events happened at the same time was in AD 1554, according to NASA.

An otherwise seemingly unexceptionable year in recorded history, the darkened moon happened during a bleak year for Tudor England. Lady Jane Grey was beheaded for treason that year, while Princess Elizabeth was imprisoned in the Tower of London. Mary of Guise — the mother of Mary, Queen of Scots — became regent of Scotland.

THIS WAS THE DEE/KELLEY ERA!

The eclipse will start just after midnight Eastern Time on Tuesday, with the main event starting at 1:30 a.m. ET and lasting until 5:30 a.m., when the moon reappears"

Opening of Enochian Temple:

[Personal Rite EE has given me- at this point, not to be posted]

Ring, Lamens worn.

I utilize 5 Enochian Wands.

[Not all 5 employed in one ritual - maximum I have used was 3]

I use the Enochian Spirit Wand First.

Enochian Fire Wand will be used when I open the Eastern WatchTower

Tuesday [see above news article]

King Babalel - Mars

Prince Befafes - Sol

42 Ministers of Prince Befafes

[Example of one of my Hept. workings]

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/35>

I Will see a flaming Heptagram, and hear the Voices, which will then, bring visions...

[Example of one of my rites]

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/6>

From Here - Mars and Sol...I take my next cycle to:

Keys Called: 1,2 and 3 [#3- Fire of Fire]

[I use an "EE specific Key Spiral" to choose the Calls]

East- Fire WatchTower:

Aries = Mars

Leo = Sol

[Sagittarius not being recognized in this ritual (but acknowledged in this writing) per my personal note*]

Summoning:

ORO-IBAH-AOZPI

King Bataiva [No "H" added as this is a 'mercy working']

The WatchTowers align to the Zodiac and move deosil, [again, spiral cycles similar to my "EE specific Key Spiral" of the 18 Keys] thus my following choice for the Seniors:

Seniors:

Avtotar and Aaoxaif - Aries

Habioro and Ahaozpi - Leo

Just these 4 Seniors for this particular working.

[Sagittarius Seniors not summoned- personal reason per instruction of past rite*]

Call '#19' Key of the Aethyrs - Vibrating through an almost gelatinous mass of energy. [From prior experience]

TAN #17th Aethyr

49/50/51 Genius Sigils traced over [super-imposed] the Fire WatchTower Seal. [2 of these are @ Fire of Fire]

From here, I will glean, learn and hopefully grow/evolve.

The Winter Solstice in conjunction with a

Lunar [Moon - Enochian Sabbath]

Eclipse and the Moon turning Red [Fire - East WatchTower] is enough consummate synchronicity for me!

[As far as I am aware, an Enochian Ritual of this caliber, "Tri-Cyclic" has never been performed and written about.]

“Material Gain- Mundane Usage?”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

I received an email today asking me if Enochian Magic can bring wealth.

I suspect this question stems indirectly from my article I posted about Enochian being a Higher Magic.

The Heptarchial Mystica is an upgrade to Solomonic magick.
[In My Own Opinion]

So, if you ever used the Goetia and had good results, you might be able to acquire similar results.

[I believe the mage's relationship – ‘*preter-natural’ affinity with EE has a lot to do with it]
*(I think I just coined a new term LOL)

The WatchTower system of Enochian can also bring mundane tricks and treasures.

However, I will deliberately give vague answers to these types of questioning as I embrace Enochian as a sacred rite in and of itself.
[I personally had some phenomenal usage of the trick and treasure variety though...]

I reserve Solomonic grimoires for the down right dirty stuff :)

I will attest to Enochian protecting the mage.

The 'system' seems to have a hard wired/built-in "LBRP - type energy matrix"...i.e., your aura gets some mean meridians ;)

[Those who have ventured off into the 30 Aethyrs will know that their aura radiates and resonates to a different beat afterwards...]

“RII”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

I'm tagging this Note onto this working- so I don't have to start a separate thread on this topic.

I do not want to sensationalize the EE 'horror stories'.*

When you read "RII", you will understand the significance...

Update: After approx. 2 weeks of EE workings, I have accrued the following collateral damage.

- My microwave clock does not appear on it's dashboard.

My DVR now hums a high pitch.

My Heater/Ac Thermostat needs to be replaced

(Repair said "It's Fried"...No electrical storms here).

The circulating fan for the AC/Heater does not shutoff unless I shutoff 2 circuit breakers.

Oh, and my modem was disconnected- twice- even though my computer was turned off...

-So yeah- GREAT RITUALS!

RII

Traveling to this Aethyr was like fast forward.

Everything moved super quickly.
After the ritual, I felt like I was still speeding around my home.

I can see small black shadows racing around, low to the ground, in my peripheral vision, hours later.

Freudian analysis of the following vision-symbols might show I seek to cover up and hide away from society.
[Not so sure if that is a bad thing or not...]

*See my other posts about temple prep, summoning of Geniuses, etc

1,2 Call - Rite Prep Work, then...'19th' Call, 3 Geniuses summoned:

--Vision starts instantaneously(!):

Earth WatchTower Seal- Black cross, spins

Spinning, darkness, heavy clouds, lightening
[Note: Most of my voice recording was inaudible]

I am under a desert, rising up I see a glacier.

I see a frog-like entity wearing goggles

A small town-like atmosphere, celebration-
Many EE, a crowd- they smoke cigars, and leave traces of smoke signs above them
[unable to make it out- x thrice]

A bat with a cat's face grabs a cigar and writes a symbol in the air with it's fire trail

I see this same symbol in the sand [in another part of vision]

At the end of the vision I see this same symbol in snow, and I urinate on it until it is totally dissolved.

(Symbol looks like an upside down question mark, crossed like the small letter 't')

The 'bat' is now back, and gives me a gold nugget in my left hand, and a raw diamond in my right hand.
A hawk/falcon/eagle(?) flies by and swoops down and steals the diamond with it's talons (sharp!).

I do not understand what I do with the gold and the scene changes...[my mood stayed perplexed for a short duration]

I am underground- find an outlet that leads to water.
I see bubbles from my breathe- then stillness and my reflection.
[I look young]
I am scrying underwater, like a double vision of RII

[Not sure if I am entering a 'connecting' Aire [1 of 3], or I am in a subtler extension/octave of same place]
I rise up, and I walk out of the body of water.
I encounter an entity wearing a black hat, short, [too small] black coat, having just eyes, no face- wearing white gloves-points to a path to take [...]

[Note: Most of my voice recording was inaudible]

I am/become:

-Plankton, amoeba, small poly-wog(?), amphibian, big lizard, long tailed monkey, different monkey with tail variations... then I sprout wings and fly.

[Unlike my TEX vision, no 'cavemen' in this Aethyr, which surprised me because of the 'evolutionary tract']

For some reason I feel like I assumed a form of Pterodactyl. I see a Moon (not sure whose Moon), land and 'do' a reverse evolutionary path [was a little different. I knew it was 'different'- but I did not see it-just felt and 'knew this']

[There was much conversation and audio 'narrative'- Personal]

*I am buried many times during the vision:
-under water*

-under ice/glacier
-under sand
-under a castle

I saw 3 castles, one of ice, one of mirrors and one I seen only the rear. I went through a heavy oak door and was inside. Long spiral wrought iron stair case with a bed full of red pillows.

I am in a desert, where there are three brownstone steps. I climb them, saying it out loud- "1,2,3" and a ripple appears in front of me. I am unable to penetrate it and I think "false path"...

I also seen numerous flag banners [like long sideways triangles]- red and white through out RII. [Surprisingly, no black banners]
[Maybe they mark territory boundaries]
I seen rings and trails of fire.
I am told to 'erase memories' of certain events and conversations.

[Thus the urinating on the symbol in the snow right at the end of the vision]

Much more took place...

Again, electrical appliances are not performing well under EE ritual.
For my notes, I will need a scribe.
Voice recordings always foul up.
[One time, I had a female laughing on the recorder. There were no physical females, nor TV, etc, anywhere in the vicinity]

My recollection of RII is dream like. I get bits and pieces.

I was given some instruction, personal, which I am unable to remember [at this point]

[Upon completion of this rite, my face was very red, like sunburn]

“This confirms authentic Enochian Contact.”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

An 'infinite number' of lesser angels issue forth and arrange themselves in a large circle, standing close to the towers. Ave says this multitude is composed of entities of the 30 Aethyrs/Aires.

They "Presently give obedience to the will of men, when they 'see' them."

Scrying/Viewing them to 'visual sight' [i.e., "see"] is required to gain obedience over these Aethyr Entities.

This confirms authentic Enochian Contact.

“EE somnambulism: ZAX Dream”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

When I sleep, I have many EE visitations.
My dreams are full of EE symbolism.

Recently, if I take a nap, it has evolved into "shamanic sleep".

Happy Hour is Nap-Time for Me!

Sometimes I feel more exhausted after I take a nap than I did prior.

Of course, during my 'happy-hour', my brain cycles slower than Beta, and the hypnagogic/hypnopompic imagery makes me speculate...

I wonder if while I am sleeping, EE is still performing rituals with me... in my subconscious, on another level.

Lately, deja vu is happening a lot.
Time lines of 'works' I have done in dream time seem familiar when I am in Beta crossing the Alpha threshold [during EE work]

On some octave of reality, whatever I am doing is bleeding through.
This convergence of time spirals are over lapping when I consciously do EE rites.

So lucid are the dreams, that my mind is 'categorizing' them as actual scrying sessions.

I can recall what was done on EE somnambulism/autopilot, however, due to lack of notation in my records!

EE somnambulism seems even more pure than just

*Remote Viewing the Aethyrs.

[*This is a passive technique (I received from EE)

I employ if I am doing

Enochian Work outside my Temple without any EE apparatus- I have most of the EE materials memorized]

From a comparative perspective, I can honestly attest to the fact that during actual 'awake' rites, my consciousness is occupying a body of light.

When I peer into the scrying mirror/stone- many times I do not see my reflection.

I know I am not bi-locating because my spouse would see me pass by. However the poltergeist side effects during my rites often confuse my spouse into thinking I have exited the temple.

[My cynical thought process understands it takes time for the eyes to re-focus again]

I can semi-relate to the mental trauma Kelley was experiencing.

Science and magick was one back then [should be the same today, too]

Today, I laid down briefly. (12/19/2010)

I was startled by a hypnagogic(?) loud female voice saying "By 23"

I briefly 'saw' the Large Hadron Collider with "ZAX" engraved on a fictitious silver square plate.

I am not sure if these 'dreams' were related, or not.
(I will make a mental note to check the media news outlets more thoroughly around December 23.)

Some individuals tell me I am burning myself out with too much Enochian exposure. The ironic thing is, if I cut down on Enochian ritual, I experience far greater frequency of "dream-time EE ritual"

Update:

The "By 23" transpired to become an important date [was actually 12/22/2010] in my own personal life.

It was not related to the LHC-ZAX symbolism.

"Tri-Cyclic" Ritual: WINTER SOLSTICE [Update]

This is My Own "Tri-Cyclic" Rite

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

Update From Here:

"Ritual: WINTER SOLSTICE, LUNAR ECLIPSE OVERLAP FIRST TIME IN 456 YEARS”

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/59>

Suffice to say, personal life problems dampened the full potential this rite might have had.

Also, utilizing all 3 systems did not work exactly as I thought it would.

I felt as if the energies were causing 'antipodal tension and torque' on my aura.

I brought this to EE's attention and I will attempt it differently, next time.

[Their suggestion]

-It will be awhile before I attempt something of this magnitude again.

[I am currently experiencing somewhat of an 'energy hangover']

Only because I had promised to post an update to this 'epic-ritual', will I do so.

Briefly:

--Was not very "epic". Actually somewhat disappointed in it. Prepping took longer than the actual rite itself.

Transcript:

...what looked like someone's 'science fair robot' appears, dragging a naked female across a landscape composed of 'aluminum foil'(?)

At this point, I feel something whirling around the top of my head.

Physically I am quite sure something kept pushing me around.

My brain felt as if at any second it would explode from an aneurysm.

My lower abdomen was spasmodic.

My lower right side by lumbar region was pinching me.

When I summoned the 3 Governors- I had an intense urge to urinate and my sinuses drained throughout the vision.

[After wards I realized these 'symptoms' to be false]

I 'appeared' outside my own temple's door, but was unable to get in.
"Locked out", the ground feels like gum and I slowly fall through the tiles.

A big black bird [crow/hawk?] flies by, 'eyeballing me'.
It is carrying a woman's head, who still appears alive.

I am 'told' [*in a bin-aural process] this '3 cyclic rite' will "open up to me in separate levels come days passing".

[*In one ear, I hear 'books within books'. In my other ear,
I am told the former
"open up to me in separate levels come days passing".
This was a physical process, like listening with headphones plugged into a brain machine.
This happens frequently, for me, with the Kings]

The vision slows to halt.
Much slower than my other EE works.

I hear trumpets blowing.

I see the Moon, and a hand reaching over it with an eyedropper full of blood. One drop [hand appearing holding an old fashioned eye dropper] drips onto it's surface.

I hear the word 'splash', but it does not splash- [just leaves a red trail]

I watch the blood trail from one 'tear', and scene changes.

I am in total darkness for awhile. [approx. 17 minutes: real time]

I ask for help, guidance, or initiation.

I was ready to end the EE rite for tonight.

[I was getting disgusted with all of it- weird mood]

I see a hideous child, bruised up. Looked like he had birth deformities from being exposed to radiation [was my thought at time]

He grabs my hand and pulls me, then starts running. I hear trumpets and I see crowds panicking and running. The ground is shaking.
I see a crude looking harp made of scrap wood and bent gold/brass(?) strings.

I am now pulling a wagon, holding the handles, waist high. A wagon that transports people, as one would see in China.

The occupant is a Dragon, who appears like an 'aristocrat', leaning backwards, human-like in demeanor.

Suddenly it jumps out and chases [on all 4 legs] a 'depression-era' looking black car.

Again a crowd is yelling in panic, and the ground opens up. It is a city landscape, and I fall in between the asphalt and a worn out 'green moldy sewer pipe'(?)

I see a green eye, watching me- [eerie...]

Once more- darkness envelopes me.
This continues for several more minutes.

[I can hear instructions, advice- personal]

I call for the Governors. First I see what appears as a playing card
"King of Hearts"- flat, strolling around.

Then 3 men in black suits with black pointy hats.

They appear flat as well [2D].

They ask if I need direction, and hold hands.

They pull away from each other, sideways- and take the form of paper doll cutouts, joined by the hands. They surround me and dance in a circle. Spinning quickly, they turn into a black wall.

I am inside a black pipe which turns into a cannon.
I am shot out like a bullet and am launched into space.

[Crown chakra feels painful]

I see a gigantic meteor and floating ice particles.
I see a two layered spaceship that looks like 2 'jelly donuts' connected by 2 pillars.

I hear the phrase 'ice palace'.

I am in a Torus- [white with black speckles]
Very intense, physical feeling.
[My organs within seem to be shifting]

Then, I am inside 1/2 of a broken, [cracked in half] egg shell.
[Light sky-blue color with white speckles]

I am now free falling- ['ballistic' I hear]
I land by a body of water, and climb out of the egg shell...

I see a 'Goddess of Egypt' with a head dress on.

[I see 4 numbers, statue-like. It appears as a monument.
I am told 'not to write down the 4 numbers nor reveal the identity of this Goddess']

She sits by the embankment, and a dead body floats by her covered in white foam. Across the way I see a donkey, which howls like a wolf, looking at the moon.

[much transpires. personal]

I try to walk but the body of water spreads so I can not get across.
I start to spin, get dizzy and drop through the ground/water(?)
[not sure what I was standing on]

I land on a huge [supine] clock face.
White with black numerals [voice says 'Not Roman Numerals].
I try to make out what time it said, and a tiny bird pops out of it.
It says "cuckoo cuckoo cuckoo".

The bird escapes from the clock and turns into the same big black crow/hawk bird from the beginning of vision, minus the female this time.

It looks at me and says "Don't get a head"
[I assume the pun(s) intended]

I feel an intense explosion inside my head. I am aware of being within my temple. I drift back and forth- Beta, Alpha.

[I circulate energy, and ground/close temple]

I feel for whatever the reason, this rite ended prematurely

*[*In one ear, I hear 'books within books'. In my other ear,
I am told the former:*

After thoughts; Reflections-

Thoughts working their way upwards..

Like all visions, they take time, time, time to reveal their multi-layers.

I usually understand them all, after reviewing notes from days gone by-
Dreams, synchronizations, emotions, people/event triggers, etc, [SPOUSE!] usually open those mind doors.

I feel 'energy drunk' today, but gave a lot of reflection to where I am currently in my life

A few years ago, life was a self imposed hell.
Many personal problems. Many.

In 1995 [as I wrote about in other articles], I started working Enochian Magick in many hybrid forms.

I did get excellent results with it, as I am sure many of you do.

During the peak of my EE work around that time, I had a vision.
A vision of who my future spouse was to be.
I received my spouse's first name, and what my spouse was to look like..

So strong was my magick, that miracles had cemented my faith, rock solid!

By vision recollection, I had the "facial portrait of my future spouse" tattooed on me.

[I was THAT CERTAIN!]

After EE relocating me, with funds, transportation- [the works!] I grew weary of waiting to find my spouse.

I figured I was duped, or I misinterpreted what I had seen in that vision. Now I have a tattoo on me that means NOTHING!

Ten years had passed- TEN!
Performing other systems of magick-
Taking some magickal 'sabbaticals'-

Suddenly, for some reason, I "Knew" it was close...

I sensed it..

I started hitting the Enochian heavy- and started working with the 'systems' in a purer form. Contact...

One year of this- and I find MY SPOUSE!

Was the same Name!

People ask me about my tattoo, asking if my spouse posed for the ink portrait at the tattoo shop or if I brought the artist a photograph.

When I tell them this was from a vision- people laugh!

Eleven years from first EE vision, until finally meeting...the ENOCHIAN ENTITIES DELIVERED!

The EE keep on delivering!

So, after all my reflection and meditation, "WE" thought the readers of my works would like to have some faith, -reciprocated.

This is the greatest Holiday gift I/WE could share with ALL OF YOU!

Enochian Entities are REAL!

EE Magick...is REAL!

HAPPY HOLIDAYS!

The Enochian Materials are instructions for transformation.
It is alchemy in it's purest aspect.

The Enochian Gospel is one free from dogma and religion.

It destroys taboos and replaces them with Wisdom.

It is limitless and unbound. Once shackled with names, it loses it's infinite potential. Thus my reasoning why The Enochian Materials should never be mixed by Hybrid adultery..
It should be a stand alone system.

Rather than worshiping the EE,
They seek to release us from our own captivity.
Our bondage is the confines we embed within our souls.
The tremendous energy shifts in the cosmic matrix that encompasses the fabric of our reality is the macrocosmic blueprint that points us to the wise men who follow the starry path.

The EE teaches release and purging. They were Gnostic and sexual to Dee and Kelley. EE sought to undermine the superstitions of the day, and dared to topple Earthly Kingdoms. Theirs was an embassy of crystalline thought process where truth is rebellion.

Electromagnetic realms of mindless dungeons where stable thoughts lead to static chains.

[THIS WILL ALWAYS BE CONSIDERED A 'WORK IN PROGRESS']

“TVision”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

Here's a testament to the power of Enochian.

I was doing a rite in the temple.

My spouse was in another room, though our home layout shares many common walls due to it's unique floor plan.
[We have the Feng Shui trip going on]

My spouse was doing some research at the time of my working, and heard some mild poltergeist [PSI] effects.

We have a large screen plasma TV and there were 'crackling sounds' that usually transpire around appliances during ritual work.

This time, the electromagnetic interference was so loud my spouse looked up at the TV screen for a split second and it provided a short scrying session of it's own.

[Some Chaotes use the TV/PC Monitor technique for scrying, so it really isn't unheard of]

-Holding the vision for as long as possible:

My spouse was erecting a fence and was mixing concrete for the post foundations.

A male voice gave my spouse specific directions for preparing the correct consistency of the concrete mix. This was repeated as it was very instructive in detail.

Proper Perspective:

Prior to this vision, we had been discussing various techniques from our notebooks ages passed, that incorporated "Hybrid Neo-En0" rites.

We were comparing differences since the purer system.
[Compiled from the EE materials and the EE Themselves]

The vision confirmed that it was an 'annexation' from my simultaneous ritual.

The fence/concrete foundation was the correct way of laying and keeping the EE system together.

Procured only by minimal [if any at all] hybridization.

The 'anonymous male voice director/narrator' was essential in receiving the vital recipe.

I have been an athlete since I was a kid.

I sweat profusely.

Lately I have been getting a lot of anxiety in the form of heart palpitations and lethargy.
(Getting much worse x daily)

I have been hitting the EE rituals pretty hard too, and I attributed it to that.

During a recent rite, I took this problem to EE and They told me I definitely needed to raise my Potassium intake and lower my sodium intake.

When I told this to *my spouse, I got it good!
[Within the hour my spouse went to the store and returned with 3 cases of electrolyte replacement. LOL!]

After just a couple of days of increasing/decreasing, I feel 100% better!
I'm certain if this was not corrected immediately, I would have done irreparable/long term damage to my heart.

I am also certain, many of the...

"Enochian anxiety stricken/horror stories-[internet sensationalized!]"
...can be directly/indirectly related to lower electrolyte intake.

Common to most of the world's populace, but the symptoms more noticeably apparent when PSI manipulation is torqued during EE work.

*My spouse [who is a medical practitioner] has been pounding into my head for years that I need to stay hydrated and keep my electrolytes balanced.
(Mental note-Confirmed!)

“Are Enochian Entities Yahweh's Angels?”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

"Mysteriorum Libri Quinque" contains some Gnostic teachings the EE share with Dee.

The Enochian Entities [EE] also share some 'Biblical Prophecy'.

Here's one prophecy I feel needs addressing:

The antichrist appearance is immanent.

If these EE were "angels of Yahweh", I am certain the EE would provide valid information concerning scripture.

[This seems like common sense to me]

According to The Bible:

Deut. 18:20

"But the prophet who presumes to speak a word in My name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or who speaks in the name of other gods, that prophet shall die."

21) "And if you say in your heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD has not spoken?"

22) "when a prophet speaks in the name of the LORD, if the thing does not happen or come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD has not spoken; the prophet has spoken it presumptuously; you shall not be afraid of him."

The Old Testament is Yahweh's 'guide book' for humanity.

If Yahweh says it, He means it.

Would 'Yahweh's angels'.., lie?

Galatians 1:8 (King James Version)

8) "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

According to scripture, if angels lie, they are 'accursed'...

How do we know the antichrist was Not 'immanent in coming'?

According to this:

The name "antichrist" is only found in 1 John 2:18, 2:22, 4:3, and 2 John 7.

The Apostle John was the only Bible writer to use the name antichrist.

There is Not a "The" antichrist.

There are Only "Many" antichrist~~s~~. [plural]

1John 2:18- Dear children, this is the last hour; and as you have heard that the antichrist is coming, even now many antichrists have come.

1John 2:22- *Who is the liar? It is the man who denies that Jesus is the Christ. Such a man is the antichrist-
-he denies the Father and the Son.*

1John 4:3- But every spirit that does not acknowledge Jesus is not from God. This is the spirit of the antichrist, which you have heard is coming and even now is already in the world.

2John 1:7- Many deceivers, who do not acknowledge Jesus Christ as coming in the flesh, have gone out into the world. Any such person is the deceiver and the antichrist.

If the EE held any type of significant court in Yahweh's abode, They would know Their Bible scripture.

By saying 'the antichrist is immanent', is [according to scripture]- Incorrect.

People who lived while Jesus was still alive could be [according to scripture] considered- "antichrist".

If anyone prophecies, incorrectly [according to scripture], they receive fatal punishment.

[angels not being immune to Yahweh's punitive curse]

If an "angel" goes against what the Holy Bible teaches:

Galatians 1:8

8) "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."

If angels are Yahweh's servitors, and if the Holy Scriptures contains Yahweh's rules- what happened?

Are EE then, "accursed angels"?

If EE were "accursed angels",
They are no longer privy to Yahweh's "high court"

If we believe the Bible to be Truth, and use the Bible for Enochian correspondence [structure of the Tribes of Israel, etc.,]...do we just 'pick and choose'?

We could get into debate concerning if Magick is against Biblical teaching.

Does Yahweh bend the rules for mages?

Do we interpret the Bible as Cabalist code?

How come the EE don't know the Bible is Not to be taken literally, then?

[Kelley was the EE contact. He knew EE were not Yahweh's angels]

→ The 'antichrist' argument amongst eschatology students today is not a valid biblical teaching. {Similar to the "rapture theory"}

The EE were telling Dee what he wanted to hear.

EE has a knack for using your own 'subconscious data base' for referencing.

They did this with Kelley [his lack of Latin, in one instance] many times.

“Enochian Alphabet”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

[Christmas Eve- 12/24/2007]

NOTE: This is Not Scrying the Alphabet

My work with EE has revealed some insight into Their System, including Their Alphabet.

Kelley received the Enochian Alphabet by EE in a thrice-fold division:

(3 sets) x (7 letters)

People are used to seeing "Cardinal, Mutable, Fixed" associated with the Zodiac...

The sequence of:

- Cardinal [create, begin]
 - Fixed [change/maintain]
 - Mutable [changing to something else, end/destroy]
- ..are parts of all the patterns we experience.

"Language and communication are the cornerstone to evolution.
Language and its expression are 'finite borders' that must be expanded to 'allow' broader horizons"- [An EE told me this]

["Cardinal, Mutable, Fixed" (#)terminology suffice until I can 'broaden my horizon']

(#) "EE has a knack for using your own 'subconscious data base' for referencing.

They did this with Kelley [his lack of Latin, in one instance] many times.

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/75>

Zodiac Influence -Cardinal Qualities:

1st Set of 7 Letters:

B, C/K, G/J, D, F, A, E

*"Cardinal" - [from the French "cardo"] = a 'hinge', that on which something turns. (It is the most important part)

Example:

In the Hept. Myst. System, A majority of names begin with the letter
"B". It was my contention that the "B" changes in cycles.

Also, Carmara drops the "C" and is Marmara.

See my earlier article here:

"C/B Cycle"

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/27>
& other future Addendum to that particular topic.

--The cycling of the letters could be considered "hinge-like"

Planet Influence -Mutable Qualities:

2nd Set of 7 Letters:

M, I/Y, H, L, P, Q, N

*"Mutable" = "subject to change".

Example:

His bigger name is Carmara, that is pronounced Marmara by the angels (the first "M" remains silent).

--The "bigger name" has the Zodiac "C" rather than the Planet "M".
"Subject to Change"

Element Influence [Including Aethyrs] -Fixed Qualities:

3rd Set of 7 Letters:

X, O, R, Z, U/V/W, S, T

*"Fixed" = securely placed/fastened - implies unchanging.

--Quite a few 'power words' of the Enochian Keys contain the letter "Z". These Calls exert 'tension and torque' on the Element Qualities of the 4 WatchTowers, [and 30 Aethyrs].

Example:

"ZACARe ca od ZAMRAN" amplifies my Temple and My Aura and magnifies/intensifies "Hybrid works".

From Macrocosmic to Microcosmic:

The Structure of;

Zodiac - Planet - Element is similar to a "cosmic step-down transformer".

-The Celestial Hinge of the Zodiac.

-The Cycles of the Planets.

-The Fixed Elements which cement their molecular structure, holding our reality, together.

--How to 'Work this System' will be Released Soon--

@ This is My Own Research and therefore, of My Own Opinion.
{Just like all my other articles}

If My Research can aid you, then I have succeeded.

Part Two to this Prior Article:

Enochian Alphabet [part I]

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/76>

The Enochian Alphabet is in an ordered structure.

Each character holds a frequency of it's own.

The sequence of order the Alphabet was given to Kelley is Important:

Ref. TFR pg. 183 per Ave Saying the "L" has "more FORCE than N".

Zodiac Influence -Cardinal Qualities:

1st Set of 7 Letters:

B, C/K, G/J, D, F, A, E

This Order:

Aries FIRE- {1.EAST}

Taurus EARTH- {2.SOUTH}

Gemini AIR- {3.WEST}

Cancer WATER- {4.NORTH}

Leo FIRE- [EAST]/ SOUTH {5.EAST}

Virgo EARTH- [SOUTH]/ {6.SOUTH} WEST

Libra AIR- [WEST]/ NORTH {7.WEST}

Scorpio WATER- [NORTH]/ {8.NORTH} EAST

Sagittarius FIRE- [EAST]/ NORTH {9.EAST}

Capricorn EARTH- [SOUTH]/ {10.SOUTH} EAST

Aquarius AIR- [WEST]/ SOUTH {11.WEST}

Pisces WATER- [NORTH]/ {12.NORTH} WEST

Obviously, there are only 7 Letters but 12 Zodiac Signs.
There is another 'structure-key' that pertains to the cycling of these Zodiac/Letters depending where They are in a Name, Phrase, etc.,

Planet Influence -Mutable Qualities:

2nd Set of 7 Letters:

M, I/Y, H, L, P, Q, N

This Order:
Venus, Sun, Mars, Jupiter, Mercury, Saturn, Moon

Element Influence [Including Aethyrs] -Fixed Qualities:
3rd Set of 7 Letters:

X, O, R, Z, U/V/W, S, T

Fire, Earth, Air, Water
Red/Black/White/Green

Again, obviously, there are 7 Letters but only 4 Elements.
There is also a 'structure-key' that pertains to the cycling of these Element/Letters depending where They are in a Name, Phrase, etc.,

The Enochian System is "Alive"...

Placement of Letters causes 'change and shifting'.
[Similar to a 'Rubik's Cube']

We see King Names which Spiral.
Adding a final Letter to the King Name designates whether it is for Mercy or Severity.
[Ref. TFR pg. 183 per Ave Saying the "L" has "more FORCE than N"]

These 2 "Enochian Alphabet" articles do not pertain to
'scrying the EE Alphabet'.

'Structure-Keys' & other Updates to both prior articles will be discussed as well as Scrying the Enochian Letters in an upcoming soon to be released Volume #2

“Is the Enochian Material just another rehash of prior grimoires?”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

Are the EE the same angels from, let's say, the "Heptameron"?

Enochian Magic was forbidden to Dee and Kelley.

Why?

We know Dee and Kelley had access to these older grimoires.

To postulate that Dee and Kelley had prior communication with angels from these "other grimoires" is not far fetched.

So, why was Enochian Magic forbidden to Dee and Kelley?

If 'Oip-Teaa-Pdoce' was just 'other angel with a different name'- how come Dee/Kelley 'were not allowed' to evoke this EE in ritual?

Why weren't they given a ritual format to communicate with 'Oip-Teaa-Pdoce'?

Mapsama tells them to be patient.

Gabriel tells them they will never understand the magnitude of what has been delivered to them.

Kelley believed the EE to be deceivers, even though he worked with other angels of older grimoires.

Kelley, being the EE 'contact', knew there was a difference between EE and 'other angels'..

[Kelley was an experienced magickian, scryer and necromancer, after all]
If EE are the same angels of other grimoires, why was Kelley lying?
Why should we even believe Kelley at all, then?

--Are we to believe after several years of Dee and Kelley working together, all they accomplished was bringing to the magickal world...

'just another way of contacting the same angels from other grimoires'?

Ironically, if this is true, how come there really is not a defined way of contacting the EE?

[Other grimoires provide insight into contacting their 'resident entities']

Gabriel makes it clear:
The Doctrine delivered to Dee and Kelley is a "flayle". It is an instrument of "Thrashing". [TFR page #161]

This is all about Transformation.

Comparing the above to, let's say- the "Heptameron", might cause confusion...

Certainly the Heptarchia Mystica can be used to achieve some 'mundane favors', as well as using the WatchTower 'cacodaemons' for personal mundane gratification.

But, that is a very small part of the Enochian Material.
[The EE did not condone the summoning of WatchTower 'evil spirits'.
by the way]

The Enochian Entities make it clear all other systems of magick [besides Their Own Materials] is black...

Ave tells them God sent false and deceiving angels to punish man and teach them black magick.

These "false and deceiving angels to punish man" would be the angels of the Heptameron, according to Ave.

Ave also speaks about the 150 lions- "spirits of wickedness, error and deceit" which are the fallen angels who taught men "demonic magic", or Goety.

To categorize the EE as "the same angels from other grimoires" are calling the EE 'fallen angels' who are "spirits of wickedness, error and deceit".

In EE's defense--This is why I personally, would NOT lump EE in with 'a bad crowd'- if we are to believe what Ave says, anyway..

The Enochian Materials is not a system, per se, but rather, a cryptic blueprint to Universes within Universes.

Keys to explore them and the communication of it's Dwellers.

It is about Transformation and Evolving.

It is the Highest Magick [if It can even be called "Magick"]

Saying EE are the same angels of other grimoires limits Them in Their ability.

[I personally would not use a Tree of Life diagram for the Enochian Materials]

The Heptameron, on the other hand, is:

-Consecrations and Benedictions

-Conjuration

- "The Spirits of the Air... their nature is to procure Gold, Gemmes, Carbuncles, Riches; to cause one to obtain favour and benevolence; to dissolve the enmities of men; to raise men to honors; to carry or take away informities"

- "The Spirits of the Air of Munday ...their nature is to give silver; to convey things from place to place; to make horses swift, and to disclose the secrets of persons both present and future..."

An Enochian Magickian knows the EE energies can never fully be banished and continue to linger.

The 'Solomonic circles', however, contain their "own" energies, keeping it tight, allowing no 'PSI residue' to bleed through-out their home for weeks on end.

This article was my attempt, my argument, [and my own opinion]- about why the Enochian Entities [EE] are NOT the same entities of older grimoires.

No one is capable of labeling them self an expert regarding the Enochian Materials.

It is too much of an open book for absolute closure.
An opinion becomes fact when proof is presented.

Until now, it is all conjecture.

I am always open minded.
If valid proof was presented, I would gladly concede in my stance that EE did not provide just another redundant avenue to express what has already been in circulation.

“GBRHeptagram”

COPYRIGHT©2010 – SaToGa
enochian.mage@yahoo.com

This is an expanded re-post of an earlier article I wrote, then later removed, from my yahoo diary:

[I received an email request for it- so here it is]

GBR/Heptagram incorporates Heptagrams and WatchTower Seals.
It does not use the *Order of the Tabula Recensa.

*See my previous article for the reason why:

"Reformed Great Table Not for Magic?"
<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/1>

This will Banish 'pre-existing PSI residue' from other systems of magick.

However, it will Not Banish EE energy.

This is a 'condensed' rite, granted to me by EE.

Erect an astral cube:

Visualize clearly, finite glowing borders.

East-Red
South-Black
West-White
North-Green

Visualize clearly:

-You are 'standing on' Red Silk, which you know is an 'expansion' of "The Holy Table".

[Recall, the structure of the Holy Table, complete with the Sigilum Dei Aemeth and 7 Ensigns of Creation 'create a 3D effect with power radiating upwards- 'multidimensional']

-The sky is neutral, awaiting your astral impression.

[Use some type of energy circulation exercise here]
I do a modified Macrocosmic Orbit with pore breathing.
I then 'absorb' the 4 WatchTowers within me.
Across me is the Black Cross-
[similar to the "Qabalistic Cross/Crux" exercise]

[When you recite the First & Second Enochian Key, you will 'know' if you did these steps correctly- Vibration is an understatement!]

East- a Red flaming Heptagram appears*.
Within the Heptagon- see the [appropriate] WatchTower seal.
[Note; A Heptagon will be inside the Heptagram]

South- a Black flaming Heptagram appears.
Within the Heptagon- see the WatchTower seal.

West- a White flaming Heptagram appears.
Within the Heptagon- see the WatchTower seal.

North-- a Green flaming Heptagram appears.
Within the Heptagon- see the WatchTower seal.
(The "B"s must be in Enochian Letters!)

[*I possess 5 Enochian Element Wands- you don't need these and they are not mandatory for this rite. They are a carry over from other EE rites I do, so I use them here]
Recite the First Enochian Key:

At each WatchTower Seal-
Call/'Vibrate through' [penetrate the veil] with the appropriate 3,4,5
God Name & King Name
[Use Mercy or Severity- depending on the working]

[#Optional- I added the following 2 steps, myself]
#Recite the Second Enochian Key:
#Call the Table of Union and 'see' it open upon the ceiling/sky above
you in Enochian Letters.

! Important- if you choose to not use the above #optional steps, add the 2nd Key after you recite the above, 1st Key-

The 4 WatchTowers spin Clock-Wise/Deosil like a "square wheel"
You can feel your '*whole temple start to move'- [eventually]

(*A "Tesseract" working EE has given me, but will not allow me to release as of yet, will be posted when I am able)

[#Optional- I added the following, myself]
-#Try to see/feel brilliant white light exploding through out the temple and your body- like a nuclear weapon was detonated and the mushroom cloud radiates through the ceiling.

[You can use this as a general stand alone rite- or continue onward to your desired working at this point]

My Theurgy [Divine Working] background is a compilation of:
Qabala, Egyptian [On my son's birth certificate reads: Osiris Orion], Gnostic, Qliphoth, LHP, Spiritualism, Daoism, Tantra, Mysticism, and "Western-Ceremonial"
[I have worked through most of the 'Solomonic' Grimoires]

I did not intend to add this, but after some discussion, I decided to add some brief [Anonymous] excerpts from a few email/private message acquaintances:

"...I find your posts fascinating and timely". "I want to be a enochian master to"

"Not since Benjamin Rowe has Enochian been written about to show a magician how to do it" [...] "...if you ever give a seminer [sic] on this stuff we want to come!..."

"...[...] and finally some body got the memo!"

"[...]...Crowley Josh Norton [Ed: Ben Rowe] Tyson Milo and now you Satoga are the only contributors on how to do enochian magic in past 500 years. "[...] Congradualtions [sic] on keeping the current a live"

"POST MORE RITUALS!"

"write more, teach more and keep on keeping on!"

"I have an Abbey for sale..."

I have released Numerous Ritual Workings, which were all dated [& documented] on Enochian Forums.

I released 9 Enochian Books and circulated them all over the Internet, for Free.

Each book also had a Release date on them.

I mentioned over and over that the Enochian Entities [EE] had a Schedule.

The EE also told me to Record Everything They told me, and to Mass Distribute it all for Free.

I complied with all of it.

If any astute reader who possesses My Books and has been reading My Forum Postings, Here:

...that same astute reader can attest to the fact that all I say is true.

*Now some people can all say that this is all coincidental.
That is fine by me.*

Perchance- it all is.

But...some of the astute readers will further notice the Titles of my 9 books, and investigate the EE Time Line Release Dates associated with Each Title....

If any astute readers have also been astute current event watchers-they might notice the parallels.

I magickally appeared on Enochian Forums right around the same time I Posted My First Message on My Own Forum, Here:

Nov 22, 2010

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/1>

I then attempted to engage fellow Enochian practitioners and enthusiasts alike, with magickal conversation.

There are many intelligent people on these forums.

Thank you for receiving me.

On some of these forums I posted My 9 Books.

I thank them for hosting them for me.

My Books were also distributed widely across the Torrent sites, just as I asked.

I uploaded them to Lulu.com and Scribd.com all for Free.

I received a lot of Emails with much feedback.
Some were from magickians who were in magickal lodges.

But most were eclectic people who enjoyed reading and practicing Enochian Magick.

I thank you all for the Emails- Please keep them coming.

I included in the Preface of some of My Books, my hope and dream to be remembered long after I leave this incarnation.

I wanted to leave an 'Enochian Legacy' as someone who took his own time and altruistically donated back to the Enochian Community my '9 cents'...

Maybe even contribute to History, my own valuable contribution.

The size of my impact is up to each individual who received me, one way or the other.

As you read this- look back on what I have authored.

That Book, was written in Enochian- & as far as I know, the only Enochian Book currently online- written in Enochian Script, correctly.

It was used as an Enochian Portal Opening to Resurrect the Watchers from "The Book of Enoch".

Here is some the History on this:

Dudael is the place of imprisonment for Azazel (one of the "fallen" angels), cohort of Semjaza. It is described in the book of First Enoch chapter 10 verse 4-7:
[Dudael means Great Desert or Fiery Caldron]

"And again the Lord said to Raphael: 'Bind Azazel hand and foot, and cast him into the darkness: and make an opening in the desert, which is in Dudael, and cast him therein. And place upon him rough and jagged rocks, and cover him with darkness, and let him abide there for ever, and cover his face that he may not see light. And on the day of the great judgment he shall be cast into the fire'".

According to 1 Enoch (a book of the Apocrypha), Azazel (here spelled 'ăzā'zyēl) was one of the chief Grigori, a group of fallen angels who married women. This same story (without any mention of Azazel) is told in Genesis 6:2-4:

That the sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose. [...] There were giants in the earth in those days; and also afterward, when the sons of God came in unto the daughters of men, and they bore children to them, the same became mighty men which were of old, men of renown.

1 Enoch portrays Azazel as responsible for teaching people to make weapons and cosmetics, for which he was cast out of heaven. 1 Enoch 8:1-3a reads:

And Azazel taught men to make swords and knives and shields and breastplates; and made known to them the metals [of the earth] and the art of working them; and bracelets and ornaments; and the use of antimony and the beautifying of the eyelids; and all kinds of costly stones and all colouring tinctures. And there arose much godlessness, and they committed fornication, and they were led astray and became corrupt in all their ways.

The corruption brought on by Azazel and the Grigori degrades the human race, and the four archangels (Michael, Gabriel, Raphael, and Uriel) “saw much blood being shed upon the earth and all lawlessness being wrought upon the earth [...] The souls of men [made] their suit, saying, "Bring our cause before the Most High; [...] Thou seest what Azazel hath done, who hath taught all unrighteousness on earth and revealed the eternal secrets which were in heaven, which men were striving to learn."

God sees the sin brought about by Azazel and has Raphael “bind Azazel hand and foot and cast him into the darkness: and make an opening in the desert — which is in Dudael — and cast him therein. And place upon him rough and jagged rocks, and cover him with darkness, and let him abide there forever, and cover his face that he may not see light.”

Raphael's binding of Azazel on the desert rocks of Dudael in upper Egypt appears again in the Book of Tobit, which is found in Catholic and Orthodox bibles, but not in Jewish or most Protestant bibles. In that Book (the only place in Christian bibles where Raphael appears) he accompanies the young man Tobias (Tobit) on his perilous journey to marry his cousin Sarah, whose seven previous husbands had been killed on her wedding night by the demon Asmodeus

In 3 Enoch, Azazel is one of the three angels (Azza [Shemhazai] and Uzza [Ouza] are the other two) who opposed Enoch's high rank when he became the angel Metatron. Whilst they were fallen at this time they were still in Heaven, but Metatron held a dislike for them, and had them cast out. They were thenceforth known as the 'three who got the most blame' for their involvement in the fall of the angels marrying women. It should be remembered that Azazel and Shemhazai were said to be the leaders of the 200 fallen, and Uzza and Shemhazai were tutelary guardian angels of Egypt with both Shemhazai and Azazel and were responsible for teaching the secrets of heaven as well. The other angels dispersed to 'every corner of the Earth.'

Tobit 8:3: The smell drove the demon away from them, and he fled to Egypt. Raphael chased after him and caught him there. At once he bound him hand and foot.

Egypt was thought of as the most remote part of the world and the home of demons and evil spirits.

The 'Cities of Wisdom' are Astral Regions inhabited by Hierarchies of Entities, all of which have different assignments related to Earth.

Dr. John Dee incorporated it all in a schematic & divided into 4 Quadrants, called the Great Table...The 4 WatchTowers.

This is counter-part to Liber Loagaeth.

Each Quadrant is known as a Watchtower.

The Enochian Calls/Keys open the Gates to the 'Cities of Wisdom' and summon the EE.

The Gates can only be opened by those Sanctioned By the EE & Their IAD.

These Gates can not be opened by the Entities, Themselves, which is the reason Azazel and the rest of the imprisoned Watchers could not escape.

In My other 9 Books, I mentioned Gabriel and His timing-...was meant for Our generation...

Our Generation= The Opener of said Gates.

The Book of Enoch, dated to 400-200 B.C. states that IAD placed the archangel Uriel "in charge of the world and of Tartarus"

In 1 Enoch, Tartarus is understood to be the place where the fallen Watchers (Igigi or Grigori) are bound.

Timeline: Egypt Unrest:

January 25: On a national holiday to commemorate the police forces, Egyptians take to the streets in large numbers, calling it a "day of rage". Thousands march in downtown Cairo. Protests break out in the Mediterranean city of Alexandria, the Nile Delta cities of Mansura and Tanta and in the southern cities of Aswan and Assiut.

January 26: A protester and a police officer are killed in central Cairo as anti-government demonstrators pelt security forces with rocks and firebombs for a second day, according to witnesses. In Suez, the scene of bloody clashes the previous day, police and protesters clash again.

January 27: Mohamed ElBaradei, the former head of the UN nuclear watchdog turned democracy advocate, arrives in Egypt to join the protests. Protesters clash with police in Cairo neighbourhoods.

Violence also erupts in the city of Suez again, while in the northern Sinai area of Sheikh Zuweid. In Ismailia, hundreds of protesters clash with police. Lawyers stage protests in the Mediterranean port city of Alexandria and the Nile Delta town of Toukh, north of Cairo.

Facebook, Twitter and Blackberry Messenger services are disrupted.

January 28: Internet and mobile phone text message users in Egypt report major disruption to services as the country prepared for a new wave of protests after Friday prayers. Eleven civilians get killed in Suez and 170 injured. No deaths were reported in Cairo. At least 1,030 people get injured countrywide.

January 29: Egyptian soldiers secure Cairo's famed antiquities museum early on Saturday, protecting thousands of priceless artifacts, including the gold mask of King Tutankhamun, from looters. The greatest threat to the Egyptian Museum, which draws millions of tourists a year, appears to come from the fire engulfing the ruling party headquarters next door on Friday night, set ablaze by anti-government protesters.

Thousands of anti-government protesters in Cairo's Tahrir Square. Turkey has also said that it is sending aircraft to evacuate its citizens.

January 30: Thousands of anti-government protesters in Cairo's Tahrir Square stand their ground, despite troops firing into the air in a bid to disperse them.

January 31: President Hosni Mubarak still refuses to step down, amid growing calls for his resignation. Protesters continue to defy the military-imposed curfew. Thousands remain gathered in Cairo's Tahrir Square and hundreds have marched through Alexandria.

Former US president Jimmy Carter calls the unrest in Egypt an "earth-shaking event". Israel urges the world to tone down Mubarak criticism amid Egypt unrest to preserve stability in the region.

February 1: Hosni Mubarak, the Egyptian president, announces in a televised address that he will not run for re-election but refused to step down from office - the central demand of millions of protesters who have demonstrated across Egypt over the past week. US

President Barack Obama in a speech at the White House praised the Egyptian military for their patriotism and for allowing peaceful demonstrations. He said that only the Egyptian people can determine their leaders. Motaz Salah Al Deen, spokesman for Egypt's opposition Al Wafd Party, says a self-described "new national coalition for change" has been formed.

Number of protesters in Cairo's Tahrir square revised to more than a million people. Thousands more took to the streets throughout Egypt, including in Alexandria and Suez.

February 2: Preparations begin for another day of demonstrations against President Hosni Mubarak's regime. The army with tanks are still deployed throughout different positions in and around the square. Google improves its speak2tweet technology for the people in Egypt. Clashes between anti-government and pro-Mubarak protesters in Alexandria. Internet services were at least partially restored in Cairo after a five-day blackout.

The Independent for June 18, 1952, cost five cents.

The front page headline reads:

House Torn Apart by Explosion

There was a picture of City Patrolman L.D. Harnois inspecting the debris of the destroyed apartment at 1071 South Orange Grove. The story said Parsons had moved from that address on June 1, and he and his wife Marjorie were staying at 424 Arroyo Terrace--where his mother had a summer position as caretaker--while preparing to leave for a trip to Mexico. Parsons had gone over to the South Orange Grove apartment to gather up some of his supplies.

In the Los Angeles Times article I had read previously, the chronology had jumped from the explosion to Parsons being pronounced dead an hour later at Huntington Memorial Hospital. The Independent filled in some chilling details.

"Parsons body was literally torn apart by the chemical blast.

"The explosion blew off his right forearm, tore a gaping hole in his jaw and shattered the other arm and both legs. He was still conscious after the blast."

Two upstairs occupants, Mrs. Alta Fosbaugh and Salvatore Ganci ran down and found Parsons pinned under two heavy washtubs and one wall."

1-28-2011:

More of the "Same"...

1-30-2011:

[11 Days- from Start to Finish]

'The Vision of the Aethyr LOE'

A Tornado ripping across a desert.

This desert looks like a 'movie stage', a fill-in prop for a low budget
'blue screen epic'.

A woman appears, nude and crucified, and howling at what seems to be Twin Suns
(or Twin Moons)

[Sophia- Twin aspect]

[personal - conversation]

Her hair is as flames.
Her lips are puckered up, and she is inhaling wind.
Another pyramid, formed of sand, like a sand castle- appears.

This female [Babalon?] is nestled on top of it, riding it like a surf board.

She stands on it, and salutes the sky.

She 'demonstrates' the Signs of:

-Osiris Slain

-Isis Mourning

-Typhon

[LVX]

I look upward and see a black hole, and within it, an indigo colored eye.

It grows and I realize she is causing the black hole by inhaling the wind.

She calls herself “Eclipse”...

She is now wearing a war helmet, and holding a black trident.

She has 6 toes on each foot, and is howling uncontrollably.

[very eerie...]

The sky is now a black blanket ‘covering many stars’...

She asks me:

“How old, ye?”

I answer: (truthfully)

“49 years old”

She says:

“Thee the Liber Jubilee” (49)

She asks:

“When thou day of birth?”

I answer: (truthfully again)

“January 19”

She says:

“See It All Born Again”

[THE SYNCHRONICITIES ARE UNCANNY!]

She says:

“I know why you are here,... to die in my arms”

[“Born-Again”...?]

Her lower self turns into a volcano and erupts.

My root chakra is burning hot.

She says to make an offering in her name.

[personal - conversation]

[...inaudible...]

[...]I see a huge "Hallmark Greeting Card" that reads:
"Get Well Soon" -with red roses on the front of the card.

[am I sick?]

Her face is full of serpents, which reach out like tentacles and engulf me. She points and I look and see a window pane.

Just a shattered sheet of clear glass.

It turns sideways and in the thin slice I see an [WILD!] animal.

She says "That is Teloch Vovin, who was Cthulhu, before Cthulhu was"

She says "Leave the poison, here"

[...]She says [...]her name is "VAOAN" [Truth]

[ALL 3 VERY INTERESTING QUOTES!]

I see cities crumbling...earthquakes.

I look down and my body is composed of cities.

She says:

"Liber Typhon meets Liber Loagaeth".

Babalon: "LIBER-TYPHON"

I see Leviathan rising from waters... breaking through streets.

[...]PROPHECIES GIVEN.....[...].....

and I hear the words:

*"Violent Overthrow, Nature's Culling, Oppression, and
...Archetype of Analogy of Anarchy."*

I see the image(s) of Nosferatu, briefly.

[weird?]

[personal - conversation]

My nostrils keep itching [bad!] from the Kundalini racing up the facial meridians, and it disturbs me to keep breaking the Alpha State.

[personal - conversation]

She says "Leave your seed in LOE"

'EIIIIII—Oohhhhh—Eeeeeee'

[Ends]

Not once did She utter the name- Babalon.

The personification of the 'wicked seductress' as a sole being named 'Babalon' [in LOE] is a magickal lodge, Telesmatic Image creation/Thelema production.

-Like the epitome of evil embodied as 'Satan'

*The closest ideal of Babalon is Kelley's vision of Madimi playing
'seductress'...breaking of Taboo

-like the notorious 'wife swapping' incident.

Seeing Crowley in the desert, provided me with the Egyptian location marker for placement. I understood Crowley performed Magick Rites in Egypt. If you have read My other 9 Enochian Books- you will recall many of my visions contained pyramids, deserts and portals opening.

Look at this...

Laidrom- Earth - (Taurus)

Mon Nov 22, 2010 5:13 pm

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/4>

Subterranean, chthonic- Hades, psychopomp- images raced through my vision, while "hearing those words".

Fire, caverns, then crystalline structures. Meet with one called 'Agatha', and was taken to see the Elder..

[...].....[...].....[...].....[...]

However, He (They?) holds a grudge against humanity, saying we didn't appreciate the work the Watcher/Grigori performed in 'our benefit'.

[...].....[...].....[...].....[...]

I am taken deep down- (again, spinning)....what appears to be Hades. I am not christian, so these scenes took me off guard (quite disturbing)

He said (with many voices) "Enoch was here, speaking to the Grigorito intercede for them"

The chains that imprison them, shackle their "Duties", not they, themselves. I see them lifeless, like wax figures. Suddenly, I am on a space craft- flying up, out of a portal.

[...].....[...].....[...].....[...]

He gave me instructions for my next initiatory rite,, before 'dropping me off @ my temple'.

Again, the EE tell me to 'write it down, and tell others'...but they also limit my mentioning of details.

"TEX"

"Laidrom"

"The Vision of RII"

"Tri-Cyclic Ritual: WINTER SOLSTICE"

"Partial Solar Eclipse/ Quadrantid Meteor Ritual- [Apocalyptic]"

All these previous notes are contained in My other books.

See the last 2 pages of this book for info regarding them.

The above 3 Ritual postings also alluded to Egypt, Hawks, Deserts, Nuclear Apocalypse and the Opening of Portals to allow entry of Enoch's 'Watchers'... buried deep down under the Desert in Prisons.

The Pyramids, the Gods, & Enochian Magick are important in Crowley's system- "Thelema"...

What I believe, is the EE are pointing to 'Upheavals in Egypt' as ancient energy currents imprisoned beneath the desert break free...signaling times of Revolution & Evolution for that whole region.

Eventually it will spill over into Israel and ignite the Arab world. Of course, that will trigger world wide calamity and the advent of World War III is not too far away.

This is Galvah, finding her way home, drudging through the Obstacle Course of the Profane & Mundane.

Choronzon [like the Cthulhu Mythos] awakens, as Gaia's Kundalini is ripe for eruption.

It is the complete circle of Gabriel's "flayle" as Raphael, Michael and Uriel blow Their Apocalyptic Trumpets.

The portals created through Enochian Magick(s) are the 'nexus transport' for the imprisoned Watchers.

Their release are conduits of evolution.

AOMORYBN is the sum of the remaining 'hidden letters'- which resurrect from slumber...

upon the most Holy Sigilum Dei Aemeth.

Babalon is the World Government- prostituting and pimping out
it's Military might for OPEC.

Madimi is the Faux Media, teasingly telling us the plans, as she seductively hypnotizes those who blindly follow.

IAD speaks..."I reign over you..."

Origins of the Magick: The Dee Diaries

The systems of magick now known as Enochian magick derive from the work of the Elizabethan scholar Dr. John Dee and seer Edward Kelly. Dee had a passion for discovering lost knowledge and spiritual truths; in particular he wanted to recover the wisdom he believed to be in the lost books of earlier times. Among these was the then-fabled Book of Enoch, which he apparently conceived as being a book describing the magick system used by that patriarch. Having come to the conclusion that worldly efforts would not lead to the wisdom he desired, he decided to apply himself to contacting divine sources. During the years from 1581 to 1585, Dee performed a long series of magickal operations to that intent. Kelly joined him in March of 1582, and was his sole assistant during the remainder of the work.

The method employed for these works was fairly standard for the time. Dee would act as the orator, directing fervent prayers to God and the archangels for 15 minutes to an hour. Then a scrying stone would be placed on a prepared table, and the angels were called to manifest a visible appearance therein. Kelly would watch the stone and report everything he saw and heard; Dee would sit at another table nearby and record everything that occurred.

Dee made multiple copies of these records. A portion of them, concerning the Angelic Calls, Tablets and Liber Scientiae, were acquired with Dee's library by Robert Cotton. This part was published in Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. The earlier portions concerning the Heptarchy and Liber Loagaeth came to light by a more roundabout means.

In the later years of his life, Dee apparently decided to conceal his magickal records in a hidden compartment of a large cedar chest he possessed. After his death the chest was purchased from his estate and passed through several owners. The hidden documents were not discovered until around 1662, and found their way into the hands of Elias Ashmole in 1672. Mr. Ashmole's collection passed eventually to the British Library.

According to Ashmole, about half of the hidden records were mistakenly destroyed by the discoverer's maid before efforts were made to preserve the rest. Despite this, the records for the 1581-1585 operations appear almost entirely intact.

The record of these operations is very detailed; so much so that it takes careful study to separate the spiritual "wheat" from the chaff. Much of the communication was important within the context of the operations, but has no direct bearing on the systems of magick being presented. Of the rest, there are long periods of communications that, in retrospect, seem to have no purpose but to hold the magicians' attention on continuing the operations. During these periods the angels would present colorful visions, portentous prophecies, and angelic gossip, but very little in the way of solid information. Additionally, the reader must deal with side-excursions into apocalyptic religion, Elizabethan politics,

Dee and Kelly's personal problems, and various irrelevant queries that Dee insisted on inserting into the work.

Chronologically, Dee and Kelly's work divides into three highly productive periods separated by months in which nothing of particular value was received. The material received in each period generally stands on its own, and is only loosely related to that in the other periods. In the strictest interpretation, only the material from the third period qualifies as "Enochian", but the term is often applied to all of the work.

Period one: The Heptarchia Mystica

The first system of magick given to Dee was the Heptarchia Mystica. This is a self-contained and moderately complex planetary angel magick, similar in style (but not in content) to various "Solomonic" grimoires of the day. The full record of its presentation can be found in Dee's Mysteriorum Libri Quinti; a working grimoire, composed of Dee's extracts from that record, is known as De Heptarchia Mystica.

The presentation of this magick was remarkably sequential and orderly, compared to later parts of the work. The necessary physical equipment was described in detail, followed by an angelic hierarchy of 49 "Good Angels", and further information concerning the Kings and Princes of the hierarchy, and their ministers. The major part of the information was given during 1582; significant corrections to the design of the equipment were given in the spring of the following year, after an hiatus in the work and the presentation of Liber Loagaeth.

Equipment: Ring, Lamen, and Holy Table

The angels claimed that the ring they designed for Dee was the same one that Solomon used to control demons. It had a plain band, to which was attached a rectangular plate. The letters PELE (Latin for "he will work wonders") were inscribed in the four corners. In the center was a circle with a horizontal line through it, with the letter "V" above and the letter "L" below.

Two different lamens were given to Dee. The first of these bears a generic resemblance to various goetic sigils, being an assortment of free-form lines and oddly placed letters. The being giving it instructed that it was to be made in gold and worn in all times and places for purpose of protection.

The following year, Dee and Kelly were told that this was a false lamen given by an "illuding spirit". They were given a 12-by-7 table formed from the names of the Heptarchic Kings and Princes; the new lamen consisted entirely of letters taken from this table and arranged in rectilinear patterns. (See Appendix E.) Unlike the first lamen, the purpose of the second was solely to "dignify" the magician, to show his worthiness to perform the Heptarchic magick.

Equipment: The Sigil of Ameth

The Sigil of Ameth or Sigillum Dei is a large wax disk, on which are inscribed various names of God and angels, within a design of heptagons and heptagrams. This sigil was to be placed in the center of the Holy Table, underneath the scrying-stone. Smaller versions were to be placed underneath the cup-like ends of the table's legs, apparently to insulate the table from earthly influences.

The Sigil is the only part of Dee's work that has a direct correspondence in earlier magickal systems; versions appear in Liber Juratis and in Eodipus Aegypticus, among other volumes. Dee was initially instructed to copy the sigil from a book in his library, but found conflicting versions and could not decide between them. When he questioned the angels, they proceeded to give him the design for a new, more detailed version. The resultant sigil is substantially different from those earlier versions, sharing only the overall geometric design with them.

While most of the names on the Sigil are not immediately recognizable, nearly all of them are derived from two sets of familiar angelic names. The first set are the angels Agrippa lists as the "seven which stand in the presence of God". The god-names in the outermost heptagon are formed by transposition of the letters of these names, following an elaborate but consistent method. The second set are the planetary Archangels, whose names are shown at the center of the Sigil. These are used to form the four groups of seven angelic names within the heptagram, called the "Sons of Light", "Daughters of Light", "Sons of the Sons", and "Daughters of the Daughters". Additionally, they are used to form the god-names written in the space between the heptagon and the heptagram. It is interesting to note that the derived names were given first, and only afterwards was the means of derivation shown. (For a picture of the Sigil, and details on the formation of its divine and angelic names, see Appendix A: The Sigil of Ameth and its Holy Names.)

Equipment: The Ensigns of Creation

Immediately following the presentation of the Sigil of Ameth, the angels provided seven complex talismans called the "Ensigns of Creation". These were to be engraved on plates of purified tin, and arrayed on the surface of the holy table; either in a continuous ring around the Sigil of Ameth, or in a row directly in front of the magician. As an alternative to the plates, the angels allowed that they could be painted directly on the table. During the Spring, 1583 corrections, the angels specified that the letters on the ensigns were to be converted into the angelic alphabet, but this was apparently never done.

As with the table itself, the ensigns were intended as instruments of conciliation between the magician and the Heptarchic powers. Each ensign was associated with a specific Heptarchic King, and therefor with a specific planet and day of the week. Full-size illustrations of the Ensigns can be found in Appendix B: The Seven Ensigns of Creation. The versions shown in the appendix were prepared from scans of the diaries, unaltered but cleaned up to remove the dirt and smudging from four centuries of aging.

Two later versions of the Ensigns have circulated in modern publications. The first of these was created by the pseudonymous "Dr. Rudd", a century or more after Dee's time. Rudd's version shows the names of various traditional demons written on the Ensigns. Rudd's notion was that the letters stood for the names of these demons, and the number of times the letter appeared signified the number of times the demon was to be invoked.

A version of the Ensigns was published in Pat Zalewski's Golden Dawn Enochian Magick which shows all the lowercase letter "B"s in the Ensigns as numeral sixes. This version seems to be a fairly recent invention, first appearing in print in the 1960's. But as can be seen from the illustrations in the appendix, the sixes and "b"s on the Ensigns are drawn in a consistently distinct manner.

Neither of these later versions has any justification in the diaries. If there is a logic behind the symbols on the Ensigns, it is not explained anywhere in the record.

The Heptarchic Hierarchy: The 49 Good Angels

The 49 Good Angels are the first "worldly" angelic powers presented in this system. Those listed on the Sigil of Ameth are apparently in some way above the worlds in which men live, as are the Ensigns. Having presented the Ensigns, the archangel Michael introduces the 49 angels by saying: "Now you touch the world, and the doings upon the earth. Now we show you the lower world: The Governors that work and rule under God."

Dee and Kelly were presented with seven 7-by-7 tables. Each square of each table contained a letter and a number from 1 to 49. (See Appendix C.) By gathering the letters with the same number in a certain sequence, the names of the angels were produced. The list of names, divided into groups of seven, were called the Tabula Collecta. Dee arranged these names into a circular table called the Tabula Bonorum, dividing the angels into groups of seven, with a King and a Prince heading each group.

The Tabula Bonorum

Each of the original seven tables was associated with power over a particular aspect of existence; it follows that each angel's name controls some part of each of those aspects. The powers ascribed to each table or letter are:

- Wit and wisdom
- The exaltation and government of Princes
- Prevailing in counsel, and over the nobility
- The gain and trade of merchandise. (Later changed to Water by Dee, for no clear reason.)
- The qualities of Earth, and of Water
- Knowledge of the Air and those that move in it
- The government of fire.

From this list of powers it would seem that, along at least one dimension, the Heptarchic magick is not entirely planetary in nature. The powers would fit more with the conception of a fourfold elemental world ruled by a threefold manifest spirit, as in the lowest seven sephiroth of the cabala.

Dee retroactively assigned a planetary attribute to each group of seven angels, based on the connections between the Kings and the days of the week. Later students have interpolated a system of dual attributes, based on the fact that the Prince of a given day is in a different group from the day's King.

The Kings, Princes, and their ministers

Following the presentation of the 49 angels, there is a gap in the record of about six months; apparently no operations were performed in this period. Ashmole speculates that Dee and Kelly had a disagreement over continuing the work. This seems a reasonable assumption. The pre-hiatus record ends with Kelly expressing dislike and disbelief of the spirits for suggesting he take actions not in accord with his nature. The post-hiatus record begins with the note: "After reconciliation with Kelly".

The material in this section is more confused than in those previous. The speech of the angels is more elaborate and bombastic, the visual aspect characterized by a quality of kitsch. Perhaps Kelly's continuing hostility to the angels is responsible for the change.

The powers of the Princes are presented first, followed by their sigils. Next the Heptarchic Kings appear in succession. They describe their powers, and each presents their 42 ministers. The ministers in turn present their names, in two forms: a table of six rows and seven columns, each containing a letter; and a talisman with their names written about the circumference.

The powers ascribed to the Kings appear to be more in keeping with a planetary nature than those assigned to the individual letters of their names. However, there are some instances where the powers seem inappropriate to the assigned planet, and others where the power of the Prince does not accord with that of the King.

Planet	King	King's power	Prince	Prince's power
Sun	Bobogel	Wisdom, Science	Bornogo	metals, altering nature
Mars	Babalel	Waters, battle	Befafes	seas
Jupiter	Bynepor	life of all things	Butmono	earth
Mercury	Bnaspol	earth and its contents	Blisdon	life
Saturn	Bnapsen	casting out wicked spirits	Brorges	fire
Venus	Baligon	powers of Air	Bagenol	not shown
Moon	Blumaza	not mentioned	Bralges	Air, invisible spirits

The 42 ministers assigned to each King are divided into six groups whose seven members have names formed from the same letters. Each group rules a four-hour section of the day, beginning at midnight. The first group is typically represented as expressing a purer form of the King's power than the remaining five groups.

As was the case with the lamen and holy table, the names of the ministers are derived from the table of the 49 angels. For the ministers, a different method was used to extract the names for each King's set. Also as previously, the names were given to the magicians before the method of extraction was explained. (For additional details, see Appendix D.)

A Missing Piece

Several places in the record reference is made to a "Great Globe", apparently a diagram of some sort, which is not among the papers that have been located to date. From context, it seems that it might be an additional variation on the Tabulum Bonorum, or the 7 tables from which the Bonorum was made. As Dee describes it: "...there are capital letters under the King's names and characters: and also there are other letters with numbers: ... and moreover of these letters, some are aversed and some eversed." Apparently Kelly received this diagram at some time when Dee was not present; Dee refers to it several times as having been "brought to" him by Kelly. The angels affirmed nonetheless that it was important to the use of the magick.

This table was to be used in the creation of talismans for invocations of Heptarchic angels. An example of such a talisman shows the sigil of one of the Sons of Light in its center, with the Name of an Heptarchic King in a circle around it. An outer circle of reversed and normal letters from this missing diagram forms the circumference of the talisman.

Method of Use

In the spring, 1583 sessions, the angels indicated that a session was planned in which detailed instructions would be given for the use of the Heptarchic magick. If this session took place, it is not in the surviving records; but some idea of the general technique can be gathered from comments in other parts of the record.

The magician would be seated at the holy table, wearing the ring and lamen. The Ensign of the King being invoked is placed on the table before him. He would hold a talisman of the appropriate Heptarchic King in one hand, with a talisman of the King's minister's names placed under his feet. The magician would then call upon the King by petition and prayer, followed by petitions to his Prince, and invocations of the six major ministers. They would appear in the shewstone, whereupon the magician would charge them to perform the task he desired.

Period two: Liber Loagaeth and the Angelic Alphabet

Liber Loagaeth is the most mysterious part of Dee and Kelly's work. It is also known variously as the Book of Enoch and as Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus. No one as yet has made serious attempts to use it, or to understand its nature beyond what is recorded in the diaries. According to the angels, "loagaeth" means "speech from God"; this book is supposed to be, literally, the words by which God created all things. It is supposedly the language in which the "true names" of all things are known, giving power over them.

As described in Liber Mysteriorum Quintis, the book was to consist of 48 "leaves", each of which contains a 49-by-49 grid. The book as actually presented to Kelly is somewhat different. It contains 49 "Calls" in an unknown language, 95 tables of squares filled with letters and numbers, two similar tables unfilled, and four tables drawn twice as large as the others. Two "leaves" are recorded in Liber Mysteriorum Quintis; these are not included in the final book, and apparently serve as an introduction or prologue to the work.

On the surface, the "Calls" of Liber Loagaeth do not appear to be a language as humans understand the term. There are no translations by which this might be judged in detail, but the text lacks the repetitiveness and consistent word-placement that is characteristic of the 48 Enochian Calls given in the next year. There is no apparent grammar to the text. Donald Laycock remarks that the language is highly alliterative and repetitively rhyming, while Robert Turner calls it "glossolalic". The angels said that each element of each table could be understood in 49 different ways, so that there were that many "languages" in it, all of them being spoken at once.

The purpose of Loagaeth was said to be the ushering in of a new age on Earth, the last age before the end of all things. Instructions for using it to that effect were never given; the angels continually put it off, saying that only God could decide when the time was right.

During the presentation of the two leaves in Liber Mysteriorum Quintis, an angel in the scrying stone would point to the letters successively, and Kelly would read out the names of the angelic characters. Dee transcribed a version using the Roman alphabet, apparently with the intention of redrawing it in angelic characters at a later date.

The record indicates that at the start of each session a light would fly out of the scrying stone and into Kelly's head; this light was seen by both of them. Once the light entered Kelly, his consciousness was transformed so that he could comprehend the text as he read it. He was firmly ordered not to provide a translation, with the explanation that God would select the time for it to be revealed. He nevertheless provided translations of a few of the words, but insufficient to gather the meaning of the text as a whole.

When the light was withdrawn from Kelly's head, he would immediately cease to understand the text, and was no longer able to see it in the stone. On a few occasions, the light continued in him for a short time after the end of the session, and at these times Dee notes that Kelly said many marvelous (and unrecorded) things about the nature of the texts. But the instant the light withdrew, Kelly could no longer understand it, or recall what he had said even moments before. The record says that the 23rd line of the first leaf was a preface to the creation and distinction of angels, and the 24th line an invitation pleasant to good angels. Nothing else is recorded of the purpose of the book.

It soon became apparent that the method used was too slow. The angels were under some time constraint in presenting the book, and arranged that Kelly would be able to see the book at any time. He was to directly record what he saw rather than reading it to Dee. During this latter part of the work, Kelly apparently did not have the deep understanding of the book's meaning, but only a visual apperception of its letters.

The first leaf shown to Dee and Kelly contained the "angelic" alphabet displayed above the grid. The two were given the names and English equivalents of the letters, and told to memorize them before continuing. When Dee did not do so, and complained of the other demands on his time, the angels strongly rebuked him. The text of the leaves was drawn in the characters of this alphabet, and at the angels' instruction they were also applied to the lamen and holy table of the Heptarchic magick.

The Angelic Alphabet

Two versions of the alphabet were given. The first, suitable for being written quickly with a quill pen, was given with Liber Loagaeth. A more formal version (shown in the table above) was given later. For this later version, the angels projected an image of the letter in yellow onto a blank sheet of paper; Kelly then traced over the projection with black ink to produce a permanent record.

The angels indicated that the letters served like Hebrew, as the basis of a cabala or system of magickal symbolism and numerology. They also indicated that the letters were divided into three groups of seven. But beyond that nothing was ever given concerning their properties.

Several people have alleged that the angelic alphabet was copied from some earlier book. Laycock examined all of the possibilities, and while he recognized certain stylistic similarities with previous magickal alphabets, he concluded that none of them was sufficiently like it to count as an earlier version.

Period three: Enochiana

The third section of the work is the only portion that is properly called Enochian. This name was not actually used by Dee and Kelly; they called the system "angelic". The "Enochian" label derives from the origin-myth the angels supplied for this portion of the magick.

According to the myth, this magick was given to the patriarch Enoch by God, and was the means whereby Enoch worked his miracles. The magick was preserved past the time of Enoch's ascension, but in later generations unworthy people began to make use of it. God caused the books to be lost, and sent wicked spirits to spread false magickal systems among the people. (Amusingly, these false systems are based on the use of sigils or "characters", like most of the other magickal systems of Dee's time, or like modern "Chaos" magick.) Dee's prolonged and fervent prayers finally caused God to relent, and reveal the magick again.

It is uncertain exactly when the label was first applied to the system. Common modern usage apparently stems from its use by the Golden Dawn.

The angels were under a time constraint in delivering the Angelic magick. The work was begun on April 10, 1584, and had to be completed before August of that year. Throughout the work, there was constant interference from "evil" spirits, seeking to convince Dee and Kelly (mostly Kelly) to abandon it. Kelly also fell back into his old habits of demon-magick, prompting tension between him and the angels until he foreswore it.

Unlike the Heptarchia and Liber Loagaeth, the pieces of the Enochian system were presented in a seemingly haphazard way. However, the sequence of presentation serves to confirm that the angels were working from knowledge not available to Dee and Kelly. In chronological order, the sections given were:

- The Tablet of God, sometimes called the Tablet of Nalvage.
- The first four Calls, delivered backwards a letter at a time, and their translations.
- The fifth through eighteenth Calls, delivered forwards, without translations.
- The names of the 91 Parts of the Earth in Liber Scientiae, with the number of their indwelling ministers and the number of the Zodiacal King ruling each.
- The relation of the Parts to regions of the Earth.
- The four Elemental Tablets or Tables of Enoch.
- The translations of the Calls previously given, and the specification of the correct ordering of the Calls.
- The Call of the 30 Ayres or Aethyrs
- The names of the Aethyrs.

The translations of the fifth through eighteenth Calls were not given until six weeks after the angelic versions. The consistency of these translations -- that is, the same words given the same meaning in different Calls -- at least serves to establish that the meanings were not invented on the spot.

The names of the Parts are derived from the Elemental Tablets, and their sigils are to be found by connecting the letters of their names on the Tablets. The sigils were shown drawn on the Tablet's grid before the letters for the Tablet were given. The sequence in which the names, sigils, and Tablets were given reflects the confirmation method used for the Heptarchic magick.

The work was completed on July 13th, 1584, with the delivery of the final portion of the Call of the Aethyrs, and the names of the Aethyrs. After that, it is as if a light went out in both Dee and Kelly; having reached some pinnacle of achievement, they fell back, exhausted, into a more prosaic realm. Indeed, from the record it seems almost as if the events of the previous three years had never occurred. Other concerns occupy all of their attention; their visionary work is unconnected with what came before, and has a half-hearted quality. There is no indication that they ever did any more with the Angelic magick.

The angels who were central to the delivery of the magick are never seen again. The magick itself only figures into the records on three more occasions: when the records are destroyed, when they are miraculously restored, and when Kelly receives the "Tabula Recensa".

The Tablet of God

The first piece of the angelic magick presented was a small table. It was unnamed in the record, but on the basis of its content, it would be appropriate to call it the "Tablet of God". No specific use for this table is given, but its size and described nature suggests that it might be a lamen to be used with the magick that follows it.

The Tablet of God

The table consists of an 6-by-6 inner portion, surrounded by four names of four letters each written in a counterclockwise direction. Each corner of the inner portion contains the letters "IAD", an angelic word for God. The inner portion is divided into four 3-by-3 tables, called "continents" by the angel Nalvage; each of these contains three angelic words, written diagonally, which describe the nature of that section in a motto. Reading the lines of the section horizontally gives the names of three groups of angels.

Continent	Name	Motto	Choirs of Angels
Upper left	Highest Life	"I am the joy of God."	1. Joy 2. Presence 3. Praising
Lower left	Life, or Second Life	The moving power of God, or God's power in motion.	1. Power 2. Motion 3. Ministering
Upper right	Life not now dignified, which will be dignified	The result of God's action	1. Action 2. Events 3. Establishing
Lower right	Life which is also Death	The discord and lamentation of God	1. Lamentation 2. Discord 3. Confusing

Zalewski switches the choirs for the lower left and upper right continents. The "mottoes" for these two continents suggest a connection with the original positions of the elemental Tablets within the Great Table (described below). The Tablet of Fire was at lower left, which fits with "power-in-motion". Earth was at upper right, and Earth is traditionally the realm where final results or events occur. The connection in the other two continents is somewhat more abstract; Air at upper left is the element closest to heaven in the structure of the world; Water at lower right is traditionally connected with death and sorrow through the watery signs of Scorpio and Pisces.

The four names surrounding this inner portion are connected with the Son aspect of divinity. These names have the same meanings as the third choirs of the continents, but the spellings are unrelated. With the four "I"s in the corners of the continents, they form a ring around the outside of the table.

Nalvage says of this Table:

- "1. Its substance is attributed to God the Father.
- "2. The first circular mover, the circumference, God the Son, the finger of the Father, and the mover of all things.
- "3. The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo, in the beginning and end of all things.""

"Substance" is used here in the philosophical senses of "essence" and "something considered as a continuous whole". The unbroken continuity of God the Father is expressed in the duality of the Son (the outer ring of the Table) and the Holy Ghost (the inner continents). The arrangement of the continents reflects (or is reflected in) the positions of the elemental tablets in the Great Table, in the same way that Binah "contains" the lower sephiroth in the cabala. Thus this table may represent the unmanifest Supernal Triad from which the manifest elements of the angelic magick have emanated.

The 48 Calls

The Calls are a series of invocations in an unknown language, which is called "Angelic" in Dee's records. Angelic has the appearance of a true language, though the existing samples are insufficient to deduce a full grammar. The language is similar to English in its positioning of subjects, verbs, and objects. It is unlike English in its lack of separate articles, possessives, and prepositions. As a general rule, the words of the language do not appear related to those of any known language, although there are occasional striking (if superficial) resemblances. E.g., Angelic "christeos", meaning "let there be" versus Greek "christos", Angelic "babalon" meaning "wicked" or "harlot" versus "Babylon".

Nineteen Calls were given to Dee and Kelly. The final Call has thirty variations, making the total of 48 Calls. The purpose of the Calls is sufficiently described by Nalvage:

"This self-same art is it, which is delivered unto you as an infallible doctrine, containing in it the waters which run through many Gates: even above the Gate of Innocency, wherein you are taught to find out the dignity and corruption of nature: also made partakers in the Secret Judgements of the Almighty to be made manifest, and to be put into execution.

"I am therefore to instruct and inform you, according to your doctrine delivered, which is contained in 49 Tables. In 49 voices, or callings: which are the Natural Keys to open those, not 49 but 48 (for One is not to be opened) Gates of Understanding; whereby you shall have knowledge to move every Gate, and to call out as many as you please, or shall be thought necessary, which can very well, righteously, and wisely open unto you the secrets of their Cities, and make you understand perfectly [that] contained in the Tables."

Colin Low has suggested that the above-mentioned Gates are connected with the "Gates of Understanding" found in some Yetziratic texts, and with the fifty Gates mentioned in Thelema's Liber AL vel Legis.

It is certain that there is some sort of relationship between the Calls and the Elemental Tablets, but the exact nature of the connection is a matter of speculation.

The 19th Call, titled the "Call of the Aethyrs", is explicitly associated with the 30 Aethyrs of Liber Scientiae; its wording clearly makes it an invocation for the 91 "Parts of the Earth" in that book. Following the quote above, the remaining Calls are assumed to connect with the hierarchies of the elemental Tablets, but the wording of the Calls is too poetic and ambiguous for specific associations to be made with certainty. While confirming the correct sequence of these Calls, the angel Ilemese stated that each Call has its proper Table, but does not state what these tables are.

Experiments by several magicians seem to establish that the First and Second Calls in some way define the poles within which the remaining Calls work. The First Call usually produces a generic manifestation of Spirit, a general pull towards higher levels. The record implies in a vague way that it is to be used when invoking the Elemental Kings and their ministers, the Seniors; possibly in combination with other Calls. The Second Call is stranger. It does not appear to define a "material" pole as such; rather, it defines a framework or overall form into which the powers of the system can be poured and contained.

The usual assumption by later magicians (not universally accepted) has been that the remaining Calls refer to the "Lesser Angles" within the Tablets. The Golden Dawn's method of associating these Calls with the Tablets and Lesser Angles has become the accepted standard. Donald Tyson has recently come up with an alternative method that has received some attention.

An alternative view of the Calls states that they are parallel to, but separate from the Tablets. That is, they should be used by themselves, without the divine names from the Tablets. There is certainly evidence in the text of the Calls that they represent a continuing "story" of a creative process, beginning with God in the First Call, and ending with the establishment of God's power "in the center of the Earth" in the Eighteenth Call.

Another alternative has been suggested in which the Calls are actually connected with the 49 "leaves" of Liber Loagaeth. This view argues that the Great Table cannot be subdivided in any way that produces 48 or 49 tablets or smaller tables, while Loagaeth is more clearly connected with those numbers. However, the definite connection between the 19th Call and the Aethyrs and Parts is a strong argument against this position.

(For the complete text of the Calls in Angelic and English, see The Enochian Calls published separately.)

The Tabula Recensa, 1587

The Great Table

The Great Table is a large grid of letters, 25 squares wide and 27 high. Two major versions of the Table exist. The first was produced during the work in 1584. Three years later, Kelly (working alone) received a revised Table now called the "Tabula Recensa".

The Table is a magickal "map" of the world, including all levels of existence that are not part of the transcendental, divine realm. It is divided internally according to an orderly system to produce a hierarchy of divine and angelic names ruling various aspects of existence. A separate method of division, in which it is separated into 91 dissimilar regions, produces the sigils of the "Parts of the Earth" shown in Liber Scientiae.

The first division in the Great Table splits it into four Elemental Tablets, 12 squares wide and 13 squares high. These Tablets are separated by a cross with arms one square wide, called the Cross of Union, or Black Cross (so called only because it was shaded in black ink in Dee's version). The four tablets are associated with the four traditional elements, following the same positions as the "continents" in the Tablet of God. (The Tabula Recensa changes the positions of the Tablets within the Table.)

Each Tablet has an internal division into four "Lesser Angles", separated by a "Great Cross". The Great Cross has a vertical arm two units wide, and a horizontal arm one unit high. The horizontal is called the "Line of the Holy Ghost" and contains the three highest names of God within the Tablet, formed by dividing its twelve letters into groups of three, four, and five letters. The vertical arm considered as a whole is said to represent God the Father. When considered as two columns, it represents God as Father and Son.

The eight central letters of the Great Cross are taken in a clockwise inward spiral to form the two names of the Elemental King who rules the Tablet. Each of these names uses only one of the two most central letters. Dee was told that one of these names was for beneficent works, the other for works with harmful intent. When the letters of the Great Cross are read outwards from the center along each arm, they form the seven-letter names of six "Seniors".

The Great Cross is associated with levels of manifest divinity, the mathematical or planetary regions that lie above the Earth but inside the transcendental divine realm in medieval cosmology. Cabalistically they connect with the second triad of sephiroth in the Tree of Life, and with the human soul that originates there. The King and Seniors are generally considered to be planetary in nature; the power of the Seniors was said to be "knowledge of all human affairs".

The Lesser Angles are grids five columns wide and six rows high. The central column forms a god-name of six letters; the second row from the top forms a god-name of five letters. The four rows below (ignoring the central column) form four angelic names ruled by these god-names. Today they are usually referred to by the Golden Dawn label, as "Servient" angels.

The four squares of the top row (again ignoring the central column) form four angelic names which are not ruled by the god-names from the calvary cross. Instead, a different god-name is formed by adding a letter from the Cross of Union to the first angel's name. These four angels are specifically associated with the letters INRI, written above the cross of Jesus' crucifixion. The Golden Dawn labeled them "Kerubic" angels, after the four elemental Kerubs of the Tarot cards.

The angels of the Lesser Angles are assigned governance over specific areas of knowledge, e.g., medicine, precious stones, mechanical arts, etc. These powers can be easily associated with one of the four elements; the result is that the positioning of the elements in the Tablet of God is reflected downwards in the positions of the Tablets in the Great Table, and in the positions of the Lesser Angles within each Tablet.

Type of Angel	Lesser Angles	Power
Servient	Upper left (Air)	Medicine
"	Upper right (Earth)	Metals and Stones
"	Lower left (Fire)	Transformation
"	Lower right (Water)	Living creatures
Kerubic	Upper left	Mixing of natures
"	Upper right	Changing of place
"	Lower left	Mechanical arts
"	Lower right	Understanding secrets

These various powers must be considered to be representative rather than inclusive. According to the angels the Great Table is in some way connected to every type of event that takes place within the Earth; therefore these angels must have much wider areas of responsibility than is suggested by the listed powers.

Liber Scientiae

Liber Scientiae, Auxilii, et Victoriae Terrestris, the "Book of Knowledge, Help, and Earthly Victory", is the third major portion of the Enochian magick. The details were given during the 1584 work, and were compiled into a book by Dee in May of the following year. In introducing this part of the work, the angel Nalvage said:

"There are 30 Calls yet to come. Those 30 are the Calls of Ninety-one Princes and Spiritual Governors, unto whom the Earth is delivered as a portion. These bring in and dispose Kings and all the governments upon the Earth, and vary the natures of things with the variation of every moment; Unto whom the providence of Eternal Judgement is already opened. These are generally governed by the 12 angels of the 12 Tribes, which are also governed by the 7 who stand before the presence of God. ..."

A following paragraph in Latin clarifies that it is the Angels of the Tribes who are the governors, and that the 91 are actually regions or territories of the magickal realm corresponding to various earthly territories. Each Angel rules a varying number of these regions.

The 91 Parts of the Earth on the Great Table

In addition to its regular hierarchies, the Great Table contains the names and sigils of the 91 "Parts of the Earth as imposed by God" of Liber Scientiae. Where the angelic hierarchies described previously are derived from the Tablets by following uniform divisions, the names of the Parts are derived in such a way that each covers a uniquely-shaped area. The natures of the Parts are equally heterogeneous; none of them is like any other in scope, quality, or power.

From the angels' descriptions, it could be said that the regular Tablet hierarchies and the 91 Parts represent complementary views of the world that they both cover. The regular Tablet names represent the ordering of the world according to the ideal plan of God; the way in which the world connects with divine archetypes and patterns. The Parts, on the other hand, represent the transformation of the divine plan into the endlessly changing, endlessly dissimilar events of manifest existence.

In sequence, the angels gave Dee and Kelly first the number of "ministers" dwelling in each Part, the number of the Aethyr in which it was contained, and the number of the Tribal Angel King ruling the Part. Next the names of the Parts were given, and their mundane equivalents, followed by their sigils on the Great Table. After the letters and regular hierarchies of the Table were filled in, the angels presented the Call of the Aethyrs and the names of the Aethyrs. The origin of the Angel King names is obscure; they are not shown in the published portion of the diaries, but are in place in the final, book version of Liber Scientiae.

The sigils of the Parts are found by drawing lines between the squares of the Part's area in the Great Table, in the sequence of the letters in its name. In the presentation to Dee and Kelly, the sigils were presented before the Tablets were filled in with letters, so that when the letters were added they could check back against the names of the Parts as previously given. The correlation between the two sets was remarkably high; only a few of the names had different spellings in the Tablets. None of them were completely dissimilar.

It should be noted that there is one Part whose sigil is shown in the Great Table, but which is not listed in Liber Scientiae. If all the names in the book are valid, there are actually 92 Parts, not 91. Some magicians have speculated that this extra Part should replace the sixty-fifth Part, whose name is formed using the two leftover, non-contiguous squares in each Tablet.

Originally, the angels tried to give Dee and Kelly the mundane equivalents of the Parts by displaying their regions on a globe of the world. Dee cut this method off before it started, complaining that they ought to give him the regions in longitude and latitude, or by reference to the maps in his possession. There is no obvious reason why Dee became stubborn on this point; certainly he was aware that his maps didn't cover the entire world.

The angels rebuked Dee, saying that they didn't see the world in terms of arbitrary mathematical designations, nor in the conic projections of Dee's maps. But rather than return to their intended method, they chose to associate the Parts with the regions of the world listed by Ptolemy.

Robin Cousins has gone to great effort to identify the modern regions represented by the Ptolemaic names. His descriptions and maps can be found as appendices in Turner's Elizabethan Magick. It is apparent from Mr. Cousins' maps that there is a great deal of overlap in these regions. For example, the region of Parva Asia or Anatolia overlaps, in whole or part, no less than nine other regions. Several Parts connect with single cities rather than regions, and others are described simply as "in the north" or "in the far south".

One might suspect that the angels, balked in their intent, simply latched onto the first available method that would satisfy Dee, regardless of its correctness. After receiving the whole list, Dee began to see the difficulties in the scheme and questioned the angels. The response was less than satisfactory to him, in the end boiling down to a statement that when he called the Parts, they would show him the regions they rule. It is implied that thirty of the Parts relate to the New World. Mr. Cousins originally said he believed that these thirty were in addition to the existing 91 Parts, making 121 Parts in all. However, he now believes that the thirty meant that additional territories were covered by the existing 91 Parts, in the way that the angels added Poland and Moscow to the territory ruled by the same Part as Sarmatia. My own reading is also that these thirty are among the given Parts, since any additions would either overlap existing ones, or require slightly less than another full Tablet as a region they would map.

The thirty Aethyrs are barely mentioned in Dee's diaries; they are certainly not given the importance that they have acquired in the minds of some modern magicians. Their function seems to be merely that of containers to hold the 91 Parts. There is no indication that they have any function separate from the Parts.

Usage

While the Enochian materials given to Dee and Kelly form a solid core for a magickal system, they are lacking in the supporting infrastructure necessary to make them a complete and useable system. Only the barest indications are given as to the nature of the various angels, the relationship of the system's structure and powers to those of other systems such as the cabala, or the mythic underpinnings for using it as an initiatory system.

The instructions for using the Enochian magick are equally spare, a few sentences in length:

"Four days (after your book is made, that is to say, written) must you only call upon those names of God, [i.e., in the Tablets] or on the God of Hosts, in those names:

"And 14 days after you shall (in this, or in some convenient place) call the Angels [of the Tablets] by petition, and by the name of God unto which they are obedient.

"The 15th day you shall clothe yourselves, in vestures made of linen, white: and so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures. For, it is not a labour of years, nor many days."

The "book" mentioned is a book of supplications or prayers to god and the angels, to be devised by the magician, written neatly, and bound together. The book is only to be used for this one operation, and then destroyed. The Calls are not mentioned at all.

Apparently the magician is intended to use a "bootstrap" method of learning the magick, similar to that used in the Abramelin magick. He invokes the angels, and the angels themselves show him the best way to use it. And as in the Abramelin work, the angels emphasize that it is the fervency of the magician's prayers that will produce effective contact, not the form of the prayers.

History of Use

Given the bare-bones nature of the original Enochian material, magicians have to improvise extensively to make it into an effective general-purpose magickal system. The history of the system's use is a history of innovation. Every magician or group that has used it extensively has added their own distinct character to it, taking it in a direction at least slightly different from anyone else. It has evolved as the viewpoints of its users have evolved, and seems perfectly capable of adapting to many viewpoints without stress.

The one point on which all these users agree is that the Calls and the Tablet names are tools of remarkable potency, possibly unmatched by any other magickal system now known. Even a completely inexperienced user, with a small effort, is virtually guaranteed to get some sort of response.

Beyond this, it is difficult to gather a coherent picture of the magick. While the angels have distinct natures, they present themselves to each magician in a manner that is consonant with his own nature and "true will", and which is -- to a lesser extent -- in accord with his expectations and conscious intent. The problem of their conformity to expectations can be overcome with practice. The former limitation seems to be absolute; they will not interfere with the true will of the magician. But within that limit they will do everything they can to take the magician as far and as high as he can go.

For a variety of reasons, only a few records of Enochian workings have been preserved. Most such records have been saved because the people who performed the work were interesting to scholars for other reasons; as an obscure branch of an obscure subject, it has not rated a great deal of attention from scholars and publishers. Given this lack of information, and the limitations mentioned above, the available records have to be considered to be spotlights illuminating areas within a vast field, most of which still remains dark and unknown.

Dee & Kelly

As far as is shown in the surviving records, neither Dee nor Kelly ever made significant use of the Angelic magick. During the three years following the receipt of the magick, they apparently ignored it entirely. If they did anything with it beyond that period, the record has been lost.

Elias Ashmole

Sloane Manuscripts 3624-3628 contain the record of extensive spirit actions with the Enochian magick, begun in the 1670's and continuing for over seventeen years. Three magicians and a sryer invoked practically every angel and entity connected with the Enochian system. Some scholars believe that Elias Ashmole and William Lilly are two of the magicians involved. However, Clay Holden believes that this is not the case, based on the handwriting; the record is in a crabbed and almost unreadable hand very unlike Ashmole's elegant script.

From Clay Holden:

Ashmole appears to have been largely content to make planetary talismans to banish rats from his house, as near as I can determine from his diaries. I would dearly love to find some solid evidence to the contrary, but fear that my assumption that Ashmole was one of the hands behind these Spirit Diaries was wishful thinking.

The diaries are massive, and have not been examined closely at this time, but preliminary indications are that they do not contain any results of special significance.

Golden Dawn

The original Golden Dawn magickal society operated from the 1880's into the 1900's, when it split into various groups. Descendent organizations (of varying degrees of legitimacy) continue to operate up to the present, using much of the material developed by the founders. People using the Golden Dawn system probably constitute the largest group of Enochian magicians over this century; despite certain theoretical problems, it has proven in practice to be an effective means of accessing the angelic forces.

The Golden Dawn adepts made substantial additions to the original Enochian materials, basing them in part upon a late 18th-century manuscript titled A Treatise on Angel Magic. Their system for relating the Calls to the Tablets has become the standard model. Most significant is their elaborate system of attributes for the squares of the Elemental Tablets, which seeks to unite Enochian magick with cabalistic and Rosicrucian lore to give a complete symbolic representation of the magickal universe.

In this system, each division and rank in the Tablets is connected with specific types of magickal forces -- elemental, planetary, zodiacal, or sephirotic. For example, the 36 squares of the Great Cross are associated with the 36 decanates of the zodiac; the ten squares of the calvary crosses in the Lesser Angles are connected with the sephiroth of the Tree of Life.

The individual letters of the names in a given rank represent sub-forces or special manifestations of the represented type, distinguished by the addition of lesser attributes. A given square can have up to four attributes, depending on its type and its position in a given Tablet and Lesser Angle. Additionally, each letter of the angelic alphabet is given a separate attribute to one of the figures used in geomantic divination. Diagrams showing the complete listing of attributes for all the squares can be found in Aleister Crowley's Liber LXXXIX vel Chanokh.

Golden Dawn magicians explore the squares astrally, using a technique involving the visualization of a truncated pyramid. Each side of the visualized pyramid is colored and emblazoned with the symbols of the square's attributes. The magician recites the appropriate Calls and vibrates relevant divine and angelic names, and concentrates the invoked power in the pyramid. The power is then seen rising up the sides of the pyramid and shooting out into magickal space in the form of a beam of light. The magician enters this beam and rises with it through the planes until he comes to a landscape or space that expresses the invoked power. This technique has proven to be highly effective in practice.

At least one Golden Dawn offshoot has applied the pyramid method to the angels of the Heptarchia.

Aleister Crowley

Aleister Crowley's work with the Enochian magick generally follows the Golden Dawn system. He is known primarily for his explorations of the 30 Aethyrs, published in The Vision and the Voice. This work established the idea that the Aethyrs might represent a means of initiation, and set a standard for methodical exploration that few have equaled. It also fixed Crowley's peculiar perspective on the process of transcendence in the minds of many students of the occult.

Crowley envisioned the Aethyrs as being connected with the sephiroth of the Tree of Life in groups of three. He also mentions that each Aethyr "folds up" into the next higher Aethyr in some way, so that as one progresses through the Aethyrs from the last to the first, one is also withdrawing one's being from the lower, already-experienced levels. (This is parallel to the technique he describes in Liber Yod, in which the magician achieves union with the godhead by progressively banishing all other levels and powers.)

Under this conception, the Aethyr ZAX, whose Parts have names formed from the Cross of Union, is the highest of the three attributed to Chesed. It is thus the last Aethyr one encounters before moving into the Supernal Triad and achieving transcendence. Crowley envisioned this movement as the crossing of an "Abyss" or gap, during which the magician encounters an Enochian devil named Choronzon dwelling therein.

Crowley's other contribution to Enochian magick was the adaptation of the Golden Dawn pyramid system for use with O.T.O.-style sex magick. In this technique, physical representations of the pyramids are made for the name of an angel, but inverted to form square "cups". These serve as talismans, which are charged using the end-product of the sex magick operation.

Aurum Solis

The published documents of the Aurum Solis magickal order show a unique method of using Liber Scientiae. Their research has focused on discovering the nature and uses of the numbered-but-unnamed "ministers" residing in each of the 91 Parts.

They used the second Angelic Call along with the Call of the Aethyrs, in order to cause the invoked forces to manifest at the "material" pole of their range; this brings the ministers, who are the lowest members of a Part's hierarchy, into the greatest state of activity. For each group of ministers they have compiled a name, an image of their appearance, and a list of their powers and the aspects of existence on which they can act. Given the large number of Parts, they have a virtual encyclopedia of useful magickal effects. Since they have not published any magickal records using their methods, there is no way to determine how well their system works in practice.

In contrast, their use of the regular Tablet hierarchies appears to be fairly conventional, in line with the Golden Dawn methods, but not using the G.D.'s elaborate system of attributes.

The Church of Satan and the Temple of Set

Quoting Israel Regardie, from his introduction to Aleister Crowley's The Vision and the Voice:

One advisor ... had suggested the discontinuation of the whole project. His motive was that a California group sensationally engaged in the practice of Satanism had appropriated and published the Enochian rituals or Calls in a so-called Satanic Bible. Because of this, it was felt that there were now undesirable contacts associated with the rituals that could only lead to chaos and confusion.

The author of this debased volume had made enough changes in the various Calls to rule out any likelihood of confusion with those presented here in their original form. Wherever the word God is used, the author had substituted the name of Satan or one of the equivalent terms in its stead. The same holds true for several other pieces of similar stupidity.

As a primarily religious organization, the CoS used the Calls (as a former member put it) as "tools for psychodramatic ritual"; i.e., as something mysterious to add glamor to their services. There is no indication that the founder ever took the Calls seriously as a tool, or that they were ever used systematically by the CoS for explicitly magickal purposes.

The Church of Satan's schismatic offshoot, the Temple of Set, has abandoned the CoS versions of the Calls. Rather than rewrite the angelic language of the Calls, Michael Aquino (founder of the Temple of Set) has substantially revised the translations of the Calls to conform to his own philosophy and myth-system. The Calls and Mr. Aquino's "translations" are presented as the "Word of Set" in the ToS manual The Crystal Tablet of Set.

In some instances, Aquino's version departs substantially from the original translations; in others, the differences are small enough that one might call them justifiable poetic license. But the overall sense conveyed is dramatically different from the original. Quoting Mr. Aquino:

An "Enochian purist" might question the translation provided by the Word of Set in that it is not the English version recorded by John Dee in his diaries. My answer is simply that I approached the Keys not as a historian seeking to reprint what Dee did, but as a magician seeking to operate the same "magical machinery" that Dee did -- and to operate it with greater care and precision than he did. Hence it is not a case of my "corrupting Dee", but rather of my uncorrupting something which predated Dee's own existence, and which was, after all, not of his [or Kelley's] authorship.

Mr. Aquino does not provide any explanation of how the "Word of Set" came to be delivered by angels espousing an emphatically Christian world-view.

Order of the Cubic Stone

From Robin Cousins:

The British graded occult group based in Wolverhampton, the Order of the Cubic Stone, (flourished 1965-91, now dormant) taught the Enochian system, strictly according to John Dee. The Golden Dawn system of Enochia was regarded as inaccurate and members were not encouraged to use its correspondences. Because membership was country-wide, most work was done individually or in small local groups (ie, if odd members lived near one another), but virtually no record of this work was held centrally. A few remaining members still practice today, but there is no overall coordination.

Benjamin Rowe

Benjamin Rowe is an active magician working exclusively with Enochian magick, known for methodical, thorough workings, and for developing unusual, non-traditional techniques and viewpoints. He has made an effort to expose his work to public scrutiny and criticism, believing that the state of the art can only be advanced through open communications. He is currently (1997) involved in a long-term project exploring all of the 91 Parts of Liber Scientiae in sequence.

The most noted of Rowe's technical innovations is a method by which an elemental Tablet can be transformed into a three-dimensional astral structure, an "Enochian Temple". Properly constructed, the temple acts to produce intense concentrations of the powers of the entire Tablet in a balanced form. The power creates a "gate" which can be used to explore symbols of any magickal system, to produce permanent changes in the consciousness of the magician, or to break through into extraterrestrial magickal realms. He believes other uses are possible, but has not yet explored them.

Examining the Golden Dawn system of correspondences for the Tablets, Rowe realized that their system was effectively upside down. That is, the highest ranks of the Tablets had attributes to magickal powers universally considered minor, while the major magickal powers were attributed to the lowest ranks of the Tablets. The whole seemed based on coincidences of number rather than experience. He spent several years determining the nature of the various ranks through experiment, and devised and experimentally tested a new system of correspondences that corrects the defects of the G.D. system and, he believes, accurately reflects the actual nature of the Enochian powers.

Miscellaneous Issues

Relation of Enochian to the Necronomicon

Since the Necronomicon is a literary device created by H.P. Lovecraft, any connection between the Enochian magick and the Necronomicon must also be fictional. In one of his stories, Lovecraft stated that John Dee was at one time in possession of a Latin translation of the book, which he translated into English. In their spoof Necronomicon, authors Langford, Turner, and Wilson suggested that Liber Loagaeth was actually a cipher version of the Evil Book, which they had managed to decode. Neither of these ideas is supported by the records.

Colin Low has perpetuated and embellished these fictional excursions in his "Necronomicon Anti-FAQ" and other writings. Some modern readers, lacking a sense of humor and irony, have taken his work seriously; as a consequence, the myth of Dee's connection with the book has taken on an air of Utter Authority among certain gullible portions of the magickal community.

Relation of Enochian to the biblical Book of Enoch

The various pseudepigraphic "Books of Enoch" were unknown in Europe at the time the magick was revealed to Dee and Kelly. Dee's work was aimed at discovering what he believed to be the contents of these books; he had no direct knowledge of their nature. The Enochian magick and the angels' origin-myth for it bear no direct relation to the actual contents of the books now known by the name.

Enochian magick and the apocalypse

There are two major threads of thought in Christian millennialism. One thread, called postmillennialism, is largely Utopian in nature. It sees the millennium as the beginning of a period of gradual perfection of conditions on Earth; the basic principle is that the world must be brought to perfection and the City of God built on Earth before the Christ will return, and it is only after the Christ returns that the world will end. Two decades after Dee, this form of millennialism was the driving force behind the religious groups spearheading the English colonization of America. Dee's own thought contains many post-mil ideals; in seeking out the Enochian magick, one of his goals was to gain a means of bringing earthly governments and societies into line with the design of God, thereby bringing the return of Christ closer.

The other thread, called premillennialism, is the more catastrophic variety. In this version, the typical scenario is that the Christ returns, and then the current "evil" societies of mankind will be destroyed in worldwide disasters, while the elect are preserved from harm. After the world is destroyed, the Christ joins with the faithful in a City built by God to rule over the Earth for a thousand years.

While there is a strong millennialist flavor to the angels' pronouncements, they are almost uniformly of the postmillennialist variety. The angels divided the world into four ages. The first of these began with the creation and ended with the Flood; the second ended with the first appearance of the Christ. The revelation of Liber Loagaeth ended the third age and ushered in the final age, in which the world would be brought to perfection prior to the return of the Christ.

The Calls and Tablets were in turn intended to be one means by which this perfection could be brought about. One particular passage establishes this clearly.

On February 11, 1584, Dee & company had arrived at the Polish manor of Albert Laskie, and had time to settle for a few days and do some magickal work. This day was the first operation of a new series of works after the hiatus. And during the work, the spirit Nalvage appeared for the first time to introduce himself and state his purpose.

The session begins with a colloquy in Latin between an evil spirit that settles by Kelly's left shoulder, and a good spirit that settles by his right shoulder. After some discussion the dexter spirit banishes the sinister. He spends a couple of paragraphs praising the Doctrine to be revealed, then says:

Nalvage:

"These [are] latter days, and the end of harvest must have also Labourers: For no Age passeth away, but through the hands of God, who maketh the end of his doings known to the World: To the end, [that] the World may consent unto him in Glory. So that this Doctrine, is the mysteries of the word of God, sealed from the beginning, now delivered unto man, for that Reformation which must be in one Unity established unto the end. [emphasized in original] The very part of that Circle, which comprehendeth the Mysteries of the Highest, in his Prophets, Apostles, and Ministers yet to come, which are alive and shall bear witness of eternal comfort.

"The fruit of our doctrine is, that God should be praised. For of ourselves we seek no glory: But we serve you to your comfort, teaching you the will of God, in the self same Christ, that was crucified; sold and died in the Patriarchs, and published to the World by his Disciples, and is now taught to you, in the remission of sins... greatest in the world, for the end of all things. The very key and entrance into the secret mysteries of God, (in respect to his determination on earth) bringing with it reward in the end of eternal glory, which is the greatest Treasure."

[paragraphs omitted]

Nalvage:

"These things are your parts, and portions sealed, as well by your own knowledge, as the fruit of your intercession, The Knowledge of Gods Creatures.

"Unto me are delivered five parts [i.e., months] of time: Wherein I will open, teach, and uncover the secrets of that speech, that holy mysterie. To the intent the CABALA of NATURE, in voyce, substance of bodie, and measure in all parts may be known. For there is nothing secret, but it shall be revealed, and the Son of GOD shall be known in POWER, and establish a Kingdom with righteousness in the earth, and then cometh the end.

"For the earth must come under subjection, and must be made pure. That death may be swallowed in his own Kingdom, and the enemy of righteousness find no habitation. The word of God endureth forever. His promises are just. His spirit is truth. His judgements inscrutable. Himself universal. He it is of whom you labour. The promises of God in this earthly noble man shall be fulfilled. Salomon used the places of honor, and was exalted."

While not so clear as later speech from this source, nonetheless some things are apparent. Nalvage is a postmillennialist. That is, he holds that the world must be brought to a state of perfection and holiness before the Christ can return; the City of God must be established by man, and then the end comes. The Calls and Tablets (which he begins to deliver two months later) are the tool by which this perfection of the Earth and mankind can be brought about.

Appendix A: The Sigil of Ameth and its Holy Names

The outer ring of the Sigil contains 40 pairs of letters and numbers. These were presented in sequence to Dee and Kelly; in most cases, the presentation of the letter was preceded by a Latin phrase beginning with that letter. All the letters together were accounted as the greatest name of God.

The numbers sum to 440; the Archangel Michael completed the presentation of the outer ring by displaying a number "1", surrounded by many concentric circles. Adding this 1 brings the total of the numbers presented to 441, which is the numeration of the word "Ameth", Aleph-Mem-Tav, according to Hebrew gematria.

Seven of the letters are capitalized, indicating the first letters of certain concealed angelic names. To find the names of these angels, Dee was instructed to use the numbers connected with each letter. Where the number was above the letter, he was to count that many letters clockwise to find the next letter of the name; where the number was below the letter, he was to count counterclockwise. Each name ended when he reached one of the six letters without a number.

Thus, seven names were produced:

Thaaoth
 Galaas
 Gethog
 Horlon (the second "o" is actually a lowercase omega)
 Innon
 Aaoth
 Galethog

Dee was instructed to strike out the first "a" of the double a's in the first two names, to produce the names "Thaoth" and "Galas". When this is done, the seven names comprise forty letters, the same as the number of letters in the outer ring of the Sigil.

Of these seven names the angel Uriel said: "every letter containing an Angel of Brightness: comprehending the 7 inward powers of God, known to none but himself: a sufficient BOND to urge all creatures to life or death, or anything else contained in this world."

No mention is made of the remaining letters in the outer ring, not used to form these names.

Only the last of these names appears overtly in the sigil, in the arcs immediately inside the outer ring. To each letter of "Galethog", a cross was appended to produce a set of sigil-like images:

These sigils were placed, one to each arc, counterclockwise around the Sigil of Ameth. Of these sigils Uriel said: "Those seven letters are the 7 Seats of the One and everlasting GOD. His 7 secret Angels proceeding from every letter and cross so formed: referring in substance [i.e., in essence] to the FATHER: in form, to the SON: and inwardly to the HOLY GHOST."

The letters in the outermost heptagon, just inside the arcs, are derived from the names of the "Seven Angels who stand before the presence of God" listed in Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy. The names of these angels are written vertically in a seven-by-seven grid; in the final square is placed a cross, representing the Earth, thus:

Z	l	l	R	H	i	a
a	Z	C	a	a	c	b
p	a	u	p	n	h	r
h	d	m	h	i	a	l
k	k	a	a	e	e	e
i	i	e	e	l	l	l
e	e	l	l	M	G	✕

The remaining divine and angelic names in the Sigil are all derived, by various means, from the names of the traditional planetary archangels, which are written within and around the pentagram at the center of the Sigil. As with the above table, the derivation was only demonstrated after the names were presented; this served to demonstrate that the angels were working from knowledge not available to Dee and Kelly, and were therefore more than figments of the magicians' imaginations.

The names of the planetary archangels were formed into a 7-by-7 tablet, by writing them diagonally from the upper left corner in standard cabalistic order beginning with the archangel of Saturn. The final "L" of each name was replaced in the tablet by numbers, usually appended to the preceding letter:

S	A	A	I ²¹ _{8.}	E	M	E ⁸
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E ³⁰
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	30	A
I ²⁶	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L	A	O	I ²¹ _{8.}	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	21 8.

The seven names between the outer heptagon and the heptagram are "Names of God, not known to the Angels; neither can [they] be spoken nor read of man." They are derived from this tablet by reading the rows from left to right, and are placed in clockwise sequence around the Sigil. In the Angels' view, the derivation shown here is the reverse of the truth. Rather than the planetary angels producing these god-names, "these Names, bring forth 7 angels: the 7 Angels and Governors in the heavens next to us". Thus the Sigil, from its outer ring to its center, represents a descent of power from God into the world.

Between these God-names and the Planetary Archangels in the Sigil stand four additional ranks of beings. Even though they are outside the Archangels (and therefore presumably superior to them) it seems that they are in some way the "children" of the Archangels:

"Every letter of the Angels' names, bringeth forth 7 daughters. Every daughter bringeth forth her daughter, which is 7. Every daughter-her-daughter bringeth forth a son. Every son in himself, is 7. Every son has his son, and his son is 7."

The names in these groups are derived from the tablet by taking the letters diagonally as shown in the diagrams below.

Thanks to Mr. Clay Holden and the John Dee Publication Project for these scans of the original record.

Patterns for the Formation of Each King’s “Ministers of the Hours”

The Ministers’ names for five of the Heptarchic Kings are formed by selecting certain letters out of six of the seven sectors of the Tabula Bonorum, beginning with the sector ruled by King Bobogel and going clockwise around the table. No names are formed from the first sector, ruled by King Baligon (aka Carmara). The green lines in the illustration above show how the first Minister for each of these Kings is formed; the same lines are applied to the next five sectors to form the names of the King’s other Ministers.

In the cases of Kings Baligon and Bnapsen different methods are used. For Baligon, the names of the seven Kings are listed in their order on the Tabula Bonorum. Ignoring the initial “B”s of their names, lines are drawn down the columns to produce the names of the Ministers. This is identical to the method used to get the letters on the border of the Holy Table of Practice, so the Ministers’ names also appear in that border.

In Bnapsen's case, only a portion of the ministers' names derives from the Tabula Bonorum. The names of the Kings are listed in sequence beginning with Bobogel; the name of the 49th and last angel, Bamnode, is substituted for Baligon. Then diagonals are drawn as shown in the illustration to obtain the partial names. Letters from some unspecified source (possibly just random letters) are used to fill out the names to a length of seven letters each.

Since Bnapsen is given power over "wicked spirits", I speculate that the letters that are not from the Tabula Bonorum introduce an element of chaos that permits the holy King to make contact with the unholy beings he controls.

First Form

The table is formed from the names of the Heptarchic Kings and Princes, without their initial letter "B"s. Each row contains the King and Prince of a particular day, beginning with Sunday and following in sequence around the Tabula Bonorum. The names are written from right to left.

The central squares outlined in red are called "The Heart". The squares surrounding the Heart are called "The Flesh". The two columns on each end are called "The Skin".

The Heptarchic Lamén is formed from this Tablet by transposition of the letters. Letters from the Flesh are placed in the outer square of the Lamén. Letters from the Heart are placed in the corners of the inner square. Letters from the Skin fill the central diamond.

n	a	p	s	e	n	r	a	l	g	e	s
l	u	m	a	z	a	a	g	e	n	o	l

Second Form

A second version of this table uses the same names, but writes them from left to right. The names of the Kings and Princes are written in the numerical sequence in which they appear in the Tabulum Bonorum, rather than grouping them by the day they rule.

This version of the Table is used to form the letters found on the Holy Table of Practice. The "Heart" is extracted and rotated ninety degrees counterclockwise, to form the 3-by-4 tablet in the center of the Holy Table. The letters around the edge of the Holy Table are found by reading the letters down the columns of this table from the right side to the left. The letters are applied to the Holy Table, 21 to a side, beginning at the upper right corner and going counter clockwise.

The six columns on the lefthand side of this version also form the names of the "Ministers of the Hours" for King Baligon / Carmara.

Bibliography

Dee Manuscripts

Sloane ms. 3191. Dee's book of ceremonial magick, consisting of extracts and compilations from the angelic conversations. Contains three books: 49 Claves Angelicae Anno 1584 Cracoviae, Liber Scientiae Auxillii et Victoriae Terrestris, and De Heptarchia Mystica.

Sloane ms. 3188. Mysteriorum Libri Quinti. Contains the records of scrying sessions for the period from December 1581 to May, 1583, divided into five books. These diaries are the raw information given to Dee and Kelly concerning the Heptarchic magick, and the beginnings of Liber Loagaeth.

Sloane ms. 3189. Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus. Contains the bulk of Liber Loagaeth, consisting of 49 double-sided tables of letters and numbers.

Cotton Appendix XLVI, Parts 1 & 2. Contains thirteen "books", covering the actions from May, 1583 to September 1585, plus additional material from later periods. These records are the raw information given on the Angelic Calls, the Great Table, and Liber Scientiae.

Other manuscripts sometimes cited are copies or extracts from the above manuscripts.

Published versions of the Dee Diaries

Casaubon, Meric., D.D., A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Years Between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits, Magickal Childe, 1992, New York, NY. A facsimile of the original 1659 edition, produced by Clay Holden. Contains most of the material from Cotton Appendix XLVI, with a long introduction by Casaubon that seeks to prove that Dee and Kelly contacted evil spirits. Early English typescript and speech conventions make this work difficult to read at times. Also contains a "lost" section of the diaries, found by Clay Holden.

Peterson, Joseph, ed., Mysteriorum Libri Quinti, Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks number 20. 1985, Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks, Felindenys, Wales. An edition of Sloane ms. 3188 in modern typescript, with annotations by Elias Ashmole and the editor.

James, Geoffrey, The Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee, Heptangle Books, 1989, Gillette, NJ. [Reprinted by Llewellyn, 1994 as The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee] Largely a version of Sloane ms. 3191 in modern typescript. James' translations of the Latin have come under criticism, as has his editing of some passages in English.

Turner, Robert (ed.): The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee, Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks 17: Edinburgh 1983, 81 p. Collation of two MS copies in: Sloane 3191 and Additional MS. 36,674.

Turner, Robert (ed.): The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee, with a contributory article by Robin E. Cousins; Latin translations by Christopher Upton; illustrated by Charles H. Cattell; Wellingborough, Northamptonshire: Aquarian Press 1986, ISBN: 0-85030-470-9 (pbk). 2nd enlarged edition of: Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks No. 17. The standard Heptarchic source in English, with essential commentary on the Sigillum dei Aemeth and the Holy Table.

Turner, Robert. Elizabethan Magic: The Art and the Magus, foreword by Colin Wilson; with contributory material by Patricia Shore Turner and Robin E. Cousins; illustrated by Charles H. Cattell and Jane O'Reilly; translations from the Latin by Christopher Upton, Shaftesbury: Element Books, 1989, ill., maps, bibliography. An excellent distillation of the essentials from Dee's original Enochian material and other magical documents of the same period. Robin Cousins' material on the geographic locations governed by the Parts of Liber Scientiae is a unique resource.

The Golden Dawn system of Enochian Magick

Regardie, Israel, The Golden Dawn, Llewellyn Publications, 1971, St. Paul, MN. Reprinted at regular intervals. Contains detailed descriptions of the Golden Dawn's elaborate system of Enochian Magick.

Zalewski, Pat. Golden Dawn Enochian Magic, Llewellyn Publications 1990, St. Paul, MN. Contains additional material concerning the Golden Dawn system, including the extension of the G.D. "pyramid" method to cover the angels of the Heptarchy.

Zalewski, Chris. Enochian Chess, Llewellyn, 1992, St. Paul, MN. The Golden Dawn method of divination derived from the Enochian material.

Hyatt, Christopher S., Ph.D. The Enochian World of Aleister Crowley (Enochian Sex Magic) Falcon Press, 1993 ISBN: 0-56184-029-7 Another description of the Golden Dawn system, with additions and extensions from the works of Aleister Crowley.

Other material related to Enochian and Heptarchic Magick

Crowley, Aleister. Liber LXXXIX vel Chanoek, published in various compilations of his short works. Crowley's brief description of the Golden Dawn system of Enochian magick. He leaves out many essentials.

Crowley, Aleister. The Vision and the Voice, Sangreal Foundation, 1972, Dallas, TX., and other editions. The magickal record of Crowley's explorations of the thirty Aethyrs of Liber Scientiae. With an introduction by Israel Regardie and extensive footnotes by Crowley.

Denning, Melita, and Phillips, Osborne. Mysteria Magica, Llewellyn Publications, 1992, St. Paul, MN. Volume V. Describes the Aurum Solis system for using the ministers of the 91 Parts of Liber Scientiae.

James, Geoffrey. Enochian Evocation: The True Calls, Gnostica Magazine, Sept. 1978, Llewellyn Publications, St. Paul, MN.

Laycock, Donald C., The Complete Enochian Dictionary, Askin Publishers, 1978, London, England, UK. [Reprinted by Weiser 1994] Recently reprinted in paperback.

MacLean, Adam. A Treatise on Angel Magick, Phanes 1990. The Golden Dawn relied almost exclusively on an eclectic mish-mash that was compiled almost two centuries after Dee's death called A Treatise on Angel Magick. It was this resource that cleared up Israel Regardie's confusion as to why Aleister Crowley (who used the keys as a means of pathworking) made certain numerological associations in his account of the experience. Transcript, in toto, of Harley 6482.

MacLean, Adam. Angelic Magic, part of his Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks Series, a limited publication in England, contains a copy of Rudd's MSS. (8/95 rmcg): Same as "Treatise on ..." above. Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks #15.

Rowe, Benjamin. Enochian Temples, Black Moon Publishing, Cincinnati, OH, 1988. A small chapbook describing Rowe's method for creating a three-dimensional astral temple from the Elemental Tablets. Related materials available in manuscript form, or via the Web.

Vinci, Leo. Gmicalzoma! An Enochian Dictionary, Regency Press, London & New York, 1976. Another exhaustive dictionary of Angelic words.

Hall of Shame

Schueler, Gerald. Enochian Magick, Advanced Guide to Enochian Magick, Enochian Yoga, Enochian Tarot, Enochian Physics, etc. All published by Llewellyn Publications, St. Paul, MN.

Schueler's first two "Enochian" works are hasty and unscholarly assemblages of material from the Golden Dawn (mostly via Aleister Crowley's inadequate presentation in Liber LXXXIX vel Chanoek and from his The Vision and the Voice), coupled with the products of Schueler's prolific imagination. Robert Turner called the existence of these volumes "lamentable", and I agree without reservation. These two books consist almost entirely of errors, misconceptions, fabrications, and flummery; readers will be far better off going to Schueler's sources than trying to extract anything useful from them.

His later books are almost entirely the products of his own imagination, and so at least have the advantage of coming from a single source. Readers have had widely varying opinions as to their usefulness. His Enochian Tarot is worth purchasing for the artwork by Sallie Ann Glassman, regardless of one's opinion of its design. Enochian Physics is distinguished by having the lowest information content of any book its size published in this century. In the chapters that are not adaptations from Aleister Crowley, the information content approaches zero.

Tyson, Donald. Tetragrammaton: The Secret to Evoking the Angelic Powers and the Key to the Apocalypse. 1995, Llewellyn Publications, St. Paul, MN.

Tyson combines the Enochian material with Fundamentalist millennialism and Lovecraftian horror fiction, to paint a picture of the Angelic Calls as the means by which the apocalypse will be brought about. In the process, he twists facts to suit his thesis, selectively interprets the Calls, and blithely dismisses contrary portions of the record as "not what was intended". Much of his "analysis" of the Calls is in the style perfected by Kenneth Grant. That is, grab any association that seems to support your idea, taking it out of context as necessary, and disregarding such minor things as anachronisms, logical non sequiturs, etc.

Enochian Pronunciation Guide

by Anton Szandor LaVey ©1970

Of all the questions asked pertaining to the contents of The Satanic Bible, the most frequent is concerning the pronunciation of the Enochian Keys.

I wish to stress the fact, before even dealing with the recommended pronunciation, that the importance should be placed upon the rhythmic and sequential delivery of the words, rather than a scholarly attempt to pronounce them properly. The original renditions of the Keys were written in much the same way as Hebrew; i.e., the letters are only represented by consonants, with the vowel sounds unwritten. Only one other translation of the Keys is available, Israel Regardie's inclusion in his monumental twenty-five dollar work called The Golden Dawn.

The Keys in Regardie's work are a "white light" translation and occupy a scant few pages at the end of his two-volume compendium of the rituals of the Order of the Golden Dawn.

They are presented in their Enochian form with only consonants to read by, so that "Zodoreje" would read "Zdrj."

As you can see, this makes it decidedly tougher to pronounce! There are various opinions as to the proper pronunciation, just as in Latin there are sometimes several ways of pronouncing the same word, depending on the regional and historical speech pattern.

So it is with Enochian. The word "Cahisa," if one is to prefer a soft sound pattern, would be read "SA-HEE-SHAH" the most prevalent pronunciation, however, would be "KA-HEE-SAH," or just the way it looks like it would be said.

Generally, all consonants should be given a hard sound: C as in cake, S as in salt, G as in gold, J as in just, etc. The delivery of the words should be as deliberate and prolonged as possible, with no attempt made to jabber them quickly to show how proficient in the language you are!

For those who saw Rosemary's Baby [or The Devil's Rain, for which LaVey himself coached the extras] , you will recall the slow solemnity of the chants, performed in almost a monotone.

Each syllable should be spoken with great deliberation, care being given not to skim over the sounds. A word like "beliore" should result in "BAY-LEE-OAR-RAY." "Busada" should come out "BOO-SAH-DAH." Where two identical vowels are shown together, as in "Ooa," the pronunciation would be "OH-OH-AH."

I find most annoying the person who demands a word-for-word translation of the Keys, not realizing they are virtually like Pigeon English in their lack of grammatical nuance and literary style. If they were to be translated literally, you may be assured that the chanter would sound most inarticulate!

Because the English language is a glorious display of words, it is criminal not to avail oneself of the majestic vocal renditions made possible by such a language.

In the ceremonies which I have conducted, I have always spoken the key I have chosen both in English and Enochian.

As a short example of pronunciation, here is THE SIXTEENTH ENOCHIAN KEY (written phonetically)

Ee-lah-sah vi-vee-ah-lah pay-ray-tah! Sah-lah-mah-noo bah-lah-tah, dahs ah-cah-row oh-dah-zoe-dee boo-sah-dah, ode bay-lee-oh-rock-sah bah-lee-tah: Dahs ee-noo-see kah-oh-sah-jee loo-sah-dah-noo ay-mow-dah: Dahs oh-may ode tah-lee-oh-bay: dah-ree-lah-pah ee-ay-hay ee-lah-sah Mah-dah Zoe-dee-low-dah-ray-pay. Zoe-dah-cah-ray ode Zoe-dah-may-rah-noo. Oh-doe kee-cah-lay Kwah-ah: Zoe-doe-ray-jay, lah-pay zoe-dee-ray-doe Noe-coe Mah-dah, Hoe-ah-thah-hay Sigh-tahn!

Enochian Witchcraft®

Book #1

This Book is dedicated to my wife, "Lisa Ganci ... a Natural Witch"

She was my inspiration to create a workable system of Enochian Magick for a Pagan who did not want to be caught up in Renaissance Era Judeo-Christian Religious Doctrine.

I condensed and streamlined Enochian Magick into a compact system designed for minimal study and fast results.

Thus...

"Enochian Witchcraft©" & "Enochian Eclecticism©"

was Born...

Why Enochian Witchcraft© & Enochian Eclecticism©?

To make the Enochian Materials more readily accessible to the Pagan & Magickal Communities.

This is a condensed, stream-lined course to get instant results!

Personally, I stay as close to the purity of the Dee Diaries as I can.
Enochian Witchcraft should, however, be considered Neo-Enochian to the max!

→ Enochian Witchcraft© & Enochian Eclecticism© should, however, be considered a viable alternative for beginners [& intermediate levels], practicing Enochian Magick.

As Qabala was an 'initiate only' magickal system of ages past- it is time to strip Enochian of It's antique Renaissance Era attire and redress it for modern times.

This is a bare minimum outline which should be considered 'food for thought'...

There's a lot of info. out there in regard to John Dee, Edward Kelley,
& the Enochian Literature.

To work a 'purser form' of Enochian Magick requires an in depth study of Dee's diaries.

Just about all of the Enochian Material-as well as John Dee's Diaries, can be read online for Free, along with My other 9 Enochian Books.

<http://www.lulu.com/spotlight/SaToGa>

Take this Enochian Witchcraft© & Enochian Eclecticism© System for a test drive. If it works for you, by all means pursue it.

If you get zero results- abandon it.

If you push, it might cause you problems*

Gnostic or Egyptian ‘flavor’ can be added or subtracted.

-Many of the WatchTower Kerubic and Servient [Servitor] Entities can be gradually added as your Enochian knowledge base grows rapidly.

-The Heptarchial Mystica system has a wealth of Entities.

-The Enochian Keys [Calls] & 30 Aethyrs amplifies solo workings.

These are Lunar-Oriented Entities:

Enochian Entities [EE] hold Monday as Their Sabbath.

-Essentially a Matriarchal & Patriarchal Balance

TOOLS

Enochian Witchcraft© Tools can range from a bare minimum to draping your living quarters in Enochian curriculum. Start off slow, but do start. You might see many future Enochian practitioners always collecting some type of Enochian paraphernalia, but never doing any actual Enochian work. Don't be stagnant as you accrue “stuff” that will all come when the timing is right.

The Traditional Element Representations as Athame, Pantacle, Chalice & Wand may be employed.

Money $pell

[Example]

Money – Earth - South WatchTower

SOUTH:

Black - Earth

Capricorn Taurus Virgo

Virgo

We will Use Virgo:

Mercury will bring us ideas and possible communications or connections to new, undiscovered pools of the money current.

Element: Earth

Money, gold, silver, abundance of Earth's resources

Quality: Mutable

Changing the stagnating, dormant matrix of that low financial energy current

Planet: Mercury

Ideas, communications, connecting with '$-energy conduits'

)o(

Cut out a square [4 sides - Earth] piece of blank paper.

Write your intention about finances in Enochian Script

[Diagram in this volume]

After the research, formation of Intent & Will and constructing the above- “Enochian Money-Drawing Talisman”...

(All the above steps are essentially just as important as the ritual, itself)

...We erect and align the Temple.

Perform energy circulation such as the Middle Pillar or Microcosmic Orbit [Chi Kung]

Your Circle- Formed

Enochian Call #1, 2 as Primary energy inducers-
#8 for Air of Earth- bring Ideas and New Inventions, Connections &/or Communication involving finances.

Now, recite call #19

[included in this volume]

Use the Aethyr TEX, which is the 30th [starting point]

It has 4 regions, and is similar to the 4 points of Earth.

Earth, for money- pulls down astral energy to create money thought-forms that will eventually manifest for you.

Your Temple should feel as if it is vibrating.

3 God Names: Mor Dial Hctga

Called To the South Quarter

King: [Spiral] lczhhca/ lczhhcl

Create a vortex of spinning energy- then call this King's name.

lczhhca: Right Hand Path

Six Seniors:

[Summon within Heptagram of Corresponding Color - Gold]:

Lzinopo Lhiansa – Virgo

Only 2 of the 6 Seniors

[are necessary for this working] called through your Heptagrams

[see diagrams in this volume]

Visualize and state out loud your need for Their help.

Now, summon King Bobogelenvision His Seal in a blazing Gold Hexagram [6 pointed star]

...and once more:

Visualize and state out loud your need for Their help....

Or you may Scry to speak with Him, ‘directly’

[see “How to Scry” in this volume]

Sigil of the 2. King Bobogel: 3. Son of the sons of Light – Ave

The king of Sunday and the planet Sun is Bobogel

Sunday: Sun, success, wealth, promotion
[Gold/Yellow]

The hardest part of this ritual is tripping over your tongue when reciting the Enochian Tongue.

The best part- IT WORKS!

Enochian Eclecticism®

Book #2

“How to Scry”

By -SaToGa

Copyright©1995-2011

You may read about how great it is to scry the 30 Aethyrs, but when you try, you get zero to minimal results. Everyone has various innate scrying abilities.

John Dee had minimal scrying abilities, thus the reason for Edward Kelley.

I get a lot of Emails asking me how to scry.

If you are having problems with scrying, this is for you.

First, when you scry, you must say out loud what you see, no matter how trivial or small. If you are solo, then use a voice recorder.

I can not over emphasize this.

The trail of images will at first be like still imagery- then it will suddenly pick up the pace.

Eventually, the EE will race through your ‘sight’

Forget the mirror and scrying stone if it is not working.

Sit about 1 foot away from a blank wall, with no print or design.

It must be a solid color.

If it has a crack or paint peel, fix it.

This small distraction will become a hyperbolic distraction in only a few minutes.

If you can not do this- get a large piece of white cardboard, and use that as your ‘scrying field of vision’.

I actually employ this as I can change the color to fit the energy working.

Light 2 small candles and keep them in back of you, on the floor, in range of about behind each shoulder.

Assuming you are sitting on the floor, facing the blank wall, about one foot away...

[when I was young, my teachers forced me to discover this technique every time I was bad & got banished “to the corner”!]

Relax....deep breathe...circulate energy and expand your aura until it encompasses the scrying area and wall.

You will start to see a blurry haze.

Put your hand up, right in front of the blank area.

Look between your fingers...you will start to see your aura.

Once you can- the rest will come naturally—guaranteed.

Astral projection and remote viewing are all in the same family as this. Your consciousness accesses these etheric areas- you do not actually leave your body- your consciousness just views these multi-dimensional ‘regions’.

The Enochian Entities are Real- not figments of archetypes hardwired into your brain.

[Believing EE are not real- will cause you problems]

Relax and recall to memory your ‘hand-shadow-aura’ play.

Say out loud- but in a low monotone voice- like a third neutral party, viewing what is transpiring.

Understand ‘someone is listening’...another person working with you, or the voice recorder.

Inhale and exhale the aura field of the glowing area.

Allow it to grow, and grow more...larger and larger until your aura fills the temple.

Your eyes will get ‘unfocused’...sometimes known as ‘easy eyes’.

Whatever comes to mind- your inner vision or easy eyes- say it out loud.

Follow this lead- the trail will encompass more and more.

A ridiculous thought, memory, smell, sound, taste- things not pertaining to your ritual work- may float in and out of your sensory ranges- follow them and say it out loud.

You are training yourself(s)- and it might in reality, have something to do with the ritual, as it all develops into something else later down the road.

If you practice this for 30 minutes, 3 times weekly- you will start scrying to the fullest potential of your innate ability.

Your dreams will become more lucid, as well.

Scrying the Aethyrs: TEX

[My older diary notes]

TEX - 4 Parts

Calling of the 4 Princes- of the 4 parts, Their Sigils, employed.

All 4 Princes appear on the North - Water - Watch Tower:

Thus, Transformation of Form.

Negative aspects via this Watch Tower are Deception and Illusion.

I perform a ritual given to me prior, by the EE.

I am 'scheduled' to perform this particular Aethyr Working, as told to me, by the EE.

I am told to wear my Enochian Ring, on my left (marriage band) ring finger.

I perform a rite similar to the Middle Pillar.

As I 'grow upwards', I realize one foot is standing on Earth, the other, standing on Luna.

By 'half standing on Luna', I assume, partially 'astral lodged' in Yesod.

Opening Rite continues...

Call of the Aethyrs: TEX

Immediately, under the Lamén, I feel intense heat.

I feel like I am having a heart attack- no pain, just heavy pressure and constriction dead center of my chest. I sweat profusely, and honestly, am ready to bolt from my temple to summon an ambulance.

I cycle from Beta to Alpha, repeatedly.

Suddenly, I hear a calm voice telling me, assuring me, I am fine.

[Just anxiety from intense energy.]

Vision opens of a volcano erupting,... I am wrapped in clear cellophane(?), and lava gushes upon me, burying me.
[Obviously, heart attack seems imminent!]

I'm thinking I have been duped and now I am done!
[Again, I am reassured.]

I am buried alive, under cooling lava.
I ask for help, or guidance- and another voice says, clearly-
"There will be no help for you"...
(Personal conversation ensues)

This buried alive vision lasts for what seems to be a couple of minutes.

(After wards, I check my voice recorder log, and in actuality, just a few seconds passed. The whole TEX session, minus the preliminary ritual, lasted 34:43.)

Numerology is exact- that "34:43" - 7/7 is legit and amazing.

The buried alive heaviness subsides- and I fall, supine- downwards. I am in a cavern, with darkness fading in and out.

There are quite a few inactive scenes in this exploration, where all I see is darkness and hear nothing.

I am in a desert.
White sand.

Aleister Crowley, dressed as an Arab, passes perpendicular to me,
and notices me.

[I feel...maybe,...this was a replay of an Akashic recording]

I am pulled upwards, and I see an island with palm trees.
I am inside an old basement (?) and see a dim light bulb. I am pulled to it, and the glowing filament is right in my face. I am now one with that violet flaming filament, and am inside the glass bulb. A voice says I am light, but still trapped and limited within my confines.
I feel this heat.

(Personal conversation ensues)

Shifting scenes of islands, bodies of water...I am underground, then in the sky...I see stars, celestial bodies, simultaneously.

I see a female eyeball, left profile.
I experience more scene shifts.

Another eyeball seen, with long white eyelashes, all cornea- no pupil

(but it 'watches me')

I now meet the cartoon personality (little guy with mustache and black top hat) of Milton Bradley's "Monopoly" game.
(I played Monopoly only once, about 40 years ago as a child- hated it. Definitely not something that should be in my recent mental records!)

(Personal conversation ensues)

He shifts back and forth into the cartoon character of "Wimpy" from Popeye. (Who knows!)

(Personal conversation ensues)

Now, I am watching a female with long painted fingernails throw dice. I watch her play Monopoly and suddenly I am inside the small 'silver train' playing piece. I am being driven around the game board, and just drop downwards into another cavern.

I see glowing green eyes.

I walk and see bright orange light- active lava, but silent and non-threatening this time around.

I fly upwards out of what appears the introductory volcano.
I see a male lion approaching me. Then I am somewhat inside his roaring mouth. I back away and grow large. I look down at the lion and he playfully rolls on his back, exposing his belly.

An angel lifts me up and says "we have work to do" ...
(Telepathically I asked prior for an Initiation of TEX)

We are flying fast. I am on a beach, no sand, just black shiny small rocks and pebbles. I look and see fallen skyscrapers, buildings destroyed all round me.

Ominous silence, and it is snowing. I hear "Ice-Age".
I believe a different angel continues on with me...

(Personal conversation ensues)

Flying with this EE, extremely fast...I see Old England and it's inhabitants dressed in 1880's attire.
(I never been to England, but I 'knew I was there'.)

Flying.....loud wind gushes.....

I see what appears as 'primitive man' and hear and 'read phonetically'... "barMUda".

(MU, as in Lemuria? Bar, as in "son of"...not sure...)

Again I hear "Ice-Age".

I see dinosaurs, then darkness and what appears as a still photo of 'the Big Bang'.

Now, in linear terms, I am moving forward in time, again.
I see once more, primitive men, like cavemen.
One of them is standing in a body of water, (a beach?) and he pulls a fish out of the water, as if hunting for food.

He rips the fish open [vertically/long ways down], and a cell phone is inside it.

He smells it and it rings.

He notices me, and hands me the phone.
I get dizzy, spinning...

An angel lifts me and flies me to a mountain composed of what looks like 'cartoon-esque' glass shards of stone...

[The English language doesn't always have the equivalent words to match up to what I seek to describe from my Enochian experiences.]

(Personal conversation ensues)

I am on level ground, looking up at Luna.
(I feel depicting this as Luna is accurate, as I was originally standing on it with one foot)

There were other scenes, omitted, as some were repetitious in nature.

There were many lulls, like scenes stalling.
Maybe I was supposed to grasp their inherent meaning, before moving on.

Sometimes, I knew what it meant, and others, I mentally noted that I would return to understand.

The above- “TEX Vision” was posted on My Yahoo Group:

Posted: Thu Dec 9, 2010 5:05 pm

Although the actual ‘TEX Vision’ itself, had transpired awhile before the actual posting.

Seeing Crowley in the desert, provided me with the Egyptian location marker for placement. I understood Crowley performed Magick Rites in Egypt. If you have read My other 9 Enochian Books- you will recall many of my visions contained pyramids, deserts and portals opening.

Look at this...

Laidrom- Earth - (Taurus)

Mon Nov 22, 2010 5:13 pm

<http://groups.yahoo.com/group/enochianmagic/message/4>

Subterranean, chthonic- Hades, psychopomp- images raced through my vision, while "hearing those words".

Fire, caverns, then crystalline structures. Meet with one called 'Agatha', and was taken to see the Elder..

[...].....[...].

However, He (They?) holds a grudge against humanity, saying we didn't appreciate the work the Watcher/Grigori performed in 'our benefit'.

[...].....[...].

I am taken deep down- (again, spinning).....what appears to be Hades. I am not christian, so these scenes took me off guard (quite disturbing)

He said (with many voices) "Enoch was here, speaking to the Grigori- to intercede for them"

The chains that imprison them, shackle their "Duties", not they, themselves. I see them lifeless, like wax figures. Suddenly, I am on a space craft- flying up, out of a portal.

[...].....[...].

He gave me instructions for my next initiatory rite,, before 'dropping me off @ my temple'.

Again, the EE tell me to 'write it down, and tell others'...but they also limit my mentioning of details.

"TEX"
"Laidrom"
"The Vision of RII"
"Tri-Cyclic Ritual: WINTER SOLSTICE"
"Partial Solar Eclipse/ Quadrantid Meteor Ritual- [Apocalyptic]"

All these previous notes are contained in My other books.
See the last 2 pages of this book for info regarding them.

The above 3 Ritual postings also alluded to Egypt, Hawks, Deserts, Nuclear Apocalypse and the Opening of Portals to allow entry of Enoch's 'Watchers'... buried deep down under the Desert in Prisons.

The Pyramids, the Gods, & Enochian Magick are important in Crowley's system- "Thelema"...

What I believe, is the EE are pointing to 'Upheavals in Egypt' as ancient energy currents imprisoned beneath the desert break free...signaling times of Revolution & Evolution for that whole region.

Eventually it will spill over into Israel and ignite the Arab world.
Of course, that will trigger world wide calamity and the advent of World War III is not too far away.

This is Galvah, finding her way home, drudging through the Obstacle Course of the Profane & Mundane.

Choronzon [like the Cthulhu Mythos] awakens, as Gaia's Kundalini is ripe for eruption.
It is the complete circle of Gabriel's "flayle" as Raphael, Michael and Uriel blow Their Apocalyptic Trumpets.
The portals created through Enochian Magick(s) are the 'nexus transport' for the imprisoned Watchers.

Their release are conduits of evolution.

AOMORYBN is the sum of the remaining 'hidden letters'- which resurrect from slumber...
upon the most Holy Sigillum Dei Aemeth.

Babalon is the World Government- prostituting and pimping out
it's Military might for OPEC.

Madimi is the Faux Media, teasingly telling us the plans, as she seductively hypnotizes those who blindly follow.

IAD speaks..."I reign over you..."

The beauty of Enochian Ritual is it always works!

No matter what you do to the Enochian Materials, the system, itself, is always self-contained.

Like a Hologram- it is 100% complete within the smallest fragment.

Enochian Vision Magick

An Introduction and Practical Guide to the Magick of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley

LON MILO DUQUETTE

FOREWORD BY CLAY HOLDEN

 WEISER BOOKS
San Francisco, CA / Newburyport, MA

THE AUTHOR DEDICATES THIS WORK TO THE MEMORY OF DAVID P. WILSON, THE MOST TALENTED SCRYER I HAVE EVER MET.

Thy Name be mighty, O God, which canst open the veil whereby Thy All-Powerful Will may be opened unto men. Power, Glory, and Honour be unto Thee, For Thou art the same God of all things, and art life eternal.

—PRAYER OF NALVAGE, APRIL 10, 1584

Acknowledgments

This book could not have been written without the inspiration and generous assistance of the following friends, scholars, and master Enochian magicians: David P. Wilson (S. Jason Black), Clay Holden, Christeos Pir, David R. Jones, Robin Cousins, Josh Norton (Benjamin Rowe), James Wasserman, Judith Hawkins-Tillirson, Rick Potter, I.Z. Gilford, Poke Runyon, Christopher S. Hyatt, and Robert Powell—and to the regular members of the Monday Night Magick Class of Heru-ra-ha Lodge O.T.O., I give my most heartfelt thanks; Constance DuQuette, who co-hosts this 30-year ongoing class (and is my most ruthless heckler); Jonathan Taylor; Mike Strader; Jill Belanger; Olver Althoen; Carlos Casadas; and Sandy, Arto, Cobra, Vanessa, Bret, Michael, Patricia, Coleen, Mary, Evgeniy, Jane, Alan, Danny, and scores of others who throughout the years have brought Life, Love, and Liberty into our home each week.

I would also like to thank Glacier Nitz-Mercaeant, of The Enochian's Keep in Indiana, for his beautiful gifts of my gold Enochian Ring and Lamens; and the late Cecil Eugene Burns (a.k.a. Frater White Haired Bull) who built and donated the true and faithful replica of the Holy Table that now adorns our Enochian Temple space.

My thanks also go to Brothers Michael Strader, for his rendering of the Ensigns of Creation in the angelic script, and Robert Powell for his beautiful images of the Tablet of Union and the four Elemental Tablets. They are perhaps the clearest black and white renderings of these complex figures ever published.

Finally I offer my heartfelt gratitude to Clay Holden for his encouragement and support of this project. I am also deeply indebted to him for allowing me to use his magnificent recreations of the original angelic alphabet and his images of the Forty-nine Good Angels, the Holy Table, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and Golden Talisman.

I also draw the reader's attention to Brother Holden's original image of John Dee's Monas Hieroglyphica that adorns the cover page of each of the five books that make up Enochian Vision Magick. This image is in itself a most profound and historic element in the entire book for it represents a solution of a geometric puzzle going back to ancient Greek mathematical texts—that is, the production of a regular heptagon in a circle using only a compass and ruler. Please pay special attention to Clay's foreword to discover more.

Finally I offer very special thanks to Jan Johnson, Brenda Knight, and Amber Guetebier of Weiser Books who patiently (and graciously) forgave several deadline breaches.

Foreword

This is the book I would have given my eyeteeth for twenty-five years ago. It is the first work to systematically lay out the whole corpus of Dee and Kelley's magickal system, and the only one to provide a useful path through the dense and multilayered labyrinth of what has come down to us as "Enochian Magick," based almost entirely on their original manuscripts.

When Lon asked me to consider writing a foreword to his book, I think he knew that I had not been deeply involved in Enochian research for a number of years, but asked me to at least consider looking at what he was writing. It took only about fifteen minutes of reading to reignite my enthusiasm for the material which at one time was an all-consuming passion, and to realize that what he was in the process of writing would become a landmark text on the subject. Now that the book is finished, I am even more deeply honored to be able to write a few words of introduction to his remarkable work.

What particularly impresses me with Lon's book is not only the sheer volume of material covered or the clarity with which it is presented, but its immense readability and the fact that he has struck an elegant balance between classical scholarship, practical magickal instruction, and anecdotal events.

One never loses the sense that there is a real person at work here, questioning, organizing, and reporting his conclusions together with his experiences along the path. The self-important tone of many so-called "Enochian Magick" texts is entirely absent, replaced by clear and wellorganized content.

When I first encountered Enochian magick, the only available published materials were Regardie's Golden Dawn and Crowley's Gems from the Equinox, fascinating but largely incomprehensible to me. Next was the first of several largely incoherent books on Enochian Magick by Gerald Shueler, which elaborated on the Golden Dawn material and added much of his own invention, most of it of dubious value. In hindsight, they seem more suitable for Dungeons and Dragons than serious magickal work (though to be fair, as David Jones once pointed out to me, D&D is probably an excellent introductory discipline for magickal ritual work).

Then came Geoffrey James's The Enochian Evocation of John Dee, a completely different matter altogether. Still more of a synopsis of a system than a workable guidebook (based largely on Sloane MS. 3191, Dee's precis of the materials received between 1582 and 1587), it gathered together the bulk of Dee and Kelley's work, and gave a sense of where it all came from. Still incredibly useful many years later, when coupled with an examination of the original scrying sessions that produced the material, it still does not serve as a proper guidebook through the system. The heart is there, but the how and why are largely absent.

When looking at what the Golden Dawn and Crowley and their successors put together as “Enochian Magick,” it seems clear that they were missing huge chunks of this “how and why,” along with many critical pieces to understanding what they were dealing with, and their attempts to graft basically everything else in their magickal system onto it produce a cumbersome thing that Dee and Kelley would not recognize as what they pulled through.

I have likened their resulting patchwork as similar to what happens when one attempts to open a Word document or a highly formatted database file in a text editor: one can read and even extract a good bit of raw data, but the formatting and links to other programs are entirely unreadable and bear little resemblance to the original document.

Without an understanding of Dee and Kelley's early material, mostly presented in Sloane MS. 3188, what comes later on, while workable on its own, will be largely incomprehensible. And while in many ways it can be convincingly argued that the later system, centered on the four Elemental Tablets, and the Tablet of Union are independent of the earlier material, Dee's diaries demonstrate that he went back and added marginal notes to even the earliest diaries to refer to events and communications that transpire several years later, as well as referencing the earlier communications in the later entries.

Fortunately for the reader, Lon's book gives full treatment, background, and application of both the early and the later materials, and provides in spades both the how and why that are missing from so many other books that purport to be guides to the system.

For me, not until David Jones's Center for Enochian Studies, based out of Thelema Lodge OTO in Oakland, began their annotated transcriptions of the first of Dee's spirit diaries, did I get a real sense for the background story of Enochian magick. All of a sudden, it was like reading a Philip K. Dick novel, with the tables and diagrams coming to life, populated by spirits, angels, and demons of all sorts, each with his or her own personality. And notably, John Dee and Edward Kelley for the first time became real people, questioning and struggling to understand and document what was being communicated to them.

I was finally able to borrow microfilms of the spirit diaries from the always truly generous and helpful Bill Heidrick, and I spent countless days printing them out on microfilm reader printers. When I finally had a set of Sloane MS. 3188 (Quinti Libri Mysteriorum) printed out and bound in front of me, the real magick began to take place for me. It was as if one discovered that Jules Verne's Captain Nemo was a real person, and could read his own words and step back 400-plus years into the past, to share his thoughts and experiences. To this day, it is the closest thing to real time travel I have ever felt.

Dee's handwriting presented some difficulty at first, as did his use of many antiquated terms, abbreviations, and frequent recourse to Latin. To my aid came Elias Ashmole's "fair-copy" of the diaries (Sloane MS. 3677), transcribed many decades later, in a beautiful hand which was much easier to read than Dee's. It also has the benefit of being more complete in some cases than Dee's original, as the manuscript was in considerably better shape in the 1600s than it is today, and Ashmole made notes indicating where materials were missing.

Given the difficulty in reading the original texts, it occurred to me to begin transcribing the diaries into electronic texts, laid out exactly as Dee had in the original manuscripts, and this was the birth of the John Dee Publication Project. The idea, which I tested in reading circles at Thelema Lodge, was that once one could get past the difficulties of Dee's sixteenth-century italic and secretarial handwriting, the actual English was not so different from that of Shakespeare, and that the modern reader would more easily be able to approach the work. Producing small batches of texts, with my transcription facing pages of the actual manuscript, it proved a fairly simple matter for people to actually read and understand the material.

While the world has changed immensely over the past two decades, and it is now possible to download electronic copies of all of Dee and Kelley's spirit diaries off the Net, it is still valuable to have the reconstructed electronic texts. And while I have never completed the transcriptions of the Quinti Libri Mysteriorum, it both taught me many valuable computer skills that ultimately changed my life and demonstrated that the text could be reproduced as written in an easily readable form. I am pleased that it still provides many readers with a place to begin in reading the spirit diaries.

It was suggested to me early on by David Jones that rather than attempting to comprehend the whole system, I should concentrate on a particular section and work to understand the mechanism of that piece of the system. In my case, that piece of the puzzle was the Sigillum Dei Aemeth.

While Lon in this book suggests that, rather than trying to reproduce Dee and Kelley's work, one ought to use the system they transmitted, I found it of inestimable value to read through the text of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus, where the layout and working of the Sigillum is systematically laid out, and fill in each of the squares in a blank Sigillum as I went through it. By so doing, this impressive talisman became a truly living being for me, and it was possible also to rectify certain errors which exist in Dee's diagram of the Sigillum.

Case in point: at the bottom of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, both in Dee's original illustration at the end of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus and in virtually every version published since, one finds the character “y” with a “14” under it. The text however clearly gives this number as “15.” Replacing this number, and applying the method of backwards and forwards rotation around the outer circle, one utilizes the remaining unused squares, and two additional names are produced, neither of which is mentioned in the text. This exercise is left to the reader.

It further demonstrated that Dr. Dee, in fact, lies in certain places in the record, indicating that there is material hidden even there that he did not want to be visible to an unthinking reader.

One of my favorite quotes from the beginning of Mysteriorum Liber Secundus is Dee's interchange with the archangel Michael:

Mi. [...] Thow shalt sweare by the Living God, the strength of his Mercy, and his Medicinall vertue, powred into man's soule never to disclose these Mysteries

D. Yf no man, by no means, shall perceyve any thing hereof, by me, I wold think that I shold not do well.

Mi. Nothing is cut from the church of God. We in his Saints are blessed for ever.

We separate the, from fyled and wycked persons: We move the to God.

D. I vow, as you require: God be my help, and Gwyde, now and ever, amen.

MIC. This is a Mystery, skarse worthy for us, ourselves, to know, muche lesse to Reveale. Art thou, then, so Contented?

D. I am: God be my strength.

Keeping this in mind, one may begin to understand why Dee occasionally misdirects the reader in his diaries. As with Aleister Crowley's works several hundred years later, if one is paying attention to what one is reading, the erroneous data should just about jump out from the page, and provide a pointer to the actual information.

Investigating such parts of the magickal furniture can provide further unknown or undocumented information, such as the following:

If one adds and subtracts the numbers at the top and bottom of the letters around the outer ring of the Sigillum (having corrected the “y/15”), one arrives at a total number of 440. Adding the “1” in the concentric circles that is given at the end of the instructions on the outer ring (accompanied by the statement “Omnia unum est”), the total comes to 441, the gematric value of the Hebrew “Aemeth,” or Truth. Without the correction of the “y/15” square, the total remains 440, the gematric value for “Meth,” or Dead. Thus, the Sigillum may be considered as a Golem, and the published version an inactive and unworkable “dead” talisman.

There is also an additional Table to be generated from the instructions given for the characters around the outer ring, as they are described in the text:

D. Note: All the Cumpanies of these 40, stode, five together, and five together, and so in eight Cumpanyes; each, of five

Thus one can lay out the characters in eight rows of five, and in so doing, can produce symmetrical character sigils similar to the ones found on the Elemental Tablets for the angels of the outer ring.

In attempting to find a simple way to generate a regular heptagram in a circle for the purposes of reproducing the Sigillum on paper, I further discovered an interesting connection between the spirit diaries and Dee's earlier Monas Hieroglyphica.

While one cannot in fact produce a regular heptagon in a circle using only a compass and ruler (a geometric puzzle going back to ancient Greek mathematical texts), one can approximate it. There are several classical solutions, each of them rather close, but also involving complex methodology. Laying out the Monas Hieroglyphica in its 4 × 9 grid, as given in Dee's book, using a compass from the mid-point to trace a circle, and rotating the Monas so its “horns” touch on the circle from the top of the grid, one finishes with a very close approximation of a heptagon, in fact, as close or closer than any known classical solution.

Finally, it is perhaps fitting to suggest that one can read and consider Dee and Kelley's spirit diaries in a number of different ways, some of them mutually exclusive, but all of them perhaps of interest and value.

First, they can be considered as authentic records of spirit communication. Over the years I have worked closely with practicing Enochian magicians, including at least one incredibly talented scryer, who can both see and hear through the crystal ball, a very rare combination. Most scryers can do one or the other, but not both. In Edward Kelley, Dee found a rare man, however difficult he may have been to work with, and clearly knew it. Dee could only rarely see or hear anything himself, but with his amazing mathematical and classically trained mind, was perhaps the only man in the world capable of understanding and organizing the instructions that were presented to him. He was also skeptic enough to question and reject transmitted material that appeared to come from lying spirits, as Kelley periodically pulled through “illuding divils” that specialized in disinformation. The internal consistency of the bulk of the spirit diaries, as well as the coherent interrelationship of its many parts, speaks convincingly to its being a genuine record of actual events over a period of years.

Second, one can consider the material as an exercise in cryptographic method, intended as a means of communicating secret information back from the continent to Dee's colleagues and superiors in Elizabeth's court. Clearly, as one reads through Liber Mysteriorum Quartus, and to a certain extent Secundus, one can see similarities to the methodology of Trithemius's Steganographia, a work with which Dee was quite familiar, and which has now been demonstrated to be entirely a cryptographic treatise.

The arrays of “dignified” and “undignified” spirits can be seen as referring to encryption methods involving “nulls,” and Dee and Kelley's discussion of “transposition of letters” in Quinti Libri Mysteriorum Appendix is at the very least suggestive again of the same. Then there are the tables in Liber Loagaeth, at the end of which (Sloane MS. 3189) Dee has appended eight tables from “Aldaraia Sive Soyga,” the mathematical methods of which have been demonstrated by Jim Reeds. They appear even on the surface to be cryptographic tables, though no one to date has made a systematic study of their content, nor provided any translation or decryption or methodology. They remain the most hermetically sealed of all Dee and Kelley's documents.

In a similar way, one may usefully compare this “cryptography” theme with the Kabbalistic method of transposition of letters along with numeric values as a strictly spiritual exercise (e.g., the “Sepher Yetzirah”), and arrive at the conclusion that the Enochian system might be considered “sacred cryptography” in the same sense as the classical Kabbalistic method, unrelated to the mundane world of secret transmission of political secrets.

Lastly, and perhaps most amusingly, I have entertained the idea that Dee was the author of the first science fiction novel over a period of years, and indeed the first to give thought to the idea of “cyberspace,” an interdimensional world where communication takes place through a portal, giving thought to the twentieth-century works of H. P. Lovecraft, Philip K. Dick, and William O. Gibson.

In this view, while Edward Kelley is still a historic personage (he appears in Dee's private diaries as well as being clearly documented both in England and in Prague, usually in conjunction purely as an alchemist), the “Edward Talbot” and “Edward Kelley” presented in the Spirit Diaries, his frequent turns from devout scribe to blaspheming conjurer and back again, along with all the mischievous and light-hearted spirits who are trotted on and off the stage, can be seen as an immense work of fiction. Whether written purely for Dee's amusement or as a secret means of documenting a different sort of spiritual transmission remains hidden today.

Of course, as anyone who has spent any time actually working with the system(s) presented in the Spirit Diaries can attest, when you put them to work as if true, stuff happens. Once invoked (or evoked), the spirits do in fact seem to appear and go to work, whether one believes in them or not.

Which leads to the one piece of advice I would give to anyone starting out in working Enochian Magick: Be very clear of what you ask for, as you are certain to get as much of it as you can handle, and once started, it is much more difficult to get it to stop.

In closing, I would like to quote a passage from W. Wynn Westcott's translation of the “Chaldean Oracles” (quoting Proclus), which I have always found incredibly useful to keep in mind when working Enochian Magick, or indeed, any ritual work:

As the Oracle therefore saith: God is never so turned away from man, and never so much sendeth him new paths, as when he maketh ascent to divine speculations or works in a confused or disordered manner, and as it adds, with unhallowed lips, or unwashed feet. For of those who are thus negligent, the progress is imperfect, the impulses are vain, and the paths are dark.

Lon's wonderful book provides the reader—for the first time—with a clearly lit and well-ordered guide through the maze of Dee and Kelley's Enochian system. The hallowed lips and well-washed feet are up to the reader.

Keep an open mind, a pure heart, and a clean temple, and you will surely hear their angels and spirits speaking to you.

A Note Regarding Original Source Material and Footnote References

The original Enochian magick material is a labyrinth of manuscripts. In preparing this book, I was fortunate to have at my disposal electronic files containing the photographic images of original material currently housed at the British Library, London. The manuscripts are numbered and designated by the name of past owners. The ones I used for the present work are designated: Sloane 3188, 3189, 3191; and Cotton Appendix XLVI parts I and II.

Within these numbered manuscripts are various “books,” or “Liber” bearing separate titles. Some of these Libers were copied by Kelley or others and reproduced in subsequent manuscripts (sometimes renamed) and have found their way to London's British Library and the Bodleian and Ashmolean libraries at Oxford University. For my purposes the material from the British Library's Sloane 3188, 3189, 3191; and Cotton Appendix XLVI parts I and II proved to be quite sufficient. Digital scans of the Enochian manuscripts can be accessed electronically at: <http://www.themagickalreview.org/enochian/mss/>.

Enochian scholar Geoffrey James prepared a concise summary breakdown of Dee and Kelley manuscripts for the bibliography of his excellent book, Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee.¹ He has graciously allowed me to reproduce his entries for the material that relates directly or indirectly to Enochian Vision Magick. The reader who wishes to explore the source material in greater detail (or who simply wishes to track the book's footnotes and references) should find this list very helpful.

SLOANE MS. 3188.

This manuscript contains Dee's earliest scrying sessions. It contains six individual ‘books’, which are:—

Mysteriorum Liber Primus covering December 22, 1581 to March 15, 1582, and containing a ceremony with Saul (Dee's first scryer) and the first ceremonies with Edward Talbot, in which the table and Solomon's ring are described.

Mysteriorum Liber Secundus covering March 6, 1582 to March 21, 1582, and containing the first elements of the Heptarchic system, the spirits of the Sigil of Æmeth, and the first suggestion that an antediluvian language would be delivered to Dee. This title page is missing, but can be inferred from textual references in SLOANE MS. 3677.

Mysteriorum Liber Tertius covering April 28, 1582 to May 4, 1582, and containing numerous sigils related but apparently not essential to the Heptarchic system, as well as the names of the 49 good angels.

Quartus Liber Liber Mysteriorum covering November 15, 1583 to November 21, 1583, and containing the remainder of the Heptarchic system; this book is the first to record the name of Edward Kelly² as the scryer.

Liber Mysteriorum Quintus covering March 23, 1583 to April 18, 1583, and containing the tables later transcribed by Kelly into SLOANE MS. 3189.

Quinti Libri Mysteriorum Appendix covering April 20, 1583 to May 23, 1583, and containing the famous Enochian letters, as well as information concerning the construction of the Great Table.

SLOANE MS. 3189.

Liber Mysteriorum Sextus and Sanctus or The Book of Enoch revealed to John Dee by the Angels which contains 49 double-sided tables of (apparently) random letters. It is in Edward Kelly's handwriting.

SLOANE MS. 3191.

This manuscript is the only book of ceremonial magic extant in Dee's handwriting. It consists of three separate 'books,' each dealing with a different aspect of Dee's angelic magickal system. The books are:—

49 Claves Angelicae Anno 1584 Cracoviae (Liber 18) which contains Dee's transcription of the Angelical Keys (often called the Enochian Keys or Enochian Calls.)

Liber Scientiae Auxillii et Victoriae Terrestris which contains a complex system of magic based upon the Great Table (often called The Table of Watchtowers). It is entirely in Latin, and related to the Call of the Thirty Aires.

De Heptarchia Mystica which describes a complete system of planetary magic, along with excerpts from the various scrying sessions.

COTTON APPENDIX XLVI, PARTS 1&2.

This manuscript is occasionally referred to as Royal Appendix XLVI, or SLOANE MS. 5007. It contains thirteen 'books,' which are:—

Liber Mysteriorum (et Sancti) parallelus Novalisque covering May 28, 1583 to July 4, 1583, and containing the tail end of the Heptarchic system and the only recorded incident of Kelly speaking Greek.

Liber Pergrinationis Prime Videlicet A Mortlaco Angeliæ Ad Craconiam Poloniæ covering September 21, 1583 to March 13, 1584, and containing the journey from Mortlake to Cracow, Poland and various political speculations.

Mensis Mysticus Saobaticus Pars primus ejusdem covering April 10, 1584 to April 30, 1584, and containing the dictations of the first calls (backwards).

Libri Mystici Apertorii Cravoviensis Sabbatici covering May 7, 1584 to May 22, 1584, and containing the remainder of the calls (except for the call of the Thirty aires, in the Angelical tongue, and the spirits of the Thirty aires.

Libri Septimi Cracoviensis Mystici Sabbatici covering May 23, to July 12, 1584, and containing the geographic locations of the spirits of the Thirty aires, the Great Table or Watchtowers, and the first third of the Call of the Thirty Aires, as well as the names of the Thirty aires.

Libri Cracoviensis Mysticus Apertorius Præterea Præmium Madimianum covering July 12, 1584 to August 15, 1584, and containing the remainder of the Call of the Thirty Aires, as well as the names of the Thirty aires.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Liber Primus Cæsarique covering August 15, 1584 to October 8, 1584, and containing an attempt to convince the Holy Roman Emperor of the canonical nature of the visions.

Mysteriorum Pragensium Confirmatio covering December 20, to March 20, 1585, and containing mostly political speculation.

Mysteriorum Cracoveinsium Stephanicorum Mysteria Stephanica covering April 12, 1585 to June 6, 1585, and containing an alchemical formula and a letter from Dee's wife to the spirits.

Unica Action, quæ Pucciana vocetor covering August 6, 1585 to September 6, 1585, and containing religious visions obviously meant to impress the Papal Nuncio who was then attending the ceremonies.

Liber Resurrectionis Pragæ, Pactum sev Fædus Sabbatismi covering fragments from April 30, 1586 to January 21, 1587, and containing further ceremonies with the Papal Nuncio.

Actio Tertia Trebonæ Generalis covering April 4, 1587 to May 23, 1587, and containing a complex series of corrections to the Watchtowers and the infamous wife-swapping episode.

Jesus, Omnipoten sempiterne & une Deus covering March 20, 1607 to September 7, 1607 and containing the last records of Dee's magickal experiment.

Some of this material has been published in more modern times in books that are still readily available. Foremost of these are A True & Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits,³ and John Dee's Five Books of Mystery.⁴

To make things a bit easier for the reader to access more readily available source material, I will, wherever possible, try to make references with the text and in notes to passages in these modern works.

Prologue to the Prologue: Something Secret

Vyasa: There's something secret about a beginning. I don't know how to start.

Ganesha: As you claim to be the author of the poem, how about beginning with yourself?

—THE MAHABHARATA⁵

There is indeed something secret about a beginning, secret and invisible like the soul of infinite potential that broods in the heart of every living seed. My tongue is tied. I stare at the blank screen of my monitor. I don't know how to start. For the writer it is the most difficult moment—a million things to say, but where to begin? My eyes search the walls and ceiling of my little office and fall upon the mask of the Hindu god Ganesha. His bright, pleasant face reminds me of the opening scene of Jean-Claude Carrière's play, The Mahabharata,⁶ where Vyasa, the author of the epic poem is faced with his own writer's block as he strives to begin his monumental story. Unable to read or write himself, Vyasa is blessed by the arrival of Ganesha, the beloved elephant-headed god, who offers to serve as Vyasa's scribe and take down his story from dictation. He also gives Vyasa some advice about how to start.

“How about beginning with yourself?”

And so, in pale imitation of the poet Vyasa, I will heed the wise counsel of my elephant-headed lord, the remover of obstacles. I shall begin this work of magick by telling you something about myself. Don't worry, I won't tell you much. Just enough to get us started.

I am a man. I am what they call in the East a householder—that is, I am married and have for my entire adult life endeavored with varying degrees of success to provide a loving and stable environment for my family. I am also an exceedingly lucky man, for in truth, throughout the years it has been my sainted wife and beloved son who have provided me with a loving and stable environment.

Fate (coupled with a conspicuous lack of ambition) has conspired to make our lifestyle one of genteel poverty (well, not always so genteel). We've never owned a house, a new car, or a credit card. On the other hand, we've always lived in moderately affluent communities and safe neighborhoods. We've always owned old cars that usually get us where we're going. Our bills consist primarily of the rent, the utilities, health insurance, and our groceries. We have no debts.

Some people say that's a miracle. I agree. Miracles are part of my job, for I am a magician. I'm not the type of magician who creates illusions to entertain audiences, but the type of who seeks to dispel the myriad illusions that hinder my own spiritual growth and enlightenment.

Aleister Crowley (1875–1947), the great twentieth-century magician, defined magick as the “science and art of causing change to occur in conformity with Will.”⁷ This is obviously a very broad definition of the term. In my opinion, however, it is the only one that is entirely accurate. You are, of course, free to interpret this definition any way you wish. Personally, I've come to the realization that the only real changes I can effect with magick are changes in myself. By changing myself, I change the world around me, hopefully for the better.

Naturally, I haven't always considered myself a magician, but for as long as I can remember I've been a seeker. Please don't project any undue piety upon this statement. I'm as wicked as anyone who seldom breaks any criminal or civil statutes can be. But even as I wallow in my dark and lazy wickedness, I find myself again and again stumbling inadvertently toward the Light.

As a magician I have also been extraordinarily lucky. Early in my career I was befriended (and many times guided) by some very wonderful, and in their own ways masterful, magicians to whom I owe an immeasurable debt: Israel Regardie, Phyllis Seckler, Helen Parsons Smith, and Grady L. McMurtry. I have also collaborated with others who have enlarged and enriched my magickal life. Foremost among these is my wife, Constance, who is the greatest natural magician I have ever known. There are many others as well: Karen James, whose profound sense of beauty and passion for the art of dramatic ritual keeps alive the mysteries of Eleusis; Douglas James, William Breeze, James Wasserman, Steven Abbott, LeRoy Lauer, David P. Wilson, Rick Potter, Dewey Warth, Nathan Sanders, Christopher S. Hyatt, Poke Runyon, Michael Strader, Sandra Brautigam, and Jonathan Taylor; and, for the last twenty-eight years, the assembled magi of my weekly magick class.

On my fortieth birthday I began to write professionally. In this vocation I have also been exceedingly fortunate. Readers who are familiar with the body of my work know that I am occasionally taken to task by knowledgeable critics who accuse me of writing for beginners and who chide me for diluting or oversimplifying complex and esoteric concepts. Against these charges I can say very little in my defense except to confess that I am indeed a simple man who, by conventional academic standards, is a lazy and undisciplined student. I have to learn anecdotally. I need to put things in a personal context. I need to appreciate and understand the general before I can be thrilled and inspired by the specifics.

Yes, I'm proud to write for beginning students of magick. But first and foremost I write to explain things to myself. I write to find out what I know. I write the books that I wish I could have studied during the first five years of my magickal studies—books that might have saved me years of frustration, blind alleys, and wheel-spinning. I also like to think that I write for more advanced students who may find themselves entangled in the elegance of magickal minutiae or else have become so entranced and self-impressed with their encyclopedic memories that they've lost sight of why they are doing magick in the first place.

I write about things with which I'm familiar and have had hands-on experience. One of those things is Enochian magick. I began my study of this most curious of quaint and curious subjects in late and began practicing it in earnest in autumn of 1980. Back then there was very little published information available. The only person I actually knew who had any significant hands-on experience with the system was Dr. Francis (Israel) Regardie,⁸ who cautioned me in no uncertain terms that I probably shouldn't be dabbling in such things.

Nevertheless, armed with my copy of Aleister Crowley's *Gems from the Equinox*⁹ and the two-volume set of Regardie's The Golden Dawn,¹⁰ I naïvely plunged into what I thought was the deep end of the Enochian magick swimming pool. A year or so later a friend would present me with a huge stack of photocopied¹¹ documents from the British Museum. This material represented several significant portions of surviving diaries and magickal notebooks of Elizabethan magus Dr. John Dee (1527–1608 or 1609) and his clairvoyant partner Edward Kelley¹² (1555–1595).

Only then did I begin to realize how dreadfully deep the waters of Enochiana really are. By then, however, it was too late for me to get out of the pool. What little of the system I had mastered had already yielded breathtaking results. My life was becoming very magickal.

Those primitive photocopies eventually yellowed, then browned, then charcoal-blackened into illegibility, but my interest didn't fade. Neither did the interest of others in the magickal community. Today clear copies of the museum manuscripts are readily available to the serious student, and there are no less than thirty books currently in print with the word “Enochian” in the title. I confess a few of those are my doing. In 1991 Dr. Christopher S. Hyatt and I wrote a commentary on Aleister Crowley's little Enochian masterpiece, Liber Chanokh.¹³ A year latter Herman Slater of Magickal Childe Publishing asked me to pen the introduction to the new facsimile edition of the 1659 A True & Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Yeers Between John Dee ... and Some Spirits. In 1995, my wife, Constance, and I created a deck of tarot cards¹⁴ that incorporates a large number of images relating to the Enochian Elemental Tablets. In the book that accompanies the cards,¹⁵ I elucidate on how they can be used for practical Enochian magick operations.

But writing (and reading) about Enochian magick is one thing; actually using it in a practical way to advance one's own spiritual evolution is another. With few exceptions, the thirty odd books mentioned above are very long on theory and history and very short on straightforward suggestions on how to actually sit down and perform Enochian magick, or reasons why one would want to do such a thing in the first place. I hope to remedy this, at least in small measure, by writing this book. I feel qualified to do this not because I have any illusions that I am the world's most knowledgeable scholar on the subject (I assure you I am not). I offer simply the credentials of nearly thirty years of applied experience with several aspects of Enochian magick. I have come to some very fundamental conclusions that I believe might be of significant and practical value to both the speculative student and the operative practitioner of this elegant and complex magickal system.

Before I plunge us directly into those waters, however, I need to briefly address the question of why a relatively sane and rational twenty-first-century adult would wish to seriously embark upon the path of magick. I will do this with a device that will most assuredly irritate my publisher—a second prologue. And once again, to please my Lord Ganesha,¹⁶ I will begin by talking about myself.

Prologue: Why Magick?

Magick is as mysterious as mathematics, as empirical as poetry, as uncertain as golf, and as dependent on the personal equations as Love.

—ALEISTER CROWLEY¹⁷

I'm a magician. I practice the art of ceremonial magick. I adore and invoke the essence of highest Deity and hold congress with divine angels. I also evoke and command spirits and demons.¹⁸ Ceremonial magick is the path I have chosen to give expression to the spiritual yearnings I believe are inherent in every human being. It is my Tao, my Way, my religion, my philosophy, my psychology. But ceremonial magick isn't my life. I already have a life, thank you. But I use magick to help make my life magick.

I have closets and chests full of bizarre and colorful robes and crowns and wands and daggers and chalices and swords and lances and thuribles and banners and veils and rings and incense and candles and oils and tablets and talismans and mirrors and crystals. I have books—strange books (some very old and rare), books that would scare the daylights out of most of my neighbors. I use these magickal tools; I study these books in order to perform the rites of ceremonial magick. These things are not my life. But I use them to make my life magick.

On the surface one might think it reasonable and fair to ask, “Why are you a magician, Lon? Why do you believe in this stuff? Why do you do these crazy things?”

It might surprise you to know I don't have a proper answer to these questions. It is impossible for me to adequately explain or justify why I celebrate my spiritual life through the vehicle of magick, for the same reasons it is impossible for any artist to properly explain why he or she has taken up the brush or the chisel or the violin or ballet slippers. If reasonableness were the sole criterion for the existence of art, there would be no music, no dance, no magick.

Make no mistake about it, magick is an art form, and every true magician is an artist. Just like the musician and dancer, the magician must practice, create, and perform. Just like the painter or sculptor, he or she must be armed with proper tools, skills, knowledge, and, most of all, inspiration. But what about people who've never learned to play a musical instrument, never learned to dance or paint or sculpt, yet who find themselves spiritually touched by listening to music, watching ballet, and visiting galleries? Are they not artists too?

In a very important way, I believe they are. As quantum physicists tell us, both the observer and that which is observed are changed by the act of observation itself. By appreciating the artist's handiwork, we are fundamentally affecting the reality and life of that creation. More importantly, when we expose ourselves to the artist's creation, we enjoy the passive luxury of allowing our consciousness to be altered, elevated, and enriched in unique and personal ways the artist might have never imagined.

The art of ceremonial magick, however, is a little different. There is no painted canvas to display, no audience to applaud. Regardless of how altruistic the magician's motives may be, magick is spiritual performance art that must ultimately be executed and appreciated by the magician alone. He or she is at once the teacher, the student, the medium, the conductor, the performer, the venue, the audience, and the critic. The magician touches the broader audience of humanity only by affecting changes in the magician, and success can be weighed only in the silent Holy of Holies of his or her own soul.

So, here and now and for the duration of this book, I shall lay aside the question of “why magick?” If my magickal efforts seem to propel me closer to self-realization, if my work brings me a measure of health or happiness or wisdom or a sense of fulfillment, good. But none of these things, nor indeed any thing, can be the goal of my art. Instead of asking, “why magick?” I suggest all who would fancy themselves magicians seek answers to the following questions, questions I struggle to answer every day of my life:

Am I really an artist? Am I drawn to this strange and irrational art form because of my mad passion to enrich my art and fulfill my creative life purpose? Or am I doing all this to avoid fulfilling my destiny? Am I running away from myself? When I don my magickal robes and enter the temple, do I do so as a radiant artist-magician, armed and ready to storm the gates of heaven and hell to do battle for the triumph of my soul, poised to take the next step in my spiritual evolution? Or am I merely a foolish man in an exotic costume, a mystic poseur in serious need of a life?

CHAPTER ONE

In the Middle of the Night

Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart.

—JOHN DEE¹⁹

It's 3:43 a.m. I've been up for about a half an hour bathing, dressing, and preparing myself to operate. Constance is asleep in the bedroom, and I'm trying to be as quiet as I can. In just a few minutes I will turn off the computer here in my office, take up my almond wand, and go into the darkened living room. There I will quietly perform a Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram, light two tapered candles, and sit down before the Holy Table.

Once comfortably seated I will close my eyes and pray:

Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart. Amen.

I will then open my eyes, take the golden Ring, and quietly recite the Prayer of the Ring:

Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

I will put on the Ring and then take up the golden Lamen that is attached to a black ribbon. Before putting it around my neck I will again pray:

Behold the Lamen. As the Holy Table conciliates Heaven and Earth, let this Lamen which I place over my heart conciliate me to the Holy

Table. Amen.

I will then take up my almond wand, reach across the Holy Table, tap the upper right-hand corner, and begin to chant. As I do so, I will move the tip of the wand from right to left along the far edge of the table and chant:

Pa Med Fam Med Drux Fam Fam Ur Ged Graph Drux Med Graph
Graph Med Med Or Med Gal Ged Ged Drux.

Then, moving the tip of the wand down the left edge of the table, I will continue to chant:

Pa Drux Un Tal Fam Don Ur Graph Don Or Gisg Gon Med Un Ged
Med Graph Van Ur Don Don Un.

Then, moving from left to right along the bottom edge:

Pa Drux Ur Ur Don Ur Drux Un Med Graph Graph Med Med Graph
Ceph Ged Ged Ur Mals Mals Fam Un.

Then up the right-hand edge to finish where I started:

Pa Gon Med Un Graph Fam Mals Tal Ur Pa Pa Drux Un Un Van Un
Med Un Gon Drux Drux Ur.

I will repeat this entire procedure six more times, each time increasing the intensity of my focus on the words and movements. When I've completed the seventh round of chanting, I will hold the wand over the center of the table and chant seven rounds of the following:

Med Gon Gisg, Don Ur Van, Ur Don Ur, Med Med Graph. Med Don Ur Med, Gon Ur Don Med, Gisg Van Ur Graph.

Then I will trace a circle over the center of the table and say:

Seven, rest in Seven: and the Seven, live by Seven: The Seven, govern the Seven: And by Seven all Government is.

Galas Gethog Thaoth Horlwn Innon Aaoth Galethog,

Zaphkiel Zedekiel Cumael Raphael Haniel Michael Gabriel,

E(l) Me Ese Iana Akele Azdobon Stimcul,

S Ab Ath Izad Ekiei Madimi Esemeli,

E An Ave Liba Rocle Hagonel Ilemes,

Sabathiel Zadkiel Madimiel Semeliel Nogahel Corabiel Lavanael.

Finally, I will place the tip of my wand upon the center of my forehead and whisper:

luah lang sach urch

Iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf.

The chanting will take about eighteen minutes. By then I will have chanted myself into an altered state of consciousness. In fact, I'll be high as a kite and struggling to avoid drifting into a directionless rapture. I will no longer be the overweight knot of worries and vices that haunts the daylight world of bills and phone calls and deadlines—vampires of time. I will be a magician, a key player in the business of creation, a spiritual being occupying my own indispensable rung on a hierarchical ladder of spiritual beings: gods, archangels and angels, spirits, and demons—spiritual entities who personify in metaphoric Technicolor every natural force, every monad of energy, every atom of matter, every concept and principle, potentiality, and tendency in the visible and invisible cosmos.

My living room will disappear, and in its place will tower the Temple of the Universe, holy ground demarcated by a consecrated carpet of red silk, upon which rests the Holy Table, the center of the universe, the Holy of Holies where heaven touches earth.

The table is completely veiled by a red silk cloth, with its gold tassels that hang from each corner. The cloth conceals an elaborately painted and engraved tabletop, the perimeter of which is carved with eighty-four squares containing letters from a sacred angelic alphabet—letters whose names I chanted in the angelic tongue during my seven rounds of chanting. A large carved hexagram spans the entire inner surface of the tabletop. And in the center of the hexagram broods a large rectangle made up of twelve squares, each containing an oversized angelic letter—the same letters whose names I chanted during the second round of chanting—artfully carved into the surface of the table. Seven talismans, Ensigns of Creation, are arrayed around the central rectangle. They are made of purified tin and are peculiarly lettered in the angelic script.

The centerpiece of the Holy Table is the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, a wax disk approximately nine inches in diameter and one and one-half inches thick, bearing the carved image of a complex diagram consisting of an interlocked heptagram, two heptagons, a pentagram, and an array of numbers and letters, which, when decoded, spell the names of seven sets of seven divine beings: Seven who rest in seven, seven who live by seven, the seven who govern the seven, and seven by whom all government is. Four smaller waxed versions of this Sigillum (wrapped in red silk bags) rest under the legs of the Holy Table, insulating it from distracting geocurrents.

The chanting completed, I will unveil a circular black mirror made of highly polished obsidian. I have it placed in a stand directly upon the covered Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and I will carefully angle it so I see my dimly lit face reflected in its pool of deep blackness. After only a few moments the reflection of my face will disappear, and I will see with magick eyes and hear with magick ears.

Now, the vision magick begins.

In the middle of the night I will call upon the angels.

I will call upon the angels, and they will answer.

CHAPTER TWO

The Magick of Dr. John Dee

If Merlin is an inner resonator who generated the literature which gathered about his name, then Dr. John Dee must be considered almost his outer manifestation in the real world.

He is probably the single most influential aspect of the magician ever to have lived and a worthy successor to the Arthurian mage.

—JOHN AND CAITLIN MATTHEWS²⁰

The little ceremony I described in chapter one cannot be found in any other book of magick. I composed it in the spring of 2006 for the benefit of the members of my weekly magick class. It is designed as a ritual of preparation—a ceremonial “drug,” as it were, to safely induce an altered state of consciousness, a trance in which specific techniques of magick may be practiced and visions can occur.

The components of the ritual are not, however, a modern invention. The magical implements and furniture were fabricated as faithfully as possible from descriptions found in sixteenth-century manuscripts and items currently housed at the Bodleian Library of Oxford University, the British Library, and the King's Library wing of the British Museum.

The prayers and the chants were drawn from those same ancient texts. In a group magical working, the prayers are recited in unison and the chants intoned Tibetan style, in a deep monotone chorus of two or four groups of voices. The hypnotic effect on the participants is tangible and powerful. (I have yet to discover what it does to our eavesdropping neighbors.)

The ancient manuscripts I refer to are the diaries and magical records of Dr. John Dee²¹ and his partner Edward Kelley, and these texts represent the source material for the system of magick known and practiced today as Enochian magick.

It is not my intention, nor is it within the scope of the present work, to present a proper biography of Dee. That has been handled nicely in Peter French's brilliant biography²² and other texts that I've itemized in the bibliography. I cannot, however, escape the necessity of providing a brief outline of his life and work, because it will have a direct bearing on our understanding of Enochian vision magick and why I think my little ritual of preparation is so important for those who wish to pursue this path.

Son of a gentleman server to Henry VIII, John Dee was a true Renaissance magus and one of the most extraordinary individuals of his time. Historian John Aubrey called him “one of the ornaments of his Age.”²³ That is saying a lot, for his age was peopled with some of the brightest lights in the history of western civilization: Queen Elizabeth I, Charles V, Francis Bacon, Ben Johnson, Edmund Spenser, Giordano Bruno, Christopher Marlowe, and William Shakespeare.

Dee's unique genius blossomed at Cambridge University, and his fame as a published mathematician propelled him as a young man to academic rock-star status throughout Europe. It also brought him to the attention of the rulers of his world, including the future Queen Elizabeth.

He was the master of scores of disciplines. He was a physician, an engineer, a theologian, an astronomer, and cartographer. He invented the nautical instruments and developed the advanced navigational charts that helped make Britannia ruler of the waves. He even coined the term Britannia. A master astrologer, he was allowed to choose the date of Elizabeth's coronation, and throughout her reign he remained her friend and counselor.

Because he was fluent in many languages and lectured often on the continent, Elizabeth enlisted his services as a spy. Dee enjoyed this role very much. As a matter of fact, I believe he remained in this position until the day she died. He was fascinated with cryptography and loved word and letter puzzles. Dee was secretly known as “the queen's eyes,” and he signed his dispatches to her with the stylized image of a hand shading two eyes.

Yes, John Dee, on “her majesty's secret service,” was the first agent 007.²⁴ Dee possessed the largest private library in England and was constantly enlarging it. He was perhaps the most educated man of his day. Part of his education included esoteric philosophy, Qabalah, alchemy, and magick—not illogical pursuits for a Renaissance magus. Magick, in particular, was a science to be explored and exploited. Dee wanted to talk to angels (as did the biblical patriarch Enoch) not only to discover the wisdom of the past and the secrets of the universe, but also, more immediately, to discover the secrets of Elizabeth's enemies and brandish the power to magically manipulate the spiritual forces that control them. Dee wanted to be a magical spy.

His approach to magick (at least at first) was pretty standard procedure for the day. After bathing and dressing in clean clothes (extraordinary measures for the times—unless, of course, it was May, when many people of the day took their annual bath), he would enter a room set aside for the purpose. There he would drop to his knees before a consecrated table/altar and for a half hour or so pray fervently to God and His good angels, alternately reciting a litany of self-abasing confessions of his unworthiness to enter into the divine presence and boasting of his God-given right to do that very thing. With his consciousness duly exalted by prayer, he would then gaze into a crystal or a black mirror (a process known as scrying²⁵) and wait to receive a vision.

In theory that's how it was supposed to work. However, even though Dee was skilled at composing long and eloquent prayers, he was not very good at scrying. In 1581 he started to advertise for someone who was. He had a small measure of success with a handful of rented seers until March of 1582, when he made the acquaintance of one Edward Talbot. Talbot (who would soon confess that his name was actually Kelley) was an unemployed alchemist's assistant and convicted forger. Kelley's questionable character notwithstanding, his skills as a scryer immediately impressed Dee, who hired him on the spot at a salary of fifty pounds a year, a handsome figure for the day.

The partnership of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley would last until 1587. Their angelic-magick workings for the most part concluded in 1584. During their time together they engaged in hundreds of scrying sessions of varying lengths, in which Kelley gazed into a crystal ball or a black obsidian mirror and reported everything he saw and heard during a variety of angelic communications. Dee, sitting at a nearby table with pen and ink, led the questioning and recorded everything in anal-retentive detail.

Not all of the sessions yielded profound revelations. Indeed, many appear to be attempts by the communicating intelligences to simply keep the conversation going. There were numerous instances when information received in earlier sessions was amended (sometimes radically) in subsequent sessions. There were even times when the magicians were informed that they had been deceived in earlier communications by evil spirits. Nevertheless, the consistency of the bulk of the material is staggeringly impressive, and the double-/triple-blind nature in which it was delivered, especially the angelic language, calls, and magical tablets, boggles the imagination.

The Dee and Kelley years can be viewed as having occurred in three major phases, resulting in what appears on the surface to be three separate and unique magical systems. I will discuss these in more detail shortly. Here at the beginning it is enough to simply point out it is the third and last phase of their angelic workings (the three-month period between April 10 and July 13, 1584) that yielded the material for the system of vision magick that can be properly called Enochian.

The Enochian period was highly productive and bore much promise. In fewer than a hundred days Dee and Kelley received an angelic language, tablets containing the names of elemental and celestial beings, and calls in the angelic tongue that promised to unlock the secrets of heaven and earth. With sad, almost Faustian irony, however, once the Enochian material was in their hands, Dee and Kelley did not proceed to actually operate the system in subsequent workings.

They would go on to other magical adventures, attempting to impress (with little success) the crown heads of Europe with their supernatural counsel. Finally, after nearly five years of working together, years of exhausting magical sessions, and years of traipsing their families around Europe (not to mention a notorious wife-swapping incident), familiarity finally bred contempt, and the two magicians parted company without ever getting into the driver's seat of Enochian magick and turning the key.

Dee's complicated life would draw him back to the English court and the distracting world of political intrigue and survival. In 1588, as the Spanish armada set sail to annihilate England's much smaller fleet (an event Dee predicted years earlier), Elizabeth called again upon her Merlin. Dee shocked her courtiers by urging the queen to not engage the Spanish armada and keep her ships at bay, prophesizing that a mighty storm would scatter and destroy the Spaniards. Elizabeth wisely heeded Dee's words. The storm manifested right on cue, and in the chaos that followed, the Spanish armada went down to defeat. In many circles Dee was credited with magically raising the tempest that saved England. The story of this event became instant legend. William Shakespeare, writing only twenty-three years later, would use Dee as the model for Prospero, the storm-raising magician in his play, The Tempest.

Kelley's post-Enochian years would not earn him such renown. His ambitions kept him on the continent, where he peddled the promise of alchemical treasures to the crown heads of Europe. He was knighted by Emperor Rudolph II of Bohemia but was shortly thereafter imprisoned by his royal patron for failing to manufacture alchemical gold. With fairy-tale panache, Sir Edward Kelley plunged to an untimely death in November of 1595 while attempting to escape from the turret of Emperor Rudolph's prison tower.

Dee's end was not so colorful. Elizabeth appointed him warden of Christ's College in Manchester, but it was not a happy tenure. His wife (and, it is believed, several of his children) died there during the plague in 1605. Dee returned to his home at Mortlake, where his daughter Katherine cared for him until his death in late 1608 or early 1609.

How so many of Dee's manuscripts survived to see the light of the twenty-first century is a magical wonder story in and of itself. Several of the most important documents Dee had hidden in the false bottom of a cedar chest (can we get much more romantic?), where they lay undiscovered for over fifty years after his death. Through a curious chain of events (that tragically saw a portion of the manuscripts baked as pie wrappings), the surviving material came to the attention of the illustrious antiquary, politician, astrologer, chemist, and Freemason, Elias Ashmole (1617–1692), one of the few people in the world capable of recognizing the importance of the discovery. Thanks to Ashmole, the material was catalogued and finally housed safely in his own museum at Oxford, the British Museum, and the British Library, where, over three hundred years after its reception, it captured the attention of S. L. MacGregor Mathers, Wynn Wescott, and the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, then Aleister Crowley—and now you.

CHAPTER THREE

Dee and Kelley vs. the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley

Now hath it pleased God to deliver this Doctrine again out of darknesse: and to fulfill his promise with thee, for the books of Enoch: To whom he sayeth as he said unto Enoch. Let those that are worthy understand this, by thee, that it may be one witness of my promise toward thee.

—THE ANGEL AVE, MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1584²⁶

Modern Enochian magick (as first developed in the late nineteenth century by S. L. MacGregor Mathers and the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and later adapted and augmented by Aleister Crowley and others) is a remarkable and tidy self-referential system of visionary magick. It is based upon a small portion of sixteenth-century manuscripts of Dr. John Dee and Edward Kelley, and the mystique of its colorful origins make it initially alluring to magical dilettantes and dabblers. However, the complexity of the system, as outlined by Golden Dawn/Crowley texts, continues to effectively guard the mysteries of this marvelous magical art form from all but the most serious, courageous, tenacious, foolish, or naïve.²⁷

For most of us who cut our Enochian-magick teeth during the latter half of the twentieth century, the Golden Dawn (GD) and Crowley books were at the time the only source material readily available to us. By following the intricate procedures outlined in these texts, we proceeded with our visionary quests along the two avenues of experimentation offered us by the GD/Crowley model: one branch of the system dealing with the elemental (manifest) universe, the other dealing with the aethyric (celestial). I'll discuss these branches in more detail in book IV.

Both of these magical environments are populated by spiritual beings whose names are drawn from five grids of lettered squares received by Dee and Kelley during a series of angelic communications during the third (or Enochian) period of their magical operations. Both the elemental and the celestial magical environments (and their spirit inhabitants) are accessed by intoning one or more of nineteen calls, which are chanted in an angelic language that was given to the Elizabethan magicians under breathtaking and extraordinary circumstances during the last months of their angelic magick workings. Theoretically, these calls induce very specific trances, whereby the magician can pinpoint particular spiritual entities or environments he or she wishes to contact or visit. As you can imagine, this is a very attractive prospect to the magical explorer.

The visionary labor of many post-modern Enochian explorers was well repaid, for we soon discovered that despite our very limited access to the original texts (not to mention our inexperience and ineptitude) this kind of magick actually worked. With surprisingly few exceptions, when we followed the GD/Crowley procedures and techniques, even the most insensitive and skeptical among us received visions we deemed appropriate to the particular regions we were exploring.

The technique used to receive visions such as these is called scrying. The Golden Dawn and Crowley often referred to the practice as “traveling in the spirit vision.” Scrying is, quite simply, the ability to put oneself in touch with one's own psychic senses. In magical operations the scrying session is usually preceded by a formal ceremony designed to put the magician in an altered state of consciousness. It is, for all intents and purposes, a shamanistic experience. The thoughts, mental images, and impressions that flood the magician's mind during this altered state are subsequently recorded in the magician's journal and analyzed.

Naturally, some of us proved more talented than others. Art lovers and movie fans make particularly good candidates for Enochian vision magick, for they see with the romantic's eye and already possess a vast memory bank of evocative landscapes, archetypal characters, and supernatural beings. They are by nature dreamers skilled at communicating through a vocabulary of images and visual metaphors. But even the least imaginative of us, in short order, learned to develop our own visionary skills that became increasingly honed by our repeated work with the system.

There is no question (in my mind, at least) that the Enochian magick procedures and techniques developed by the Golden Dawn and Crowley embody a highly effective system of magical working that, if properly applied, can become an integral component in the modern magician's program of personal self-development. This is especially true for those of us whose magical careers have led us to the Qabalah-based disciplines referred to today in specialized circles as hermetic or ceremonial magick.

To modern ceremonial magicians, Enochian magick appears at first glance to enjoy a comfortable compatibility with our world of pentagram rituals, hexagram rituals, tarot cards, trees of life, qabalistic path workings, chakra work, invocations, god-forms, and spirit evocations. This compatibility, however, has been, for the most part, contrived and jerry-rigged. For as efficacious as the GD/Crowley applications and techniques are, they bear little resemblance to anything Dee and Kelley practiced or were instructed to engage in by their angelic contacts. With all due respect to Mathers, it is clear that he and his Golden Dawn adepts chose to limit their attention to only those portions of source texts that offered material that they could fit easily into the qabalistic/hermetic schema to which they were so passionately committed. Furthermore, it is clear that in many instances, when the original material didn't fit the schema, they found a way to make it fit.

This fact should not diminish in our respect for the wonderfully effective system the Golden Dawn and Crowley have bequeathed to us. But it has prompted many of us (who obviously have an inordinate amount of time on our hands) to examine in greater detail the surviving Dee and Kelley material that has now become more readily available to the serious student. What we discovered is an overwhelmingly large body of work—books, notebooks, and diaries—the most interesting of which span the better part of three years of intense magical operations. Most of this material appears to have nothing whatsoever to do with Enochian magick as practiced today.

As I mentioned earlier, Dee and Kelley's magical workings took place in three distinct phases that yielded three unique magical systems. For convenience, I will refer to these as (1) Heptarchia Mystica (or simply Heptarchia), (2) Loagaeth (which includes an angelic alphabet), and (3) Enochian.

One could argue quite convincingly that the revelations Dee and Kelley received during the Enochian period represent the crème de la crème of their magical workings and that it is unnecessary to waste our time on the painfully complex details of the Heptarchia and Loagaeth working periods. After all, the GD/Crowley system and techniques were developed from this plus ultra Enochian material, and everything seems to work just fine, thank you. In fact, for the better part of twenty years I was one of the most vocal apologists for the Enochian school whose motto is, “Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received!” Then, starting in 1999, a couple of things happened that caused me to rethink the wisdom of this attitude.

First, I became enthralled with the work of Clay Holden and the John Dee Publication Project, which brought the glories of Quinti Libri Mysteriorum to life on the World Wide Web. Then, in 2003, my O.T.O.²⁸ Brother and Enochian magick adept Christeos Pir sent me a computer disk of material from a marvelous Enochian seminar he presented in Pittston, Pennsylvania. Along with the seminar material, he sent me a collection of photographic files of surviving Dee manuscripts from the British Library and other materials that were of great interest to me. I assure you, I could not have written this book without these materials and the profound insights of this great modern magician.

Around the same time, my publisher sent me a copy of Joseph H. Peterson's book John Dee's Five Books of Mystery: Original Sourcebook of Enochian Magic. I had years earlier examined much of this material enlarged from microfilm, but now I had the luxury of comfortably reviewing it in clearer formats (with Latin translations) on my home computer and from Peterson's marvelously wellorganized book.

I must confess that even with this information stacked conveniently and legibly under my nose, I was overwhelmed by the sheer immensity of it all. I'm interested in the magical adventures of Dee and Kelley as much as the next fellow, but I also have a life. Did I need to sacrifice three years of my own life in order to eavesdrop on every detail of three years of theirs? More than ever I saw the wisdom of simply using the magical system Dee and Kelley received and of not wasting precious time trying to recreate the magick they practiced to receive the system. After all, can't I drive a car without first having to build it myself?

But we're not talking about driving cars; we're talking about the art of magick. In the final analysis, no matter what system the magician chooses, in order to make it work most effectively he or she must first become attuned to that system's particular way of viewing of the universe. This concept is so important to the understanding of what will follow in this book that I will pause to illustrate with an example.

The ceremonial magician who practices qabalistic magick acquiesces (at least for the duration of the working) to see all things in heaven and earth in terms of a hierarchy of spiritual personages expressed by the various god names, archangels, angels, spirits, intelligences, and demons of the system. In Qabalah-based magic, such spiritual beings are conveniently organized and arranged according to fourfold formulas dictated by the Hebrew letters that make up the great Name of God, Yod Heh Vav Heh, and by the familiar schema of the Tree of Life, with its ten sephiroth and the twenty-two paths that connect them. Before the magician is ready to operate within the laws and peculiarities of this qabalistic worldview, he or she must first become a fit component of that universe—a harmonious and integral part of this great divine machine, a vital step on this hierarchical stairway of consciousness.

Like the ballerina whose ninety minutes on stage is the product of years of practice and thousands of hours of rehearsal, the magical artist must also be first transformed into a proper instrument of his or her craft. Magicians achieve this transformation with preliminary meditations and rituals, by which we adjust our focus step-by-step until we become comfortable citizens of the specific magical world in which we intend to operate. For the western ceremonial magician, the well-worn curriculum of the Golden Dawn provides perfect examples of this step-by-step adjustment process.

First the magician becomes master of the pentagram and a full citizen of the world of the five elements of the microcosmic universe. By repeated performances of the pentagram rituals and meditations, the magician's psyche becomes balanced and accustomed to the world of the four directional winds, the four elements, and the corresponding magical weapons: the wand, cup, sword, and disk.

Once the elemental (microcosmic) universe is mastered, the magician then moves on to the next step in the attunement process by mastering rituals of the hexagram. Here the magician's point of reference is enlarged as his or her consciousness and identity is obliged to expand from the microcosmic world of the elements to the macrocosmic greater world—the world characterized by the sun orbited by the planets and surrounded by the belt of the zodiac.

This is very basic stuff, but it illustrates how rituals enable the ceremonial magician to externalize internal processes and undergo self-transformation. Would-be magicians who attempt more advanced work without being adjusted by these early attunements are ill prepared to understand or properly absorb what is happening to them within the context of the progressively higher magical environments in which they presumptuously wish to operate. It is true that some magicians may receive seemingly dramatic and noteworthy effects from such premature efforts, but seeds of promise cannot long take root in soil that is not properly prepared or that is too shallow.

Late in 2005, while gathering material for yet another workshop series on Enochian magick for my Monday night magick class, I poured over the records of Dee and Kelley's pre-Enochian workings in hopes of finding the key to their preparatory processes. What exactly did the angels do to Dee and Kelley during the years prior to the final Enochian revelations? Dee and Kelley received some pretty interesting things during those earlier workings, including instructions for the creation of an array of magical implements that the Golden Dawn and Crowley all but ignored:

- a Ring;^{29}
- a Lamén, which was to be worn by the magician as a breastplate and which connects him or her to the Holy Table;
- the Holy Table itself, inscribed with letters from an angelic alphabet and upon which would rest the Sigillum Dei Aemeth;
- the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, an intricately carved disk made of purified beeswax (an artifact so stunning and historically intriguing that it is prominently displayed today in the King's Library wing of the British Museum);
- seven talismans (five squares and two circles), called Ensigns of Creation, which surround the Sigillum on the Holy Table.

All of these items were linked to one another and to the magicians by an overwhelmingly complex process that distilled, shuffled, and organized thousands of letters from numerous and varied alphanumeric grids. These grids had been painstakingly received in vision, one letter at a time, by Kelley and duly transcribed by Dee. The letters spelled the names of great angels, which, in turn, when manipulated, yielded the names of subordinate angels, which produced still more names.

Now, before we get too excited about dusting off and playing with all these pre-Enochian magical tools and furniture, I have to make myself clear on one very important point. These items were received during the first phase of Dee and Kelley's workings.

This period yielded a unique system of planetary magick they referred to as Heptarchia Mystica (see book II). To all appearances, heptarchic magick has little or no direct relationship to the Enochian magick system they received during their final days of practice. Also, it is demonstrably clear (in my mind at least) that Enochian magick can be performed quite effectively without using the Ring, the Lamén, the Holy Table, and so on. However, it is equally clear to me that, as Dee and Kelley were receiving and working with the items and concepts of heptarchic magick, their minds and psychic bodies were, day by day, undergoing subtle yet profound evolutionary changes.

Could the reason the practical Enochian material came so very late in the game be that Dee and Kelley had to first complete their transformation into magicians who could appreciate and handle the advanced work? After all, isn't that what magick is really about— changes in the magician? Could these changes have been brought about by the mere act of meticulously following the angels' complex directions, which filtered and distilled these magical concepts into material manifestation? If so, this would be a vital preparatory step that modern Enochian magicians are omitting entirely.

I grew intrigued with this idea. Given the fact that the GD/Crowley methods of Enochian magick already work so well right out of the box, how much better might these same techniques work if the magician were first prepared and attuned in a manner similar to the way Dee and Kelley had been prepared and attuned. A magician so equipped would be picking up, as it were, where the two Elizabethans left off in 1584.^{30}

I was at first uneasy with this theory because it came dangerously near to destroying my comfortable philosophy of “Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received!” However, my inherent laziness was rewarded, and I eventually took comfort in the realization that in order to ceremonially prepare oneself to perform Enochian magick, one might not need to torturously repeat everything Dee and Kelley did to receive the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamén, the seven Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. Instead, one must simply understand and use (in a way that mirrors the preparation process) the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamén, the seven Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth that they received!

This book was written to show the practicing Enochian magician how to do precisely that, and the little ritual in chapter one (and outlined in greater detail in appendix I) is the ceremony that embodies this preparation process. Like the rituals of the pentagram that prepare us for elemental magick, like the rituals of the hexagram that prepare us for planetary magick, I believe this little ceremony captures the essence of the step-by-step processes of personal alchemy that prepared and attuned Dee and Kelley.

The material is based on two series of classes that Constance and I held in our home in 2005 and 2006—visionary workings that spanned a period of just over seven months. While the class spent a considerable amount of time discussing and analyzing the magical theories that underlie these methods of preparation, most of our time was spent actually applying the techniques in a formal and ceremonial manner prior to group and individual Enochian scrying sessions.

My biggest challenge, for both the class series and writing this book, has been how best to communicate the essence of the breathtakingly intricate procedures that occupied Dee and Kelley during their years of preparation without enmeshing the reader in a time-devouring web of details. It is somewhat like trying to convey the profundity of a great cathedral without dwelling minutely on every action of every stonemason who fashioned each perfect stone. I have resolved, therefore, to stay focused on the big picture and allow the reader to wrap his or her mind around the major themes, secure in the knowledge that he or she can proceed to dissect the method of the madness—and discover further revelations—by referring to the now readily available source texts. It is very important for the reader to understand that this book was not written as a substitute for the source material but simply as a guide to the practical, self-transformational applications of this magical art. I advise those of you who may be committed to in-depth academic research of this subject not to view my book as an authoritative replacement for the original texts. Dee and Kelley's records are liberally peppered with irregularities, conflicting instructions, missing pieces, and typos. I've done my best to wade through these and be as consistent and accurate as possible. But when I say I'm going to stay focused on the big picture, that is exactly what I mean.

Are you ready to begin? If so, we need to first talk briefly about the mind of Dr. John Dee and explore the reasons why the secrets of heaven and earth were communicated to him in alphanumeric ciphers, tables, and squares.

CHAPTER FOUR

The Mind of a Cryptographer

Now first I understand what he, the sage, has said: “The world of spirits is not shut away; Thy sense is closed, thy heart is dead!”

—FAUST, ACT I, SCENE I 31

Are angels, spirits, and demons real? Do they have an existence apart from and outside the mind? Ever since human beings could frame thoughts into words, we have asked ourselves that question. It is an eternal debate among magicians and mystics and one that likely will never be resolved to anyone's complete satisfaction. Personally, I agree with the venerable Rabbi Lamed Ben Clifford who said, “It's all in your head. You just have no idea how big your head is.”32 Certainly every outside impression we receive is ultimately processed inside our own minds. Just keeping that fact in mind we might conclude that, where objective reality is concerned, there is no outside-of-ourselves.

In either case, in the art of magick, the magician must behave (at least for the duration of the operation) as if the spirits are independent intelligences and have an objective existence in a dimension outside his or her own mind. Dee and Kelley (who believed most fervently in a tangible heaven, hell, and the characters and events of the Bible) certainly assumed that the communicating spirits and angels were real and enjoyed an independent existence. This gave the Elizabethan partners a decided psychological edge over modern magicians, who must overcome a smug mountain of logic, rationality, and spiritual cynicism in order to even begin to operate this most naïvely romantic of spiritual art forms.

For practical purposes, it does not matter whether the magician is making contact with “spirit” intelligences from a “spirit world” or merely tapping into currently unexplainable levels in his or her own mind. If the magician is properly prepared (and operating under the right circumstance), it is indeed possible for him or her to make contact with intelligences that for all intents and purposes could be characterized (objectively or metaphorically) as angels, spirits, and demons.

No two individuals are alike, and the art of preparing oneself and arranging the right circumstances for spirit contact is unique for every magician. For us to understand the elements of Enochian magick, we will need to get a basic idea of how the spirits went about reaching the minds of Dee and Kelley—especially Dee, who was, after all, the operating magician. In fact, there are instances where the communicating intelligences indicated that they viewed the two magicians as a single entity with Kelley acting as an extension of Dee's mind. On April 28, 1582, Dee asks of the archangel Michael, “You mean us two (Dee and Kelley) to be joined so, and in mind united, as if we were one man?” and Michael answered, “Thou understandest.”

As I mentioned earlier, Dee was not a particularly talented scryer. Although his diaries record several instances when he saw certain spirits and phenomena, he relied almost entirely on the visionary skills of others. This makes perfect sense to me. Dee's immense intellect was actually a magical handicap. His magnificent brain was too engaged to surrender its analytical control. His mind worked too fast, and his thoughts were too loud to hear the subtle messages from the spirits. This is not good for mystical experiences. In order for the communicating intelligences to get past Dee's constantly churning mind, they had to force him to use his mind to overcome his mind. They had to beat his brain at its own game.

And what were the favorite games of Dr. John Dee's brain? Ciphers, codes, puzzles, magick squares—these were the arts that touched Dee's sense of wonder. Had he been obsessed with music, the spirits might have communicated to him through melodies or harmonies or rhythm. Had he been a dancer, they would have communicated through elements of body movement; had he been a military man, they would have through the metaphors of battle. But he wasn't a musician or a dancer or a soldier. Dee was, at heart, a cryptographer—perhaps the best in the world—and whether he consciously realized it or not, this was how he could make contact with his subconscious mind. This is how he expected the cosmos to unveil her secrets to him. For Dr. John Dee, the secrets of the universe were codes that could be broken. Divine revelation was a matter of decipherment, and he was willing to work for it. Indeed, by working for it, he would prepare himself to receive it. Give me the raw data, and I will decode the mind of God.

Dee was already looking for that raw data the day Edward Kelley first knocked on his door. He was looking for it in the Book of Soyga.

CHAPTER FIVE

The Book of Soyga

Dee: Is my book of Soyga of any excellency?

Uriel: That book was revealed to Adam in Paradise by God's good angels ...

Dee: ...Oh, my great and long desire hath been to be able to read those tables of Soyga.

—JOHN DEE AND THE ARCHANGEL URIEL, MARCH 10, 1582³³

Even before Dee met Kelley he was immersed in the study of a magical treatise written in Latin called Aldaraia sive Soyga: Tractatus Astrologico magicus or, more simply, the Book of Soyga.³⁴ We know that Dee was intrigued by the Book of Soyga because his diary records that it was the subject of one of the very first questions he asked of the archangel Uriel during Edward Kelley's inaugural scrying session on March 10, 1582. In later diary entries he laments that he has misplaced his Book of Soyga, and still-later entries indicate that he eventually found it.

The book is an anonymous, late-medieval grimoire of planetary, angelic, and demonic magick that is in many ways not too dissimilar from other magical treatises of the period. However, there are several things that distinguish Soyga—things that obviously made it particularly attractive to Dee. For one thing, a great deal of the text concerns itself with alphanumeric exercises and puzzles; letters with numerical, astrological, and elemental values, which are combined, recombined and reduced to form magick words (spelled forwards and backwards), all of which contain increasingly complex values and magical virtues. As we will see, this magical letter distillation process is characteristic of Enochian magick.

Perhaps most intriguing to Dee were the last eighteen leaves of Soyga. These pages contain thirty-six tables, each comprising a grid of 1,296 squares, arranged in 36×36 grids. Each of the tables' 1,296 squares is filled with a Latin letter. Together the tables could form a cube comprising 46,656 squares. Each of the thirty-six tables is identified by an astrological or elemental symbol; the first twenty-four are attributed (in pairs) to signs of the zodiac, the next seven to the planets, the next four to the elements (Fire, Water, Air, and Earth), and one simply to “Magistri.”^{35 36}

For our purposes, I impress upon the reader's mind the profound importance of alphanumerics and how much information can be encoded within a grid of a magick table. I will try to demonstrate this with a very simple illustration, shown in figure 1.

♄ ¹ A	♅ ² B	♆ ³ C
♄ ⁴ D	♅ ⁵ E	♆ ⁶ F
♄ ⁷ G	♅ ⁸ H	♆ ⁹ I

This table is made up of nine squares. Each square contains one of nine letters, and these letters can be considered by themselves or in combination with the others to spell magical words. Each individual letter has many traditional meanings attached to it. To keep things simple, I've arbitrarily assigned just two correspondences (numerical and planetary) to each of the letters; these are shown in the corners of each lettered square. Theoretically, the number of correspondences each square can represent is nearly infinite.

For example, in this particular table, c not only represents the letter c but also the number three and all things threeish. What do I mean by threeish? One very big example is all things in the universe that exist in time and have movement, and all things that have a beginning, a middle, and an end. In this example c also represents Saturn and everything Saturnian (from wisdom and restriction to darkness, old age, and lead).

Like DNA, alphanumeric squares carry an unimaginably vast amount of information in a deceptively small package. As a resident of our 3 × 3 table, the c square also carries information drawn from its position relative to the other letters and their correspondences. Can you begin to see how much information is contained in that one little square alone? Imagine, then, the mass of complex data that could be tightly stored in a 36 × 36 × 36 square cube represented by the Book of Soyga.

I've discovered no evidence of a direct connection between the Book of Soyga and any of the magical workings that led ultimately to the reception of Enochian magick. Nevertheless, the fact remains that even before Dee met Kelley, the mechanics of the alphanumeric cipher system, as presented in Soyga, captured Dee's analytical imagination and had become part of the way he expected to receive divine information. Indeed, at every phase of Dee and Kelley's workings, alphanumeric squares and codes would play a major role.

We know Dee held the Book of Soyga in high regard and was particularly preoccupied with learning the secrets of the thirty-six tables. The magical process of the Book of Soyga (shuffling and distilling immense numbers of letters and squares into smaller and smaller bits of concentrated information) would become the modus operandi by which the spirits would ultimately communicate the secrets of Enochian magick to Dee and Kelley. It would be the method by which they received the Holy Table, the Lamen, the Ensigns of Creation, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, the Table of Nalvage, the Elemental Tablets, and, most dramatically, the angelic language and the forty-eight calls. In a way, this process is a metaphor of the mechanics of creation itself. As Carl Sagan³⁷ said, “If you wish to make an apple pie from scratch, you must first create the universe.” In this case, our apple pie is the manifest universe—the world as it presently exists—the world Dee and Kelley wished to understand and magically affect.

This world is the end product of a progression of cosmic events that physicists believe began with an immeasurably dense singularity (containing all the potential information that would eventually become the universe) that burst open and set into motion the phases of creation. The immensely packed assembly of thirty-six 36×36 alphanumeric squares found in the Book of Soyga is a crude but appropriate model for such a singularity. The intricate process of combining, shuffling, and distilling information-packed squares magically mimics the astronomical processes by which atoms and elements to stars and planets were formed in the creation cycle from seemingly chaotic units of a potential universe.

The Book of Soyga did not play a direct role in the magical operations of Dee and Kelley, but the patterns and formulae it embodied would remain the methodology of their angelic communications until the end of their association. I believe that the two magicians, by taking part in this incremental process of creation, became personally attuned to the magical universe as it presently exists, and thus prepared themselves to receive and engage in Enochian magick. In the chapters that follow, I will present only the briefest snapshots of the step-by-step process that I believe was the attunement program that prepared Dee and Kelley to receive the Enochian magick system. Hopefully, by your participation in the process, you also will undergo (however vicariously) a similar transformational experience and become fully prepared to actually practice Enochian vision magick.

But first, let us pray.

CHAPTER SIX

Let Us Pray

No man should ever undertake any great or important undertaking without first invoking the blessing of God.

—Master's admonition, California Free and Accepted Masons

The whole secret may be summarized in these four words: “Inflame thyself in praying.”

—ALEISTER CROWLEY³⁸

One of the most fundamental and important magical tools Dee used throughout his life was prayer. So, before we begin to examine magick rings and protective breastplates and holy tables and other such wizardly items, we need to first get something straight about prayer.

It's okay to pray. Even if you think you don't believe in the same God that Dee and Kelley believed in, it's okay to pray. I realize for many twenty-first-century magicians the word prayer carries with it unpleasant memories of childhood church and Sunday school traumas, and bedtime fears that “if I die before I wake” somebody was going to take my soul to God knows where.

In magick, prayer has nothing to do with religion. It does, however, have everything to do with the magician's grasp of facts of life in the magical world in which he or she intends to operate. Part of that reality is the mystical fact that existence itself is an expression of consciousness, and there are levels of consciousness higher and lower than the one we are currently attuned to.

By the simple act of uttering a prayer, our apparently limited consciousness reaches out and makes contact with a higher level of consciousness, and by doing so, we insert ourselves into the divine circuitry of the cosmos. As we do, part of us (a part that we might not be aware of) wakes up, as it were, and recognizes our rightful place in this circuitry.

In my book The Key to Solomon's Key,³⁹ I illustrate this concept using the legend of King Solomon as my example. In the excerpt below, I discuss prayer in the context of spirit evocation, but the same thoughts hold true to all forms of magick, including Enochian.

The third chapter of the book of Kings⁴⁰ tells us that at the beginning of his reign the Lord appeared to Solomon in a vision by night and said, “Ask that which I should give you.” Solomon answered:

*“Give therefore to thy servant an understanding heart to judge thy people and to discern between good and bad; for who is able to judge this thy so great a people?” And it pleased the Lord because Solomon had asked this thing. And the Lord said to Solomon, “Because you have asked this thing and have not asked for yourself riches, neither have you asked the lives of your enemies nor have you asked for yourself long life, but have asked for yourself wisdom to discern judgment; Behold, I have done according to your words; lo, I have given you a wise and understanding heart, so that there has been none like you before you, neither shall any arise after you like you.”*⁴¹

Before undertaking the task of ruling his people and building the Temple, Solomon doesn't begin by consulting with his inferiors (his ministers, his generals, his architects, his building-supply contractors, or labor leaders). He doesn't immediately enmesh himself in the energy-draining details of micromanaging such a huge and important project. Instead he turns his attention upward to the highest level of the hierarchical scale of consciousness. He makes direct contact with Deity and, instead of behaving like a helpless youngster asking a parent for pocket money, he boldly makes himself available to serve as a conduit through which the Deity's infinite wisdom and understanding can pass.

This profoundly mature and uncomplicated request is instantly granted, as if Deity had no choice but to acquiesce. A unique⁴² spiritual hierarchy is created, with Solomon enthroned midway between heaven and hell—poised to work in cosmic harmony with the divine consciousness above him, poised to compel the infernal spirits to do the same.

This is the primary secret of Solomonic magic. As long as the magician remains plugged in to that which is above, he or she is simultaneously plugged into (and must begin to master) that which is below.⁴³

Dee's prayers, both in English and Latin, fill page after page of his diaries and magical records. I confess I am neither inclined nor devotionally equipped to follow his exhausting example. I do, however, recognize the efficacy of prayer as an indispensable preliminary to magical operations. And, while I do not personally believe that the biblical Solomon ever existed as such in empirical history, as a magical artist I embrace his myth and happily adopt him as a patron saint of magick.

How appropriate, then, that the first magical tool Dee and Kelley would receive from their angelic contacts was the Ring of Solomon, and that before putting on that ring, the magician must first pray.

BOOK II

De Heptarchia Mystica

CHAPTER SEVEN

The Ring

Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all Miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrowght by Salomon.

—THE ARCHANGEL MICHAEL, MARCH 14, 1582

The first system of magick Dee and Kelley received from their angelic contacts was a form of planetary magick referred to as De Heptarchia Mystica. It was delivered mostly in late 1582 and amended somewhat the following year. The details of how it was painstakingly received are recorded in Dee's *Quinti Libri Mysteriorum*⁴⁴ and edited for purposes of practical working in his “De Heptarchia Mystica.”⁴⁵ Unfortunately, we don't know exactly how, or even if, the magicians actually operated this particular form of magick. What we do know is that besides receiving the names and symbols for forty-nine planetary “good angels” Dee and Kelley were instructed to create a number of magical items—items that were almost entirely ignored by the Golden Dawn and Crowley. These items, I believe, can be extremely important tools for the modern Enochian magician; these are the Ring, the Holy Table, the Ensigns of Creation, the Lamén, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth.

First we need to examine the Ring, for without the Ring the magicians were told they could “do nothing.” Unlike most other things they would receive from their angelic contacts, the Ring was delivered in a relatively straightforward manner.

I will not quote long passages from Dee's records, but his description of the circumstances surrounding the reception of the magic Ring are so colorfully dramatic that I cannot resist quoting a brief passage. The date is Wednesday, March 14, 1582. Dee and Kelley were engaged in their fourth action⁴⁶ and experiencing a close encounter with the archangels Michael and Uriel. (The following excerpt retains the inconsistent spelling and punctuation of Elizabethan English. The Greek delta, Δ, is Dee, “Mi” the archangel Michael.)

Δ: Now Michael thrust out his right arme, with the sword: and bad the skryer to loke. Then his sword did seame to cleave in two: and a great fyre, flamed out of it, vehemently. Then he toke a ring out of the flame of his sworde: and gave it, to Uriel: and sayd, thus:

Mi: The strength of God, is unspeakable. Praysed be god for ever and ever.

Δ: Then Uriel did make cursy unto him.

Mi: After this sort, must thy ring be: Note it.

Δ: Then he rose, or disapeared, out of the chayre, and by and by, cam again, and sayde, as followeth.

Mi: I will reveale thee this ring: which was never revealed since the death of Salomon: with whom I was present. I was present with him in strength, and mercy.

Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all Miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrowght by Salomon: This is it, which I have revealed unto thee. This is it, which Philosophie dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels skarse know. This is it, and blessed be his Name: yea, his Name be blessed for ever.

Then he layd the Ring down uppon the Table: and sayd, Note.

Δ: It shewed to be a Ring of Gold: with a seale graved in it: and had a rownd thing in the myddle of the seale and a thing like an V, throwgh the top of the circle: and an L, in the bottome: and a barr cleane throwgh it: And had these fowre letters in it, P E L E. After that, he threw the ring on the borde, or Table: and it semed to fall throwgh the Table and then he sayde, thus,

Mi: So shall it do, at thy commanndement. Without this, thow shalt do nothing. Blessed be his name, that cumpasseth all things: Wonders are in him, and his Name is WONDERFULL: His Name worketh wonders from generation, to generation.^{47}

Solomon was, and remains, the archetypal magician, and his legendary exploits as a master of spirits fill the pages of traditional Jewish, Islamic, and Ethiopian religious literature. In many of the stories, his magical ring played an important role as the source of his power to control demons. I can imagine Dee and Kelley were very impressed to be given the Ring of Solomon by none other than the archangel Michael himself.

Although the ring's design is unique, the word PELE (wonder worker) is found in two books which Dee already had in his library: De Verbo Mirifico by German humanist and Hebrew scholar Johann Reuchlin and Cornelius Agrippa's Occult Philosophy. (Agrippa apparently took the term from Reuchlin.)

Dee was told the Ring should be made of pure gold. If he indeed had one made, it has not survived the centuries. Realistically, few of us today have the skill to fashion or the resources to have a golden ring custom made.⁴⁸ Nevertheless, Michael seemed adamant, “Without this, thou shalt do nothing.” And so I've come to the conclusion if I'm to practice this particular art of magick, then before I do anything, I'm going to wear the Ring.

Here is the pattern for a Ring that can be made out of colored paper or poster board. I realize such material is not as impressive or romantic as pure gold. You might even think that a true magick Ring cannot be made from a scrap of paper. You might tell me you'd feel silly wearing a paper ring. If you feel this way, then I hope you won't be offended when I tell you that if you can't make a real magick Ring out of paper, then you'll not be able to make one out of gold. The same goes for the other magical items I am going to discuss in the next few chapters.

Before I practice any aspect of Enochian magick, I recite two short prayers. The first is a prayer John Dee used regularly throughout the years of his magical workings.⁴⁹

Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart.

The second is a prayer I fashioned from the words the archangel Michael spoke to Dee and Kelley during their March 14, 1582, action:

Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

After reciting these prayers and putting on the Ring, I then position myself at the Holy Table and prepare to put on the Lamén.

CHAPTER EIGHT

The Lamén

Beware of wavering. Blot out suspicion of us, for we are God's creatures that have reigned, do reign, and shall reign forever. All our Mysteries shall be known unto you.

—THE ANGEL BRALGES, ONE OF THE ANGELIC PRINCES NAMED ON THE LAMEN, NOVEMBER 16, 1582, *PRINCE BRALGES, NOVEMBER 16, 1582*⁵⁰

The Lamén and the Holy Table are inextricably linked. By wearing the Lamén over the heart, the magician becomes linked to the Holy Table. I cannot say it any plainer than that. But putting on the Lamén and sitting at the Holy Table are empty gestures unless the magician has some idea of what these items represent and how they are connected.

The designs for both the Lamén and the Holy Table were distilled from tables composed of letters of the names of planetary angels of the Heptarchia. Even though the chronology of their reception is a bit tangled, it is probably easiest to discuss the Lamén first.

Traditionally a Lamén is a breastplate that is hung from the neck by a chain or ribbon. The breastplate of the high priest of Israel is the biblical archetype for this most important piece of magical adornment. It was a square plate, a 3 × 4 grid embedded with twelve precious stones representing, among other twelveish concepts, the tribes of Israel and the signs of the zodiac. The Lamén that the angels delivered to Dee and Kelley contained no precious stones but displayed eighty-four angelic letters arranged in a most curious and exacting manner.

Two versions of the Lamén were received by Dee and Kelley. The first, delivered in 1582, was a rather odd assortment of lines, squiggles, and letters reminiscent of Solomonic or Goetic sigils. This Lamén, they were told, was to be made in gold and worn as a protective device. After receiving it, the magicians spent the rest of the year and part of 1583 receiving material relating to the forty-nine planetary good angels of the Heptarchia (see figure 5).

The seven-letter names of these angels were received (much to Dee's cryptographic delight, I'm sure) by the complex manipulation and distillation of letters from a cross-shaped table composed of seven 7×7 tables (343 squares in all, each containing a number and a letter). This process was dictated by the archangel Michael during a grueling three-hour session. Just to give you an idea of the shape and size of this table, I've included a rough image without the letters and numbers.

The magicians were then instructed how to organize and arrange these 343 letters to reveal the hierarchy of planetary good angels. Each of the seven planetary spheres was assigned a king, a prince, and five ministers. Figure 5 shows how the 343 letters form the names of the forty-nine good angels and how they are arranged according to planet (starting at the top of the wheel and working counterclockwise: Venus, Luna, Saturn, Mercury, Jupiter, Mars, Sol). Note also that only the names of the kings and princes are in all capital letters.

It is obvious from the surviving material that some technique of practical magic was intended to call forth the heptarchic kings, princes, and ministers. Illustrations of flat wooden disks containing the names of the kings and other unexplained characters tantalize us with glimpses of an organized magical system. But the sad fact remains that important source material that could shed light on this has not survived the centuries.

However, just as amber encapsulates and preserves the essence of a prehistoric insect (right down to the DNA), so too the Lamén and the Holy Table capture the distilled essence of the heptarchic hierarchy and system.

After receiving the names, sigils, and hierarchical structures of the forty-nine good angels, the magicians were informed that the first Lamén they received during their actions the previous year was a false one, delivered to them by an “illuding spirit.” They were given instructions how to create a new one, which was to be worn not for protection per se, but in order to “dignify” the magicians as worthy practitioners of this form of magick.

I'm going to try to illustrate (as painlessly as possible) how both the Lamén and the Holy Table were created and why I believe their use in Enochian magick is important. Now, the reader might be tempted to skim over the following material, invoking my slogan, “Don't try to duplicate the magick Dee and Kelley did to receive the system—just use the system they received.” But I beg you to resist that temptation. By following through (even halfheartedly) the methods by which these magical tools were constructed, you will slip, however subtly, into the divine creative stream that produced them. You will become part of the same process that programmed and prepared Dee and Kelley.

The key to the construction of the Lamén was a 12×7 table containing the letters of the names (minus the initial *b*⁵¹) of the seven planetary heptarchic kings and their princes (see figure 6).

Mimicking the cooling phases of Big Bang creation, this 12×7 table was condensed from the 343 lettered squares of the much larger cross-shaped table (see figure 4).

As you can see, the names of the kings are found on the right half of the table, the names of the princes on the left half. The names in this table are read from right to left. You will immediately notice that the kings of one planet are not matched on the same line as the prince of the same planet (e.g., the sun ☉ king, Bobogel, is set on the same line with the Venus ♀ prince, Bornogo, instead of on the line of the sun ☉ prince, Befafes).⁵² This odd juxtaposition of planetary king and prince puts a certain strain on the sensitivities of those of us who like the order of our universe nice and symmetrical. However, this is the arrangement the angels insisted upon for the 12 × 7 table from which the Lamén was to be formed. As we will soon see in the following chapter, they will rectify the imbalance in the 12 × 7 table in order to create the Holy Table. But first let's continue to see how the Lamén is built.

The basic form of the Lamén is a table of twenty-four squares (arranged from top to bottom: 2—4—6—6—4—2) enclosed within diamond square, enclosed by a square, enclosed by a larger square.

The letters of the 12×7 table were applied to the Lamen by means of an exercise that first divided the table into three sections, described as flesh, heart, and skin. The letters were then transferred to the blank Lamen in three steps.

Step One: The letters of the flesh were added to the perimeter of the Lamen in their same relative positions to the 12×7 table.

Step Two: The letters of the heart were added to the corners of the next inner square of the Lamen in a curiously inconsistent manner. (I've added arrows indicating how the letters are applied.)

Dee was told that the Latin letters of the finished Lamén should be translated into the angelic script. (I'll discuss the angelic alphabet a bit later.) Figure 15 shows the completed Lamén with angelic letters.

As with the Ring, gold was the material suggested for the Lamén, but it can be made from paper or poster board. The Lamén I first used was printed on both sides (Latin letters on one side, angelic script on the other) and laminated in plastic. In the area just above the top center I punched a hole through which I threaded a black ribbon.

As I put on the Lamen I utter the prayer:⁵³

Behold the Lamen. As the Holy Table conciliates Heaven and Earth, let this Lamen which I place over my heart conciliate me to the Holy Table. Amen.

To understand what I mean by that prayer, we'll next need to turn our attention to the Holy Table.

CHAPTER NINE

The Holy Table

Every one of those sides must have 21 Characters: But first, at every corner make a great B.

—THE ANGEL IL, APRIL 28, 1583⁵⁴

Magick tables were nothing new to Renaissance magicians. Unlike the protective circle and triangle spirit-trap apparatus used by Solomonic magicians, a properly consecrated magick table in a room transforms the entire chamber into holy ground. The table itself becomes the Holy of Holies, the place whereupon earth and heaven touch. Drawings of the period show the magician on his knees, his arms stretched in supplication, before a magick table sheltered by a conical tent.

Dee was already using a table of practice before Edward Kelley entered the picture, but afterwards, as the elements of the heptarchic magick developed, it became clear that the communicating spirits wanted Dee to customize his table in a most specific manner. The angels wanted the Holy Table to be an “instrument of conciliation,” made of “sweet wood,”⁵⁵ and built two cubits square and two cubits high.⁵⁶ The table was to stand upon a carpet of red silk that was large enough to accommodate the scryer's chair. Once the Sigillum Dei Aemeth and the seven Ensigns of Creation were in position, the Holy Table was covered by a red silk cloth with gold tassels that hung from the corners. The scrying stone or black mirror was then placed upon the covered Sigillum.

The public's first view of the Holy Table (sometimes referred to as the Table of Covenant or Table of Practice) was published in 1659 by Meric Casaubon in his *A True & Faithful Relation*⁵⁷ It was Casaubon's image that was reproduced in 1912 in Aleister Crowley's magazine *The Equinox*⁵⁸ and numerous books since then.

It may come as a surprise to many (and be highly amusing to others) that Casaubon's impressively printed image of the Holy Table is perhaps the greatest flaw in his liberally flawed and ill-titled A True & Faithful Relation. One look at the description and drawing in Dee's *Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Appendix*⁵⁹ reveals the eighty-four letters that form the border of the Holy Table and the twelve letters that fill the 3×4 center square of Casaubon's image are printed in backward order. Figures 16 and 19 illustrate the correct arrangement of the letters on the Holy Table.

The Holy Table and the Lamén are inextricably linked. By wearing the Lamén, the magician is linked, or conciliated, to the Holy Table. The object that forms this magical link and serves as the common denominator between the Holy Table and Lamén is the same 12×7 table that was used to construct the Lamén—the same table that bore the names of the seven planetary kings and the seven planetary princes of the heptarchic hierarchy.

Did I say the same 12×7 table? That's not entirely accurate.

Recall that when we were discussing the 12×7 table in the previous chapter, something appeared out of whack. The names of the planetary kings did not share the same lines as their planetary counterpart prince (e.g., the sun ☉ king, Bobogel, is set on the same line with the Venus ♀ prince, Bornogo, instead of his sun ☉ prince, Befafes). This planetary mismatch in the 12×7 table's construction did not appear to bother the angels, and indeed the “flaw” seemed to be a vital characteristic of the Lamén.

As you can see in Figure 17, the version of the 12×7 table that is the key to the Holy Table “corrects” this imbalance by rearranging the names of the planetary kings to match those of the princes of the same planet. Furthermore, the table is reversed, so that the kings now occupy the left side of the table and princes the right, and the direction in which the names are read is reversed to read from left to right.

In my mind, the differences between the two 12×7 tables demonstrate a fundamental fact of life—the fact that even though human beings are an integral part of the hierarchy of spiritual beings, we currently find ourselves “on earth,” trapped in a tomb of matter and to all appearances separated from the greater realities of the spiritual “heavens.”

Qabalists tell us that we are created in the image of Deity—that we are, in the truest sense, a little reflection (a microcosm) of the great intelligence and creative force that creates, sustains, and destroys all things in the universe (the macrocosm). As Hermes Trismegistus said, “As above, so below.”

That's all fine and good, and I go about my magical business as if it were true. But honestly, even though I'm composed of the same material that makes up the sun and moon and stars and angels and archangels and the supreme Deity, even though I am striving for selfawareness and do my best to be a divinely creative individual, still I don't feel much like the macrocosmic Deity. Compared to the macrocosm, my microcosm is way out of whack. My life is one of stress and imbalance. From where I stand, there is a very big break between Deity's above and Lon Milo DuQuette's below. I'm like the 12×7 table from which the Lamen is created: I've got all the condensed components of a perfectly tuned universe in me, but they are out of sync just enough to keep me from actually being the perfect reflection of the big “way things are.”

I can really identify with the way the Lamén is constructed. Like it, my hierarchy of planets is mismatched and unbalanced. (Take one look at my astrological chart if you don't believe it!) Like the curious inconsistencies that characterize how the individual letters are transferred from the 12×7 table to the Lamén, my individual components are a litany of curious inconsistencies.

The 12×7 table that makes the Holy Table, on the other hand, sets this all straight. It is like the macrocosm showing the microcosm how it's done. As I sit before the Holy Table with the Lamén over my heart, I can almost feel the Holy Table's order and perfection pulling magnetically at my heart through the Lamén, connecting me by an almost tangible electric current to the Holy of Holies, pulling my heart and my attention toward the sacred spot in my living-room temple where heaven touches earth. The Holy Table is indeed an instrument of conciliation, an instrument of reunion.⁶⁰

The letters of the 12×7 table are transferred to the Holy Table in the following manner. First, to make things a little easier to see let's turn the 12×7 table on its end.

The border of the Holy Table is first segmented into twenty-one cells per side. Per angelic instructions, the sacred letter B is placed in the four corners, and then the letters of the 12×7 table are inserted in the remaining cells as indicated by the four sets of arrows on figure 18. The 3×4 square in the center of the Holy Table is extracted from the central heart of the 12×7 table, as highlighted in figure 18.

The arrows around the edges of figure 19 (see page 54) show that the letters are arranged to generate a counterclockwise whirl. In the Ritual of Preparation of chapter one, I chant seven rounds of the perimeter letters in this order using the angelic pronunciation. I also do the same for the twelve letters of the center square. By doing so, I effectively activate the Holy Table and the objects that sit upon it (including the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, the Ensigns of Creation, and the skrying mirror). The chant affects a powerful shift in consciousness unlike anything I have experienced before in magical practice.

As the manifest universe is the evolving end product of the dynamic forces that created it, so too the Holy Table manifests on earth as the perfect miniature working model of the heavenly matrix. It is a magical machine with many moving parts, all in perpetual motion.

Picture in your artist/magician's mind how, like the stars in the rotating arms of a spiral galaxy, the eighty-four angelic letters that form the border of the Holy Table circumscribe the other objects on the tabletop with an eternal counterclockwise movement around the outside of the table's hexagram (symbol of the macrocosm).

Within, the twelve angelic letters in the 3×4 square in the center of the Holy Table's hexagram churn with the dynamics of the up-down/right-left movement suggested by its four rows of three letters networked with its three columns of four letters.

The Lamén is born of the same alphanumeric codes as the Holy Table, but its construction is flawed by a slight imbalance. So too the magician, in his or her present state, is the seemingly flawed microcosmic reflection of Deity. By wearing the Lamén, the imperfect magician is linked to the perfection of the Holy Table, and while in this exalted state may become privy to the secrets of the macrocosmic universe.

CHAPTER TEN

The Sigillum Dei Aemeth

Seven, rest in 7: and the 7, live by 7: The 7, govern the 7: And by 7 all Government is.

—THE ARCHANGEL MICHAEL, MARCH 20, 1582⁶¹

The design of Dee's Sigillum Dei Aemeth (“the seal of God's truth”) is perhaps the most recognizable image of Enochian magick. It is a powerful magical device, alive with the angelic forces of an ordered universe in which “Seven, rest in Seven: and the Seven, live by Seven: The Seven, govern the Seven: And by Seven all Government is.”

Unlike the hierarchies of the Lamien and the Holy Table, the Sigillum's hierarchy of angels was not condensed, distilled, or otherwise generated from the seven 12×7 tables from which the names of the forty-nine good angels were drawn. Nevertheless, the Sigillum is the centerpiece of heptarchic magick and is the object through which all heptarchic energy (if we dare call it that) is focused.

The Sigillum itself was a disk nine inches in diameter and approximately an inch and a half thick. It was made of pure beeswax and placed in the center of the Holy Table. The scrying crystal or black mirror was placed upon it. Four smaller wax versions were placed beneath small boxes, upon which stood the four legs of the Holy Table.

Dee was first told to simply copy the design from a book he already had in his library. But Dee had at least two volumes⁶² that contained designs for sigilla. He couldn't make up his mind which one to use, so he asked for further clarification. The angel then gave instructions how to construct an entirely new sigillum based on the format of the others but adding an array of heavenly personages: seven god names enclosing seven sets of angelic names.

It is clear to me that the construction of the Sigillum was a vital step in Dee and Kelley's preparation program and that construction can serve that same important purpose to the modern magician as well. I'm going to walk you through the steps of how it is constructed, because I hope readers who are serious about actually doing magick, rather than merely studying it, will want to build their own.

I've provided you with a blank sigillum (figure 21), and I encourage you to make multiple photocopies of it. Enlarge it, if you wish, to nine inches in diameter. Then follow the step-by-step instructions. As you do, you will not only be building this magical device on paper, but you also will be installing it inside yourself. Constructing your own Sigillum Dei Aemeth is the fastest and easiest way I know to meet and connect with the angelic forces resident in the design and make them part of you. It may take you several tries to get it all right, but I'm confident when you have completed your Sigillum you will think it worth the effort.

Building the Sigillum

Step One: The Seven God Names

The seven god names were drawn from numbers and letters that appear in the forty cells that make up the perimeter of the Sigillum. The magicians were told to divide the outer perimeter of a blank ring into four sections. Then they were to divide each of the four sections into ten (making forty cells in all). Kelley then had a dramatic and colorful vision, facilitated by the archangel Michael, with the help of Uriel and the angel Semiael. In this vision, forty angels stepped forth, one at a time, and parted their garments to reveal one of three things:

1. a number positioned above a letter,
2. a letter positioned above a number, or
3. a single letter.

Some of the letters were capitalized, but most were lowercase. As they revealed their letters and numbers, each of the forty angels also uttered a different pious declaration in Latin, such as, “O God, God, our God, blessed are you, now and forever” or “And you are true in your works.” Then the angel disappeared or was consumed in flashes of fire or other such dramatics. The magicians were then left with a string of numbers and letters, which I've arranged in a table (see figure 22).

4	9	7	t	22	6	22	20	14	6	18	26	l	7	13	H	y	t	o	e	10	11	15	8	r	6	o	5	h	o	a	a	6
T	G	n	9	h	n	m	o	a	n	a	h	l	30	n	8	G	r	12	og	15	11	8	21	b	A	l	a	16	n	A	10	G	14	17	s	5	24	ω
* * *					* * *					* * *					* * *					* * *

Figure 22: Outer perimeter bar code (the lowercase letter l is italicized so as to not be confused with uppercase I)

First make sure your blank Sigillum is oriented so that the pentagram in the center is pointing toward the top of the page. Then refer to figure 23 and locate the topmost cell of the Sigillum's outer perimeter—the cell that contains the number 4 over the capital letter T. Fill in that cell with a 4 over a T. Then, referring to the table (figure 22) and moving clockwise, fill in the remaining thirty-nine cells of the outer perimeter of your blank Sigillum as you see them in figure 23.

From the letters and numbers of the perimeter the seven god names and their sigils are drawn. The starting points for the god names are the cells that contain capital letters. These are also identified in figure 22 with asterisks beneath them.

From those starting points, note the number inside the cell and count your way to find the next letter in the god name. You count clockwise when the number in the cell is positioned above the letter, and you count counterclockwise when the letter is positioned above the number. Keep counting until you reach a cell that contains a letter but no number. That will be the last letter of that particular god name. It's almost like turning the dial of a combination lock, and, indeed, that's exactly what you're doing.

Confused? Don't be. It's much easier to actually do it than describe it. Just keep figure 23 in front of you as you follow the directions that follow.

Starting at the cell with 9/G in it (near the top of the circle), count nine cells clockwise (because the number is above) to 6/a. From there, count six cells clockwise to l/8. Count eight cells counterclockwise (because the letter is above) to 20/a. Count twenty cells clockwise to 8/a. Count eight cells clockwise to the single letter s. Because there is no number assigned to the s cell, we know that s is the final letter to this god name.

When all the counting is done, we have spelled the god name Galaas. The archangel Michael would later advise Dee and Kelley to alter the spelling (an archangel's prerogative) to Galas.

Michael assigned Galas a characteristic sigil and a number (see figure 24). He also instructed that the sigil and number of Galas should be placed on the Sigillum, in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately the eleven o'clock position (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Galas and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Saturn.

Starting with 7/G (near the bottom of the circle), count seven cells clockwise to e/21. Count twenty-one cells counterclockwise to t/9. Count nine cells counterclockwise to h/14. Count fourteen cells counterclockwise to the unnumbered letters og to finish the god name Gethog.

Michael assigned Gethog the sigil and number shown in figure 25 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately nine o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Gethog and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Jupiter.

Starting with 4/T (near the top of the circle), count four cells clockwise to 22/h. Count twenty-two cells clockwise (because the number 22 is on top) to 11/A. Count eleven cells clockwise to a/5. Count five cells counterclockwise to o/10. Count ten cells counterclockwise to t/11. Count eleven cells counterclockwise to the cell that contains the single letter h to finish the god name Th Aaoth.

Again using his archangel's prerogative, Michael later advised Dee to slightly alter the spelling to Thaoth. He also assigned Thaoth the sigil and number shown in figure 26 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately seven o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Thaoth and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Mars.

Horlwn

Starting with H/12 (near the bottom of the circle), count twelve cells counterclockwise to 22/o. Count twenty-two cells clockwise to r/16. Count sixteen cells counterclockwise to 26/l. Count twenty-six cells clockwise to 6/ω.⁶³ Count six cells clockwise to single letter n, producing the god name Horlwn.

Michael assigned Horlōn the sigil and number shown in figure 27 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the space between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at six o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Horlōn and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Sol.

Starting with 15/I (near the left-hand side of the circle), count fifteen cells clockwise to 7/n. Count seven cells clockwise to 14/n. Count fourteen cells clockwise to o/8. Count eight cells counterclockwise to the single letter n, producing the name Innon.

Michael assigned Innon the sigil and number shown in figure 28 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately four o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Innon and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Venus.

With Aaoth, you have your choice of either (1) starting at 11/A (near the left-hand side of the circle) and counting eleven cells clockwise to a/5 or (2) starting with 6/A (near the left-hand side of the circle) and counting six cells clockwise to a/5.

In either case, once you get to a/5, count five cells counterclockwise to o/10. Count ten cells counterclockwise to t/11. Count eleven cells counterclockwise to finish at h, producing the god name Aaoth.

Michael assigned Aaoth the sigil and number shown in figure 29 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the space between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately two o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Aaoth and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Mercury.

Starting at 5/G (near the left-hand side of the circle), count five cells clockwise to a/24. Count twenty-four cells counterclockwise to l/30. Count thirty cells counterclockwise to e/21. Count twenty-one cells counterclockwise to t/9. Count nine cells counterclockwise to h/14. Count fourteen cells counterclockwise to the single letters og, producing the name Galethog.

Michael assigned Galethog the sigil shown in figure 30 and instructed that they should be placed on the Sigillum in the area between the perimeter of cells and the outer bar of the heptagon at approximately one o'clock (see figure 32). Although a connection is not mentioned overtly in the original material, the god name Galethog and its sigil are generally considered by many modern Enochian magicians to be associated with the qabalistic planetary sphere of Luna.

These seven god names—Galas, Gethog, Thaoth, Horlwn, Innon, Aaoth, and Galethog—are distilled into one supreme name. Strangely enough, the great name is also spelled Galethog. The code that reveals this distillation can be found on those little numbers that appear beside six of the sigils of the god names. Let's take a look at the supreme god name as it appears with the sigils.

Obviously, the sigils of the divine names contain the stylized letters G, a, l, xe, t, and og. The little numbers beside the letters point out seven landmarks among the forty cells: 5/G, a/24, l/30, e/21, t/9. Og has no number attached to it, confirming that it is the end of the supreme god name.

Step Two: The Seven God Names of the Outer Heptagon and of the Planetary Archangels

A heptagon (a seven-sided figure) rests just inside the perimeter of the Sigillum. Each of the seven bars that compose the heptagon is divided into seven cells and is filled with the names of the next order of angels in the hierarchy of the Sigillum. These seven names were drawn from a 7×7 (sevenfold) table delivered to Dee and Kelley in a series of brief and colorful visions (see figure 33).

The names are read horizontally and are inserted in the bars of the outer heptagon as shown in figure 34.

When the table is read vertically, however, the names of the seven classic planetary archangels appear:

Zaphkiel (Saturn)

Cumael (Mars)

Haniel (Venus)
 Gabriel (Luna)
 Zadkiel (Jupiter)
 Raphael (Sol)
 Michael (Mercury)

These archangels were assigned to these planets many years before Dee and Kelley received them and could have been found in any number of books in Dee's library. However, Dee and Kelley insisted that the table was given to them before they noticed these names were generated by the table. Whether we choose to believe their assertion or not, the fact remains that these particular angels are not unique to the Enochian system.

In order to read each archangel's name using the seven god names on the bars of the heptagon, we are obliged to project the letters in progressive layers rising from the surface of the Sigillum itself. I wish I could graphically illustrate this using the modern magick of animation, but you can demonstrate this for yourself. Let's turn to the first table in figure 35 and use the name of the planetary archangel of Saturn, Zaphkiel, as our example.

Start with the capital Z found in the first cell of the name ZllRHia, then move to the first cell of the name aZCaacb (to pick up the a), then move to the first cell of the name paupnhr (to pick up the p), then move to the first cell of hdmhIaI (to pick up the h), then move to the first cell of Kkaaeee to pick up the K, then move to the first cell of eellMG (to pick up the e). Finally, move to the second cell of the ZllRHia bar of the heptagon and pick up the final l to spell Zaphkiel.

I hope you can visualize what happens every time you move to another bar of the heptagon to pick up a letter in the archangel's name. As you move, you are literally shifting the dimensional structure of the Sigillum up another level—in the case of Zaphkiel, eight levels in all (see figure 36). (Picture the multilevel chess game played by characters on Star Trek.)

Compound this with the fact that Zaphkiel's name is braided together in these same layers with the names of the six other archangels' names. Viewed this way, the Sigillum is no longer a flat image placed on the flat surface of the Holy Table. It is a multidimensional space hovering over the Holy Table—a magical basket formed of the netting of the entwined letters of the names of the seven planetary archangels. It is within this invisible basket that the scrying stone or black mirror is placed during the magical operation. Is it any wonder visions appear in such an environment?

But we're far from through with the wonders of the Sigillum. Fill the cells of your personal Sigillum's outer heptagon, and then let's move inward another step.

Step Three: The Seven Names of the Planetary Angels Beneath the Bars of the Outer Heptagon

Just inside the bars of the outer heptagon are seven more divine names. These names are drawn from a second 7×7 (sevenfold) table given to Dee and Kelley, letter by letter, in vision. These names are read horizontally and placed beneath the bars of the outer heptagon.

S	A	A	I ²¹ ₈	E	M	E ₈
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E ₃₀
H	E	I	D	E	N	E

I	L	A	O	I ²¹ ₈	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	²¹ ₈

You will immediately notice some of the squares in this table contain tiny numbers (21 over 8, 8, 26, 30, and so on) and variously placed dots. These are added to indicate the addition of the letter l or letters el or al (angelic suffixes) to the letter in the square, the better to spell out the names of the various angels this table will produce.

These names of these seven great angels are added to the Sigilum as shown in figure 38.

Step Four: The Daughters of the Light

Five more sets of planetary angels are drawn from the second sevenfold table. The first set was revealed in vision by seven young women (called “Daughters of Light” or “Women”) clad in green silk. Each bore a little blue tablet on her forehead that identified her by name: El, Me, Ese, Iana, Akele, Azdobn, and Stimcul.

The names of the Daughters of Light are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the upper right section of the table in a diagonal, downward direction.

Although the angels were not identified with planets in the original material, the manner in which the vision proceeded to reveal these names suggests these seven angels carry the following planetary assignments:

E(l) Saturn
 Ese Mars
 Akele Venus
 Stimcul Luna
 Me Jupiter
 Iana Sol
 Azdobn Mercury

The names of the Daughters of Light are placed on the Sigillum in clockwise order in the points created by the interlocking lines of the heptagram (see figure 40).

Step Five: The Sons of the Light

Next came seven young men (called the “Sons of the Light” or “Men”) dressed in white, each carrying a metal ball: the first ball was gold, the second silver, the third copper, the fourth tin, the fifth iron, the sixth quicksilver, and the seventh lead. Each had a tablet of gold on his breast that identified him by name: I, Ih, Ilr, Dmal, Heeoa, Beigia, and Stimcul.

The names of the Sons of Light are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the lower left section of the table in a diagonal, downward direction.

Dmal	Sol
Beigia	Mercury

The names of the Sons of Light are placed on the Sigillum in clockwise order on the interlocking bars of the heptagram (see figure 42).

Step Six: The Daughters of Daughters of the Light

Next came seven “little wenches” (“Daughters of Daughters”) dressed in white, having tablets, which appeared to be white ivory, on their bosoms, identifying them as S, Ab, Ath, Izad, Ekiei, Madimi, and Esemeli.

The names of the Daughters of Daughters are drawn from the second

Although these seven angels are not identified with planets, they are generally believed to carry the following planetary assignments:

S Saturn
 Ath Mars
 Ekiei Venus
 Esemeli Luna
 Ab Jupiter
 Izad Sol
 Madimi Mercury

The names of the Daughters of Daughters of Light are placed on the Sigillum in clockwise order beneath the bars of the heptagram (see figure 44).

Step Seven: The Sons of Sons of the Light

Next came seven “little children ... like boys” (“Sons of Sons”) dressed in robes of purple silk with long pointed sleeves and hats such as priests or scholars wear. They had triangular green tablets on their breasts identifying them as E, An, Ave, Liba, Rocle, Hagonel, and Ilemese.

The names of the Sons of Sons are drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading the lower right section of the table in an upward, diagonal.

clockwise order on the inner heptagon (see figure 46).

Step Eight: The Planetary Angels of the Pentagram

Finally, Dee and Kelley were instructed in a relatively straightforward manner how to arrange the names of seven planetary angels—Sabathiel (Saturn), Zedekiel (Jupiter), Madimiel (Mars), Semeliel (Sol), Nogahel (Venus), Corabiel (Mercury), and Lavanael (Luna)—around a pentagram at the very center of the Sigillum. These seven names are also drawn from the second sevenfold table by reading it in a zigzag manner, illustrated in figure 47.

Because the original Dee and Kelley material does not confirm the planetary attributions to all the various names on the Sigillum, I will not presume to do so either. I have, however, created a chart (see figure 49) that I currently use to help me in my meditations on the subject. I offer it along with the key to reading the names of planetary archangels from the first sevenfold table.

Zaphkiel Saturn ♄ 1–8
 Zadkiel Jupiter ♃ 1–7
 Cumael Mars ♂ 1–6
 Raphael Sol ☉ 1–7
 Haniel Venus ♀ 1–6
 Michael Mercury ☿ 1–7
 Gabriel Luna ☾ 1–7

Step Nine: The Crosses

Once the names of these angels were placed around the central pentagram, a number of tiny crosses were added to the Sigillum in a curiously inconsistent manner (see figure 50).

And now your Sigillum is nearly complete. The only thing left to add is the design on the back. It is a very simple image of a cross dominating a small circle, around which are the letters of the divine word AGLA (an acronym for the Hebrew phrase Ateh Gibor Le-olam Adonai, “the Lord is mighty forever.”)

Years ago, on a Christmas morning, I melted the stubs of scores of candles into a round Christmas cookie tin.⁶⁴ After the wax cooled and hardened, I removed the wax disk from the tin and set to work carving my own Sigillum. Other magicians I know have sealed their drawings of the Sigillum upon wooden disks that they purchased for pennies at a crafts store, or glued the image to foam board. Whatever the medium, I think the presence of the Sigillum is an important factor in creating the magical environment conducive to Enochian vision magick.

There is so much more the angels told Dee and Kelley about the Sigillum, including suggestions for how every letter in each of the names contains a set of angels, and on and on by sevens by sevens. I encourage you to continue your exploration of the Sigillum's mysteries. But now we must move on to the seven Ensigns of Creation, where I promise you a much shorter journey.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The Ensigns of Creation

Of these seven tables, characters, or scotcheons. Consider the words spoken in the fifth book Anno 1583, April 2nd. How they are proper to every King and prince in their order. They are Instruments of Conciliation.

—JOHN DEE, FOOTNOTE TO Quinti Libri Mysteriorum: Liber Tertius

The Ensigns of Creation are seven planetary talismans designed to be positioned on the Holy Table in a circle surrounding the Sigillum Dei Aemeth or laid out in a line along the edge of the table nearest the scribe. They were to be made of purified tin or else painted directly upon the Holy Table. Like the Lamen and the Holy Table, they are “Instruments of Conciliation” connected to the Heptarchia planetary kings and princes in a manner that, I must confess, is not altogether clear to me.

Five of them are square tables containing squares filled with numbers, letters, crosses, and lines. Two ensigns are a circle surrounded by a square. The letter B (Pa in the angelic language) is by far the most used letter in the ensigns.

The ensigns originally displayed Latin letters. The communicating angel would later insist that the Latin letters be replaced with the corresponding characters of the angelic script (see chapter fourteen). Dee was reluctant to do this and even asked the angel if he really had to. The angel said he must. We don't know if he ever did.

It is clear that the ensigns were to be utilized ritualistically, such as being held in the magician's hand during prayers or invocations. But information on exactly how things were to be done is incomplete, and there are no records whatsoever of Dee and Kelley actually performing rituals of heptarchic magick.

However, the ensigns remain part of the Holy Table ensemble, and their subsequent connection to the table and the magician's own Lamén make them, in my opinion, an integral component of the hierarchical current that charges the holy ground of the Enochian magick temple.

Figures 53 and 54 show the ensigns lettered in the angelic script. To my knowledge, this is the first time the ensigns have appeared in print in their correct form.⁶⁵ As with the Ring, Holy Table, Lamén, and Sigillum, the ensigns can be reproduced in paper board or whatever material is at the magician's disposal.

The entire assembly is one big magical machine—the Sigillum resting like a sevenfold, multidimensional dynamo in the center of the Holy Table's swirling and churning angels and the circling Ensigns of Creation. The scrying stone or black mirror is placed upon the Sigillum at the very heart of this magnificent instrument like the monitor screen of a magical computer connected to the ultimate worldwide-web.

We have made only the tiniest scratch on the surface of Dee and Kelley's material of this period. There is much more information concerning De Heptarchia Mystica available to the serious student, and I encourage the reader who feels drawn to this system to make the effort. I know it is only a matter of time before some bright magician fine-tunes, perfects, and transforms the material into a workable magical system.

The focus of this book, however, is Enochian vision magick, and we must now move on to the second phase of Dee and Kelley's magical operations. Through our understanding of the Ring, the Lamien, the Holy Table, the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and the Ensigns of Creation and of their construction, we have prepared ourselves to meet with angels on the holy ground of our temple.

CHAPTER TWELVE

Do I Need All This Stuff?

Never since the beginning of the world was this secret delivered, nor this holy mystery set open, before the weaklings of this world.

—THE ANGEL IL, APRIL 29, 1583

The question I'm sure many of you are asking at this point is, “Do I need all this stuff?”

During the classes that I conducted in our home in 2005 and 2006 (with experienced magicians) and subsequent day-long workshops I've conducted around the country with people having little or no prior magical experience) it has become abundantly clear to me that the magical objects and “furniture” Dee and Kelley received during the Heptarchia periods (the Ring, the Holy Table, the Lamén, the Ensigns of Creation, and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth) can and should be formally employed in order to create the specific environment of consciousness conducive to the practice of angelic vision magick.

Furthermore, it has been my observation that regular and repeated activation of this magical “temple” by means of the little ritual outlined in chapter one (and laid out more fully in appendix I) can attune the magician to this uniquely ordered universe and serve to progressively strengthen and enhance his or her visionary capabilities.

Most exciting for me was the discovery that once the magician is prepared and the temple activated the angelic forces (especially the good angels resident in the Holy Table, Lamén, Ensigns of Creation, and the planetary angels resident in the Sigillum) can be individually called forth or visited by means of classic evocation techniques or even informal extemporaneous prayers and conjurations. In other words, I believe that even if he or she never went on to practice Enochian magick per se, a resourceful magician, willing to experiment, and armed with a proper understanding of the tools and formulae of the Heptarchic periods would be already prepared to engage in angelic vision magick of a high order.

This is new territory for all of us, but it holds much promise, for it entails the possibility of contacting the same angelic forces that engaged Dee and Kelley throughout most of their day-to-day actions. Obviously, dealing with these angelic forces offers an alluring challenge for today's more intrepid magicians who, when frustrated by gaps and perplexities in the original material, will not be afraid to go straight to the communicating angels for guidance and clarification on how all this should operate. Indeed, I expect to see in the years to come exciting and viable magical systems develop as the result of the magical efforts of gifted practitioners who dare to make such angelic contact.

But do you need all this stuff?

My answer is this: In order to do this particular variety of magick you need all this stuff inside you. That's where the real magick takes place. But until such time as you have internalized all this (even in the most cursory and general manner) it is necessary to have some outward, visible, material representation of the magical concepts and forces you are dealing with.

I suggest, if you're serious about engaging in this magical art form, then you should, at the very least, provide yourself with a Ring, a Holy Table, a Lamén, a Sigillum Dei Aemeth, and the seven Ensigns of Creation. Make them out of paper if you have to. Copy them straight out of this book if you have to. But have them. Make them real to you. Consecrate them by using them. Use them to create your Enochian magick temple.

The sense of art for some magicians is stimulated by replicating as much as humanly possible the tools and procedures as outlined in ancient texts. By doing so, they achieve a level of empowerment they believe is necessary to execute the work. Personally, my sense of art is quite happy with paper rings and photocopied Holy Tables. However, I have over the years been blessed with many talented colleagues who have generously helped me equip my temple so I might better demonstrate these things to others.

Here is as good a place as any for me to pause and describe what I believe the source material suggests would transform a clean uncluttered room into the holy ground of an Enochian magick temple.

The Temple

Upon the floor in the center of the room is a square carpet of red silk cloth large enough to accommodate the Holy Table and the chair of the scryer.

Upon the silken carpet are placed four miniatures of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, made of wax. They are covered and protected from the table legs by shallow cylindrical boxes.

Upon the box-covered sigilli rest the four legs of the Holy Table.

The Holy Table is made of sweet wood (laurel).

Upon the Holy Table, arranged as we've discussed, are the seven Ensigns of Creation (lettered in the angelic script) and the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, made of purified beeswax, nine inches in diameter and an inch and a half thick.

The Holy Table and all the objects upon it are covered by a red silk cloth with gold tassels that dangle from the corners. This cloth should match in material and color that of the red silk carpet.

Upon the covered Sigillum the scrying stone (a crystal ball) or black mirror is placed.

The scryer's chair is placed on the carpet near the table. His or her feet should touch the carpet.

The Ring and Lamén should be near. The magician should ceremonially put them on at the beginning of each session and remove them at the conclusion.

Renaissance magicians often wore crowns and white linen robes, and on one occasion in preparation for a specific working, Dee and Kelley were instructed to wear white linen robes. In an operation that took place on July 13, 1584 (at the very end of the Enochian communications), the archangel Gabriel told the magicians:

See that your garments be clean. Herein be not rash: Nor over hasty;
For those that are hasty and rash, and are loathsomely appareled, my knock long before they enter.⁶⁶

In practical operations conducted by my Monday night class and my Enochian magick workshops, everyone is shoeless and wears comfortable street clothes. In private sessions, such as the one I described in chapter one, I put on a simple black robe. Not only does it carry with it a certain personal magical virtue, but its color does not distract from the images reflected in the black mirror as I scry.

BOOK III

Liber Loagaeth* and the Angelic Alphabet

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Liber Loagaeth

Every element (of the book) hath 49 manner of understandings. Therein is comprehended so many languages. They are all spoken at once, and severally, by themselves, by distinction many be spoken. Until thou come to the City, thou canst not behold the beauty thereof.

—THE ANGEL ME TO JOHN DEE, EASTER DAY, 1583⁶⁷

The second phase of Dee and Kelley's magical operations remains, for the most part, a tantalizing mystery to modern students. Covering most of 1582 and 1583, it is a period characterized by considerable tension between the two magicians, but one that also produced a large body of work in the form of a book referred to at various times as Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus, the Book of Enoch, and Liber Loagaeth.⁶⁸ While in recent years Enochian scholars have courageously set out to give us a closer examination of this information, it unfortunately has not been enough to allow modern practitioners to develop anything near a workable system from this material.

One of the reasons more attention isn't paid to this period is the nature of the material itself and the nearly complete lack of direction concerning how it is to be applied. Also, the focus of the communications of this period is driven by Dee's very personal fixation on discovering lost books of the Bible, the Apocrypha, and in particular the Book of Enoch, which is mentioned in several places in the Bible. The resulting character of Liber Loagaeth is rich in apocalyptic imagery and prophetic sounding rhetoric. This has been seized upon in recent years by commentators who would project a patently sectarian interpretation upon the material, even going so far as to suggest sinister (perhaps even Satanic or Lovecraftian) motives behind the “angelic” communications.

We are all, of course, free to our own religious convictions and spiritual worldviews. After all, they are part of the magical artist's pallet of tools. I think it wise, however, to keep in mind that when we study the Dee and Kelley material, we are not only eavesdropping on questions framed in the minds of two sixteenth-century Englishmen and put in the context of biblical literature, but we are also hearing the answers to those questions given in such a manner as these men could understand—that is, framed within the same cultural and Biblical context. I'm sure if Dee had been a Chinese alchemist or an African shaman in these same circumstances, the angels would have communicated the same universal answers unencumbered by the apocalyptic nomenclature familiar to the Jewish or Christian mind.

Joseph Peterson wrote in the introduction of his marvelous book John Dee's Five Books of Mystery:

The importance of Liber Loagaeth cannot be overemphasized. From it would “be restored the holy bokes, which haue perished euen from the beginning, and from the first that liued.” The truths it contains will end religious disputes and restore religious unity. “Which when it hath spread a while, THEN COMMETH THE END.”⁶⁹ In short, it will usher in the new age. Since the book is so central to these angelic communications, it is amazing that it has remained unpublished.⁷⁰

Amazing indeed, but as I wrote concerning De Heptarchia Mystica, it is only a matter of time before someone cracks the code of this breathtakingly immense body of work. What do I mean by breathtakingly immense?

One surviving manuscript comprises forty-eight leaves, each containing 49×49 lettered squares, 115,000 lettered squares in all. Each square was filled, letter-by-letter, according to Kelley's vision. In the end, the magicians were left with forty-nine calls in an angelic language. (Note: These calls were not the same calls in the angelic tongue that would come later and form the centerpiece of the Enochian phase of Dee and Kelley's partnership.) Loagaeth literally means “speech from God,” and the magicians were informed that the words of the forty-nine calls were the same as those uttered by God at the dawn of creation—in the same language spoken by Adam when he named all things.

Unfortunately, these calls were never translated (or else the material has been lost), and attempts by modern linguists have failed to find enough landmarks of a properly constructed language to put the calls of Loagaeth in the same category as the angelic language that would be received in the third and final phase of the magicians' actions.

Kelley's visionary skills were severely exploited during this period, and his visions were characterized by the presence of a dazzling light that both magicians could see. The light would fly out of the scrying stone and penetrate Kelley's head, putting him in a trance in which he could read and comprehend the text of Liber Loagaeth. He was, however, forbidden to translate it and told that God would later provide the translation. At the end of the session, the light would leave Kelley's head and return to the stone. When he returned to normal consciousness, he claimed to have no memory of the experience.

As tempting as it might be, I am, for the time being not incorporating any of the calls from Loagaeth in my Enochian-magick preparation ritual. However, something else of great importance came out of this period: the angelic alphabet.

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

The Angelic Alphabet

He wiped his finger on the top of the Table, and there came out above the Table certain Characters enclosed in no line: but standing by themselves, and points between them. He pointed orderly to them with his finger, and looked toward the skryer at every pointing.

—EDWARD KELLEY DESCRIBING HIS VISION OF THE ANGEL'S REVELATION OF THE ANGELIC ALPHABET, MARCH 26, 1583⁷¹

I confess, even with clear copies and transcriptions of the source material in front of me, it has been very difficult for me to wrap my mind around the order of the visionary events of Dee and Kelley's years together. Because certain elements of these magical systems were often corrected or amended by the angels in subsequent visions, often occurring months apart, it is extremely difficult (for me at least) to present a clean chronology of events. The circumstances surrounding the reception of the angelic alphabet are no exception.

The alphabet was received during the Loagaeth period, but because the magicians were told to replace the Latin/English letters of the Lamen, Holy Table, and the seven Ensigns of Creation with letters from the angelic script, its influence reached back in time to touch the Heptarchia period as well.

The twenty-one characters of the angelic alphabet appeared fully formed in yellowish letters that rose in Kelley's vision above the table. The images of the individual letters then obligingly hovered over a sheet of paper and stayed visible long enough for him to copy them in ink before fading away.

Words in the angelic language are written from right to left, and that is the order the letters first appeared to Kelley. All twenty-one letters appeared in a single row and were separated by dots. There was also a dot preceding the first letter.

You will notice that the name for the first letter received, Pa, is the only letter whose name is capitalized. Pa, b in English, has a special significance in the magick of the Heptarchia. For example, the names of all the forty-nine good angels begin with b, the letter b appears overwhelmingly on the Ensigns of Creation, and each of the four corners of the Holy Table displays an oversized Pa.

This abundance of bs has caused several knowledgeable modern magical commentators to speculate that b must represent the number seven, the number upon which these magical systems seem to be based. While that makes a great deal of sense to me, I have nonetheless found nothing in the original material that would specifically suggest numerical equivalents to any of the single letters of the angelic alphabet.

What is very clear, however, is the fact that the communicating angel wanted Dee and Kelley to immediately memorize the letters of the angelic alphabet and the letters' names. Dee was a busy man and wanted to be excused from this time-consuming duty. The angel Me would have none of it. In this March 26, 1583, exchange, Dee tries to make the angel understand, "Look man, I've got a life!"

Me: I instructed thee before-hand and told thee, that both of you must jointly learn those holy letters (For, so, I may boldly call them) in memory: with their names: to the intent, that the finger may point to the head, and the head to the understanding of his charge.

Dee: You perceive that I have diverse affairs which at this present do withdraw me from peculiar diligence using to these Characters and their names learning by heart: And therefore I trust, I shall not offend, if I bestow all the convenient leisure that I shall get, about the learning thereof.

Me: Peace, Thou talkest, as though, thou understoodest not. We know thee, we see thee in thy heart: Nor one thing shall not let another. For short is the time, that shall bring these things to proof.⁷²

BOOK IV

Enochiana

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

Enochian Magick

The Lord appeared unto Enoch, and was merciful unto him, opened his eyes, that he might see and judge the earth, which was unknown to his Parents, by reason of their fall : for the Lord said, Let us shew unto Enoch, the use of the earth : And lo, Enoch was wise, and full of the spirit of wisdom.

—THE ANGEL AVE, MONDAY, JUNE 25, 1584⁷³

To my knowledge, Dee and Kelley never used the word Enochian to describe the system of magick they received between April 10 and July 13, 1584. Throughout their actions, they simply referred to it as angelic. We cannot, however, be faulted too badly for attaching the biblical patriarch's name to the system. The magicians were told that this was the magick given by God to Enoch (the seventh man from Adam) in the form of a book and that Enoch (before he ascended bodily into the presence of God) passed it on to others. Over the generations, the book fell into wicked hands, and God caused it to be lost. But because of Dee's piety and prayers, God was moved to once again deliver it to mankind.

These final days were an especially difficult period in Dee and Kelley's relationship. They and their families were living in Krakow, Poland. Their actions were regularly interrupted by “evil spirits,” who encouraged the magicians to abandon the actions. Kelley was increasingly impatient and uncomfortable with the work, voicing his fear of the possible evil nature of the communications on one hand. Ironically, Kelley was at the time practicing demon magick behind Dee's back. Dee was furious when he learned of this. So were the communicating angels, who warned that such behavior attracted evil spirits into the magician's environment—an annoying and time-consuming distraction. Finally Kelley promised Dee and the angels that he would knock off the black magick.

The angels, too, appeared to be growing impatient with Dee and Kelley, as if they realized the magical chemistry that existed between the two magicians (the personal factors that made them such a perfect operator/receiver team) was rapidly disintegrating. In April, the magicians were told in no uncertain terms that the work had to be completed by August. The magicians met their deadline with time to spare. July 13, 1584, Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, saw the final communication that completed the reception of the angelic calls and provided the names of the thirty Aethyrs. Not only had the Enochian phase of Dee and Kelley's operations ended, but, indeed, the entire angelic adventure had also come to a close. The plug was pulled. The communicating angels fell silent.

The magicians would continue on and off for several years with visionary operations and unsuccessful mago-political adventures in Europe. But, with the exception of only three brief references in their subsequent diaries, they never again mention the angelic magick. One of those latter-day references (the Tabula Recensa), however, is very significant to the study of the Enochian magick period. I'll speak more on that very soon.

The reception of the Enochian material was (at least to my impatient attention span) even more confused and topsy-turvy than that which characterized the Heptarchia and Liber Loagaeth periods. Sadly, as we discovered in the two earlier cases, the surviving information, while abundant, still does not provide us with adequate information on how it all was supposed to work as a practical system of magick.

And here is where we must again tip our magical hats to S. L. MacGregor Mathers, the adepts of the Golden Dawn, and Aleister Crowley, who at the dawn of the twentieth century developed this material into a remarkably logical system of vision magick—a system possessed of the solid infrastructure lacking in the surviving source material, a system that, for all intents and purposes, offers the diligent practitioner a practical and elegant unified field theory of hermetic and qabalistic magick.

As applied most commonly today, Enochian magick is a two-part magical system: one part focusing on the elemental universe, the other on the aethyric. The former enables the magician to summon or visit in vision the spirits of the myriad levels of the elemental worlds of Fire, Water, Air, Earth, and Spirit; the latter enables the magician to systematically penetrate increasingly higher heavens (or Aethyrs) to access information from those heavenly levels of consciousness.

I will soon show how these two systems are operated. But before I do that, and in keeping with our program of systematic attunement, I need to introduce you to another magick table. It was the first revelation of the Enochian period, but it is also, in my opinion, the final component of the preparation protocol. This tablet was delivered to the magicians by the angel Nalvage in April of 1584. It is an item that was acknowledged by the adepts of the Golden Dawn but never incorporated into any practice. It is something, however, I believe should not escape our attention. No name was given to this object. Some modern scholars designate it simply the Tablet of God. I shall refer to it as the Round Tablet of Nalvage.

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The Round Tablet of Nalvage

The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo the beginning and end of all things.

—THE ANGEL NALVAGE, APRIL 10, 1584

“The Method of Science—The Aim of Religion” was the official motto of The Equinox, the great magical periodical first published by Aleister Crowley and his colleagues in the early years of the twentieth century.⁷⁴ This same phrase could also comfortably serve as the watchwords that describe what the art of magick is to me.

Conversely, superstition (as the word is commonly understood) has, in my opinion, no place in the arsenal of the modern magician. This, I believe, is especially true concerning the practice of Enochian vision magick. In all my years of magical practice and exploration of this system, I have never encountered a single case of so-called psychic attack, demon possession, headache, hives, or hernia—indeed any ill effects whatsoever—resulting from the practice of this particular kind of magick.

That being said, strange and unexpected things do occasionally happen to those who practice magick. And while I believe it is bad for one's mental health to ascribe undue importance to these phenomena, it is important that they be dispassionately observed and recorded. So, before I discuss the Round Tablet of Nalvage and its importance to the system of Enochian magick, I feel I must share with you two little stories that might help you understand the level of respect I hold for this particular magical object.

Twenty years ago, I was teaching a class in Enochian vision magick at our home in Costa Mesa. This class was different from the Enochian magick classes I had taught previously, for it was the first time we would study and experiment with using the Round Tablet of Nalvage. In preparation for the first class, I decided to make a copy of the tablet out of wax (as I had done with my Sigillum Dei Aemeth). A friend had given me two massive, black wax candles shaped like giant chessmen (bishops). My plan was to melt these down in a round Christmas cookie tin and carve the squares and the angelic letters of the Tablet of Nalvage on the cooled wax disk.

It was a foolish time to be starting an arts project like this, because our landlord had just informed us he was bulldozing our house in two weeks and building apartments on our lot (thanks a lot!), and we were deep in the midst of packing up our things to move. Still, magick is magick, and life goes on. I put the two black wax bishops in the cookie tin and slid them into the oven. I set the heat on the lowest possible warm level and went out to the garage to help (watch) Constance pack.

As you might imagine, we had some very interesting things in our garage, many of which we hadn't looked at in years. We did more reminiscing than packing. I didn't forget the black wax bishops in the oven, however, and checked on them regularly. It seemed they were taking a long time to melt, so I turned up the heat a little higher.

Back out in the garage we found a stash of psychedelic artwork Constance had painted and drawn in the late sixties, when we were hippies living in the woods of southern Oregon. We hadn't seen them in fifteen years. What a treat! We lingered over them for probably ten minutes before I remembered the black wax bishops for the Round Tablet of Nalvage in the oven.

When I opened the back door, I found the kitchen dark except for a warm orange glow that, like a spectacular sunset, brightened the dark clouds of smoke that filled the house from the ceiling to about four feet from the floor. The oven was completely engulfed in flames. I ran into the living room and found our son, Jean-Paul, lying on the floor watching television completely oblivious to the black smoke pressing its way toward him from above.

Once he and the dog were evacuated, I called for Constance (always a level head in times of emergency), and we proceeded to attack the fire. When I opened the flaming oven, I discovered that one of the bishops had slid to the side of the cookie tin and parts of it had melted down the outside rim. The wax had run to the bottom of the oven and dripped down upon the pilot light, which then became the eternal flame of Costa Mesa. There was nothing we could do to turn off the oven. Constance eventually had to turn off the gas outside, and with the help of baking soda and wet towels, we got the fire out. I rescued the cookie tin and let it cool in the sink. A couple hours later, in the charred ruins of our kitchen, I carved a beautiful black wax Round Tablet of Nalvage.

Now, I'm the first to confess that this story has less to do with magick and superstition and more with my own carelessness and stupidity. (I am now forbidden to use the oven for magical crafts.) The accident did, however, serve to give me a healthy respect for the Round Tablet of Nalvage—a respect that in the last year has increased immeasurably. And that brings me to my second magical tale of Nalvage.

As we'll soon see, there is much we know about the Round Tablet of Nalvage. What we don't know is how it was intended to be used. As I was preparing for the class series that inspired this book, I debated with myself how (or even if) I was going to introduce it into our studies. After all, there is nothing in the source material that hints at what is to be done with it. Late in the afternoon, I prepared our living room temple for the evening's class. The Sigillum and ensigns were set neatly on the Holy Table; the table was covered with its red silk cloth, and the obsidian mirror was set in place.

I went to the closet cupboard in my office and took down my black wax Round Tablet of Nalvage from the topmost shelf. I unzipped its plastic bubble-wrapped envelope and carefully removed it. I had to admit, after all those years, it still looked magnificently magical. I took it into the living room and set it down upon the covered table. I sat down in my comfy chair, and in the warm glow of sunset (which brought to my mind the glow of our blazing kitchen so many years earlier), I meditated about how the Round Tablet of Nalvage fits into the system.

I didn't get much meditating done, because the moment I closed my eyes I fell asleep. I awoke just a few minutes before people would start arriving for class. I still didn't know how or if I was going to use the tablet for the night's gathering. I hastily decided that if I didn't have sound reasons for using the tablet, I was going to skip it altogether—at least for that night. I took the tablet off the Holy Table, wrapped it back up, and carefully put it back on the top shelf of the closet cupboard.

I went to my desk to turn off the computer and gather things for class, when I was startled by the sound of something smashing against my guitar, which was mounted upright in its stand near the open closet door. With the guitar strings still ringing, I turned to see that the Tablet of Nalvage had flown from its shelf, ricocheted off my guitar, and was resting inches from my feet.

As a reasonably rational man, I am of the opinion that there is nothing supernatural in the world, just natural things that have yet to be explained. I'm sure there is nothing I can say to convince the cynic that the tablet hadn't fallen naturally from the shelf because I hadn't put it there properly. I remain, however, extremely impressed at the distance this object had to travel across physical space in order to strike the guitar and find its way to my feet at the very moment I had decided not to discuss it at that evening's class.

Needless to say, I changed my mind about the importance of the tablet, and in the few moments remaining before class members started to arrive, I composed the two-part chorus that incorporates the dynamics created by the letters of the Round Tablet of Nalvage—a chant that has become the last (and perhaps the most important) component of the Ceremony of Preparation.⁷⁵

Now, let's take a brief look at those dynamics and how a chant based on the Round Tablet of Nalvage can be constructed.

The Tablet of Nalvage is not really round. It is a square divided into four squares (or continents) and surrounded by four outer bars (see figure 59). The continents and bars are subdivided into lettered squares (nine squares per continent and four squares per bar). But before we start filling in the letters, let's see what the angel Nalvage had to say about the continents.

Nalvage told Dee and Kelley that continents 1 and 2 are “dignified,” while 3 “is not yet dignified, but to be dignified,” and 4 is “without glory or dignity.” Nalvage described them in Latin as follows:

1. Vita suprema (highest life), the continent of “joy”;
2. Vita (life), the continent of “potentiality”;
3. Vita non dignificata, sed dignificanda (life not dignified, but which shall be dignified), the continent of “creation”; and
4. Vita est etiam haec, sed quae perperit mors (“Even this is life, but life which will be paid with death”), the continent of “discord.”

Each continent contains nine letters that, when read in various ways, yield words in the angelic language. In order to more easily see these words, I have separated the tablet into its component parts (see figure 60).

When read counterclockwise, the outer bars of the tablet spell the names of four classes of angels: luah (praising angels), lang (ministering angels), sach (confirming angels), and urch (confounding angels).

These angels circumscribe and contain the angelic forces at work within the continents. Nalvage gave the following Latin meanings to the words inside the continents when the words are read horizontally from left to right (see figure 61).

idz – Gaudium – Joy aoi – Praesentia – Presence mzr – Laudantes – Praising	sai – Actio – Action god – Factum – Events urr – Confirmantes – Establishing
bna – Potestas – Power daz – Motus – Motion iab – Ministrantes – Ministering	fos – Luctos – Lamentation sea – Discordia – Discord rdi – Confundantes – Confusing

First notice how the three letters of outer corners of each of the four continents (upper left corner of upper left continent, lower left corner of lower left continent, and so on) all spell the Enochian word meaning God —iad.

Notice next that the three diagonal letters of continents spell the words moz (joy), bab (power), sor (action), and ser (lamentation).

Finally, the three letters of the inner corners of the continents spell the words zir (I am), zna (motion), gru (deed), and osf (discord).

The arrows in figure 62 show the beautiful symmetry the words create within the tablet. If we put the words of each continent together, we arrive at phrases such as:

Continent 1. iad moz zir (I am the Joy of God.)

Continent 2. iad bab zna (God's Power in Motion)

Continent 3. iad sor gru (Result of God's Action)

Continent 4. iad ser osf (God's Discord and Lamentation)

This rich tapestry of joy, movement, creation, and sorrow is contained and encircled by a counterclockwise whirl of the angels: luah, lang, sach, and urch.

Concerning the tablet as a whole, Nalvage said, "The Substance is attributed to God the Father."⁷⁶

In reference to the letters on the outer bars, Nalvage said, "The first circular mover, the circumference, God the Son, The finger of the Father, and mover of all things."⁷⁷

Referring to the continents and the manner in which their letters are read, he said, "The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo the beginning and end of all things."⁷⁸

Like the Holy Table, the Round Tablet of Nalvage, once decoded, displays divine and angelic words and names in perpetual motion in such a way that one can almost sense what is meant by the term choir of angels. In group workings, I break the participants up into two voices as we ceremonially chant the words from the tablet.

Voice One: luah lang sach urch

Voice Two: iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf

The effect is powerful even when I'm alone in the middle of the night and chant one voice at a time.

Once Nalvage described the dynamics of the tablet, he didn't go on to provide instructions on how, or even if, the tablet was to be used. Is it a talisman? Is it to be worn as the Lamen? Is it to be held or placed on the Holy Table? We don't know.

However, we do know that after the two magicians had become attuned to the structure of the Round Tablet of Nalvage, the entire remaining system of Enochian magick was revealed in less than ninety days. This has led more than a few magicians to speculate that the Round Tablet of Nalvage might be the key to a mysterious and unexpressed “first call” of the Enochian system, or perhaps even represent the call itself.

CHAPTER SEVENTEEN

The Forty-eight Calls

Move, therefore, and show yourselves: open the Mysteries of your Creation: Be friendly unto me: for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

—FROM THE FIRST CALL⁷⁹

The centerpiece of the Enochian system is a collection of calls⁸⁰ in an angelic tongue that is significantly different from the language delivered in Liber Loagaeth. The reception of the calls followed that of the Tablet of Nalvage. They were first dictated to the magicians in the angelic tongue, then afterwards translated into English. Careful examination of the calls and their translations reveal that Enochian is a real language and not simply strings of barbarous names and words. The calls read like evocative hymns or invocations. They are constructed of real, sometimes breathtakingly beautiful sentences that can be translated (not merely transliterated). The language exhibits a remarkable consistency of word meaning from call to call. It has a form of grammar and syntax. This phenomenon, coupled with the multiple double-blind/letter-by-letter method by which it was received, makes this (in my mind at least) one of the most extraordinary aspects of Dee and Kelley's workings.

Technically, there are forty-nine calls. However, as the first call was said to be unexpressed, I will refer to them as if there were forty-eight. They appear translated in their entirety in appendix II of this book, along with the keys to how they are put to use by modern Enochian magicians (see also chapter twenty-seven).

Beginning on April 10, 1584, the first four calls were painstakingly delivered, letter-by-letter (in backward order, because the angels at first voiced fears that the calls were so powerful it might be too dangerous to deliver them in a straightforward manner). As usual, the letters were drawn from an assortment of lettered grids. The angels also provided translations to the first four calls immediately after their delivery.

Then things changed. It appears that even the angels became impatient with this tedious method. They proceeded to deliver calls five through eighteen in a straightforward manner, but they would wait six weeks before delivering the English translations.

The fact that the translated words from the first four calls (delivered backwards) matched (or were otherwise linguistically compatible with) the translated words of calls five through eighteen (delivered forward and translated six weeks later) all but rules out the possibility that either Dee or Kelley invented the angelic language or the calls.

The nineteenth call (the Call of the Ayres or Aethyrs) and the names of the thirty Aethyrs (or heavens) were received on July 13, 1584, Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, effectively ending Dee and Kelley's angelic magick relationship. However, before that final communication, the angels would deliver an incredible amount of material to the two magicians between April 10 and July 13—material that three hundred years later would inspire the adepts of the Golden Dawn to develop the hybrid system we now call Enochian magick. I call it hybrid because the “Enochian” magick developed by the Golden Dawn and Crowley is based on a number of assumptions that connect the forty-eight calls with other “Enochian” material Dee and Kelley received after the reception of the calls. I refer to what are now commonly called the Elemental Tablets, which I will discuss in detail in chapter twenty-three and beyond. While eminently logical and based on the most anal-retentive hermetic principles, many of the assumptions made by the Golden Dawn and Crowley were nonetheless not clearly made in the original Dee material.

First, however, we need to look at the circumstances that triggered the final and most astounding chapter in the story of the reception of Enochian magick. It all started with Dee wanting to spy on the king of Poland and ended with the reception of what appears to be nothing less than the printed circuit board of the mind of God.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

The Ninety-one Parts of the Earth

Dee: Hey Nalvage, I'd sure like to magically eavesdrop on secret meetings between King Stephen of Poland and his ministers. I'd like to know if Count Albert Laski will soon succeed Stephen as king of Poland. Can you help me do this?

*Nalvage: No problem, Dr. Dee. But first you have to understand how the universe where this can happen operates. You need to understand how everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth.*⁸¹

—IMAGINARY CONVERSATION, JOHN DEE AND THE ANGEL NALVAGE

The fantasy dialogue above is more than just another one of my lame attempts to be witty. It describes what, for all intents and purposes, was happening during this phase of the Enochian magick revelations. Dee was indeed trying to squeeze from the angels some information regarding political intrigues in Poland. The angel Nalvage's response was to first try to explain to Dee the mechanics of how specific spirits rule specific parts of the earth. In doing so, Nalvage would ambitiously attempt to demonstrate how everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth. The results of this revelation Dee would neatly memorialize thirteen months later in Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Vitoriae Terrestris.⁸²

Nalvage started by dividing the universe into thirty segments that would eventually be identified as Aires, or Aethyrs (see column I of figure 63). To the thirty Aires he assigned ninety-one parts of the earth (see column II), which he first referred to by the geographical name recognizable to the sixteenth-century magicians, such as Syria (see second name in column III), then by the name by which it is known in the divine realms, such as Pascomb (see second name in column IV).

He then assigned each of these pairs of names to one of the twelve mythical tribes of Israel, along with their directional coordinates, an angelic king, and a respectable number of good ministers.

All this information and more can be found in figure 63. Columns I through V contain the information Dee and Kelley received at this stage of the reception. The symmetrical characters found in column VI and the names of the good princes of the Air in column VII were delivered to Dee and Kelley at a later date than the information in columns I through V. This fact will have astonishing significance when we examine the circumstances and sequence of events that brought to a close the angelic adventures of the two magicians. The key to the columns of the table is as follows:

Column Number of the Aire

I

Column Sequence of the ninety-one parts of the earth

II

Column Names of the ninety-one parts of the earth as imposed by man⁸³

III

Column Names of the ninety-one parts of the earth as imposed by God (Note:

IV These are also the names of ninety-one governors of the Aethyrs; see chapter twenty-eight.)

Using the second of the ninety-one parts of earth, Syria, as our example, we see that its divinely ordained name is Pascomb. The tribe of Zabulon is assigned to Syria/Pascomb, as are the angelic king Zinggen and 2,360 good ministers.

In order for you to appreciate the amazing circumstances surrounding the reception of the Enochian material, it will be important for you to have a general understanding of the chronology of events that took place in the spring and early summer of 1584. This I will try to provide in the following chapter.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

The Golden Talisman and the Watchtowers of the Universe

Now therefore hearken unto me: for I will open unto you the secret knowledge of the Earth, that you may deal with her, by such as govern her, at your pleasure; and call her to a reckoning, as Steward doth the servants of the Lord.

—THE ANGEL AVE, JUNE 20, 1584⁸⁴

Very early on the morning of Wednesday, June 20, 1584, Edward Kelley was aroused from a sound sleep by someone (something) patting him on the head. He opened his eyes and beheld an angel, “clothed with feathers, strangely wreathed about him all over, etc.” standing at the head of his bed. The angel would later identify itself as Ave, one of the Sons of Sons of Light from the Sigillum Dei Aemeth (see chapter ten). Ave proceeded to project a vision that would dramatize the elements and structure of the entire system of Enochian magick as widely practiced today. The following is from Dee's diary:^{85}

There appeared to him [Kelley] four very fair Castles, standing in the four parts of the world: out of which he heard the sound of a Trumpet. Then it seemed out of every Castle a cloath to be thrown on the ground, of more than the breadth of a Table-cloath ... ^{86}

... Out of every Gate then issued one Trumpeter, whose Trumpets were of strange form, wreathed, and growing bigger and bigger toward the end.

After the Trumpeter followed three Ensign Bearers.

After them six ancient men, with white beards and staves in their hands.

Then followed a comely man, with very much Apparel on his back, his Robe having a long train.

After him came five men, carrying up of his train.

Then followed one great Crosse, and about that four lesser Crosses.

These Crosses had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosse, all over.

After the Crosses followed 16 white Creatures.

After them, an infinite number seemed to issue, and to spread themselves orderly in a compasse, almost before the four foresaid Castles.

The highlights of Kelley's vision would eventually be memorialized upon a round talisman etched in gold, which is today on display at the British Museum. Much as I'd like to believe this object was fashioned by Dee himself, it is almost certainly a forgery patterned upon the flawed image printed in Casaubon's A True & Faithful Relation. For reference, however, I will continue to refer to both the vision and the image as the Golden Talisman.

The four castles, or Watchtowers, formed a cross, the center of which was a circle supported by twenty-four columns. Figure 64 illustrates the lower quarter of the Golden Talisman.

Ave would elucidate upon the nature, powers, and hierarchical status of the characters on the Golden Talisman. Eventually he would go into far greater detail by projecting and organizing all of it upon what he called the Great Table or the Great Table of the Watchtowers. The Great Table is the Rosetta stone of Enochian magick. How it was received and how it is connected to the information Dee and Kelley had already received concerning the ninety-one parts of the earth present us with perhaps the most convincing proof that the two magicians were indeed in contact with noncorporeal intelligences of a superior order.

CHAPTER TWENTY

The Unlettered Great Table and the Four Great Seals

The seals and authorities of these Houses are confirmed in the beginning of the World. Unto everyone of them be 4 characters, (tokens of the presence of the son of God: by whom all things were made in Creation.)

—THE ANGEL AVE, JUNE 20, 1584^{87}

In a working that took place on Wednesday, June 25, 1584, the angel Ave showed the magicians the image of a table that was divided into four sections by a central cross. Each of the four sections was identified as one of the castles of the Golden Talisman vision. Also called Watchtowers, Watchmen, princes, and mighty angels of the Lord, they were each represented by a seal. Three of these seals, by their imagery, bear a direct and unambiguous connection to the Sigillum Dei Aemeth or the Ensigns of Creation.

The first seal was assigned to the upper left section of the table. It was the image of a capital letter T with four rays beaming vertically from the top bar. This seal comes from a major landmark of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth. The 4/T cell is the first (near the top) of the forty cells that form the perimeter (see figure 23). The 4/T cell is where we began counting to create the seven Names of God drawn from the Sigillum.

The second seal was assigned to the upper right section of the table and identified as an alphabet cross. We first saw this cross on the (lower right) corner of the first sevenfold table (see figure 33), which generated the letters of the large outer heptagon of the Sigillum, where the cross appears at the top left (see figure 34).

The third seal was assigned to the lower right section of the Great Table. Its origin was a little harder to track down. Ave said, “It is in that table, which consisteth of 4 and 8.” One of the seven Ensigns of Creation that ring the Sigillum on the Holy Table (the one many modern magicians associate with Mercury) is a 4×8 table (see figure 54). The square occupying the position of the second column, second row, contains the cross, numbers, and letters exactly as appears on the vision of the third seal.

The forth seal was assigned to the lower left section of the table and was the image of “a little round smoke, as big as a pin's head.” It is illustrated in one of the drawings of the Great Table in Sloane 3191 as a tiny circle with twelve rays issuing from it. It is perhaps the stylized representation of the figure that appears on the back of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth: a small circle from which projects the four capital Ts of a cross potent formed from twelve right angles (see figure 51). Perhaps it is connected to the Round Table of Nalvage and the twelve words that occupy its four continents. Frankly I've been unable to find any reference in the original material that would suggest either of these connections.

Figure 65 shows the positions of the Great Seals on the Great Table and the order in which they were revealed to Dee and Kelley on June 25, 1584. On April 18, 1587 (nearly three years after the magicians had, for all intents and purposes, discontinued their angelic workings), Kelley would receive a vision that would alter (or reform) several aspects of the Great Table, including the relative positions of the seals and all they represent.

As one might expect, this reformation remains the source of intense frustration to Enochian students and practitioners. To add to all the confusion, Dee at different times assigned different directional attributes to the quarters of the table. Later, the Golden Dawn, in order to develop a workable system from this material, would attribute the quarters of the Great Table to the elements of Air, Water, Earth, and Fire. Eventually, I will do that as well, but for the moment, let's be satisfied with identifying the four quarters of the Great Table by their seals and original numbers as shown in figure 65, while we move on to the wonders of what next took place.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

The Great Table

There was a terrible storm of thunder and rain, toward the end of our yesterdays action: which I said, was somewhat more than natural.

—JOHN DEE, JUNE 26, 1584⁸⁸

I feel I must here briefly outline (if only for my own benefit) the sequential landmarks of the Enochian magick period up to this point:

- The reception of the Round Tablet of Nalvage,
- The beginning of the reception of the forty-eight calls in the angelic language,
- The reception of the order and earthly name of each of the ninety-one parts of the earth, together with:
 - – its divinely given name,
 - – the tribe of Israel to which it is assigned,⁸⁹
 - – the direction assigned to that tribe,
 - – the name of its ruling angelic king,
 - – the number of good ministers.

(All of the above information is itemized in columns I through IV of the figure 63 in chapter eighteen.)

Then came:

- The vision of the Golden Talisman, with its four sets of castles:
 - – one trumpeter,
 - – three ensign bearers,
 - – six seniors (“six ancient men”),
 - – the king and his five princes (the “comely man, with very much Apparel” and the “five men, carrying up of his train”),
 - – five crosses in the air (“one great Crosse” and “four lesser Crosses”),
 - – sixteen dispositors (“16 white Creatures”).
- The vision of the unlettered Great Table and the four Great Seals.

What happened next was so remarkable that I hope I can recount what happened clearly enough for you to appreciate how remarkable it was.

During the working of Monday, June 25, 1584, Kelley was given in vision four blank grids, each of which was twelve squares wide by thirteen squares high. These grids were said to represent the four quarters of the unlettered Great Table of the vision of a few days earlier. As the vision proceeded, “little pricks,” or dots, began to appear in the squares. Kelley was then instructed to connect the dots in groups of seven, which created sigils, each forming a curious pattern.

When he was through connecting the dots, all but eight of the 624 squares that make up the four grids were covered by eighty-eight characters, each unique in form, each covering seven squares, but none of which intruded upon another character's squares. These symbols were identified as “the true images of God his Spiritual Creatures.”

Now we know what those zigzag lines that fill column VI in chapter eighteen's figure 63 are. They are called symmetrical characters because each one is formed from the same number of pricks—in this case, seven.

Once the blank grids were filled with the lines of the symmetrical characters, Kelley was instructed to fill in the squares with letters. Starting at the top left of each grid and moving to the right, letters began to appear to Kelley, one by one, as Dee copied them down. Some of the letters were capitalized, but most were not. A few of the capitalized letters appeared to be written backwards.

When all four grids were filled in with letters and characters, it became clear that the characters spelled out names. Not only that, but each of these eighty-eight names also began with a capital letter and contained no other capital letter among the remaining six.

This phenomenon is in itself impressive, but it is nothing compared to what Dee and Kelley would learn next. Within a few hours (and with a few helpful hints from the angels), the two magicians discovered, to their utter amazement, that the symmetrical characters spelled all but three of the divine names of the ninety-one parts of the earth—names they had been given days earlier and in list format. Figure 67 shows an example of how the divine name of the second part of the earth, Pascomb, is spelled out by its symmetric character.

All four grids were filled with similar characters all spelling out (with a few minor irregularities) the names of eighty-eight of the ninety-one parts of the earth.

The next day the angels tidied up this array by joining the four 12×13 grids with a central cross and turning it into one Great Table. The letters of the three missing divine names of the parts of the earth were found distributed in the central cross (sometimes referred to as the Black Cross or the Great Central Cross) and a mysterious ninety-second name, Paraoan, was created from certain of the backwards letters that occupied the squares left vacant by the symmetrical characters (see chapter twenty-four). Things were wrapped up pretty neatly.

Before we continue, I would like to again stress how impressive was the method of reception. Enochian scholar and magician David R. Jones, wrote:

The student of Enochian can compare the lists of names with the sigils, which formulate their existence on the Watchtowers, and easily see the correlation. But realize that the names were delivered first and then the Watchtowers horizontally line by line and after having both figures at hand. The Angels demonstrated that, by discrete (7 letters, the number of letters in each Governor's name) linear connections, all of the letters given in the Watchtowers could be accounted for from the letters that formulate names of the Governors previously given. This would require either a monumental and complex second and third order memorization (2 dimensions to 1 dimension then back to 2 dimensions and with directional correlation from a 3 dimensional origin to a 3 dimensional conclusion) on Kelly's part or an elaborate and extremely obtuse deception on Dee's part. This constitutes one of the chief proofs of the system.⁹⁰

The magicians would eventually be informed that the ninety-one divine names of the parts of the earth are also the names of ninety-one governors who inhabit the thirty Aethyrs, or Aires, or heavens that surround the Watchtowers like a heavenly glass onion. We've yet to discuss the Aethyrs because their names (see figure 63, column VII) were among the last bits of information Dee and Kelley received in their Enochian magick workings. The lowest of these Aethyrs, Tex, is inhabited by four governors. The remaining Aethyrs including the highest, Lil, each have three governors.

I will talk more about the Aethyrs in chapter twenty-five. Here it is important for us to simply understand that linking the ninety-one parts of the earth to the thirty Aethyrs was the Enochian way of identifying and linking all levels of divine consciousness from bottom to top. Thus, the dynamics of the Great Table really are a demonstration of how everything in heaven and earth is indeed connected to everything else in heaven and earth.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

Tabula Recensa

*At length, E. K. was willed to go down into his Chamber, and I did remain still at our Dineing Table till his return, which was within an hour or somewhat more. And at his return this he brought in writing
....*

—JOHN DEE, APRIL 20, 1587⁹¹

Such was the amazing genesis of the Great Table. How all this is connected to the vision of the Golden Talisman and the practice of modern Enochian magick will be the subjects of the next chapters. Before moving on, however, and in order to more easily illustrate the structure of the system, I need to temporarily tighten up some of the loose ends that the irregularities in the original material often leave dangling in the eyes of the student. The most serious of these concerns the lettering of the Great Table and the various names of angels drawn therefrom. Here's the problem:

After they initially received the Great Table, the magicians were obliged to change or add certain letters in some of the squares. To confuse things further, in documents they received both earlier and later,⁹² the names of a handful of the ninety-one governors of the table (whose names are spelled out by the symmetrical characters) and the names of specific angels drawn from the Watchtowers of the Great Table are in subsequent communications spelled a bit differently than they appear in the original table. This difference has proven very frustrating to modern Enochian magicians, who naturally would like to be confident in their ability to accurately identify and spell the name of the angel with whom they wish to communicate.

There are other loose-end inconsistencies that plagued Dee and Kelley, one of which was the uncertainty over which compass directions were to be assigned to the four quarters of the Great Table—a problem that Dee appears never to have resolved to his satisfaction, and one that I have chosen to sidestep completely by not using the directional references to identify the four quarters of the Great Table at all. These inconsistencies, however, pale before what happened in April of 1587, nearly three years after Dee and Kelley had ended their Enochian workings.

For some reason Kelley felt compelled to revisit the mysteries of the Great Table and once and for all settle the questions of unresolved inconsistencies. During a conversation with the archangel Raphael that lasted approximately one hour, he claimed to receive the Tabula Recensa, or “Reformed Table.” This table, while correcting a few of the letters, was characterized by one very dramatic change: three of the quadrants housing the four Watchtowers were shifted to different positions within the full table. This alteration did not change any symmetrical characters, nor did it tinker all that much with the names of the governors or other angels within the table. What it did do was change the basic construction of the Great Table.

For the duration of this book I will, for the sake of consistency, try to use the Tabula Recensa as my main model for both the lettering and arrangement of the Watchtowers of the Great Table. I say “try to use” because for nearly the entire Enochian period the angels referenced the original Great Table (figure 68) when explaining the angelic hierarchies and spelling the names of individual angels. It will be necessary from time to time to refer to the original, unreformed Great Table, especially when we start discussing the Kerubs (see chapters twenty-three and twenty-four), whose names might be dramatically affected by the reformed table's new arrangement.

I should remind the reader that in magick it is eminently possible for many contradictory ideas to be simultaneously true. In the pages that follow, the alert reader will notice that the names of certain angels are spelled in a manner inconsistent with the original Great Table, the Tabula Recensa, and/or other obvious references within the text. It is probable that particular inconsistencies are the result of subsequent angelic instructions or other extenuating reasons. For a practical manual such as this it would be distracting to the point of absurdity for me to pause, footnote, cross reference, defend, and explain each and every one of these aberrations, especially considering the fact that in many instances I myself have not been able to track down the source of the differing lettering. For those of you whose research will take you deeper into this subject, I have included in appendix IV versions of the Watchtowers containing all the variations in lettering that I have been able to discover.

Also for convenience sake, I'm going to represent the segue between the Enochian magick of Dee and Kelley and Enochian magick as it is generally practiced today. Up to this point in the chronology of the adventures of Dee and Kelley, each of the four Watchtowers of the Great Table (both the original and reformed) have been identified by the one of the four Great Seals (see figure 65) or by certain landmark letters. At different times in the original material they have been identified by the order they were received or by the directions: east, south, west, or north. Nowhere in the surviving documents have I been able to find the four quadrants of the Great Table overtly identified as the Elemental Tablets of Fire, Water, Air, and Earth.

That being said, certain clear references in the continuing communications revealed elemental hierarchies and rulerships both of and within the individual Watchtowers. Building on this information, the adepts of the Golden Dawn projected an eminently logical elemental structure to the Great Table, its central Black Cross, and its individual subdivisions. These elemental attributions are the heart and soul of the system of Enochian magick taught and practiced by the Golden Dawn, Aleister Crowley, and most modern practitioners.

I personally believe that when these more modern adepts treated the Watchtowers as expressions of the elements they were picking up where Dee and Kelley had stopped and were taking the next logical step in the development of the system. To more easily discuss how all this is going to relate to the practical application of the system, I will now and for the remainder of this book, refer to the four Watchtowers by their modern elemental designations. Please refer to figure 69.

- The upper left quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Air.
- The upper right quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Water.
- The lower left quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Earth.
- The lower right quadrant of the reformed Great Table I will now refer to as the Watchtower, or Elemental Tablet, of Fire.

This is how they are identified in most modern Enochian literature. There is a fifth Elemental Tablet—the Tablet of Union—that is attributed to the quintessential element, Spirit. It is much smaller, containing only twenty squares, and its letters are drawn from those on the central Black Cross of the Great Table, which serves to unite the four Watchtowers in precisely the same way Spirit is said to unite and separate the four elements. I will have more to say about this very important tablet in chapter twenty-six.

CHAPTER TWENTY-THREE

The Great Table Meets the Golden Talisman

The Angels of the 4 angles shall make the Earth open unto you, and shall serve your necessities from the 4 parts of the Earth.

—THE ANGEL AVE, JULY 2, 1584⁹³

Recall, from chapter nineteen, that the vision of the Golden Talisman revealed four castles from which flowed four cloths of different colors. Out of each castle, marching in procession came one trumpeter, three ensign bearers, six seniors, and one king. The king was followed by five men (who held up his train) and five crosses (one great cross surrounded by four lesser crosses) that floated in the air above them. Each of the four lesser crosses “had on them, each of them ten, like men, their faces distinctly appearing on the four parts of the Crosse, all over.”⁹⁴

After the crosses came sixteen white creatures, identified as dispositors on the Golden Talisman, and then “an infinite number seemed to issue, almost before the four foresaid Castles.”⁹⁵

These images and characters provide, at least partially, the key to the divine hierarchy of the Great Table. This hierarchy represents the spiritual forces that govern not only the phenomenal universe but also heaven. Let's take a moment and project the vision of the Golden Talisman upon the Great Table.

The Four Castles

The castles are obviously the four Watchtowers (Elemental Tablets) themselves, and the rest of the characters in the vision represent the angelic hierarchy resident in each tablet. These angels can be called forth and visited in vision by intoning one or more of the first eighteen calls to activate the Elemental Tablet and the specific area of the tablet where they reside. I will show how that is done in appendix I. First, let's see how the cast of characters from the Golden Talisman fit on the individual Elemental Tablets.

For purposes of illustration, I will use the Elemental Tablet of Fire (the lower right quarter of the reformed Great Table) as our model.

The Trumpets (Trumpeter)

The first character to issue from each of the castles was the trumpeter. The trumpeters are the Great Seals of the tablets. In our example (the Elemental Tablet of Fire), the seal is the image of the sun emitting rays.

The Three Ensign Bearers

At the top of the hierarchical ladder of each Elemental Tablet are the three ensign bearers, who represent the Three Great Secret Names of God. These names appear in the central horizontal row of the Great Central Cross that divides each Elemental Tablet. This cross is made of the two vertical columns that bisect the tablet into left and right; the left column is called the Line of the Father and the right column is called the Line of the Son, and the single central row that bisects the tablet top and bottom is called the Line of the Holy Ghost.

Dee and Kelley were told that the three ensign bearers were respectively of the nature of “3, 4, and 5.” This means that the Three Great Secret Names of God are spelled using the first three letters, the next four letters, and the final five letters of the central horizontal row of the central cross. In the case of the Fire tablet, these letter combinations are: oiP, tea, pDoce.

Figure 73: The Three Great Secret Names of God of the Elemental Tablet of Fire

If there was any doubt as to the angels' meaning concerning the four sets of the Three Great Secret Names of God, they thoughtfully provided a round diagram with all twelve names neatly represented as ensign flags surrounding a central quartered square. In that diagram, all the letters of the names appeared in uppercase letters: OIP, TEAA, PDOCE.

The Three Great Secret Names of all four Elemental Tablets are found in appendix IV.

The Six Seniors

Next came the six seniors. While there is little specific indication in the surviving documents that would suggest the six seniors carry planetary attributions, it is nonetheless a logical assumption; it was made by the adepts of the Golden Dawn and is made by most modern practitioners. For clarity of reference (and for the duration of our discussion), I will adapt the modern planetary designations given to the seniors.

The six seniors of each of the Elemental Tablets are found on the Great Central Cross of each tablet. The seven-letter names of the six seniors radiate from the center two letters of the cross to its extremities.

On the Elemental Tablet of Fire, the six seniors are: aaetPio (Mars), adoeoet (Jupiter), aLndVod (Luna), aapDoce (Venus), arinna (Saturn), and aNodoin (Mercury).

In subsequent references to the seniors (such as in lists and prayers), Dee would standardize the capitalization of the names on all the Elemental Tablets. In our example: Aaetpio, Adoeoet, Alndvod, Aapdoce, Arinna, Anodoin.

The names of the seniors of all four Elemental Tablets are found in appendix IV.

In Kelley's vision of the Golden Talisman, the six seniors from each of the four castles march to the center and meet as pillars that support, as it were, the entire structure. This image is suggestive of the twenty-four elders who surround the throne of God in the Book of the Revelation of John.⁹⁶

The twenty-four seniors together are represented on the Golden Talisman as the twenty-four columns that ring the center circle of the talisman (see figure 64).

There is a seventh planetary senior who is attributed to the sun. Just as the sun is the central “king” of our solar system, so too is the sun senior identified as king and found in the center of each Elemental Tablet.

The King

Like the sun, which attracts and holds the planets in orbit, the king of each Elemental Tablet is said to summon and direct the seniors for heavenly duties. When those duties are of a merciful nature, the king spells his name a bit differently than when the duties are those of severity and judgment.

Like those of the six seniors, the seven letters of the king's name are drawn entirely from the Great Central Cross (the lines of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost) of the Elemental Tablet. Beginning with the fifth letter from the left in the horizontal line of the Holy Ghost, the name is spelled out in a clockwise whirl that ends in one of the two squares that occupies the center of the cross: either at the sixth letter from the left for operations of mercy (figure 75) or the seventh letter from the left for operations of judgment (figure 76).

In the case of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, the letters that hold those positions are both as, so both names are Edlprna.

Figures 75 and 76: Clockwise whirl spelling the two names of the king of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, Edlprna and Edlprna

Perhaps my use of the Elemental Tablet of Fire is not the best example to illustrate how the name of the king is formed by the clockwise whirls because the resulting names are the same. The other three Elemental Tablets yield distinctly different names.

The names of the Kings of all four Elemental Tablets are found in appendix IV.

The Five Crosses (One Great Cross and Four Lesser Crosses)

Each of the four quarters formed by the Great Central Cross is a rectangle five squares wide by six squares high. These quadrants are often referred to in modern Enochian magick as lesser angles or subangles. Just as the reformed Great Table positions the Elemental Tablet of Air in its upper left, Water in its upper right, Earth in its lower left, and Fire in its lower right quadrants, so too each subangle is assigned one of the four elements and positioned on its Elemental Tablet in the same way.

Each of the four subangles is dominated by a Calvary cross made up of ten squares (the ten men of the vision of the Golden Talisman), which form the two god names of the subangle. The name drawn from the six letters of the vertical column of the cross (read top to bottom) was said to summon the angels of the subangle, and the five-letter god name of the horizontal bar of the cross (read left to right) was said to command them. Figure 78 shows the god names rzionr and nrzfm from the Fire subangle (the lower right quadrant) of the Elemental Tablet of Fire.

Figure 78: God names from the Calvary cross of the Fire subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Fire

The god names of the subangles of all four Elemental Tablets are found in appendix IV.

Sixteen White Creatures (Dispositors)

Next in procession in Kelley's vision (and next in the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablets) are the “16 white Creatures.” On the Golden Talisman diagram they are represented as sixteen small columns standing side-by-side at the extremity of each rectangular cloth (see figure 64) where they are labeled “XVI Dispositors.”

Among modern magicians there are several schools of thought concerning the identity of the sixteen dispositors. The simplest (and in my opinion the most correct) theory holds they are made up of the four angels who reside beneath the arms of the Calvary cross of each of the four subangles of the Elemental Tablet. Referred to as good angels or servient angels, they are invoked and commanded by the god names of their Calvary cross and have powers and knowledge that can be of great practical use to the magician (see appendix IV).

The names of the servient or good angels can be spelled with four letters (if you omit the central letter from the vertical bar of the Calvary cross) or with five letters (if you include the letter from the cross). In our example, the names are:

adre or ad[i]re
sisp or si[o]sp pali or pa[n]li
ACar or AC[r]ar

This is a logical and very workable way of looking at the angelic hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet and conforms nicely to the vision of the Golden Talisman and to the way Dee composed his prayers to conjure these good angels.

This theory does, however, leave out in the cold the four letters above the arm of each Calvary cross. To address this issue we must bring up the several schools of thought concerning Kerubs.

Kerubic Angels

In Christian iconography, every well-appointed crucifix bears a rectangular piece of wood nailed above the head of Christ and displaying the four letters INRI.⁹⁷ So too above the arms of the Calvary cross of every subangle we find four letters that spell the name of the Kerub of the subangle, a unique spiritual personage. The Golden Dawn dubbed these angels Kerubs.⁹⁸

Now, if you are paying attention, you might want to point out that there are only four subangles and only four Calvary crosses (one in each Elemental Tablet), and therefore there should only be four Kerub/dispositors, not sixteen, per tablet. Of course, your observation would be accurate—if we restrict ourselves to spelling their names in a straightforward and orderly manner. But according to this theory, there are actually four Kerubs hidden in the four letters above the arms of every Calvary cross, and these sixteen Kerubs are actually the sixteen dispositors.

Let's use the Fire (lower right) subangle of the Fire Elemental Tablet and the Kerub ZiZa as our example.

Z	i	r	Z	a n	r	z	f	m
a	d	i	r	e
s	i	o	s	p p	a	n	i	i

This subangle's four Kerubs are created from a simple permutation of the four letters above the arms of the Calvary cross; simply slide the four letters to the left, each time placing the displaced first letter to the back of the line:

ZiZa iZaZ ZaZi aZiZ

This dynamic perpetual motion of letters doesn't stop with the Kerub, for each letter of the Kerub's name can also rule a column and row of the sixteen letters of the servient angels residing beneath the arm of the Calvary cross.

In our example, the first Z in the Kerub's name rules the column directly beneath it and the arm of the cross: aspA.

The Z also rules the bottom row of the subangle: ACar.

Figure 81 shows how the other letters in the Kerub's name rule the servient angels of the subangle.

Z		r				Z	i	r				Z			Z		Z			Z	a n	n	z	p	m		n	n	z	p	m		n	n	z	p	m	n	n	z	p	m
a						a	d					s			r		a	d		r
s						e	i					s	i		s	p	s	i		s	p p						p	a					p	a		i		p	a		i
A	C				r	A	C				r	A	C			a	A	C			r

Figure 81: How the letters of the Kerub rule the servient angels of the Fire subangle: The first Z rules column name aspA and row name ACar. The letter I rules column name diaC and row name pali. The second Z rules column name rsla and row name sisp. And finally, the letter a rules column name epir and row name adre.

According to this theory, in order to open a subangle to summon or contact a servient angel, the magician must first invoke the two god names of the Calvary cross of the subangle in question, then invoke the Kerub, then invoke the servient angel of choice. This is a logical and workable system, but one that doesn't appear to have been on Dee and Kelley's menu. In fact, original material suggests that the Kerub is a unique citizen of the subangle, one who is not under the rulership of the Calvary cross, but under a "god" whose name begins with a sacred letter drawn from the Black Cross (the Great Central Cross) of the Great Table.

A Super Kerub?

Neither Dee or Kelley nor the modern magicians of the Golden Dawn ever use the term Super Kerub.

There is, however, a variety of kerubic angel who seems to embody that title. Like the variety of kerubs we've just discussed, the names of the Super Kerubs are drawn from the letters above the arms of the Calvary crosses of the subangles of the Great Tablet. But, instead of answering to the two Calvary cross god names of their subangle, the Super Kerubs answer to a higher authority—a supercharged angel who is linked directly to the Black Cross of the unreformed Great Tablet. This angel was the subject of much discussion in the original Dee and Kelley material, for its existence and posers were central to the understanding of the “wicked” angels.

In order for us to understand the nature of the Super Kerubs and the wicked angels, we will need to take a closer look at the Black Cross.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FOUR

The Black Cross, Super Kerubs, Wicked Angels, Missing Symmetrical Characters, and the Tablet of Union

That shall make the cross that bindeth the 4 Angles of the Table together. The same that stretcheth from the left to right, must also stretch from the right to the left ...

—THE ANGEL AVE, JUNE 25, 1584⁹⁹

I stated earlier that I have been unable to find in the surviving Dee and Kelley material any overt references to the four Watchtowers as being Elemental Tablets of Fire, Water, Air, and Earth. However, the communicating angels gave every indication that the dynamics and hierarchical structure of the Great Table were, at least in part, elemental in nature. In the communication of Monday, June 25, 1584, the angel Ave speaks of the virtues of the table:¹⁰⁰

First, generally this Table containeth:

1. All humane knowledge.
2. Out of it springeth Physick.
3. The knowledge of all elemental Creatures, amongst you. How many kindes there are, and for what use they were created. Those that live in the air, by themselves. Those that live in the waters, by themselves. Those that dwell in the earth, by themselves. The property of the fire—which is the secret life of all things.
4. The knowledge, finding and use of Metal.
The vertues of them.

They are all of one matter. The congelations, and vertues of Stones. } They are all of one matter.

5. The conjoining and knitting together of Natures. The destruction of Nature, and of things may perish.
6. Moving from place to place, [as, into this Country, or that Country at pleasure.]

7. The knowledge of all crafts Mechanical.
8. Transmutatio formalis, sed non effentialis.101

If we look at the four quarters of the Great Table as being the Elemental Tablets of Air, Water, Earth, and Fire, the Black Cross that separates and joins the tablets would then obviously represent Spirit—that quintessential force that binds the four elements together in infinite quantities and ratios to create and sustain the universe, while at the same time keeping the elements separated just enough to retain their identities. This push/pull, active/passive nature is a defining characteristic of Spirit. As I mentioned earlier, this characteristic is illustrated (as every good ceremonial magician knows) by the dynamics of the pentagram, which allow for two types of Spirit pentagram, one active and one passive.

The Black Cross contains forty letters that radiate from the central blank square. When we read from the top of the column toward the center, we find the curiously spaced and inconsistently capitalized letters e xarp and h Coma. When we start at the center square of the Black Cross and read to the right, we find the letters nanTa and bitom.

We can find identical sets of letters if we read from the bottom of the column toward the center and from the center of the row to the left. In other words, the Black Cross contains mirror images of the letter groups e xarp, h Coma, nanTa, and bitom—a phenomenon curiously reflective of the dual nature of Spirit.

During the same June 25 session, Ave would (in remarkably few words) explain the letters on the Black Cross, answer questions concerning the three missing symmetrical characters of the tenth Aire (Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom—the twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth, and thirtieth parts of the earth; see chapter eighteen, figure 63), and demonstrate how those three names construct a master table, the Tablet of Union, which appears to rule the whole Great Table.

But before discussing all that, we have a small bit of unfinished business to clean up from the last chapter. I am, of course, talking about the Super Kerubs and the wicked angels.

Super Kerubs, or Gods of the Kerubs?

It is my opinion, and I'm sure many will disagree, that there are two hierarchies of angels existing simultaneously in each subangle. The first hierarchy simply begins with the two god names of the Calvary cross, who are invoked before calling upon the four servient angels whose names appear beneath the arm of the cross. In this schema, all the names of the angels in the hierarchy are drawn neatly and exclusively from within the subangle itself. The Kerub plays no role at all.

The second hierarchy, I believe, does not use the two god names of the Calvary cross at all, nor does it necessarily concern itself with the servient angels. Instead, it places a new character, a Super Kerub, or kerubic god, above a group of angels whose names are drawn exclusively from the four letters above the arms of the cross.

Figure 82 is a version of the original, unreformed Great Table that I've highlighted to, hopefully, make this all clear. I realize it may sound crazy for us to bounce back to using the unreformed table when locating these angels, but it is the unreformed table the angels used in 1584 when this information was received. For the moment, please ignore the circled backwards letters on the diagram.

The letters of the Black Cross are the key to creating the kerubic gods. Note how four of the letters in the column are isolated from others that appear neatly in groups of four. Reading from the top toward the center, the e of e xarp and the h of h Coma are isolated. Reading from the bottom toward the center, the p of exar p and the a of hCom a are also isolated. Note that these four isolated letters appear in the same rows as the Kerubs who live above the arms of the Calvary crosses of all sixteen subangles.

To determine the name of a subangle's kerubic god, simply insert the isolated letter (that appears on the same row as the Kerub's name) at the beginning of the Kerub's four-letter name. For example, the Kerub of the Fire subangle of the Fire tablet, ZiZa, would be transformed into the Super Kerub, pZiZa (see figure 80). Instead of ruling the servient angels, this Super Kerub pZiZa directly rules four angels whose names are created by the permutation of the Kerub's own name: ZiZa, iZaZ, ZaZi, and aZiZ. A table containing all the kerubic gods and their Kerubs can be found in appendix IV.

The important thing to remember is that in this system there are two hierarchies of angels in each of the sixteen subangles: one hierarchy that simply uses the god name of the Calvary cross to summon or contact the serviant angels living under the arms of the cross, and one hierarchy that selects a letter from the Black Cross (outside the Elemental Tablet) and adds it to the Kerub's name to create a kerubic god who rules four Kerubs whose names are created by the permutation of the regular Kerub's own name.

When to use one hierarchy and not the other in a magical operation remains a subject of debate among modern magicians. One thing is certain, the more the magician understands about the nature and dynamics of the Great Table, the more he or she will be able to devise a logical and workable mode. So let's discover more wonders of the Black Cross. Let's start with something we haven't encountered before in Enochian magick—wicked angels.

Wicked Angels

The letters of the Black Cross are also the key to creating the names of the four wicked, or evil or malevolent, angels of each subangle. Up to now we've been dealing with angels whose names are representative of complete and balanced segments of the Great Table and its Elemental Tablets. But during the June 25 session, as the angel Ave was expounding on the virtues of the Black Cross, he also introduced Dee and Kelley to a set of angels that are not complete and balanced—angels he referred to as being “wicked.” These malevolent angels manifest aversely the powers of their good-angel subangle neighbors. For example, if the good angels are useful for healing, the wicked angels bring sickness and affliction (see appendix IV).

But some of the wicked angel duties seem rather tempting and are said to be useful in obtaining money and for gambling. Kelley initially got pretty excited about such prospects and was very disappointed when Ave in no uncertain terms told him hands off the evil angels. Why Ave would give details of these critters and turn around and tell the magicians not to use them remains a mystery. Or does it?

The name of an evil angel is a portrait of incompleteness and imbalance supercharged with an injection of the immense power of the Black Cross—a dangerous recipe if there ever was one. Creating it is very simple. Here's how to do it.

Remember how we created the name of a kerubic god by prefacing the name of a regular Kerub with the letter from the Black Cross occupying the same row? Well, that's almost exactly what we do to create the name of a wicked angel. However, instead of prefacing the four letters of a Kerub's name, we preface only the first two letters of the servient angel's name with its neighboring letter from the Black Cross. This three-letter supercharged perversion of the first half of a servient angel's name is a wicked angel.

And how does one, if one were inclined, call forth these evil angels? Who are their hierarchical rulers? As one might expect, the adverse god names that call forth the evil angels are the names on the Calvary cross spelled backwards. In the case of our example they are iOpgna and xanNu.

You can easily work out the names of the other evil angels and their rulers by referring to figure 82 or consulting the table in appendix IV.

Paraoan

Ave was particularly concerned that Dee and Kelley locate the name Paraoan on the Great Table. The significance of this great angel has not (at least to my satisfaction) been adequately explored or explained. The name Paraoan first appeared among the ninety-one parts of the earth as one of the three divine names (number 65) in the twenty-second Aire. Paraoan is the divine name of the part of the earth designated as Marmarica. According to Enochian scholar Robin Cousins, in Dee and Kelley's day, Marmarica was a North African coastal region straddling the Egyptian and Libyan coasts, bounded on the east by the River Nile (see appendix III).

Oddly enough, a perfectly good sixty-fifth symmetrical character already existed. It is found in the lower right section of the Elemental Tablet of Water, and spells the name Laxdizi.

Nevertheless, Paraoan seems to also hold the title of the sixty-fifth part of the earth known as Marmarica. The obvious and inescapable similarity between the names Marmarica and America inserts (into my mind at least) an added dimension of mystery to this curious anomaly. Add to this the enigmatic and direful comments Ave made concerning the final n in Paraoan:

As far as that N. stretcheth in the Character, so far shall that Countrey be consumed with fire, and swallowed into Hell, as Sodom was for wickednesse. The end of all things is even at hand: and the earth must be purified, and delivered to another.¹⁰²

A bit later, Dee presses Ave on this:

Dee: I beseech you say somewhat of the N in Paraoan, of which you said, so far as that stretched, should sink to hell.

Ave: Every letter in Paraoan, is a living fire: but all of one quality and of one Creation. But unto N is delivered a viol of Destruction, according to that part that he is of Paraoan the Governour.¹⁰³

The letters of the name Paraoan are created from seven of the eight backward letters that appear scattered among the four Elemental Tablets of the Great Table. See the circled letters in figure 82. The eighth backwards letter, the backward L found in the lowermost square on the right of figure 82, has another very important job to do.

The Three Missing Symmetrical Characters of the Tenth Aire

Recall from the table in chapter eighteen (figure 63) that there were no symmetrical characters for the three parts of the earth assigned to the tenth Aire (those whose divine names were Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom). Neither can these three names be found within the available letters in any of the four Elemental Tablets. They are, however, to be found on the Black Cross, and the angel Ave, in his highly productive lecture of June 25, 1584, shows how it is done.

Ave instructed Dee and Kelley to pluck the backward capital L from the lower right corner of the lower right Watchtower (I've circled it in figure 82) and preface the lowercase letters e, x, a, r, p, and h from the column of the Black Cross to form dual versions of the divine name Lexarph.

Then starting with the capital letter C in the column, moving down from the top C (or up from the bottom C), then continuing to read either right or left into the horizontal row, dual versions of the divine name Comanan are formed.

Then, starting with the capital letter T in the left and right arms of the Black Cross and reading toward the extremities, we discover dual versions of the divine name Tabitom.

Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom are respectively the divine names of the twenty-eighth, twenty-ninth, and thirtieth parts of the earth in the tenth Aire, whose symmetrical characters were missing from the original material concerning the ninety-one parts of the earth. Their characters are simply the straight lines and rotating *L*s that spell out their names on the Black Cross.

Obviously, angelic beings whose names are drawn from the Black Cross are of a nature that sets them apart from their neighbors in the Elemental Tablets. Their presence in the tenth Aire also distinguishes that portion of the ninety-one parts of the earth for special attention—something that will be important to us later.

The Four Names of the Tablet of Union

Lexarph, Comanan, and Tabitom also contain within themselves the four names that appear in pairs on the Black Cross, names that are very familiar to practicing Enochian magicians: EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA, and BITOM. These are the four divine names of the elements that (in the practice of modern Enochian magick at least) rule the four Elemental Tablets.

These four names are arranged into a table five squares wide by four squares high. This Tablet of Union, in its profound simplicity, extracts the essence and hierarchical dynamics of the entire Great Table. The Tablet of Union is quite literally the Great Table distilled.

We'll soon learn much more about the Tablet of Union. But first, we are almost ready to bring the story of Dee and Kelley's Enochian period to an end. It was not long after Ave's revelations concerning the Black Cross, Kerubs, wicked angels, missing symmetrical characters, and the Tablet of Union that the two magicians' great angelic adventure, for all intents and purposes, came to a close. There remained only a couple of loose ends to tie up. But my heavens, what loose ends those were!

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

“There Is All.”

Nalvage is called away and cannot be in Action with you until Wednesday. Then shall you have the Calls that you look for. And so enter into the knowledge and perfect understanding of the 49 Gates and Tables if you will.

—THE ARCHANGEL GABRIEL, MONDAY, JULY 9, 1584¹⁰⁴

In early July of 1584, the two magicians were busy trying to tie up loose ends before a mysterious August deadline. On July 7, the angel Ave waxed eloquent about how Enoch made tablets such as those Dee and Kelley now possessed, and had labored fifty days in prayer and confession before receiving a supreme revelation. It appears from the communication¹⁰⁵ that the two magicians were to do likewise.

In a breathtakingly short amount of time, Dee and Kelley received the translations of the remaining angelic calls (five through eighteen), which they had six weeks earlier received in the angelic tongue, together with tantalizing hints that the eighteen calls might be connected to the Tablet of Union and the four Elemental Tablets.

On Thursday, July 12, the angel Ilemese¹⁰⁶ began to deliver a nineteenth call, together with its translation. This call was said to be actually thirty calls, bringing the total number of calls to forty-eight. Add the unexpressed “first” call (see chapter sixteen), and we have a grand total of forty-nine (7×7) calls. The next day, Friday the thirteenth, 1584, John Dee's fifty-seventh birthday, Ilemese delivered the remaining portion of the nineteenth call and revealed that it was the key to accessing the thirty Aires (the heavens connected to the ninety-one parts of the earth). Lastly, he revealed the names of the thirty Aires, which until then had only been identified by numbers (see chapter nineteen, figure 63, columns I and VI).

The nineteenth call was a master call to be used to access each of the thirty Aires or Aethyrs. The only thing that differentiated the thirty calls from one another was insertion of the name of the particular Aire in the first line. Ilemese delivered the names of the Aires as a simple list and then engaged in a brief exchange with Dee.

Ile: There is all—Now change the name, and the Call is all one.

Δ: Blessed be he who onely is always one.

I take these names to be as primus, secudus, tertius, and to 30.

A voice ... Not so, they be the substantial names of the Aires.

Δ: It was said they had no proper names; but were to be called, O thou of the first Aire, O thou of the second, etc. I pray you reconcile the repugnancy of theses two places, as they should seem.^{107}

Dee's testiness evoked a response from none other than the archangel Gabriel, who was sitting nearby in Kelley's vision during Ilemese's discourse. The great angel stood and informed the magicians they now possessed the knowledge they needed. He encouraged them to study and prepare for the August operation and then, after one more little jab at Dee's cheekiness, delivered a most poignant valediction.

E. K. The Curtain is opened.

E. E. [sic] Now Gabriel standeth up.

Gabr ... Thus has God kept promise with you, and hath delivered you the keyes of his storehouses: wherein you shall find, (if you enter wisely, humbly, and patiently) Treasures more worth than the frames of the heavens.

But it is not August come: Notwithstanding the Lord hath kept his promise with you be the time. Therefore, Now examine you Books, Confer one place with another, and learn to be perfect for the practice and entrance.

See that your garments be clean. Herein be not rash: Nor over hasty; For those that are hasty and rash, and are loathsomely appareled, may knock long before they enter.

There is no other reading of the Book, but the appearing of the Ministers and Creatures of God: which shewing what they are themselves, shew how they are conjoyed in power, and represented formally by those letters.

E. K. Now he taketh the Table, and seemeth to wrap it up together.

Δ Seeing I have moved the doubt of their names I pray you to dissolve it.

Gab ... You play with me childishly.

Δ I have done.

Gab ... Thinkest thou that we speak any thing that is not true?

Thou shalt never know the mysteries of all things that have been spoken.

If you love together, and dwell together, and in one God; Then the self-same God will be merciful unto you: Which bless you, comfort you, and strengthen you unto the end. More I would say, but words profit not. God be amongst you.

E.K. Now they both be gone in a great flame of fire upwards ... 108

Thus, in a dramatic burst of flame, the angels of Enochian magick fell silent, and the most amazing magical operation ever recorded came to an end. Unfortunately, we don't know if the two magicians actually performed the fifty-day operation scheduled for August. Surviving diary entries for the month treat on other matters. What we are left with, however, is an elegant and remarkably coherent system of vision magick.

For those of us who have made Enochian magick a part of our spiritual quest, Gabriel's parting words ring profoundly true. God did keep promise with Dee and Kelley and delivered unto them (and us) the keys to the storehouses wherein we shall find, if we enter wisely, humbly, and patiently, treasures worth more than the frames of the heavens.

BOOK V

Putting It Together

CHAPTER TWENTY-SIX

Rulership of the Tablet of Union

The Tablet of Union is a Great Table you can put in your briefcase; but EHNB is a Tablet of Union you can put in your pocket.

—LON MILO DUQUETTE

I have purposefully placed this brief overview of practical Enochian vision magick after the chronology of Dee and Kelley's great Enochian adventure. I do so because Enochian vision magick as it is generally practiced today is a system that depends heavily on innovations that were developed long after the great magicians passed into history. Not that I think that modern Enochian magick is an affront to the memories of these two giants of magick. But I do think it is important for us to know the difference between the foundational material and the structures that have later been built upon it.

I think it is also important to remember that there is nothing particularly sacrosanct about the methods and techniques developed by the Golden Dawn, Crowley, or any other latter-day magicians. As an informed and competent magician, you are just as free as these individuals were and are to develop your own Enochian magick art form based and structured on your personal interpretation and understanding of Dee and Kelley's experiences and material. After all, in order for you to justly claim the title of magician you must be a magician, not merely a one-man or one-woman Society for Creative Anachronism dedicated to simply recreating the lives and works of real magicians of the past.

Enochian vision magick as practiced today can be divided into two broad categories: elemental and aethyric. Both require the ability to scry and to keep a faithful written record of one's workings. Scrying the Aethyrs has, in my later years, become the focus of most of my Enochian operations, because that process deals most directly with the current state of my personal initiatory career—by that I mean my personal transformational process, my spiritual journey, the lifting of my consciousness.

However, it has not always been so. Indeed, I would never encourage any magician, especially in the early stages of his or her Enochian career, to neglect either branch of Enochian exploration. I spent many years honing my visionary skills by exploring the elemental worlds that not only make up my physical, mental, and emotional environment but also actually represent everything that my limited senses tell me is me.

It is the elemental branch of Enochian vision magick that I will first discuss. To help me do this, I'm going to talk briefly about the structure of another great magical tool, the tarot.

Rulership of the Tablet of Union

The classic tarot image of the Magician shows the magician standing behind a table, upon which are four magical tools; a wand, a cup, a sword, and a disk. These are the four elemental weapons of the magician. They represent respectively the four suits of the tarot and the elements Fire, Water, Air, and Earth.

The master card of each suit is the ace. The ace is the “Spirit” of the suit—the “Spirit” of the element. The other cards in the suit are given life by the spirit of the ace. They are essentially subdivisions, components, and aspects of the ace—they all “live” inside the ace.

If we put an ace under a magick microscope, we would first see that it is composed of four major components.¹⁰⁹ These are the four court cards (commonly titled king, queen, prince, and princess) that represent respectively the elements Fire, Water, Air, and Earth. For example, if we put the Ace of Wands (Fire) under our magick microscope, we would see that it was composed of the King of Wands (the fiery aspect of Fire), the Queen of Wands (the watery aspect of Fire), the Prince of Wands (the airy aspect of Fire), and the Princess of Wands (the earthy aspect of Fire).

In the Enochian model, we can actually see Spirit's influence interpenetrating the heart and every quadrant of the Elemental Tablet in the form of the Great Central Cross and the Calvary crosses of the subangles. The Black Cross of the Great Table reveals Spirit's influence on an even larger scale. It literally holds together and separates the four Elemental Tablets. The Black Cross is like the ace of aces. All this is expressed most simply and elegantly in the Tablet of Union.

I draw your attention to figure 85 and the four rows of names in the Tablet of Union.

		H	C	O	M	A
		N	A	N	T	A
		B	I	T	O	M

Recall that Exarp, Hcoma, Nanta, and Bitom are the four names found in pairs on the Black Cross of the Great Table. In modern Enochian magick, these Black Cross letters represent the element Spirit. The four names on the Tablet of Union are not merely the master keys to the elemental universe—they are the elemental universe.

Starting with the top row, we see that EXARP is the elemental world of Air; HCOMA the world of Water; NANTA, Earth; and BITOM, Fire.¹¹⁰ (Note the little symbols of the elements to the left of each row of names.)

Now let's look at the five columns of the Tablet of Union. The left-most column is made from the four first letters of the names, giving us the name EHNB. At the top of this column is a little circle with spokes inside. This is the symbol of Spirit. It tells us that EHNB is the column of Spirit and the essence of the entire tablet.

Obviously, the angelic entity described by the letters EHNB is profoundly powerful. It is a name that represents and contains within itself the entire Great Table and all the angelic forces within it. E represents the entire the Elemental Tablet of Air, H the Elemental Tablet of Water, N the Elemental Tablet of Earth, and B the Elemental Tablet of Fire.

In a real sense, the remaining sixteen letters all live inside EHNB in just the same way the sixteen court cards of the tarot live inside their aces. Put E under a microscope and see the letters XARP. Put H under a microscope and see COMA. Put N under a microscope and see ANTA. Put B under a microscope and see ITOM.

As we move right, the next column is XCAI, whose letters represent the four Air subangles of the four Elemental Tablets and all the resident angels inside the Air subangles. (XCAI would be the four princes of the tarot.)

AONT does the same for the Water subangles (queens of the tarot), RMTO for the Earth subangles (princesses of the tarot), and PAAM for the Fire subangles (kings of the tarot).

Now are you starting to see the power resident in the Tablet of Union? If we were to call EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA, and BITOM archangels of the elements, then we would have to say that EHNB is the archangel of archangels of the elements. The Tablet of Union is a Great Table you can put in your briefcase, but EHNB is a Tablet of Union you can put in your pocket.

The Tablet of Union and the four Elemental Tablets are activated and penetrated in vision by intoning one or two of the first eighteen calls in the angelic tongue. I give details showing how this is done in appendix II, but here is a brief overview:

The first two calls are dedicated to the Tablet of Union exclusively and are never used to call or visit the angels of the Elemental Tablets.

The next four calls (three through six) deal with the angels of the individual letters of EXARP, HCOMA, NANTA, and BITOM, and/or are used to activate and penetrate the native subangles of the Elemental Tablets. (A native subangle is the subangle of an Elemental Tablet that represents the same element as the Elemental Tablet—e.g., the Air Subangle of the Air Tablet, the Water Subangle of the Water Tablet.)

The next twelve calls (seven through eighteen) are used to activate and penetrate the remaining three subangles of the Elemental Tablets. How these calls are allotted to the various subangles is an exercise in routine hermetic logic.

As I mentioned earlier, it is not necessary for you to have elaborate or expensive models of the Elemental Tablets and the Tablet of Union in order to perform Enochian magick. But it is important that you have a good understanding of them and have the equipment “installed” in your mind. When I work with the angels of the Elemental Tablets or the Tablet of Union, I simply have my four colored Elemental Tablets (positioned as they appear in the reformed Great Table) on a table before me and place my small Tablet of Union on the top of them in the center.

Now on to the business of actually doing Enochian vision magick.

CHAPTER TWENTY-SEVEN

Elemental Workings, Temple Openings, and Addressing the Hierarchies

Sylphs and Gnomes and Undines too,

Salamanders beckon you ...

—“THEME FROM MOUNT OREAD”111

Why on earth would anyone wish to call upon an angel of the elements? What can a salamander (Fire elemental) do for me? When does an undine (Water elemental) come in handy? Does a sylph (Air elemental) really look like Tinkerbell? Are gnomes (Earth elementals) really grumpy? Is exploration of the elements a necessary prerequisite to higher magical workings?

As I wrote in the prologue, the question of, “why magick?” is one that is not easily answered. The supreme goal of the magician is spiritual enlightenment and liberation of the soul. Do I expect to accomplish that end through the aid of elemental spirits?

Not directly. But the elementals are a part of my world, a part of my being. They move within me and around me. They dwell among themselves in their infinite number, ratios, and proportions. “Know Thyself” was chiseled above the doors of the ancient temples of initiation. How can I know myself when the mysteries of the elements of my own heart and soul remain undiscovered?

Enochian elemental magick is not a matter of calling up a spirit to command it to do a job for you, to cause the girl next door to fall in love with you, to bewitch your neighbor's cow, or to kill an enemy at a distance. Instead, when you visit an Enochian elemental angel in vision, you are exploring a specific aspect of creation, a highly specialized area of which the angel is the visual and metaphoric embodiment. You see things the way they are in that narrow quadrant of the universe. Once armed with the insights these spiritual specialists can provide, you are better prepared to know how to go about causing the girl next door to fall in love with you or bewitching your neighbor's cow. (I understand that killing at a distance is less satisfying than one might imagine.)

Does this really help the magician? First and most obviously, it broadens his or her understanding of how the spirit world is the subjective and underlying reality of the objective world. Just as the educated and seasoned traveler is better equipped than the novice to understand rewards and pitfalls of world travel, a magician experienced with elemental work is endowed with a greater understanding of existence. That in and of itself is a spiritual reward.

But more than that, each willed encounter with the angels of the elements activates, readjusts, and rebalances the magician's own internal elemental components. Like the computer user who periodically defragments the hard drive of his or her computer in order to make things to run more efficiently, the magician is changed and (hopefully) improved with every thoughtful and seriously examined elemental encounter.

At our Monday night magick class, we've developed a series of simple questions we first ask every angel we call from an Elemental Tablet. Just as we would not expect any two computer hard drives to be fragmented in exactly the same way, no two magicians should expect the exact same answers to these questions. Here are a few of them. The first questions are the simplest yet most important:

- What is your name? (Confirm you have who you've called.)
- What is your nature?

The next questions deal with how the angel is perceived by the human senses:

- What is your color?
- What is your sound (musical note, if possible)?
- How do you feel to the human touch?
- What do you taste like?
- How do you smell?

The next questions deal with how the angel makes itself known to us through our thoughts and emotions:

- How do I express you through emotions?

- In what form of images and ideas are you most revealed to me?
- When are you most manifest in my daily life?

Other questions could concern things more specific to one's own personal magical issues, but I think you get the picture.

Now that we know a little more about why to practice Enochian elemental magick, let's look at how to do it. It is likely that my opinion on this subject will be slightly at odds with a number of practicing Enochian magicians. It is even more certain to receive condemnation by legions of others who don't actually perform Enochian magick but instead enjoy speculating how Enochian magicians should operate.

Dee and Kelley contacted the angels by praying. Boy, did they pray! There is nothing in the surviving records that suggests that they performed banishing rituals, drew pentagrams or hexagrams in the air, made knocks or magical gestures, or called upon the strings of classic qabalistic Hebrew divine names from the sephiroth of the Tree of Life. The operating procedures of the Golden Dawn and Crowley, however, do all those things and more.

Here is an example of a Golden Dawn–style temple opening appropriate for working with the Elemental Table of Earth. It is a ceremony that incorporates ritual components from the GD's neophyte degree, the grade that represents Malkuth, the tenth and lowest sephirah on the Tree of Life. As you can see, the ritual invokes the qabalistic hierarchy of divine names, archangels, and angels traditionally attributed to Malkuth and the element Earth.

The Opening of the Temple in the Grade of 1° = 10□

Give the Sign of the God SET fighting.

Purify with Fire and Water, and announce

“The Temple is cleansed. ”

Knock.

“Let us adore the Lord and King of Earth! Adonai ha Aretz, Adonai Melehk, unto Thee be the Kingdom, the Sceptre, and the Splendour: Malkuth, Geburah, Gedulah, The Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley, Amen!”

Sprinkle Salt before Earth tablet.

“Let the Earth adore Adonai!”

Make the Invoking Hexagram of Saturn.

Make the Invoking Pentagram of Spirit Passive and pronounce ...

“AHIH AGLA NANTA”

Make the Invoking Pentagram of Earth, and pronounce ...

“ADNI MLK.” And Elohim said: “Let us make Man in Our own image; and let them have dominion over the Fish of the Sea and over the Fowl of the Air; and over every creeping thing that creepeth upon the Earth. And the Elohim created ATh-h-ADAM: in the image of the Elohim created They them; male and female created They them. In the Name of ADNI MLK, and of the Bride and Queen of the Kingdom; Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!”

Make the Sign of Taurus.

“In the Name of Auriel, great archangel of Earth, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!”

Make the Cross.

“In the Names and Letters of the Great Northern Quadrangle, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!”

Sprinkle water before Earth Tablet.

“In the three great secret Names of God, MOR, DIAL, HCTGA, that are borne upon the Banners of the North, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator!”

Cense the Tablet.

“In the name of ICZHIHA, great king of the North, Spirits of Earth, adore your Creator! In the Name of Adonai Ha-Aretz, I declare that the Spirits of Earth have been duly invoked.”

Knock. 4444—333—22—1

For many modern Enochian magicians, rituals such as this qabalistically formatted degree opening ceremony are perfect vehicles for establishing the proper elemental environment in which to operate. For years they were an indispensable part of my operating procedure as well. I discontinued, however, about ten years ago.

As we myopically focus on the fascinating intricacies of different magical systems, we often forget the big picture and the fact that we have only one universe to play with. There is no such thing as a separate qabalistic magick universe, or a separate Solomonian magick universe, or a separate Enochian magick universe. These various systems simply oblige us to view the same universe from different angles. Granted, when we look from differing points of view, we see certain similarities. After all, it's the same universe. There are certain to be recognizable landmarks. But we can't expect the structure of one system's point of view to neatly match or define the other.

It is my opinion that the spiritual forces inherent in Enochian magick are expressed units of living consciousness that reflect a uniquely structured and organized point of view of the universe—one that the communicating angels obliged Dee and Kelley to build from scratch. It is a perfect, self-referential system of looking at things that cannot be expected to be consistently compatible with other self-referential systems.

With all due respect to the knowledgeable and eloquent magicians who created the above temple opening, I believe that (unless your sensitivities as a magical artist demands it) most of it is completely unnecessary in order for you to properly activate an Elemental Tablet and effectively address the hierarchy of angels who rule the angel you may wish to contact. The use of the various pentagrams and the hexagram, the assumption of a Samo-Thracian elemental god-form, the invocation of the various names of the Hebrew deity and traditional angels, and the recitation of Bible verses are all tried-and-true magical methods to access the elemental world of Earth, but they are tools used in another kind of magical system—a system that views the magical universe from a slightly different angle, music played using a different scale of notes.

Please don't misunderstand me. Qabalistic temple openings such as the one above work effectively enough for Enochian elemental operations. But what makes them work, in my opinion, is not the pentagrams, Hebrew god names, or Bible verses. They work because, nestled within the ramblings and tossing about of salt and water, the magician is required to recognize and address by name the spiritual forces of the elements as they are uniquely organized and expressed in the Enochian magick system. In our example above, those names are Nanta (the great angel of Earth from the Tablet of Union), Mor, Dial, Hctga (the Three Great Secret Names of God from the Elemental Tablet of Earth), and Iczhiha (the king of the Elemental Tablet of Earth). The hierarchy of high elemental forces that the other magical system calls Adonai ha Aretz, Adonai Melehk, Malkuth, the Rose of Sharon, and the Lily of the Valley—everything the other system calls forth by means of pentagrams, gestures, and Bible verses—are all wrapped up and neatly addressed in the Enochian system in the names Nanta, Mor, Dial, Hctga, and Iczhiha.

If you conclude that my thoughts on this subject have some merit, I encourage you to customize for yourself a simply formatted little speech that addresses by name and in proper order the various angelic personages of the hierarchies of each Elemental Tablet. I will outline my address to the hierarchies at the end of this chapter. But first, let's discuss what the proper procedure for an elemental working might be.

DuQuette's Protocol for Enochian Elemental Vision Magick

The lower the angel you wish to contact is in the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet, the more superior angels there are above it who must be named and addressed. Therefore, for our example I will use Adre, a lowly servient angel found under the arms of the Calvary cross of the Fire Subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Fire. (See chapter twenty-three, figures 71 through 79.)

I. Preliminaries

Before embarking on any formal magical operation it is helpful, indeed necessary, to feel good about oneself. Therefore, I always recommend that the magician first bathe, dress in clean clothing, and operate in a clean and uncluttered space. It is also wise to formally purify and banish the area before operating. These preliminary ceremonies can be as simple or as elaborate as you feel necessary. I always begin with a simple Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram that I've customized to reflect my own taste and spiritual proclivity. A classic version of the pentagram ritual can be found at the beginning of appendix I.

I next perform the Ceremony of Preparation that is outlined in chapter one and appendix I of this book. I consider this ritual an Enochian magick temple opening par excellence. I believe it serves to purify, banish, and consecrate both the temple and the magician in a manner that is in harmony with the universe as perceived by the Enochian angels. It also establishes and sanctifies the magical environment for the black mirror or scrying stone.

II. The Call(s)

A complete list of the angels of all four Elemental Tablets, together with their traditional duties, can be found in appendix IV.

In order to contact any angel from an Elemental Tablet, one need first activate the tablet by intoning the proper call or calls in the Enochian tongue. The calls and the key to their use can be found in appendix II.

Only one call is necessary if your target angel resides in the Great Central Cross (one of the Three Great Secret Names of God, a senior, or a king). Also, only one call is necessary if your target angel resides in the native subangle of the Elemental Tablet (e.g., the Fire Subangle of the Fire Tablet, the Water Subangle of the Water Tablet, etc.). But if your target angel resides in a non-native subangle (e.g., the Earth Subangle of the Water Tablet, the Air Subangle of the Fire Tablet, etc.), you must also recite an additional call assigned specifically to the subangle.

Our target angel, Adre, resides in the native subangle (Fire Subangle of the Fire Tablet), so we need only recite the sixth call (see appendix II).

Reciting the sixth call switches on the power of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, as it were, and puts it in standby mode to await more specific actions from the magician.

III. Addressing the Hierarchy

Whether you feel it or not,¹¹² your recitation of the sixth call has put you in an altered state of consciousness. Magically speaking, you are now present within the environment of the Element Tablet of Fire. You have awakened the spiritual forces of the tablet, and they are waiting to see if you are worthy of their attention. If you can convince the spirits of the tablet that you know where you are and how you got there, they will acknowledge you as a natural citizen of their well-ordered magical universe. Once you've established rapport with its superiors, the target angel will have no choice but to be compliant and ready to open its mysteries to you.

You prove your worthiness by remembering your manners and addressing by name the angels who reign over your target angel. In the case of a servient angel like Adre, the hierarchy is essentially the whole cast of characters. Starting from the top we have:

1. The Supreme Name of Fire from the Tablet of Union: Bitom.
2. The Three Great Secret Names of God of the Elemental Tablet of Fire: Oip, Teaa, Pdoce.
3. The name of the king of the Elemental Tablet of Fire: Edlprna.
4. The names of the six planetary seniors of the Elemental Tablet of Fire: Aaetpio, Adoeoet, Alndvod, Aapdoce, Arinna, and Anodoin.
5. The first god name of the Fire subangle: Rzionr.
6. The second god name of the Fire subangle: Nrzfm.
7. And finally, the name of our target servient angel: Adre.

If the target angel is higher on the hierarchical ladder, there are fewer names to include in your little speech. For example, to call a senior, you only need to use the names in steps 1, 2, and 3 before calling on the name of the target senior. If your target angel is the king of the Elemental Tablet, you only have to use the names in steps 1 and 2.¹¹³

And what about the kerubic angels who, as we learned earlier, have a separate hierarchy that skips the god names of the subangle?

In the case of the Fire subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Fire, simply replace the name in step 5 with the name of the god Kerub (Pziza) and replace the name in step 6 with the name of the Kerub (ZiZa, iZaZ, ZaZi, or aZiZ).

IV. Calling Your Target Angel

Repeat out loud the name of the target angel, Adre, several times. State why you have called it; ask your questions and/or make your requests, then sit quietly and scry. If necessary, repeat the call to induce a deeper state of mind. If you wish, have a tape recorder running and describe your vision as it unfolds. Don't tire yourself. Conclude your visionary business at the first signs of fatigue. Thank the angel and formally close the session with a banishing ritual of your choice.

V. Write It All Down

Immediately transcribe everything into your magical journal. I mean everything: the date and time, weather conditions, astrological aspects (if you know them and care about such things). Even if you think there is nothing to report, write that down, along with your thoughts of why things might not have worked.

Sample of a Hierarchical Invocation

The invocation below is what I currently use to acknowledge and invoke the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet. I will provide the English translation of it first so you will know what it is saying. You may easily customize your own by referring to an Enochian dictionary.^{114}

With the Elemental Tablet before me, I utter each angel's name and I wave my wand over the squares that spell it.

I invoke and move thee, O thou, Spirit (name of target angel).

And being exalted above you in the power of the Most High, I say unto you come forth and obey!

In the name of (Supreme Name from the Tablet of Union; e.g., Exarp, Hcoma, Nanta, or Bitom); and in the name of (the Three Great Secret Names of God of the Elemental Tablet), and in the name of (the name of the king of the Elemental Tablet), and in the name of (the names of the six seniors of the Elemental Tablet),

and in the name of ...,

and in the name of...

and in the name of ... (as many names in hierarchy as necessary),

I invoke and move thee, O thou Spirit (name of target angel).

Here is the same invocation in the Enochian angelic language:

Ol vinu od zacam, Ils gah (name of target angel).

Od lansh vors gi Iad, gohus pugo ils niiso od darbs!

Dooiap (Supreme Name from the Tablet of Union), od dooiap (the Three Great Secret Names of God), od dooiap (the name of the king),

od dooiap (the names of the six seniors),

od dooiap ...,

od dooiap ...,

od dooiap ... (as many names in hierarchy as necessary),
Ol vinu od zacam, Ils gah (name of target angel).

CHAPTER TWENTY-EIGHT

Aethyric Workings

Everything in heaven and earth is connected to everything in heaven and earth.

Everything in heaven and earth is the reflection of everything in heaven and earth.

Everything in heaven and earth contains the pattern of everything in heaven and earth.

Look hard enough at anything and you will eventually see everything.

—RABBI LAMED BEN CLIFFORD¹¹⁵

In order to more easily understand what follows, I ask that you turn back to chapter eighteen and refer to the columns in figure 63.

Right up until the last day of the Enochian period, Dee and Kelley believed that the thirty Aires (column I) were simply the numbered segments of creation that organized in groups of three¹¹⁶ the ninety-one parts of the earth. Furthermore, they believed that the ninety-one divinely appointed names of the parts of the earth (column IV) were merely the angelic language names for the geographic areas of the earth named in column III. But in his final communication of July 13, 1584, the angel Ilemese revealed that the thirty Aires had names and a certain connection with the nineteenth call. As we saw in chapter twenty-five, this concept appeared to confuse and irritate Dee, who seemed comfortable with merely identifying the Aires by their sequence number.

Even though there is very little in the surviving material to suggest the thirty Aires are anything other than containers for the parts of the Earth, many modern magicians believe they carry a more profound significance. Indeed, it appears to me that this is an excellent example of modern magicians picking up the football where Dee and Kelley dropped it and running with it for a very big touchdown. The basic idea is this.

In keeping with the most fundamental hermetic and qabalistic axiom, “As above, so below,” the microcosmic world (the physical universe and humanity) is the reflection of a heavenly macrocosmic world of divine consciousness. So too, the thirty Aires containing the ninety-one parts of the earth are the microcosmic reflection of thirty Aethyrs, or heavens, that surround and enclose the four Watchtowers of the Great Table in thirty heavenly spheres, like layers of a glass onion.

Like the ten sephiroth and the twenty-two paths on the Tree of Life, the thirty Aethyrs can be viewed as emanations of divine consciousness. The thirtieth or lowest Aethyr would represent a level of divine consciousness that is so low that it has almost descended into matter. The first or highest Aethyr would represent the pure and undifferentiated mind of Deity.

Using this model, the ninety-one parts of the earth (column IV of figure 63) have their counterparts in the Aethyrs, and the divine names of the parts of the earth (e.g., Pascomb for Syria) also serve as the names of angelic governors, who, in groups of three, inhabit the thirty Aethyrs. The only exception to this is the thirtieth Aethyr, Tex, which has four governors.

There is a great temptation among modern practitioners to project this thirty-Aethyr model upon classic schema of the qabalistic Tree of Life with its ten sephiroth and twenty-two paths that also represent levels of consciousness. Some magicians go so far as to suggest the thirty Aethyrs can simply be divided by three into ten units and superimposed upon the ten sephiroth of the Tree. I wish I could believe things were as simple as that, but, as I wrote in the previous chapter, the classic qabalistic and Enochian models oblige us to view the same universe from different angles.

Aleister Crowley gave perhaps the most comprehensible way of viewing the relationship of the thirty Aethyrs and the Tree of Life:

It is to be remarked that the last three æthyrs have ten angels attributed to them, and they therefore represent the ten Sephiroth. Yet these ten form but one, a Malkuth-pendant to the next three, and so on, each set being, as it were, absorbed in the higher. The last set consists, therefore, of the first three æthyrs with the remaining twenty-seven as their Malkuth.^{117}

The angels Crowley is referring to are the governors of the Aethyrs. Because Tex contains four governors instead of three, Crowley considered the last three Aethyrs (Tex, Rii, and Bag) as a set containing ten governors who could be projected on a Tree of Life (see figure 86).

Figure 86: The first (lowest) set of governors (of the thirtieth, twenty-ninth, and twenty-eight Aethyrs) projected on a single Tree of Life

He then posited that this entire Tree of Life becomes the Malkuth (the tenth and lowest sephirah) of a higher Tree of Life made up of the nine governors of the next three Aethyrs (Zaa, Des, and Vti), which, in turn, become the Malkuth of the next three Aethyrs, and so on all the way to the top.

Figure 87: The last (heghest) set of governors (of the first, second, and third Aethyrs) with the remaining twenty-seven Aethyrs and their governors encapsulated in a master Malkuth

You may or may not resonate with Crowley's view on this subject. Still, it is not unreasonable to compare the thirty Aethyrs to the sephiroth of the Tree of Life, especially when we understand both of them to be levels of personal initiation. This is precisely how Aleister Crowley viewed them. His systematic scrying of the Aethyrs as he walked across the North African Sahara in 1909 are chronicled in his visionary masterwork, The Vision & the Voice, a text I believe should be studied by anyone interested in Enochian aethyric vision work.

While I certainly am not yet ready to compare my aethyric adventures with those of Crowley's, I have on multiple occasions engaged in a systematic exploration of the Aethyrs. I have, on a number of occasions, scryed each Aethyr, starting with number thirty, Tex, and worked my way to number one, Lil. Even my Monday night magick class is obliged to now and again undergo thirty weeks of scrying the Aethyrs.

Am I suggesting that we all actually achieve the sublime levels of consciousness represented by the higher Aethyrs? Of course I am not. But most of us receive provocative and highly personal visions, especially in the lower Aethyrs. That is because the lower Aethyrs represent levels of consciousness that we visit all the time in the natural course of daily life—in dreams, reveries, ecstasies, even deliriums. Even as I write these words, I am probably dipping into the lower Aethyrs as my memory and imagination conjure images that help me crystallize ideas I can put into words on the page. (I probably spent my entire senior year of high school staring into space and cruising in the lower Aethyrs!)

As the magician moves upwards through the Aethyrs, he or she progressively breaks into higher and higher levels of consciousness. If we are prepared for this new territory, our visions are characterized by a certain spontaneity and lucidity. However, when we begin to get out of our depth—when we haven't yet achieved the level of consciousness necessary to take the next step—our visions become murky and forced, as if we were watching it through a glass darkly. When this happens, the vision is usually characterized by a clear message announcing in no uncertain terms that we have not completely penetrated the Aethyr.

But that is not a bad thing. In fact, it is exactly what we want to happen, because we then know where we are on the initiatory ladder. Moreover, we have a chance of knowing what it is we need to do (or, more accurately, we will know who we need to become) to take the next step in our initiatory career. Allow me to illustrate with a hypothetical example.

Let's say you've resolved to systematically scry all thirty Aethyrs, one per night, from thirty to one, over a one-month period. Each night after your scrying session, you dutifully record in your journal the details of your vision. Everything is going along nicely until you attempt to penetrate in vision the fifteenth Aethyr, Oxo. You recite the nineteenth call in the proper manner and call for the three governors of Oxo (Tahando, Nociabi, and Tastoxo; see figure 63 column IV).

As the vision begins, three angels appear in the mirror, crystal, or your mind's eye, and march in a circle around you so that you cannot move in any direction. They will not respond to your questions or vouchsafe a proper vision. When something like this happens, you know that your present level of consciousness (your personal initiatory grade) is not refined enough to penetrate, let alone appreciate, the next Aethyr. It's as though you are a radio receiver not yet equipped to pull in higher broadcast frequencies.

In order for you to do so, you will need to upgrade your equipment by raising your level of consciousness.

You will need to undergo an initiatory experience that will turn you into a more refined visionary traveler. And, as in all initiations, there is an obstacle that needs to be overcome. This obstacle can be anything from a psychological issue to a personal demon or character flaw. In order to conquer it, you might need just a tiny illumination concerning life, or a magical shift of focus, or to successfully achieve a more profound meditative state or trance.

You won't need to look far to discover what this obstacle is. It should be right there in your magical diary, in the record of the last Aethyr you could successfully penetrate. Somewhere in that vision there is a message telling you what it is you must do in order to take the next step in your spiritual journey through the heavens. It is sublimely simple and personal. It makes Enochian aethyric magick, in my opinion, a far more effective and user-friendly method of magical self-transformation than guided meditations or qabalistic pathworkings.

The method I use is straightforward. After performing a banishing and the Ceremony of Preparation, I simply recite the nineteenth call using the name of the particular Aethyr I wish to visit. Then I repeat the names of the three governors of the Aethyr until the vision begins.

The vision is usually characterized by the appearance of one or more of the governors, who stand ready to answer my inquiries and demonstrate the nature of the Aethyr. As in elemental workings, I try not to tire myself, and afterward make a detailed record of my experiences in my diary.

A complete list of the governors is found in chapter eighteen, in column IV of the table designated figure 63, and in appendix II, figure 90.

Epilogue

In the Middle of the Night

Isn't it enough to see that a garden is beautiful without having to believe that there are fairies at the bottom of it too?

—DOUGLAS ADAMS

It's 3:15 a.m. For the last few days, I have arranged to sleep through the afternoon heat of an unseasonably hot late summer so that I may write undisturbed in the cool peace and quiet of the wee hours. This book of magick has taken me much longer to complete than I anticipated. Did I say “complete”? It's a well-worn cliché that a writer never finishes a work, but merely abandons it. I've finally come to the place where I'm ready to abandon this book. For as slim as it is, it might be hard for you to believe that it has dominated my life for nearly three years. My publisher expected it in their hands over a year ago, and for their patience I am profoundly grateful.

This is far from the end of the material, however. I've worked hard and long on the appendices, which for the practicing Enochian magician will likely become the most worn and dog-eared section of the book.

I must confess that my attitudes concerning Enochian magick have changed many times in the thirty years it has been part of my life. My respect for the magical art form, however, has never diminished and has continued to grow unabated. I feel like the musician who is moved to tears by listening to a great symphony, but who can play only a few tunes himself and those only moderately well.

Perhaps you will never choose to make Enochian magick a part of your spiritual repertoire. Perhaps you will. In either case, as I abandon this book, it is my sincerest hope that I have been able to help you in some small measure attune your magical ear to the music of the spheres.

Adieu.

Appendix I

The Ceremony of Preparation

The magician purifies and banishes the temple as he or she has skill to do so. Below is a standard version of the Lesser Banishing Ritual, a ceremony used by many modern magicians.

Touching the forehead, say, Ateh (“Unto Thee”).

Touching the breast, say, Malkuth (“the Kingdom”).

Touching the right shoulder, say, ve-Geburah (“and the Power”).

Touching the left shoulder, say, ve-Gedulah (“and the Glory”).

Clasping the hand upon the breast, say, le-OLAHM, AMEN (“to the Ages, Amen”).

Turning to the east, make the banishing pentagram (that of Earth) with the wand. Say, IHVH (“Ye-ho-wau”).

Turning to the south, again draw the pentagram but say, ADNI (“Adonai”).

Turning to the west, again draw the pentagram but say AHIIH (“Eheieh”).

Turning to the north, again draw the pentagram, but say AGLA (“Aglā”).

Extend the arms in the form of a cross say:

Before me Raphael,
Behind me Gabriel,
On my right hand, Michael,

*On my left hand, Auriel,
For about me flames the pentagram
And in the column stands the six-rayed star.*

Touching the forehead, say, Ateh (“Unto Thee”).

Touching the breast, say, Malkuth (“the Kingdom”).

Touching the right shoulder, say, ve-Geburah (“and the Power”).

Touching the left shoulder, say, ve-Gedulah (“and the Glory”).

Clasping the hand upon the breast, say, le-OLAHM, AMEN (“to the Ages, Amen”).

The Ceremony of Preparation

The Temple

The Holy Table is set in the middle of the room upon a carpet of red silk. Four small versions of the Sigillum Dei Aemeth rest under the table legs. In the center of the Holy Table rests the Sigillum Dei Aemeth surrounded by the seven Ensigns of Creation. All are covered and draped by a red silk cloth with gold tassels at the corners. The black mirror or scrying crystal is placed upon the covered Sigillum. The Ring and Lamén are at hand upon the covered table.

A chair is positioned before the table so that the face of the scryer may be reflected in the mirror. The chair must also rest upon the red silk carpet. When operating at night or in a dimly lit room, one or two candles can also be placed upon the covered Holy Table.

The Ceremony

After banishing, the magician sits down and prays:

Teach me (O creator of all things) to have correct knowledge and understanding, for your wisdom is all that I desire. Speak your word in my ear (O creator of all things) and set your wisdom in my heart. Amen.

The magician picks up the Ring and prays:

Behold the Ring. Lo, this it is. This is it, wherewith all miracles, and divine works and wonders were wrought by Solomon: this is it, which the Archangel Michael has revealed to me. This is it, which Philosophy dreameth of. This is it, which the Angels scarce know. This is it, and blessed be his name: yea, his Name be blessed forever. Without this I shall do nothing. Blessed be his name, that encompasses all things: Wonders are in him, and his name is WONDERFUL: PELE. His Name works wonders from generation to generation. Amen.

The magician picks up the Lamén and prays:

Behold the Lamén. As the Holy Table conciliates Heaven and Earth, let this Lamén which I place over my heart conciliate me to the Holy Table. Amen.

The magician recites seven complete rounds of the chant of the Holy Table's Perimeter Letters. If possible, the magician traces with the wand the covered letters he or she is chanting:

Pa Med Fam Med Drux Fam Fam Ur Ged Graph Drux Med
Graph Graph Med Med Or Med Gal Ged Ged Drux.

Pa Drux Un Tal Fam Don Ur Graph Don Or Gisg Gon Med
Un Ged Med Graph Van Ur Don Don Un.

Pa Drux Ur Ur Don Ur Drux Un Med Graph Graph Med Med
Graph Ceph Ged Ged Ur Mals Mals Fam Un.

Pa Gon Med Un Graph Fam Mals Tal Ur Pa Pa Drux Un Un
Van Un Med Un Gon Drux Drux Ur.

The magician chants seven rounds of the twelve letters of the Holy Table's central square:

Med Gon Gisg, Don Ur Van, Ur Don Ur, Med Med Graph.
Med Don Ur Med, Gon Ur Don Med, Gisg Van Ur Graph.

The magician chants one round of the names of the forty-nine angels upon the Sigillum Dei Aemeth:

Galas Gethog Thaoth Horlōn Innon Aaoth Galethog
Zaphkiel Zedekiel Cumael Raphael Haniel Michael Gabriel
E(l) Me Ese Iana Akele Azdobon Stimcul
I Ih Ilr Dmal Heeoā Beigia Stimcul
S Ab Ath Izad Ekiei Madimi Esemeli
E An Ave Liba Rocle Hagonel Ilemes
Sabathiel Zadkiel Madimiel Semieliel Nogahel Corabiel Lavanael

Finally, the magician quietly whispers the Holy Names of the Round Table of Nalvage. First the angel names of the corners:

luah lang sach urch

Then the god names of the four continents:

Iad moz zir—iad bab zna—iad sor gru—iad ser osf.

The magician then proceeds to the business at hand—calling an angel of an Elemental Tablet or scrying an Aethyr.

When the magician's work is done, he or she dismisses the spirit with thanks and prays:

Thy Name be mighty, O God, which canst open the veil whereby Thy All-Powerful Will may be opened unto men. Power, Glory, and Honor be unto Thee, For Thou art the same God of all things, and art life eternal. Amen.

Appendix II

The Enochian Calls (Keys)

The genuineness of these Keys, altogether apart from any critical observation, is guaranteed by the fact that anyone with the smallest capacity for Magick finds that they work.

—ALEISTER CROWLEY 118

Invocations?

Enochian magick as developed by the Golden Dawn and widely practiced today uses the first eighteen calls to activate the Elemental Tablets and contact the resident angels. However, in the hectic last days of the Enochian period, Dee was instructed in several places to write his own invocations. It remains unclear to me whether or not the angels were suggesting that additional “homemade” invocations were to be created as appendages to the calls. What is clear to me, after more than a quarter century of practical application, is the fact that the calls by themselves (with only the briefest of additional verbiage to awaken target angels and their hierarchy) serve admirably as the only invocations a magician needs.

Naturally, if it appeals to your magical sense of art to compose additional invocations to utter before and/or after the call, I encourage you to do so.

Pronunciation

You will probably be very surprised at how little time I spend on this subject. In fact, I am very tempted to simply paraphrase Rabbi Ben Clifford's heretical comment about the Hebrew language and tell you bluntly, "There is no such thing as correct Enochian pronunciation!" On a few occasions, the communicating angels gave Dee and Kelley suggestions as to how certain words are pronounced. But, by and large, we modern magicians are left to our own devices as to how to push these awkwardly constructed words out of our mouths.

Dee notated the words of the calls in columns. The left column contained the Enochian word in all uppercase letters—PIRIPSOL, for example. The right column contained the word in upper-and lowercase letters, which split the word into syllables and characterized certain letters as if to suggest pronunciation: Pe ríp sol. Sometimes the translation of the word appeared in a center column: "of the heavens."

The Golden Dawn and Crowley use a pronunciation method that they felt rolled more fluidly off the tongue. This method obliged the magician to insert a natural Hebrew vowel sound after every Enochian consonant. For example, the word butmon (meaning "mouth") would be pronounced, "but-a-mon-u." This is wonderful for words such as this one, giving it an almost Italian lilt. But things get a little crazy when it comes to the letter z, which the English currently pronounce as "zed" and in Dee and Kelley's day was pronounced "zod."

The angels did on occasion instruct Dee when and when not to use "zod," but its universal application to a language that uses the letter z very often becomes, in my opinion, laughably cumbersome. Using the Golden Dawn pronunciation method, the simple, one-syllable Enochian word zims ("clothing") becomes the unwieldy, four-syllable "zod-I-me-zod." You tell me which rolls off the tongue better.

The most obvious alternative to the GD pronunciation is simply sounding out the words as they are written (which appears to be what the angels generally wanted Dee and Kelley to do). For the last fifteen years, this is what I have done, and it is what I recommend to students who are learning Enochian magick. Before that, however, I used the GD/Crowley pronunciation method and was perfectly happy with it. In fact, I still use the Italian sounding method when I recite the first and second calls because I have them memorized and they hold a special place in my heart.

Both methods work just fine. In fact, any sincere effort on the part of the magician to sound out the words as they appear in the call works. Some of the best group scrying sessions I have experienced have followed the most horribly butchered recitations of the calls. It's as though the Enochian angels (like the French) appreciate any attempt on your part to speak their language. I often use the example of a mouse. If a mouse hopped up on your shoe and squeaked, you'd just shoo it away. But if it hopped up on your shoe and started to talk to you in your native tongue, you'd be impressed. You wouldn't even care if it spoke with a thick accent!

I have tried to present the calls below as close as possible to the original spelling, breaks, letter characterization, and punctuation. The English translation that follows each call is generally punctuated in the same way as the Enochian.

The Calls, the Tablet of Union, and the Elemental Tablets

According to the Golden Dawn, Crowley, and many modern Enochian magick practitioners, the first eighteen calls activate the Tablet of Union, the Elemental Tablets, and the hierarchy of angels resident in the tablets in a very specific (and demonstrably logical) manner. Although the Dee and Kelley source material does not support this arrangement, it has become the foundation of a remarkably workable system. This table is the key to their use.

CALL	ELEMENTAL TABLET	CALL USED FOR . . .
1	TABLET OF UNION	The first call is to be used first in all invocations of angels of the Tablet of Union. According to the Golden Dawn, it is never used for actions dealing with angels of the Elemental Tablets.
2	TABLET OF UNION	The second call is to be used second (after call 1) to invoke Angel EHNb of Tablet of Union. According to the Golden Dawn, it is never used with Elemental Tablets.
3	AIR	The third call can be used in one of three ways: 1. Used third (after calls 1 and 2) to invoke angels of EXARP of the Tablet of Union. 2. Used first for operations involving the Elemental Tablet of Air. 3. Used by itself for invocations of the Seniors from the Elemental Tablet of Air or for angels from the Air Subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Air.
4	WATER	The fourth call can be used in one of three ways: 1. Used third (after calls 1 and 2) to invoke angels of HCOMA of Tablet of Union. 2. Used first for operations involving the Elemental Tablet of Water. 3. Used by itself for invocations of the Seniors from the Elemental Tablet of Water or for angels from the Water subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Water.
5	EARTH	The fifth call can be used in one of three ways: 1. Used third (after calls 1 and 2) to invoke angels of NANTA of Tablet of Union. 2. Used first for operations involving the Elemental Tablet of Earth. 3. Used by itself for invocations of the Seniors from the Elemental Tablet of Earth or for angels from the Earth subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Earth.

18	FIRE	The eighteenth call is used after call 6 to call forth or visit the angels of the Earth subangle of the Elemental Tablet of Fire.

I reign over you, sayeth the God of Justice, in power exalted above the firmaments of wrath: in whose hands the Sun is as a sword and the Moon as a through-thrusting fire which measureth your garments in the midst of my vestures, and trussed you together as the palms of my hands: Whose seats I garnished with the fire of gathering and (which) beautified your garments with admiration: to whom I made a law to govern the holy ones and delivered you a rod with the ark of knowledge. Moreover you lifted up your voices and swear obedience and faith to him that liveth and triumpheth whose beginning is not, nor end can not be, which shineth as a flame in the midst of your palace and reignneth amongst you as the balance of righteousness and truth. Move, therefore, and show yourselves: open the Mysteries of your Creation: Be friendly unto me: for I am the servant of the same your God, the true worshipper of the Highest.

In the first I made you Stewards and placed you in seats 12 of government, giving unto every one of you power successively over 456, the true ages of time, to the intent that from your highest vessels and the corners of your governments you might work my power: powering down the fires of life and increase continually on the earth. Thus you are become the skirts of Justice and Truth. In the Name of the same your God, lift up, I say, your selves. Behold his mercies flourish and Name is become mighty amongst us. The Call of the Thirty Aethyrs

The nineteenth call is used to open each of the thirty Aethyrs. Only the name of the Aethyr itself (the third word in the first sentence) is changed.

Each Aethyr (with the exception of the thirtieth) is inhabited by three governors, who could be considered personifications of the nature of the Aethyr. I believe that after you recite the call and before you settle down to scry, it is important to pronounce, vibrate, or otherwise incorporate the names of the governors in a brief invocation.

The names of the Aethyrs and their governors are listed in figure 90. If you wish to incorporate the sigils of the governors (the symmetrical characters) for visualizations or to create talismans, the sigils can be found in chapter eighteen, in column VI of figure 63.

O you heavens which dwell in the First Ayre are mighty in the parts of the Earth, and execute the Judgment of the Highest, to you it is said, Behold the face of your God, the beginning of comfort, whose eyes are the brightness of the heavens, which provided you for the government of the Earth and her unspeakable variety, furnishing you with a power of understanding to dispose all things according to the providence of Him that sitteth on the Holy Throne, and rose up in the beginning saying: the Earth let her be governed by her parts and let there be division in her, that the glory of her may be always drunken and vexed in it self. Her course, let it run with the heavens, and as a handmaid let her serve them. One season let it confound an other, and let there be no creature upon or within her the same, All her members let them differ in their qualities, and let there be no one creature equal with an other: the reasonable Creatures of the Earth let them vex and weed out one an other, and the dwelling places let them forget their names: the work of man, and his pomp, let them be defaced: his buildings let them become caves for the beasts of the field. Confound her understanding with darkness. For why? It repenteth me I made Man. One while let her be known and an other while a stranger: because she is the bed of a Harlot, and the dwelling place of Him that is Fallen. O you heavens arise: the lower heavens underneath you, let them serve you! Govern those that govern: cast down such as fall! Bring forth with those that increase, and destroy the rotten! No place let it remain in one number: add and diminish until the stars be numbered! Arise, Move, and Appear before the Covenant of his mouth, which he hath sworn unto us in his Justice. Open the Mysteries of your Creation: and make us partakers of Undefined Knowledge.

Appendix III

The Geographical Location of the Ninety-one Parts of the Earth Named by Man, as Detailed in JohnDee's *Liber Scientiae Auxilii Et Victoriae Terrestris*¹¹⁹

by Robin E. Cousins

Liber Scientiae Auxilii et Victoriae Terrestris, which forms part of Sloane Manuscript 3191, provides the details necessary to operate a system of magic, by which the magician can discover

‘how to compare ... [the] divisions of provinces according to the Divisions of the Stars, with the Ministry of the Ruling Intelligences, and Blessings of the Tribes of Israel, the Lots of the Apostles, and Typical Seals of the Sacred Scripture, [so that he] shall be able to obtain great and prophetic oracles, concerning every region, of things to come.’¹²⁰

On Wednesday 23 May 1584, while in Krakow, John Dee and Edward Kelley received from the Spirit Nalvage the names of ninety-one regions and provinces of the physical world, as defined by man. At this time America was no longer considered to be a group of islands; but Australia had yet to be discovered and the search for the North-West Passage had just commenced. The names of the ninety-one parts relate to the Ptolemaic ancient world of about AD 150 with some additions. The Spirit Nalvage explains:

‘Notwithstanding the Angel of the Lord appeared unto Ptolemie, and opened unto him the parts of the Earth: but some he was commanded to secret: and those are Northward under your Pole. But unto yon, the very true names of the World in her Creation are delivered.’¹²¹

The list is not altogether satisfactory. Dee, who was well-versed in geography, had not heard of some of the places and even Nalvage said, ‘Here are 15, which were never known in these times ... The rest are’. Many of the strange locations are indeed in the Polar Regions, which were uncharted at the time. In fact, a considerable Arctic land mass was believed to exist and was featured on sixteenth century maps. Nevertheless, locations for this region are desirable and there are many areas in the extreme north, whether land or sea, which can be covered by the descriptions. The belief of a south polar continent (Tolpam, Part 58) was not inaccurate, a location which can usefully extend to Australasia which was undiscovered at the time.

Two points emerge at the end of the communication relating to known lands not included in the list. Firstly, when Dee asks of 'Polonia, Moschovia, Dania, Hibernia (Ireland), Islandia, and so of many others', Nalvage replies: 'Polonia and Moscovia, are of Sarmatia (Russia); Denmark, Ireland, Frizeland, Iseland, are of Britain: And so it is of the rest.'¹²² Does this imply that Brytania (Part 61) can be used to gain access to lands not included within the ninety-one parts? Secondly, when Dee presses Nalvage as to which part governs 'Atlantis and the annexed places, under the King of Spain called the West Indies', Nalvage replies: 'When these 30 appear, they can each tell you what they own. Prepare for tomorrows Action'. The communication is, therefore, incomplete. Unfortunately, 'tomorrows Action' never occurred, because Kelley believed Nalvage to have taken the descriptions from books, including Agrippa's Occult Philosophy, and refused to communicate further. 'E. K. remained of his wilful intent', noted a frustrated Dee. However, Onigap (Part 34) may refer to these lands and there is the possibly implied use of Brytania, as described above. Note that Dee held that the term 'West Indies' was very misleading and preferred to use 'Atlantis' instead of 'America', as a name for the new lands. Nevertheless, the additional thirty parts wait to be realised, which would bring the total of the parts of the Earth to 121. It is interesting to speculate, whether they would affect the design of the Great Table.

Dee bought Gerhard Mercator's Universal Chart of the World and the geographical work of Pomponius Mela to help him with his locations. He does not record his success. Ultimately, the advice of Nalvage in relation to Chaldei (Part 42) and Chaldea (Part 72) is the only way to establish the locations of the obscure and ambiguously described parts of the world: 'You shall finde the difference of it, in practice'.

The Ninety-One Parts of the World

Many of the locations are well-known. However, for the obscurer areas Dee's Spiritual Diaries (Cotton Appendix XLVI, Parts 1 & 2, published as A True and Faithful Relation of What passed for many Yeers Between Dr. John Dee and Some Spirits, edited by Meric Casaubon, 1659) are often the only guide. In these instances, supportive quotations are given. Other parts, especially those located by Kelley or Nalvage in the Far Orient or in the Arctic regions, are difficult to place on the world map today, as in Dee's time these regions were largely unexplored and uncharted.

1 AEGYPTUS: Egypt.

2 SYRIA: Southern Syria.

3 MESOPOTAMIA: Land between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers in Northern Iraq and NorthEast Syria.

4 CAPPADOCIA: Extensive province of Central Turkey, stretching from the Black Sea in the north to Cilicia (Part 14) in the south. The original territory, Cappadocia Proper, occupied the southern areas.

5 TUSCIA: Tuscany or Etruria, a province in Central Italy including Florence.

6 PARVA ASIA: Asia Minor, Anatolia or Asiatic Turkey.

7 HYRCANIA: Area southeast of the Caspian Sea in Iran.

8 THRACIA: Thrace includes Eastern Greece, Turkey in Europe, and Southern Bulgaria.

9 GOSMAM: According to Kelley, 'Here appear great Hills, and veins of the Gold Mines appear: the men seem to have baskets of leather. This is one of the places under the Pole Artick.'

10 THEBAIDI: Thebes (Egypt) and surrounding area.

11 PARSADAL: Kelly, 'Here the sun shineth fair.' Most probably Pasargardae or Parsagarda ('the habitation of the Persians'), the ancient capital of Parsa/Persis/Persia Proper or the modern Iranian province of Fars (Part 74). Parsagarda is located about 60 miles northeast of Shiraz.

12 INDIA: Includes Indian provinces along the Indus River, roughly present-day Pakistan and India West of the Ganges (India Intra Ganges).

13 BACTRIANE: Bactriana covers Northern Afghanistan and the southeast of the Turkmenistan, the River Amu Darya (Oxus) forming the northern boundary. For lands to the north of the river, see Sogdiana (Part 26).

14 CILICIA: Coastal country bordering the Mediterranean in SouthEast Turkey.

15 OXIANA: Alexandria Oxiana, a town and its surrounding area on the Oxus River (Amu Darya) on the borders of Northern Afghanistan and Uzbekistan.

16 NUMIDIA: Eastern Algerian coastal district between Africa (Part 86) and Mauretania (Part 91).

17 CYPRUS: Cyprus.

18 PARTHIA: NorthEast Iran, to the south of Hyrcania (Part 7). The region has a common border with Turkmenistan.

19 GETULIA: The Western Sahara, south of Morocco, including Southern Algeria, Mali and the modern state of Mauritania.

20 ARABIA: Saudi Arabia.

21 PHALAGON: Dee: 'I have never heard of it.'

Kelley: 'It is toward the North, where the veins of Gold ... appear ... The men have things on their shoulders of beasts skins.'

Dee: 'Gronland as I think' (i.e. Greenland).

22 MANTIANA: This is Matiana or the Mattieni by Lacus Matianus, now Lake Urmia in North-Western Iran. The population is mainly Kurdish. Lake Van, approximately 200 miles west in Eastern Turkey, was once called Lake Mantiana.

23 SOXIA: Sacae/Sachia/Sakas approximates with Xinjiang Uyghur or Sinkiang Uighur region, North-West China. It is also known as Chinese Turkistan.

Kelley: 'People here appear of reddish colour.'

24 GALLIA: A 'greater' France with the Rhine forming the northern and eastern boundaries, thereby including Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Southern Netherlands.

25 ILLYRIA: At its greatest extent, Illyria included Central and Eastern Austria, Western Hungary or Transdanubia, the former Yugoslavia excluding Macedonia, Northern Bulgaria and Romania.

26 SOGDIANA: District between the rivers Amu Darya (Oxus) and Syr Darya (Jaxartes) including Uzbekistan, with the cities of Bokhara and Samarkand, and Western Tajikistan. Afghanistan is to the south, for which see Bactriana (Part 13).

27 LYDIA: Coastal region in Western Turkey.

28 CASPIS: Area to the south-west of the Caspian Sea in Iran.

29 GERMANIA: Includes modern Germany, Poland, the Czech Republic, Slovakia, and extends to the Italian border in the south, incorporating Switzerland and the Tyrol in Western Austria. In the north, Germania can include Denmark, Norway and Sweden, although Dee was told that Brytania (Part 61) could be used for Denmark, which at that time governed Norway as well.

30 TRENAM: Kelley: 'Here appear Monkies, great flocks. The people have leather Coats, and no beards, thick leather, and Garthers ... '

Nalvage: 'These people are not known to you?'

Dee: 'Are they not in Africa?'

Nalvage: 'They be.'

Probably Teniam, a region on Jodocus Hondius's World Map (1608) straddling the Ivory Coast/Upper Volta/Ghana borderlands.

31 BITHYNIA: Black Sea coastal region in the north of Turkey, west of Paphlagonia (Part 40), including Istanbul (Asian side).

32 GRAECIA: Nalvage: 'A great Citie, and the Sea hard by it.'

Dee: 'Is not that great Citie Constantinople?'

Nalvage: 'It is ...'

Graecia is thus Istanbul, not Greece; for which use Achaia (Part 37).

33 LICIA: Lycia is a country on the south coast of Turkey or Anatolia.

34 ONIGAP: Kelley: 'Here appear handsome men, in gathered tucked garments, and their shoes come up to the middle of their legs, of diverse coloured leather.'

Nalvage: 'These be beyond Hispaniola.'

Kelley: 'It is a low Countrey. Here appear great piles of Stones like St Andrews Crosses ... There are on this side of it (a great way) a great number of dead Carkases ...'

Nalvage: 'It is beyond Giapan.' (That is, beyond Japan across the Pacific to the Americas. Note that Onigap is an anagram of Giapon.)

Dee: 'Then it is that land, which I use to call Atlantis.'

Nalvage: 'They stretch more near the west.'

This can only be Mexico, particularly the Yucatan. Beyond Hispaniola (Haiti and Domenica) and west of 'Atlantis' or America is Central Mexico and the Yucatan, which is a lowlying peninsula. The people wore bright colours; the temples could resemble St Andrew's crosses; and, many people were slaughtered by the Spanish Conquistadores.

35 INDIA MAJOR: India Extra Gangem or India east of the Ganges, which includes all of SouthEast Asia.

36 ORCHENY: Nalvage: 'A great many little Isles.'

Dee: 'Do you mean the Isles of Orkney?'

Nalvage: 'No.'

Dee: 'They seem to be the Isles of Malacha.'

Dee is mistakenly thinking of the islands around Malaya (Malacha or Malacca) or even the Moluccas. The Orcheni were a people south of Chaldea (Part 72), living on or by islands in the marshlands of the lower Tigris and Euphrates.

37 ACHAIA: Southern Greece, including Athens and the Peloponnisos.

38 ARMENIA: Extensive region which, most comprehensively, stretches from the Euphrates in eastern Turkey to the Caspian Sea, thereby including Armenia and Azerbaijan.

39 CILICIA (NEMROD): Nalvage: 'You never knew this Cilicia. This is Cilicia where the Children of Nemrod dwell. It is up in the Mountains beyond Cathay.' Probably Calatia, a region in this location featured on Emery Molyneux's terrestrial globe of 1592. It equates with the extreme northeastern province of Russia by the Bering Straits, the Magadan Oblast. Cilicia in Turkey is Part 14.

40 PAPHLAGONIA: Black Sea coastal country in the north of Turkey.

41 PHASIANA: Mainly Kurdish region in Eastern Turkey, north of Lake Van, not to be confused with Phazania/Fezzan in Libya, for which see Garamantica (Part 45).

42 CHALDEI: The people of Chaldea (Part 72).

43 ITERGI: Nalvage: '... the people are yellow, tawney ... They are to the south of the last Cilicians.' This is possibly Mongolia, Manchuria (NorthEast China), and Korea. The name appears in this region on a terrestrial globe, dated 1492, of German geographer Martin Behaim (c.1459–1507).

44 MACEDONIA: Northern Greece and the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia.

45 GARAMANTICA: Garamantes, a large area in Inner Africa, covering the Eastern Sahara, including the south of Libya (Fezzan), extreme South-Eastern Algeria, Niger and Chad.

46 SAUROMATICA: Sarmatia or European Russia.

47 AETHIOPIA: Includes Ethiopia south of Egypt and also the entire unknown African continent south of the Equator, which was known as Ethiopia Interior in Dee's time. Unexplored parts of Africa north of the Equator were known as Libya Interior.

48 FIACIM: Kelley: 'Now he sheweth by the North Pole and the great Mountain.'

This is the North Pole. A great mountain was believed to exist at the Pole.

49 COLCHICA: Colchis roughly equates with the modern Republic of Georgia, located to the east of the Black Sea.

50 CIRENIACA: Cyrenaica, a Mediterranean coastal region of Eastern Libya.

51 NASAMONIA: III-defined northeastern Libyan coastal district by the Gulf of Sirte in the west of Cireniaca (Part 50).

52 CARTHAGO: Carthage, Tunisia.

53 COXLANT: Nalvage: 'It appeareth very Eastward.'

Kelley: 'It is on high ground. There come four Rivers out of it, one East, another West, another North, and another South ... Is this the Paradise that Adam was banished out of?'

Nalvage: 'The very same.'

A discussion follows which does not help to locate Coxlant. The search for the Earthly Paradise, like the Eldorado, was the dream of early explorers. The four rivers are the Pison (The Persian Gulf?), Gihon (The Nile?), Hiddekel (Tigris), and Euphrates. The favourite location of Paradise was considered to be a little north of the confluence of the Tigris and Euphrates. However, other locations favoured sites further north in Mesopotamia and Armenia. Tibet could be another location. It is very easterly; on high ground; and the four rivers are the Mekong (east), the Indus (west), the Yangtze (north), and the Brahmaputra (south). Ultimately, however, the location of Coxlant or the Earthly Paradise must rest with the spirituality of the individual.

54 IDUMEA: Also called Edom, this is Southern Israel and Jordan.

55 PARSTAVIA: Actually Bastarnia, approximately Bessarabia or Moldavia to the east of Romania.

56 CELTICA: Nalvage: 'It is that which you call Flandria, the Low Country.'

This is North-West France and Belgium, not Central Gaul which is usually known as Celtica.

57 VINSAN: Kelley: 'Here appear men with tallons like Lions. They be very devils. There are five isles of them.'

Suggest the ancient kingdom of Wu-Sun, south of Lake Balkhash in Kazakhstan. The 'isles' could be communities near the lake.

58 TOLPAM: Kelley: 'Under the South Pole.' This is Antarctica and Australasia.

59 CARCEDONIA: Carchedonia or modern Tunisia.

60 ITALIA: Italy, including the Istrian Peninsula in Croatia.

61 BRYTANIA: The British Isles, Scandinavia, and possibly places not included in the 91 parts.

62 PHENICES: Phoenicia, approximately the Lebanon and Northern Israel.

63 COMAGINEN: Commagene, a land-locked district in Southern Turkey, bounded on the east by the Euphrates and on the south by Syria. Cilicia (Part 14) is to the west.

64 APULIA: Province in southeast Italy between the Apennines and the Adriatic, bounded on the south by Calabria or the 'heel' of Italy.

65 MARMARICA: North African coastal region straddling the Egyptian and Libyan border. The Nile forms the eastern boundary.

66 CONCAVA SYRIA: Hollow Syria, usually known as Coele Syria, now forms Northern Syria.

67 GEBAL: Later Byblos, now Jubayl, about twenty miles north of Beirut, Lebanon.

68 ELAM: Also known as Susiana, it is approximately the same as the modern Iranian province of Khuzestan at the north of the Persian Gulf, bordering Iraq and including Abadan.

69 IDUNI: Nalvage: 'It is beyond Greenland.'

70 MEDIA: North-Western Iran, south of Caspis (Part 28) and Hyrcania (Part 7). Includes Teheran.

71 ARIANA: Eastern Iran, Pakistan west of the Indus, Southern Afghanistan.

72 CHALDEA: A tract of country in South Iraq running along the Euphrates from the Persian Gulf to Babylon (about 50 miles south of Bagdad). The Shamiya Desert forms the western boundary.

73 SERICIPOPULI: A people in Eastern Asia. Serica or Seres equates with China and the Far East.

74 PERSIA: Persis or Parsa, this is approximately the modern Iranian province of Fars. Located in South-West Iran and bounded on the west by the Persian Gulf, the province was the kernel of ancient Persia and includes the ancient cities of Parsagarda (Part 11) and Persepolis.

75 GONGATHA: Kelley: 'Towards the South Pole.'

This is Gongala, an area to the south of Libya Interior by the Equator. In the sixteenth century Kelley's description is apt, but today the region equates with South Sudan.

76 GORSIM: Kelley: 'Beares and Lions here.'

Most probably Chorazin/Korazim/Gorazim, an ancient site to the north of Lake Tiberias (Sea of Galilee), Israel, with the ruins of a black basalt synagogue. The place was condemned by Jesus and legend claims the Antichrist will be born there. Note also Chorasnia/Khorezm/Khiva, southeast of the Caspian Sea in Turkmenistan.

77 HISPANIA: Spain and Portugal.

78 PAMPILIA: Southern Turkish coastal land, between Lycia (Part 33) and Cilicia (Part 14), forming a narrow strip of land around the Bay of Antalya.

79 OACIDI: This is Oasitae ('... of the Oasis'), the oasis area west of the Nile, which includes the great oasis of the Oracle of Amon.

80 BABYLON or BABYLONIA: Region in Southern Iraq, extending north from the Persian Gulf between the Lower Tigris and the northeastern Arabian desert. Babylon, the capital, is about fifty miles south of Bagdad.

81 MEDIAN: Kelley: 'It is much Northward.'

Note, however, Midian—the land of the Midianites by Sinai; or, even the people of Media (Part 70).

82 IDUMIAN: Kelley: 'They are two Isles environed with an arm of the Scythian Sea, which goeth in at Maspi.'

Most probably the region to the northeast of the Aral Sea in the Kazakhstan. Suggest 'Maspi' is a corruption of the Aspisii Montes/Mons Aspisii, which shortened to M. Aspisii, distorts to Maspi. The mountains were supposedly located in this region, but in the sixteenth century much of this land and especially the far north of Siberia or Scythia was Terrae Incognita. Mercator's map of NorthEast Asia, which is dated 1569, shows a hypothetical arm of the Scythian Sea (Laptev and East Siberian seas) almost reaching to the northeast of the Aral Sea with the M. Aspisii nearby. The Aspisii Scythea were the people dwelling to the west of the mountains and to the north of the River Jaxartes (Syr Darya). Note also, however, the Arimaspi detailed in Part 88 below. The Maspii, a noble Persian tribe, are too far south to be considered.

83 FELIX ARABIA: Arabian Red Sea coastlands, particularly the southwestern areas, including the Yemen.

84 METAGONITIDIM: The Metagonitae were a people living in Tangiers and the surrounding area. The district forms the west of Mauretania (Part 91) or modern Northern Morocco.

85 ASSYRIA: Eastern Iraq between the Tigris and the Iranian border.

86 AFRICA: Mediterranean coastal region of Libya, including Tripoli and the modern province of Tripolitania, but excluding the eastern part, for which see Cireniaca (Part 50) and Nasamonica (Part 51). The region also includes the eastern Algerian coastlands and the Algerian/Tunisian border. This is not the continent of Africa.

87 BACTRIANI: The people of Bactriana (Part 13).

88 AFNAN or AFRAN: Kelley: 'Here appear people with one eye in their head, seeming to be in their breast, towards the Equinoctial.'

Dee: 'I remember of people called Arimaspi.'

Dee is confused here, as the Arimaspi ('the one-eyed') were a people on the left bank of the Middle Volga, north of the Caspian Sea. The Afran are the people Ptolemy called the Aphricerones, located just north of Equatorial Africa in North Zaire. The ancient scholars considered that all the southern parts of Africa were uninhabitable (as with many unexplored lands) and populated with strange beasts. Herodotus included in his conjectures on unknown Africa descriptions of peoples with 'one eye in the breast instead of the usual head', which must be the people referred to.

89 PHRYGIA: Large province in Central Turkey. Greater Phrygia was bounded on the east by Cappadocia (Part 4).

90 CRETA: Crete.

91 MAURITANIA or MAURETANIA: Morocco and the north Algerian coastlands, not to be confused with the modern state of Mauritania, which is located further south and for which see Getulia (Part 19).

The Three Great Secret Names of God

At the very top of the hierarchy of the Elemental Tablet are the Three Great Secret Names of God. In the practice of modern Enochian magick, prior to contacting any angel from the Elemental Tablet, the Three Great Secret Names of God should be first be invoked. The Golden Dawn and Crowley incorporated the names in a preliminary temple opening. Whether you use these temple openings in your own work, or if you design your own opening ritual, you must never neglect to recognize by name the Three Great Secret Names of God who rule the Elemental Tablet you are working with.

The Seniors and the Kings

Next in hierarchical order are the six seniors and the king of the Elemental Tablet. After invoking the Three Great Secret Names of God, these seven angels must also be recognized by name and made part of the magician's opening ritual.

If you are invoking an individual senior, you may omit the names of the other seniors (but not the king) in your ritual opening.

Three Examples of Enochian Magick Visions

Nanta, elo Hoath zorge ef.

“Spirit of Earth, first worshiper friendly visit.”

—LAIDROM, MARS SENIOR OF EARTH

Example 1¹²³

First Session (September 25, 1980) Laidrom, Mars senior of the Elemental Tablet of Earth. Scryer: David P. Wilson.

For our first evocation session I decided we would work as Dee and Kelley did. One person would act as seer, and one as operator. The seer would recite the appropriate call, receive the vision, and communicate it during or after the session. The operator would banish, open and close the temple, and question the seer. I would be the operator, but I did not know who in our little class would be the first to sit in the visionary driver's seat. On class night there was only one rather reluctant volunteer.

David P. Wilson was not new to the world of magick. In the years leading up to his affiliation with our lodge he sat in with a host of magical groups and workshops in the Los Angeles area upon whom he later heaped scorn and ridicule because of their inability to show him “real magick.” He was the boldest member of the class, also the most impatient and sarcastic. I could see the Enochian class going down in flames on opening night because David the curmudgeon once again “saw nothing!” He had done none of the preliminary Enochian work with the rest of the class. He hadn't painted a set of tablets or studied any of the calls. Still, he was our only volunteer.

I can't recall why but I decided we would to try to contact LAIDROM, the Mars Senior of the Elemental Tablet of Earth. In the spirit of better safe than sorry, we placed the Earth tablet in the South (Capricorn/Cardinal Earth) and enclosed the entire class in a circle cast with a clothesline cord. I banished with the rituals of the lesser and greater pentagrams and hexagrams, then opened the temple and invoked the hierarchical names as indicated in Liber Chanokh. David was seated on the floor at the southern edge of the circle, just inches away from the Earth tablet. Leaning against the wall behind the tablet was a huge cardboard version of the [Elemental] Tablet of Earth that I placed there for the other members of the class to focus upon. I turned on the tape recorder and gave David a copy of the Call to read. I sat down behind him while he read it aloud.

He did rather well considering he had never read it before. When he was finished, he closed his eyes and took a deep breath. Nothing happened. I asked him to read the Call again. He did so and after only a few seconds he said, “I have a landscape. I see a landscape.”

I was relieved beyond words. “What does it look like?”

David proceeded to describe in surprising detail a desert vista of flat, trackless white crystalline powder stretching to the horizon. Great gray columns of volcanic rock towering over the plain broke the monotony of the scene. Between the columns the ground was pockmarked with countless gaping pits.

That was it. Nothing else was occurring. I asked him to read the Call a third time. This time there was movement. From out of a pit in the center of his field of vision arose a black cone. He said it sparkled from the inside and upon its surface with thousands of little sparks that jumped from one star to another.

I asked, "Is this LAIDROM?"

David grabbed his pencil and notepad and quickly scribbled something. I looked at what he had drawn. It looked like four very poorly drawn Enochian letters. At the time it meant nothing to me. I asked for a clearer answer. "Is this LAIDROM?"

"It's him! It's him! I see him."

He described a humanoid figure draped in the same material from which the cone was constructed. He had an egg-shaped head but no face. His hands were like mittens—there were no fingers. He reached his arm toward the ground and "drew" a diagram in the sand in front of him. David quickly copied the figure on the notepad. It was a square divided diagonally by two lines with a small circle in the lower left-hand corner. We took this to be LAIDROM's signature.

We were all very excited. It was as if the entire class saw David's vision in our mind's eye. Then it occurred to me. Now that we've got this guy, what the hell are we to do with him? Before I could think of what to do next, David said, "Lon, I feel like ... I feel ... I could make strange sounds."

This was a twist. "Let yourself." I told him. "Go with it." I tried to sound calm.

"Naw-n tahelo hoh athayzo raygayeff... this is bullshit!"

"No! Relax, let it happen!"

"I mean it, I feel like an idiot. I'm too ... zil-zi-anzilzi-lo-da-arp nan-ta ... (inaudible) ... ef ... efee thar-zi. I am sorry. That's all. Nothing like this has ever happened before. I just felt like doing it." David's apology was comical. We all broke into nervous giggles.

It had been quite an evening. As we had planned nothing particular to do with LAIDROM, I thought it wise to quit while we were ahead. I asked David to thank our spirit guest for his visit and proceeded to banish and close the temple.

One of the class members had brought along his Enochian Dictionary¹²⁴ and suggested we try to use it to see if David's strange babbling actually meant something. I rewound the tape and played it back from the beginning. Everything was crystal clear right up to the time of LAIDROM's appearance, when the tape developed an irritating distortion. We joked that it was the fault of malicious spirits and expected it to soon clear up. It did not. In fact, by the time the tape reached David's babbling we could hardly pick his voice out from behind the bank of white noise. As soon as the good stuff was over, the distortion suddenly stopped.

Noise notwithstanding, after replaying the section of tape a dozen times or more, we picked up enough of what was being said to write down three audible strings of syllables:

naw-n tahelo hoh athayzo raygayeff.

zil-zi-anzilzi-lo-da-arp nan-ta ... (inaudible) and ef ... efee thar-zi.

Starting at the beginning, we painstakingly played with the phonetics of each word (and the word/words following) and attempted to match them with words in the Enochian Dictionary. Obviously we weren't being very scientific, nor, I confess, very objective. This was all very exciting and romantic, and I am sure that night we would have squeezed some profundity out of any string of sounds. Be that as it may, it took less than an hour to break the sounds up as follows:

Nanta, elo Hoath zorge ef.—Which translated neatly to: “Spirit of Earth, first worshiper friendly visit.”

Zil zien—“stretch forth hands”

Zilodarp Nanta—“stretch forth and conquer Spirit of Earth”

Ef etharzi—“visit in peace.”

Needless to say we were all very impressed. At the end of the evening it was agreed that from now on class would meet two times a week to pursue Enochian magick. Sadly, David's ability to break spontaneously into the Enochian language would diminish rapidly as his familiarity with the language of the Calls increased. After the fourth or fifth session, he lost the ability completely. His visions, on the other hand, became clearer, more informative, and more provocative.

Example 2

Monday Night Magick Class (July 17, 2006) Twenty-ninth Aethyr Rii.
Scrier: Jill Belanger

Enochian scrying sessions sometimes trigger emotional, physical, even sexual reactions. This is a clip from the transcription of a recording of a Monday night magick class scrying of the twenty-ninth Aethyr, Rii, and its governors: Vastrim, Odraxti, and Gomziam. The main scrier in this session was Jill Belanger, one of the class's most talented seers. It demonstrates that Enochian visions need not take the form of biblical-esque landscapes and heavy magical pronouncements. I thank Jill for being a very good sport and allowing us to eavesdrop on part of this provocative session.

This session started with the full opening ritual as outlined in chapter one.

As soon as I closed my eyes I was pulled into a vortex, an upside down six, and I was pulled in with an ... um ... another gentleman, a lover, a man, and we were instantly in sexual ecstasy going in water in the form of six, and just flying around, the flame was in the middle, and the water was swirling around, and I was lost in that ecstasy for a while. And then I thought, No, I've got to figure out what this message is about. So I tried to push him away. (Laughter from class.) And I said (very drunkenly), "Gumziam [sic], where are you? And I kept flying around in the water vortex. I then saw two triangles together but three dimensional, in sort of like (garbled) with three or four sides instead of eight sides, and then the two triangles ... one split off from the other one. One on top, one on bottom, and the widest parts were together, and I was standing in the middle ... and it was like the floor and ceiling were separating and apart.

And I looked down, and the floor was split into four parts, not like the Watchtowers, more like pyramids, and one was Fire, Water, Earth, and Air. Then it was stuck back together again, and I was swirling with the vortex again. I said, "Fire creates, but water solidifies," and the two pyramids went back together, and I was with this lover again, floating around, and I was like, "OK! Let's ... well ... OK!" (Laughter from class.) I'm still kind of hot! (More laughter.)

Public Workshop (July 22, 2006) Thirtieth Aethyr, Tex. Scryer: name withheld

The following is a letter I received a few days after I returned home from a workshop series on Enochian vision magick. The vision the young woman describes occurred during a scrying session that concluded a half-day public workshop. She, like most of the attendees at this event, had never performed Enochian magick before.

After I had outlined a brief history of Dee and Kelley's adventures and the fundamentals of Enochian magick, the entire class took part in the ritual and chanting of the Ring/Lamen/Holy Table/Sigillum/Table of Nalvage opening ceremony. Over their two-part chorus of the Table of Nalvage words, I recited the nineteenth call to penetrate the thirtieth Aethyr, Tex. Here is her experience.

Hi, Lon!

Thanks again for making the trek here ... last weekend. I learned a lot more than I had expected to, which is why I'm writing you this. I didn't get a chance to talk to you about the things I saw/did when you led the class foray into the Enochian aethyrs, and initially I was hesitant to because of the rather personal nature of some of it. But after talking to [my brother] about it, I realized I should tell you; in fact, he insisted I do so. So here goes.

We had just finished chanting the Holy Table, and you indicated we should close our eyes while you continued chanting and just follow the images that came to us. Initially I got not images per se, but random geometric shapes in dark shades of purple and green, mostly pyramids, and pyramids of one color in front of squares of a slightly darker shade. I realized that I was falling forward, swiftly, down a triangular corridor filled with a dark purplish haze, with occasional lighter purple flashes—like falling through layers and layers and layers, whoosh, whoosh, whoosh, with something spinning all around me at the same time. Then I realized I wasn't going down anymore, but rising, still through this triangular purple infused corridor, whoosh, whoosh, whoosh, still the spinning, and I began to feel my heart pounding like it would burst inside me, I felt dizzy and slightly nauseous, and just when I thought I couldn't stand it for another moment longer, I stopped speeding forward, and the purple mist cleared, and I was standing on a grassy plain, almost a hilltop, that rose slightly upward in front of me. I realized that the thing that had been spinning seemed to be the petals of an enormous flower, a lotus, perhaps, and that the hillside on which I stood was contained within its perimeter, like a low wall going around it. It occurs to me now that I was facing north.

Beyond the border of the wall were two more hills in the distance, one to the left and one to the right, covered in vibrant dark green vegetation, and I knew vaguely that there were Things in those hills, in those trees, but I didn't have time to think about them. There were four pillars that stretched up around me, at the outside edge of the wall, and as I watched, a pyramid rose up out of the hillside in front of me, or perhaps I simply moved swiftly up the hillside towards it. It wasn't large, maybe only one or one and a half stories high; it was four sided and made of a smooth golden brick or stone. A blinding light issued from the center of it, and, as I watched, the form of a person appeared in the center of this light and was walking towards me.

My impression was that he came from inside the pyramid, and he seemed to be coming from some distance, though the pyramid was just in front of me. He was tall and blond and blue eyed and wore a garment of brilliant white and a golden circlet about his temples. And he was smiling, he was so glad to see me. As he came close to me, he opened up the robe to reveal a column of blinding white light running down the centerline of his body. As my eyes adjusted to the light, I realized that the light was coming from his chakras, which were blazing yellow-white light and shaped sort of like flowers. I realized that my chakras were also blazing, and the light from his heart chakra leapt forward in a thin white-yellow tongue of flaming light and entered my heart chakra. Then his throat chakra flamed and leapt into mine, and then all of them at once seemed to, and that blazing sharing of chakra light continued for a few blissful, amazing moments.

He held his hands out in front of him, palms facing toward me, and I placed my palms against them, and the chakras in our hands blazed with light and fire for a moment. Then he took my hands and pulled them straight into his chest so that I held his heart chakra in my hands, and then he indicated that I should put his heart chakra inside my chest. I was amazed that he would suggest that, and slightly hesitant, but he was insistent, and together we thrust it into my chest. I was stunned at the force of the heat of the union of our two heart chakras. Then he gestured to his throat chakra, and again, I took his chakra in my hands, and lifted it out of him and into myself, with another flash of heat. Then I lifted out his third-eye chakra, then his solar plexus chakra, then his hara chakra. I reached next for his root chakra, and realized that in my hands it had become a huge golden phallus, and as in the curious logic of dreams, there was only one obvious way to integrate that into myself—I mounted it, and at the same time, I reached up and removed the crown from his head, symbolic of his crown chakra, and placed it on my own head at the same moment as the phallus slid into me, and the universe exploded. It wasn't sex, it wasn't copulation, it was Union, I was perfectly with and within him, and he was perfectly with and within me. It was Bliss, it was Light, it was Perfection. I heard his voice in my ear, saying, “You are She, in Whom all things are received; She in Whom all things are created; She in Whom all things are possible. All Life is Yes; all Love is Know. Know that You are She.”

At about that moment, I heard your voice saying something about looking around for landmarks that would help me remember this place, and I laughed to myself that I wasn't likely to forget this. You said something else about bringing back a sign, or a key or talisman from this place, something to know and remember it by that would help me return, and I pulled back slightly from this Being with a wordless question, and his answer was to withdraw from me, and he ejaculated into my outstretched hands, a liquid golden light that turned into two glowing, golden diamond crystals that sank into my palms and disappeared as I watched.

Then your voice said it was time to return, and without another word or glance between us I was whisked up and away, coming back into awareness of my body with a nauseating thud, my head spinning, my heart pounding painfully. You started asking us questions about what we'd seen, where we'd been, and I was too nauseated and out of breath to answer, but was amazed to hear my classmates describing similar imagery, lotuses, columns, towers, pyramids, though no one else seemed to have experienced anything close to what had passed between me and that other Being—or at least, no one was admitting to it. I sat there in a haze, listening to them, thinking about my own experience, and waiting for my heart to quit pounding, my stomach to stop churning. I must have looked pretty stunned, because [my husband] asked me if I was OK, and all I could initially articulate to him as he looked over at me was, “What the f___ just happened to me?”

We broke for dinner at about that moment, and I realized my opportunity to share it with the class had passed. But I still wanted to tell you about it, and, of course, [my husband]. We had driven separate cars that day, so we met at the house before going to the restaurant, and there at home I told him. He stared at me while I told him about it, saying it was pretty amazing, but I'd better not say anything about it in front of the class as a whole, that it was way too personal to just lay out there that way. He suggested I call [my brother], that he'd be able to decode it for me and would definitely be interested. I agreed, but thought at the same time that I really should tell you, but wanted to do so in private.

We went to dinner and then to the meet and greet with the class, but I held back, there were always too many people around. Perhaps now, after reading my account, you understand my hesitancy. Because to be honest, I wasn't sure how to begin, I was still unsure of myself, unsure of how to confess to someone I had only just met that under his direction I had experienced a union that was way more than sexual with someone who was apparently a Being of Light, a resident of the angelic realms, and also not sure of what that said about me. But I knew who would know what it all meant, and so as soon as I got home on Sunday, I called my brother and told the whole story to him. He was jubilant, congratulatory, awestruck, and then he asked me, "Well, what did Lon say when you told him?" I had to admit that I hadn't been sure of what or how to communicate it, and had been further stymied by my husband's reaction to it. My brother was incredulous. How could I not have shared that vision with you, who of all people, would understand it and sympathize with my bewilderment at it? I should have told you everything, he insisted. I agreed and promised him I would write you. And so here we are.

My brother was curious to know which of the Aethyrs you had us reading from, and I couldn't remember; my husband thinks you said we were only going to push ourselves up a level, but my brother thinks I went farther than that and said you might recognize which one. There were things about the place that I recognized from dreams—it's a place I've dreamed of my whole life but never consciously remembered until now. I'm not unaccustomed to visions and vision quests, but this was unlike anything I've ever done before. My body's reaction to it was visceral; I crashed hard when I came back from it, and I continued to feel the physical aftereffects for several days (kind of like recovery from a bad acid trip). Today, Thursday, I'm finally feeling back up to steam. My brother said that's a normal reaction to astral projection; is that really what I did? I have my own theories about the imagery and symbolism. I'm a massage therapist and energy worker, a master of the Usui and Karuna systems of Reiki, and the student of a spirit guide who was a Native American shaman. The ejaculation of light that turned into crystals and sank into my palms resonates with me on several levels. I think one possible meaning is that it was a gift to use in my healing work. I can tell you that all this week, whenever I've "turned on" the Reiki or use one of the symbols, the chakras in my palms blaze with heat, my patients have actually commented on it! (In fact, they're heating up right now, just thinking about it.) [My brother] didn't exactly discount my idea about it, but he said there was a lot more mystical significance there than I realized, or than he should even talk to me about until I talked to you. Obviously, it's loaded with archetypal images, but I would love to know what you get from them, what level you sent me to, and if you recognize anything from my descriptions.

Thanks for your patience. This has turned from an email into a novella! I eagerly await your reply!

Brightest blessings!

Theoretically, once the magician has successfully invoked the divine presence within himself or herself, he or she then has the divine authority to evoke the spirits.

51 The letter b (or Pa in the angelic alphabet) is used liberally in Heptarchic and Enochian magick. The frequency of its appearance has prompted some modern scholars to speculate that it represents the number seven, the key or foundational number of Dee and Kelley's angelic magick.

52 The symbols of the planets are as follows: Saturn ♄, Jupiter ♃, Mars ♂, Sol ☉, Venus ♀, Mercury ☿, Luna ☾.

53 This prayer is not found as such in the original Dee and Kelley material. I composed it to reflect my understanding of the purpose of the Lamen as it relates to myself and the Holy Table.

60 And just as we microcosmic human beings are said to be the reflection of macrocosmic Deity, the individual names of the kings and princes on the 12×7 table that create the Lamén (which are read from right to left) are the mirror image of the those found on the 12×7 table that create the Holy Table (which are read from left to right).

97 INRI is an acronym of the Latin phrase Iesvs Nazarenvs Rex Iudaeorvm, “Jesus the Nazarene, King of the Jews.” It appears in the Gospel of John (chapter 19, verse 19). The four letters also have profound esoteric meanings to Christian mystics and ceremonial magicians, who see in the letters a magical formula of creation and being.

98 In astrology it is the four fixed, or kerubic, signs of the zodiac that exemplify the purest elemental quality. For example, there are three zodiac signs that represent the element of Fire: Aries, Leo, and Sagittarius. Aries is the cardinal or initial aspect of Fire, Leo is the fixed (kerubic) or firmly defined aspect of Fire, and Sagittarius is the mutable and most easily influenced aspect of Fire.

The four fixed (kerubic) signs of the zodiac are: Aquarius (Air), Scorpio (Water), Taurus (Earth), and Leo (Fire). The classic symbols of the fixed signs (the angel of Aquarius, the eagle of Scorpio, the bull of Taurus, and the lion of Leo) are called the kerubic emblems and appear often in Christian iconography.

- 113 Theoretically, each of the 156 lettered squares of an Elemental Tablet is an angel who can be contacted by continuing the hierarchical descent into the subangle. If you care to plunge this deeply into elemental workings, you are free to do so by discovering a further hierarchy of names and letters that seems most logical to you.

122 Dee, like most of his contemporaries, believed the island of Friseland to exist. It was, in fact, a duplication of Iceland on an early map, an error which was repeated. When its coast was supposedly skirted, this was actually the coast of Cape Farewell, Southern Greenland. Note also that today Germania (Part 29) incorporates Poland. In Dee's time Poland was located further eastward and would have formed part of Sarmatia or Russia (Part 46).

About the Author

Lon Milo DuQuette is a bestselling author and lecturer, whose books on Magick, Tarot, and the Western Mystery Traditions have been translated into ten languages. He is currently U.S. Deputy Grand Master of Ordo Templi Orentis and is on the faculty of the Omega Institute in Reinbeck, NY and the Maybe Logic Academy. Among his many books, he is the author of My Life with the Spirits (Weiser 1999), Understanding Aleister Crowley's Thoth Tarot (Weiser 2003), The Magick of Aleister Crowley (Weiser 2003), and Tarot of Ceremonial Magick (Weiser 1995). He lives in Costa Mesa, CA with his wife Constance. Visit him on the Web at: www.lonmiloduquette.com.

Having mastered the arts and science of his age, Elizabethan magus Dr. John Dee [1527–1608] resolved that worldly knowledge could no longer provide him the wisdom he desired. He turned his attention to magick, and in 1582 he and his clairvoyant partner Edward Kelley made contact with a number of spiritual entities who identified themselves as angels—the same angels that communicated with Adam, Enoch, and the patriarchs of the Old Testament. Over the next three years three distinct magical systems were revealed to Dee and Kelley. The third, thanks largely to efforts from the adepts of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn and the 20th-century practices of Aleister Crowley, is now widely known as Enochian Magick.

Enochian Vision Magick includes extensive background and historical notes, explores the foundation for the creation of the Enochian Magick system, and provides readers with a step-by-step process for using it.

"Lon DuQuette is a miracle worker, and Enochian Vision Magick is his greatest miracle. His uncanny gift for clear and simple explanations has produced the most accessible, interesting, personal and—most importantly—practical guide to Enochian magick available."

—Richard Kaczinski, Ph.D., author of Perdurabo: The Life of Aleister Crowley

"DuQuette has created a truly original and highly interesting vision of the practical application of the Enochian System. He treats the material as Dee intended it to be treated—as a gateway into another world."

—Geoffrey James, editor and translator of The Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee

"It has fallen to Lon Milo DuQuette to provide an easy entrance to the Watchtowers of Dee's magic. In doing so he has done modern magic a great service."

—Stephen Skinner, co-author of The Practical Angel Magic of Dr. John Dee's Enochian Tables

"We are lucky to finally have a useful introduction to this difficult subject that provides the aspiring Enochian conjurer with both the proper foundation and the tools to successfully begin what can become a lifelong adventure and labor of love."

Origins of the Magick: The Dee Diaries

The systems of magick now known as Enochian magick derive from the work of the Elizabethan scholar Dr. John Dee and seer Edward Kelly. Dee had a passion for discovering lost knowledge and spiritual truths; in particular he wanted to recover the wisdom he believed to be in the lost books of earlier times. Among these was the then-fabled Book of Enoch, which he apparently conceived as being a book describing the magick system used by that patriarch. Having come to the conclusion that worldly efforts would not lead to the wisdom he desired, he decided to apply himself to contacting divine sources. During the years from 1581 to 1585, Dee performed a long series of magickal operations to that intent. Kelly joined him in March of 1582, and was his sole assistant during the remainder of the work.

The method employed for these works was fairly standard for the time. Dee would act as the orator, directing fervent prayers to God and the archangels for 15 minutes to an hour. Then a scrying stone would be placed on a prepared table, and the angels were called to manifest a visible appearance therein. Kelly would watch the stone and report everything he saw and heard; Dee would sit at another table nearby and record everything that occurred.

Dee made multiple copies of these records. A portion of them, concerning the Angelic Calls, Tablets and Liber Scientiae, were acquired with Dee's library by Robert Cotton. This part was published in Casaubon's A True and Faithful Relation. The earlier portions concerning the Heptarchy and Liber Loagaeth came to light by a more roundabout means.

In the later years of his life, Dee apparently decided to conceal his magickal records in a hidden compartment of a large cedar chest he possessed. After his death the chest was purchased from his estate and passed through several owners. The hidden documents were not discovered until around 1662, and found their way into the hands of Elias Ashmole in 1672. Mr. Ashmole's collection passed eventually to the British Library.

According to Ashmole, about half of the hidden records were mistakenly destroyed by the discoverer's maid before efforts were made to preserve the rest. Despite this, the records for the 1581-1585 operations appear almost entirely intact.

The record of these operations is very detailed; so much so that it takes careful study to separate the spiritual "wheat" from the chaff. Much of the communication was important within the context of the operations, but has no direct bearing on the systems of magick being presented. Of the rest, there are long periods of communications that, in retrospect, seem to have no purpose but to hold the magicians' attention on continuing the operations. During these periods the angels would present colorful visions, portentous prophecies, and angelic gossip, but very little in the way of solid information. Additionally, the reader must deal with side-excursions into apocalyptic religion, Elizabethan politics,

Dee and Kelly's personal problems, and various irrelevant queries that Dee insisted on inserting into the work.

Chronologically, Dee and Kelly's work divides into three highly productive periods separated by months in which nothing of particular value was received. The material received in each period generally stands on its own, and is only loosely related to that in the other periods. In the strictest interpretation, only the material from the third period qualifies as "Enochian", but the term is often applied to all of the work.

Period one: The Heptarchia Mystica

The first system of magick given to Dee was the Heptarchia Mystica. This is a self-contained and moderately complex planetary angel magick, similar in style (but not in content) to various "Solomonic" grimoires of the day. The full record of its presentation can be found in Dee's Mysteriorum Libri Quinti; a working grimoire, composed of Dee's extracts from that record, is known as De Heptarchia Mystica.

The presentation of this magick was remarkably sequential and orderly, compared to later parts of the work. The necessary physical equipment was described in detail, followed by an angelic hierarchy of 49 "Good Angels", and further information concerning the Kings and Princes of the hierarchy, and their ministers. The major part of the information was given during 1582; significant corrections to the design of the equipment were given in the spring of the following year, after an hiatus in the work and the presentation of Liber Loagaeth.

Equipment: Ring, Lamen, and Holy Table

The angels claimed that the ring they designed for Dee was the same one that Solomon used to control demons. It had a plain band, to which was attached a rectangular plate. The letters PELE (Latin for "he will work wonders") were inscribed in the four corners. In the center was a circle with a horizontal line through it, with the letter "V" above and the letter "L" below.

Two different lamens were given to Dee. The first of these bears a generic resemblance to various goetic sigils, being an assortment of free-form lines and oddly placed letters. The being giving it instructed that it was to be made in gold and worn in all times and places for purpose of protection.

The following year, Dee and Kelly were told that this was a false lamen given by an "illuding spirit". They were given a 12-by-7 table formed from the names of the Heptarchic Kings and Princes; the new lamen consisted entirely of letters taken from this table and arranged in rectilinear patterns. (See Appendix E.) Unlike the first lamen, the purpose of the second was solely to "dignify" the magician, to show his worthiness to perform the Heptarchic magick.

"True" Heptarchic Lamen in English and Angelic Versions

The Holy Table or Table of Covenant was the centerpiece of the Heptarchic magick. Its purpose was to be an "instrument of conciliation"; that is, the means by which the powers it symbolizes are brought into harmony with the magician. As with the lamen, the initial version of the table was later said to be incorrect, and a new design provided.

The table was to be two cubits square (roughly 34 to 44 inches) and two cubits high. The legs ended in or rested upon hollow containers, under which small copies of the Sigil of Ameth were placed. It had a one-inch border, in which certain letters were drawn, 21 to a side. Inside the border a Star of David was drawn, and in the center of the star a 6-inch square divided into a 3-by-4 grid, containing more letters. On top of the table were placed seven planetary talismans, called the "Ensigns of Creation". In the center, a large version of the Sigil of Ameth. When in use, the table, Sigil, and talismans were to be covered with a red silk cloth. The scrying-stone was then placed on top of the cloth, directly over the Sigil.

The letters around the edge of the table, and in the central grid, are taken from the same 12-by-7 table (Appendix E) used to form the lamen. They are intended to "dignify" the table -- to consecrate it to the Heptarchic work -- in the same way the lamen dignifies the magician. There is no indication in the record that they were intended to be words conveying meaning, as Gerald Schueler has alleged.

Many magicians have assumed that the Holy Table is also necessary to operations involving the Calls and Tablets given to Dee and Kelly in 1584. It is true that they made use of the table for operations that obtained that material. However, the table is clearly designed specifically for use with the Heptarchic powers; it seems unlikely that it would be suitable for the quasi-elemental nature of the Tablet powers.

The Holy Table of Practice, or Table of Covenant Reconstructed according to the Angels' directions.

Equipment: The Sigil of Ameth

The Sigil of Ameth or Sigillum Dei is a large wax disk, on which are inscribed various names of God and angels, within a design of heptagons and heptagrams. This sigil was to be placed in the center of the Holy Table, underneath the scrying-stone. Smaller versions were to be placed underneath the cup-like ends of the table's legs, apparently to insulate the table from earthly influences.

The Sigil is the only part of Dee's work that has a direct correspondence in earlier magickal systems; versions appear in Liber Juratis and in Eodipus Aegypticus, among other volumes. Dee was initially instructed to copy the sigil from a book in his library, but found conflicting versions and could not decide between them. When he questioned the angels, they proceeded to give him the design for a new, more detailed version. The resultant sigil is substantially different from those earlier versions, sharing only the overall geometric design with them.

While most of the names on the Sigil are not immediately recognizable, nearly all of them are derived from two sets of familiar angelic names. The first set are the angels Agrippa lists as the "seven which stand in the presence of God". The god-names in the outermost heptagon are formed by transposition of the letters of these names, following an elaborate but consistent method. The second set are the planetary Archangels, whose names are shown at the center of the Sigil. These are used to form the four groups of seven angelic names within the heptagram, called the "Sons of Light", "Daughters of Light", "Sons of the Sons", and "Daughters of the Daughters". Additionally, they are used to form the god-names written in the space between the heptagon and the heptagram. It is interesting to note that the derived names were given first, and only afterwards was the means of derivation shown. (For a picture of the Sigil, and details on the formation of its divine and angelic names, see Appendix A: The Sigil of Ameth and its Holy Names.)

Equipment: The Ensigns of Creation

Immediately following the presentation of the Sigil of Ameth, the angels provided seven complex talismans called the "Ensigns of Creation". These were to be engraved on plates of purified tin, and arrayed on the surface of the holy table; either in a continuous ring around the Sigil of Ameth, or in a row directly in front of the magician. As an alternative to the plates, the angels allowed that they could be painted directly on the table. During the Spring, 1583 corrections, the angels specified that the letters on the ensigns were to be converted into the angelic alphabet, but this was apparently never done.

As with the table itself, the ensigns were intended as instruments of conciliation between the magician and the Heptarchic powers. Each ensign was associated with a specific Heptarchic King, and therefor with a specific planet and day of the week. Full-size illustrations of the Ensigns can be found in Appendix B: The Seven Ensigns of Creation. The versions shown in the appendix were prepared from scans of the diaries, unaltered but cleaned up to remove the dirt and smudging from four centuries of aging.

Two later versions of the Ensigns have circulated in modern publications. The first of these was created by the pseudonymous "Dr. Rudd", a century or more after Dee's time. Rudd's version shows the names of various traditional demons written on the Ensigns. Rudd's notion was that the letters stood for the names of these demons, and the number of times the letter appeared signified the number of times the demon was to be invoked.

A version of the Ensigns was published in Pat Zalewski's Golden Dawn Enochian Magick which shows all the lowercase letter "B"s in the Ensigns as numeral sixes. This version seems to be a fairly recent invention, first appearing in print in the 1960's. But as can be seen from the illustrations in the appendix, the sixes and "b"s on the Ensigns are drawn in a consistently distinct manner.

Neither of these later versions has any justification in the diaries. If there is a logic behind the symbols on the Ensigns, it is not explained anywhere in the record.

The Heptarchic Hierarchy: The 49 Good Angels

The 49 Good Angels are the first "worldly" angelic powers presented in this system. Those listed on the Sigil of Ameth are apparently in some way above the worlds in which men live, as are the Ensigns. Having presented the Ensigns, the archangel Michael introduces the 49 angels by saying: "Now you touch the world, and the doings upon the earth. Now we show you the lower world: The Governors that work and rule under God."

Dee and Kelly were presented with seven 7-by-7 tables. Each square of each table contained a letter and a number from 1 to 49. (See Appendix C.) By gathering the letters with the same number in a certain sequence, the names of the angels were produced. The list of names, divided into groups of seven, were called the Tabula Collecta. Dee arranged these names into a circular table called the Tabula Bonorum, dividing the angels into groups of seven, with a King and a Prince heading each group.

The Tabula Bonorum

Each of the original seven tables was associated with power over a particular aspect of existence; it follows that each angel's name controls some part of each of those aspects. The powers ascribed to each table or letter are:

- Wit and wisdom
- The exaltation and government of Princes
- Prevailing in counsel, and over the nobility
- The gain and trade of merchandise. (Later changed to Water by Dee, for no clear reason.)
- The qualities of Earth, and of Water
- Knowledge of the Air and those that move in it
- The government of fire.

From this list of powers it would seem that, along at least one dimension, the Heptarchic magick is not entirely planetary in nature. The powers would fit more with the conception of a fourfold elemental world ruled by a threefold manifest spirit, as in the lowest seven sephiroth of the cabala.

Dee retroactively assigned a planetary attribute to each group of seven angels, based on the connections between the Kings and the days of the week. Later students have interpolated a system of dual attributes, based on the fact that the Prince of a given day is in a different group from the day's King.

The Kings, Princes, and their ministers

Following the presentation of the 49 angels, there is a gap in the record of about six months; apparently no operations were performed in this period. Ashmole speculates that Dee and Kelly had a disagreement over continuing the work. This seems a reasonable assumption. The pre-hiatus record ends with Kelly expressing dislike and disbelief of the spirits for suggesting he take actions not in accord with his nature. The post-hiatus record begins with the note: "After reconciliation with Kelly".

The material in this section is more confused than in those previous. The speech of the angels is more elaborate and bombastic, the visual aspect characterized by a quality of kitsch. Perhaps Kelly's continuing hostility to the angels is responsible for the change.

The powers of the Princes are presented first, followed by their sigils. Next the Heptarchic Kings appear in succession. They describe their powers, and each presents their 42 ministers. The ministers in turn present their names, in two forms: a table of six rows and seven columns, each containing a letter; and a talisman with their names written about the circumference.

The powers ascribed to the Kings appear to be more in keeping with a planetary nature than those assigned to the individual letters of their names. However, there are some instances where the powers seem inappropriate to the assigned planet, and others where the power of the Prince does not accord with that of the King.

Planet	King	King's power	Prince	Prince's power
Sun	Bobogel	Wisdom, Science	Bornogo	metals, altering nature
Mars	Babalel	Waters, battle	Befafes	seas
Jupiter	Bynepor	life of all things	Butmono	earth
Mercury	Bnaspol	earth and its contents	Blisdon	life
Saturn	Bnapsen	casting out wicked spirits	Brorges	fire
Venus	Baligon	powers of Air	Bagenol	not shown
Moon	Blumaza	not mentioned	Bralges	Air, invisible spirits

The 42 ministers assigned to each King are divided into six groups whose seven members have names formed from the same letters. Each group rules a four-hour section of the day, beginning at midnight. The first group is typically represented as expressing a purer form of the King's power than the remaining five groups.

As was the case with the lamen and holy table, the names of the ministers are derived from the table of the 49 angels. For the ministers, a different method was used to extract the names for each King's set. Also as previously, the names were given to the magicians before the method of extraction was explained. (For additional details, see Appendix D.)

A Missing Piece

Several places in the record reference is made to a "Great Globe", apparently a diagram of some sort, which is not among the papers that have been located to date. From context, it seems that it might be an additional variation on the Tabulum Bonorum, or the 7 tables from which the Bonorum was made. As Dee describes it: "...there are capital letters under the King's names and characters: and also there are other letters with numbers: ... and moreover of these letters, some are aversed and some eversed." Apparently Kelly received this diagram at some time when Dee was not present; Dee refers to it several times as having been "brought to" him by Kelly. The angels affirmed nonetheless that it was important to the use of the magick.

This table was to be used in the creation of talismans for invocations of Heptarchic angels. An example of such a talisman shows the sigil of one of the Sons of Light in its center, with the Name of an Heptarchic King in a circle around it. An outer circle of reversed and normal letters from this missing diagram forms the circumference of the talisman.

Method of Use

In the spring, 1583 sessions, the angels indicated that a session was planned in which detailed instructions would be given for the use of the Heptarchic magick. If this session took place, it is not in the surviving records; but some idea of the general technique can be gathered from comments in other parts of the record.

The magician would be seated at the holy table, wearing the ring and lamen. The Ensign of the King being invoked is placed on the table before him. He would hold a talisman of the appropriate Heptarchic King in one hand, with a talisman of the King's minister's names placed under his feet. The magician would then call upon the King by petition and prayer, followed by petitions to his Prince, and invocations of the six major ministers. They would appear in the shewstone, whereupon the magician would charge them to perform the task he desired.

Period two: Liber Loagaeth and the Angelic Alphabet

Liber Loagaeth is the most mysterious part of Dee and Kelly's work. It is also known variously as the Book of Enoch and as Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus. No one as yet has made serious attempts to use it, or to understand its nature beyond what is recorded in the diaries. According to the angels, "loagaeth" means "speech from God"; this book is supposed to be, literally, the words by which God created all things. It is supposedly the language in which the "true names" of all things are known, giving power over them.

As described in Liber Mysteriorum Quintis, the book was to consist of 48 "leaves", each of which contains a 49-by-49 grid. The book as actually presented to Kelly is somewhat different. It contains 49 "Calls" in an unknown language, 95 tables of squares filled with letters and numbers, two similar tables unfilled, and four tables drawn twice as large as the others. Two "leaves" are recorded in Liber Mysteriorum Quintis; these are not included in the final book, and apparently serve as an introduction or prologue to the work.

On the surface, the "Calls" of Liber Loagaeth do not appear to be a language as humans understand the term. There are no translations by which this might be judged in detail, but the text lacks the repetitiveness and consistent word-placement that is characteristic of the 48 Enochian Calls given in the next year. There is no apparent grammar to the text. Donald Laycock remarks that the language is highly alliterative and repetitively rhyming, while Robert Turner calls it "glossolalic". The angels said that each element of each table could be understood in 49 different ways, so that there were that many "languages" in it, all of them being spoken at once.

The purpose of Loagaeth was said to be the ushering in of a new age on Earth, the last age before the end of all things. Instructions for using it to that effect were never given; the angels continually put it off, saying that only God could decide when the time was right.

During the presentation of the two leaves in Liber Mysteriorum Quintis, an angel in the scrying stone would point to the letters successively, and Kelly would read out the names of the angelic characters. Dee transcribed a version using the Roman alphabet, apparently with the intention of redrawing it in angelic characters at a later date.

The record indicates that at the start of each session a light would fly out of the scrying stone and into Kelly's head; this light was seen by both of them. Once the light entered Kelly, his consciousness was transformed so that he could comprehend the text as he read it. He was firmly ordered not to provide a translation, with the explanation that God would select the time for it to be revealed. He nevertheless provided translations of a few of the words, but insufficient to gather the meaning of the text as a whole.

When the light was withdrawn from Kelly's head, he would immediately cease to understand the text, and was no longer able to see it in the stone. On a few occasions, the light continued in him for a short time after the end of the session, and at these times Dee notes that Kelly said many marvelous (and unrecorded) things about the nature of the texts. But the instant the light withdrew, Kelly could no longer understand it, or recall what he had said even moments before. The record says that the 23rd line of the first leaf was a preface to the creation and distinction of angels, and the 24th line an invitation pleasant to good angels. Nothing else is recorded of the purpose of the book.

It soon became apparent that the method used was too slow. The angels were under some time constraint in presenting the book, and arranged that Kelly would be able to see the book at any time. He was to directly record what he saw rather than reading it to Dee. During this latter part of the work, Kelly apparently did not have the deep understanding of the book's meaning, but only a visual apperception of its letters.

The first leaf shown to Dee and Kelly contained the "angelic" alphabet displayed above the grid. The two were given the names and English equivalents of the letters, and told to memorize them before continuing. When Dee did not do so, and complained of the other demands on his time, the angels strongly rebuked him. The text of the leaves was drawn in the characters of this alphabet, and at the angels' instruction they were also applied to the lamen and holy table of the Heptarchic magick.

The Angelic Alphabet

Two versions of the alphabet were given. The first, suitable for being written quickly with a quill pen, was given with Liber Loagaeth. A more formal version (shown in the table above) was given later. For this later version, the angels projected an image of the letter in yellow onto a blank sheet of paper; Kelly then traced over the projection with black ink to produce a permanent record.

The angels indicated that the letters served like Hebrew, as the basis of a cabala or system of magickal symbolism and numerology. They also indicated that the letters were divided into three groups of seven. But beyond that nothing was ever given concerning their properties.

Several people have alleged that the angelic alphabet was copied from some earlier book. Laycock examined all of the possibilities, and while he recognized certain stylistic similarities with previous magickal alphabets, he concluded that none of them was sufficiently like it to count as an earlier version.

Period three: Enochiana

The third section of the work is the only portion that is properly called Enochian. This name was not actually used by Dee and Kelly; they called the system "angelic". The "Enochian" label derives from the origin-myth the angels supplied for this portion of the magick.

According to the myth, this magick was given to the patriarch Enoch by God, and was the means whereby Enoch worked his miracles. The magick was preserved past the time of Enoch's ascension, but in later generations unworthy people began to make use of it. God caused the books to be lost, and sent wicked spirits to spread false magickal systems among the people. (Amusingly, these false systems are based on the use of sigils or "characters", like most of the other magickal systems of Dee's time, or like modern "Chaos" magick.) Dee's prolonged and fervent prayers finally caused God to relent, and reveal the magick again.

It is uncertain exactly when the label was first applied to the system. Common modern usage apparently stems from its use by the Golden Dawn.

The angels were under a time constraint in delivering the Angelic magick. The work was begun on April 10, 1584, and had to be completed before August of that year. Throughout the work, there was constant interference from "evil" spirits, seeking to convince Dee and Kelly (mostly Kelly) to abandon it. Kelly also fell back into his old habits of demon-magick, prompting tension between him and the angels until he foreswore it.

Unlike the Heptarchia and Liber Loagaeth, the pieces of the Enochian system were presented in a seemingly haphazard way. However, the sequence of presentation serves to confirm that the angels were working from knowledge not available to Dee and Kelly. In chronological order, the sections given were:

- The Tablet of God, sometimes called the Tablet of Nalvage.
- The first four Calls, delivered backwards a letter at a time, and their translations.
- The fifth through eighteenth Calls, delivered forwards, without translations.
- The names of the 91 Parts of the Earth in Liber Scientiae, with the number of their indwelling ministers and the number of the Zodiacal King ruling each.
- The relation of the Parts to regions of the Earth.
- The four Elemental Tablets or Tables of Enoch.
- The translations of the Calls previously given, and the specification of the correct ordering of the Calls.
- The Call of the 30 Ayres or Aethyrs
- The names of the Aethyrs.

The translations of the fifth through eighteenth Calls were not given until six weeks after the angelic versions. The consistency of these translations -- that is, the same words given the same meaning in different Calls -- at least serves to establish that the meanings were not invented on the spot.

The names of the Parts are derived from the Elemental Tablets, and their sigils are to be found by connecting the letters of their names on the Tablets. The sigils were shown drawn on the Tablet's grid before the letters for the Tablet were given. The sequence in which the names, sigils, and Tablets were given reflects the confirmation method used for the Heptarchic magick.

The work was completed on July 13th, 1584, with the delivery of the final portion of the Call of the Aethyrs, and the names of the Aethyrs. After that, it is as if a light went out in both Dee and Kelly; having reached some pinnacle of achievement, they fell back, exhausted, into a more prosaic realm. Indeed, from the record it seems almost as if the events of the previous three years had never occurred. Other concerns occupy all of their attention; their visionary work is unconnected with what came before, and has a half-hearted quality. There is no indication that they ever did any more with the Angelic magick.

The angels who were central to the delivery of the magick are never seen again. The magick itself only figures into the records on three more occasions: when the records are destroyed, when they are miraculously restored, and when Kelly receives the "Tabula Recensa".

The Tablet of God

The first piece of the angelic magick presented was a small table. It was unnamed in the record, but on the basis of its content, it would be appropriate to call it the "Tablet of God". No specific use for this table is given, but its size and described nature suggests that it might be a lamen to be used with the magick that follows it.

The Tablet of God

The table consists of an 6-by-6 inner portion, surrounded by four names of four letters each written in a counterclockwise direction. Each corner of the inner portion contains the letters "IAD", an angelic word for God. The inner portion is divided into four 3-by-3 tables, called "continents" by the angel Nalvage; each of these contains three angelic words, written diagonally, which describe the nature of that section in a motto. Reading the lines of the section horizontally gives the names of three groups of angels.

Continent	Name	Motto	Choirs of Angels
Upper left	Highest Life	"I am the joy of God."	1. Joy 2. Presence 3. Praising
Lower left	Life, or Second Life	The moving power of God, or God's power in motion.	1. Power 2. Motion 3. Ministering
Upper right	Life not now dignified, which will be dignified	The result of God's action	1. Action 2. Events 3. Establishing
Lower right	Life which is also Death	The discord and lamentation of God	1. Lamentation 2. Discord 3. Confusing

Zalewski switches the choirs for the lower left and upper right continents. The "mottoes" for these two continents suggest a connection with the original positions of the elemental Tablets within the Great Table (described below). The Tablet of Fire was at lower left, which fits with "power-in-motion". Earth was at upper right, and Earth is traditionally the realm where final results or events occur. The connection in the other two continents is somewhat more abstract; Air at upper left is the element closest to heaven in the structure of the world; Water at lower right is traditionally connected with death and sorrow through the watery signs of Scorpio and Pisces.

The four names surrounding this inner portion are connected with the Son aspect of divinity. These names have the same meanings as the third choirs of the continents, but the spellings are unrelated. With the four "I"s in the corners of the continents, they form a ring around the outside of the table.

Nalvage says of this Table:

- "1. Its substance is attributed to God the Father.
- "2. The first circular mover, the circumference, God the Son, the finger of the Father, and the mover of all things.
- "3. The order and knitting together of the parts in their due and perfect proportion, God the Holy Ghost. Lo, in the beginning and end of all things."

"Substance" is used here in the philosophical senses of "essence" and "something considered as a continuous whole". The unbroken continuity of God the Father is expressed in the duality of the Son (the outer ring of the Table) and the Holy Ghost (the inner continents). The arrangement of the continents reflects (or is reflected in) the positions of the elemental tablets in the Great Table, in the same way that Binah "contains" the lower sephiroth in the cabala. Thus this table may represent the unmanifest Supernal Triad from which the manifest elements of the angelic magick have emanated.

The 48 Calls

The Calls are a series of invocations in an unknown language, which is called "Angelic" in Dee's records. Angelic has the appearance of a true language, though the existing samples are insufficient to deduce a full grammar. The language is similar to English in its positioning of subjects, verbs, and objects. It is unlike English in its lack of separate articles, possessives, and prepositions. As a general rule, the words of the language do not appear related to those of any known language, although there are occasional striking (if superficial) resemblances. E.g., Angelic "christeos", meaning "let there be" versus Greek "christos", Angelic "babalon" meaning "wicked" or "harlot" versus "Babylon".

Nineteen Calls were given to Dee and Kelly. The final Call has thirty variations, making the total of 48 Calls. The purpose of the Calls is sufficiently described by Nalvage:

"This self-same art is it, which is delivered unto you as an infallible doctrine, containing in it the waters which run through many Gates: even above the Gate of Innocency, wherein you are taught to find out the dignity and corruption of nature: also made partakers in the Secret Judgements of the Almighty to be made manifest, and to be put into execution.

"I am therefore to instruct and inform you, according to your doctrine delivered, which is contained in 49 Tables. In 49 voices, or callings: which are the Natural Keys to open those, not 49 but 48 (for One is not to be opened) Gates of Understanding; whereby you shall have knowledge to move every Gate, and to call out as many as you please, or shall be thought necessary, which can very well, righteously, and wisely open unto you the secrets of their Cities, and make you understand perfectly [that] contained in the Tables."

Colin Low has suggested that the above-mentioned Gates are connected with the "Gates of Understanding" found in some Yetziratic texts, and with the fifty Gates mentioned in Thelema's Liber AL vel Legis.

It is certain that there is some sort of relationship between the Calls and the Elemental Tablets, but the exact nature of the connection is a matter of speculation.

The 19th Call, titled the "Call of the Aethyrs", is explicitly associated with the 30 Aethyrs of Liber Scientiae; its wording clearly makes it an invocation for the 91 "Parts of the Earth" in that book. Following the quote above, the remaining Calls are assumed to connect with the hierarchies of the elemental Tablets, but the wording of the Calls is too poetic and ambiguous for specific associations to be made with certainty. While confirming the correct sequence of these Calls, the angel Ilemese stated that each Call has its proper Table, but does not state what these tables are.

Experiments by several magicians seem to establish that the First and Second Calls in some way define the poles within which the remaining Calls work. The First Call usually produces a generic manifestation of Spirit, a general pull towards higher levels. The record implies in a vague way that it is to be used when invoking the Elemental Kings and their ministers, the Seniors; possibly in combination with other Calls. The Second Call is stranger. It does not appear to define a "material" pole as such; rather, it defines a framework or overall form into which the powers of the system can be poured and contained.

The usual assumption by later magicians (not universally accepted) has been that the remaining Calls refer to the "Lesser Angles" within the Tablets. The Golden Dawn's method of associating these Calls with the Tablets and Lesser Angles has become the accepted standard. Donald Tyson has recently come up with an alternative method that has received some attention.

An alternative view of the Calls states that they are parallel to, but separate from the Tablets. That is, they should be used by themselves, without the divine names from the Tablets. There is certainly evidence in the text of the Calls that they represent a continuing "story" of a creative process, beginning with God in the First Call, and ending with the establishment of God's power "in the center of the Earth" in the Eighteenth Call.

Another alternative has been suggested in which the Calls are actually connected with the 49 "leaves" of Liber Loagaeth. This view argues that the Great Table cannot be subdivided in any way that produces 48 or 49 tablets or smaller tables, while Loagaeth is more clearly connected with those numbers. However, the definite connection between the 19th Call and the Aethyrs and Parts is a strong argument against this position.

(For the complete text of the Calls in Angelic and English, see The Enochian Calls published separately.)

The Tabula Recensa, 1587

The Great Table

The Great Table is a large grid of letters, 25 squares wide and 27 high. Two major versions of the Table exist. The first was produced during the work in 1584. Three years later, Kelly (working alone) received a revised Table now called the "Tabula Recensa".

The Table is a magickal "map" of the world, including all levels of existence that are not part of the transcendental, divine realm. It is divided internally according to an orderly system to produce a hierarchy of divine and angelic names ruling various aspects of existence. A separate method of division, in which it is separated into 91 dissimilar regions, produces the sigils of the "Parts of the Earth" shown in Liber Scientiae.

The first division in the Great Table splits it into four Elemental Tablets, 12 squares wide and 13 squares high. These Tablets are separated by a cross with arms one square wide, called the Cross of Union, or Black Cross (so called only because it was shaded in black ink in Dee's version). The four tablets are associated with the four traditional elements, following the same positions as the "continents" in the Tablet of God. (The Tabula Recensa changes the positions of the Tablets within the Table.)

Each Tablet has an internal division into four "Lesser Angles", separated by a "Great Cross". The Great Cross has a vertical arm two units wide, and a horizontal arm one unit high. The horizontal is called the "Line of the Holy Ghost" and contains the three highest names of God within the Tablet, formed by dividing its twelve letters into groups of three, four, and five letters. The vertical arm considered as a whole is said to represent God the Father. When considered as two columns, it represents God as Father and Son.

The eight central letters of the Great Cross are taken in a clockwise inward spiral to form the two names of the Elemental King who rules the Tablet. Each of these names uses only one of the two most central letters. Dee was told that one of these names was for beneficent works, the other for works with harmful intent. When the letters of the Great Cross are read outwards from the center along each arm, they form the seven-letter names of six "Seniors".

The Great Cross is associated with levels of manifest divinity, the mathematical or planetary regions that lie above the Earth but inside the transcendental divine realm in medieval cosmology. Cabalistically they connect with the second triad of sephiroth in the Tree of Life, and with the human soul that originates there. The King and Seniors are generally considered to be planetary in nature; the power of the Seniors was said to be "knowledge of all human affairs".

The Lesser Angles are grids five columns wide and six rows high. The central column forms a god-name of six letters; the second row from the top forms a god-name of five letters. The four rows below (ignoring the central column) form four angelic names ruled by these god-names. Today they are usually referred to by the Golden Dawn label, as "Servient" angels.

The four squares of the top row (again ignoring the central column) form four angelic names which are not ruled by the god-names from the calvary cross. Instead, a different god-name is formed by adding a letter from the Cross of Union to the first angel's name. These four angels are specifically associated with the letters INRI, written above the cross of Jesus' crucifixion. The Golden Dawn labeled them "Kerubic" angels, after the four elemental Kerubs of the Tarot cards.

The angels of the Lesser Angles are assigned governance over specific areas of knowledge, e.g., medicine, precious stones, mechanical arts, etc. These powers can be easily associated with one of the four elements; the result is that the positioning of the elements in the Tablet of God is reflected downwards in the positions of the Tablets in the Great Table, and in the positions of the Lesser Angles within each Tablet.

Type of Angel	Lesser Angles	Power
Servient	Upper left (Air)	Medicine
"	Upper right (Earth)	Metals and Stones
"	Lower left (Fire)	Transformation
"	Lower right (Water)	Living creatures
Kerubic	Upper left	Mixing of natures
"	Upper right	Changing of place
"	Lower left	Mechanical arts
"	Lower right	Understanding secrets

These various powers must be considered to be representative rather than inclusive. According to the angels the Great Table is in some way connected to every type of event that takes place within the Earth; therefore these angels must have much wider areas of responsibility than is suggested by the listed powers.

Liber Scientiae

Liber Scientiae, Auxilii, et Victoriae Terrestris, the "Book of Knowledge, Help, and Earthly Victory", is the third major portion of the Enochian magick. The details were given during the 1584 work, and were compiled into a book by Dee in May of the following year. In introducing this part of the work, the angel Nalvage said:

"There are 30 Calls yet to come. Those 30 are the Calls of Ninety-one Princes and Spiritual Governors, unto whom the Earth is delivered as a portion. These bring in and dispose Kings and all the governments upon the Earth, and vary the natures of things with the variation of every moment; Unto whom the providence of Eternal Judgement is already opened. These are generally governed by the 12 angels of the 12 Tribes, which are also governed by the 7 who stand before the presence of God. ..."

A following paragraph in Latin clarifies that it is the Angels of the Tribes who are the governors, and that the 91 are actually regions or territories of the magickal realm corresponding to various earthly territories. Each Angel rules a varying number of these regions.

The 91 Parts of the Earth on the Great Table

In addition to its regular hierarchies, the Great Table contains the names and sigils of the 91 "Parts of the Earth as imposed by God" of Liber Scientiae. Where the angelic hierarchies described previously are derived from the Tablets by following uniform divisions, the names of the Parts are derived in such a way that each covers a uniquely-shaped area. The natures of the Parts are equally heterogeneous; none of them is like any other in scope, quality, or power.

From the angels' descriptions, it could be said that the regular Tablet hierarchies and the 91 Parts represent complementary views of the world that they both cover. The regular Tablet names represent the ordering of the world according to the ideal plan of God; the way in which the world connects with divine archetypes and patterns. The Parts, on the other hand, represent the transformation of the divine plan into the endlessly changing, endlessly dissimilar events of manifest existence.

In sequence, the angels gave Dee and Kelly first the number of "ministers" dwelling in each Part, the number of the Aethyr in which it was contained, and the number of the Tribal Angel King ruling the Part. Next the names of the Parts were given, and their mundane equivalents, followed by their sigils on the Great Table. After the letters and regular hierarchies of the Table were filled in, the angels presented the Call of the Aethyrs and the names of the Aethyrs. The origin of the Angel King names is obscure; they are not shown in the published portion of the diaries, but are in place in the final, book version of Liber Scientiae.

The sigils of the Parts are found by drawing lines between the squares of the Part's area in the Great Table, in the sequence of the letters in its name. In the presentation to Dee and Kelly, the sigils were presented before the Tablets were filled in with letters, so that when the letters were added they could check back against the names of the Parts as previously given. The correlation between the two sets was remarkably high; only a few of the names had different spellings in the Tablets. None of them were completely dissimilar.

It should be noted that there is one Part whose sigil is shown in the Great Table, but which is not listed in Liber Scientiae. If all the names in the book are valid, there are actually 92 Parts, not 91. Some magicians have speculated that this extra Part should replace the sixty-fifth Part, whose name is formed using the two leftover, non-contiguous squares in each Tablet.

Originally, the angels tried to give Dee and Kelly the mundane equivalents of the Parts by displaying their regions on a globe of the world. Dee cut this method off before it started, complaining that they ought to give him the regions in longitude and latitude, or by reference to the maps in his possession. There is no obvious reason why Dee became stubborn on this point; certainly he was aware that his maps didn't cover the entire world.

The angels rebuked Dee, saying that they didn't see the world in terms of arbitrary mathematical designations, nor in the conic projections of Dee's maps. But rather than return to their intended method, they chose to associate the Parts with the regions of the world listed by Ptolemy.

Robin Cousins has gone to great effort to identify the modern regions represented by the Ptolemaic names. His descriptions and maps can be found as appendices in Turner's Elizabethan Magick. It is apparent from Mr. Cousins' maps that there is a great deal of overlap in these regions. For example, the region of Parva Asia or Anatolia overlaps, in whole or part, no less than nine other regions. Several Parts connect with single cities rather than regions, and others are described simply as "in the north" or "in the far south".

One might suspect that the angels, balked in their intent, simply latched onto the first available method that would satisfy Dee, regardless of its correctness. After receiving the whole list, Dee began to see the difficulties in the scheme and questioned the angels. The response was less than satisfactory to him, in the end boiling down to a statement that when he called the Parts, they would show him the regions they rule. It is implied that thirty of the Parts relate to the New World. Mr. Cousins originally said he believed that these thirty were in addition to the existing 91 Parts, making 121 Parts in all. However, he now believes that the thirty meant that additional territories were covered by the existing 91 Parts, in the way that the angels added Poland and Moscow to the territory ruled by the same Part as Sarmatia. My own reading is also that these thirty are among the given Parts, since any additions would either overlap existing ones, or require slightly less than another full Tablet as a region they would map.

The thirty Aethyrs are barely mentioned in Dee's diaries; they are certainly not given the importance that they have acquired in the minds of some modern magicians. Their function seems to be merely that of containers to hold the 91 Parts. There is no indication that they have any function separate from the Parts.

Usage

While the Enochian materials given to Dee and Kelly form a solid core for a magickal system, they are lacking in the supporting infrastructure necessary to make them a complete and useable system. Only the barest indications are given as to the nature of the various angels, the relationship of the system's structure and powers to those of other systems such as the cabala, or the mythic underpinnings for using it as an initiatory system.

The instructions for using the Enochian magick are equally spare, a few sentences in length:

"Four days (after your book is made, that is to say, written) must you only call upon those names of God, [i.e., in the Tablets] or on the God of Hosts, in those names:

"And 14 days after you shall (in this, or in some convenient place) call the Angels [of the Tablets] by petition, and by the name of God unto which they are obedient.

"The 15th day you shall clothe yourselves, in vestures made of linen, white: and so have the apparition, use, and practice of the Creatures. For, it is not a labour of years, nor many days."

The "book" mentioned is a book of supplications or prayers to god and the angels, to be devised by the magician, written neatly, and bound together. The book is only to be used for this one operation, and then destroyed. The Calls are not mentioned at all.

Apparently the magician is intended to use a "bootstrap" method of learning the magick, similar to that used in the Abramelin magick. He invokes the angels, and the angels themselves show him the best way to use it. And as in the Abramelin work, the angels emphasize that it is the fervency of the magician's prayers that will produce effective contact, not the form of the prayers.

History of Use

Given the bare-bones nature of the original Enochian material, magicians have to improvise extensively to make it into an effective general-purpose magickal system. The history of the system's use is a history of innovation. Every magician or group that has used it extensively has added their own distinct character to it, taking it in a direction at least slightly different from anyone else. It has evolved as the viewpoints of its users have evolved, and seems perfectly capable of adapting to many viewpoints without stress.

The one point on which all these users agree is that the Calls and the Tablet names are tools of remarkable potency, possibly unmatched by any other magickal system now known. Even a completely inexperienced user, with a small effort, is virtually guaranteed to get some sort of response.

Beyond this, it is difficult to gather a coherent picture of the magick. While the angels have distinct natures, they present themselves to each magician in a manner that is consonant with his own nature and "true will", and which is -- to a lesser extent -- in accord with his expectations and conscious intent. The problem of their conformity to expectations can be overcome with practice. The former limitation seems to be absolute; they will not interfere with the true will of the magician. But within that limit they will do everything they can to take the magician as far and as high as he can go.

For a variety of reasons, only a few records of Enochian workings have been preserved. Most such records have been saved because the people who performed the work were interesting to scholars for other reasons; as an obscure branch of an obscure subject, it has not rated a great deal of attention from scholars and publishers. Given this lack of information, and the limitations mentioned above, the available records have to be considered to be spotlights illuminating areas within a vast field, most of which still remains dark and unknown.

Dee & Kelly

As far as is shown in the surviving records, neither Dee nor Kelly ever made significant use of the Angelic magick. During the three years following the receipt of the magick, they apparently ignored it entirely. If they did anything with it beyond that period, the record has been lost.

Elias Ashmole

Sloane Manuscripts 3624-3628 contain the record of extensive spirit actions with the Enochian magick, begun in the 1670's and continuing for over seventeen years. Three magicians and a sryer invoked practically every angel and entity connected with the Enochian system. Some scholars believe that Elias Ashmole and William Lilly are two of the magicians involved. However, Clay Holden believes that this is not the case, based on the handwriting; the record is in a crabbed and almost unreadable hand very unlike Ashmole's elegant script.

From Clay Holden:

Ashmole appears to have been largely content to make planetary talismans to banish rats from his house, as near as I can determine from his diaries. I would dearly love to find some solid evidence to the contrary, but fear that my assumption that Ashmole was one of the hands behind these Spirit Diaries was wishful thinking.

The diaries are massive, and have not been examined closely at this time, but preliminary indications are that they do not contain any results of special significance.

Golden Dawn

The original Golden Dawn magickal society operated from the 1880's into the 1900's, when it split into various groups. Descendent organizations (of varying degrees of legitimacy) continue to operate up to the present, using much of the material developed by the founders. People using the Golden Dawn system probably constitute the largest group of Enochian magicians over this century; despite certain theoretical problems, it has proven in practice to be an effective means of accessing the angelic forces.

The Golden Dawn adepts made substantial additions to the original Enochian materials, basing them in part upon a late 18th-century manuscript titled A Treatise on Angel Magic. Their system for relating the Calls to the Tablets has become the standard model. Most significant is their elaborate system of attributes for the squares of the Elemental Tablets, which seeks to unite Enochian magick with cabalistic and Rosicrucian lore to give a complete symbolic representation of the magickal universe.

In this system, each division and rank in the Tablets is connected with specific types of magickal forces -- elemental, planetary, zodiacal, or sephirotic. For example, the 36 squares of the Great Cross are associated with the 36 decanates of the zodiac; the ten squares of the calvary crosses in the Lesser Angles are connected with the sephiroth of the Tree of Life.

The individual letters of the names in a given rank represent sub-forces or special manifestations of the represented type, distinguished by the addition of lesser attributes. A given square can have up to four attributes, depending on its type and its position in a given Tablet and Lesser Angle. Additionally, each letter of the angelic alphabet is given a separate attribute to one of the figures used in geomantic divination. Diagrams showing the complete listing of attributes for all the squares can be found in Aleister Crowley's Liber LXXXIX vel Chanokh.

Golden Dawn magicians explore the squares astrally, using a technique involving the visualization of a truncated pyramid. Each side of the visualized pyramid is colored and emblazoned with the symbols of the square's attributes. The magician recites the appropriate Calls and vibrates relevant divine and angelic names, and concentrates the invoked power in the pyramid. The power is then seen rising up the sides of the pyramid and shooting out into magickal space in the form of a beam of light. The magician enters this beam and rises with it through the planes until he comes to a landscape or space that expresses the invoked power. This technique has proven to be highly effective in practice.

At least one Golden Dawn offshoot has applied the pyramid method to the angels of the Heptarchia.

Aleister Crowley

Aleister Crowley's work with the Enochian magick generally follows the Golden Dawn system. He is known primarily for his explorations of the 30 Aethyrs, published in The Vision and the Voice. This work established the idea that the Aethyrs might represent a means of initiation, and set a standard for methodical exploration that few have equaled. It also fixed Crowley's peculiar perspective on the process of transcendence in the minds of many students of the occult.

Crowley envisioned the Aethyrs as being connected with the sephiroth of the Tree of Life in groups of three. He also mentions that each Aethyr "folds up" into the next higher Aethyr in some way, so that as one progresses through the Aethyrs from the last to the first, one is also withdrawing one's being from the lower, already-experienced levels. (This is parallel to the technique he describes in Liber Yod, in which the magician achieves union with the godhead by progressively banishing all other levels and powers.)

Under this conception, the Aethyr ZAX, whose Parts have names formed from the Cross of Union, is the highest of the three attributed to Chesed. It is thus the last Aethyr one encounters before moving into the Supernal Triad and achieving transcendence. Crowley envisioned this movement as the crossing of an "Abyss" or gap, during which the magician encounters an Enochian devil named Choronzon dwelling therein.

Crowley's other contribution to Enochian magick was the adaptation of the Golden Dawn pyramid system for use with O.T.O.-style sex magick. In this technique, physical representations of the pyramids are made for the name of an angel, but inverted to form square "cups". These serve as talismans, which are charged using the end-product of the sex magick operation.

Aurum Solis

The published documents of the Aurum Solis magickal order show a unique method of using Liber Scientiae. Their research has focused on discovering the nature and uses of the numbered-but-unnamed "ministers" residing in each of the 91 Parts.

They used the second Angelic Call along with the Call of the Aethyrs, in order to cause the invoked forces to manifest at the "material" pole of their range; this brings the ministers, who are the lowest members of a Part's hierarchy, into the greatest state of activity. For each group of ministers they have compiled a name, an image of their appearance, and a list of their powers and the aspects of existence on which they can act. Given the large number of Parts, they have a virtual encyclopedia of useful magickal effects. Since they have not published any magickal records using their methods, there is no way to determine how well their system works in practice.

In contrast, their use of the regular Tablet hierarchies appears to be fairly conventional, in line with the Golden Dawn methods, but not using the G.D.'s elaborate system of attributes.

The Church of Satan and the Temple of Set

Quoting Israel Regardie, from his introduction to Aleister Crowley's The Vision and the Voice:

One advisor ... had suggested the discontinuation of the whole project. His motive was that a California group sensationally engaged in the practice of Satanism had appropriated and published the Enochian rituals or Calls in a so-called Satanic Bible. Because of this, it was felt that there were now undesirable contacts associated with the rituals that could only lead to chaos and confusion.

The author of this debased volume had made enough changes in the various Calls to rule out any likelihood of confusion with those presented here in their original form. Wherever the word God is used, the author had substituted the name of Satan or one of the equivalent terms in its stead. The same holds true for several other pieces of similar stupidity.

As a primarily religious organization, the CoS used the Calls (as a former member put it) as "tools for psychodramatic ritual"; i.e., as something mysterious to add glamor to their services. There is no indication that the founder ever took the Calls seriously as a tool, or that they were ever used systematically by the CoS for explicitly magickal purposes.

The Church of Satan's schismatic offshoot, the Temple of Set, has abandoned the CoS versions of the Calls. Rather than rewrite the angelic language of the Calls, Michael Aquino (founder of the Temple of Set) has substantially revised the translations of the Calls to conform to his own philosophy and myth-system. The Calls and Mr. Aquino's "translations" are presented as the "Word of Set" in the ToS manual The Crystal Tablet of Set.

In some instances, Aquino's version departs substantially from the original translations; in others, the differences are small enough that one might call them justifiable poetic license. But the overall sense conveyed is dramatically different from the original. Quoting Mr. Aquino:

An "Enochian purist" might question the translation provided by the Word of Set in that it is not the English version recorded by John Dee in his diaries. My answer is simply that I approached the Keys not as a historian seeking to reprint what Dee did, but as a magician seeking to operate the same "magical machinery" that Dee did -- and to operate it with greater care and precision than he did. Hence it is not a case of my "corrupting Dee", but rather of my uncorrupting something which predated Dee's own existence, and which was, after all, not of his [or Kelley's] authorship.

Mr. Aquino does not provide any explanation of how the "Word of Set" came to be delivered by angels espousing an emphatically Christian world-view.

Order of the Cubic Stone

From Robin Cousins:

The British graded occult group based in Wolverhampton, the Order of the Cubic Stone, (flourished 1965-91, now dormant) taught the Enochian system, strictly according to John Dee. The Golden Dawn system of Enochia was regarded as inaccurate and members were not encouraged to use its correspondences. Because membership was country-wide, most work was done individually or in small local groups (ie, if odd members lived near one another), but virtually no record of this work was held centrally. A few remaining members still practice today, but there is no overall coordination.

Benjamin Rowe

Benjamin Rowe is an active magician working exclusively with Enochian magick, known for methodical, thorough workings, and for developing unusual, non-traditional techniques and viewpoints. He has made an effort to expose his work to public scrutiny and criticism, believing that the state of the art can only be advanced through open communications. He is currently (1997) involved in a long-term project exploring all of the 91 Parts of Liber Scientiae in sequence.

The most noted of Rowe's technical innovations is a method by which an elemental Tablet can be transformed into a three-dimensional astral structure, an "Enochian Temple". Properly constructed, the temple acts to produce intense concentrations of the powers of the entire Tablet in a balanced form. The power creates a "gate" which can be used to explore symbols of any magickal system, to produce permanent changes in the consciousness of the magician, or to break through into extraterrestrial magickal realms. He believes other uses are possible, but has not yet explored them.

Examining the Golden Dawn system of correspondences for the Tablets, Rowe realized that their system was effectively upside down. That is, the highest ranks of the Tablets had attributes to magickal powers universally considered minor, while the major magickal powers were attributed to the lowest ranks of the Tablets. The whole seemed based on coincidences of number rather than experience. He spent several years determining the nature of the various ranks through experiment, and devised and experimentally tested a new system of correspondences that corrects the defects of the G.D. system and, he believes, accurately reflects the actual nature of the Enochian powers.

Miscellaneous Issues

Relation of Enochian to the Necronomicon

Since the Necronomicon is a literary device created by H.P. Lovecraft, any connection between the Enochian magick and the Necronomicon must also be fictional. In one of his stories, Lovecraft stated that John Dee was at one time in possession of a Latin translation of the book, which he translated into English. In their spoof Necronomicon, authors Langford, Turner, and Wilson suggested that Liber Loagaeth was actually a cipher version of the Evil Book, which they had managed to decode. Neither of these ideas is supported by the records.

Colin Low has perpetuated and embellished these fictional excursions in his "Necronomicon Anti-FAQ" and other writings. Some modern readers, lacking a sense of humor and irony, have taken his work seriously; as a consequence, the myth of Dee's connection with the book has taken on an air of Utter Authority among certain gullible portions of the magickal community.

Relation of Enochian to the biblical Book of Enoch

The various pseudepigraphic "Books of Enoch" were unknown in Europe at the time the magick was revealed to Dee and Kelly. Dee's work was aimed at discovering what he believed to be the contents of these books; he had no direct knowledge of their nature. The Enochian magick and the angels' origin-myth for it bear no direct relation to the actual contents of the books now known by the name.

Enochian magick and the apocalypse

There are two major threads of thought in Christian millennialism. One thread, called postmillennialism, is largely Utopian in nature. It sees the millennium as the beginning of a period of gradual perfection of conditions on Earth; the basic principle is that the world must be brought to perfection and the City of God built on Earth before the Christ will return, and it is only after the Christ returns that the world will end. Two decades after Dee, this form of millennialism was the driving force behind the religious groups spearheading the English colonization of America. Dee's own thought contains many post-mil ideals; in seeking out the Enochian magick, one of his goals was to gain a means of bringing earthly governments and societies into line with the design of God, thereby bringing the return of Christ closer.

The other thread, called premillennialism, is the more catastrophic variety. In this version, the typical scenario is that the Christ returns, and then the current "evil" societies of mankind will be destroyed in worldwide disasters, while the elect are preserved from harm. After the world is destroyed, the Christ joins with the faithful in a City built by God to rule over the Earth for a thousand years.

While there is a strong millennialist flavor to the angels' pronouncements, they are almost uniformly of the postmillennialist variety. The angels divided the world into four ages. The first of these began with the creation and ended with the Flood; the second ended with the first appearance of the Christ. The revelation of Liber Loagaeth ended the third age and ushered in the final age, in which the world would be brought to perfection prior to the return of the Christ.

The Calls and Tablets were in turn intended to be one means by which this perfection could be brought about. One particular passage establishes this clearly.

On February 11, 1584, Dee & company had arrived at the Polish manor of Albert Laskie, and had time to settle for a few days and do some magickal work. This day was the first operation of a new series of works after the hiatus. And during the work, the spirit Nalvage appeared for the first time to introduce himself and state his purpose.

The session begins with a colloquy in Latin between an evil spirit that settles by Kelly's left shoulder, and a good spirit that settles by his right shoulder. After some discussion the dexter spirit banishes the sinister. He spends a couple of paragraphs praising the Doctrine to be revealed, then says:

Nalvage:

"These [are] latter days, and the end of harvest must have also Labourers: For no Age passeth away, but through the hands of God, who maketh the end of his doings known to the World: To the end, [that] the World may consent unto him in Glory. So that this Doctrine, is the mysteries of the word of God, sealed from the beginning, now delivered unto man, for that Reformation which must be in one Unity established unto the end. [emphasized in original] The very part of that Circle, which comprehendeth the Mysteries of the Highest, in his Prophets, Apostles, and Ministers yet to come, which are alive and shall bear witness of eternal comfort.

"The fruit of our doctrine is, that God should be praised. For of ourselves we seek no glory: But we serve you to your comfort, teaching you the will of God, in the self same Christ, that was crucified; sold and died in the Patriarchs, and published to the World by his Disciples, and is now taught to you, in the remission of sins... greatest in the world, for the end of all things. The very key and entrance into the secret mysteries of God, (in respect to his determination on earth) bringing with it reward in the end of eternal glory, which is the greatest Treasure."

[paragraphs omitted]

Nalvage:

"These things are your parts, and portions sealed, as well by your own knowledge, as the fruit of your intercession, The Knowledge of Gods Creatures.

"Unto me are delivered five parts [i.e., months] of time: Wherein I will open, teach, and uncover the secrets of that speech, that holy mysterie. To the intent the CABALA of NATURE, in voyce, substance of bodie, and measure in all parts may be known. For there is nothing secret, but it shall be revealed, and the Son of GOD shall be known in POWER, and establish a Kingdom with righteousness in the earth, and then cometh the end.

"For the earth must come under subjection, and must be made pure. That death may be swallowed in his own Kingdom, and the enemy of righteousness find no habitation. The word of God endureth forever. His promises are just. His spirit is truth. His judgements inscrutable. Himself universal. He it is of whom you labour. The promises of God in this earthly noble man shall be fulfilled. Salomon used the places of honor, and was exalted."

While not so clear as later speech from this source, nonetheless some things are apparent. Nalvage is a postmillennialist. That is, he holds that the world must be brought to a state of perfection and holiness before the Christ can return; the City of God must be established by man, and then the end comes. The Calls and Tablets (which he begins to deliver two months later) are the tool by which this perfection of the Earth and mankind can be brought about.

many letters clockwise to find the next letter of the name; where the number was below the letter, he was to count counterclockwise. Each name ended when he reached one of the six letters without a number.

Thus, seven names were produced:

Thaaoth
Galaas
Gethog
Horlon (the second "o" is actually a lowercase omega)
Innon
Aaoth
Galethog

Dee was instructed to strike out the first "a" of the double a's in the first two names, to produce the names "Thaoth" and "Galas". When this is done, the seven names comprise forty letters, the same as the number of letters in the outer ring of the Sigil.

Of these seven names the angel Uriel said: "every letter containing an Angel of Brightness: comprehending the 7 inward powers of God, known to none but himself: a sufficient BOND to urge all creatures to life or death, or anything else contained in this world."

No mention is made of the remaining letters in the outer ring, not used to form these names.

Only the last of these names appears overtly in the sigil, in the arcs immediately inside the outer ring. To each letter of "Galethog", a cross was appended to produce a set of sigil-like images:

These sigils were placed, one to each arc, counterclockwise around the Sigil of Ameth. Of these sigils Uriel said: "Those seven letters are the 7 Seats of the One and everlasting GOD. His 7 secret Angels proceeding from every letter and cross so formed: referring in substance [i.e., in essence] to the FATHER: in form, to the SON: and inwardly to the HOLY GHOST."

The letters in the outermost heptagon, just inside the arcs, are derived from the names of the "Seven Angels who stand before the presence of God" listed in Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy. The names of these angels are written vertically in a seven-by-seven grid; in the final square is placed a cross, representing the Earth, thus:

Z	l	l	R	H	i	a
a	Z	C	a	a	c	b
p	a	u	p	n	h	r
h	d	m	h	i	a	l
k	k	a	a	e	e	e
i	i	e	e	l	l	l

The heptagon is filled by reading the rows horizontally from left to right, applying one row to each segment of the heptagon, going clockwise. Following their usual procedure, the angels presented the letters of the rows first, and only afterwards showed how these rows formed the names of the Angels.

The remaining divine and angelic names in the Sigil are all derived, by various means, from the names of the traditional planetary archangels, which are written within and around the pentagram at the center of the Sigil. As with the above table, the derivation was only demonstrated after the names were presented; this served to demonstrate that the angels were working from knowledge not available to Dee and Kelly, and were therefore more than figments of the magicians' imaginations.

The names of the planetary archangels were formed into a 7-by-7 tablet, by writing them diagonally from the upper left corner in standard cabalistic order beginning with the archangel of Saturn. The final "L" of each name was replaced in the tablet by numbers, usually appended to the preceding letter:

S	A	A	I ²¹ _{8.}	E	M	E ⁸
B	T	Z	K	A	S	E ³⁰
H	E	I	D	E	N	E
D	E	I	M	O	30	A
I ²⁶	M	E	G	C	B	E
I	L	A	O	I ²¹ _{8.}	V	N
I	H	R	L	A	A	21 8.

The seven names between the outer heptagon and the heptagram are "Names of God, not known to the Angels; neither can [they] be spoken nor read of man." They are derived from this tablet by reading the rows from left to right, and are placed in clockwise sequence around the Sigil. In the Angels' view, the derivation shown here is the reverse of the truth. Rather than the planetary angels producing these god-names, "these Names, bring forth 7 angels: the 7 Angels and Governors in the heavens next to us". Thus the Sigil, from its outer ring to its center, represents a descent of power from God into the world.

Between these God-names and the Planetary Archangels in the Sigil stand four additional ranks of beings. Even though they are outside the Archangels (and therefore presumably superior to them) it seems that they are in some way the "children" of the Archangels:

"Every letter of the Angels' names, bringeth forth 7 daughters. Every daughter bringeth forth her daughter, which is 7. Every daughter-her-daughter bringeth forth a son. Every son in himself, is 7. Every son has his son, and his son is 7."

The names in these groups are derived from the tablet by taking the letters diagonally as shown in the diagrams below.

The Seven Tables from which the names of the 49 "Good Angels" are derived.

The arrangement of the Seven Tables.

Note that each angel's name forms an outward spiral in this arrangement. The circle surrounding the tables was described as "very bright, with nothing in it."

Thirty letters in the second and third tables below are missing in the originals, due to damage. The versions shown are reconstructed from information contained elsewhere in the records, and probably are not identical to the originals in all respects.

Patterns for the Formation of Each King’s “Ministers of the Hours”

The Ministers’ names for five of the Heptarchic Kings are formed by selecting certain letters out of six of the seven sectors of the Tabula Bonorum, beginning with the sector ruled by King Bobogel and going clockwise around the table. No names are formed from the first sector, ruled by King Baligon (aka Carmara). The green lines in the illustration above show how the first Minister for each of these Kings is formed; the same lines are applied to the next five sectors to form the names of the King’s other Ministers.

In the cases of Kings Baligon and Bnapsen different methods are used. For Baligon, the names of the seven Kings are listed in their order on the Tabula Bonorum. Ignoring the initial “B”s of their names, lines are drawn down the columns to produce the names of the Ministers. This is identical to the method used to get the letters on the border of the Holy Table of Practice, so the Ministers’ names also appear in that border.

In Bnapsen's case, only a portion of the ministers' names derives from the Tabula Bonorum. The names of the Kings are listed in sequence beginning with Bobogel; the name of the 49th and last angel, Bamnode, is substituted for Baligon. Then diagonals are drawn as shown in the illustration to obtain the partial names. Letters from some unspecified source (possibly just random letters) are used to fill out the names to a length of seven letters each.

Since Bnapsen is given power over "wicked spirits", I speculate that the letters that are not from the Tabula Bonorum introduce an element of chaos that permits the holy King to make contact with the unholy beings he controls.

Appendix E

The Twelve by Seven Table in its Two Forms

o	g	o	n	r	o	l	e	g	o	b	o
o	n	o	m	t	u	r	o	p	e	n	y

s	e	g	l	a	r	a	z	a	m	u	l
l	o	n	e	g	a	n	o	g	i	l	a

First Form

The table is formed from the names of the Heptarchic Kings and Princes, without their initial letter "B"s. Each row contains the King and Prince of a particular day, beginning with Sunday and following in sequence around the Tabula Bonorum. The names are written from right to left.

The central squares outlined in red are called "The Heart". The squares surrounding the Heart are called "The Flesh". The two columns on each end are called "The Skin".

The Heptarchic Lamén is formed from this Tablet by transposition of the letters. Letters from the Flesh are placed in the outer square of the Lamén. Letters from the Heart are placed in the corners of the inner square. Letters from the Skin fill the central diamond.

a	l	i	g	o	n	o	r	n	o	g	o
o	b	o	g	e	l	e	f	a	f	e	s
a	b	a	l	e	l	u	t	m	o	n	o
y	n	e	p	o	r	l	i	s	d	o	n n	a	s	p	o	l	r	o	r	g	e	s
n	a	p	s	e	n	r	a	l	g	e	s
l	u	m	a	z	a	a	g	e	n	o	l

Second Form

A second version of this table uses the same names, but writes them from left to right. The names of the Kings and Princes are written in the numerical sequence in which they appear in the Tabulum Bonorum, rather than grouping them by the day they rule.

This version of the Table is used to form the letters found on the Holy Table of Practice. The "Heart" is extracted and rotated ninety degrees counterclockwise, to form the 3-by-4 tablet in the center of the Holy Table. The letters around the edge of the Holy Table are found by reading the letters down the columns of this table from the right side to the left. The letters are applied to the Holy Table, 21 to a side, beginning at the upper right corner and going counter clockwise.

The six columns on the lefthand side of this version also form the names of the "Ministers of the Hours" for King Baligon / Carmara.

Dee Manuscripts

Sloane ms. 3191. Dee's book of ceremonial magick, consisting of extracts and compilations from the angelic conversations. Contains three books: 49 Claves Angelicae Anno 1584 Cracoviae, Liber Scientiae Auxillii et Victoriae Terrestris, and De Heptarchia Mystica.

Sloane ms. 3188. Mysteriorum Libri Quinti. Contains the records of scrying sessions for the period from December 1581 to May, 1583, divided into five books. These diaries are the raw information given to Dee and Kelly concerning the Heptarchic magick, and the beginnings of Liber Loagaeth.

Sloane ms. 3189. Liber Mysteriorum Sextus et Sanctus. Contains the bulk of Liber Loagaeth, consisting of 49 double-sided tables of letters and numbers.

Cotton Appendix XLVI, Parts 1 & 2. Contains thirteen "books", covering the actions from May, 1583 to September 1585, plus additional material from later periods. These records are the raw information given on the Angelic Calls, the Great Table, and Liber Scientiae.

Other manuscripts sometimes cited are copies or extracts from the above manuscripts.

Published versions of the Dee Diaries

Casaubon, Meric., D.D., A True and Faithful Relation of What Passed for Many Years Between Dr. John Dee and some Spirits, Magickal Childe, 1992, New York, NY. A facsimile of the original 1659 edition, produced by Clay Holden. Contains most of the material from Cotton Appendix XLVI, with a long introduction by Casaubon that seeks to prove that Dee and Kelly contacted evil spirits. Early English typescript and speech conventions make this work difficult to read at times. Also contains a "lost" section of the diaries, found by Clay Holden.

Peterson, Joseph, ed., Mysteriorum Libri Quinti, Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks number 20. 1985, Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks, Felindenys, Wales. An edition of Sloane ms. 3188 in modern typescript, with annotations by Elias Ashmole and the editor.

James, Geoffrey, The Enochian Evocation of Dr. John Dee, Heptangle Books, 1989, Gillette, NJ. [Reprinted by Llewellyn, 1994 as The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee] Largely a version of Sloane ms. 3191 in modern typescript. James' translations of the Latin have come under criticism, as has his editing of some passages in English.

Turner, Robert (ed.): The Heptarchia Mystica of John Dee, Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks 17: Edinburgh 1983, 81 p. Collation of two MS copies in: Sloane 3191 and Additional MS. 36,674.

The standard Heptarchic source in English, with essential commentary on the Sigillum dei Aemeth and the Holy Table.

Turner, Robert. Elizabethan Magic: The Art and the Magus, foreword by Colin Wilson; with contributory material by Patricia Shore Turner and Robin E. Cousins; illustrated by Charles H. Cattell and Jane O'Reilly; translations from the Latin by Christopher Upton, Shaftesbury: Element Books, 1989, ill., maps, bibliography. An excellent distillation of the essentials from Dee's original Enochian material and other magical documents of the same period. Robin Cousins' material on the geographic locations governed by the Parts of Liber Scientiae is a unique resource.

Hall of Shame

Schueler, Gerald. Enochian Magick, Advanced Guide to Enochian Magick, Enochian Yoga, Enochian Tarot, Enochian Physics, etc. All published by Llewellyn Publications, St. Paul, MN.

Schueler's first two "Enochian" works are hasty and unscholarly assemblages of material from the Golden Dawn (mostly via Aleister Crowley's inadequate presentation in Liber LXXXIX vel Chanoek and from his The Vision and the Voice), coupled with the products of Schueler's prolific imagination. Robert Turner called the existence of these volumes "lamentable", and I agree without reservation. These two books consist almost entirely of errors, misconceptions, fabrications, and flummery; readers will be far better off going to Schueler's sources than trying to extract anything useful from them.

His later books are almost entirely the products of his own imagination, and so at least have the advantage of coming from a single source. Readers have had widely varying opinions as to their usefulness. His Enochian Tarot is worth purchasing for the artwork by Sallie Ann Glassman, regardless of one's opinion of its design. Enochian Physics is distinguished by having the lowest information content of any book its size published in this century. In the chapters that are not adaptations from Aleister Crowley, the information content approaches zero.

Tyson, Donald. Tetragrammaton: The Secret to Evoking the Angelic Powers and the Key to the Apocalypse. 1995, Llewellyn Publications, St. Paul, MN.

Tyson combines the Enochian material with Fundamentalist millennialism and Lovecraftian horror fiction, to paint a picture of the Angelic Calls as the means by which the apocalypse will be brought about. In the process, he twists facts to suit his thesis, selectively interprets the Calls, and blithely dismisses contrary portions of the record as "not what was intended". Much of his "analysis" of the Calls is in the style perfected by Kenneth Grant. That is, grab any association that seems to support your idea, taking it out of context as necessary, and disregarding such minor things as anachronisms, logical non sequiturs, etc.

Basic Rituals

"And there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clad with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars; and she being with child, cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered" (Revelation 12:1-2).

Pronunciation Symbols

The student should thoroughly familiarize him or herself with the pronunciation symbols given below. Although the symbols are unique to this book, they appear in pronunciation guidelines in every Ritual and provide the student with more precise pronunciation information than has ever been available before in a book on Ceremonial Magic. The average student should require no more than ten or fifteen minutes to become familiar with these unique symbols. Due to the frequent use in Magic of foreign, Enochian, and unfamiliar words, the pronunciation guidelines given in the text of the Rituals are quite helpful when performing Rituals.

In a few instances where sounds have no exact English equivalents, examples are given from other languages. For English speakers unable to pronounce these sounds correctly, their closest English equivalents should be employed until the pronunciation of the correct sounds are learned.

Shortened Vowels

In Hebrew, there exist certain half-vowels that are shortened versions of usual Hebrew vowel sounds. These Hebrew half-vowels are indicated in transliterations in this book underlined as follows, and should be vibrated only briefly. Although the distinction between regular and shortened vowels is nearly never used in contemporary, spoken Hebrew, it is nonetheless interesting in Magic due to the extended fashion in which Names are vibrated. When vibrating Names containing shortened Hebrew vowels (underlined in the pronunciation guidelines), vibrate these vowel sounds only half the length of time as other vowels, like half-notes in music.

Grade SignsSigns of the Neophyte Grade

The Signs of the Neophyte Grade are the Sign of the Enterer and the Sign of Silence. Use the Sign of the Enterer, also known as the Sign of Horus or the Attacking Sign, primarily to project Magical Energy. Use it in the charging of Pentagrams and Hexagrams in Ceremonial Magic and to charge Talismans in Practical Magic.

To perform the sign of the Enterer, stand with your feet parallel about shoulders width apart. Visualize a star shining just above your head about the size of a baseball. Inhale silently, and visualize a shaft of white Light coming down through your body from the star above you to a second star beneath your feet. As you inhale, draw down the light and raise your elbows upward and outward, parallel with your shoulders. Hold your hands flat beside your neck, palms downward, fingers extended, pointing forwards. Suddenly and forcefully, step forward with your left foot, thrust your hands directly forward, and lower your head between your arms, eyes forward. As you do so, exhale silently, visualize the Light rising back up through your body, and project it out through your fingertips.

¹⁶ The Hebrew pronunciation of "r" is as in French "rue" or "riche".

Enochian Keys or Calls

Introduction

Enochian Magic is one of the most controversial aspects of Rosicrucian Magic. Israel Regardie warned that "It is a very powerful system, and if used carelessly or indiscriminately will bring about disaster and spiritual disintegration."² Paul Foster Case considered the Enochian system to be hopelessly tainted, and removed Enochian Magic entirely when he reformulated Golden Dawn material into his B.O.T.A. Donald Tyson has even suggested that Enochian Magic was revealed to John Dee as a means of setting in motion the destructive forces of the apocalypse, as described in the book of Revelation in the New Testament.³

While there does exist a certain parallel between the English translation of a few of the Enochian Calls and the apocalyptic imagery of the book of Revelation, this imagery may be considered as symbolical of spiritual realities rather than descriptive of physical events. In any case, much of the fear surrounding Enochian Magic has been greatly exaggerated.

The author of the present book has been working with the Enochian system, including the Enochian Calls, for many years, with great success, and without fulfilling any of the aforementioned predictions of gloom and doom. The Enochian Calls serve primarily as Energy amplifiers, and when properly used, clearly add great power to Rituals of Ceremonial Magic. Nonetheless, the decision whether or not to employ the Enochian Calls with the Rituals contained in the present book must be left to the discretion, personal responsibility, and risk of each Magician.

A primary difficulty in working with Enochian Magic lies in finding a correct or satisfactory means of pronunciation. Names derived from the Enochian Tablets are particularly problematic as consonants therein are frequently so clumped together that such Names are virtually impossible to pronounce.

In recognition of this problem, certain rules were laid out by W. Wynn Wescott and S. L. MacGregor Mathers for the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Wescott suggested that each letter should be pronounced separately. Using this method, for example, the consonant clump "pfmng" would be pronounced "pee-ef-em-en-gee." Mathers instead proposed that the first vowel in the name of the phonetically equivalent Hebrew letter be employed. For example, the Hebrew name for phonetical equivalent of the letter "l" is "Lamed." Therefore, Mathers suggests that the vowel "a" be used to render words pronounceable when the letter "l" appears in consonant clumps.

Each of these methods are indeed quite useful when working with Names drawn from the Enochian Tablets. Unfortunately, however, the Mathers and Wescott rules have tended to be applied far too rigidly and dogmatically, especially to the Enochian Calls, resulting in endless strings of extraneous syllables. For example, one recent book on the Golden Dawn transliterated the word "Ozongon" from an Enochian Call as "Oh-zoad-oh-noo-goh-noo."

Numerous clues to correct pronunciation may be found in original manuscripts⁴ handwritten by John Dee. These manuscripts clearly indicate that the dogmatic application of such rules to the Enochian Calls was neither originally intended by Dee nor by the Angels which dictated them. The Calls properly pronounced and free of surplus syllables remain sonorous in the extreme, reflecting the vibrant beauty of the language of Angels.

The Enochian Calls given in this appendix have been retransliterated from Sloane Manuscript 3191. In preparing this new transliteration, every effort has been made to restore the pronunciation to that most likely intended by John Dee and the Angels. The student who prefers, however, to use the Wescott-Mathers method will find the Calls elsewhere so transliterated by Israel Regardie.⁵

This fresh transliteration of Sloane MS 3191 has presented numerous difficulties and raised interesting questions. To begin with, the word spacing in the handwritten version of the Angelic Calls is so bad in certain places that is nearly impossible to distinguish where one Enochian word ends and the next one begins. Furthermore, the fashion that the English translations are arranged above the Enochian text in the original manuscript is of little use in overcoming this problem. Every effort has therefore been made to reproduce, as closely as possible, the original word spacing of the Enochian in the transliteration given below.

The most fascinating question regarding pronunciation raised by an examination of Dee's handwritten version of the Angelic Calls in Sloane MS 3191 is his copious use of diacritical marks. This mystery appears to have been completely overlooked or ignored by contemporary Enochian scholarship. The primary diacritical marks used by Dee are ' , ^, and ¨, and they are used over vowels in ninety-five per cent of all instances. These diacritics have been included in the new transliteration as faithfully as possible. In each instance where an Enochian word is given, the spelling used by John Dee in Sloane 3191 including his diacritical marks has been reproduced side by side with its new transliteration shown in bold type. Unfortunately, however, certain substitutions for the diacritical marks actually used by Dee have been obliged by editorial considerations. The mark ^ as in "up" has been substituted for the mark actually used by Dee, which most closely resembles the upward pointing curve used in modern English to indicate a short vowel sound. It is hoped that the inclusion of these diacritical markings shall stimulate additional research regarding their actual meaning.

An examination of Sloane MS 3191 by various Professors of modern and classical European languages and linguistics has unfortunately not yet conclusively ascertained the meaning of the diacritical markings. It has been determined, however, that their usage apparently does not match neither that of Latin, Greek, nor any Germanic, Latin, nor Slavic derivative language neither as they are employed today nor as they were used during the Sixteenth Century. It is therefore likely that they represent a personal phonetical code devised by Dee for his personal use.

The transliteration methodology which has been employed in the present book for all Enochian words is outlined below and has been adhered to in a consistent fashion. The resulting fresh transliteration of Enochian Names and Calls remains steeped in Rosicrucian tradition, yet as true as possible to the original manuscripts as well.

Transliteration Methodology

1. Every effort has been made to avoid the addition extraneous vowels and syllables.
2. The phonetic value of each individual letter has been preserved.
3. Wherever necessary, consonants which may be elongated through prolonged vibration as suggested by Wescott (particularly l, m, n, r, v, and z) have been used as separate syllables (avoiding thereby the addition of extraneous vowels).
4. Wherever an extra vowel is absolutely necessary, the first vowel in the name of the equivalent Hebrew letter has been employed as suggested by Mathers.
5. In the choice of vowel sounds, preference has been given to the phonetic values of vowel sounds most frequently used in Hebrew as suggested by Mathers.
6. The sound of the letter z should be elongated through prolonged vibration. This appears to be the true meaning of the marginal notes made by Dee in Sloane 3191 rather than the literal pronunciation of "z" as "zod," the Elizabethan appellation of the letter "z."⁶
7. The letter Q has been transliterated as "kw."⁷ In cases where there is no vowel following in the Enochian, it has been transliterated as "kwâ."
8. There is no evidence to be found in the manuscripts indicating an Enochian equivalent of the English sounds of the combined consonants "sh," "ph," or "th." They have therefore been transliterated in such a fashion that the phonetic values of the individual letters have been retained. There are numerous instances, however, where marginal notations do suggest that "ch" should be pronounced as a k. In the present transliteration, this "ch" has been given a guttural phonetical value similar to the German "ch" as used in the word "Buch." This has been indicated as an underlined "k" in the transliterations.
9. There are sporadic instances where marginal notes indicate that the letter "g" should be pronounced as "dg." Obviously "g" has two phonetic values in Enochian: that of a hard g (as in "go") as well as one which closely approximates the English "j" (as in "job"). Attempts have been made to be as consistent as possible with the transliteration of this letter. Patterns revealed by marginal notation have been given priority. In doubtful instances the more sonorous option has been employed.
10. According to marginal notes, the letter "c" is at times to be transliterated as "k" and at other times as "s." Attempts have been made to be as consistent as possible with the transliteration of this letter. Patterns revealed by marginal notation have been given priority. In doubtful instances the more sonorous option has been employed.
11. In Dee's handwriting the uppercase letters "U" and "V" are consistently rendered as "V." Furthermore, there are numerous instances wherein from one place to another in Sloane MS 3191 Dee also interchanges the lower case letters "u" and "v" as well. Every attempt has nonetheless been made to maintain the phonetic value of the letters "u" and "v" as they actually appear in the manuscript except in cases where an extra vowel would have then become necessary. In certain instances where an additional vowel is required by the text "v" has been rendered "vù."

The Enochian Calls and the Elemental Tablets

The Application of the Calls to the Enochian Elemental Tablets is resumed below. The attributions of the Enochian Calls to the Enochian Planetary and Zodiacal Tablets are given in appendix II, "The Book of the Concourse of Planetary and Zodiacal Forces."

Call Rules

- 1 The Tablet of Union as a whole.
- 2 Spirit in general and specifically within the Tablet of Union; to be used following the first Enochian Call.
- 3 The Tablet of Air, the lesser angle of Air of the Tablet of Air, and Rules Spirit of Air, EXARP (when used following the first and second Enochian Calls).
- 4 The Tablet of Water, the lesser angle of Water of the Tablet of Water, and Spirit of Water, HCOMA (when used following the first and second Enochian Calls).
- 5 The Tablet of Earth, the lesser angle of Earth of the Tablet of Earth, and Spirit of Earth, NANTA (when used following the first and second Enochian Calls).
- 6 The Tablet of Fire, the lesser angle of Fire of the Tablet of Fire, and Spirit of Fire, BITOM (when used following the first and second Enochian Calls).
- 7 The lesser angle of Water of the Tablet of Air.
- 8 The lesser angle of Earth of the Tablet of Air.
- 9 The lesser angle of Fire of the Tablet of Air.
- 10 The lesser angle of Air of the Tablet of Water.
- 11 The lesser angle of Earth of the Tablet of Water.
- 12 The lesser angle of Fire of the Tablet of Water.
- 13 The lesser angle of Air of the Tablet of Earth.
- 14 The lesser angle of Water of the Tablet of Earth.
- 15 The lesser angle of Fire of the Tablet of Earth.
- 16 The lesser angle of Air of the Tablet of Fire.
- 17 The lesser angle of Water of the Tablet of Fire.
- 18 The lesser angle of Earth of the Tablet of Fire.

The Forty-Nine Enochian Calls⁸

The First Call

Ol	[òl]	I
sonf	[sònf]	raygn
vorsg,	[vòrs-j]	over you
gohó	[gò-hò]	sayeth
lad	[yâd]	the God
balt	[bâlt]	of Justice
lansh	[lân-sâh]	in powre exalted

⁸ The Angels which dictated the Angelic Calls to John Dee explained that the first Call was to remain secret and could not be revealed, since it appertained to the Godhead alone. Therefore, in actual practice there are only forty-eight Calls. The Calls are numbered nonetheless beginning with number one, according to tradition and convention.

The Three Essential Skills

All effective magick stands on three legs: IMAGINATION, EMOTION, and FEELING; everything else – all the words and gestures, the implements and costumes, the elaborate circles and furniture – serve only to reinforce and focus these three capacities. If any of these three is lacking, then the work is likely to fail; once you are skilled in using all three, you can dispense with practically all the other things people sometimes insist are essential to the practice.

Of the three, EMOTION is the power that drives the whole show; emotion from the guts, and from the heart. I will go even further; it is not just emotion, but passion that is the power behind magick. Passion in the sense of an intense desire to be connected to that which you are seeking to invoke; a desire that places no restrictions or limits on the connection, but which is so one-pointed that nothing save that which is sought is included within its focus. And passion in the sense of a boundless enthusiasm for the acts by which you seek to create that connection. Admittedly, this is the ideal case; but the closer you can get to it, even for a few moments, the more likely your work is to be successful.

This passion-for-connection is what creates the magickal link between the magician and that which he is invoking; or, if the link already exists, expands it and strengthens it. The emotion literally creates a channel or umbilicus between them, through which energy and knowledge can flow in either direction. The stronger the emotion, the stronger the link becomes; the less energy is lost in side-thoughts and distractions, the stronger the link becomes. Thus a one-pointed focus is most desirable.

But conversely, restrictions the magician places on the connection become constrictions in the link, reducing the potential flow of power through it. If a magician insists that a spiritual force or being manifest itself in a specific way, then it is less likely to appear, or the manifestation will be weaker. But if his desire for connection is unconditional, then a response is much more likely, and will be more powerful when it comes. Similarly, if a magician doing a ritual to obtain money desires that money to appear in the form of a cashier's check, he is less likely to obtain it than if he was willing to accept it in any form.

In its highest form, this unconditional passion becomes almost indistinguishable from what is called "Divine Love", which is the closest that one can come (within the worlds of manifestation) to the transcendental state of the Mother aspect of divinity. Passion-for-connection transforms into a state of pure relationship, pure Love, in which all distinctions are erased; both the nature of the magician and the nature of that being invoked disappear, totally lost in the link between them.

IMAGINATION provides the medium (rather, an opening to the medium) through which magick produces its results. The personal imagination seems to blend seamlessly into the astral light, the larger magickal universe; the point at which one becomes the other is impossible to define clearly. An object that begins as a purely internal construct – created and sustained by the imagination of a magician, propelled by the power of emotion – can move out into the astral light and take on a life independent of its creator. It can gather or become a container for magickal power, and act back on its creator (or on others) in ways that are impossible for him to produce through his imagination alone. Conversely, beings and powers operating on levels the magician cannot yet perceive can make themselves known to the him through his receptive imagination, opening his awareness into new realms of experience.

The symbols used in magick are forms that, when created in the imagination, tend to gather specific types of power from the astral light, which are further limited by the intent of the magician. The shape of the container, in effect, determines what can be put into it; the simpler, rigidly geometric forms (such as the pentagram and hexagram) draw relatively pure, fundamental forces; complex symbols – e.g., god-forms – draw correspondingly complex assemblages of forces.

When the magician projects the image of a symbol onto his surroundings, an extended magickal space is created in which the astral light becomes conditioned into conformity with the symbol. The area becomes more attractive to the types of power invoked, more comfortable for magickal beings having the nature represented by the symbol. The world of the powers and the world of the magician then intersect, making interaction possible.

(A detailed series of practices for developing the imagination and creating a general-purpose magickal space can be found in my article A Short Course in Scrying. This present paper is aimed towards showing by example how it is used in formal rituals.)

FEELING is the third leg of the tripod, and the final key to success in magick. In order to bring into being the conditions you desire, you must create in yourself the sensations and feelings that the things you have created through your imagination are real, and that the goal of the operation has already been accomplished. In the magickal universe, when you act with all your being as if something is already real, it becomes real. This feeling of reality is the trigger that causes a symbol to move from the imagination into the astral light.

This key to magick is simply stated, but in practice it seems to give the greatest difficulty for most people. The usual culprits are intellectual doubts – “I know I am only imagining this” – and fears of various sorts, e.g., “what if it makes me go crazy?” Both of these have to be ruthlessly eliminated from the magician’s consciousness for the duration of the operation. After the work is completely over, you can be as doubtful and fear-ridden as you want; a certain amount of doubt, of critical examination, is healthy and appropriate at that time. But during the work, you must be completely focused on feeling (not thinking) that what you create is real.

Some might be concerned that this “believing makes it real” idea is actually a form of self-hypnosis, a way of fooling oneself by reducing the critical faculties. A genuine success in performing the ritual will dispose of this concern. At some point in the work a threshold is crossed; the strength of the invocation produces an even stronger response from somewhere outside yourself. Events in your magickal space take on a life of their own, at least partially independent of your will. And – most significant – they begin to manifest an intensity, richness and texture that it is utterly impossible for you to produce through your imagination alone, no matter how adept you might be in its use. Once this has been experienced even a skeptical mind must grant that the events are “real” in some sense, even if not in the same way as mundane happenings.

So for magick to be successful, EMOTION must push a link outwards into the magickal universe, IMAGINATION must aim it towards the desired goal, and FEELING must affirm the reality of that which is sought. Full success will not come on the first try; for some people, not even on the fiftieth. It takes time to condition the mind to the proper performance of these practices. But once a single success is attained, additional successes follow at more frequent intervals.

The Golden Dawn's Pentagram Ritual

The Pentagram Ritual is an excellent practice-piece for developing proficiency in these three essential skills. Its physical and verbal elements are simple and easily memorized, enabling the student to give most of his attention to the visualizations and the feelings attending them. But for all its simplicity, it is capable of producing profound effects on the consciousness of the magician. Performing it is also of long-term benefit; it purifies and strengthens the magician's magickal body, and increases his general sensitivity to events in the magickal universe.

Oddly, the most frequently referenced descriptions of the Pentagram Ritual make almost no mention of its imagery and feeling components. Perhaps in the Golden Dawn and Crowley's A.:A.:, these were expected to be the subject of verbal instruction, or were simply assumed to be too obvious to mention. Regardless, it was the absence of such descriptions that prompted a student to request the elaborated version of the ritual that follows.

The Pentagram is a symbol whose power is partly innate, and partly a matter of the magician's intent. Its natural tendency (in the astral light) is to attract a dynamic, active mix of the elemental forces; in contrast, the equal-armed cross attracts the same forces but tends to keep them fixed and distinct from each other. But when the Pentagram is used to invoke a specific element, the element is determined largely by the magician's habitual methods of usage and his intent of the moment. There are several methods of encoding the desired element in the way the Pentagram is drawn; all of these are more or less arbitrary, and depend on consistent use and practice to be effective.

In modern magickal systems, it is customary to associate the elements with the points of the Pentagram as shown in Figure 1. This set of associations derives from the Golden Dawn, and was intended to reflect the positions of the Elemental Tablets within the “Revised” Great Table of the Enochian magickal system. Had they chosen to use the original version of the Great Table (as would seem more appropriate, from more recent research) a substantially different set of associations would result: Earth would be at the upper right point, Water at the lower right, and Fire at the lower left.

Since the Golden Dawn associations have come into general usage, it seems convenient to stay with them. The method of drawing invoking and banishing Pentagrams is also arbitrary, and in this case, the Golden Dawn used a method that is cumbersome, difficult to remember, and contains an undesirable dualism. To replace it, I recommend the method used by the Aurum Solis, which is simple and self-consistent. To draw an invoking Pentagram, draw clockwise from the point associated with the desired element; to draw a banishing Pentagram, draw counterclockwise from the same point.

In the Golden Dawn version of the ritual, the magician is instructed to draw a pentagram of Earth in every quarter. The theory behind this was that the element of Earth serves as container or receptacle for the other three elements. This idea seems to derive from an old interpretation in which Fire, Water, and Air were the true elements, and Earth merely something on which they acted. I feel it more appropriate to use the pentagram of Spirit. Spirit contains all the other elements within itself on an equal basis, and facilitates the transformations between them that make possible activity and life in the manifest world; it is more truly “generic”.

The Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram

The Opening.

1. Stand in the center of the circle, feet together, facing east. Using your thumb, touch the center of your forehead, and vibrate “Ateh.”

As you say “Ateh,” imagine a beam of light coming down from the heavens, and forming a sphere or dome of brilliant white light, about nine inches across, above your head.

Note: Wherever a glowing sphere, column, or line is mentioned it should appear like a neon light, transparent or translucent with every point of its interior emanating light. Your body should be perfectly “transparent” to all these images; that is, the lines and column should pass through your body without being hindered by it in any way.

2. Still using your thumb, gesture slowly down the centerline of your body until your thumb is pointing at the ground between your feet.

As your gesture moves downwards, imagine a column of white light about 3 inches thick, descending from the sphere through the center of your body at the same rate of speed (as if you were “drawing” the column with your gesture). Feel the column as being filled with a vibrating energy that sets up a sympathetic vibration in your body wherever it passes.

Vibrate “Malkuth.”

Imagine the column of light descending into the ground below your feet. Once there, it anchors itself in place and forms another ball of light; this ball starts out a dark red, but quickly becomes brighter and whiter as more energy feeds into it.

3. Touch your right arm at the level of your heart and vibrate “ve-Geburah.”

Imagine a small sphere of light forming where you touch.

Move your hand horizontally to the same point on your left arm and vibrate “ve-Gedulah.”

As you move your hand, imagine another line of white light being traced horizontally through the center of your body, intersecting the vertical column about where your heart is. When the line reaches your left arm, imagine another small ball of light forming there. Then imagine a flow of energy back and forth between them. Feel that energy as it passes through your body, and begins to produce a tingling sensation in your heart.

4. Make a clockwise circle about 6" across around your heart. Vibrate “le-Olahm.”

As soon as you complete this circle, imagine a big pink rose blooming inside it, with its stem at the intersection of the horizontal and vertical lines of the cross. Feel the movements of its petals in your heart as it unfolds. When it is completely unfolded, imagine a rose-pink radiance being emitted from it in all directions. This radiance expands until it completely encloses the cross and your body.

5. Vibrate “Amen.”

Bring your arms down to your sides, relax as much as you can while still standing straight, and take a few moments to appreciate and feel everything that you have visualized so far. You should generate in yourself a sense of satisfaction with what you have done so far, and joy in the result.

6. Let the above visualizations fade. Don't try to “erase” them, just stop giving attention to their maintenance. If they continue to exist without any effort on your part, that's fine. If they disappear, that's fine, too.

Main Ceremony.

7. Advance to the east point of the circle. Draw a large pentagram with your wand, or with the pointed fingers of your hand.

The lines of all the pentagrams, and the circle connecting them, should be seen in a blue-white color. They should have a perceptible, three-dimensional thickness, at least equal to that of a clothesline or thin rope.

Make a stabbing gesture at the center of the pentagram with wand or hand, and vibrate “Yahweh.”

As you vibrate the name, imagine the inside of the pentagram becoming an open window into the Realms of Air. Beyond the window, you should imagine some landscape that seems Airy to you. One image works especially well for me: the view from a Tuscan hill town, the sky an almost painfully brilliant blue, creating a dome so vast and seemingly deep that it dwarfs all the human and natural features of the landscape into insignificance. The “Big Sky” of the American Plains is a similar image. Whatever, you should feel that the landscape is filled to overflowing with the force of Air, vast in extent, all-penetrating, and etherial. Imagine that this realm extends to infinity in the direction you are facing.

Once you have the landscape firmly visualized, imagine a cool wind blowing into your circle through the pentagram. Feel the wind filling up the circle and blowing through your body and soul, leaving no part of you untouched. It blows out and replaces the impure Airy elements of your own nature with pure Airy power. Keep feeling this wind until you feel cleaned out and filled with Airy power.

Note: If you are banishing, you should next feel the power sweeping out of yourself and the circle, back through the pentagram. After which you should imagine the “window” closing again. Same for all the following quarters.

Take a few moments to stop and appreciate whatever degree of Airyness you have managed to bring into the circle. Feel a sense of satisfaction with it, and vow to make it even better the next time. Then stop consciously supporting the images and feelings. At first they will fade, but with continued practice you will find that a residual feeling of the element will remain in the circle throughout the rest of the ceremony.

8. Move clockwise around the circle until you come to the south. Starting at the center of the eastern pentagram, draw a blue-white line as you go. Face the south and draw a large pentagram. Make the stabbing gesture at the center of the pentagram, and vibrate “Adonai.”

Imagine the pentagram opening into the Realms of Fire. The landscape you choose should present a feeling of intense, radiant heat, like that you feel on your face from the Sun, only sourceless and omnidirectional. An appropriate image might be Death Valley at noon, with shimmering waves of heat filling space in all directions. Or the surface of the Sun -- ultimate, incandescent heat. The landscape should feel full to bursting with the power of the element, and feel like it extends to infinity in the direction you are facing.

When the landscape has been firmly established, feel the heat rushing into your circle through the pentagram. Feel it filling the circle and yourself, burning out any impurities and totally consuming them, then replacing them with pure Fiery force. Continue until you feel completely purified by the Fire and filled with its force.

Take a few moments to stop and appreciate whatever degree of Fieryness you have managed to bring into the circle. Feel a sense of satisfaction with it, and vow to make it even better the next time. Then stop consciously supporting the images and feelings.

9. Move clockwise to the west, drawing a segment of the circle as you go. Face the west, and draw a large pentagram. Make the stabbing gesture at the center of the pentagram, and vibrate “Eheieh.”

Imagine the pentagram becoming a window into the Realms of Water. Imagine a watery landscape. I use either an infinite region filled with water of a deep, almost violet blue color; or an underwater view of a reef with plenty of fish and plant life, and waves crossing the surface overhead.

With the landscape visualized, imagine Water gushing into the circle and yourself, dissolving any impurities and diluting them into nothingness, replacing them with its own pure power. Keep feeling this until you feel clean and totally filled with Water.

Pause to appreciate the Watery element you have managed to bring into the circle. Feel satisfaction with it, and know that you can do even more the next time. Then stop consciously supporting the images.

10. Move clockwise to the north, drawing the circle as you go. Face the north, draw a large pentagram. Make the stabbing gesture at the center of the pentagram and vibrate “AGLA.”

Imagine the pentagram becoming a window into the Realms of Earth, beyond which you can see some landscape that seems supremely “Earthy” to you. I use either a soft, warm darkness of infinite extent; a cave with ancient paintings on the walls; or cultivated land with all sorts of food-crops growing. The emphasis should be on the fertility and potential for life hidden in the darkness of the Earth, rather than the view of Earth as cold, sterile stone.

Imagine the Earthy power moving through the pentagram, filling up the circle and penetrating your body, making any impurities so inert and heavy that they fall downwards out of your body, to be replaced by a pure earth force. Keep feeling this until you feel clean and totally filled with Earth.

As in the preceding quarters, pause to appreciate the Earthy element you have managed to bring into the circle. Feel satisfaction with it, and know that you can do even more the next time. Then stop consciously supporting the images.

11. Complete the circle by returning clockwise to the east, drawing the line as you go. Return to the center of the circle and face east.

Standing in the center of the circle, try to see all four landscapes at once, and feel the power of all four elements focused on you through the pentagrams.

12. Say: “Before me stands Raphael; behind me stands Gabriel; on my right hand is Michael; on my left hand is Auriel.” The names of the archangels should be vibrated.

The angels should be imagined appearing as their names are vibrated. Each should be seen as an immense figure on the horizon beyond the landscape in their quarter. You should have a definite sense of them as sapient, self-aware beings of great power, come to aid you in your work. The landscapes represent the natural, non-sapient force of the elements; the archangels represent the divine powers that rule and direct those elements.

The archangels should have some form that signifies – in your mind – their rulership over their elements. I see them as figures in robes the color of their elements. Raphael has blond hair that moves in an invisible breeze; he holds a fan or dagger in his right hand pointed towards you. His face has an aquiline cast. Gabriel has dark hair with a bluish cast, dark skin, and holds a silver cup towards you. His robes seem to move in an invisible current. Michael has hair and eyes like flames, a slightly fox-like cast to his face, and his robes seem to be made of woven threads of fire. He holds a flaming sword pointed towards you. Auriel wears black or green robes. His face is rounded, and of a nut-brown color. He holds a disk-like pantacle with one face pointed towards you.

Imagine each of the archangels sending a benediction to you through his weapon.

13. Stand with your arms stretched out to the sides, and feet apart. Say: “About me flame the pentagrams...”

See the four pentagrams and the lines connecting them suddenly flaring to an intense brightness around you. As they do so, imagine a fifth, equally bright pentagram forming about your body, its points congruent with your head, hands, and feet. Remember that the pentagram signifies rulership of the Spirit over the four elements, and that by identifying it you are claiming that rulership for yourself. Try to feel yourself as Spirit, connected to the four elements, but also above them.

Say: “...and in the column shines the six-rayed star!”

Your mood as you say these words should be one of triumph and exultation, a sense of complete success in the endeavor of invoking the elements.

Imagine a large golden hexagram, the same width as your circle, forming in the air above you. Rays of power shine radially outwards from each of its points. The lowest point of the hexagram is congruent with the highest point of the pentagram previously visualized.

The hexagram signifies the planetary or “heavenly” realms that are above the worlds of the elements. Elemental Spirit is a summation or concentration of these heavenly forces. By claiming the power of the elemental Spirit, you are also declaring your freedom from the rule of the mundane world, and claiming the right to enter into and work in those higher realms.

The Response.

14. At this point, the invocation is effectively complete. You have finished setting up the conditions for a response from the astral light; now you must give that response a chance to occur. This is an utterly vital part of any invocation you will ever do; you may get some response while performing the ritual, but the most important, the most vital, revealing, and consciousness-expanding part of the response nearly always takes place in the quiet time after the active work has ended.

You should now cease all active visualizations, and assume a relaxed, comfortable position, standing or sitting. Silently open yourself to the forces you have invoked, listen for them with your mind, your body, and your aura. Don't do anything, and don't think about doing anything for a time; just absorb your magickal environment as passively as a “couch potato” watching TV.

When it seems, after a while, as if everything that is going to occur has occurred, do the ceremonial closing to complete the session.

The Closing

False, Lying Spirits and Angels of Light

Ambiguous Mediation in Dr Rudd's Seventeenth-Century Treatise on Angel Magic

EGIL ASPREM
University of Amsterdam

INTRODUCTION

“His only (but great and dreadful) error [was], that he mistook false lying Spirits for Angels of Light, the Divil of Hell . . . for the God of Heaven.” With these words the seventeenth-century scholar Meric Casaubon (1599–1671) introduced and condemned the famous angel conversations of John Dee (1527–1609) and his scriber Edward Kelly (1555–97), describing them further as “a Work of Darknesse.”¹ Casaubon did not dispute Dee’s good intentions with the magical experiments, or his self-conception as a pious Christian. The problem was rather the doctor’s gullibility when faced with what, in Casaubon’s view, were obviously evil spirits masquerading as angels.

Casaubon’s suspicion was entirely typical of the line antimagical arguments had followed for ages. Ever since the early church fathers, theologians had more or less agreed that magic generally worked by the aid of demons, whether explicitly or implicitly.² From the Middle Ages onward the perceived powers of the devil and his legions came to be seen as formidable in the theologians’ eyes; devilish feats of trickery and illusion were especially emphasized.³ When condemning the increasingly popular Ars Notoria of the thirteenth century—a system relying on prayer and invocation of angels and other presumably benign mediators for bringing knowledge and illumination to the practitioner—Thomas Aquinas wrote that the use of verba ignota, or unknown angelic names, in these practices should warn the good Christian that the entities invoked were in fact demons rather than angels.⁴ And any such contact with demons, no matter for what goal, should be considered unlawful and dangerous.

I wish to thank Dr. Kocku von Stuckrad for leading me on the right path in an early stage of the research that went into this article. Without his tutoring I would have wandered lost in the dark woods of long dead necromancers.

Worries about infernal tricksters only increased in the coming centuries. So much so that by the early modern period the question of how it was even possible to distinguish a demonic illusion from a real divine miracle was considered one of the most difficult epistemological problems in theology and natural philosophy alike.⁵ It was against this background that Casaubon had raised his suspicions toward Dee's and Kelly's angels.

Both Dee and (especially) Kelly were aware of the ambiguity of these entities themselves, something that becomes clear at several instances in the angel diaries Dee recorded.⁶ Magical practitioners generally were seldom ignorant of the theological accusations raised against their practices, even back in the Middle Ages. Rather, they often appeared to share this concern, but confronted these difficulties with greater optimism than their theologian contemporaries, looking for ways to resolve the issues of ambiguous mediation rather than giving up their efforts altogether.⁷

In this essay I will show how these magico-epistemological issues are grappled with in a treatise on angel magic presumably written in the latter half of the seventeenth century. This treatise has been considered by some to represent an unknown and “secret tradition” or transmission of the angelic conversations of John Dee and Edward Kelly, which is one of its main sources. The manuscript is titled A Treatise on Angel Magic, contains an intriguing blend of magical practices from the late medieval and early modern periods, including material taken and (as I will show) critically modified from parts of Dee’s diaries, and is purportedly written by one Dr. Rudd.

My approach in this essay is twofold. To my knowledge, Rudd’s Treatise on Angel Magic has not yet been treated by academic scholarship except with a few words in passing, despite having been available in print since 1982.⁸ The first task of this essay is therefore to treat the issues of dating, authorship, and context of the manuscript, which seems to me to have been the source of quite some confusion. In doing this, the supposed relation to Dee’s and Kelly’s material is in particular need of further scrutiny, as certain misconceptions about this relation have been contended and uncritically repeated. This may in turn have led to an interpretation of the text on faulty premises, which I will aim to overcome with this contribution.

In the second part of the article, I will delve deeper into the text in an attempt to disentangle and analyze some of the magical content and speculations it presents. In one sense this should be seen as a continuation of the task of providing the proper context for Rudd’s Treatise, as I will show the way the author engages with a variety of different sources, trying to negotiate and synthesize differing views. This also leads me, however, to an examination of the author’s take on the ambiguity of mediating entities and the specific ritual techniques Rudd devises to overcome that problem. With reference to and comparison with the elements Rudd borrows from Dee’s diaries, in themselves well known and thoroughly studied (thus in one sense almost “paradigmatic”) material, I will aim to show some of the continuity and breach in this later early modern reception of Dee’s crystallomantic experiments. As will be noted, Rudd’s attempt to bring together a variety of authorities on magical and theological matters seems to have suggested to him a more skeptical interpretation of Dee's "angels," theologically more in line with Casaubon's statements that opened this introduction than with Dee himself, but remaining essentially the interpretation of a magician in search of ritualistic solutions.

ABOUT THE MANUSCRIPT

Dating, Authorship, and Context

The Treatise on Angel Magic is part of a collection of manuscripts written down by one Peter Smart in the early eighteenth century (some of the dates that pop up in the related corpus are 1699, 1712, and 1714), but, according to Smart himself, authored earlier by "Dr. Rudd."⁹ Frances Yates, who looked into some of these manuscripts for her research on The Rosicrucian Enlightenment, conjectured a connection with Thomas Rudd (1583–1656), a mathematician and military engineer who published an edition of John Dee's mathematical preface to Euclid in 1651.¹⁰ This attribution has since stuck, and no one has to my knowledge tried to corroborate or refute it with reference to historical evidence. The alchemy scholar Adam McLean, who published the Treatise in its entirety for the first time in 1982, has observed that references to the English jurist and philosopher John Selden (1584–1654) make the first half of the seventeenth century the earliest possible dating of the original work.¹¹ However, as I will provide substantial evidence for through the course of this article, Selden is not the only reference providing evidence for a terminus post quem. Substantial parts of the Treatise rely on a series of occult and magical works appearing in print only in the 1650s; entire sections are even taken verbatim from James Freake's 1651 English translation of Agrippa's De occulta philosophia. This and similar evidence leads me to set 1659 as the very earliest possible date of the work (see the end of the next section). As Thomas Rudd died in 1656 this would seem to exclude him as the final author of the work in question.

Whether our original author is Thomas Rudd or not, it is clear from the documents attributed to him or his possession that he stood firmly in the midst of the most prevalent esoteric traditions of his day and had extensive knowledge about many of their different branches. Much of the material attributed to him is squarely placed within the Rosicrucian and alchemical currents, including such works as The Rosie Crucian Secrets, translations from Michael Maier's works, an English translation of The Chymical Wedding of Christian Rosenkreutz, and a quarto containing, among other things, a discussion on "Rosicrucian Chymical medicines."¹² It was this Rosicrucian material that interested Yates.¹³ An intriguing fact that Yates did not see or did not find important, but that may reveal something about Dr. Rudd's identity, is that he seems to have been a quite committed philo-Semite. This is indicated in two other manuscripts bearing his name. Harley MS 6479 is cataloged as a quarto "containing a defence of the Jews and other Eastern Men," and Harley MS 6480 contains a Hebrew grammar apparently compiled by Rudd himself.¹⁴ From his other occult material it seems clear that kabbalistic elements played a significant role for him as well, although always such elements as were already embedded in the Christian and occult kabbalah of the Renaissance.

Other manuscripts that Yates did not find relevant to mention contain what will be most important for this essay: extensive materials on ritual magic. First, Harley MS 6483 is "a quarto, containing all the Names, Orders, and Offices of all the Spirits Solomon ever conversed with: the Seals and Characters belonging to each Spirit, the manner of calling them forth,"¹⁵ etcetera. In other words, we are clearly dealing with a typical Solomonic grimoire of the "nigromantic" type.¹⁶ Side by side with this nigromantic manuscript stands the Treatise on Angel Magic. This is itself a vast synthesis of many different magical traditions, with some discernable influences including kabbalistic speculations, Renaissance Hermeticism, astral magic, nigromantic "goetic" and Ars Notoria magical traditions, huge portions of Agrippa's De Occulta Philosophia, and, as mentioned, the magical systems "received" in John Dee's and Edward Kelly's angel conversations a generation or two earlier.

In addition to showing familiarity with most esoteric sources of the seventeenth century, Dr. Rudd also includes discussions drawing on sources from theological literature, both ancient and more or less contemporaneous. In short, the author of the Treatise was no doubt a compiler of very diverse material, and was familiar with a very diverse range of authorities. On one hand, the author can be regarded merely as making a compilation of all or most of the angelologies available to an informed seventeenth-century scholar and magician, as a sort of “required reading” for the actual practices laid down later.¹⁷ However, much of what we see in the Treatise itself can also be regarded as a result of a synthesizing effort on the part of the author to bring together many of these authorities in a more or less coherent magical theology. This focus should be kept in mind as we proceed.

A Secret Tradition?

The so-called “Enochian” elements that show up to a considerable degree in Rudd’s Treatise, taken from Dee’s and Kelly’s angel diaries, have made some speculate whether Rudd stood in a secret or hitherto unknown tradition deriving from John Dee. This is certainly McLean’s thesis,¹⁸ and it has also been partially adopted by certain other scholars dealing with the reception history of Dee’s work.¹⁹ It seems relevant to briefly evaluate the argument here, since it may have some bearing on how to interpret the manuscripts themselves.

According to McLean and those of like opinion, the strong Enochian elements in the Treatise would indicate that Dr. Rudd was heir to some of Dee’s manuscripts, and from these he copied the parts of the system used in his own treatise. In McLean’s account, the fact that some of the system is slightly altered in interesting ways (which I will show in detail later) seems also to indicate that Rudd was heir to a “tradition” that knew the “real” meaning of this enigmatic part of what has become known as “the Enochian system.”²⁰ The hypothesis thus states that certain manuscripts from Dee’s diaries were handed down to Dr. Rudd through Dee’s son, Arthur, who also briefly served as a scriber for Dee (although without much success).

However, there are several factual points that seem to me to make this story rather unlikely. First of all, the transmission of the angel diaries as it has come to be understood by most historians does not include Arthur Dee, and certainly no Dr. Rudd. It seems likely that Arthur Dee himself was actually not heir to much of the Dee household after his father's death; Dee's son left for Russia to serve as the tsar's physician immediately after Dee's death, and had been living abroad before then as well.²¹ Rather it seems that Dee entrusted his library and also many of the possessions used during his angel conversations to his closest friend in the later years of his life, the alchemist and later colonial politician John Pontois.²² We have statements showing that these objects were in Pontois's possession when he died in 1624, and that they were then sold.

With that sale, the angel diaries were split in two groups of manuscripts. The first was sold to Sir Robert Cotton (1571–1631) together with the so-called “Holy Table” on which Dee and Kelly had worked.²³ These documents would later be published by Meric Casaubon in 1659, as a favor to the Cottons, who had once been his hosts.²⁴ The other group of manuscripts, however, remained unpublished until the 1980s.²⁵ The transmission of these documents also remains more conjectural. It seems that they first came into the hands of the surgeon and Paracelsian physician John Woodall (1570–1643), who we also know was connected with the death of Pontois. Although there is no positive evidence that he bought these documents, they resurfaced again only after a certain confectioner Jones had purchased a wooden chest from “a parcel of the Goods of Mr. John Woodall.”²⁶ The Jones household did not seem to care too much about the manuscripts, however. The fragmentary nature of some of these documents today owes to the fact that a zealous kitchen maid of the Jones's was allowed to use some of these documents to line her employers' pie plates.²⁷ The manuscripts that did survive passed into the hands of Elias Ashmole in 1672 and from him into

So where does the mid-seventeenth-century Dr. Rudd fit into this picture? If he was indeed heir to a manuscript tradition, or even an unknown practical tradition, it would have to be connected with one of these two transmissions. To me it does not seem likely, however, that Robert Cotton, who lent the documents to be read by the suspicious eyes of the Archbishop of Armagh,²⁹ and then to be published by Casaubon in a quite antimagical bent, would house a circle of magical practitioners in his library of which Dr. Rudd would be one central member. Neither does it seem likely that Mr. Jones, who simply stumbled upon the documents by accident, and obviously did not care enough about them to keep them out of the reach of a kitchen maid, would have any particular zeal for keeping alive a continued magical tradition based on them.

It seems more likely to me that Dr. Rudd was one of the many persons influenced by Casaubon's publication of 1659. It has been noted that despite Casaubon's intentions of putting out the diaries as a warning against performing this kind of magic, the effect was (as should probably have been expected) just the opposite.³⁰ Deborah Harkness retells an interesting story from a set of diary manuscripts in the British Library that record the activities of a small magical group from the 1670s and 1680s.³¹ This group seems to have directly emulated Dee's and Kelly's way of working crystallomancy, and even express conversations with the very same idiosyncratic angels encountered by Dee and Kelly in the diaries.³² Since the actual Enochian elements present in Dr. Rudd's Treatise are all to be found in Casaubon's True & Faithful Relation, just as were the angels re-encountered by the group Harkness mentioned, it seems most reasonable to conclude that Rudd's work belongs to the revival of the system following Casaubon's publication of 1659, rather than a continuation of an unknown tradition.

As mentioned earlier, this would also mean that Dr. Rudd cannot be the military engineer and mathematician Thomas Rudd, as he passed away three years prior to Casaubon's publication. In the end we do not know who "Dr. Rudd" really was, or even whether he existed at all. There is still the possibility that he may have been the pen name of Peter Smart. This remains an open question that cannot be answered based on the current situation of the evidence. By convention, however, I shall continue to refer to the author of this piece as "Rudd," although "Rudd-Smart" or some similar construction would probably be more accurate.

TREATISE ON ANGEL MAGIC EXPLORED

Structure, Content, and Major Influences

If my suspicion that Rudd's Treatise draws on Casaubon's work for its Enochian influences is correct, the work reflects quite perfectly the atmosphere of the late-seventeenth-century English occult milieu. Apart from Casaubon's publication in 1659, many other key works on practical occultism appeared in press in English translations for the first time during this period.³³ Agrippa's Three Books of Occult Philosophy was translated into English for the first time and published by James Freake in 1651. The spurious Fourth Book of Agrippa, containing practical instructions on the conjuration of spirits, was also published together with two key works on astral magic, the Arbatel of Magic and Pietro D'Abano's (spurious?) Heptameron, by Robert Turner in 1654.³⁴ Also translated and published by Turner around this time was the first English version of the Ars Notoria: The Notory Art of Solomon, appearing in 1656.³⁵ English manuscript versions of the nigromantic Clavicule of Solomon, or "Goetia," had been proliferating in England for a century already.³⁶ The influence of all these works is evidently present in Rudd's Treatise on Angel Magic, thus furthermore suggesting a dating along the lines that I have suggested. As mentioned earlier, Rudd's work can be seen as an effort to bring these and other authorities together in a synthesis of magical theology.

The synthesizing tendency of the work is already hinted at in the frontispiece signed by Peter Smart, dated 1699.³⁷ It seems to be a picture of a mirror glass, turned with the back to the reader. The back contains impressive ornaments, with ribbons stretching across the mirror bearing the Hebrew letters of the Shemhamphorash and various other Hebrew names. However, it also contains figures from various magical alphabets, and on the top of the mirror, over two handles, is placed the “Secret Seal of Solomon,” known from the Claviculae, or goetic grimoires.³⁸ Apart from the interesting combination of symbolism, already showing influences from various grimoires and kabbalistic sources, the very depiction of a mirror reflects the emphasis later on in the Treatise on the use of catoptronic procedures, specifically crystals and/or mirrors, to evoke spirits.

The Treatise itself can be said to consist of two main parts. The first and more voluminous is also the more compendious of the two, bringing together a more or less encyclopedic knowledge of various issues connected to angels, demons, ritual practices, geomancy, and various types of spirits, such as hobgoblins, nymphs, sylphs, gnomes, and so forth.³⁹ A notable feature of this part of the treatise is that it brings together a wide range of diverse authorities. A considerable amount of all the occult information seems to be taken almost directly from Agrippa’s De occulta philosophia,⁴⁰ while some chapters are taken from Paracelsus,⁴¹ some from the clavicles of Solomon,⁴² and some, importantly, from the diaries of John Dee.⁴³ Some other chapters are seemingly more idiosyncratic, or at least with larger portions of idiosyncratic elements.⁴⁴ As mentioned before, Rudd also included chapters dealing with questions of angelology and demonology from a more orthodox theological perspective, and often of the most condemning kind.⁴⁵ In these are mentioned and quoted such authorities as Aquinas,⁴⁶ Augustine,⁴⁷ Anthony of Florence, and even the Malleus maleficarum of Heinrich Kramer and Jacob Sprenger,⁴⁸ so significant in the witch trials still raging in Europe at the time when Rudd presumably wrote his Treatise.

The second main part of the Treatise is perhaps more idiosyncratic, and also the strongest indication that the author himself indeed practiced a variety of angelic magic. This part is called “Dr. Rudd’s Nine Hierarches of Angels with Their Invocations to Visible Appearance,”⁴⁹ and consists mainly of practical instructions on how to invoke and deal with angels, prayers, warnings about the evil spirits that could intrude, and information on how to deal with such situations. Last are given specific instructions to invoke two sets of “hierarchic” spirits: nine “governing angels” (of the nine traditional orders of angels),⁵⁰ and the seven Olympian spirits (corresponding to the seven planets).⁵¹ It is this part that provides the best access to the “magical theology” of Dr. Rudd himself. In this we more clearly see how Rudd struggles with the different angelologies and demonologies presented in the first compendious section, and through a synthesizing approach tries to compose a set of ritual practices through which the problems of ambiguous mediation can be resolved. One of the most notable things found in Rudd’s prescriptions is his insistence on two different procedures depending on whether one wants to work with evil spirits or good angels. A more thorough analysis of this part of the treatise will occupy a later section of the paper.

Two Theories on Mediating Spirits in Dr. Rudd’s Magical Theology

One of the central concerns of both parts of Rudd’s Treatise is the dichotomization of good and bad spirits. The many references to orthodox theologians in the first part of the Treatise reveal the overarching framework of the angelic fall and the parallel hierarchies of evil demons and good angels. The chapter entitled “Of Angels Good and Bad, Their Degrees and Offices” brings together Aquinas and the Malleus maleficarum to tell the story that after the fall, certain demons found their dwelling place in the lower parts of the air, on the earth, and in water, and that these demons are the causal agents used by “necromancers” and “sorceresses” to conduct their “devilish operations.”⁵² Furthermore, this chapter holds that the various kinds of such demons tirelessly work to lure, deceive, and tempt man into sin and damnation.⁵³ The dichotomization of angels and demons is also clear when the Treatise states that “we have an Angel Guardian to direct and guard us” from these temptations.⁵⁴ In a passage taken more or less directly from Agrippa, evil fallen angels are categorized in nine orders, in a clear parallel to (and inversion of) the nine angelic hierarchies.⁵⁵ The mischief of such devils is further explored in chapters with titles such as “Of Incubi and Succubi,”⁵⁶ “Why the Devil Suggesteth Evil Thoughts to Us in Our Sleep,”⁵⁷ and “The Devil Doth Sometimes Enter the Body of Unreasonable Creatures.”⁵⁸

Alongside this classical Christian demonology we also find chapters propounding a more neoplatonic theory of spiritual beings and mediators. This theory plays a significant role in astral magic and the construction of talismans.⁵⁹ The chapter “Of Intelligences and Daemons,” which is also taken almost verbatim from Agrippa, classifies three sorts of spirits “according to the tradition of the Magi.”⁶⁰ The first and highest class is that of the “super-coelestial” intelligences, which are disjoined from body and matter and simply take part in the celebration of the one true God—on a parallel to the traditional conception of the seraphim. Their only active role apart from this is to bestow the light that they have from God on the inferior orders in a sort of emanatory system.⁶¹ Under these “intelligences” stand two classes of

60. Ibid., 124.

“Daemons” who, Rudd is careful to note, are not “those which we call Devils”—thus clearly distinguishing the two different demonologies in this case.⁶² The first order of these is comprised of the “Mundane Daemons,” which are really the intelligences presiding over the stars and celestial bodies.⁶³ The third and lowest order of spirits consists of the elemental spirits residing in the four elements and in different places of the earth, such as sylvans, satyrs, nymphs, dryads, genii, and so on.⁶⁴ In addition, and still following Agrippa, the Treatise states that a subsection of these lowest spirits are “unclean” and outright wicked spirits dwelling in subterranean realms and rather similar to the infernal kinds of fallen angels. Indeed, this parallel also seems to be made more explicitly by Rudd, as he suddenly diverges from Agrippa by referring to the Clavicula Salomonis, saying that these spirits come as “Kings, Princes and Presidents.”⁶⁵

How do these two theories, the Christian dichotomized view and the neoplatonic (morally) “neutral” or emanatory view, work together? In the more idiosyncratic chapters of Rudd’s Treatise, which we may suspect contains more of the author’s own formulations, the will to synthesize the different authorities again seems clear: the elemental “daemons” are presented as part of the same natural economy as the Christian demons and angels. For instance, these creatures are incorporated into the biblical mythos; according to the author, the nymphs, sylphs, pigmies, salamanders, giants, and melusins were all created by God in the same manner as Adam was, but stemming “not from Adam’s progeny.”⁶⁶ In other words, these spirits seem equal to ordinary beasts. Adding to this, Rudd speaks of the possibility of (evil) demons entering into and possessing the elemental spirits and using them to do mischief to man in a very parallel way as they could also do with animals.⁶⁷ Thus in the practical manuals of the second part of the book, Rudd speaks about “Celestial Angels and Intelligences” and “dignified Elemental Spirits of light” as one single category of benign mediators that the magician would do well to get in contact with. Their negative, opposing category is “the evil spirits and infernal powers of darkness” that the magician should do everything to prevent intruding into his operations.⁶⁸

The Ambiguous Nature of “Enochian” Spirits: Rudd’s Reception of Dee’s Diaries

Given the anxiety to keep evil spirits and good angels apart, Rudd’s treatment of the so-called “Enochian” material from Dee’s and Kelly’s angel conversations is particularly interesting.⁶⁹ By once again bringing together different authorities in a synthetic fashion Rudd constructs an innovative magical system based on the engravings on the “Holy Table” of Dee and Kelly, the seven so-called “Ensigns of Creation,” and the letters of the “angelic” language.

The original Holy Table was one of the most important paraphernalia of Dee’s and Kelly’s angel workings. It was a wooden table with a 3 to 4-foot square surface serving as a sort of altar. Upon it would be the “Sigillum Dei Emeth,” the famous waxen image used in the workings, and the “show stone” crystal used for scrying would be seated on top of it.⁷⁰ According to Dee’s diaries the designs for making the Holy Table and the other ritual paraphernalia were purportedly transmitted by the angels themselves through Kelly early on in the conversations, on March 10, 1582.⁷¹ However, as has become apparent through more recent Dee scholarship that has looked more closely at earlier texts available to Dee and Kelly, not all of this was as novel as it presents itself to be. For instance, Stephen Clucas has pointed out the very close resemblance between Dee’s Sigillum Dei Emeth and a seal depicted in the fourteenth-century Liber iuratus honorii, which was in Dee’s possession but which he failed to cite as a source.⁷² There has also been conjecture that the alphabet of the angelic or Adamic language revealed by the angels was taken from Giovanni Pantheus’s 1530 tract Voarchadumia contra alchimiam, which was also in Dee’s possession.⁷³ However, orthographically this relation seems weaker than Clucas's finding. At any rate, as Claire Fanger has commented, it does not seem implausible that more such cases may surface as more of the medieval sources become known to scholars.⁷⁴ For the time being, however, the design of the Holy Table itself and the figures engraved on it have not been clearly identified in earlier sources, and they are generally regarded as one of the characteristic and more idiosyncratic elements of Dee's and Kelly's workings.

In the center of the original Holy Table was inscribed a hexagram, in the middle of which was engraved a 3×4 square filled with characters in the "Angelic" script Dee and Kelly had been entrusted (see illustration below). More such letters would be engraved around the edge of the table. In addition to this, the angels instructed Dee to make seven "Ensigns of Creation," seven plates formed in tin, to be placed on the table during the work. However, the angels later allowed Dee and Kelly to paint these "Ensigns of Creation" directly onto the table with blue, red, and gold pigment.⁷⁵ The angels never revealed much about the true meaning of these "Ensigns." On May 5, 1583, the angel Uriel, when asked what "the 7 lamines" meant, responded that "they are the ensigns of the Creation; wherewithal they were created by God known onely by theyr acquaintance, and the manner of theyr doings."⁷⁶ Their number and description has prompted the conjecture that they may have been meant to symbolize the seven days of God's act of creation, and the seven stages of alchemical transformation.⁷⁷

At this point I should mention that the specific angelic conversations where these instructions were revealed were not to be found in the group of manuscripts that Casaubon published in his True & Faithful Relation.⁷⁸ At that time, the only copy of them was probably in Mr. Jones's kitchen, still trying to escape the maid. For that reason, the diary entries published in 1659, while containing an illustration of the Holy Table, did not have anything to say about its design by way of explanation.⁷⁹ The name "Ensign of Creation" does not appear either. In line with the argument I have made earlier against the hypothesis that Rudd was in possession of a “secret tradition,” I think it is noteworthy that Rudd’s treatise shows no knowledge of the original name given to the seven figures on the Holy Table. In Rudd’s discussions, the “Ensigns of Creation” are consistently mentioned as “the Tables of Enoch.” From this it seems increasingly less probable that Rudd had access to any information on Dee’s angel conversations beyond that which was published by Casaubon.

It is still interesting to see what Rudd, not knowing the original intentions, does with these particular elements from Dee’s and Kelly’s diaries. It seems clear to me that Rudd tries to mend the holes he finds in Dee’s system by once again synthesizing it with other authorities known to him. The synthetic approach leads to novel interpretations, when Dee’s material is interpreted through the framework of other authors and systems. The first time we encounter the Enochian material in Rudd’s Treatise is in an elaborate illustration, which in itself seems to give away much of Rudd’s novel conception of the system (see illustration below).⁸⁰ The illustration bears the title Tabula Sancta cum Tabulis Enochi (“The Holy Table with Enoch’s Tables”) and shows the Holy Table with the seven “Ensigns of Creation” in the middle. Some slight alterations have been made to the design of the table itself. Within the points of the hexagram Latin letters have been inserted, forming the name “Adonay.” Outside the hexagram the word “Jesus” has been written. The hexagram itself has been surrounded by a heptagram, containing the seven Ensigns, or “Enochian tables” in Rudd’s terminology, within its seven points. Around this is the square edge with angelic letters, as in the original. However, the main alteration of this illustration is that the table has been placed within a many-layered circle inscribed with the Hebrew names of certain angels and names of God. In a rectangular box by the side are mentioned some of the Shemhamphorash, or seventy-two secret names of God, which according to kabbalistic traditions can be extracted from Exodus 14:19–21. Within the circle, but around the table, are inserted the four compass directions written in Latin, along with the names of the four angels Raphael, Michael, Gabriel, and Uriel written in Hebrew. Outside of the circle are four smaller circles with pentagrams inscribed, bearing Greek letters adding up to the words “Alpha” and “Omega.” Each of the pentagrams also bears the name “Tetragrammaton,” written in Latin characters.

The thing one should note with this new arrangement of the Holy Table is that it is entirely in the lines of the more goetic, “nigromantic” grimoire traditions, wherein the magician is supposed to make a circle very much in the design just described, and from within it conjure the spirits (which may be explicitly evil demons, or else neutral elementals, or so forth) into a triangle, pentagon, or some other confined space outside the circle.⁸¹ The circle with angelic and divine names is identical to those contemporaneously used in this form of magic; also the powerful names Tetragrammaton and Alpha and Omega frequently occur (as seen above).⁸² These rituals were, however, aimed at constraining the spirits with the help of the sacred and angelic names inscribed for protection in the circle and its periphery. As Richard Kieckhefer has pointed out, they functioned both as a protective measure to keep the magician safe from whichever abomination he had conjured up outside the circle, and also as a focused locus of power to constrain that foreign spirit.⁸³ At any rate, this was a common technique when dealing with explicitly evil or at the very least somewhat ambiguous spirits. Since Dee was convinced that the spirits he was dealing with were good angels sent from above, he had found no need for such measures. This makes it perhaps more intriguing that Rudd fused the system with a framework for more demonic types of ritual magic. But it seems especially intriguing when one considers what Rudd writes later on in his practical manual concerning the differences in method for dealing with evil and good spirits:

Evil spirits . . . may be constrained and commanded by invocation to service and obedience, comparatively as vile slaves. . . . But Celestial Angels and other dignified Elemental powers and spirits of light by nature wholly benevolent and good, may not be commanded nor constrained by any Invocation.⁸⁴

81. This procedure can be gleaned from a variety of sources. See for instance Mathers and Crowley, eds., The Goetia (as above, n. 38); “Of Occult Philosophy or of Magical Ceremonies: The Fourth Book,” in The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy (as above, n. 34), 19–58, and “Heptameron,” in ibid., 59–96.

82. The illustration provided here is from The Goetia, 70–72. See also Samuel Liddell MacGregor Mathers, ed., The Key of Solomon the King (York Beach: Weiser, 1989), 17–18. The latter is reproduced from Add. MS 10.862, Sloane MSS 1307 and 3091, Harley MS 3981, King’s MS 288, and Lansdown MSS 1202 and 1203. For another necromantic authority saying the same and which I have demonstrated was available to Rudd, compare Skinner ed., Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy, 49, 52–54. For a scholarly commentary, see Kieckhefer’s discussion of the use of magical circles in necromantic liturgies generally and the Munich handbook particularly: Richard Kieckhefer, Forbidden Rites: A Necromancer’s Manual of the Fifteenth Century (University Park: Pennsylvania State University Press, 1997), 170–85.

In other words, he prescribes two different modes of working, depending on the nature of the spirits one wants to interact with, and good spirits are never to be constrained. Taken to its logical conclusion, this would mean that Rudd does not consider Dee's and Kelly's spirits "wholly benevolent and good." Had they been so, Rudd would not have allowed prescribing a liturgy aimed at constraining the spirits. It would seem instead that Rudd agreed with Casaubon's interpretation of the spirits given in the preface to A True & Faithful Relation: Dee had mistaken "false lying Spirits for Angels of Light," and the methods for dealing with them should be changed accordingly.

This interpretation seems to be supported by the further alterations or adjustments Rudd makes to the data available from Dee's diaries. By understanding the spirit actions recorded by Dee in the light of more nigromantic practices, Rudd sets out to mend the holes and errors he finds. In tune with this, several of the individual elements of Dee's system are given novel, and significantly "darker" or "dirtier," interpretations. For example, in the chapter following Rudd's illustration, a new interpretation is made of some of the angelic characters inscribed around the edge of the Holy Table and of the seven Ensigns.⁸⁵ Rudd attributes the letters of the angelic script as presented on the table to the figures of geomancy⁸⁶ and to various spirits of a rather dubious nature.⁸⁷ Rudd correlates two sets of spirits with the letters: the (more or less benevolent) intelligences of the twelve zodiac signs according to Agrippa, and the bad spirits or Daemonia of the planets, which Agrippa set forth in De occulta philosophia, book two, chapter twenty-two.⁸⁸ In Agrippa's discussion of magically drawing down planetary influences into talismans, he operates mainly with two sorts of entities connected to each planet: an intelligentia and a daemonium. In his description of these, the intelligence is benevolent and beneficial to use, while the daemon is malevolent and mediates the negative aspects of the planet in question.⁸⁹ In line with what has been said already, it is to be noted that Rudd consistently chooses to use the malicious

85. The fact that only sixteen out of the twenty-one letters appear can be considered another indication that Dr. Rudd did not know about the manuscripts now in the Sloane collection. He only makes use of the letters that appear on the engraving in Casaubon's publication.

86. That is, the art of divination by lot. The most authoritative introduction to the art in Rudd's times would probably be the translation of Agrippa's "Of Geomancy," first printed in his Opera and reissued in English translation in Turner's 1654 edition of The Fourth Book. daemons and not the benign intelligences as corresponding to each angelic letter. In this way Rudd has taken the alphabet that in Dee's opinion belonged to the pure, Adamic language spoken before the fall and turned it into a magical, symbolic script partially signifying wicked spirits. The reason for doing so seems to be the result of his generally synthesizing effort to bring together various authorities, in this case at the expense of Dee when it comes to the actual interpretation of the nature of the spirits involved.

The heightened ambiguity resulting from this synthesis of Dee's and Kelly's angels with other systems becomes even more explicit when we consider the role that the seven "Ensigns of Creation" or "Enochian tables" are given. Rudd introduces the question of how the Enochian tables are to be used by first relating them to the four compass directions, being ruled by the four archangels.⁹⁰ He then goes on to note that "these Tables . . . are charged with Spirits or Genii both good and bad of several Orders and Hierarchies, which the wise King Solomon made use of."⁹¹ The mention of King Solomon is to be noted, since it is clear from what follows that the bad spirits mentioned are actually (again) the goetic demons or fallen angels of the clavicles of Solomon. The way this is shown is also quite intriguing. The seven "tables of Enoch," as shown distributed on the Holy Table in Casaubon's engraving, are in themselves rather enigmatic, consisting of a variety of geometrical shapes (mostly squares), with some letters (mostly the letter "b" for some reason), numbers, and crosses distributed in a seemingly haphazard way. To give an example: one of the tables (being the one to the middle left in Casaubon's engraving shown above) is formed like a circle with a square inside, around which are four "I"s. The square itself is divided in 6×6 smaller squares, containing letters, numbers, and an unknown, presumably magical, character. The upper left square contains the numbers and letters "5 P b 4 P" and the next one "A 8 B 3 O." Rudd, however, seems to have "found the key" to these perplexing signs and letters. In his version of this table, which he calls "Tabula Veneris" (the table of Venus), the two squares mentioned contain the entries "5 Paimon Bathin 4 Purson" and "Astaroth Ebra."⁹² These are mostly names of fallen angels, or demons, taken from the Goetia.⁹³ For instance, according to the Goetia, Paimon is "a Great King, and very obedient unto Lucifer,” and Astaroth is “a Mighty, Strong Duke, and appeareth in the Form of an hurtful Angel riding on an Infernal Beast like a Dragon, and carrying in his right hand a Viper.”⁹⁴ The rest of the squares of this and the other tables are similarly filled with dubious creatures: Bune, Barbatos, Botis, Berith, Buer, Belial, Forcator, and so on.⁹⁵ In this light, there seems little question why Dr. Rudd felt the need of a protective circle to work with Dee’s system.

However, these explicitly demonic entities are still mingled with more benign and neutral angels and intelligences. First of all, named among all these demonic entities we also find the occasional good angel, such as Michael and Gabriel. Furthermore, each of the seven tables are correlated with the seven planets, which, one could argue with reference to the rest of Rudd’s Treatise, are being presided over by seven angels conceived of as more or less benign. For instance, reference is made to the angels Zaphkiel, Zadkiel, Camiel, Raphael, Haniel, Michael, and Gabriel, who are said to preside over the planets and “stand before the face of God.”⁹⁶ However, Rudd once again also wants to include the Agrippan spirits dwelling in the planets, and this time mentions both the intelligentiae and the daemonia of the planets.⁹⁷

The will to bring all these different spirits and correspondence systems into his synthesis makes the final picture of Rudd’s recreated Enochian magical system seem, at the surface of it, confusing or even inconsistent. However, it should be viewed as the outcome of an attempt on the author’s part to bring together the great variety of authorities he recognizes into a workable and “safe” magical system. When viewed as such, the attempt to make coherence is much more notable than the apparent confusion and inconsistency. This becomes clearer through a look of the last part of Rudd’s Treatise, in which his examples for practical experiments are laid out.

“Test is Truth”: Rudd’s “Angelic Invocations” and His Response to Trickster Spirits

The system Rudd presents in the last part of his Treatise, the “Invocations to Visible Appearance,” is not directly connected with the Enochian material discussed above. The main sources on which it is built seem rather to be (unsurprisingly) Agrippa and The Arbatel of Magic, easily available to Rudd through Robert Turner's 1654 edition of The Fourth Book of Occult Philosophy. Remembering the distinction he made in his operations, this part is concerned with invoking good spirits, which should not be constrained. The instruction is an assemblage of directions on how to conduct the procedure of invoking "good Angels or dignified Elemental powers of light," advice on how to overcome various problems the magician might encounter during these workings, specific examples of prayers or invocations to be used, and finally a list of two sets of (presumably "dignified") spirits to invoke, with the seals and some additional information about each.

These spirits are really two different sets or groups of spirits again taken from different traditions. The first group encompasses the nine angels set over the first nine kabbalistic Sefirot, from Kether to Yesod (or "Hesod," as Rudd spelled it). These angels are seen as corresponding to the nine angelic hierarchies, from the order of seraphim to the order of angels, and assigned specific places in the cosmos: the seven lowest to the seven planets, with Raziel assigned to the fixed stars and Methatron to the Prime Mover beyond the firmament.⁹⁸ These arrangements seem again to be based on Agrippa's tabulations in De occulta philosophia 2.13. There is, however, some overlap between these angels and the following seven "Olympian" spirits. These are again seven spirits said to presage over the seven planets, but this time taken from the Arbatel of Magic. In an introduction to this section, probably written by Peter Smart, it is even stated about the first set of angels, and especially about the mighty angels Raziel and Methatron, that "it is the opinion of Dr. Dee and Dr. Rudd, and Iamblichus that ancient magician, that it is rarely practiced since the Olympic powers are sufficient to be invoked and advised with."⁹⁹ In other words, it would seem that the two sets have the same functions and uses, but one being more powerful—most of the time too powerful—than the other.

The passage is also important in another respect, since it shows explicitly what is elsewhere only hinted at implicitly; all the different systems gathered are seen as essentially compatible with each other, regardless of the sometimes apparent eclecticism. Again the point seems to be to make a consistent magical theology in which the relationship between differing authorities, in this case the Arbatel and Agrippa's kabbalistic tabulations, are set out more explicitly and clearly. As we see, Rudd does this through postulating a hierarchy

98. Ibid., 194–95.

99. Ibid., 212.

where the Hebrew angels seem more dignified than the Olympian spirits of the Arbatel, but where the latter are the most proper to be called down.

One of the most intriguing aspects of Rudd's "Invocations," however, is its tireless preoccupation with the problems posed by evil spirits. The very first paragraph emphasizes the importance of carefully observing the appearances of both good and evil spirits, so that the magician may be able to tell the difference.¹⁰⁰ The problem is not that it is unlawful to deal with wicked spirits per se; it is rather that these require a different method of working, as we have seen already. Wicked spirits should be constrained, while good angels can only be "called forth by humble entreaties."¹⁰¹ Thus the method of working in this section is described as being more markedly different than the one we encountered in the previous section. When aiming at invoking the good angels, Rudd proposes using a "Show Stone," that is, a crystal, or a "Glass Receptacle."¹⁰² This is in line with what Dee and Kelly had done, but also with catoptromantic and crystallo-mantic folk traditions that had existed in Britain for generations before Dee.¹⁰³ When a good angel is successfully invoked into such a receptacle, beautiful colors should appear before the magician "in and about the stone or glass as a bright cloud or other pretty kind of Hieroglyphical show, both strange and very delightful to behold."¹⁰⁴ Then the figures of the spirits themselves should appear in the stone. The good angels would be recognizable as "very fair, beautiful, affable and youthful, smiling, amiable and usually of flaxenish or gold coloured hair, and in behaviour or gesture very courteous and friendly, in speech very gentle, mild, eloquent, using no vain, idle or superfluous language or discourse."¹⁰⁵ Likewise their clothes would never be ragged, but always unblemished and presentable, and so on.¹⁰⁶ Not surprisingly, then, the evil spirits are on the contrary "ugly, ill favoured and beastly in shape and appearance."¹⁰⁷

100. Ibid., 173.

101. Ibid., 180.

102. Ibid., 173.

103. Indeed, this is yet another point where Dee's practices were not as idiosyncratic or novel as some have previously thought. See Harkness, John Dee's Conversations with Angels, 16; Thomas, Religion and the Decline of Magic, 255–56, 272–74; Armand Delatte, La Catoptromancie Grecque et ses derives (Paris: Droz, 1932); Benedek Lang, "Angels around the Crystal: The Prayer Book of King Wladislas and the Treasure Hunts of Henry the Czech," Aries 5.1 (2005): 200–224; Fanger, "Virgin Territory."

106. Ibid., 175.

107. Ibid., 178.

If this had been all there was to it, things would have been easy for the magician. However, as the first part of the Treatise shows, Rudd knew his theology, and knew that evil spirits, being tricksters par excellence, will try to masquerade as good angels and interfere with magical work even—or perhaps especially—when not invited.¹⁰⁸ The fact that one can thus never be sure from appearance alone whether a spirit is good or bad tires the magician and leaves him with what Rudd, in a seizure of classical pathos, describes as a “desperation not knowing how to unravel this Gordian Knot or to be satisfied or delivered from hopeless pilgrimage, but by the hope of Icarian wings.”¹⁰⁹ To deal with this problem the magician has to remain ever suspicious, and to observe certain rules during the invocation that will, according to Rudd, expel demons in disguise while respecting the integrity of good spirits.

Most importantly, the magician should adopt a certain method of addressing the spirit when it has arrived, which takes the form of a sort of cross-examination. There is even some subterfuge implied in this. For instance, when a spirit appears having the features of a good angel (but of whose nature one still cannot be sure) one should greet it by saying “Welcome be the light of the highest, and welcome be the Messengers of Divine Grace and Mercy”¹¹⁰ and so on. This will no doubt satisfy the spirit if it really is a good angel. But if it is a wicked spirit in disguise, Rudd claims, “it will immediately vanish or flow hastily away at the rehearsal of the word Mercy.”¹¹¹ Even after this, one should continue to question, but in a way that will be pleasant to a real angel and problematic and revealing of a deceiving demon. This process could eventually take the form of a whole conversation between the magician and the spirit. Rudd gives a rather amusing example illustrating how such a conversation might appear:

[The magician asks:] “In the name of JESUS who art thou?” Then perhaps it will say, “I am the Servant of God.” Then you may say—“Art thou come from God? Art thou sent from him with good tidings or message?” Then perhaps it will say to you, or some such like words—“What I am he knoweth of whom I bear witness.” Then you may ask its name, saying then—“What is your name? Either as it is notified among the blessed Angels or called by mortal man, if you be of verity and so of charity you cannot mistake my speeches.” Then it will tell you its name, or say nothing at all. But if it doth tell you his name, then you may say to it—“If you be in the name of Jesus, mercies of God in the merits of Christ, Mankind elect is to be saved.” Then it will give you a sufficient answer to satisfy you or else it will be gone from you. And then if it be of good and hath answered your request, then perhaps it will say, “Thus much thou hast required.” Then you may say—“I did so for so is his Judgement and Justice against the Impertinent and his mercy to his Elect. Test is Truth.”¹¹²

Test is the route to truth. What concerns us here is that the nature of Rudd’s testing is built on the spirit’s response to certain “divine words of power.” Thus we find the capitalization of the name “Jesus” and the emphasis on mercy in the previous passage, both to expel malicious spirits.

At the bottom of this lies an optimism that evil spirits can be bound, commanded, or simply overpowered and expelled through the powerful nature of certain words and symbols from the Christian pantheon. As mentioned at the beginning of this article, this was a common theological idea in the early centuries of the church, but one that was gradually replaced by an increasingly pessimistic view of the individual Christian’s possibility of resisting demonic powers. In magic, however, the idea survived. As Richard Kieckhefer has shown, the use of divine names and words of power to expel demons and other evil forces was retained in exorcism liturgies throughout the Middle Ages, and the techniques were extensively used in necromantic, constraining magical rituals, as already discussed in this essay.¹¹³ In Rudd’s Treatise they become instrumental to the magician’s attempt to solve the paradox of discerning false, lying spirits from good angels, in a balancing act aiming to avoid constraining the latter or surrendering to the former.

CONCLUSION

For the early modern learned magician, who knew his theology, and also knew of accusations of witchcraft and presumably believed in their reality, there was a grave danger in working magic, posed by the ubiquity of false, lying spirits. The problem had been a concern of magicians for centuries, which we can see clearly in manuals such as the early-fourteenth-century Liber florum celestis doctrine. It is nevertheless interesting to see how the early modern writer, Dr. Rudd, writing in the aftermath of Dee’s and Kelly’s claim to infamy, grapples with these problems. We have seen how he does not condemn dealing with wicked spirits per se, but rather stresses that the danger is in confusing the two types of spirits. For this reason he operates with two different and clearly separated frameworks for ritual magic: one for invoking good spirits and one for conjuring and constraining evil ones.

The system thus constructed seems to be the result of a synthesis of different magical traditions and authorities. In so doing he walks in the footsteps of earlier grand synthesizers, from d'Ascoli to Agrippa; but working in a time and climate where more information was available, Rudd is able to draw on a greater variety of sources, from the Ars Notoria, the Arbatel, the Dee diaries, and similar traditions aimed at contact with benign entities for noble purposes of gaining knowledge and divine illumination, to the explicitly demonic kinds of nigromantic conjuring. Rudd's synthesis seems to be a perfect reflection of what one could expect from a well-informed occultist of the second half of the seventeenth century in England with a will to make sense of it all. Over a short decade in the 1650s, many of the books that would be the standards of ritual magic even down to our own times were published for the first time in English translations.¹¹⁴ Agrippa's already grand synthesis could be expanded, explored, and corrected in conjunction with other textbooks on magic, divination, witchcraft, and the like.

Rudd's treatment of the Enochian material taken from Dee and Kelly, probably from Casaubon's publication, is a particularly clear example of this synthesizing tendency. The benign, angelic mediators Dee placed his trust in have been demonized by Rudd, and the manner of working with them has been reembedded in the goetic system. This was of course unthinkable to Dee himself, and even the matter of some heated debate between Dee, Kelly, and the angels. It was known that Kelly was experienced in demonic forms of conjuring and frequently wanted to do things his way instead of listening to the angels whom he distrusted; at one point the angels even ordered him to burn his old books of "dirty magic."¹¹⁵ I have provided evidence here that Rudd continued Kelly's and even Casaubon's suspicion about Dee's angels, that they were indeed wicked, and changed the methods for dealing with them accordingly.

114. Modern editions of the very same English translations that appeared in the 1650s—Freake's version of Agrippa, Turner's version of such texts as the Arbatel and Heptameron, and also Casaubon's presentation of Dee's work—are still standard works today, cementing the long lasting impact of the occult activity of this particular decade on British (and in our days, world wide Anglophone) occultism.

115. Casaubon, True & Faithful Relation, 116.

But this did not mean that Rudd had given up any hope in real benign mediators. The fact that Dee and Kelly failed to reach such spirits did not mean that it was impossible—an argument similar to that put forward by John the Monk, the fourteenth-century author of Liber florum. While recanting his past sins with the Ars Notoria, also accused of being implicitly demonic, John the Monk petitioned through prayer to the holy Virgin to be granted permission to write a new book, but this time dealing with the real benign entities, guaranteed by Mary herself.¹¹⁶ With a similar intention, Rudd designed an elaborate procedure of questions and answers, deploying divine names and in other ways testing the spirit appearing before the magician claiming to be a good spirit or angel. Relying on a theological position that, except in certain liturgical contexts, had been increasingly marginalized since the Middle Ages, Rudd insisted that Christian words of power would no doubt expel the wicked while doing the good no harm. With this system, which is a mild appropriation of the methods used also in the more constraining sort of conjurations, Rudd convinces his readers that the magician can overcome the Gordian knot of separating false lying spirits from Angels of Light. Test is truth.

INTRODUCTION

The system of angelic evocation developed by the Elizabethan magician, Dr. John Dee, is the single most powerful magical system in western occultism and perhaps all occultism. Dr. Dee named the various methods he came up with to derive angelic names after the Biblical patriarch, Enoch, who supposedly talked with God's angels and ascended into heaven while still living.

Enoch was a great inspiration to many magicians of the deeply religious Elizabethan culture, but it is John Dee's work that has been most remembered to modern day and for good reason. The angelic language and alphabet channeled by Dee and his seer, Edward Kelly, is remarkably effective in opening up the imagination to currents of intelligence far beyond the human norm. This is still the case more than four centuries after its reception. Whether one believes in the literal existence of angelic beings living in a heavenly world or consider such visions as nothing more than products of the human mind, there is no denying the intensity and transcendent nature of the energy generated by even a casual working involving Dee's angelic magick.

Of the many arrangements of Enochian letters Dee created to derive the names of angelic contacts, the two best known systems are the four elemental Watchtower tablets and the thirty aethyrs that surround them like layers of an onion. These constructs were popularized by the nineteenth century magical group called The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, the primary source for most of modern magick, and its most famous member, Aleister Crowley. The tablets were prominent features of the Golden Dawn's system of elemental initiation and provided a significant portion of their power. The thirty aethyrs, aires or planes, are best known from Crowley's record of his initiatory visions therein as published in "The Vision and the Voice." A great deal of personal as well as group magical work may be drawn from these challenging evocatory systems.

The true power of Enochian magick comes from the angelic language, the evocative shapes of the letters as well as the pronunciation of the words they spell. Medieval ceremonial magick is replete with different magical alphabets and languages but Dee's angelic tongue is uniquely efficacious in drawing upon the deepest levels of human consciousness. The resulting fusion of this atavistic psychic energy with the functions of waking awareness generates transcendental wonders of vision and spiritual contact. A direct access to a universal source of intelligence becomes available for the magician who is able to advance along this rigorous path of superconscious development.

The way is dangerous, however, due to the torrent of unconscious contents that flood into self-awareness through the effect of Enochian usage. Some magical teachers of repute have recommended that aspirants to this mighty art undergo preliminary training and initiation into instituted schools of the mysteries before daring even the most preliminary practices of Enochian magick. Others have suggested a thorough course of psychoanalysis beforehand. There are also those who condemn Dee's inspirations as hopelessly destructive and unfit for use in any way. My view is that the individual operator may choose what training seems best for him or her, no one way being right for everyone. I will say that my ten years of training in two mystery schools, in addition to personal work and study with the traditional western magical system, was invaluable in helping me to deal with my adventures through the Enochian Watchtowers. As the records of my visions will show, some of the energies I encountered were overwhelming and initially harmful to an extent. My earlier preparations enabled me to adjust and eventually utilize the newly discovered currents of psychic power.

A survey of the history of this uniquely powerful and wondrous magical system provides some insights into how magicians like myself have used it and what effects we've achieved as a result. John Dee developed his angelic evocation methods from the teachings of angels he'd contacted through traditional western ceremonial techniques, such as those of the Solomonic texts. He wanted to talk to God's good angels as did Enoch before him. His extant diaries show many conversations he and his seer, Edward Kelly, had through the latter's visions. They sought knowledge on more effective magick, alchemy, and even political information from other countries in order to serve their queen, Elizabeth I. The magick of the thirty aethyrs was specifically designed to wield control over lands all over the world through the agency of angelic spirits thought to preside over those areas. Their success with political magick was limited by all accounts but the work they did in assembling the Enochian systems of angelic evocation continue to inspire many magicians centuries later.

Dee's voluminous journals and diagrams were mostly lost after his death. Remnants passed into the hands of antiquaries until finally, three hundred years later, the men who formed the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn rediscovered them. The Watchtower tablets were adapted to this order's initiation ceremonies and inner order magick. Innovations were made to develop a full syncretistic system of meditation around each square on each tablet, complicating Dee's original design far beyond its intended use. The system of thirty aethyrs with their ninety-one governors was less frequently worked by Golden Dawn adepti but this lore was included in the order's teachings. In this way, reformed Hermetic magick and initiation were carried into the twentieth century, helping many magicians to grow toward union with God.

The most famous and flamboyant member of the original Golden Dawn was the renowned prophet, magician, mountaineer, big game hunter, world traveler, and English spy, named Edward Alexander Crowley, better known as Aleister Crowley. His magical exploits and experiments may be read in his many books on the subject. One of his most notable workings was his scrying of the thirty aethyrs, done during a walk across the Algerian desert, accompanied by his scribe, Victor Neuberg. This record eventually became "The Vision and the Voice," a book still available today. Quite unexpectedly, Crowley found himself initiated by the angels of the aethyrs into the magical grade called Master of the Temple. This very much surprised Crowley, since his Golden Dawn mentors had taught that no one still living could possibly attain to this grade. Only the Secret Chiefs of the order, the Ascendant Masters who guide humanity along its collective spiritual path to enlightenment, could hold this office. The quality of Crowley's record speaks for itself as to his magical attainment and the relevance of his expression of the new age in which humanity currently finds itself, the Aeon of Horus, the Crowned and Conquering Child.

Fortunately for humanity, there were others to carry on Crowley's legacy of new aeon magick and religion after his death. I first encountered Thelemic philosophy through his books and by practicing the ceremonies therein. It changed my entire worldview forever. Magical fantasy and science fiction stories had always fascinated me throughout my childhood. From my earliest years, it had been immediately evident that a new age was upon the world. The latest innovations of science, technology, religion, and philosophy clearly showed that a whole new consciousness of self and reality had dawned on humanity. Never before in history had it been more worthwhile to doubt and reassess the ancient traditions and attitudes held so dear and sacred by so many people. It was also evident to me that different people were at different stages of acceptance or rejection of the new mind. My parents, teachers, and most of my friends were, for the most part, oblivious to it. However, dim memories of the revolutions of the 1960s, the Flower Children and the anti war movement in particular, were still echoed in the media and by certain spokespeople who still believed. This inspired me in my quest for a new way of life and consciousness throughout my childhood but the inevitable sense of alienation from family and society was ever present as well. Sometimes, I wondered if I was the last new age radical left in suburban America.

Eventually, the time came to go to college, which meant adulthood and freedom from the yoke of childhood regimentation and manipulation. A friend and I decided to come to Los Angeles and seek the new way in the land of the Flower Children, the peace and love generation. This turned out to be the best decision of my life. My new age spiritual transcendence began as soon as I stepped off the plane. A spontaneous psychic vision unfolded at that precise moment when a bright, beautiful angel appeared to me with outstretched arms, welcoming me to my new life. There were no words spoken. Only a sense of unconditional acceptance and love pervaded my psyche. It felt like I truly, finally, had come home.

Within two weeks of my arrival, I'd discovered my first real occult bookstore in West Hollywood. Suddenly, all my wonderful experiences of fantasy reading and many hours of playing Dungeons and Dragons leaped to mind as I entered the premises, hoping to learn how to throw fireballs and lightning bolts. This began a long journey that led through many other bookstores and two magical orders. There were no instructions on how to throw fireballs and lightning bolts but there was Thelema.

I discovered the core-defining document of Crowley's religious philosophy, called "The Book of the Law," otherwise known as "Liber Al vel Legis," in a bookstore in Santa Monica. A casual reading of chapter one launched a revolution in my life that proved far more fulfilling than any of my childhood dreams. Verse three said, 'Every man and every woman is a star.' Suddenly, a brilliant light turned on in my psyche that has stayed with me every single moment of my life since then and has only increased in power with my subsequent magical experiences. Nothing in my life previous to that moment could have prepared me for this revelation but from then on, everything made sense. Reading the whole book removed every last feeling of alienation and weirdness. Every last belief and attitude I'd ever held about family, religion, and society was vindicated. It was as if the universe had created a religion tailor made just for me.

It was soon after the revelation of Thelema that I discovered the existence of some of Crowley's old magical orders, continued to modern day by others like myself, who sought the new mind and magick. A whole new way of life and involvement opened up that has brought me untold joy and fulfillment. As it turns out, there are many others like myself who want something else out of life than what the traditions offer, something in accord with the new aeon and the evolution of human consciousness. Further, the magical training, classes, and initiations into the mysteries of alchemy, Thelema, and Hermetic Qabalah offered by these orders have enabled me to realize some of the grand potential that my childhood explorations had indicated. Yes, I really had come home.

My own practices in this revised magical tradition furthered me along the new Path of the Wise. Desire to take my training and experiences further than what had been revealed to me by the instituted mysteries impelled me to form various magical workshops with my colleagues. None went very far until I met up with the magical partner who inspired me to take up the practice of Enochian magick for our work together. We had attempted various forms of magick not covered in the books on Golden Dawn working. The medieval tomes by occultists like Agrippa outlined operations not even hinted at in more modern lore. For instance, invocation of specific stars rather than entire zodiacal signs proved to be quite different than any of the standard systems. Adapting modern methods to these older forms turned out to be quite a challenge but was well worth the effort.

None of it, however, even approached the power and clarity of Enochian magick. What was subtle and hinted at before suddenly became overt and overwhelming. New knowledge and intensity of presence manifested through the use of the Watchtower tablets. Whole new realities and dimensionalities unfolded under the guidance of the Enochian angels. A standard magical temple setup became a reception point for cosmic and supercosmic forces, which yielded mysteries far beyond anything the orders or any of the books taught. Not even my childhood dreams of wizardry and wonder came near to what was slowly revealed by the superpower magical language channeled by John Dee four centuries ago.

What impresses me most about Enochian magick is its adaptability to the needs of the user. Dee designed his angelic evocations with specific applications in mind. Yet, three hundred years later, the Golden Dawn was able to reform his magical methods for quite different purposes. Later still, Aleister Crowley adapted the latter revision for his own purposes, something he never could have suspected but which changed his entire existence permanently. Humanity as a whole will never be the same as a result of his wondrous transformation. Boundaries previously thought to be absolute were transcended so that others could follow and so usher in a new age of human development.

Various practitioners throughout the twentieth century put their own spin on Enochian magick in its various revisions to achieve their own ends. Towards the end of the millennium, I developed my own method of Enochian angelic evocation to further the grand path of initiation begun in the Thelemic magical orders in which it has been my privilege to participate. I hope that at some point, I'll be able to follow Crowley's journey through the thirty aethyrs and so broaden the Path he established.

John Dee's magical system stands out, then, as a particularly effective enabler of the True Will of each individual practitioner, whatever that happens to be. Anyone with the training, the means, and the determination can use this wondrous magical language, channeled straight from the deepest levels of the human collective unconscious, to accelerate their psychic and spiritual evolution far beyond the ordinary pace. All new worlds and mind spaces may be realized if the operator is willing to face their awesome presence.

One may wonder about the objective nature of the entities evoked by such a protean system of magick. Can the angels be real when anyone can get what they're after by their contact? Is there any objective reality to anything in occultism or is this all just mind play? Aleister Crowley is clear on this point in his essay on the astral plane as published in "Magick in Theory and Practice." It doesn't matter one bit whether or not a magician believes in the literal existence of the angels and spirits summoned by the occult art. The method of science was to be adhered to on this question. Certain results follow from certain operations. Nothing more need be considered.

For my part, I don't believe in angels, spirits, and monsters existing in heavenly or hellish worlds, independent of my existence. In all my years of experience in personal and group magick, I have never encountered entities that could be considered objectively real. Whatever is seen or felt by the mind must be processed through the personal functioning of that mind and so becomes colored by that personality. The influence of the ceremony is unmistakable, however. Something definitely develops in the room with the practitioner. My view is that this sense of presence derives from the mind but then takes on an aspect of objectivity when evocation takes place.

Magick, then, may be defined as the process of projecting psychic energy into physical reality where it can then take shape as a spirit. The higher spirits, such as angels, derive from superconsciousness, the oversoul in which the mind exists as a part, whereas the lower spirits, such as demons, derive from subconsciousness, the repressed fears and traumatic experiences of the practitioner. With magick, human consciousness may be expanded and examined more closely than with simple meditation or even psychoanalysis. The great goal of the Flower Children, to achieve expansion of consciousness, may be reached in this way but without the use of drugs. The process is safer and more controlled with the methods of occultism.

I faced a conundrum in approaching the overtly theistic system of Enochian evocation with my rationalistic new aeon mindset, however. How could I call upon angels using conjurations developed in a worldview and religious paradigm centuries out of date? Could I even get a result holding a belief system so different from that of the inventor of this art? If the magick didn't work for me because of these differences, then it was useless, nothing but wish fulfillment from a mad genius who died long ago.

I decided to begin experimentation with Dee's system anyway, considering all the fantastic reports about it. The way to bring this magick into the modern era was to establish a neutral spiritual context in the evocation ceremony. I could promote a nonreligious spirituality in my conjurations while using Hebrew and Enochian divine names, with the understanding that they referred to general metaphysical principles. No historical or cultural associations would intrude in the process of exaltation and evocation. It wasn't necessary to learn the English translations of the Enochian calls since their power lay in the sound of their pronunciation. Whatever entities took form in imagination and reality as a result of my magick could guide further progress along these lines or warn against continued operation.

I was confident that my innovations would yield worthwhile experiences since there are so many different effective magical systems in use around the world. Religious beliefs and cosmogonies appear to be optional. What seems to matter most is the operation of the psyche of the magician.

Magick begins with the mind. Utilizing physical representations of archetypal symbols, like the elemental weapons, can bring up the deepest levels of the unconscious. To hold the magical wand is to literally grasp True Will. To drink from the cup or wield the dagger is to absorb intuition or impose intellectual analysis on any idea or vision. The heights and depths of the psyche may be accessed in this way, leading to the greatest adventure imaginable. The Enochian language accelerates this process a hundredfold.

Occultism may regain its place among the sciences when thought of this way. It used to be considered so, hundreds of years ago. In medieval times, the endeavor to understand nature was not called science, as it is today, but rather natural philosophy. The classical Greek philosophers, who believed that the best way to understand the workings of the world was to think about them, inspired this way of thinking. Pure reason could penetrate any mystery, deriving understanding based on first principles. One of the greatest of the ancient Greek thinkers was Aristotle. His paradigm of natural philosophy, based on the terrestrial elements and the celestial spheres, was supported for over two thousand years. It wasn't until Isaac Newton developed his physics that science became experimentally based and gained independence from spiritual beliefs.

Much of the magick practiced today was developed by the Golden Dawn, who based much of their system on ideas and methods found in remnants of manuscripts left over from medieval and earlier epochs. Natural philosophy, the inquiry into natural forces, had its correlate in occult philosophy, the study of occult or hidden forces. It was believed that every perceptible action had its occult counterpart, from tree spirits and water nymphs all the way to the One God. Magick was the endeavor to know God and all His works rationally. It was an application of the Aristotelian philosophy, the science of that era. With the rise of Newtonian physics and the Scientific Enlightenment, traditional occultism was no longer part of the contemporary intellectual scene. Its use was abandoned and mostly forgotten, except in the dark corners of antiquarian museums.

The founders of the Golden Dawn reached into these mysterious recesses and brought the bits and pieces of what remained of the ancient lore back into the light of day. However, they failed to restore occultism to its once prominent place among the erudite. Not even Crowley succeeded in bringing his revised magical system of scientific illuminism to scientific acceptance. Most people to this day still consider ceremonial magick as superstitious nonsense, if not outright Satanism.

It is my view, however, that the modern understanding of depth psychology and quantum physics can help develop a hard scientific model of consciousness and its emergence out of the electrochemical processes of the brain. Ceremonial magick is the psychic microscope that can aid this research by revealing those functions of the mind that are normally hidden from human perception. The enormous potential of the mind may be tapped and harnessed for fantastic mystical and material effects. A psychomechanical technology may follow from such a science. Machines could one day receive telepathic instructions and power from human users trained to project their psychic energy into physical reality.

It is my earnest hope to promote and facilitate the practice of magick in general and Enochian magick in particular so that the dreams of a futuristic society may come to pass. This path of development can benefit any interested magician eager to explore and develop the profound ancient and modern mysteries of cosmic and supercosmic consciousness. The new potentials of evolution revealed at the outset of this new aeon may fully emerge in human reality by the influence of this time transcending wisdom. If my experiences and realizations can inspire others to this wonderwork then my life will have proven worthwhile.

CHAPTER I

A NOTE ON OCCULT PRACTICE

A magical ceremony is a series of actions structured around the pattern of a spiritual cosmogony, usually derived from an occult tradition such as the Qabalah. The western magical tradition is centered on a cultural fusion between the Jewish esoteric literature and the ancient Greek Hermetic philosophy. The basis of European magical practice is therefore called Hermetic Qabalah. The primary mandala or cosmic model of this system is called The Tree of Life. It consists of ten numbers and twenty-two letters (which are also numbers) arrayed in a diagram of ten circles with twenty-two connecting lines. The circles are called Sephiroth and the lines are called Paths. The five elements, seven planets, and twelve signs of the zodiac, the powers as understood by Hermetic occult philosophy, are attributed to the various parts of this structure and so are set in certain relationships with each other. Magical ceremonies derived from the Hermetic Qabalistic Tree of Life express subsets of these interconnections. Analyses of the names and other significant words encountered in the visions and communications resulting from such workings may be carried out by spelling those words in Hebrew. The numbers of those letters are then added up to derive the sum. Other Hebrew words with the same total may be compared with the word being analyzed to clarify its meaning. The total may be broken down into factors for further analysis. This branch of Qabalah is called Gematria.

Generally speaking, ceremonies of the western magical tradition build up principles of power, starting from the most general and metaphysical expression and work toward the specific material energies to be generated. It is up to the magician to choose what Hermetic Qabalistic principle will accomplish the desired effect of the ceremony.

Typically, there are two main motivations for practicing this kind of occultism. These are to cause some change to occur in the surrounding world of the operator or to progress on a course of spiritual development that leads the consciousness of the operator to the transcendent source of all being. Although these two endeavors lead in opposite directions, they intertwine and empower each other. Magick can be considered as applied mysticism in this way. An occult ceremony is simply an extraverted meditation wherein the principles of consciousness are expressed in material terms by objects denoting archetypal images. The more powerful and attuned the mind, the more effective the magical ceremony, projecting the potencies of that mind into physical reality. Consciousness is the power of magick.

The path of spiritual transcendence can be mapped on the Tree of Life just as can the progress of an occult ceremony. The mysteries of Merkabah mysticism, the chariot ride up the Tree, charts the development of consciousness expansion from the bottom Sephirah, called Malkuth, which means Kingdom, upward through the other Sephiroth toward the top Sephirah, called Kether, which means Crown. The anatomy of the mind, aura, and body has been mapped onto the Qabalistic mandala to establish further relationships for the mystic to follow. Thus, the Tree of Life is a roadmap to the innermost psyche as well as to the outermost experience of reality. The scope of magical and mystical practice based on this model is virtually unlimited. The interested reader may consult the bibliography of this book for more material on the Hermetic Qabalah.

I have used these principles in the design of my magical temple setup and angelic evocation ceremony, as detailed in an appendix to this book. Many of the Qabalistic analyses of the visions generated by my workings can be found in the endnotes. Elucidating these mysteries with intellectual exploration helps me to broaden the significance of my experiences and relate them to each other in new ways. A greater wholeness emerges out of this process which accelerates my magical and spiritual evolution. Not every aspect of transcendent contact is susceptible to this kind of study but the intellectual growth is part of the overall process. All functions of mind must be engaged in reaching an understanding of magical experiences. The reader may judge of their value. I believe that my occult work has given my life profound and wondrous fulfillment, far beyond anything to be gained from mundane human society. This greatest of endeavors accomplishes the purpose of my existence.

The structure of my evocation ceremony follows the five basic stages of ritual as recognized by the western magical tradition: banishing, purification, consecration, invocation, and evocation. The various rituals to be found in most books on modern magick are pieces to be woven together on this framework to derive complete occult workings. For example, the most common ritual to be found is the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram. This is an excellent first training practice in preparation for more complex ritual, but it also begins most major ceremonial work. The choice of which basic formulas to use in the development of a complex working must be decided based on the goal to be achieved and what powers are to be used. I've included ritual elements from the Golden Dawn Neophyte initiation ceremony, modified for Thelemic use in my angelic evocations. Building up a magical ceremony is as much a creative process as opening the mind to receive the results of its performance.

I decided to insert a few preliminary visualizations to prepare for the formal ceremonial operation. The first is an imaginary journey to a cosmic temple set among the stars and galaxies. There is no floor or ceiling in this temple and the walls are formed by a circulating torus. A torus is a circle of circles, a wheel of wheels, like a donut. All my temple equipment is placed in this space, with a central shaft of light flowing down through the altar from the infinite above, an axle of the wheel. The temple is a direct projection of the mind and body of the magician.

Once this visualization is built up in imagination, I charge my aura with a version of the Middle Pillar Ritual. Five orbs are visualized along a central shaft through my body at the top of my head, my neck, my chest, at the base of my torso, and my feet, all connected by a central shaft of white light. The colors are blazing white, grayish white, golden yellow, violet, and olive green, respectively. Divine names of the Hebrew Qabalah are vibrated to build up each orb: AHIH (Ehayay), IHVH ALHIM (Yahweh Elohim), IHVH ALVH VDOT (Yahweh Eloah VaDaat), ShDI AL ChAI (Shaddai El Chai), and ADNI HARTz (Adonai Ha Aretz), respectively. Each is vibrated three times for its corresponding orb and then once in rapid succession to consolidate the entire structure as one whole shining image. Currents of energy are visualized to spread the energy of the central pillar throughout the body and aura and then out to the farthest reaches of space and time.

I project these visualizations onto my physical temple and perform all subsequent operations in this setting. My subsequent visions of the angels are enhanced in this way. After performing the ceremonies of evocation, I sit down in my open temple, close my eyes, relax my body from head to foot, and regularize my breathing. My mind's eyes and ears then open to an inner reality wherein the evoked entity may be seen, heard, and felt. After a certain point, this inner mind space expands into the physical temple where the energies impinge on my aura and nerves, just as if a physical presence was there. The angels bestow blessing and initiation, unfolding a new magical lesson and expanded psychic awareness. The more energy I channel, the more energy I can channel. My consciousness became completely transformed after performing many of these operations. I believe that changes to my cells and nerves have also occurred.

Many of the old Hermetic Qabalistic grimoires recommend the use of a magical mirror or ball to skry evoked spirits. The magician is to gaze deeply into the obsidian depths, passed all reflections, to the spirit's presence. Sometimes, for evocation of the lower spirits, the skrying device is placed within a triangle of art, surrounded by magical names that help control the entity. The magician is kept safe in a protective circle, likewise surrounded by many divine names. Obsession and possession by the spirit is supposed to be prevented by these precautions.

I decided to dispense with these devices in order to more intimately connect with the beautiful angels of the Enochian tablets. I've never needed such things to redirect my attention and allow my imagination to open up to magical energies. My psyche has proven to be the best magical mirror I could hope for. Direct and immediate contact between my self awareness and magically induced superconscious projections has provided the most intense supercharge and clearest visions, as the records of my evocatory experiences show. Enochian magick deserves its reputation for extreme power and effectiveness.

CHAPTER II

WHAT IS INITIATION?

Initiation is the cornerstone of the western magical tradition. This core experience opens the pathways to mystical enlightenment while forging connections to the ultimate source of magical power. A great deal of occult literature is devoted to this subject and nearly all books on magick mention it in some way or other. The initiatory opening of the gates of mystery is usually bestowed on the aspiring candidate by an order or some other spiritual group but, with the advent of mass produced occult books relating many of the details of established ceremonial, the solitary practitioner may aspire to self initiation. Such a person may design and perform a magical ceremony for the purposes of entering upon the inner paths usually reserved for devotees of an authoritative institution but in an independent, detached environment. True freedom may be gained by success in this endeavor but the way is difficult.

An examination of initiation as a general cultural practice will help put its magical expression into better perspective.

Initiation means to begin something, usually a new way of life or a new phase of a journey. In traditional societies, children are typically initiated into adulthood by a rite of passage such as a vision quest, a test of intelligence and survival, or a religious dedication such as the Jewish Bar Mitzvah. In more esoteric religious settings, an aspirant to a holy order or mission would be initiated as a monk by taking holy orders or a solemn oath to adopt the monkish devotional way of life. In a military order, a man became a soldier sworn to fight for the order and its leadership in pursuit of its goals. In any case, a new way of life or spiritual devotion was embarked upon for good and all.

In a magical context such as Freemasonry, the O.T.O., or the Golden Dawn, ceremonial initiation meant the beginning of a new phase of the spiritual journey taught by the order in leading its members to the pinnacles of magical adeptship. This meant a new way of spiritual life and the ability to use occult symbols in a ceremonial way to impose personal will upon impersonal existence. This lengthy path of psychospiritual development and energization had to be broken down into degrees or grades, multiple stages designed to gradually transform an ordinary individual into a powerful and spiritual magician. A more direct introduction to the most sublime magical energies would most likely overcharge the mind and nervous system of the eager candidate, doing great harm and ruining the chances for more gradual growth.

A ceremonial initiation, bestowed under the auspices and rule of a magical order, involves an established temple space, complete with symbolic furniture, emblematic objects, officers that express magical principles by their dress, words, and actions, and other members of the order who witness the raising of a candidate to the next phase of the Work. The first and most important part in the initiation ceremony is the opening. During this operation, the general energies and authority of the order are invoked to form a context in which the specific powers of the degree to be worked are called. Each participant of the ceremony contributes to the overall aura of the temple, the atmosphere or magical energy field that charges the entire space and everything therein. The sum of the experiences of the order, the general tradition of which the order is a part, the officers, and the witnesses already initiated into the degree awaits the candidate to these mysteries.

It is the magical atmosphere more than anything else in the ceremony which initiates the candidate into the new phase of the order's path. This energy inundates the candidate's aura, psyche, and nervous system as soon as he or she enters the temple. Usually, the candidate is blindfolded upon admission. With the primary sense shut down, he or she is in a state of extreme receptivity to the unfamiliar initiatory powers imprinting their mysterious patterns deep into his or her psyche. Eventually, the blindfold is removed and the various symbols represented in the temple are explained in detail. However, all this information simply serves to put a face on the intense quickening received as soon as the candidate first enters the initiatory force field. The ritual actions taken during the ceremony help to further integrate this experience into all the layers of the candidate's consciousness. The closing ceremony which ends the initiation finalizes the incorporation of the candidate as one of the brethren of that degree. This is a powerful metaphor for the process which the new initiate's psyche has just undergone. The personal work he or she does after the initiation clarifies and integrates the energies of the degree into his or her life.

The above analysis shows that the solitary magician who seeks self initiation, is in a quandary. There is no order to draw from, no experienced officers or advanced brethren to create the initiatory atmosphere, and no unpublished secrets to learn. The solitary magician is necessarily intimately familiar with every detail of his or her temple and ritual, having built them up from principles already learned. Nothing would be new or revelatory for the ambitious lone operator.

This was the situation in which Aleister Crowley found himself after having split with his initiatory teacher, S.L. McGregor Mathers. He'd been trained in the magical system and methods of the Golden Dawn but suddenly he found himself without this support. Still eager for further occult knowledge and growth, he traveled the world to study and practice with teachers from a wide variety of traditions. His experiences were eventually incorporated into his reformulation of the Golden Dawn, called A.A. Yet, what ultimately enabled Crowley to surpass his previous initiations to achieve new levels of attainment were his adventures in the Enochian magical system of thirty aethyrs. These experiences are well documented in a book called, "The Vision and the Voice." The angelic forces Crowley encountered initiated him to a higher state of being than was thought possible in the Golden Dawn, a grade known as Master of the Temple. This set the tone for the rest of his magical life.

I found myself in a similar situation when I left the modern Golden Dawn offshoot that had provided me with in depth magical training and initiation for six years. The ensuing period of separation and solitude was emotionally trying. Many hidden conflicts arose from this trauma and had to be dealt with. After a long hiatus from magical practice, I partnered with a novice student of the western mysteries and we experimented with a wide variety of magical techniques found in old occult books.

Eventually, we decided to work with the Enochian elemental tablets, which the Golden Dawn had popularized, and suddenly our magick was awesomely powerful. The results surpassed all expectations, given the amount of time and energy that went into developing the Enochian temple and angelic evocation ceremony. We had stumbled upon a magical system that provided the overwhelming atmosphere which permanently raised our natural level of energy in our auras and nervous systems. The angels that appeared in the visions inspired by the ceremonial evocations taught new and surprising knowledge every bit as profound as anything I'd encountered in my initiations in the Golden Dawn offshoot or O.T.O. Every development I'd undergone in my magical career fell into place and was brought to perfection in my five years of regular practice with the Enochian angels.

All the elements provided by instituted initiation were given by John Dee's old magical system. The four Watchtower tablets, plus the Tablet of Union, established a graded system of development when worked in the Golden Dawn initiatory order of Earth, Air, Water, Fire, and Spirit. The virtue of the written and spoken Enochian angelic language was such that transcendent forces were generated and drawn from the inner mind. These currents were projected throughout the imagination and the surrounding physical space. Higher knowledge was tapped and revealed to everyone present. The innermost source of personal consciousness, became the greatest teacher and initiator. As with Crowley, I was brought far beyond myself.

The several systems of Enochian magick are ideal for the purposes of self initiation. Anyone with the daring and wherewithal to develop a temple and ceremony dedicated to angelic evocation may achieve progress on the magical path. Of course, there are risks. The psychic energies generated by use of the language in the ceremonial context can be overwhelming and possibly damaging to someone not fully prepared to receive this kind of jolt. However, there are times when the only way forward is to perform the operation and then deal with the aftermath, come what may. This is especially likely to happen when moving from one tablet to the next. My experience has shown that the transition from Earth to Air is fairly manageable. However, the move from Air to Water is like going from the sun to Alpha Centauri. The transition from Water to Fire is like going from Alpha Centauri to the Andromeda galaxy. In this case, the only way forward is to set your insides on fire and feel the burn. The stalwart magician will recover eventually, probably. I experienced this transition twice. Fortunately, the move from the Fire tablet to the Tablet of Union for Spirit turned out to be easy. The forces of Spirit tend to be generally integrative and balancing.

In conclusion, Enochian magick is the most powerful and effective occult system to be found. Whatever purposes a magician has in approaching these angels will be served in an extreme and dramatic way. Get ready for the roller coaster ride of your life.

CHAPTER III

VISIONS OF THE GREAT NORTHERN WATCHTOWER OF EARTH

FIRST ROUND

ACZINOR – Jupiter Senior of Earth
Sunday, March 28, 1999

Today's workshop¹ was a smashing success. My magical partner clearly perceived the torrents of energy flowing through the elemental tablets. My impressions were more muted, being so focused on accurate performance of the evocation ceremony. I failed to observe every detail of my ritual plan but practice will make perfect. The ceremony was a success overall.

My experience with the Aczinor was unusual in that there was little in the way of visual sensation. His voice was very deep, booming, and echoing throughout my psychic space. Usually, my magical experiences are primarily visual, with voices heard with some difficulty. This time, the only vision was of my field of inner space, tinged throughout with rose pink (the color of the Sephirah Tiphareth in the King scale²), but vibrating as one object to the boom of the voice. It was like a speaker woofer vibrating to a powerful bass beat.

Aczinor indicated that dispensing with the religious aspects of John Dee's magical system was fine, as long as the entities involved were treated with the same respect as what Dee had. All technical questions of the system should be referred to the Mercury Senior of Air.

Something feels different now as a result of this angelic contact. My psyche has acted as a lens through which higher, superconscious forces focused to communicate ideas to me. I hope this fantastic transcendence of mind strengthens my being to do even greater intensities of magical expression.

In the future, the workshop will deal with the Mercury and Venus Seniors of Earth and after that, Seniors from the other tablets will be evoked. Eventually, the angels of the subelemental quadrants will be called according to John Dee's system as presented in Geoffrey James' book, "The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee."

AHMLICV – Mercury Senior of Earth

ALHCTGA – Venus Senior of Earth

LZINOPO – Luna Senior of Earth

Sunday, April 11, 1999

I just completed a fantastic solo temple working. The Mercury, Venus, and Luna Seniors of Earth were evoked to great effect. I used the Greater Ritual of the Hexagram³ to invoke the Mercury Senior but, after banishing him, I tried the Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram for the other two. By using the Lesser Ritual, I didn't have to banish and reinvoke for each new Senior⁴ – a worthwhile shortcut. It may actually not be necessary to use a hexagram ritual at all since the Senior names are coming from the tablet already activated.

The Seniors appeared to me as conventional angelic images, in white robes and with huge wings, in a black, empty space. The vision itself was not so inspiring but the conversation was revelatory.

The Mercury Senior, AHMLICV, told me that I needed to pass three tests before I could evoke the servient and Kerubic angels without belief in the religious paradigm of John Dee. The first test is to find the beauty within myself. The second test is to discover the joy within myself. The third test was to get rid of the trickster that lives around my feet, which works to defeat me at every turn.⁵

Essentially, a magician needs to route out all sources of self doubt and shame that continually warp the mind. In order to face the more primal elemental powers without beliefs in religious ideals and protections, it is necessary to have absolute self confidence and the most sublime self image. The God that the magician inherently is, is all that is needed to command any spirit.

The Venus Senior, ALHCTGA, told me to find my soul mate, my other self, and unite with this to achieve true wholeness. She told me a story about a man who was quite happy living alone, self absorbed, when one day he decided to search for a companion. He searched far and wide but couldn't find anyone who was satisfactory. Finally, he searched within himself in places he never expected to look and found the object of his search (superconsciousness⁶). He became whole.

The Luna Senior, LZINOPO, showed me physical examples of unions of opposites to produce holistic synergy. Chemical reactions and quantum interactions are the inorganic correlates to a human's search for fulfillment in a mate. The soul is one with matter, all deriving from one source and so interconnected. However, the nature of these connections is mysterious. Overall, the union of opposites emulates the interdimensional nature of consciousness and so expands this field to ever greater influence over its surroundings. All is one from a sufficiently transcendent perspective.

This magick is so wonderful. This is how I'll achieve higher initiation, just like Crowley did. At last, I can truly take my destiny into my own hands. Self reliance is the way to go in the Aeon of Horus.

Wednesday, April 14, 1999

I've been carefully contemplating the parable the Venus Senior of Earth told me. The concept of other self, as opposed to not self, is profound and useful in any mystical endeavor. Indeed, there is nothing that is not of Self, merely that which is currently not recognized as such. The key, then, is to continually look in new places for self, to do things different than according to habit, and think in unusual ways.

The most obvious place where consciousness is ignored and affirmed as not self is the physical world. Consciousness is apparently confined to the central nervous system but my experiences with expansion of self awareness have revealed this to be in error. All that is, is consciousness. The nervous system is just a focuser of the omnipresent life principle.

It seems I've already learned this vital lesson to a profound degree, indicating that my best states of awareness I've attained so far correspond in the Enochian system to the Seniors. Putting my mystical threshold into an organized context is of great value. My hypothesis, that magical systems like Dee's open up avenues of superconsciousness rather than calling upon supernatural beings whose existence is entirely independent to that of the magician, has proven to be correct. It makes sense that the planetary natures inherent in material consciousness correspond to my best vision work and mystical realizations. My results have primarily been in Malkuth, the Bride⁷, everything being comprehensible to the intellect. According to the Qabalah, the next step beyond this involves the celestial world, Microprosopus, the realm of the planets and stars, unsullied by material reflection. To realize consciousness in these superlunary vibrations would exalt me to a significantly higher state of self realization than what I currently experience.

LIANSAN – Saturn Senior of Earth
 LAIDROM - Mars Senior of Earth
 Sunday, April 25, 1999

Today's workshop was superb. As it turns out, the hexagram ritual isn't necessary to evoke the Seniors but it does serve as a useful amplifier of the stellar energies inherent in material nature. It's worth doing.

The Saturn Senior of Earth lent a feeling of purity and sanctity. I was reminded of how the nature of Babalon⁸ was a fusion of Saturn, Mars, and Venus. When properly understood, the power of Saturn ceases to be dark and foreboding and can be experienced as a pure but impersonal holy presence. As manifested on the plane of earth, Saturn is the process of focusing the vast potential of the universe to create a personalized, ego-centered reality. A great abyss separates the personal self from the impersonal source and so that which is beyond that self often appears as dark and overwhelming to the beginner in magick. A lot of initiation and transformation enables the more seasoned magician to penetrate that veil and look upon the sanctified inner mystery without fear.

The Mars Senior of Earth claimed to be that force of evolution which drives people to form new societies when existing groups become too old fashioned for the new-oriented citizens. Normally, evolution occurs very slowly over long periods of time. However, as with both physical and psychic evolution, there are short intervals wherein very rapid change occurs. An example is the advent of the Aeon of Horus, which inaugurated the remarkable transformations of society in the 20th century and continue to this day. If humanity can survive the backlash to this extreme evolution, it can become something far beyond anything yet imagined. This intense but unknown potential seems as cataclysmic Saturnian darkness to many. Enochian magick can help us make sense of what is going on and what is to come. In this spirit, LAIDROM quoted an inspirational passage out of "Liber Al vel Legis," Ch. 1, v. 12, "Come forth, oh children, under the stars, & take your fill of love!"⁹ I wonder what amazing evolutionary transformations will be brought about as a result of contacting all six Earth Seniors.

The workshop is now ready to evoke the great King of Earth, the solar being on the Watchtower of the North. After that, we'll evoke the angels of the Air tablet, the great Eastern Quadrangle. Great adventures await!

ICZHIHAL – King of Earth
 Sunday, May 9, 1999

I have evoked the elemental King of Earth and the North, ICZHIHAL. The vision of this great King was awesome! His force filled the entire temple space in a palpable way, stretching to the beyond region, the borderland between mind and matter, and pervading every dimension from one extreme to the other. Through his all encompassing presence, I felt myself expand beyond the confines of space and time. There is much more to physical existence than length, width, depth, and time. He was inside and outside of this reality, truly an interdimensional being. He projected himself smoothly into my mind as easily as someone walking into a room, appearing as an old, bearded man in black robes. His image, however, looked like a carefully detailed pencil drawing. The scene before my mind's eye seemed at once unreal and more real than any experience I ever had to this point. A higher being had extended itself into my psychic domain.

To bestow his blessing, he placed a portion of his being, a great spiral force that flowed through this plane and many others, over my head. I felt immense power flow through my mind and body, one dimensional state to another, and back to its source beyond physical reality. My entire being had been included in a great superdimensional circuit that was everywhere, yet focused in a current I was now a part of. The influences of the Seniors were mere drops in this ocean of cosmic expansion. The great King bestowed on me the ability to command the Powers of Earth.

ICZHIHAL taught me that movement through space and time is an illusion. All that is changing is the way in which the wholeness of reality focuses itself through the domain of the expanding physical universe. That potential from which it expands has many other dimensions and domains of realization. To understand how magical energy cycles through this space-time arena, the entire circuit must be perceived at once. Complete receptivity is needed to appreciate the holistic process of moment-by-moment realization of possibility. The key to influencing this course of creation is to receive it fully and then change the state of self in such a way as to impress a desired change onto the circuit, altering the way it unfolds through space over time. Much magical training is needed to integrate the magician's psyche and nervous system to the point where such a holistic signal can be transmitted.

I closed the temple, giving license to depart to any and all spirits that may have been attracted by my rite of evocation. The forces of the King of Earth were effectively banished and my living room returned to normal. The Enochian system of magick works, not only in summoning but also in banishing tremendous cosmic and psychic energies. In this way, psychedelic experiences can be enjoyed at will, without the use of illegal drugs. The legacy of John Dee and Edward Kelly is a fantastic Path of evolutionary and initiatory acceleration.

LZINOPO – Luna Senior of Earth

ICZHIHAL – King of Earth

Sunday, May 23, 1999

Today's workshop was fantastic. My partner and I have finished evoking the major angels of the Earth tablet, and are ready to move on to the Air tablet next workshop. My partner mentioned during a discussion before the ceremony that her consciousness has been changing in ways similar to my own. Our visionary experiences, had by magick done outside the workshop, were producing similar breakthroughs. We're reaching many of the same philosophical and metaphysical conclusions. Our work together is producing a remarkable synergy.

My vision of the Earth King was purely metaphysical, without voice or person. I inwardly saw a great ring of pure psychic energy expand outward from my head at the level of my eyes. This became a series of concentric rings that clarified into tori. A torus is like a bagel in shape, a circle rotated around a center outside of it, forming a greater circle, a circle of circles.¹⁰ I could feel my expanded psychic energy flowing through each ring and out from my brain to each ring. From the edge of the outermost ring, the current instantly reappeared in my brain as if it moved through some higher dimension. This experience reminded me of the planet Saturn with its concentric rings. This is an important cosmic geometry that directly relates the innermost mind with celestial objects.

The Luna Senior showed me another such geometry, one involving a spherical formation with energy accruing to it like the formation of a planet or a star. This was like a simple gravitational attraction. This was a female formula in comparison to the King's male formula of cosmic geometry. Consciousness is a cosmic force that is focused on and channels through the human mind and nervous system. Every scale of the universe works by the same basic energy structures.

CHAPTER IV

VISIONS OF THE GREAT EASTERN WATCHTOWER OF AIR FIRST ROUND

AAOZAIF – Jupiter Senior of Air
AVTOTAR – Mercury Senior of Air
Sunday, June 27, 1999

I've evoked the Jupiter and Mercury Seniors of Air in due form and have learned much. The powers of Air deal with the realm of universal consciousness and universal intent. This is the cosmic mental counterpart to the Earth perspective. Much that was hidden before became revealed with the Air perspective. Thus, it is true that all that is, is consciousness.

The Jupiter Senior first appeared as emanations of majestic gold sparks and currents, covering the entire vision space. The awesome life of cosmic intention was manifest. Soon, the power focused itself into an ancient male figure, dressed in regal white and gold robes. AAOZAIF bade me to join my consciousness with the myriad little needles of force/form¹ that constitute manifestation and learn to control them to produce magical effects. Universal intent is present everywhere, guiding all actions and determining every destiny. I was awash in the awesome being, its gestalt.

The Mercury Senior of Air, AVTOTAR, first appeared as pure darkness, yet filled with potential power. Much possibility seemed ready to realize itself but nothing happened. Soon, the vision resolved into a gigantic young male figure holding me in the palm of his hand. I expanded myself to dwarf him, and held him in my hand, yet retained the image of being held in his hand.² This double perspective was intriguing. There is much potential but little is realized by nature alone. The power of True Will causes events to occur.

The angel said that the universal intent projects itself through the cosmic mind, causing this infinite instantaneous flow of realization to form a focus of coherence, even in the midst of pure transcendence, pure potential.³ The coherence of light enters physical space as a plane or volume of vast width but very little depth. I've witnessed such projective phenomena during other visions, especially when my brow chakra (Ajna) or my crown chakra (Sahasrara) expands.⁴ This manifestation of pure Will gives rise to the male formula ring structure as seen in many celestial and planetary patterns.

I asked AVTOTAR how best to evoke the Kerubic and servient square angels.⁵ He said to activate each tablet and quarter in turn, unifying all four groups to form the gestalt that would bestow the desired power. I then asked for a boon to better enable me to perform my True Will in the world. He said that I should avail myself of the vast potential energy inherent in every point of space and time. This subtle cosmic background is the raw stuff from which individuated consciousness is made. Existence is whole, forming matter and mind together. These are the parts of the universal mind.

Much of this knowledge was communicated to me by direct understanding rather than by words. Then, I bid the Senior to depart and closed the temple.

Not only do the Seniors correct my pronunciation of their names but they introduce me to new aspects of my personal search for the truth of my being. My magick has produced astounding results, not only regarding the development of my superconsciousness but initiation into transcendent planes of reality. The mysteries of my subconscious have also been revealed. A wondrous conduit to higher wisdom, specifically suited to my purposes, is at my disposal. “There is success.”⁶

 AHAOZPI – Venus Senior of Air
 Sunday, July 4, 1999

My magical partner and I held another Enochian evocation workshop today. This time, we evoked the Mercury and Venus Seniors of Air. My partner continues to grow along a path similar to my own. We are kindred spirits on a deep philosophical and psychic level, brought into sync by the most powerful magical system known to the Western Mystery Tradition. Our work together will develop wonderful new innovations in magick and metaphysics.

My AVTOTAR vision began as last week’s ended, standing in the angel's gigantic hand. He opened a door in his chest leading to his heart to reveal a golden throne. I sat down on it and suddenly found myself in a golden chariot towing the sun across a gleaming white sky. Eventually, I came upon the Senior sitting at a square table sipping tea. I joined him and sat facing him. The tea had a flavor of cinnamon. (All these symbols correspond to Tiphareth.) He told me that the magical link between mind and matter could not be known but only experienced. It was an extension of being, not a step-by-step process of concentration. The leap of the spark of consciousness across the dimensional arenas was made directly.

In answer to another question, the Heptarchia angels⁷ could be summoned by opening the seven Bonorum tablets in a circle and then calling whatever angel and minions desired. The goal was to bring the tablets together as one and then subdivide, not unlike the process with the Watchtowers.

The Venus Senior of Air, AHAOZPI, also had a dual form. The vision began with a fantastically beautiful woman with long, blonde hair full of soft curls dancing like a ballerina. The golden space was full of twinkles and dreamy ecstasy. The whole exuded an intense eroticism, an effect my magical partner also experienced.

AHAOZPI began multiplying herself, coming to surround me with dancing figures. Then, across the horizon of the vision space, the gigantic face of a woman with straight, dark hair appeared. Her facial features were not quite human but seemed futuristic, a great leap ahead in evolution. Knowing better than to ask questions in such a setting, I opened myself to the erotic and expansive energies of the angelic contact. The huge woman's hands reached out to me and began to fold me up like a paper airplane. The more she folded me, the brighter and more golden I became, thoroughly aroused by the process. Eventually, I became like a statue of a dark brown color. The golden sparkly space gave way to the universe of stars.⁸ After communion with cosmic consciousness, she put me back in my body, just as AVTOTAR did by blowing me out of his hands with a thick, white mist.

The understanding gained in this way became translated into words later as follows. The process of creation of individuality begins as a projective multiplication of the core self which focuses around a particular perspective. A self recursive chain of association develops over time. The relationships among the different projections and with the focus of perspective increase in complexity until the currents of psychic energy become interdimensional. They come to connect the dimensional realms of mind and matter in the body. This folding and refolding process leads to individuated consciousness and the development of an understanding of experience in space and time. Being itself is multiplied until new psychic spaces are created. Experience is a self recursive process. The core self, the True Self, is beyond these conditions, yet, interpenetrates them. The self recursion expands into the central nervous system as the aura, multiplying and extending the projections into the physical world beyond the body. A smooth progression of dimensional expansion is established connecting the inner mind with the realm of matter. The fabled magical powers such as telekinesis, teleportation, telepathy, clairvoyance, healing, longevity, etc. could be achieved by increasing the complexity of the aura enough to link the right dimensions. Very great magical work is required to impose this integration.

AHAOZPI – Venus Senior of Air
AHMLICV – Mercury Senior of Earth
Sunday, July 25, 1999

Today's workshop went very well. Two new people showed up ready to do magick. Fortunately, they were both experienced workers of this great art. Their experiences resulting from the evocations were much appreciated.

We evoked the Mercury Senior of Earth and the Venus Senior of Air, chosen as a worthy sample of the workshop's accomplishments to date. As it turned out, however, the new participants had difficulty with the Air vision, the shift in elemental energies proving to be confusing. It is best to work with one element at a time.

My visions, as usual, were revelatory. AHMLICV related that the universe was a tapestry of interwoven spiral patterns of expanding dimensions. The spirals continually unfurl as the universe as a whole expands. These dimensional unfoldments stream into this bubble of spacetime from the background reality common to many universes. In a similar way, energy enters the mind from the surrounding physical and subatomic worlds in spiral patterns, joining the self recursive chains of association. The mind expands with personal experience over time, just like the cosmos. The aura also expands under this complexification of core self expression. Truly, man is a microcosm, a little universe.

The Senior told me to partake of the Communion of Saints⁹ to reach the next level of magical intensity. I was to do this by gathering together a group of people to join with in this communion. Then, a number of people appeared around me in the vision space and we all received a deep sense of union with the transcendent spirit of the angel. The people surrounding me, projections of my psyche, then merged with me to complete the Communion of Saints.

I became like a universe in vision, expressed as a great flower stretching across the dimensions with many petals/projections. I was the central stamen, a vertical shaft of Will intersecting the disk of circulating psychic energy, the axle of the wheel. My entire being was as one holistic eighth chakra, the lotus that contained me, superconsciousness. The Mercurial angel had given me a perspective of my being beyond my personal self. The human personality is but one set of realized possibilities amid a vast potential of consciousness that usually remains dormant, the subconscious. Transcendent magical influences help actualize and integrate this great potential with the existent ego structure, empowering the psyche with far greater than normal energy. The blessing of this communion remains with the personality permanently, even to other lives. Real progress toward higher than human evolution can take place.

Eventually, we gave AHMLICV license to depart and I opened the Air tablet with the third Enochian call. The Venus Senior of Air was next to be summoned.

AHAOZPI is a real angel lover. She showed me the male and female formulas of sex on the psychic plane. The male formula was imagined by my subconscious as a disk with a shaft of energy shooting through the center from above, very like the superchakra from the previous vision. The female formula was shown as a ball of continual attraction, drawing in all the energy around it like the gravity of a planet or star. The phallic image suggested the uplift of the sexual energies while the attractive image showed ever increasing integration with the object of love.¹⁰ The unfoldment of mind and matter establishes the background of life and the charge of life, its impulse to become. The multiplication of the spiral association patterns is one with the general expansion of consciousness, the expansion of the universe.

Evidently, the energies of the Earth angel continued to be felt even after he was given license to depart. At least for me, the Mercurial essence had more meaning. Great care needs to be taken in choosing what combination of angels is evoked during any Temple ceremony.

Saturday, August 7, 1999

My day-to-day experience has been much more charged with transcendent perception than before my achievement of the Communion of Saints during the last AHMLICV vision. There have been times when my entire nervous system has felt supercharged. Holistic psychic and nerve energy patterns are becoming more and more a part of my daily life. My entire body, from my head to my toes, has been integrated in this gestalt of joy.

HIPOTGA – Saturn Senior of Air
HTMORDA – Luna Senior of Air
Sunday, August 8, 1999

I have just taken down the magical workplace after having evoked the Saturn and Luna Seniors of Air, HIPOTGA and HTMORDA. There were few words received, these principles being far removed from an intellectual nature. Now, I remain sexually aroused from the second angelic contact.

I saw no figure of HIPOTGA but rather a dark space, pregnant with potential at every point. It was as if every single point of space in my vision was about to burst into a supernova of brilliance but not quite making it. Enormously powerful energies were waiting to realize themselves but the means to do so were absent.

A male, echoing voice said that I couldn't see the vision of HIPOTGA without dying first. I therefore relaxed and allowed ministering angels enfold me into pieces. They were nothing but white hands carrying me along. The process was at once a collapse and a disincorporation. The more pressed together I became, the more pieces of myself fell away, until nothing was left but tiny bits. In this vision, I was to be purely passive in the face of a power completely beyond my consciousness.

After parting finally from the pieces of what was left of my vision body, I floated freely as a small ball of fire, pure mind circulation. The hand angels eventually went away. The Will of the space then hurled me forward along a clockwise spiral path into a universe of dark stars. I then became a complex circulation of consciousness, interconnected with every other star and point of this cosmos, a true wheel of many wheels. Floating in darkness, I enjoyed the expanded being of the Saturnian space. Eventually, I returned back along the spiral path to my corporeal body, feeling more whole than ever before.

The vision of HTMORDA began immediately upon finishing the conjuration. The back of my head emitted a multicolored field of psychic light to my mind's eye and I felt a gentle presence which sexually excited me. Upon entering into trance, I beheld a vast space of grayish white light, punctuated with spangles of many colors. The air seemed drenched with moisture and I flew along as a seagull. There was wind and the sound of other sea birds.

Eventually, a vast, round head formulated out of the general background mist. The mouth was enormous and smiling and the eyes were full of glee. The whole reminded me of various man-in-the-moon images. I was filled with the Senior's joy. I asked HTMORDA to teach me magick. Without a word, I felt my aura receive energy from the surrounding misty space until a coherent circulation of current formed. Becoming a human figure, I raised my vision hands to project energy and the force flowed in the opposite direction to that of my intention. The current flowed over my hands and up my arms to merge with the general circulation of my aura. Only when a sufficiently intense charge passed out of my hands did the spillover erupt from my aura to project in the intended direction. It is the aura as a whole that casts magical energy, not the hands directly.

I asked for a blessing from the Senior to better enable me to carry out my True Will on earth and was filled with the angel's joy.

Then he/she said, "There are three paths to joy. One leads to darkness, another leads to fulfillment, and the other leads to pleasure. Choose a path. Choose all three paths. These three are one."¹¹

I was then returned to the physical world and closed the magical temple in due form.

The darkness of death yields the joy and peace of union with the All. Fulfillment generates ever greater satisfaction which soon becomes joy. Pleasure is a pursuit of self discovery that never ceases to bring joy. These are all expressions of True Will, whose accomplishment is the source of all joy. Life, death, and purpose are Its cornerstone. All the experiences of life are joy when understood to derive from this source of becoming.¹²

HABIORO – Mars Senior of Air
 HIPOTGA – Saturn Senior of Air
 Sunday, August 22, 1999

I have evoked the Mars and Saturn Seniors of Air in full formal temple and achieved both visions to full satisfaction. I am now ready to call the great King of the East for next week's magical workshop.

HABIORO was merry and mighty with his red armor, hair, and beard. He was boisterous and resembled an English actor I've seen on television. The Senior spoke with that actor's voice.

With passionate gesticulations he commanded, "Come forth, oh children, under the stars, and take your fill of love."¹³

He is Love and Will, a pure expression of the spirit of Thelema. He is the passion for life, just as the Saturn Senior is the passion for death. I lacked this passion in my first attempt to evoke HIPOTGA and so failed to achieve his full vision.

This is no longer the case.

Passion is a uniting quality, built up during the Fire phase of an elementally based mystical program of spiritual transcendence. Mars is passion, the Love and Will that motivates life itself. Thus, even the smallness of incarnate life must be passionately embraced as part of the experience of the grand, impersonal Truth of life. All circumstances must be wholeheartedly accepted to realize the wholeness of reality, the source of everything. The most humiliating of ordeals must be understood as part of a seamless continuity of existence to appreciate holistic Truth.

Finally, HABIORO showed me a table of pure white light and said that I must link the forces of my psyche with physical forces in order to impose my Will on that world. There is such a link but it was beyond his understanding how to find and use this link.¹⁴

I then banished this Senior and evoked HIPOTGA. As a tiny ball of burning light, I perceived a dark, stormy sky, a realm I've seen in previous visions from other meditations. It expresses a state of the deep subconscious on the border between life and death. I accepted this forbidding yet thrilling trance with longing and joy. I flew beyond the storm and came at length to clear, blue sky above fluffy, white clouds. Beyond the veil of death is a life free of incarnate attachment.

Then, the Senior appeared as a huge hyperdimensional head composed of white light, both near and far away at the same time, occupying many positions at once. Here in the death state, Saturn is a living force. The angel was ancient, calm, and wise, projecting certitude and infinite transcendence.

Eventually, this form focused to a tall, gray robed figure. He bestowed on me the blessing of death and told me to fear it no more. That which truly lives is the collective consciousness of the species, the source of incarnation, the projector of souls. All minds are one in the state beyond death.¹⁵ Dying is but a gateway to the inner mystery of Saturn. Wisely is this planet attributed to the first Path beyond Malkuth on the Tree of Life. This Path of Tav can lead up to Yesod or down to the Qlipboth, the psychic shells of the dead. Both directions express the mysteries of this often misunderstood planet. Its impersonal nature can either inspire horror or transcendent joy, depending on the spiritual state of the mystic adventurer.

Saturn is that which builds and destroys, two expressions of one nature. The whole course of material events emulates the transcendent nature of the All-source in a lower dimensional state of being.¹⁶ This principle puts limits on the infinite to create spacetime, wherein life and death can occur. Binding and expansion are the twin pillars to the temple of this mystery.

BATAIVAH – King of Air
 AAOZAIF – Jupiter Senior of Air
 Sunday, August 29, 1999

I evoked BATAIVAH, the King of the East, and AAOZAIF, Jupiter Senior of Air, at today's magick workshop. The great King turned out to be far beyond my and my partner's ability to handle, our visions involving only abstract shapes and disembodied voices. Without doubt, the Enochian system of magick has a definite set of influences that can be evoked through its language and symbols. This experience is far more than subjective expectation or idle dreams. Real power focuses on the mind of the magician who uses the Watchtower tablets, producing effects of a particular kind based on the entity conjured. If the old grimoires are at all accurate in their claims of what abilities and talents may be derived by their use, real magical powers may be developed this way, true wizardry like in the old fairy tales. The road to success, however, is a long one.

My vision of the Air King involved flying through long, spiraling tunnels of black and white airy force that seemed to pass through all dimensions and scales of reality, from the smallest atom to the largest galaxy, and everything in between. The differences in size and perspective afforded by these interdimensional whorls were mind boggling and dizzying. The very concept of space as a coherent set of directions became warped into an ever changing vista.

A voice from everywhere and nowhere said that the full vision was beyond my understanding. In order to gain this level of transcendence, I needed to learn to see the gross in the fine, the darkness in the light, and the nature of material objects in the quantum chaos out of which they grow. It was not enough to understand the source of these pairs of opposites. Each extreme had to be conceived as involving its other. This was completely beyond my mind's ability to grasp.

As a blessing and a lesson on how to achieve this malleability of mind, the King yielded to me a vision of a white space wherein the vistas continually moved closer and then farther away from me. The horizon was broken up into segments that moved independently of each other. A very blurry visage of a manly king appeared before me in this confused, yet strangely ordered space.

Eventually, I gave up on reaching further into this bewildering vision and called AAOZAIF, the Jupiter Senior of Air. His vision was naturally far more coherent and comprehensible. The angel held me in his outstretched hands as before, as if creating me by the forces emanating from them. He lifted me up into a brilliant white space and then lowered me into a dark space wherein only vague outlines of shapes were visible.

His message continued that of the King's. A further piece of advice given to me was to make of myself a pure and perfect mirror in order to receive and reflect the truth inherent in all reality, in every aspect thereof.

Such are my assignments to fulfill the curriculum of the Air angels. In a few weeks, I'll begin evoking the angels of the Water tablet. Of course, I'll eventually need to return to those visions not fully received but it is best to move on now. Certain lessons can only be learned from the perspective gained by later stages of the Work. At least for now, the seed of the unknown is planted.¹⁷

This culmination of Air has united the heights and the depths of the group mind of humanity as I experience it. I am humanity itself focused on an individual existence. This explains my continuing sense of being a part of a greater life than that which has developed from my personal experiences. Humanity is one. All of its potential is accessible to whoever can reach it. Once the collective unconscious is brought to self awareness, the whole complex can be developed along new lines of evolution. Ultimately, the original pattern of order that began all coherent existence, including consciousness and life, will be revealed. Any change in reality will then be possible.

Monday, August 30, 1999

In order to perceive the opposite of something within that something, it is first necessary to reach their common source in a transcendent state of being. The unfoldment of the pair of opposites in space and time may then be observed from this metaperspective. This unity must then be taken into both halves of the equation to know the one in the other. Such a state of consciousness is alien to the human norm. The greater whole of which I am a part, my superconsciousness, will have to guide me in this.

A vital clue was given me by the Air King, my greatest superconscious projection to date. The vision of a hyperdimensional space wherein the horizons varied in distance showed me how a partial state of being can exist within a greater holistic context. It's like a three dimensional space within a six dimensional hyperspace. This is a spatial metaphor expressing the relationship between self consciousness and superconsciousness.

In this way, I am to seek the gross in the fine and the darkness in the light. The baser concepts correspond to the nearer horizons, the more familiar tracks, while their opposites refer to the farther off vistas, the less familiar experiences. They exist together as they are and in a greater reality that transcends and creates them. There is a smooth continuum that joins these states of consciousness, in their separateness and their unity, a transdimensional path that leads to the full vision of BATAIVAH. This is how the Earth King was able to reach into my mind from without as if he had walked into another room. This is the metalevel at which the Watchtower Kings operate. I can't even begin to imagine what the Water and Fire Kings can show me but they will likely change my life forever. That's what magick is all about.

BATAIVAH – King of Air

AHAOZPI – Venus Senior of Air

Sunday, September 26, 1999

I've evoked BATAIVAH, King of the East, and AHAOZPI, Venus Senior of Air. My visions were inferior to my usual results. My contacts were weak. Upon calling the King, only darkness and flatness of vision answered. The flatness expressed lifelessness, dullness, and mediocrity. Although the dark space seemed to contain great potential for becoming in every point, even this possibility was weak, of little consequence.

Eventually, a disembodied voice said that I wasn't ready to receive the full vision of BATAIVAH. I called out in my mind, asking how I could become ready. The answer came that I should humbly submit myself to the King. This clearly couldn't be done. I am a human being, a complete microcosm, greater than any elemental no matter how exalted. It is I who must rule the spirits. So, I did the opposite of what was told to me and commanded that this spirit show itself to me.¹⁸ The darkness remained dull and flat for a little while longer. Eventually, a vast scene of clouds emerged that stretched farther than my mind's eye could see. My vision body stood in midair, perfectly still, just as the fluffy white and gray clouds were motionless against a dirty, tawny sky. An enormous figure coalesced from the clouds, forming into an old, white haired and bearded man in a white robe.

He asked by what authority I commanded his appearance. I answered in the name of my Holy Guardian Angel. At that, a great sun of orange brilliance burst forth behind me.¹⁹ I could feel its warmth and healing rays. There was also a throne of gold directly behind me that came into being along with the sun. I sat down on the throne and commanded the King to bestow on me the power to command the spirits of Air. He complied at last. I bade him to declare his nature and mystery. He said that he ruled over the forces of Air and all expansion and contraction. It was clear to me that the vision was not going my way so I gave BATAIVAH license to depart.

Next, I summoned the Venus Senior of Air to ask her what she thought of my plan to form a sexual relationship with her for the purpose of experiencing a more intimate synergy of angel and human.²⁰ She appeared as a vast, white, round face and then as a gorgeous blonde in a sheer, white robe. In answer to my proposition, she said that I wasn't ready for such a relationship and that I should focus on my personal magical path in accordance with my True Will. Satisfied with this, I gave her license to depart and closed the temple.

Interestingly, during the banishing of the magical workplace, I caught a glimpse with my mind's eye of a great hyperdimensional figure with thick, white, curly hair and beard. It was the Air King in full clarity. Some level of contact had definitely been achieved but only a sidewise glance was possible at this point. The image slowly faded from view as I continued the closing.

Looking back on my record, I'm doubtful of the results of today's visions. I was off my game in general and acted foolishly towards these exalted spirits. Their messages seemed contrived, rather than inspired. Issues remain to be dealt with before I can achieve full contact with the ultimate of the Air element but I must soon move on to the Water tablet angels. This may be the only way to fulfill the lessons of the Air angels. Otherwise, I may just have to wait for another round of Watchtower evocations before reaching what is currently beyond me. For now, I'll accept the advice of AHAOZPI and focus on my magick.

It seems to me that my major outstanding issue with the Air King involves my lack of experience with religious exaltation. While I've been able to achieve a good deal of personal spiritual transcendence, exaltation and expansion of consciousness, I don't worship any deity or religious ideal. I prefer to think of the ultimate source of being as who I really, truly am, beyond self identification. My previous attempts to begin straightforward religious practices resulted in physical illness and bouts of high anxiety. For me, religion is self denial and self destructive.²¹ I need to find a way to reconcile my personal spirituality with the impersonal transcendence that constitutes all things. This would also be in line with the Venus Senior's advice.

Later that night: I've just returned from a long, leisurely walk and have been inspired by an intriguing realization regarding the issues raised by today's evocations. Evidently, some religious observance is called for in dealing with the Air King but viewing deity as a principle outside myself is a dreadful mistake for me. Indeed, my spirituality throughout my life has been based on finding transcendence within myself, a purely mystical endeavor. My latest breakthrough in understanding, inspired by today's partial contact with BATAIVAH, is to integrate my personal self with the not self, what appears to be other than self. The Earth angels gave some intimation about this but now the King of the East is demanding it. A new type of religious expression is called for.

An important clue as to the nature of this new spiritual path may be found in the fact that Water is the next phase of the Watchtower magical program. I am reminded of The Hanged Man Tarot card,²² major arcana number twelve (XII), a card that figured significantly in a recent self administered reading. The Hanged Man has transcended all worldly pain and concern to fully focus on the spiritual realm, an inversion of conscious perspective shown by his inverted posture. Such a state of mind results from the union of opposites in the psyche, the ultimate of which is the fusion of self and other.

Aleister Crowley describes this card as a depiction of complete dedication to True Will, which is nothing other than the cosmic force of intention within the psyche. True Will is the supreme creative and deific principle within the mind of every intelligence in the universe. It is the ultimate object of my spiritual search. Clearly, the sense of separation between self and this other is a severe error, the worst restriction. Union with Will must be the central focus of whatever religious expression I use to enhance my magick.

LIANSAs – Saturn Senior of Earth
HIPOTGA – Saturn Senior of Air
Sunday, October 24, 1999²³

Today's workshop focused on strengthening contact with the Saturn principle inherent in the two elements covered so far. Repeated attempts are needed to achieve complete understanding of this most abstract and impersonal of the planets. Full Saturnian evocation is an effective preparation for the overwhelming impersonal contact with Water. My partner's visions and mine were exact and detailed, opening the way for work with the Watchtower of Water.

In my Earth vision, LIIANSA appeared backlit by a brilliant whirling Fylfot cross which was throwing out projections of itself. White and black swastikas were flying all over the place, spinning in a clockwise direction, the way of the sun and positive growth. The light behind the angel was so bright that he appeared in shadow. Wordless understanding came to me as to the meaning of what I was seeing. Mind and matter are two phases of consciousness, separated from one another by the interaction between the universe and the nervous systems of incarnate life forms. They are two extreme opposites of one spectrum of differentiation of possibility. Still, all that is, is consciousness. Their apparent incompatibility is an illusion based on limited awareness and understanding of both. The truth is that they are emanated from one source, the first swirlings of all existence.²⁴ The very basis of all reality forms the background and determines the interaction between the experiencer and the experienced. All transformations are possible from this underlying perspective. Mind and matter are of one substance.

In my Air vision, HIPOTGA revealed the brilliant light of the Fylfot cross, without any trace of shadow. He told me that I'd gained enough of an understanding of the proper relation between the incarnate psychic states and their transcendent source to perceive the light that exists in all things. The imagination represents aspects of the not self as darkness. Appreciating the not self as other-self has enabled me to experience all psychic states as light. The Great Sea of matter has become enlightened by transcendent consciousness. The devouring nature of Saturn has become understood as the cycling of a great interdimensional circuit of being. The All-Devourer is the All-Begetter.

The preparation is now complete. My magical partner and I are ready to begin performing evocations from the Watchtower of Water together.

CHAPTER V

VISIONS OF THE GREAT WESTERN WATCHTOWER OF WATER FIRST ROUND

SAIINOV – Jupiter Senior of Water
SONIZNT – Mercury Senior of Water
Monday, October 11, 1999

I have evoked the Jupiter and Mercury Seniors of Water, SAIINOV and SONIZNT, in due form. I still feel intense energy coursing throughout my nervous system but the effect is finally tapering off. Wow! What a leap forward in magical power!

The Jupiter vision began with the appearance of a stately ancient male, with long curly hair and beard, looking very much like the Air King. The scene had the same fluffy white and gray clouds against a tawny sky, which appeared in that last vision. The old angel lifted me with giant hands over his head, to the place of his crown chakra, and introduced himself as SAIINOV. He told me that the essence of Water filled the entire universe as the eternal now, the coherence that has enabled the universe to exist and grow. Each moment has three phases, the initial phase of its realization, its full becoming in existence, and its absorption into the universe of time. As he spoke, currents of bubbly water filled the vast sky scene and surrounded me with effervescence. All was contained in the coherent¹ fabric of the light, bubbly currents.

Suddenly, two remarkably realistic hands took hold of me and lifted me off the ancient's head. I was taken up out of the airy/watery space and into a realm of pure, thick darkness. The impression was like newly poured tar in the process of congealing. There, in front of my mind's eye, was the face of a woman with very long, black hair. She was more real and solid and existent than any other vision I've ever had. Everything before this was like a cartoon in comparison. For the first time in my life, I'd encountered something that was truly outside myself. My magick had brought something new into my psyche.

To say that she was huge would be a ridiculous understatement. Her vast face was huge, like an ocean is huge compared to a pond. She filled all the varying dimensions revealed by the Earth and Air angels and introduced something new, an existence of pure reality more solid than any stone, more palpable than my own body. Her hair was larger still, filling the whole vision as one with the velvety, thick, black space. As she spoke, her hair moved about every which way, just as the trees of eternity.²

She was the real SAIINOV, the Jupiter Senior of Water, the first female figure I've seen so far to represent this planetary influence among the elements. The initial personage had acted as a bridge, enabling me to pass from Air to Water, to something beyond my experience. She continued the lesson begun in the prior space. Each direction has a threefold set of currents which constitute its concept, three currents of consciousness which form its differentiation. There is the initial movement, its focus, and its culmination in its incorporation into spacetime.³

The angel told me to feel the coherence of the eternal now, the consciousness of the continuity of existence.⁴ I felt her hair, omnipresent and filling my being every second with love and wholeness and completeness. She enables and supports my existence by her imagining. I was experiencing the crossover from impersonal consciousness to personal, ego-based identification.

The Senior then said that I needed to complete nine tasks before I could go on to achieve the ultimate in spiritual transcendence. I felt dread at the prospect of having to remember so many details, making the record of this magical working more difficult. However, the tasks were not given to me in the obvious way. A list of nine items appeared before me in vision, written in white letters of an unfamiliar alphabet against the black background. The meaning of the words was completely unknown to me but I received the gist of the message. Essentially, I am to come to a coherent understanding of the nine aspects of creation (the emergence of specific events from the vast background of possibility), how moments and settings come into being from pure potential. Here is how Yesod is converted into Malkuth. Coherence is the key to this, as to the nature of Water as well.

I believe my visions have brought me near the threshold between the 10th and 9th Sephiroth. More than this, it seems I've been given a glimpse of the world of Briah as well. The image-making faculty of the mind has been transcended with the vivid experience of the foundation of physicality.

Satisfied and delighted by these amazing, breakthrough results, I gave SAIINOV license to depart and summoned SONIZNT. In the same thick, black space, I entered a tunnel of whirling essence wherein suggestions of white, ever changing geometric shapes moved past me. Inherent in each shape was an eye, an intelligence. Eventually, the tunnel moved passed me and I saw the enormous face of a man with long, black hair and beard which reached through the darkness, just like SAIINOV's hair had done. This angel spoke to me in a great, booming voice that seemed to come from my own voice within me, yet outside myself. At length, I banished and closed the temple, somewhat in a daze. Many of the details of these visions have slipped my mind now but essentially, I am to study how coherent shapes form out of the potential of being.

Later that night:

I just remembered the main thrust of the vision given by the Mercury Senior of Water. He showed me an image of myself as a system of intermingling currents of points of light squeezed into a narrow field of action, like a dark cylindrical bottle. SONIZNT bade me to re-image myself to expand this field, to make it extend into the general field of potential underlying all of physical reality. That way, the range of the light point circulation can extend throughout the space surrounding the bottle, enabling the Will to reach into the world directly. Psychic currents of self recursion can extend beyond the central nervous system, propagating the impulse of True Will into the immediate physical world of ordinary human experience. It all begins with a revisioning of self, forming a new identity as a new being.

SONIZNT – Mercury Senior of Water
 Sunday, November 21, 1999

I held another workshop today. My partner and I evoked the Mercury Senior of Water. So profound and potent was this first Water contact for her that we decided not to summon a second angel. She encountered the same expansion of consciousness experience that I had during my first evocation from this Watchtower. The higher dimension of pure being in which our personal existences were as tiny bubbles was brought to our awareness with the fullest of intensity. She also came to perceive the unitary source of all opposites that I've discovered in angelic vision.

What a marvel is John Dee's Enochian magical system. It introduces a profound and specific reality to any who approach this mystery. There is no subjectivity about it. Dee and Kelly reached into the very basis of the cosmos and derived the keys to its revelation. In the angelic language and tablets lay a direct Path of initiation to the ultimate transcendence.⁵

My experience of the Senior was somewhat less intense than last time, since I'd been able to adjust to this greater contact. He appeared to me clearly, but spread across great distances of space and time, closer to my reality than before.

He transported me to a great blue hyperspace along a golden spiral and there I partook of that state of consciousness beyond the image making faculty. This was the true Water, pure coherence. His teaching was to project myself astrally in order to actualize one of those points of great potential which filled my enhanced vision space.

SLGAIOL – Venus Senior of Water

LSRAHPM – Mars Senior of Water

Saturday, November 27, 1999

I've evoked the Venus and Mars Seniors of Water in full magical temple. Now, my head is almost spinning with the awesome psychic forces drawn forth from the impersonal currents of consciousness from which I'm created. A major revelation has been given to me and it has already begun to transform my soul.

Upon calling SLGAIOL, I saw myriad folds of space, as if I'd projected my consciousness beyond the bounds of space and time to look upon the universe from outside. Each fold seemed like an entire course of cosmic evolution, complete with all the partial evolutions of galaxies, stars, planets, and life forms, falling in toward a common center that was at the same time invested in the flow of possibilities and outside of it. The falling circulations appeared at the edges of the supercosmic system when they neared the paradoxical center. Whole realities were born and died in this way.

A great head appeared in the curving, whirling spacetime flow, reflected in each fold and corner like the reflection on a pool of water into which a stone had been thrown. The effect at this level of being was total confusion, yet, the angel himself was coherent throughout. His existence made sense out of pure chaos. The angel's face was male, with the same black hair and beard as every other Water tablet angel I'd contacted so far. His every movement was carried throughout the spacetime folding circulations, bringing a subtle order to the inherent disorder of the reflecting material.

SLGAIOL told me that the universe was created from a contradiction. Existence is totally impossible, given the transcendent nature of its source. Yet, form took shape and coherent movement became. All that is, is a lie, being a purely arbitrary pattern imposed by currents of individuated, ordered consciousness. There are no limits to existence since all is based on an impossible contradiction, a paradox. I must fully embrace the contradiction of being in order to rise beyond the limitations of my own habituated mind. True magick, realization of the impossible, may only be done from a perspective that transcends reason. Only by operative contradiction of union of opposites may human limitations be overcome.

Overwhelmed by the import of the angel's message and the ultimately expanded state of the vision, I gave SLGAIOL license to depart and pressed on with the evocation of LSRAHPM, Mars Senior of Water. His mighty form, consisting of a fine white mist, arose out of a raging whirlpool of spacetime. This was another geometry of the same supercosmic flow that had been introduced in the last vision. Great bolts of lightning sprang from the maelstrom of focusing possibility, shrouding the Senior in blazing light. The birth of possibility of becoming is brought about by these fiery emanations.

The angel's lesson continued the revelation given by SLGAIOL. There is an unlimited amount of energy available at all times in all places because of the occurrence of impossibility. Anything can occur since no limitations truly exist. The focusing of pure information, relation between different states of being, provides unlimited power. Thus, all is hopeless confusion and yet receptive of any pattern imposed on it. Any creation is possible with the right state of mind. The human world is just one of an infinite variety of potential paradigms.

I may wield such currents of contradiction by merging with the impossibility which creates the cosmic coherence. Sheer nonsense gives rise to all pairs of opposites and their interactions. Any event may be made to occur by influence over the creative power of contradiction in this way.

It makes sense that impersonal consciousness would lead beyond all human reason and even the collective unconscious to encompass all that is unreasonable. Clearly, the universe cares nothing for human ideals. Reason is but one of a myriad of possible patterns that may be projected onto what is a completely protean reality. Realization of the creative contradiction will transcend all limits of reason.

Truly, there is no God to judge humanity, no universal orderer. We are all totally free to impose whatever order onto existence we desire, just as I've always believed. Chaos is not ordered but is orderable. Order can be emerged therein to form the basis of the absurd impossibility which creates all things and circumstances.

As a side note, I became strongly sexually aroused upon evoking the Mars Senior of Water. The feeling was similar to that given me by the Venus Senior of Air but less romantic and more lustful. Indeed, the madness of sexual excitation helps to lift the mind beyond reason to the threshold of impossible contradiction.⁶

LAOAXRP – Luna Senior of Water

LIGDISA – Saturn Senior of Water

Sunday, December 5, 1999

I have evoked the Luna and Saturn Seniors of Water in due form and received their communion and blessing. My state of mind is peaceful and clear, having become acclimatized to the impact of the Water energies. The angelic lessons, however, are no less profound than before.

LAOAXRP appeared to me as a young girl, about seventeen or eighteen, with long, straight, blonde hair and large blue eyes. The surrounding vision space was grayish white rather than the usual black, perhaps reflective of my improved adjustment to her element. She had a mischievous laugh and hugged me affectionately, touching me in various places in a friendly and sometimes sexual manner. I felt stimulation in my Mars chakra, situated a few inches above my genitals, but was not moved emotionally. This new energy was not overwhelming.

She told me that I was nothing, that the oneness which I felt myself to be was a total illusion. All my thoughts and senses and conceptions were nothing except so much smoke on the surface of the ongoing coherence, which is the only reality. Truth may be found only in pure being, revealed when the chaos of the mind is stilled.

Then, she told me to sing. She showed me how by standing behind my vision body, putting her hands on my cheeks, and charging my entire being with glorious white light. Soon, I felt a stirring in my heart chakra, the chakra attributed to the Sun. Then, an essence of song began to emanate from there. I realized that this was how to project energy in a state of transcendence. Receive the ultimate essence of existence and then channel it through the chakra whose nature was to be projected. Such energies could be brought down to the physical level and fixed in a material basis such as a talisman. For instance, the heart chakra sings of love and harmony, imbuing all with a golden perfection and state of peace. Other chakras can produce different effects. The song of the eighth chakra, the integration of all the others with the innermost source of personal creation, projects ultimate transcendence as pure white light.

After a while, my essence song finished and then LAOAXRP told me that I wasn't who I thought I was. My current identity was a mistaken impression. My true name was Ebelijah. The meaning of the name could be found in the enumeration thereof.⁷ I understood that this was a fusion of the names Abel, son of Adam and brother of Cain, and Elijah, a prophet from the Old Testament. This surprised me, not being of a religious persuasion, but I immediately accepted this as my angelic assignation.

I gave LAOAXRP license to depart and evoked LIGDISA, Saturn Senior of Water. There was an immediate sense of hyperspatial immensity, a hallmark of this element. I saw before my mind's eye the Fylfot cross in whirling motion, so fast that it appeared like a solid disk. It became clear to me that this vision would not be the usual face to face encounter, my personal identity having been negated in the previous angelic contact. So, I became the swastika and felt all manner of emanations and motions being thrown out from me. Each projection carried the stamp of my Prime Pattern, the signature of who I really am, the core ideal on which my every mental activity is based. I became aware of a union of expansive darkness and frenetic universal light, a focus of impossibility, the opposites tucked into each other in spiral configurations. This is my pattern, my personal creation, correspondent to how the cosmos came into being.

Eventually, the angel appeared, springing out from my midsection, to reveal himself only from the waist up. He was a young, dark haired and bearded man, with the same puckish grin as had the Luna Senior. His communication was that this was the only reality, expression of pattern imposing itself onto other patterns and their background coherence. All else is an illusion. He also said that I should evoke the Jupiter Senior of Water again, before calling the King of the West.

With that, I gave LIGDISA license to depart and closed the temple by the usual ceremonial. This is Water, the impersonal aspect of consciousness, the true pattern of Self, upon which all the airy noise of the mind is derived. This true identity is of the nature of Briah. The Prime Pattern of Self is all in all, projecting an illusion of a self, operating in a universe of space, time, matter, and energy apparently separate from that self. All is as one is a misinterpretation of experience. All meaning, then, is purely arbitrary and so of limited truth, that is, false. Any further magical development will have to involve this expanded, impersonal state of consciousness. I feel like The Hanged Man of the Tarot, whose perspective is inverted, looking from the outside in.

SLGAIOL – Venus Senior of Water
Sunday, December 19, 1999

I held another workshop today with my magical partner. We evoked the Venus Senior of Water to receive her communion and her wisdom. Once again, my partner and I decided to set our pace at one Water Senior per session, such was the impact of their contact. I explained what I'd been learning from the angels in terms of the overall system and where these visions were leading. The element of Earth deals with coherent personal consciousness, the self consciousness of every day life. The element of Air deals with transcendent personal consciousness, the subconsciousness which underlies the ego. This is the stuff that dreams and hopes as well as nightmares and fears are made of, swirling around on a plane of constant change and mystery. The element of Water deals with coherent impersonal consciousness, the cosmic backdrop and formative principle of the entire personal experience and psychic mechanisms. The self comes together out of this great sea of potential like an iceberg freezing in an ocean. A small percentage of this enormous mass rises into the light of day while the rest of its vast bulk remains continually submerged in the darkness of its source in the watery abyss. Yet, all is Water, in one form or another, one phase or another. The element of Fire, then, deals with transcendent impersonal consciousness, that ultimate source of energy whose tiny pocket of unlikely, impossible darkness forms the basis for all life and mind. However, all energy held within the frozen possibility derives ultimately from the Fire of infinity.

Evocation of the angels of the great Watchtower of Fire would no doubt clarify what this was all about.

I also described my discovery of the core contradiction at the root of my psyche, the Prime Pattern emerging out of an impossible fusion of cosmic currents of opposite natures. All that I am or can become expresses this central truth of the existence which creates me. These explanations helped my partner to make sense of what she was experiencing through the contact with the intense transpersonal energy of Water, making it easier for her to handle its impact. Knowledge and experience are effective tools in empowering the mind to grow under the influence of superconscious projection.

My vision of the Venus Senior of Water was similar to my last contact with him. He taught me a mystery of the polarity between self and other. From the personal perspective, self projects other to produce a spectrum of differentiation between mind and matter. This spectrum encompasses the entire universe, yielding the experience of coherent reality as a collection of specific, ordered events in space and time. Personal reality adheres to exact and far reaching laws of nature and regular patterns by which life experience unfolds to the perceiving (and projecting) intelligence. Yet, this subset of likely occurrence is but a tiny drop in a vast arena of possibility. Much of what the mind creates for itself is based on early childhood imprints and conditioning imposed by family and society. Some of these behavioral patterns of thought and action can be destructive to the health and growth of the psyche, limiting life experience to a narrow, regularized track. Overcoming these poisonous psychic programs can greatly expand the scope of what life can bring to fruition.⁸ Sufficient projective power could alter manifestation significantly. This is the goal of magick.

The impersonal perspective, however, is far beyond any experience-based limitations. The state of self and other differentiation and interaction is only one current of realization in a greater reality of all inclusive possibility. That which is other, is understood to be an aspect of self and so one with it. The core contradiction is equally in the ego and in the non-ego, realizing self-in-other and other-in-self. This kind of paradox reveals the impersonal source as creating and being created by its projections. Time ceases to have meaning and an experience of an eternal, unchanging now results. The attained magician can shift perspective to any object in the surrounding world, making that the center of experience, leaving the original body-attached identity as other. Obsession with personal consciousness is hereby transcended and the entirety of existence can be understood as pure paradoxical contradiction. All is impossible so anything is possible.⁹

During this most enlightening vision, I fell into a hypnagogic state, half asleep and half awake. This had never happened to me before. My dreaming faculty was activated and I experienced a complete dream while my waking vision continued. Neither psychic function was interfered with by the other's progress. Their impressions remained clear and distinct. In my dream, I found myself trapped in a huge, black roasting pot being heated by a flame burning below. I could feel myself inside the pot heating up, but at the same time, I was outside the pot looking at it.¹⁰ I was in two different places in my dream at the same time while also experiencing a magically enhanced waking vision. The sleeping dream expressed what the waking vision was communicating.

Myself inside the pot began banging on the sides, trying to get out, but couldn't. Myself outside the pot could only watch helplessly. The angelic vision continued unaffected by its counterpart situation. The two superphysical communications ended simultaneously, their multifaceted message having been delivered.

My early childhood conditioning continues to isolate me from the true source of my being. Superconsciousness may light the way forward but the subconscious must be transformed in order to accept the transcendent inspiration to the deepest levels. Psychedelic experience is the key to revealing the truth of reality and enabling an expanded psyche to impose its pattern onto the ebb and flow of what can be.

SAIINOV – Jupiter Senior of Water
 RAAGIOSL – King of Water
 Sunday, December 26, 1999

I've evoked SAIINOV, Jupiter Senior of Water, and RAAGIOSL, Great King of the West and Water, to great effect. Ironically, SAIINOV warned me not to proceed with the evocation of the Water King because I wasn't ready. Too many disconcerting events had occurred today before the temple ceremony and so I was too unsettled emotionally to make an effective contact. Interestingly, she appeared in vision with a male counterpart orbiting her like a moon orbits a planet. Her counterpart remained silent throughout the conversation.

Her message sounded absurd to me, perhaps to be taken in a contradictory sense considering her orbiting male compliment. Perhaps this celestial pattern was meant to convey some hidden meaning to an obvious message that couldn't be taken seriously.¹¹ I stated my intention to proceed anyway, so she advised me to receive the King with my entire being. Only that level of wholeness could properly reach him and handle his profound energies.

With that, I banished the Senior and evoked the King. After making my conjuration, I could feel myself being surrounded by white energy which streamed out of the Water tablet. My physical eyes didn't register anything but in my mind, I saw a torrent of white light flowing from the Watchtower before me. The brilliance inundated me inside and out, flooding my every nerve, thought, and atom; every fiber of my physical and psychic being.

Upon sitting down to meditate and open my inner senses more fully to the Great King, I saw a vast head, white haired and bearded, condense out of the flowing light. He was constituted of an essence beyond my imagination but was able to focus his white current into the image of a head, just as the Seniors had done from their fields of black and gray. The King's brilliant energy, however, clearly emanated from a source far beyond that of his ministering angels. If the Seniors of the Watchtowers exist at the level of consciousness called Yetzirah or Briah in the Qabalah, their Kings exist in Atziluth, the worldview beyond the archetypes.

I opened up to him with as much of my being as I could muster, including my aura and senses outside my body. The King's mighty energies were far more intense, had far more impact on my body and mind, than any Senior could ever have, but I withstood the onslaught. With a voice that came from everywhere and nowhere, he told me that in order to understand and manipulate the universal coherence, which is Water, I needed to incorporate the complimentary of my own being. The microcosm exists within the macrocosm, two fields of consciousness with one focused on an incarnate experience and the other an all encompassing potential of experience. Yet, by a certain perspective, the microcosm contains the macrocosm and so the individual pattern is spread throughout the wholeness of things. This cosmic self exists as more than just the presence of the individual in everything that is not that individual. It is everywhere and every when at once, while still expressing a particular person with a particular experience. Thus, self, other self, and cosmic self had to merge to realize transcendental understanding and abilities. Control over the emergence of physical reality is thereby possible.

I asked him for his blessing and permission to command the forces of Water. He bestowed this upon me. The King's blessing yielded an awareness of oneness with all and my complimentary self, omnipresent yet contained in my focused experience. I was a recognized ruler of Water, just as with Earth and Air.

I then gave the Great King license to depart and closed the temple in due form. On the way to a restaurant for dinner, I felt very altered from my usual sense of self. My entire psyche seemed turned inside out, continuing the connection with my cosmic self. All the events in the universe are merely ripples across the surface of an infinite ocean of pure joyous light and peace. Eating a large dinner helped to ground me and now I'm comfortably full and tired. I feel more stabilized and adjusted to the awesome powers and revelations I'd received from the angels. I look forward to evoking the powers of Fire.

Monday, December 27, 1999

Based on my experiences with the elemental angels and the lessons they've taught me, I'm ready to make some speculations on the nature of certain concepts of alchemy. The Medicine of Metals, that which perfects the minerals, is alchemical Water, quickened into life by the impulse of Mercury, the messenger of the Gods. This is an allegory of the human aura becoming quickened by focused, individuated consciousness inspired by superconscious contact. The transcendently connected ego becomes the conveyor of complex patterns of emergent order, communicating profound wisdom to the quantum chaos surrounding the body. The aura becomes a shining mirror of the higher worlds, reflecting Truth into the physical world. Properly manipulated, this emanation can become an effective agent of alchemical transmutation, bringing order and perfection to disordered nature.

On another topic, I've felt a definite intensification of my mental rest state since evoking the Water King. With some concentration, I can activate the higher activity of my mind almost to the point of angelic evocation. With this acceleration, I've achieved a clearer perception of my complimentary self. This is the impression my self consciousness makes in the overall source field of impersonal consciousness, like a handprint in wet cement. My complimentary is a shadow to my personal light. Together, we constitute a complete self. Integrated with other self, we create the universe of experience, a whole cross section of spacetime. The function of creation lies at the core of each consciousness. There is no God but Man. With this growing Self awareness, I'll soon be able to open up my psyche to the highest levels of superconsciousness by Will alone.

LAOAXRP – Luna Senior of Water
 Sunday, February 27, 2000

My magical partner and I evoked LAOAXRP, Luna Senior of Water, during today's workshop. We both perceived action occurring in physical space on an inward level.¹² Clearly, my evocation abilities are improving. Objective perception confirms it. It seems my results are enhanced as I go forward in the Enochian training program, even when returning to a prior element. My progress should be truly dramatic when I undertake Senior evocation again from the beginning.

My partner's result shows that, whether or not any objective physical energy is projected during these ceremonies, the effects of the evocation on the mind are pronounced and undeniable. There is a level of mind that seems to extend into space and can be altered by magical projection, even if this influence is caused by nothing more than a complex set of body language and voice inflections. However, if the enhanced psychic emanation is materially real, great magical effects are possible with its multiplication. If not, even if all these perceptions are nothing more than so much mental masturbation, the revelations of ecstasy and transcendental connection make the effort worthwhile.

In today's vision, I perceived a spiral current emanating from the center of the Water tablet. It was like viscous water, full of bubbles, and it was bright and shiny. Interestingly, my partner described seeing just this substance in her vision, interpenetrating every object in the room as well as her own mind. She had achieved perception of the smooth flow between her mind and the outer world, the in between dimension that I'd discovered. She perceived my magical projection!

The spiral turned out to be a tunnel through which LAOAXRP came to enter our world. Her form was made up of the same bright, bubbly, watery substance as the tunnel but more colored like a human. This manifestation was different from the moonfaced figure I received the last time I evoked this Senior but the demeanor was the same. It seemed my contact with Fire had refined my ability to project any angel.

She led me into the tunnel and through to the in between reality. It was a dark, empty place except for a pedestal on which was a square box, open at the top. Brilliant white light shone from within. The angel told me to place my hands on this table. The light shone from between my fingers as I touched it.

She said that this energy was the potential behind all coherent reality but that I wasn't ready to tap into it because of my conscious focus on myself. I needed to loosen up and extend my sense of self to reach through other self to realize the universal potential energy. All the angels were clear on this point.

So far, my contact with the other self in my mind/aura has only begun to foster a sense of overall unity of perspective. The sense of separateness between self and other remains very strong. Slowly, these barriers are becoming permeable in all my magical work. Greater success will bring greater connection and make of my whole being a conduit for the Light of Life to reach physicality.

My partner's vision remained focused on the shining Water pervading the temple and every object therein. She told me that this connecting principle was the basis for all perception.

This link of transpersonal consciousness enabled the human mind to perceive material objects. Physical signals such as light, pressure waves through the air, etc., were actually incidental, unable of themselves to promote perception. I speculate that if the frequency of an object's consciousness conduction was significantly different from that with which the human mind normally deals, that object would be totally imperceptible by humans on any level. It would be entirely outside their reality. Indeed, all of life is an interchange of circuiting consciousness. Manipulation of that process can yield profound ability to alter personal experience.

Our visions ended with LAOAXRP returning through the Water tunnel. My partner and I then closed the temple in due form. We both marveled at how real and powerful the Enochian entities are. Time after time, participants in these ceremonies report similar phenomena and appearances. The language of the angels channels an objectively real presence, whether it is from an excitation of the collective aura of the evoking magicians or an independent being from beyond the world answers the Call. The force of consciousness is real and can be manipulated at will, the ultimate occult force.

Wednesday, March 1, 2000

I've come to a greater understanding of what LAOAXRP was telling me last Sunday and why the Jupiter Senior of Water told me I wasn't yet ready to evoke the Water King. The expansion of consciousness involved with Water involves far more than simply becoming aware of the vast field of impersonal being from which the personal mind emerges. Remaining centered on ego identity prevents the circulation of psychic relationships from encompassing the entire auric ground. To fully realize the true nature of Water is to shift identity from the personal to the impersonal perspective, from self as locked within a body to the self that freely oscillates between the ego and the non ego. Apparently, the result of this transition is to realize a sense of self that transcends mind and body to experience a cosmic participation and presence. So far, I've only been able to catch flashes of this vast expansion of the conscious circuit. These revelations have been relaxing, releasing, and ecstatic. I need to make many more connections between my personal mind and its auric basis before achieving smooth flow of identity from the one to the other. Then, I'll be ready to take full advantage of contact with the Water King and reach the latent Fire within the other elements.

Sunday, March 26, 2000

Today's workshop went exceptionally well for both my magical partner and I. Group ritual has a charm and an effectiveness that solitary working can't match. Being in a chamber full of magicians performing highly orchestrated magical ritual is an awesome experience that nothing can compare to for sheer power and spiritual transcendence. Even with just one other person, a ceremony is enhanced to a great degree. The benefit to each participant, as well as the development of the involved group mind, is far reaching. This greater psychic acceleration improves solitary working a very great deal.

My transcendent experience began during the purification of the temple as part of the opening ceremony. I suddenly became aware of the underlying cause of my short temper in a vivid way. A vision spontaneously unfolded in my mind as I performed the ritual actions of temple purification, which clearly brought about dramatic personal cleansing. My imagination revealed a scene of raging, hot fire stabbing outward and then retreating. This activity was repeated over and over again, showing an imbalance of expression of Will. I was able to withstand the impact of this personal revelation but almost went deep into trance during the Opening by Watchtower. Fortunately, my years of experience with magically enhanced states of consciousness enabled me to keep my wits about me and finish the preliminary ritual. LSRAHPM was evoked effectively in due form.

My inner vision of physical activity revealed an outpouring of the same bright, bubbly water from the Water tablet as what appeared during the last workshop evocation. This time, instead of a spiral, there were two coherent streams flooding into the temple. One current went clockwise and the other went counterclockwise. The two streams encircled the magical workplace as they crisscrossed each other in complex patterns. These patterns came to cover the whole temple. It seemed as if an object of more than three dimensions had entered physical space. The changes in pattern that occurred over time showed the object's full extent.¹³

With this outer vision going on, I entered into inward trance to see a figure similar to the one from the last time I called the Mars Senior of Water. To my surprise, he called me stupid for summoning him again since I already received his full vision and message. I told him of the necessity for this, to teach my student. He readily agreed with me, changing his harsh tone immediately. This accommodating behavior made me suspect that the being before my mind's eye was not the angel I'd evoked but rather a personal projection. I exited this trance and returned to physical perception. The watery streams continued pouring out of the Western Watchtower to crisscross across my living room. Then the real angel came out of the tablet with the streams and walked to a spot in front of me, just as the Fire angels did. It seems my evocation abilities are improving as I continue this course of magical training.

The angel directed the Water currents to flow through me and I was completely inundated by the force - body, mind, and spirit. This extreme purification enabled me to perceive more clearly than before the source of my short temper as a habit of defective use of my Will, my ability to assert on all levels of consciousness. My Will is my entire being focusing on one point in physical, psychic, or conceptual space and pushing, asserting, emphasizing, and then relaxing. An activation is made and then the Will is withdrawn to allow a chain reaction to continue, resulting in psychic and physical manipulation. This holistic assertion power is what the true self uses to activate the brain cells that control body movements, speech, and memory. The unconscious Will controls the autonomic nervous system with this force. Unbalanced use of the Will causes violent psychic and physical reactions which result in unhealthy behavior, such as short temper. Repeated episodes of these reactions habituate into unconscious complexes and become so regularized as to occur regardless of conscious intention. A great deal of willpower is needed to break up these unpleasant psychic programs.

LSRAHPM and I did our best to wash the fire and inundate the old patterns of unbalanced forcing forward and then relaxing pattern. The flash fires eased somewhat and eventually disappeared from vision. Healed with this blessing, I returned to the physical level of perception.¹⁴

My magical partner's vision was even more intense than mine. Her vision began with a giant snake with a warrior woman carrying a sword riding on its head, between the eyes, appearing before her mind's eye. She told my partner that she was the force that propelled the semen in ejaculation, which forced out the baby during birth, and other such movements that forced matter through the courses of the body. When asked to explain further, the warrior woman grabbed my partner's hair and cut her head off with the sword. Fortunately, my partner was able to control her panic and continue with the vision after that point. Her years of yoga really paid off in this Work.

My partner perceived an enormous gushing of blood through her neck and up to the ceiling, where it disappeared.¹⁵ Then, a stem grew out of her neck and her head became a lotus flower which sprouted from that stem. Her head was the centerpiece of the blossom. In this forceful way, my partner reached impersonal consciousness.

Her vision directly corresponds to certain Kundalini visions I've had, where my entire body became the central stamen of a vast lotus, an eighth chakra, whose myriad interdimensional petals were projections of my aura. Much is shared during group magick. While I'm inducing the nature and intensity of her visions to an extent, it is her mind that is channeling and processing the energy. The lessons she's learning are relevant to her life. She claims to be very happy with her breakthrough and continues to be eager for more. That we'll both get when next time we evoke the Saturn Senior of Water.

SONIZNT – Mercury Senior of Water

SLGAIOIOL – Venus Senior of Water

Sunday, April 16, 2000

I enjoyed excellent communion with the Mercury and Venus Seniors of Water. My hope in evoking more Water Seniors before returning to the Fire tablet is to continue the purification of my Will, begun by the Mars Senior. One of the great satisfactions of solitary work is the ability to chart a course independent of other people's curricula, readjusting the order of operations at will. This should help me channel angelic Fire in a more balanced way in future. As usual, I got more than I bargained for.

The angels appeared in front of me and in my mind. The inner picture of their physical and psychic manifestations was clear and bright. There was no darkness obscuring anything. I could see their entire bodies.

SONIZNT instructed me in the proper use of Will. The three part process to best generate and project Will force is to transcend, receive, and call forth as the All, utilizing the entirety of existence to support the projection. Nothing short of a universal focusing of Will-force is balanced. Thus, any effort by the ego is doomed to failure. Ultimately, it's the entire universe that conjures magick. The human part is just along for the ride.

This angel's blessing consisted of helping to connect my nervous system with the transcendent reality that underlay all existence. He said I was ready to receive the All.

SLGAIOIOL appeared as a voluptuous blonde beauty, not at all the incomprehensible, disembodied face I've perceived in previous visions of her. She entered my body and sexually aroused me every bit as intensely as the Venus Senior of Air had done. She opened up a transcendent space in my mind wherein she appeared set against a hyperintense blue background. White flowers covered the edges of the scene. I perceived myself as the great lotus, the eighth chakra, with my vision body as the stamen in the center. The angel shone life giving rays on me like a sun does on a flower. A great, gorgeous, brilliant sun she was.

The angel told me that love for a woman could reveal that which I couldn't see in myself. A whole new revelation could be realized by such contact. Romance could be a part of the Path every bit as important as the most profound vision. Sex charged with love is a special force that could readily project in the holistic way recommended by SONIZNT. Ultimately, all expressions of Will result from usage of the sex force. This is why it is vital for any magician to properly understand and channel his/her sexuality in a healthy way. To reinforce her message, she bestowed her blessing on me by intensifying her magnificent image. My every nerve and thought were inundated by the ecstasy. This beauteous, beatific vision still comes readily to mind, even after the evocation has ended.¹⁶

 Sunday, April 30, 2000

Today's workshop went very well for both my magical partner and I. We evoked LIGDISA, Saturn Senior of Water. Surprisingly, the contact was loving and gentle, rather than cold and frightening, as one might expect from a Saturnian Water power. However, our visions were awesome in scope. We each received similar teachings from this angel, although they were worded differently to suit the receiver. The message involved the primary mystery of elemental Water, the contradictory nature of the source of consciousness as creator and created in one being. My partner had difficulty grasping this paradox and was given a meditation to help her understand. I was shown a vision of the circuit of consciousness as a progression of concentric metallic cylinders, each taller and wider than the ones it contained. They were concentric vertically as well as horizontally, yielding the impression of a parabolic dish on each side of the construct.

At first, LIGDISA introduced himself as the tendency which focused the patterns of the universe to form me. He was the instigator of my being, all that I know myself to be. A band of metallic light formed around my head at the level of my forehead at the same time the system of cylinders appeared to my mind's eye. I was looking outside and inside of them at the same time. I am the instigator and result of my being, the becoming of my consciousness. The cylinders form an evergrowing system that expands as my life experiences grow and complexifies my mind.

As my appreciation of the meaning and significance of these visions grew, the cylinders increased to enter an in between state, the infinite realm between pure mind and matter. Eventually, the outermost cylinders seemed to enter physical space and hovered above my head like a great helmet. My aura rose to meet them, my headband of metallic light linking with the interdimensional system of psychic projection levels. My inner visual sense became filled with metallic colored energy and a profound sense of oneness with all being, all that was, is and shall be, came over me. The great power of that oneness was palpable to all of my physical and metaphysical senses. By sheer configuration, the synergy of all existence is supremely powerful, paradoxically creating and being created by everything everywhere every when.

With my understanding complete, the transcendent connection withdrew and I returned to my normal state of waking psychic functioning. My partner and I banished and closed the temple in due form. We discussed our experiences in great detail over dinner.

Overall, the intensity of this angel and his message was awesome. However, the supercharge yielded by evocation of the Fire angels was noticeably lacking in this as well as the other Water angel contacts. As complete as the nature of Water is, Fire is its necessary correlate. Water is pure being in its wholeness, diversity, and tendency to form, but Fire is the charge of Will that drives and ensouls the entire process. I now feel ready to return to the Fire tablet and am eager to face the Mars Senior of Fire.

Wednesday, May 3, 2000

The full meaning of last Sunday's evocation has come to me. I am that angel. I am LIGDISA as well as all the other angels I've evoked. I exist both inside and outside my body as well as the states in between. I am the instigator and resultant of my being, the image of myself. I feel the spectrum of existence and becoming, spanning the conditions from inside my mind to outside my body. Each state appears to my mind's eye as a band of force, a projection of Will that manifests some distance away from the point of emanation. The several levels of projection come together as the system of concentric cylinders as revealed during last Sunday's vision. Integration among these bands produces profound synergy and spiritual transcendence, the revelation of new states of being, multi-state experience. Feelings of oneness with all things follow this expansion of consciousness, this psychedelic experience.

My progression through the elements reflects the development of this understanding. Earth showed the material side of my being, my attachments to circumstances and personal psychic programs. The source of material being and evolution was revealed as the interdimensional cosmic spiral. Air revealed the force of my life, the vast spectrum of mental potential from personal attitudes to the human collective consciousness. Fusion of these perspectives enabled a leap in understanding and psychic functioning which revealed a greater wholeness to my existence. All that I know myself to be is but a drop in a vast field of potential for experience, impersonal consciousness, Water. This is the interdimensional field of my aura, the architect of my life and the product of all my incarnate experience. Of course, nothing happens without the impulse of pure Will to quicken the whole construct into activity, the ever flowing rush of Fire. A greater fusion involving all four elements will no doubt yield the transcendent metaconsciousness that is Spirit, the All/Naught which produces and destroys organic existence. The mystery and purpose of life will stand revealed.

RAAGIOSL – King of Water
 Sunday, June 4, 2000

My magical partner and I held another Enochian magical workshop today. We evoked RAAGIOSL, great King of the West and Water. My partner had a dramatic breakthrough in consciousness by her first contact with this truly awesome being. She became aware of herself as a fundamental functioning part of the universe as a whole. I believe this to be Briatic consciousness, transcending any image or concept, completely beyond the earthbound psyche of the ego and its ideals.

For my part, I was told once again that I wasn't ready to achieve the full vision of the great King. Not even my most exalted Briatic states of consciousness were enough to truly represent him in vision. No image could do justice to his majesty and might. I suspect that a whole new faculty of consciousness is needed to efficiently process this tremendous contact. The only clue RAAGIOSL could give me was an experience of my entire being, personal and impersonal, as one coherent whole. There was no vision to this. My interpretation of the King's message is that I must learn to function at the cosmic level as efficiently as what I can now do at the personal level. I have far to go along the Path before I become able to function at such an exalted, superhuman level. The message from my first evocation of this entity has even more import for me now than ever before.

I've just had my last workshop with my magical partner.

We covered some technical points of the temple ceremonial. She told me she needed a break to fully explore the wonders and revelations of our Water angel evocations as well as to work more indepth with Raja Yoga. Yoga has been her primary path for nine years. If her Work brings her back to this type of magical practice, our workshops can resume. Otherwise, she has some new tools to pursue her own course. In the meantime, I'll continue alone on my way through the magick of John Dee's Enochian system.

CHAPTER VI

VISIONS OF THE GREAT SOUTHERN WATCHTOWER OF FIRE

FIRST ROUND

ANODOIN – Mercury Senior of Fire
Sunday, January 30, 2000

I have evoked ANODOIN, Mercury Senior of Fire, as my first evocation from the great Watchtower of the South, with full temple ceremonial. The energies of this manifestation didn't overwhelm me, as with the first contact with the Water tablet. The impression was quite different. The background Fire element appeared to my inner sense as a fiery red field of light, apparently made up of blocks of gelatinous cubes of red-orange firelight. ANODOIN himself appeared as an interdimensional current of rushing Fire that spiraled into my living room from beyond the confines of space and time. Nothing impinged on my sense of sight but the presence of the angel's movement was very clear to me. My imagination interpreted this otherworldly contact as a spiral of Fire with a face at the tip. The only other times I've achieved such palpable contact with higher dimensions were when I was evoking the elemental Kings. Here was an essence of pure magick, undiluted by worldly conditions, such as formed the other elements. The flow of power was noticeably outside my body, rather than entering physicality through my psyche. The sensations on my skin and aura were more distinct than with any other spiritual contact yet experienced.

ANODOIN taught me that there are three types of Fire: transcendent, internal, and external. These refer to the different dimensional modalities in which the life energy may manifest: the mind, the space surrounding the physical body, and the higher dimensions beyond space and time. Unite all three to evoke magick, that is, bind together the different states of being into one continuous interdimensional flow. Projection of psychic energy into physical reality is the process of evocation, of magick itself.

The angel told me to follow him and he tried to lead me out of my body to go someplace else. Try as I might, I was unable to leave my physical body behind so I prepared a psychic space in my imagination for the spirit to enter me. He took on a more complete form here, although his being remained part of the interdimensional current that spiraled outside my body and beyond the physical. His appearance was that of a conventional angelic figure but consisting totally of flames. His voice was like that of an ordinary human male.

Together, we entered into a deep space scene and from there to a beach of dark sand at night. The black ocean waters spread out to the horizon, purely still and shiny like a mirror. ANODOIN said that there was no Fire here except that everything was made of Fire, even Water. Next, we visited a stormy Air scene, an infinite sky filled with dark clouds. The angel said that Air carries Fire. Make the Air to flow smoothly to allow the Fire to be steady and coherent. We then visited a dark, waterless land. The teaching here was that Fire exists as potential within Earth but Earth was incapable of activating its internal Fire. Outside influence was needed to bring out this hidden principle.¹

The next destination in our whirlwind tour of the elemental planes was the deep space scene where we started our journey. Here in the element Spirit, Fire is everywhere, free flowing and unlimitedly expansive, fully actualized, inherent in every point of space, and shining brightly from every star. The beginning of all things, all elements, was here.

The angel brought me to a great pillar of flaming Fire that reached far above and below me, out of sight. Every spot in this immensity was a flame, yet all the flames were part of one coherent Fire that flowed and yet was perfectly stable in its place. The wonder of this revelation was greater than anything I'd ever experienced before. ANODOIN told me that this pillar upheld the entire universe. All things had their being by its mighty influence.

I realized then that this amazing psychic manifestation was the culmination of the rise of my Kundalini, which had first occurred spontaneously back in 1991.² What had been a tremendous magical part of my being now encompassed and contained me. I was now a part of it, a part of a new level of psyche that reached beyond the limits of the four dimensions of space and time. Connections with the universe as a whole had been forged and made strong in this fiery cosmic pillar of Kundalini. My evocation of this angel of Fire had brought the process of integration of my nervous system, which focused on my spinal column, to a grand new fruition. The alchemical metals, my chakras, had been fused into a philosophical gold that carried me away to a new inner reality, far closer to the cosmos than the human norm. I was now a receiver and transmitter of interdimensional signals that revealed a new plane of existence, stamped with the face of my soul. My consciousness could now expand in this grand new direction, transmuting into an ever more perfect image of the macrocosm.

Filled with this realization, I asked ANODOIN for his blessing and he put his flaming hand over my head, palm down. Flames erupted all over my psychic body, nourishing my every nerve and fiber. A sense of total peace and fulfillment imbued every thought and sensation. In this beatific state, I exited the vision and closed the temple in due form.

So it is revealed that Fire is the primary interdimensional force which constitutes all space, time, matter, energy, and consciousness. The whole of existence is woven from its spiraling patterns. Space itself is a form of subtle energy that can be contacted and manipulated. By the influence of Fire, all incarnate life arises out of the background of matter, an emergence of higher order reflecting the truth of transcendent states of being. Greater assimilation of the Fire principle is the key to all mystical and magical development. So far, I have touched the transcendent and internal fires but the external fire still eludes me. Much greater psychic and auric energization is needed to enable me to contact and utilize this other-self energy. No doubt, I will learn a great deal from the angels of Fire so I'll evoke them one at a time, with great care. The spirits are the best teachers of magick, projections of the magician's own superconsciousness.

AAPDOCE – Venus Senior of Fire
Sunday, February 13, 2000

I've evoked AAPDOCE, Venus Senior of Fire, in due form. Afterwards, I rushed out to a restaurant for dinner, hoping that food would help to ground the enormous magical energy charging my aura. The angel was definitely the most highly energized being I've ever called. The whole experience was sublime and left my aura operating at a higher level of vibration than ever before. Even after eating a solid meal, I can feel the subtle, hot energy flowing through my aura and nervous system. Eating usually does more to ground me than this. I'll have to wait for the effect to dissipate over time.

The vision began during the utterance of the Fire call. My inner spatial sense perceived the letters of the southern Watchtower distort and flow together to form a red, glowing triangular pyramid (a tetrahedron) covering the tablet. Although there was no physically visual change, my sense of the movement around me resolved an image of a vibrant, red, flaming tetrahedron, a true emblem of Fire.

AAPDOCE appeared to my inner sense as soon as I sat down to contact her. She leaped in a stream of vibrant red light from the tablet, as did ANODOIN, but this time the angel appeared as a whole person in my psychic space. She had long, curly, red hair and reddish white skin. Her face was young, beautiful, and mischievous. She wore a red Grecian style gown. She was kind and gentle and instructed me in the mysteries of Fire.

As she began to speak, my inner hearing registered a loud vibration along with her pseudohuman voice. It was androgynous in character and of a pitch higher than my own voice. The physical space surrounding my body, my entire field of inner vision, and the spaces in between, all seemed to vibrate with this extremely reverberated utterance. The angel told me to hear the voice of Fire.

I here note that sound has played little part in most of my visions to date. That inner sense has never before been properly integrated with my mind's eye. Achieving the intensity and clarity of such an unusual audible perception was a great breakthrough. Here was a sound that connected all the dimensions of my personal experience as one space. My superconscious projection was introducing me to a whole new reality, even beyond the one revealed by the Mercury Senior of Fire. It seems these Fire angels would take me much farther into the transcendence than any previous elemental contact.

Eventually, the interdimensional sound stopped. I asked the angel to teach me to project my Will into the world. Her answer was to project in three stages. The first stage is the stage of Salt, the stage of focus. The second stage is of Mercury, of transcendence. The third stage is of Sulfur, of emanation. These three processes must be integrated for successful projection of Will. I must focus my magical attention on the object that is to receive the impress of my Will, whether it is a talisman, a sigil, or some item to be consecrated. Then, I must extend my magically charged aura to encompass and interpenetrate the patient of my operation. Finally, I must project a stream of my will from my innermost core contradiction of self through the myriad partial, fractional dimensions which separate my mind from the physical world. This stream must enter the human scale of physical reality to infuse the object. My aura bridges this multifaceted gulf and opens up paths of potential realization through which my magical projection can flow to reach the recipient of my intention. Its etheric double receives this personal psychic image and is transformed by it, subtly altering the nature of the physical object. Making this interdimensional connection is the key to effectively projecting the Fire of Will. The magical link is hereby established and a cross section of the whole of spacetime comes to be incorporated into the aurically expanded interdimensional gestalt. Mind, matter, and cosmos become more intimately connected, fulfilling the ultimate purpose, the Great Work.

I asked for the angel's blessing and she gently caressed my cheeks, producing no physical sensation but rather a feeling of comfort. A red tinge filled my aura, hot and pulsating, yet stable. My aura soon took on a more coherent and solid form and was thoroughly energized. She kissed me several times but I wasn't sexually aroused by this, being rather a quiet receptacle for the impress of her Will. I was the patient of her magical operation.

The angel said that her function was the force of Fire, whereas the function of the Mercury Senior of Fire was the form of Fire. Indeed, Fire is carried effectively in streams which create fields of Fire, such as auras. These fields in turn project the Fiery streams of which they are constituted, conditioning them and weaving them into higher states of order. The streams are then shot forth to carry more specific images of Will. The field/stream duality corresponds to the complimentary natures of Nuit and Hadit, the purifying and consecrating officers in a Golden Dawn style temple, and especially the ideas conveyed by the Thelemic LVX signs of the Whirling Star and the Rising Serpent.³ These two correlate opposite perspectives of existence are integrated by symbols such as Ra Hoor Khuit and the Sign of the Triumphant One. Real transformative power is applied by the whirlings and rushings of Fire.

ALNDVOD – Luna Senior of Fire
Sunday, March 19, 2000

I've evoked ALNDVOD, Luna Senior of Fire, with somewhat disappointing results. The angel appeared from out of the tetrahedron that formed in and around the Fire tablet at a spot right in front of me, having the same intensity as the other angelic evocations of this element. My auric energy dramatically intensified with this contact.

ALNDVOD was male and spoke in a very deep, raspy voice. He told me to follow the spiral of Fire through all the interdimensional spaces, which I did in my vision. This ultimate creative principle consists everything in existence, from atoms to galaxies. The whole universe on all scales is part of this infinitely complex, ever whirling spiral. Nothing else really exists except the unlimited curling pattern.

The angel then attempted to reveal to me the true appearance of the physical world as made up entirely of the great spiral but all I saw was a black background with tiny red lights shining throughout the vision. He told me that I wasn't ready to achieve this vision because I'm too centered on my ego. My identity must be loosened from my personal experience in the body and reach out to the various other dimensions of reality before I could appreciate the full vision of the great spiral. The concept of the prime pattern was clear to me but direct contact with such transcendent truth was beyond my ability to encompass and imagine. The psychic energy was more than I could withstand, being limited by my self image as within a body. The mental complexity needed to model such metaphysical sensations was lacking.

The Senior said that my expansion beyond self as ego must occur slowly, over a long time. I needed to be patient but it would happen eventually. Until then, my access of consciousness would be limited.

Interestingly, there were several technical and performance problems during the temple opening. The Air and Earth votive candles went out and I was unable to get the Air candle relit. Fumbling with it resulted in my spilling wax all over my altar cloth and carpet. I had difficulty concentrating throughout the ceremony, as if I were in a daze. It was as if I was feeling the effects of the evocation before actually performing it. After banishing the angel and closing the temple, I could feel a fierce fire flowing upward through my aura, a flaming Kundalini unlike anything before experienced. Nothing came close to it for intensity or vibrancy. Eating dinner helped to ease this torrent a bit. The effect wore off in time.

Once again, I've been told by the angels, my greatest superconscious projections, that I'm not ready to penetrate the deepest mysteries of the elements. At this stage of my development, I'm too ego bound to achieve the full vision of transcendent impersonal reality. Several repetitions of this training will likely be needed to reach its full potential. For now, I'll be patient and finish this round of Watchtower evocations, including the five Spirit angels of the Tablet of Union.

Wednesday, March 22, 2000

I continue to feel the torrent of fire in my nervous system, gained during last Sunday's evocation/initiation. The angel actually entered my aura, sitting down inside me to bestow his blessing. I must be careful not to overcharge myself. This element is more powerful than any magick I've ever experienced, including all the ceremonial initiations bestowed by the magical schools with which I've been involved. It'll take some time for the new energy to become fully settled in my aura. Already, it has become fairly well distributed. Complete balance will bring relief from the supercharge.

AAETPIO – Mars Senior of Fire
Sunday, May 14, 2000

I've evoked AAETPIO, Mars Senior of Fire, to excellent effect. The psychic charge was awesome but I handled it well throughout the ceremony and contact. I was able to maintain my concentration and composure by willpower and discipline while the torrent of Fire charged through my mind and aura. My recent meditations on emotion control and stoic acceptance of material circumstance have enabled me to channel energies that are far more intense than I've ever felt before. My angelic magical projection was done at the Netzach level.

The temple opening and conjuration were more intense than usual. Visualization of the inner plane temple, the intercirculating torus of light set in a deep space setting, was remarkably vivid and tangible. The various god forms and magical sigils traced in the air during the opening rite maintained themselves clearly on the astral. The entire temple seemed to buzz with energy.

The Mars Senior of Fire leapt out of the great Southern Quadrangle as soon as I completed my conjuration. The angel's form was a vast, long, red dragon with an entire male human body for a head. This beast of energy followed me to my seat of meditation where I opened myself to the superconscious contact. The dragon's body continued to stream out of the Fire Tablet until it encircled the entire temple space. Unimaginable expanses of this entity remained within the interdimensional vistas beyond the southern watchtower. In this state, our souls touched.

AAETPIO stood over me and said, "The might of Fire is the Name of God." I felt intense torrents of red power coming to me from all outward and inner directions. The very intensity seemed to roar like a lion but there was no impression of sound. Then, the discourse of Fire began as the red energy coalesced into a great transdimensional tetrahedron, inside my mind and outside my body as one object.

The circle of cosmos focuses itself to a point. This point is a core contradiction that formulates a triangle, the projection of the circle. The triangle extends itself into a tetrahedron, passing from spacetime into space and time. This seed casts reflections of itself that form tight spiral patterns which extend throughout the cosmos that formed it. The crisscrossing interconnections and interferences of these projective currents constitute all matter and energy. Everything derives from this tetrahedral seed whose central point is the source of all pattern and possibility. All changes in state, all time, begin here. The instigator of creation is the instigator of incarnate consciousness. The universe and the self is one being in different states of becoming.⁴

I asked for the angel's blessing and his head/human body sat down inside mine. My entire aura shone with intense red light. Even my feet became physically hot; an effect which continued for some time after the Senior left me. I was not overwhelmed, however, but remained relaxed and endured the initiation. I channeled the fiery Mars energy fully. My attunement to angelic Fire is complete.

ADOEOET – Jupiter Senior of Fire
Sunday, May 28, 2000

I've just evoked ADOEOET, Jupiter Senior of Fire, to enlightening effect. He appeared to me as a mighty angel with a mature male face, huge white wings, and a red robe. The whole figure was colored like The Emperor card in Aleister Crowley's Thoth tarot deck. I handled the presence of the angel well and feel calm now. I haven't even gone to dinner yet, so at ease do I feel with the awesome forces of Fire. Grounding with food isn't necessary.

The angel told me that I wasn't yet ready to use the knowledge that he was going to give me but he told me anyway. There is a continuing stress throughout all existence, the result of the balancing between the forces that impel everything to return to the original state of all in all as one and the forces that maintain the current coherent state of separateness. This subtle energy gives rise to the potential of Fire. Its realization in the realms of mind and action is Fire.

I must learn to tap into the source of Fire, feel that ultimately subtle, stabilizing conflict of energies and realize it by an act of Will projection, imposing my own pattern onto the background of my contact with that great potential. Circumstances of the material world conform to such magical projections when they are made with sufficient intensity. The conflicting all-existent potential is the occult force of magick. Its full utilization yields unlimited power. The visions of the spiral/cylinder configurations indicate initial contact with the source of Fire.

Once again, a Jupiter Senior has told me I wasn't yet ready to handle his message and nature. Something of the Jupiter quality must be lacking in my psychic makeup. Greater maturity can only come with time. Auric complexity must develop slowly over the long years of life. For now, I'll learn and grow all I can.

ARINNAP – Saturn Senior of Fire
 Sunday, June 18, 2000

I have evoked ARINNAP, Saturn Senior of Fire, to good effect. Even during the opening, I could sense the building up of extremely intense, white brilliance pervading the magical workplace. Signs and symbols that were drawn in the air took shape in physical space,⁵ my mindspace, and the vision of the far horizon wherein the Cosmic Temple visualization takes place. Profound magical force was called and shaped by my ceremonial.

Upon conjuring ARINNAP, I perceived by inner vision my own face appear within the Fire tablet. It emerged into my space, taking on three dimensions, while streams of red light poured into the subtle dimension of the temple. These currents encircled the workplace as the angel wearing my face followed me to my place of meditation. His body was very like the Jupiter Senior of Fire but without wings. He sat down inside my body and communicated to me by speech and images in my mind.

He told me about Fire as the ultimate source and instigator of all being and experience. There is a constant state of power surge throughout all of space and time, like a perpetual light scintillating everywhere at each point and overall. It is the ultimate on-ness, the oneness of All. This state is the natural correlate to the state of nothingness, no existence or tendency thereto, off-ness. The perpetual flow of ever burning life and light is the source of all substance. It evolves the intelligence which causes the forces of creation to generate that substance. Human consciousness consists of an emanation from this Fire, fixed on a particular experience to produce personal consciousness. Both presences, subject and object, work to formulate the events of space and time.

Each material object depends from the higher reality that produces it by myriad interconnections, those spirals within spirals I've seen in other interdimensional visions. These connections branch to every other object and every other connection, forming a network of links at every level of being. This describes Aleister Crowley's star sponge vision and explains the various phenomena of magick as action at a distance. Healing or cursing by direct influence or transplantation is also explained.

Great sensitivity is needed to be able to chart the courses of these various magical links and to discern how such occult potentials can be harnessed. The tapestry woven by these most subtle webs of relationship is the main subject of ancient thaumaturgy and alchemy. It is the ethereal plane, the Plastic Mediator, the Soul of the World, the life force. Understanding the nature of these flows of pure information is the goal of the magician, the discovery of the signatures and correspondences of nature.

This penetrating perception may be developed over time by following a magical training regimen that reveals the Fire interconnections of the mind and body. As the mind becomes integrated through meditation and ceremonial practice, so the nervous system becomes integrated with the mind. All the cells in the body follow suit, along with the aura as a whole. The myriad circumstances of time and space likewise follow the magical projective efforts of one so attuned to the underlying substrate of nature. The mysteries of mind, matter, and the states in between reveal themselves to the accomplished adept.

As this understanding grew in my psyche, the angel took off my face like a mask to reveal his true appearance. His face was very ugly and demonic but there was no trace of evil or malice. He had taken on my appearance for the sake of my peace of mind but at this point in the evocation, I was ready to face his truth. Saturn is often ugly in its impersonal cosmic nature. It is completely inhuman.

With his message and blessing fully conveyed, I gave the angel license to depart and then closed the temple with all due ceremonial. I felt no particular energization after the evocation, as I sometimes do after a Fire conjuration. However, on my way to dinner, a profound sense of ARINNAP's white fire came over me. It was very subtle but intense, on the verge of becoming overwhelming. The effect wore off over time and was completely gone by the time my dinner was served. There were no further upsurges in energy after that. My attunement to this power is accomplished. I feel ready to call the Fire King.

EDLPRNAA – King of Fire
Sunday, July 9, 2000

On this seventeenth anniversary of my arrival in Los Angeles, CA to start my adult life, I've achieved the evocation of EDLPRNAA, great King of the South, elemental King of Fire, the single most powerful magical experience of my entire life. No other ritual or ceremonial initiation bestowed by any of the magical orders in which I've participated has ever come close to this reality altering revelation. I have successfully taken my magical life into my own hands and surpassed everything that has gone before. This completes the higher track of Enochian angelic evocation of the Watchtower series and establishes me as a master of the elements of the creation of my own being. The next and last step of this regimen is to evoke the five angels of the Tablet of Union, whose names are read from the columns. All the elemental powers are integrated into a cohesive unity of Spirit. Once this long track of thirty-three angelic evocations is complete, an Enochian oriented Bornless Ritual to conjure the Holy Guardian Angel will crown all efforts.

The appearance of the Fire King was truly awesome. He didn't come out of the tablet but rather focused in from every point in the space of my magical workplace. His gigantic face, of the light red color of the Fire angels, took up the entire floor, his body extending far beyond space and time. He reached into my mind's inner perceiver, impressing all within with a mighty presence, and said that in order to wield the powers of Fire, I had to pass three tests. First, I had to be found worthy. To do this, I would have to pass a test of courage, go somewhere and commune with all that was, is, and shall be to show my ability to call upon Fire, and be able to control what I evoke from Fire. The second test was in Will and the third test was in emotional control.

As this was being told to me, I noticed that little fiery spirals began to appear all around me, perceivable by the inner sense of ambience and visual impression. They were like tiny tornadoes of fire, spinning rapidly, the currents of flame whirling in spiral patterns up and down the funnel shapes. When the King's speech was finished, space itself erupted with these elementals. Even the in between space became filled with them. I then realized that the King's tests had begun. The first thing I did was to control my alarm and fear of the sudden torrential manifestation. I embraced their existence and took control of my psychic functioning which was channeling these whirling elementals. This aspect of my mind had been operating unconsciously until this point but was now brought to the fore through contact with the Fire King.

I confidently took control of my ability to call forth these fiery Salamanders. Their realization was an activation of potentials that exist at every point of space and time and beyond. These potentials arise from the connection between each point of existence and the wholeness of all things. The little gates open up to that which is outside of all this, a supercosmos that is the source of True Will and the birthplace of the universe. This greater Truth is the source of transcendent impersonal consciousness.

Once in control of the fiery projection and summoning process, I found myself able to guide the movements of the elementals into recognizable patterns. The flame funnels were all over me and inside me but answered readily to my control. The subtle and constant expansion of the universe produced more of the Fire elementals, generating more potential everywhere every second. They were raw becoming, ever increasing with the cosmic expansion.

This explains why transcendent visions involve the depiction of such huge size. The wholeness of things is realized and portrayed in actualization, a higher dimensional principle squeezed into a vision of three dimensional space. Something completely beyond normal human experience is given a dream image by subconsciousness and then merged with self consciousness to build superconsciousness.

In this way, I passed all the tests of worthiness. I proved my courage in the face of the inundating torrent of the Fire elementals' manifestation in mind and aura. I was able to raise my consciousness to a higher reality, the supercosmos, in gaining control of my psychic faculties which determined how and where the raw powers of Fire were called forth from the all potential. The Salamanders were mine to control as their king.

Upon my realization of the higher reality, home of True Will, EDLPRNAA's booming voice came into my mind and said that Fire exists at all points, at all times, and reaches beyond to the next level of existence. I began to feel the boundaries of my being expand to encompass the Fire space and to perceive a vast fire-colored spiral, only one section of which was the universe of space and time that humanity calls home. Curling inward from the Fire was the cosmic coherence of Water, spacetime, which contained all the stars and planets and the personal levels of consciousness. The spiral also extended outward from the physical universe and I could feel my consciousness being carried along its supercosmic track. Every curl of this megacreative principle contained another universe of possible experience. Here was an ever moving spiral of Fire, in contradistinction to stable, spherical Water. It flowed against a background of the pure darkness of nonexistence, pure nonpotential, lack of tendency towards any state. However, off in the far distance, there seemed to be tiny dots of light, like stars. Perhaps they were all-creative spirals like the one creating and expanding me, but I couldn't tell for sure. After all, the potential for becoming is unlimited in scope. My Will and emotional impulses expanded in scope as I whirled up the interdimensional creative spiral, level by level. I had passed the test of Will.

I noticed that the impulse to create which propagated along the Fire spiral was similar in pattern to emotional impulses but operating on a much larger scale. Indeed, animal consciousness is the first manifestation of cosmic consciousness at the level of life on earth. Savage it is, born of the core contradiction which drives spacetime creation. Thus, emotional control may be expanded to control of the cosmic creative tendency, the cosmic connection of the Nephesh.

Animals are more in touch with natural forces and their own collectives than are humans. A well formed ego tends to be cut off from its cosmic source by its extreme focus on its personal experiences. Intellect is fostered by this state of mind but so is existential alienation, leading to disdain for the natural world, a true self denial. Rejoining the sense of self to the natural ground of subconsciousness, linking intellect to the dream faculty which enables spiritual vision, creates transcendent superconsciousness, which is the inherent psychic functioning of the new aeon. By using my Will to unfold megacreation intelligently, I passed the test of emotional control. I had proven myself to the great King of Fire.

The scene changed as my whole being made a quantum leap in expansion. I found myself in a reality of brilliant blue, where dancing flames of blue, red, and yellow moved all around me. Here was a purity of life I'd never experienced before. All trace of coherence was lost as the ecstasy of pure transcendence registered on every subtle sense. Here was the source of all consciousness, life in its proper setting, free of all conflict and contradiction, beyond all the illusion produced by contact with the world of matter. I joined myself to this pure energy and danced with the flames.

With this profound blessing fully received from the Fire King, I could feel that the time had come to return. I made my way back to the megaspiral and then to my personal section of it. Returning to the physical world, I banished the Fire elementals and their King and then closed the temple in due form. There was no residual sense of overcharge or uncontrolled torrents of energy afterwards. I had effectively channeled, controlled, and banished the Fire energy in its most intense and powerful form. The Spirit angels are next to be called.

CHAPTER VII

VISIONS OF THE GREAT TABLET OF UNION

FIRST ROUND

RMTO – Earth of Spirit
XCAI – Air of Spirit
Sunday, September 3, 2000

I've evoked RMTO, Earth of Spirit angel, and XCAI, Air of Spirit angel, from the Tablet of Union. There was no sense of anything new, any new energy or state of mind. It was as if the angels spoke from all previously discovered states at once, an integration of what already existed. Naturally, everything was dwarfed by the Fire state but all qualities were present. In truth, All is One is all.

At the very first, today's magick was more intense than usual. While waiting for the charcoal in the censor to heat up, I sat in the prepared temple and rehearsed the second Enochian call. An almost overwhelming sense of power developed which disturbed my concentration. I finished with difficulty and then went into another room of my apartment to try again. No unusual power was generated there. When the time came to begin my ceremony, I neglected to take the astral journey to my inner plane cosmic temple or perform the Middle Pillar Exercise, so disconcerted was I at so early a manifestation of magical energy.¹

I began with the LBRP² and my first Qabalistic Cross brought on an intense increase in the Kundalini flow up my back, a potent counterpoise to the downward flow of energy from the Cross.³ My aura expanded into the transcendent dimension far more effectively than any Middle Pillar Exercise had ever enabled. Without trying, I was transported to my inner plane cosmic temple, complete with all interdimensional connections. In this state, I completed the rest of the temple opening rituals and was able to call the angels from every level between mind and matter.

The angels appeared to me in all dimensional levels, from within my mind to outside my body and out to the cosmos, as classic angelic male figures, showing only their heads, upper torsos, arms, and wings. They seemed to have been made of pure starlight and passed through several states of absorption into and emanation from the background outer space. All is One is all.

RMTO told me that he was that which caused things to be and to disappear. He upheld the being of all that is and caused their obscuration. He revealed and hid all things in due course. Indeed, all manifestation contains a purely occult aspect, being but a projection of a higher dimensional reality. The manifest world and the occult world produced by the transdimensional projection exist side by side and are interrelated on a deep level. The world of sense cannot be understood without its occult counterpart. Matter and aethyr are mirror images, two sides of the same coin.

This evocation didn't tire me or stress me in any way so I proceeded with the next angel in the series, the Air of Spirit angel named XCAI. He expressed the mirror world of manifestation as mentioned by RMTO. The background outer space of my inner plane cosmic temple reversed color. Space became white and the stars shown black radiance. The angel was the dark star, shining in the uncomprehending darkness with the darkness that is light in its way. He was a true correlate to RMTO.

Both angels told me that they had been formed by the impress of my mind onto the transcendent light, the first time any of my projections recognized and announced themselves thus. They were cooperative and spoke as other angels have to me. Tablet of Union angel evocation is truly metalevel work.

I feel calm and relaxed now, after having banished and closed the temple. My nervous system withstood the angelic force perfectly. I haven't been brought to a new level of psychic intensity but rather achieved the integration of what has gone before. I am at the level of a Golden Dawn Portal initiate. Next time, I'll be ready for the Water and Fire of Spirit angels and maybe even complete this round of Watchtower evocations with the Spirit of Spirit angel. For now, I may contemplate the mysteries of the occult aspect of manifestation.

AONT – Water of Spirit
Sunday, September 24, 2000

I've evoked AONT, Water of Spirit angel of the Tablet of Union. The nature of this being/projection is so far beyond my consciousness that I failed to achieve full contact. In fact, as I sat down to commune with AONT, a voice in my head said that I'd failed to evoke the angel. My vision space opened to reveal coruscations of water that eventually formed a tunnel. This led me nowhere. There was nothing except water and darkness.

At length, a voice, different from the earlier one, said that I needed to evoke AONT in the dark of night, when my mind and the psychic space were quieter. Upon asking for a message, I heard that reality arose from pure potential in an on/off fashion. There is a phase of activity, where there is existence, and a phase of nothingness, where there is silence.⁴ I was reminded of a light bulb flashing on and off so quickly that it gives the illusion of continuous illumination. A face on the stream of water came from off in the distance and told me to try again later.

So, here is yet another duality the Spirit angels have introduced me to. To really understand human reality, one must understand the intermingling of being and nonbeing. In a psychic physics context, the flow of time moves through states of existence in a universe of order and physicality to states of nothingness as pure potential. Total oblivion awaits everything between one tick of the clock and the next. Underlying the web of conscious reality lay an infinity of a pregnant naught.

In order to understand the nature of AONT, I must be able to include the state of nonbeing, the off phase of consciousness, in my sense of self. So many of my magical and mystical operations are focused on exciting my consciousness in some way, using its functions at ever greater levels of intensity. The Water of Spirit angel is of the nature of silence. Active mind cannot experience pure silence, true Water. I must learn to be sensitive to the periods of silence inherent in existence. Action is useless for this as all action is merely noise. I need to evoke AONT in silence and be silent, whatever that entails. I'll try this in an informal ceremony later tonight with just the Tablet of Union and a candle as equipment.

I feel unsettled now. Even during the closing and dismantling of the temple, I had trouble concentrating. It feels like my inner center has dissolved and I've lost my psychic footing. It seems my illusion of the continuity of reality has been shattered. A more whole consciousness is resulting, one I'm not yet fully used to. Indeed, transformation is the name of the game of magick.

Later that night:

I've undergone a transformation as a result of today's evocation but the nature of this change has not yet been revealed to me. Such things usually become clear only over time. I may not have directly reached AONT but some result has certainly been achieved. The Work is no failure.

It's interesting that I had this kind of trouble during my evocations of the Water Seniors and King. There's something about this element, this level of psychic operation, that remains beyond me. My mind is still too concrete and chaotic to achieve true silence, one of the four powers of the Sphinx. Clearly, the Tablet of Union angels operate at a level comparable to the elemental Kings.

Later still:

I've evoked AONT again with a simplified ceremony. I just set up the Tablet of Union in the east with a candle, performed the LBRP and intoned the second Enochian call, and then conjured the Water of Spirit angel. A sense of imminent potential, ready to burst forth into actualization, came into my mind but all was dark and absolutely silent. I quieted my mind as much as possible and communed with this state of imminence, verging on becoming but not quite yet. Visions of black and white color began to splash before my mind's eye. Eventually, a pillar-like black and white conduit of flowing force appeared in the mind space in front of me. I could feel intelligence and intent in the being of the darkness taking shape in reality through the action of the tubule but only pure stillness could properly express such holistic ideas. It felt like any moment of this flowering understanding would require thousands of words to effectively express. I didn't receive any other kind of signals. After communing for as long as possible in my hot apartment, I banished and closed my ceremony. Now, I feel calm and well adjusted to the energies running through my psyche and aura.

It seems to me that Water of Spirit communicates directly with the subconscious, both being of silent natures. Perhaps in time to come, positive ideas will arise from the silent meaning. At this point, there is no way to know for sure.

Monday, September 25, 2000

It feels like new spaces have opened up deep within my psyche, causing my personal center to shift. I am but a column of energy, one of many in the overall being of which I am but a projection, focused on a dark, hidden potential. I, the synergy of all this potential, project my Will onto this potential to actualize and integrate its currents of possibility to produce spacetime images before my psychic perception. This is the operation of imagination. Yet, my creation is not continuous but consists of quickly oscillating on/off states that yield the illusion of coherent activity. This is the operation of the mind.

Yoga practices suppress this activity, promoting a continuous off state and so allowing the source of consciousness, the imminent potential, to be experienced. A positive supercharging of mental activity has the same result, fusing all phases of conscious operation. Now, the imminent potential itself seems to have more presence, more intent, than ever before. A greater being than I is coming closer to awakening.

PAAM – Fire of Spirit
 Sunday, October 15, 2000

I've evoked PAAM, Fire of Spirit Angel of the Tablet of Union, to excellent effect. Even during the Opening by Watchtower segment of the temple preparation, I achieved superconscious sky visions reflecting the nature of each element of the tablet.

At first, PAAM appeared before my mind's eye as a drawing in white lines on the pitch black background I encountered during evocation of the Water of Spirit angel. A greatly expanded image of my physical body rose up through the floor of the temple, seen in my imagination, like a higher dimensional object floating through a lower dimensional plane. After this self image passed through my physical surroundings and disappeared, the angel spoke to me. He said he was that which alights and flies away, he who is here and far off. He is the light in the darkness and the beyond in the light.⁵

I experienced a tremendous Kundalini rise of black fire reaching all the way to my head and beyond. A rise up my front also occurred but was stopped at my neck due to blockage of my aura at that point. I felt the tingling and tightening of muscles that typify an auric short circuit. PAAM told me that I needed to wait until my flame was lit and my consciousness reached to the transcendence before my aura could achieve complete efficiency in conducting Kundalini. I believe this means that my sense of self identification is still too focused on my personal experience to be able to accept the purely impersonal energies represented by the Tablet of Union angels. Only by surrendering my ego to the higher dimensional reality of superconsciousness can I fulfill the highest initiations the Enochian angels have bestowed on me.

Now, my mind and body remain filled with the Fire so bright it appears as dirty black darkness. I can channel this energy only to a point. My aura still has not achieved complete integration of its circuits. More time is needed to fulfill this natural process. In the meantime, I will complete this set of Enochian operations with the evocation of EHNB, the Spirit of Spirit angel, the thirty-third and last being of this long magical track.

Later that night:

Usually, eating a heavy meal grounds me after an intense magical ritual. This even worked for my Fire tablet evocations. It didn't work tonight. I came out of the restaurant feeling full and inwardly on fire. The effect has eased up at this point but my general level of vitality is significantly increased from the norm.

I love it! I've had trouble in the past with this kind of auric supercharge but this time I'm taking it in stride. It feels great, smooth. I feel alive, not cooked. This is what magical adventure is really all about, testing personal limits and feeling completely new sensations. Oh yes, this is new. I'm ready for more.

It occurs to me that the colors of Spirit are black and white. All of my Tablet of Union visions have been black, white, or both. Now, the black is in great motion, like a fiery, dark earth. I haven't been able to achieve the white yet. The contrast should prove interesting.

Monday, October 16, 2000

The Tablet of Union angels yield an intensity of psychic energy on par with that of the elemental Kings but the feeling is qualitatively slightly different. It's more refined, smoother. This energy really is the most spiritual expression of the element.

My Kundalini flow is increasing under the influence of the new channels of auric energy I'm tapping into with my evocations. The stream of lightning up the spine has become a thick column of light. A new stream now flows up the center of my body, more in tune with the chakras at the front of my body. Resistance at the neck still exists for this forward flow. I'm confident that in time my aura will polarize and the flow will clarify into a united torrent through my body and beyond to the other dimensions of reality.

Tuesday, October 17, 2000

I felt the dark, blissful silence of Water of Spirit in a peak experience had during meditation earlier tonight. As my psyche expanded, outside and inside my body, I pondered how to release my focus on self and transcend to the beyond of my psychic projection. In focusing on self and other as one, One, I attained that state of fusion and then, Silence, that deafening roar of totality. Even now after the peak experience is passed, I can recall this state clearly.

EHNB – Spirit of Spirit
Sunday, November 5, 2000

I have evoked EHNB, Spirit of Spirit angel of the Tablet of Union, thirty-third and last evocation in this elemental series, the pinnacle of the Enochian Watchtower system. The vision was more essence than form, a ubiquitous white light filling my being with ecstasy from every point in the space of my magical workplace. A booming voice told me to be receptive to the essence of all the elements. My spine tingled under the intensity of the Kundalini field extending from the base of my spine to the base of my skull.

A transdimensional space opened up before my mind's eye which was filled with cubes in every dimension and between them. Each cube contained an elemental, either a flame, a willowy light, a current of water, or an orange space. These were elementals of Fire, Air, Water, and Earth, respectively.

I understood then that Spirit is the pure essence of the mind, the potential for personal experience. Its manifestations are the four elements which are formed out of its three phases or modifications: dimensional unfoldment as space and matter, the flow of energy and change through that arena of realization as time, and the focus of thought on specific items of matter and energy in space and time. These are the three alchemical elements of Mercury, Sulfur, and Salt, respectively. The four and the three are produced by the interaction of mind with the universe it projects and which creates it. A unique, relative perspective develops from the continuing evolution of this cocreative process.

The booming voice proclaimed me for having completed the system as King of the elementals and bade me command them as my Will inspired. I addressed the elemental essences arrayed before me and pronounced us all as devoted to the transcendent Will that brings about all states of being and nonbeing and is the core of my True Will. The influence from the ubiquitous white essence became even more intense after my decree, causing my entire body to tingle and shiver. I inwardly gazed at the elementals I'd be conjuring upon calling the angels of the Kerubic and servient squares of the four Watchtowers. At this, the booming voice began to conjure me, the conjurer, just like I conjure the angels; the same words were used. I found myself drawn more deeply into the vision space, becoming even more imbued with the white essence.

Suddenly, an angelic form appeared before my mind's eye, a delicate, effeminate male dressed in blue and gold, with blonde hair and blue eyes. He had no wings but wore golden slipper-like shoes with curled-up toe. EHNB told me to abide at rest in this nexus of all elements, all qualities, the balance point from which all energies emanate. Here was the state of encompassing dimensionality, energy flow, and focus of thought. This is the mystery of the center of the tripleteau and the upright point of the pentagram. I could feel the potential of all qualities present in this state of being, ready to emanate into actuality at the behest of Will.

Then, the angel said, "In the name of Ralpern, I constitute you ruler of the elements." I spent some time meditating in this state, the sense of power flow through my aura ever increasing. Finally, the intensity reached a peak and the angel told me to return to the world. I closed the temple in due form and then went to dinner, very hungry.

There was no sense of residual energy after the closing, as there usually is with such a powerful conjuration. The energy was pure and clean and banished completely. I now feel very good and peaceful.⁶

Later that night

It occurs to me that the state of the secret spirit center applies to Tiphareth on the Tree of Life as well as the top point of the pentagram and the center of the tripleteau. Sephirah six is the center of the Tree and from that focus of being all potential and all manifestation emanate. It causes its cause and is an effect of its effect, pure cocreative paradox.

CHAPTER VIII

VISIONS OF THE GREAT NORTHERN WATCHTOWER OF EARTH SECOND ROUND

Explanatory Note:

A short time after completing my whirlwind tour of the Enochian elemental tablet angels, I suffered what can only be described as a short circuit of my aura and nervous system. The occasional bouts of anxiety I've had since childhood suddenly became much worse, especially at night. Over the next several months, insomnia became a real problem. Also, I suffered from muscle spasms, particularly around the eyes. All of these symptoms derived from an overplus of subconscious psychic energy pouring into my personal awareness and through to my peripheral nervous system. Psychologists would call this an uncontrolled rise of unconscious contents. It became clear to me that the magical circuit I'd just completed was too much for me to handle. I pushed through the Enochian magical system, heedless of the warnings given me by those angels/projections which I charged to instruct and initiate me. I'd come too far, too fast.

It was my initial intension to repeat some of the Water, Fire, and Spirit angel evocations which had given me trouble the first time around and then move on to some self initiatory ceremonies. However, after my symptoms worsened, I knew this course of action was impossible. A prolonged break from any magick was needed to properly integrate the overplus of new energies flooding into my personal being. My state of mental and physical health would indicate how to proceed after that.

Eventually, my nerve shock symptoms subsided to normal and I felt ready to return to magical operation. The best course of action at this point was clearly to repeat the entire round from the beginning. To return to evocation of such powerful entities/thought forms as the Water, Fire, and Spirit angels without the gradual buildup provided by the more personal elements of consciousness would only lead me back to more auric and nervous overload. Repeating what I'd already mastered would serve to reinforce the more stable aspects of my psyche and so better enable me to withstand the tidal wave of more intense, impersonal forces. This round, however, I would strictly adhere to every warning given me and call only one angel at a time. Every aspect of the Enochian reality had to be fully understood before moving on, no matter how many times a particular angel needed to be called to be mastered. Lust of result, finishing the Watchtower course, would have to be put aside. As my subsequent results show, this was a wise policy to follow.

Looking back on my ordeals, I regret none of it and am even grateful for the extreme tests of Will and perseverance afforded by the backlash of too much magick. One of the greatest values of the magical path is the testing of personal mettle. Smashing into them head on may reveal personal limitations. The system of magical contacts pioneered by John Dee and Edward Kelly over four centuries ago remains the most powerful course of occult practice in the western world. Only the intrepid and devoted practitioner can succeed on this journey to the farthest reaches of the mind and soul. Here is what happened next.

ACZINOR – Jupiter Senior of Earth

ICZHIHAL – King of Earth

Sunday, January 21, 2001

I've decided to collect the results of my Enochian evocations for this round in a journal separate from my main magical record in order to facilitate perusal of past ceremonial results. It's difficult to search through months and years of copious diary just to find the records of particular events and operations. Everything will be ready to hand this time around.

It's been a long time since I last performed a formal temple working. I made several dumb mistakes, such as using the banishing forms of the spirit pentagrams during the Opening of the Temple by Watchtower and forgetting some of the customary speeches. I also forgot a word in the elemental call. Nonetheless, my result was successful and clear in meaning. Form is less important than effectiveness of contact and efficient usage of the essential powers of the psyche.

I first evoked ACZINOR, Jupiter Senior of Earth. As little vision was revealed this time as in my previous Earth Senior evocations. The angel appeared to my inner sense only, as a white outline against a black background. He told me that I'd fulfilled this stage of work and that I was ready to take the next step. He actually seemed annoyed that I'd gone back to Earth in the first place. I banished him in due form.

Delighted at my progress, I decided to call ICZHIHAL, the Earth King and ultimate angel of the Northern Watchtower, to confirm my fulfillment of his element. He appeared in my mind and in my aura in vastness and majesty. The very solidity of the floor of my apartment seemed to ripple with the awesome force of him. He took shape in my imagination and told me that my previous work with the Earth tablet was enough to fulfill what I could accomplish here and that I was ready to move on to the Air tablet. He went on to say that Earth is the foundation of all action, the unchanging basis that supports all changes in form and motion. It is stability in the midst of change.

My plan for next time is to evoke the Jupiter Senior of Air in order to see if I need to spend more time with that element. The Air King will be next if all is achieved there, like with Earth. Water will be next after that and if all goes well, I'll return to the powers of Fire in no time. If this round turns out to be very quick, I'll be ready to dare performance of an Enochian style "Liber Samekh" working. This will fully prepare me for work with the Kerubic and servient angels of the Watchtowers.

CHAPTER IX

VISIONS OF THE GREAT EASTERN WATCHTOWER OF AIR SECOND ROUND

AAOZAIF – Jupiter Senior of Air
Sunday, February 4, 2001

I've evoked AAOZAIF, Jupiter Senior of Air, to good effect. He appeared before me as a general presence with a yellow tinge and then projected into my mind as a bearded man in a white robe. The scene was pure whiteness with golden spangles. He told me that Air was not about the motions of objects through space or thought through the mind but rather the action of nonlocality in coherent reality.¹ The pattern of chaotic induction that leads to emergent order involves a radical expansion of energy when the underlying potential builds up to a bursting point, manifesting in actuality all at once.² The movements of objects follow these information patterns.

AAOZAIF put his hands over my eyes in vision and showed me a deep space scene wherein I could feel the quantum buildup of complex information patterns and their eruption in physical space and time, evolving emergent order. This is Air. I observed the process several times under the angel's guidance.

I asked the angel if I should evoke the Air King next and then move on to Water or evoke the other Air Seniors first. AAOZAIF said that it was my choice. I'd already achieved great understanding of Air at the angelic level but I could refine my experience if I so chose. With that, I gave the angel license to depart and then closed the magical workplace. My decision is to evoke the other Air Seniors, one at a time, before the great King. This element feels so good and natural to me. There is much more I can learn. No need to rush.

HTMORDA – Luna Senior of Air
Sunday, February 11, 2001

I've evoked HTMORDA, Luna Senior of Air, in due form. The same full moonlike face with the grin all across appeared before me. She immediately began to kiss and caress me in a highly sexual way. I still feel aroused by the experience. The angel told me to realize sexual energy as a projection of the Phallus, source pattern of all creation and creativity. I was also to call her name for spirit sex as outlined in various books on sexual magick. There will be time for this later on. Indeed, the function of sex is the primary example of the pattern of creative ebb and flow, a building up of tension within the nervous system until a radical explosion of ejaculation occurs in a fountain like pattern, and then a relaxation back to normal.³ There is a mystery here beyond the obvious physiological energy patterns, likely relating to the general process of creation.

My Kundalini rose up my spine under the influence of the angel's passion. It grew in visualization until it turned into a great white penis flowing out of my back and head. HTMORDA encompassed my entire body with her giant mouth in order to give head to this member of Fire. She soon withdrew from this and told me to close the temple. More would be revealed during the upcoming sexual tryst with her. I gave her license to depart and closed the temple in due form.

Later...

I lay down in my bed in the nude and called HTMORDA with my mind's voice. She appeared to me and hovered over my body. The white Kundalini/phallus vision returned and she again gave pleasure to it as before. Pressure began to build throughout my nervous system, causing a specific flow of energy to rise from my Svadisthana (Mars) chakra to my Anahatta (Sun) chakra, which then charged outward from my body like a gushing fountain. Other flows of energy took shape in and around my aura with amazing complexity. Eventually, I brought myself to ejaculation under the angel's influence. The phallus image suddenly appeared to mind's eye like a shining sun. It multiplied itself until my entire vision space was filled with solar phalluses, as if the entire universe rose in response to my personal orgasm. Suddenly, the whole scene changed to small children playing in a playground. No further changes occurred after this and my aura cooled down to normal. I banished the angel and exited the vision.

Sex is a particular example of a projective process that works nonlocally to spawn offspring as a result of a cosmic response mechanism. The universe as a single whole comes to participate in a localized system and so spreads its patterns throughout existence all at once. It is a quantum leap of state on a cosmic scale. This type of nonlocal action is the magical principle of sympathy. The whole universe as one living mind is sensitive to certain archetypal patterns and propagates them throughout its vast expanse of space and time. The scale of the ultra small, the human, median scale, and the cosmic scale all come to share the same pattern set, a condition which mathematicians call self similarity. This is the hallmark of a fractal, a fractionally dimensional construct, created on a computer by plotting points based on the iteration of a simple seed equation very many times over. Mathematicians call this process self recursion. The development of consciousness, as well as all other patterns of growth, organic and inorganic, may be modeled this way. All is One in all. Chains of being carry natural signatures everywhere when the planes come into alignment. Universal sympathy is the source of procreation.

AHAOZPI – Venus Senior of Air
Sunday, February 18, 2001

I've evoked AHAOZPI, Venus Senior of Air, effectively. She stepped right out of the Air tablet upon being called and bade me open my mind to her as I entered into trance. I immediately got the sense that spirit sex was inappropriate here. Venus represents a more transcendent aspect of the feminine principle than does Luna and so attitudes of reverence and respect were called for. Also, a deliberate act of Will was required to allow the angel to enter my mind to engender a vision because of my innate prejudice toward the principle of the virgin. This narrow mindedness had developed over a lifetime because she had been given connotations of helplessness and ignorance by the patristic society in which I was raised. I'm happy to report that this prejudice has been dissolved.

AHAOZPI appeared to my mind's eye as the same gorgeous blonde as seen from previous visions of this angel. She showed me a doorway and said that this led to the Palace of the Queen of Air. In order to gain entrance, I had to answer three questions. The first was who are you, to which I said that I am a dimensional unfoldment seeking fullest possible expansion to gain fullest possible understanding and knowledge. The second was why have you come, to which I declared that I was seeking truth to understand my own nature and achieve the greatest possible becoming. The third was what do I hope to gain from the Queen, to which I replied that I was seeking her knowledge and blessing.

The thick, golden double doors opened to reveal a long hall with tables lining the walls on either side. Sitting at the tables were throngs of angels dressed in gossamer white robes, talking together in a festive atmosphere. A long red carpet led to a great golden throne on which an enormous brazier was burning, emitting thick, black billows of smoke. Many more angels surrounded the throne in attitudes of worship and devotion. The Venus Senior of Air walked with me to this throne.

A grand, regal, matronly voice came from the brazier, asking me what I hoped to gain from an audience with the Queen of Air. I declared a desire to learn her mystery. She told me that none could reach the King of Air except through her. I'd have to be prepared in order to pass through.

Several angels stripped me of my magick robe, poured three cups of water over me, and dressed me in the same type of garment all the angels were wearing. Then, the Queen stepped forth from the smoke of the brazier, a towering figure who picked me up in her titan hand. I couldn't see much of her except the myriad folds of her long motley colored dress. She set me in her enormous crown in a jewel setting surrounded by purple stones in other settings. I gazed out from my place, far above the floor of the palace. Angels came to me and laid me flat on a table there in the jewel setting. They called up fire from the surrounding air which burned me to nothing. I felt no pain but found myself carried by the smoke from the fire all around the palace as it diffused through the air.

The message in all this was that the focus of mind is one with its transcendent source and that I needed to realize the ever present reality of consciousness. Then, the palace was swallowed up by thick, white mist and I found myself in a limitless space, still in a diffused state. The King of Air appeared, truly gigantic like his mate. I hovered near his face as he declared that I would soon evoke him directly and he would come to me then, as now.

AHAOZPI came to me then and I coalesced back to my focused form, magick robe and all. She guided me back to my body and told me to call her again. I left the vision, banished the angel, and closed in due form.

The mystery of the Virgin is one of purity.⁴ Will overcoming animal desire is the way to enter that state of mind needed to understand this mystery. Such action hurts with a mindset developed in a sexually obsessive, yet repressive society but certain mysteries call for the state of purity. Only the pure in mind and body can contact the Queen of Air. She expresses the fullness of my personal subconscious, impossible for a synergistic focus of ego to grasp fully but which has its place among many other life currents therein. The source and wholeness of all personal being is the Truth that fully comprehends incarnated consciousness. A state of purity is needed to connect with this transcendent principle, the metalevel of transcendent personal consciousness. I am humbled yet elevated and blessed by contact with this totality of my being.

Now, I feel slightly buzzed from my Air contacts, with a sense of the diffused perspective gained, after being sacrificed in the crown of the Queen. It seems to me that I should call AHAOZPI for spirit sex like I did with HTMORDA, Luna Senior of Air. Certain mysteries cannot be apprehended by direct observation and contemplation but only in silence so that the fullness of being may act unhindered. I must cultivate this type of operation of greater conscious action.
Monday, February 19, 2001

It occurred to me that I confine myself to the use of the angelic calls and tablets only in the context of a formal open temple, whereas Dee and Kelly simply sat at a table furnished with various talismans and conjured the angels. No record of any organized ceremonial has ever been found, to my knowledge. Even the old grimoires are sketchy regarding ceremonial operation, although perhaps, they were meant only for people taught in particular schools of magick who would know the details of ritual omitted in the published material.

So, to experiment, I stared off in a random direction, pronounced the Air call, and summoned AHAOZPI as she requested yesterday. I lay on my bed naked and received her vision and contact with no more formality than what Dee and Kelly did centuries ago.

The vision began with the beautiful angel lying on top of me but there was no initial sexual stimulation by the palpable pressure caused by this psychic projection. I achieved an inner vision of being held by the Senior as an infant held by its mother. My penis began to throb with excitation after awhile but then my neck tightened up with muscle spasms.⁵ She began to kiss me while I did what I could to relax the muscular tension and surrender to her.

Gradually, a dark current ran all through my body from my feet to the top of my head. It completely absorbed and encompassed me and split into two halves, between which emerged a shaft of white light. The Mother is all and I am but a ray of light in her void. I brought myself to orgasm under the loving and encompassing influence of this dark Mother and then left the vision without banishing of any kind. The angel projection was a convenient device to open my awareness to the presence of the Mother archetype within me, the vast unconscious potential from which I, the ego, was born. This needn't be confused with the mother that gave me physical birth. I love them both.

Later...

My neck tension has continued since today's impromptu AHAOZPI evocation. I ritually gave the angel license to depart and then performed a Lesser Banishing Pentagram Ritual. This helped somewhat but not completely. Yes, formal temple ceremonial definitely helps handle the intense energies of magical evocation. Perhaps, I need a break from this Work for a while.⁶

AHAOZPI – Venus Senior of Air
 Sunday, April 1, 2001

Having fully recovered from my ill conceived sex magick experiment, I've again evoked AHAOZPI, Venus Senior of Air, with great effect. At the beginning of my performance of the temple opening, long before any angelic conjuration, I felt an enormous sense of power which made me giddy, a sure sign of Air influence. Here is another example of the effect of a ceremony reaching into its own past, before it is even performed. A vast hyperdimensional head of a distinguished old, bearded man moved through the temple, seen with my inner sense of the physical world around me. It was in constant motion, yet remained absolutely still, truly a projection from higher dimensions through the three dimensional space of my magical workplace, or at least my mental picture of it. This awesome impression persisted throughout the opening ceremony but faded away upon the final declaration of temple readiness. It seemed strange to me that such a masculine presence should have manifested so early in an evocation of a decidedly feminine spirit but I forged ahead with the conjuration of AHAOZPI.

She appeared readily to my inner sight, looking very much like the Luna Senior of Air, with round head and huge mouth.⁷ She said that I wasn't ready for the next step in my initiation and that I should return immediately. I told her of my difficulties regarding certain traumatic childhood experiences that continued to haunt me and asked for her help and advice on how to heal these emotional complexes.

Suddenly, a male voice from above said in a deep, echoing voice that he would help me. He told AHAOZPI to lead me to the Gate of Light and there I would learn the answers to my personal problems. Only the great King of Air could command an angel this way. The Senior seemed apprehensive but obeyed the authoritative voice. After walking a short way through the vision space, we came to a golden double gate, behind which was a set of eight stairs leading up to a vast blue sky. The disembodied voice told me to pass through the gate and climb the stairs if I wanted to learn the answers to my personal problems. I immediately went to the top of the stairs and looked out at the sky to see a vast hyperdimensional image of my own head. The King's voice said that I was not yet ready to receive a complete vision of him but that my answers lay ahead of me.

I was then told that I had to understand myself completely as the focus of a greater consciousness. I needed to achieve the perspective of superconsciousness and effectively impose my Will on those aspects of my psyche I wanted to change. To Will on the superconscious level is to Will with wholeness, to reach into the system from without and so have control over any part thereof. This metalevel of operation is what John Lilly referred to as the metaprogrammer.

I translated myself from my individual perspective, standing at the top of the stairs, to the hyperdimensional self image looking at the stairs and myself.⁸ The space surrounding the stairs was black. After awhile, the Air King told me to return and so I did. I closed and banished in due form.⁹

I'm very intrigued to have had the Air King intercede on my behalf. AHAOZPI couldn't give me guidance but her ruler did. My superconscious powers are working from outside my personal psyche to bestow greater health on me. My magick has become versatile enough to yield the type of projection needed to achieve my purpose, even if the particular evocation is off the mark. Ultimately, all the spirits are one, my own projections.¹⁰

The eight stairs represent Hod, the first step to superconsciousness, the level beyond the personal. The Air King told me that I'd never be able to pass on to Water without first achieving the metaprogramming level since that element is pure superconsciousness, completely impersonal.

I believe the hyperdimensional image of the old man that appeared to my mind's eye at the beginning of today's ceremony was a shadow of the Air King, a foreshadow of the vision to come. His projection into the past was sustainable to me, although direct contact was not. The transtime nature of magically enhanced psychic energy projection could be harnessed for the development of ESP abilities such as prescience and clairvoyance.

AHAOZPI – Venus Senior of Air
 Sunday, April 15, 2001

I have evoked AHAOZPI, Venus Senior of Air, for the third and last time on this round, having completed my Air

Queen initiation. At the start, the angel appeared before me and kissed me warmly. She told me that I was ready to complete my initiation and led me into vision.

I was once again seated as a jewel in the crown of the Air Queen, just where I left off. A booming female voice said that I was ready to see her, the Air Queen. She introduced herself as MARDALA (seven letters like all the other Senior names). She was hyperdimensionally, interdimensionally vast, with only the top half of her projected into the palace. She had long, curly, black hair, big lips and teeth, and was regal and matronly. It was as if the entirety of reality focused itself to form her body in the palace.

She then lifted me up with her titan hands beyond the palace, beyond normal space, to set me in a chariot with two great wheels. Only the inherent force of the cosmos drove this great seat as it transcended into the infinite starry space of holistic existence. MARDALA took me to a place among the stars, one star in the company of stars, all the while intoning litanies to Nuit based on passages out of chapter one of “Liber Legis.” I took my fill of love under the stars, a true child of Nuit.

Inspiration came to me to realize that love is the essential mystery of MARDALA, the ultimate truth of being and projection. All phenomena are understood to be expressions of universal love from the transcendent perspective. A great feeling of love and joy filled my whole being as starlight filled me all the way through, causing me to shine as a star.

I rose above my vision body as a glowing point of pure light, radiating to all points of space and united with them. I achieved a state of pure paradox in, among, and in between all dimensional states, yet transcendent to all conditions, truly as Hadit. I am the Father, eternal consort to Nuit in all her forms and expressions.

The ecstasy was indescribably sweet but I noticed that its scope was limited to the subtler levels of my psyche. Seeking integration with all states of my coherent personal consciousness, I reunited with my vision body and shed my serpentine light to all the mansions and hollows of my psyche and aura, even to the quietest motivation. My entire material being was infused with light, love, ecstasy, and paradox, in every fiber and all at once. The parts and the whole became one.

This intensity quickly built to an overwhelming crescendo and I experienced a moment of auric supercharge that sent astral fire to every nerve ending in my physical body, so startling that it almost threw me out of my trance. I resisted the energy and pulled back from the ecstasy. It was just too much to handle. The effect was gone in an instant but the awesome memory of it lingers still. Only repeated experiences of such overwhelm can enable me to withstand this kind of intensity for long. Channeling such power as magical projection will surely enhance my abilities.

Hadit is all states, all conditions, and makes connections among them in any and every combination possible. He is the projector (and projection) of Nuit, spacetime focusing possibilities out of itself from higher to lower dimensional states. These superpose to form all energy and the matter derived therefrom. Thus is universal consciousness.

At one point in my ecstasy, the voice of the great King of Air came to me and proclaimed that I'd fulfilled the initiation of love and that I was ready to move on with my evocations. I would explore light, even though some of its aspects would cause me distress. All must be persevered through because every aspect was necessary to the whole. All motivation must be experienced from the standpoint of universal love such as had been given to me in vision. Only this perspective enables understanding and unity, the ultimate superconsciousness.

HABIORO – Mars Senior of Air
Sunday, April 22, 2001

I've evoked HABIORO, Mars Senior of Air. He came out of the tablet and pushed his face into mine to commune with my psyche. He said that I was ready for the next initiation and that I should go to the skies now. The infinite sky space of previous visions opened before my mind's eye so I went into it.

The angel assumed vast, interdimensional, pandimensional proportions in my vision and told me to take my place here as the emanator and source of being. I shifted my state and became the Senior, a great field of being whose focuses of consciousness were everywhere within, unlimited potentialities of emergence of individualized perspectives. HABIORO's disembodied voice said that I needed to take my place as a god to assert control over the forces of nature. Only a god, who encompassed all the elements and so stood outside them, could command them effectively. Then, he told me to call forth the lightning and I did so. The whole sky space was shot through with mighty bolts of white lightning, blindingly brilliant. They became steady streams of forking energy, columns of pure power.

I communed with this energy and asserted my Will as a god of being, a primary principle of creation.¹¹ After a short time, HABIORO appeared before me in the sky and led me into a hallway that I was inspired to create as a psychic projection (a projection within a projection). We came to an altar on which was a great golden chalice. He told me to drink from the cup and undergo initiation. I drank of the black fluid and my projected vision body was swallowed up in darkness. It instantly dissolved, freeing my consciousness to attain the field perspective once more in the infinite sky.¹² Then, the angel told me that it was time for him to leave so I gave him license to depart. I returned to my physical senses and closed the temple in due form.

I here note that a number of fantasy movie themes appeared in today's vision. Death by drinking poison from a golden chalice and calling the lightning were events I've recently seen in films depicting magical stories. The former dealt with the Holy Grail and the latter depicted a powerful wizard at the point where he could have been corrupted by temptation. These issues are compelling for a magician who is told to assert his innate godhead. Delusion and egotism are pitfalls for a wizard who loses the understanding that everything that lives, is a god in truth. To be a god is simply to channel the wholeness of being. This is the challenge I've been given in this vision, to rule completely over the elements of my consciousness while living in a world full of others like myself.

AAOZAIF – Jupiter Senior of Air¹³

Monday, May 14, 2001

I've evoked AAOZAIF, Jupiter Senior of Air, to fantastic effect. He delivered by far the most intense magical charge of any Air angel to date, including the Air King and Queen. The vision did not deal with the usual series of psychological issues but rather began a new phase of development completely transcendent to anything to do with my personality or past experience. I've been initiated into a whole new way to exist.

AAOZAIF stepped out of the Eastern Quadrangle as I meditated after his conjuration. Instead of entering my mind or talking to me from the other set of dimensions contiguous with the familiar space and time, he took me by the astral hand and led me to a far away dark space. I found myself in a dual state, partly inside my body and part outside it. Before us was a certain symbol of utmost secret nature floating several feet above the floor. The angel said that here was the mystery of the celestial nature. If I was ready to receive this mystery and join the Order of those who likewise keep it, I must take an oath. I readily agreed and felt an auspicious sense of occasion.

I, Frater W.I.T., swore that I would keep secret the mystery of the secret symbol from everyone who was not worthy to receive it. There was no penalty clause to this oath. The responsibility belonged to those who took it, a rare selection among humanity.

Upon completing the oath, the symbol leaped onto me and imprinted itself deeply into my aura, from my head to my perineum, from my Sahasrara to my Muladhara. The rush of energy and sense of presence was so intense that I almost collapsed and lost the vision. This was a supercharge that rivaled the flaming Kundalini experienced with the Fire tablet angels. No doubt, the symbol is a permanent addition to my aura.

AAOZAIF delivered a lecture on the nature of the celestial level of existence. It was beyond the elemental world in every way. The mode of thought was different, not being based on manipulation of the elements of personality and personal experience. A truly higher state of being was called on to express consciousness. Magical technique had to be different because of this. The basis was no longer the simplicity of four but rather the complexity of seven. A whole new magical reality had been formulated.

After this, the angel led me to his throne, a basic affair, gold but unadorned. He said that the Mars angel had bidden me to sit on that throne. To do so, I needed to take the transcendent perspective, the true Thelemic perspective. Only then could I rise above the pain of the roiling of the elements. He told me to sit at his right hand so I sat down next to his throne on the floor of the dark space.

Soon after, I took my leave of the angel and gave him license to depart. I performed the temple closing ceremony in a fog, still feeling the charge of the imprinted auric symbol. I went to dinner after this to help ground myself. If I'm now part of another Order, it's not an organized body but rather a shared level of consciousness, a true and invisible Order.

AVTOTAR – Mercury Senior of Air

Sunday, May 27, 2001

I have evoked AVTOTAR, Mercury Senior of Air, in due form. Surprisingly little has happened since the glorious initiation bestowed on me by AAOZAIF, Jupiter Senior of Air, so I thought that a piece of this puzzle of Air initiations was missing, that is, Mercury. Today's vision proved I was wrong about this.

The vision began with the angel appearing to my mind's eye as an enormous interdimensional man with the typical Air moonhead. He held a throne in his hands and set me down on it. He raised me high over his head into a dark space and a great feeling of upward motion shot through me. Upon extending his arms fully over his head, AVTOTAR sent bursts of energy through me but with each jolt, I could feel myself offer resistance to the current. The message was clear that my aura was not yet a fully efficient channeler of cosmic energy.

Then the angel told me that I was not yet ready for this evocation. I had not yet finished assimilating the initiatory symbol given me by the Jupiter Senior of Air. Mercury was not a missing piece of the puzzle presented to me by the Jupiter initiation but rather a new step in the process in its own right. The angel showed me the symbol of most secret nature and said that every part therein had to be fully worked into my being before the process was complete. Furthermore, adjustment had to be made by those aspects of being beyond my mind that dwelt with me. I needed to meditate on the symbol of most secret nature in order to further this process of initiation.

With that, I gave the angel license to depart and closed the temple. However, during those ceremonies, a strange energy began to flow through my mind and aura, hampering my concentration. I've experienced this effect following other evocations where dramatic breakthroughs had occurred.

A small voice inside my mind said, "Ha ha! I fooled you. The initiation took place."

I still feel affected but less than before. Looking back on this experience, I think that I had a reaction to the presence of AVTOTAR. Due to the fact that I wasn't yet ready for his Work, a lying spirit/projection arose from my subconscious to taunt me. Indeed, an aspect of Mercury is the trickster. Such is the ape of Thoth.

At any rate, my time wasn't wasted.¹⁴ I know now that no pieces of the picture are missing and that my proper Work must deal with the symbol of most secret nature. I'll evoke AVTOTAR again when fully integrated with the energies of my initiation and can channel energy more efficiently through my magically enhanced auric system.

AVTOTAR – Mercury Senior of Air
Sunday, August 5, 2001

I've successfully evoked AVTOTAR, Mercury Senior of Air. He stepped out of the eastern quadrangle and entered my mind to reveal a brightly lit idyllic scene of countryside, almost cartoon like in its beauty.

The angel said, "Come and learn the mystery not yet revealed.”¹⁵

We walked up a large hill and at the top I saw the brilliant sun right in front of me, shining yellow and orange.¹⁶ I greatly wondered at this magnificent revelation and was absorbed by the celestial orb come down to earth.

AVTOTAR remained by my side, on the right, and told me to behold my source. The source is the One and every part of all and the All. Every piece of existence is the All-One in a particular function. Here is the source of the Light of which I am the genius, I beyond all I am, the core essence of all phenomena and the tendency to unfold as such.

The glorious light of this daystar filled not only my psyche but also my nervous system and aura, too, from head to toe. The whole vision was taken up by brilliant orange-yellow light but suddenly a darker space opened up before me, like a chamber, to reveal four tablets of orange-yellow stone shaped like steles. They were arrayed in pairs, two on my left, one behind the other, and two on my right, one behind the other. Inscribed on them were letters of an alphabet of which I’m not familiar, definitely not Enochian, but somewhat like the Sanskrit alphabet.¹⁷

AVTOTAR told me to take the tablets and then led me out of the sun over to a clearing in the natural setting. We came upon a table on which was a clear glass bowl full of silvery water. The angel said that here was a mystery of Mercury and that I should meditate on this symbol. I could also return to this place whenever I wanted. Then, AVTOTAR told me it was time to leave so I exited the vision and gave the angel license to depart.

I felt strangely unaffected by the vision after leaving it but during the closing, the tremendous energy I absorbed made itself felt.¹⁸ The orange-yellow energy rose Kundalini-like from my feet to my head, encompassing my whole body and permeating every cell and space therein. Concentration was difficult at times while in this state of supercharge but I managed to close the magical workplace in due form and put away my equipment. I now feel well adjusted to this airy, mercurial force of source, having been well prepared for this ordeal by the Jupiter Senior of Air initiation. I was truly ready for contact with the Mercury Senior of Air.

So, I've reached to the mysteries of the One that is All and in all, the only truly existing entity in its myriads of functions in the universe. Totality exists at every point, every bit of matter and energy, every thought and concept on all planes and scales, and encompasses all as a continuous holomovement.¹⁹ Each projection is truly its own source but acting in a particular function, one ray of a vast star shine. It may appear as an entity in its own right to a terrestrial sensorium but the clear sighted may recognize the One therein. The ultimate reality is the realm of commonality of all concepts and states of being and so patterns from any plane or space may be connected at that level. New realities may be developed from the ground up. Terrestrial/futique fusions of any sort may be developed at the root level.

Monday, August 6, 2001

I forgot a subtle detail about yesterday's vision but was reminded tonight by some haunting psychedelic rock music. This detail of the magical landscape was so subtle and so far in the background, underlying the more obvious images, that I mistook it for interference and so ignored it. Tonight's music stirred my emotions in exactly the same way the subtle darkness and mystery behind all the light did yesterday. It was like how the voluptuous night sky is overwhelmed by the light of day but remains nonetheless. Images such as a storm over green hills and a dark purple sky on a brisk autumn night with a cool wind blowing by, carrying the possibility of a coming rain, come to my mind under this influence. The lesson is that Mercury is a dual natured energy at every level of its expression. It is the essence of duality from the most sublime to the most dense. Suggested here is the mystery of the upward flowing versus the downward flowing Kundalini, the dove and the serpent. AVTOTAR has brought me an expansion of consciousness that stands in clear counterpoint to the four previous, strongly gendered visions.

HIPOTGA – Saturn Senior of Air
Sunday, August 12, 2001

I've evoked HIPOTGA, Saturn Senior of Air, in due form. At first, I saw nothing but a red-violet space. Red-violet is the color of the zodiacal sign Pisces, the last in the series of twelve. Then, the angel appeared with skin the color of indigo, blue-violet, the color of Saturn.²⁰ He had the same moon shaped head as most of the other Air angels. His light cast many indigo shadows against the background red-violet space which at times obscured his face. After a time of silence, the angel's head became the shape of a human's.

HIPOTGA reached his indigo arm straight into my chest to touch my heart. This produced no sensation except a feeling of weight on my chest. Suddenly, my vision body cracked open like an egg. The inside was all indigo. The angel reached into my open frame and pulled out an indigo baby who was very happy and smiling broadly.²¹ The angel carefully set the baby on my head²² and then closed up my vision body but with all the cracks intact.

Then he told me, “Behold the baby of HIPOTGA. Let him be your guide.” He stepped away from me as the baby began climbing up and down my body, to the left and right. He finally settled in my heart chakra, his little feet reaching down to touch my Svadisthana chakra, a little below my navel.²³

I asked the angel if I’d be ready to evoke the Air King when I felt ready. He said I’d be ready and to be guided by the baby. Then, he told me to return from the vision so I gave him license to depart and closed the magical workplace in due form.

I feel that making this psychic baby is the reason for my human incarnation and that it was for him that I must live and preserve my Work and myself. My life’s focus now seems shifted to the baby, a clear symbol for my Dwarf Self, my True Ultimate Self.

The color of Pisces seems to indicate an ending of an era, a cycle of life. Out of the death of my old sense of self, my old psychic reality, a new self is born. This identity relates to many similar symbols in popular media, such as, 2001, A Space Odyssey, as well as the counterpart of Ra Hoor Khuit, the babe in the egg called Hoor Paar Kraat. He is Harpocrates, symbolic of pure innocence and pure protection. Aleister Crowley associated this Thelemic deity with The Fool of the Tarot, Trump 0. The Babe is the source of all and its truth throughout. As Freud said, the child is the father to the man. Here is a foreshadowing of what human evolution has in store in this new aeon. My epiphany is at hand.

BATAIVAH – King of Air

Sunday, September 2, 2001

I've evoked BATAIVAH, great King of the East and Air, to only partial effect. The opening lacked the usual flashes of transcendent vision and the overall sense of power was low. There was no sign of paradoxical transcendent energy reaching back from the future evocation. Upon conjuring the King, I felt him behind and below me, his body reaching downward far below the floor of my apartment. He cupped me in his gigantic hands as I entered vision.

A long corridor stretched out before me, like in some great underground network or mountain retreat.²⁴ The walls were smooth and well hewn from the rock. Torches lined each wall to light the way. I moved myself rapidly through the hallway, the torches appearing as lines of blur on each side of me. After many curves, turns, and straight passages, I came to a huge set of wooden double doors on which was carved no less a symbol than that given me by the Jupiter Senior of Air, impressed on my aura. Here was a chamber of profound initiation.

I knocked on the door six times, as befitting Tiphareth, the state of celestial initiation. A voice on the other side of the door asked, "Who goes there?"

I introduced myself as Frater W.I.T., a seeker of wisdom and initiation.

The doors opened to reveal a vast, dark room. I could only see a few feet ahead. Energies similar to those received in my most intense Order-bestowed initiatory ceremonies charged my aura as hooded figures approached and blindfolded me. Although my mind's eye was covered, I could feel my surroundings slightly. An old, male voice greeted me and led me to an altar on which was a large, thin tome bound in brown leather. This was placed in my hand. I then took an oath to persevere through the ordeal of the initiation and to keep secret the mysteries revealed to me herein.

There followed a lecture from the western officer, who said that the great King of Air could not be fully reached by man but those who were ready could gain a clear glimpse. Consciousness arises from pure darkness and so is incapable of reaching back to its transcendent source by its own action. A guide is needed to draw that little self beyond itself.²⁵

My blindfold was then removed and I could see the eastern officer. He was a very old man, dressed in a white robe and holding a wooden staff. This Hierophant bestowed upon me the Sash of Light, a plain red ribbon draped over my right shoulder. Next was the Medallion of Truth, a silver disk on a silver chain, but I couldn't make out what was engraved thereon. Finally, I was given the Scepter of Light and was led to the east of the initiatory temple.

The old Hierophant told me that he was not the Air King but merely an angel guarding the entrance to his throne. The realization of such a grand nature would have to build slowly, growing like a flower in my heart of hearts. I was to leave the vision and close the magical workplace but without banishing the King I'd conjured. At some future time, I could redo the evocation and see what more I could learn of the King's nature.

All the while, I could feel the King cupping me in his hands while holding me over his head. He held onto my feet during the closing and so was not banished back to pure potential. Towards the end of these ceremonies, he sat me down on top of his head like a crown, just as the indigo baby from the Saturn Senior of Air vision sat on my head. A three level projection system had been set up: the source field, myself as the projecting projection, and the focus of my projection, my source projected as my image.

As the three of us came into vibrational harmony, we merged into the form of a vast hawk of electric blue fire, with a dragon's tail that extended down into the abyss of depth. I'd seen this image before, long ago, in a spontaneous vision that occurred on my way home from work. This was before any of my magical initiations and training, although I'd read a number of books on occultism by this time. Still, this vision of a far away reality seemed to beckon me forward. Now, the far flung vision was right up close and I was a direct part in it. The transdimensional connection only lasted a few seconds but the sweet memory remains with me still. Having experiences like this is the reason for my existence.

I can still feel his presence, a personification of the Kundalini currents which flow through my inner and outer reality, creating my every experience. If the ultimate of Earth is the wholeness in which life takes place, the ultimate of Air is that life actually taking place, constantly emerging from pure potential and cycling back to its higher source dimensions. It is the arena of life and its focus on itself to produce that life, the cause of its own cause and the effect of its own effect.

It seems to me now that my next attempt to evoke BATAIVAH must be done in an Adept style temple, with a white altar cloth and red and white tapers, instead of black and white tapers.²⁶ I used this temple setup long ago to initiate myself to develop new mysteries as my inspiration guided me. It's the kind of thing one does after resigning from a magical order. The first round of my Enochian Watchtower evocations completed the Work I'd left unfinished in my former involvement. This second round is taking me a huge step further into a new reality, introduced to me by the very heart of initiatory magick, initiated by my own effort. This is what Aleister Crowley did after his departure from the Golden Dawn. His is an inspiring example.

BATAIVAH – King of Air
 Sunday, November 11, 2001

I have successfully evoked BATAIVAH, King of the East and Air.²⁷ The way stands open to proceed with the subtler elements as the failure from the first round of Watchtower evocations is now corrected. I've achieved the inner connections missing from my first attempt and now a close relationship with BATAIVAH is established.

As with my previous attempt to commune with the Air King, the vision took the form of an initiation, only this time the title of Hierophant was bestowed on me. I was as a little child as giant, gentle hands purified me by bathing, consecrating me by holding me in a column of smoke from a giant censor, and constituting me as a Hierophant by setting another copy of the symbol of most secret nature in my aura, just as the Jupiter Senior of Air had done. This all took place in a completely dark space; the initiating hands themselves were barely more than an outline.

After being prepared in this way, I was handed to the King of Air and he set me in his heart center as a lamén, just as the Hierophant in Aleister Crowley's Thoth tarot deck has in him. I could feel the force lines of the pentagram around me as the power of the Air King flowed through my every nerve and thought. My nervous system scintillated with ecstatic golden light. Then, I felt my own indigo child projection at my heart center glowing as well. The magical alignment that had occurred in the last vision had been reestablished but without the fiery blue hawk image. We were bathed in and penetrated by the golden brilliance.

BATAIVAH then lifted me to sit on the top of his head as a crown and I did the same with my child. The King of Air proclaimed me as a Hierophant of the new aeon, to rule over my own reality that was my life in the Aeon of Horus.²⁸ All the Air spirits were commanded to obey me. I was told that the sacred sanctuary that I was now able to enter was the great city of the Watchtowers. The word of entry was love, which is its nature. A secret word was given to me to control my way in the sanctuary/city. Study of its numerical and Qabalistic correspondences would help me understand its significance.

The city suddenly surrounded me, a hyperdimensional place far beyond anything I'd ever seen before. The most complex and bewildering drawings of M. C. Escher were simplistic by comparison. Everything was golden yellow. The walls, stairs, and terraces were all self luminous and in continual movement. The dimensionalities were so complex as to appear continually falling into and through each other. Only this movement could properly express the transcendent nature of the space and time of the city. The scene was like a flower with an unlimited number of petals, constantly blossoming and circulating back to an unseen center. Particular buildings and streets defined whole dimensions. Yet, underlying all the frenetic unfoldment was a complete stability, an enduring nature that surpassed the shifting dimensional circulations. All the movement and the root unity thereof were as one simple, perfect harmony. The whole city seemed to sing pure, holistic, complex love.

I called MARDALA, Queen of Air, to witness my invitation to this new level of transcendence and she immediately appeared by my side. She towered over me while radiating a surpassing love that echoed that of the Air city. We stood together and were one with the awe inspiring scene.

I absorbed all I could from this state of being and becoming. My entire nervous system and aura buzzed in sympathy with the awesome vision. Eventually I gave all of the Air spirits license to depart and closed the magical workplace in due form in a state of complete dazzlement. I went to dinner afterwards to ground myself. The food helped a lot. My physical senses returned to normal as well.

So, now I'm a Hierophant of the new aeon, of my own psychic order. Of course, what is significant here are the circumstances of this initiation. My personal magick is now fully established as independent of any manifest order. My initiation is now fulfilled in a way not achieved in any established group of which I've been a member. This pinnacle of spiritual transcendence as well as the path to it is an essential aspect of BATAIVAH's true nature. He is the embodiment of the metalevel of all mind and projection.

Monday, November 12, 2001

The full effect of my Air King initiation is beginning to be felt. The power of my inner and outer visions has increased dramatically. My trances are considerably deeper than before. I understand that power is a dream symbol for complexity of dimension, of psychic relationships used to model the surrounding physical world and the internal worlds of mood and emotion. It is clear to me that the breakthrough contact with the great King of the East has established a new internal dimensionality, a new set of complexities that extend beyond any previous state of consciousness. The self recursive flow of the gestalt of my mentality has expanded to encompass a metalevel of understanding, of meaning, of vision.

Thinking back to the dream symbol of the new mind, the hyperdimensional city of the Watchtowers, I remember sensing a threshold to another mode of consciousness underlying the ecstatic power and golden brightness that surrounded me on more sides than could be counted. It was the boundary between personal and impersonal consciousness, between Air and Water. The ultimate of transcendent personal consciousness merges with impersonal consciousness, the microcosmic wholeness whose synergy is the personal focus of incarnate psyche. I failed to fully grasp this lesson of the Air King during my last round of Watchtower evocations, which is why my first Water angel evocation caused me such a shock. This time, properly prepared, I'll be more ready.

The personal psychic gestalt makes an impression in its source field of impersonal consciousness, the aura. This impression is an emulation of personal psychic patterns but in purely impersonal terms. The similarity of information yields sympathy between the two life fields, enabling communication between them. It is hereby possible to shift personal awareness to the impersonal level through this interface. To the mind's eye, this interconnection appears like the fires of consciousness arising out of pure darkness. This auric impression of personal emulation can be called a verge field, with mind being seen to verge into becoming from pure potential. This creation is two-way, the psyche making its impression in the aura while the aura focuses itself into a mold from which the psyche takes its shape.

The first emergence of personal consciousness out of the darkness of verging, focusing potential can be seen by the mind's eye as spiral energy unfolding from a state of pure wholeness. The spirals are unfolding dimensions drawn directly out of the ocean of undifferentiated being. All the complexities of material and psychic sensation are woven from these curling threads of pure expansion. The self is an image of the Self, which is an image of the universe. BATAIVAH, my baby projection, and myself are as one complex unfoldment of possibility, one coherent reality.

All this has great significance for the practice of magick. Herein is a detailed explanation of how magical influence operates. The mind is mystically supercharged by an attuned aura sending its cosmic impressions, holosignals, through the interface of the verge field. Ceremonial activities manipulate the archetypes by which the mind builds its conceptions of reality and thereby a seed intention is imposed on the transcendental level. This conditioned, magically charged psychic energy is then projected back to the aura through the same inspiring interface between personal and impersonal consciousness. The aura then projects its supercharged, imprinted holosignals in natural, material terms to the cosmos focused upon it. In the holomovement plane of existence, the seed intention is propagated throughout all of space and time, subtly altering the way in which events unfold. The cosmic response is most pronounced in the vicinity and life of the magician but the whole of the universe is affected to some extent. The subtlest of forces is expanded and intensified to macrocosmic proportions.²⁹ Every willed act has its effect on some plane or other. Thus, the purpose of life is to bring order to the universe rather than to bring about more chaos. Magick is the highest order.

Sunday, November 18, 2001

Today, I underwent a remarkable transition of consciousness, of personal identification. This personal transformation echoed far into my deep subconscious and throughout the planes of the impersonal. The perception was a slight touch of an indescribably powerful presence. Simply put, I was inspired to surrender my sense of self identification and self worth to the impersonal beyond, the ocean of wholeness of which I am but a pin drop of synergy. All that I am and all that I do is devoted to and justified by this higher power of my life. No matter what happens to me in my material life, all value is derived by the impersonal contact of destiny. The temporal events of the world, of human society, are merely so many ripples on the surface of an ocean of wholeness and bliss far beyond imagination. Physicality is mere illusion but the Truth is the wholeness of all things.

BATAIVAH – King of Air
 Sunday, December 9, 2001

I've evoked BATAIVAH, King of the East and Air, for the third and last time on this round of Watchtower evocations. It seemed best to make a third contact with this ultimate principle of consciousness after having gone through the radical transformation of several weeks ago. I wanted to experience BATAIVAH from the Hanged Man³⁰ perspective. There was little in the way of a sensation of charge during the opening and the vision began equally placid. I wondered if I'd failed to evoke the great angel, even though his vast hands cupped me like in previous evocations.

BATAIVAH's booming, omnipresent voice told me that I was ready to move on to Water and lifted me up to view the infinite sea, a vast, dark expanse that had appeared during my previous Water angel evocations. This was the Watery equivalent to the limitless sky vision of Air. With a great thrust, he tossed me into the dark sea and I felt its awesome infinity. My entire nervous system polarized in response to this transpersonal field of consciousness, attaining full field consciousness. The King told me to 'reach thou forth,' as if to suggest that I evoke myself. This actually makes sense from the impersonal point of view. In a situation where a transpersonal expression is evoked, who is evoking whom? Being evoked by what I evoke would be true paradox, the telltale sign of magical influence.

I remained in this beatific state for a time, my aura reorienting to the higher intensity of conscious unfoldment and process. Suddenly, the six Water Seniors appeared surrounding me. They were only outlines of white against the black background, shadows of light in the ocean of darkness, but they were as I remembered them from my first round of Watchtower evocations. I was the center, as if I was their King, RAAGIOSL. I was the concentration of impersonal consciousness, the face of the sea.

I communed with the great sea and the Water Seniors until a current of unfoldment energy manifested which returned me to physical consciousness with a hyperdimensional flip.³¹ I closed in due form but my concentration was afflicted by the overwhelming energies absorbed in vision. Performing my Keyword Analysis during the banishing hexagram ritual opened my heart chakra wide as never before. Now, I feel as if my entire being has been rearranged, perspectives and identifications switched. More of me is now invested in archetypal consciousness.

CHAPTER X

VISIONS OF THE GREAT WESTERN WATCHTOWER OF WATER SECOND ROUND

LAOAXRP – Luna Senior of Water
Sunday, December 23, 2001

I have evoked LAOAXRP, Luna Senior of Water, to excellent effect. A truly higher level of reality has been revealed to me. That aspect of consciousness which was missing during my first round of the Watchtowers but has since been discovered came to full clarity during the opening and enabled me to channel the force of angelic Water comfortably. Instead of being overwhelmed, I felt and continue to feel a gentle blessedness, a happy love and peace that yield joy.

LAOAXRP appeared in a vast, dark space with a full moon shaped head very like the Air Seniors. She wore a dark robe and was of vast and transcendent dimensions, just like that greater consciousness revealed by my city of the Watchtowers vision. Now, I have realized myself as the principle that encompasses and interpenetrates my microcosm, the core contradiction that can project itself as any mental image or sensation. The evoked gestalt of angelic transcendence hovering before my mind's eye was just such a holistic extension of my self/other circuiting.

She cupped my self image, my microcosmic identity, my point of view, in her hands and told me to come forth as I'd told her during the conjuration. At this, my self and my holistic superconscious projection linked more intimately and a continuous cocreation across many dimensions was realized. The flow of impression and sense of self was expanded very far beyond the norm.

I looked out into the dark void and it clarified into an infinity of states of being¹ with an infinite number of connections between each and every in an infinite number of combinations. The Senior said that there are infinite series of spacetime events, each path of evolution through time existing in its own domain in which they are realized. Physical manifestation occurs by the interaction of different conscious perspectives with each other and with the unlimited potential of what may unfold from the wholeness of things. Magick, then, is simply a matter of linking to the potential domain wherein the desired effects occur. Projection of the magician's whole self through such possibility streams enables experience. Superconsciousness manipulates these domains, realizing and releasing potentials of experience at will. The self must link to its transcendent source sufficiently to gain the ability to move among the enfolded potentials at will.

Few words brought all this understanding of impersonal consciousness and I could feel my own limitation of reality unfoldment ability in the midst of this grandeur. I am deliberately holding myself back from dissolving into cosmic consciousness in order to live a relatively normal life as a human being here on earth. Only in this way could I learn in concrete terms the operations of existence. The limited human perspective allows for certain realizations about the unfolding universe not possible in any other way.

Upon accepting my limitations as a consciously Willed condition, the dark space burst forth in profound radiance, each series of unfolding possibilities shining like a bolt of lightning. The infinity of detail was illuminated in every aspect. Still, underlying the wonder of this creation and the nobility of my True Will was plain, cold fear. Fear of death and fear of change were holding me back from becoming a more evolved being able to more effectively channel this superconsciousness into physical manifestation.

I projected this nameless, deep seated fear into the plenum of potential before me in the hope that the form it took would give me some clue as to how to banish it permanently. The brilliant vision space turned pitch black and then a distance woman's voice said, "Take your will and fill of love under the stars."

I knew instantly that this was the voice of Nuit, the goddess of infinite space and the infinite stars thereof. A panoply of bright points lightened the darkness before my mind's eye and the starry universe was revealed. Nuit told me that She, the wholeness of All, is the only darkness. All forms of consciousness, even the lowest of spirits, the most animal of psychic urges, are beings of light to a greater or lesser brightness. Every partial existence is light in its way. Certain things appear as darkness or fearsomeness because of the masks projected onto them by partial consciousnesses. There is no real evil, only choice of perception.

Then, I realized that my fear of becoming a truly transcendent being and reaching so far beyond the human norm was a manifestation of light and an expression of my True Will. The time had not yet come for complete success on the Path, coming into my full power. There was still much to learn from the human perspective. Only by choosing to cooperate with my True Will could my fears be overcome.

The brilliance of the revealed plenum of potential returned with its infinite series upon series of multicolored ribbons. I communed with my macrocosmic Self and channeled the presence throughout my mind and body. There was then nothing left to realize in the vision so I released, banished, and closed the workplace in due form.

Macrocosmic awareness is the wholeness of impersonal consciousness, that ultimate source of self and other. The wholeness of Self projects itself throughout its source field to create the gestalt of mind. This is the kind of self recursion that creates ego identification based on the totality of life experience but in a higher dimension. The higher and the lower minds are now open to me.

SONIZNT – Mercury Senior of Water
Monday, December 31, 2001

My first attempt to evoke SONIZNT, Mercury Senior of Water, has failed. This is the worst result I've ever gotten working with the Watchtower system. Absolutely nothing answered my call. I felt nothing unusual during the opening and this situation didn't change after making my conjuration. I didn't make any technical mistakes but that wasn't enough to ensure success.

Upon entering vision I saw a great old style sailing ship carried by a wave of light blue water. The captain hailed me aboard and we went sailing into deep space, a scene relevant to Earth, not Water. He told me to control the course of my being and set course by the light of the sun. A white star appeared before us and the ship sailed towards it.

Then I thought, the sun is a symbol relevant to Air. It became obvious to me that this vision was a product of my own personal imagination and the captain was certainly not SONIZNT. I became inspired to take the higher perspective and expanded my consciousness to encompass the entire scene, a shift to field consciousness. This was the perspective relevant to a Water angel. I felt the ship sailing inside me. Energy washed over me to charge my entire nervous system but then it tapered off. My nervous system felt integrated but the angel never came. Taking on various perspectives and projections and calling to SONIZNT didn't help. Discouraged, I banished and closed. Afterwards, I felt normal, unchanged by the vision.

I must meditate on why my evocation failed. Was it just a matter of failure to generate the requisite intensity of psychic energy or was it because today is the last day of the year or did some force interfere? Perhaps, I just wasn't ready.

Later...

Detailed Tarot and contemplative analysis has shown that the reason I failed to contact the Mercury Senior of Water today is that I failed to generate the necessary conscious force to project it on this higher level of being. The next step is Water but I'm still at the Air stage. All my best magical faculties are hindrances to achieving operation on this higher plane of impersonal consciousness; true Water consciousness. In the Qabalah, this element is attributed to the World of Briah, wherein are pure archetypes beyond any specific image. The Air level is Yetzirah, the plane of the multiplicity of images.² All that I know how to do, to think, to expand, is useless in the face of this dark mystery.

Water in Yetzirah was difficult to deal with during the last round of my Watchtower evocations but now the density of this element has become a wall in Briah. Whatever transformations I need to undergo in order to reach this higher level will not be brought about by reasoned, organized action. I may still have some work to do in Air, although the Air King literally pushed me into Water. If so, the angels can't help me here. My own personality patterns are now forming barriers to further experience.

Thus, it seems my vision of the Luna Senior of Water was actually of an Airy nature. There were a lot of Air symbols in it. No wonder the angel appeared like the Air angels and gave so much information. It was clearly Water from an Air perspective. There may be a clue in those ideas as to how to proceed. In any case, I'll have to repeat the LAOAXRP evocation when I'm better prepared.

Later...

After reading over my records of evocations of the Air King and the Luna Senior of Water, I realize that impersonal consciousness is an aspect of Air, not Water, in Briah. It seems that all my work in the subtler elements during the last round of Watchtower evocations involved different aspects of Air and Yetzirah. I need to understand the impersonal perspective of Air in the higher world before I can access Water consciousness. I can explore the Holy City of Love revealed to me by the Air King. The three aspects of my psychic projection stream, represented in vision as the Air King, the projected indigo baby, and myself, must become more fully integrated. The various magical formulae built into the Thelemic keyword analysis may also provide clues as to how to transcend attachment to the personal identity.

Wednesday, January 2, 2002

It occurred to me that my vision of the Luna Senior of Water was actually a completion of the last Air King vision. The primary theme has been about perspective, the scope of the circuit of consciousness through mind and space. Water in Briah may deal with a reality beyond perspective. The shift indicated by The Hanged Man Tarot card seems to involve transcending individuality in order to dissolve in the beloved. Water is the ultimate solvent.

LAOAXRP – Luna Senior of Water
Sunday, March 24, 2002

I've evoked LAOAXRP, Luna Senior of Water. Wow. WOW! Once again, Water proves to be a fantastic leap ahead from anything that has gone before. A new and higher level of personal unfoldment has been realized. Even during the setup of the magical temple, I could feel an imminence of a marvelous revelation to come. The magical energy that was later generated reached farther back in time than usual to bring about its own creation. During the opening, I achieved a clearer sense of the multidimensionality of the temple being built up by the ritual actions. The physical manifestation of the workplace was directly seen as the lower dimensional projection of the Cosmic Temple in deep space, visualized and connected to just before the opening ceremonies are done. Each glyph and image drawn in the air had a palpable presence in the transcendence as well as in physical space, a transdimensional principle that was near and far at the same time.

Evocation of LAOAXRP revealed the hyperdimensional, transdimensional nature of consciousness more clearly and intensely than ever before. The awesome influx of psychic energy as dimensional unfoldment was like the first time I evoked Water during the last round of Watchtower evocations, only this time I was able to handle it well. All the preparation I'd done over the past three months, the exploration of the formulae expressed and implied by my Thelemic Keyword analysis, utilizing the magical reversal trance implied in the Tarot trump XII, The Hanged Man, and connecting with the collective consciousness of the cells of my body, had effectively brought me to a state of being where I could reach the true nature of Water consciousness.

The image was of an expanding, emerging multifaceted jewel, one of whose focuses was a stable cube. The magical temple was in that cube but I was lifted out of there and into the higher space. I could feel myself expanding with the surrounding unfoldment. The intensity of this transcendent state was constantly increasing but without becoming overwhelming. I called on the Luna Senior of Water to appear and a booming voice said, "Come thou forth!"

Reaching to field consciousness in the ever expanding hyperdimensional geometry, I focused my Will and projected an image of the angel. He resembled me to an extent but wore an indigo robe with white star shaped studs lining the hem and cuffs, a very different design than that of my magical robe. Clearly, this image was a mere convenience for the purposes of conversation. The real angel was the unfolding jewel.

The angelic image spoke of the emergence of reality at every moment. The core source created and was created by the expansion of reality and consciousness. This paradox was an emergent process unfolding from holistic existence, the holomovement, space and time continually projecting out of spacetime as transdimensional flow. The ultimate source reality of enfolded potential can only appear as nothingness to the normal human perspective. Only with transcendent field perspective may the plenum of interconnection potential be understood and perceived as full of streams of brilliance.

I realized that all physical objects at all scales of size unfolded from a relatively few basic pattern potentials, sometimes referred to as archetypes. More than just overarching patterns of consciousness, these pre-forms/unfoldment potentials determine the patterns of everything in existence. No matter how different in appearance objects may be, they are connected through the holomovement by the archetypes. The archetypes are tendencies to verge and emerge as certain basic unfoldment patterns. Repeated millions and billions and trillions of times over, they evolve all manifest reality. Expansion and stability are the two modes of their action. Expanding personal consciousness enough to connect with these impersonal pattern potentials in the holomovement can reveal the interconnections consisting all events in time and space.^{3 4}

Now, I feel exalted in a peculiar way as never before experienced. I have achieved a greater state of complexity of consciousness, personal and impersonal. A wider field of commonality of transcendence, mind, and the material world has been developed. I will seek further interconnection and the becoming that derives there from.

Monday, March 25, 2002

I have reached a point in my superconscious projecting ability where images can no longer convey the reality of the complexification of psyche generated by my magically enhanced trances. The realm of the source of all emergences is beyond the capacity of the personally identified mind to model with concepts derived from its limited existence. A more complete and integrated mentation is needed to effectively convey the grand scope of such holistic existence.

The shift to the level of understanding archetypes, emergence tendencies, has brought me to the state of impersonal consciousness. I must evoke myself from the angel's point of view after I evoke the angel from my point of view. The fusion of fields and focuses of consciousness produces the paradox and the breaking of personal boundaries necessary to evolve the Briatic holoprojection, while maintaining a link to personal awareness and memory. I am now the great angel that must evoke my lesser self to achieve an experience at all levels of being.

SONIZNT – Mercury Senior of Water
 Sunday, April 14, 2002

I've evoked SONIZNT, Mercury Senior of Water, in due form, this time with success. To say that the revelation was incredible would be insufficient to express the nature of the experience. I found that the only procedure that worked for communing with the angel was to call it forth and then have it evoke me to lift me to the higher level of Water consciousness. My projection/creation became my source/creator as both perspectives merged to a degree. Thereby, I willed myself to emerge far more complexly than ever before. With this evocation, I've made another quantum leap in order of complexity, surpassing the previous evocation. The energy was so intense that I nearly fainted. I became weary and yearned to leave the vision. All my strength of Will was required to stay awake and delve further into the greater emergence of consciousness.

The vision began as a blue hole, complete with accretion disk, in the midst of a dark, starless space. The energy sucking hole itself was bright blue whirling color, a hallmark of my Water visions. A voice that seemed to come from the black space as a whole told me that the blue hole was a reflection of me, a focus of self that crystallizes light from pure darkness and then eats it. This is the nature of incarnation.

As the intensity of energy in the vision grew, a face began to emerge from the darkness. I felt myself to be one with my blue hole projection, being both self and that other, each projecting and being projected by the other. The fusion of the two perspectives produced a dramatic expansion of being, a greater level of complexity where the source – emanation – manifestation process of creation was as one as a perpetual running and returning of the seat of consciousness.⁵ Self, other, and the wholeness in which each exists were realized and experienced as one interactive, interdimensional reality.

The face of the angel emerged more fully out of the darkness (field), then up out of me (focus), and then from myself and the blue hole (flow) at once from a higher dimension (transcendence).⁶ It was a male face, serene and with black hair. I then gained a sense of something building up in the potential of my mind, something awesome that promised to be overwhelming...something new. Even the echo of its possibility threatened to be more than I could deal with. I felt myself begin to swoon, to yearn for release, to shut down the vision. It became clear to me that I needed to surrender myself completely to the higher potential about to emerge, to face the oncoming transcendent breakthrough resolutely, whatever the cost.

Some time passed as my deep subconscious worked its secret (alchemical) processes. Finally, the revelation came and I opened myself as much as possible to the new extreme of complexity of consciousness. A greater realization of being than I've ever experienced before filled my mind, aura, and nervous system and even the hyperdimensional space of my inner vision. It felt like every cell of my brain was glowing with brilliant golden light. I could see this as if standing behind my body and looking through my skin and skull. Every neural cell was lit up like a golden star, glowing in perfect harmony and unity with all others as one continuous whole. The blue hole vision was swallowed up in golden ecstasy as a projection even more complex than the hyperdimensional flooded my every sense, thought, and feeling, carrying with it a truly new order of becoming. A current from beyond consciousness, beyond the universe, had touched me to initiate me into a whole new concept and experience of reality. Hyperdimensionality was but one level of a greater field of being in which every point, every partial and whole dimension, every field of action, was as one interconnected whole in an even greater realm of total possibility. A superholomovement, a source field of the entire cosmos, was revealed. Words don't exist that can describe this meta-metalevel of infinite, unlimited dimensionality. It is utterly beyond.

I spent a long time in this state of beatitude, overwhelmed yet channeling the awesome fantastic WOW as much as possible. There was a long break in concentration when a fantasy took over. I forget the details of what happened. Eventually, the condition regularized and I felt satisfied that the angel's initiation was complete. I banished and closed the magical temple in due form in a dazed state.

Evidently, from here on out each evocation I perform will involve a dramatic increase in the order of complexity of my consciousness than the previous breakthrough. What before took an entire series of magical workings to achieve will now occur with each individual operation at this profound level of Water work. For today's vision, the theme was complexity of unfoldment of consciousness and the reality in which it is realized. The complexity unfolded beyond, within, and about me to greater and greater degrees as the ecstasy, intensity, and expansion increased. The power and transcendence reached a maximum as whole universes seemed to be birthed from each curl in the folds of the projection creating me. Complex. Incredible!

Tuesday, April 16, 2002

The wondrous complexity with which I created and unfolded myself during Sunday's evocation resulted from an integration of the individual auras of the cells of my brain and nervous system to a greater degree of completeness than ever before achieved. Each little aura glowed with golden glory as quantum potentials far beyond the normal range of organic improbability came to realization through the life processes of my neural cells. It took all my strength of Will to emerge myself to that intense an integration and complexity of quantum unfoldment. I nearly collapsed under the strain of ecstasy and energy flood but managed to maintain the revelation for a long time. The initiation is fulfilled. The first impressions of a new reality are mine to explore.

As much as the quantum integration of auras created the supercomplex unfoldment, the unfoldment process created the state of integration. Cause and effect were definitely in paradox as both states emerged together from pure potential. At the meta-metalevel, time has no meaning. All possibilities exist together in one whole state. Direct experience of that reality so supercharges the mind and nervous system as to generate the most profound and intense ecstasy. Life takes on new meaning and wonder.

SLGAIOL – Venus Senior of Water

Sunday, June 2, 2002

I have evoked SLGAIOL, Venus Senior of Water, in due form. Extreme magick! It feels like my psyche has been operated on, although I'm not consciously overwhelmed, like with my evocation of the Mercury Senior of Water. New functions and a greater level of completeness have been realized.

The vision began with my calling forth the angel and he doing the same to me. I achieved a clear image of the angel as a male with dark hair and beard, in a pitch black space, like in many other Water angel visions. A column of bluish-quicksilvery fluid rose through my physical and vision bodies, shooting through my vision space as well. Pathways linking my inner psychic world with the material objective world unfolded through my aura, enabling clear channels for supercharged mental energy to project out to my surroundings. My auric field scintillated with the subtle, transdimensional flow.

SLGAIOL told me to see all reality as one continuous whole without perspective. Taking on points of view causes the illusion of difference to appear, skewing all perception to a self/other schism. Much information is lost in that state of mind since one part is isolated from everything else. Only the holistic state can comprehend all.

The angel then reached toward me and opened up my vision body at the torso, like a cabinet with doors swinging outward. He began fingering my insides as if working the controls of a machine. I was facing him and so couldn't see what he was doing, but it seemed as if he was manipulating buttons, switches, and levers. A sense of strangeness and alteration on a fundamental level of my being came over me and built up to a great intensity as the angel worked on my inner machine. It felt like a psychic operation on the deepest strata of my consciousness. Eventually, SLGAIOL finished his reprogramming of my subconscious but left the doors open. The pathways connecting inner and outer reality were now hardwired into my being, altering my psychic and genetic makeup to channel this intensity of transdimensional unfoldment. My innermost self is now open and connected to the outermost material surroundings.

I'm reminded of my vision of the Saturn Senior of Air. In that vision, I was opened up like an egg to birth my primary holoprojection as the indigo baby. In this vision, the opening was of a mechanical device and the holoprojection was that overriding universal principle from which human consciousness and the material world it experiences unfold. The former was personal and organic, a projection of the ego integrated with its subconscious ground. The latter was impersonal and mechanical, a field conscious projection that integrated the entirety of my being with its cosmic ground. The evolutions of becoming engendered by these angelic contacts are realizing ever deeper, more fundamental layers of source – paradox unfoldments. I am titillated to be aware on such transcendent planes of being.

I then began to rise in vision and soon found myself passing through various classical astral planes. At one point, an alchemical plane came into view, complete with the various characters, plants, animals, and symbols shown in many alchemical paintings. This was likely inspired by my recent readings in a book on alchemy, a translation of “Splendor Solis,” done by Joscelyn Godwin.⁷ Various elemental and planetary scenes were passed through as well. Eventually, I transcended my sense of self separate from other as SLGAIOL’s program was completed.

Suddenly, dream images began to intrude on my transcendent experience. I saw a light skinned version of myself running away in terror from a dark skinned version of myself, who was psychotically furious. This theme had been the subject of many of my dreams in one motif or another. How strange that my angelic contact should have taken me from a profound level of transpersonal integration to the most primitive of dream expressions. The psyche is more interconnected than I’d ever suspected.

I discarded the dream images as more and more of my nerves became incorporated into the magical projection. The apparent barrier between worlds seemed to be becoming thinner, more transparent. Suddenly, my Svadisthana (Mars) chakra began to project a beam of quicksilver light and a new vision space opened up before me. The scene was a mist shrouded rose pink room of hyperdimensional complexity, very dreamlike, yet pulsing with pure intensity. Its very stability expressed enormous power. The walls were at once solid and insubstantial, varying in position, yet displaying an overall sense of presence. My dreams and my visions had fused in this Martial gestalt.

Soon, all of my chakras became integrated in the focused projection of this supervision, each shining its own color of light into the magical space. The room unfolded into a long, dark hallway lined with doors on either side leading off into the distance. I was the rose pink hyperdimensional room and the dark hall, unfolding new potentials of my growing Will. Almost every nerve in my body fed into this image. I realized myself to be the whole world, consisting of the objective and the subjective. Integration of self consciousness and subconsciousness yielded a transcendence of the personal to reveal holistic field consciousness, creating self and other as expressions of itself in space and time. From this wholeness unfolds entire realities of experience and evolution.

The integration reached a completion and I knew the hallway to be never ending. The vision was done, so I withdrew and closed the magical temple in due form. It seemed strange that a Venus natured contact should have produced so much Martial content. It occurred to me, however, that the subconscious faculty that reverses symbolic meaning probably entered into the gestalt of the vision. These two planetary natures form the two sides of one scale and so are truly one. This is the lesson all of these Enochian angelic visions have taught.

Sunday, June 23, 2002

I've evoked LSRAHPM, Mars Senior of Water, in due form. The deepening of vision during the temple opening continues. The transcendent reality created by my ceremonies is taking on ever more concrete and detailed form. The purification and consecration hexagrams were palpable presences on all planes and their influence was more keenly felt than ever before. Connection between my cosmic space temple, its astral imprint, and my physical temple space continues to grow stronger with each performance of this ritual.

I felt the presence of the angel during my declaration of purpose, which completes the opening, as soon as I mentioned her name. An extreme ecstasy took hold of me at this initial contact, almost causing me to fall to the floor. It took me several minutes to recover myself enough to regain my poise and continue with the evocation effectively.

Upon entering vision, a vast hyperdimensional space of white brilliance flecked with black stars appeared, similar to my Air of Spirit vision from the last round of Watchtower evocations. The angel popped up in front of me, her long, curly, black hair spreading over her black robe. She hugged and kissed me deeply and then danced around the transcendent space with joy, calling me forth several times. I felt a growing energization of my entire nervous system, causing me to shiver with tingles all over my body. The raw ecstatic energy rose up through my frame but inherent resistance knocked it down and back to its source. The pleasure was just too much for me to handle. LSRAHPM told me to come forth over the mountain but didn't explain what she meant. Perhaps, the mountain represented my resistance to pleasure.

The space began to turn darker, several shades of black and brown while the stars turned white and red and blue. The vision continued like this for some time as wave after wave of ecstasy ran through me, blocked and knocked down each time after a certain point along its course. The angel assured me that I was ready for this initiation, despite the emotional blocks. I dedicated my entire life to the magical path, whatever it may involve and wherever it may lead, in my attempts to overcome my internal resistance. This didn't help. However, each upward flood purified my system to a degree.

Eventually, the angel told me that the vision was over with and I gave her license to depart. I banished and closed the temple in due form, with a subtle exaltation and an awareness of a newly expanded dimension in my mind. Much psychic energy is required to clarify this new revelation, rising along with the level of ecstasy.

Now, I feel renewed, as if forged in a fire. All the elements of vision and psyche seem merged into one homogeneous substance, like quicksilver, fluidic yet viscous, of one continuous nature. If I can use this holistic power to break through my internal resistance to pleasure, I can achieve extreme energization and reach a higher level of being. Even now, I can feel the echo of this promising revelation in potential, a nuclear explosion of the mind. It's so close, yet I dare not realize it now. This is surely the eagle aspect of Mars, most sublime and ecstatic, an excellent lead into Jupiter.⁸

Sunday, July 28, 2002

I've evoked SAIINOV, Jupiter Senior of Water, successfully. I still have a sense of intense power but the angelic contact wasn't overwhelming, like the first time I called this entity during my last round of Watchtower evocations. A great deal of superconscious energy began flowing through the depths of my consciousness during the temple setup, slightly at first, but the buildup accelerated to an extreme by the time I began the opening ceremony. I bore this charge well and was able to maintain concentration throughout these rituals and the evocation. This type of paradox is increasing with each magical working.

Upon entering vision, the angel appeared clearly in my mind against the dark field as well as in front of me, physically. His presence in space was as palpable to me as any person's could be. He was older than before and had white hair with big curls like an old style British magistrate. He showed me a bowl of water wherein was reflected a golden star with seven points, but not like the usual heptagram. The reflection of the unseen object didn't have the even spacing of the points of a planetary heptagram. There were three points to the left and right, with a single point in the middle, below them. The top pair of points stuck out farther from the central line of symmetry than the pair below it and the middle pair stuck out farther than the lowest pair. Connecting the points together on either side would have made a wide 'V.'

I marveled at this most strange figure, especially its quality of motion. The angles seemed to be moving downward through the figure from the top, widest pair to the single point downward. A new pair of angles would appear at the top of the figure as the former top pair moved downward. The lowest pair of angles would converge at the single point and disappear. The overall form of the star was kept stable but the motion was smooth and continuous, producing a flow of patterns that seemed to make the star buzz with energy. A vibrant projection emanated from the center of the figure, like the planetary symbols for Mars and Mercury superimposed.

The base circle had the arrow pointing upward and to the right while the Mercury symbol rose upwards to the left, opposite the arrow. This mysterious symbol fusion apparently held the key to the meaning of the star but I couldn't understand what that was.

SAIINOV said, "Behold an image reflected. Where is the original?"

Then he moved underneath me and became a vast body whose head was my entire body. His/my legs extended downwards out of inner sight and I could feel my whole person complete as the head. The star reflection rose out of the bowl as a concrete object and attached itself to the angel/self amalgam we'd become, growing to cover the entire body. A huge flood of Kundalini shot up from the unseen depths to flow through me, the head, to gush upward like a vast fountain far above. It was as if the energies of the whole of existence were concentrated and made fluid to flow through my Sushumna channel, the culmination of a great chain of being.

I was united with my source consciousness and achieved complete wholeness, a sense of unlimited expansion, with each point therein connected to every other point in ever increasing patterns of complexity. Each thought, feeling, and self expression was perfectly compensated for by its correlate opposite, maintaining perfect balance in the midst of continuously intensifying power. Through all this, I wasn't overwhelmed like the last time I conjured this spirit. There were enough connections established within my psyche to safely channel this mighty angel's true nature as a supreme projection of superconsciousness. No wonder our first contact so overwhelmed me.

The voice of the angel came to me from all directions to say, "The hour is passing."

I was reminded of similar lines from the closing ceremonies of many Masonic rituals. I could feel the passage of time, one instant after another, one erg of power flow after another, one cosmic evolution after another. The vibrations of untold myriads of atoms and quantum particles were passing through the chain of dimensional expansions and collapses. The illusion of time was produced by each projection as it unfolded in space and time and then passed beyond to more complex states of being. The continuous flow of all quantum states through the physical universe determines the apparent flow of time and entropy. This flow was quite complexified in my vicinity, evoking many streams of evolution and causing matter and energy to become more ordered and complex. In this state of emergent order, the differences between dimensional unfoldments and scales of size decreased to bring the vast range of reality into focused integration. The consciousness inherent in every point of space and time became concentrated and ordered enough to evolve sentience, cosmic awareness and intelligence. The eternity beyond and in between each instant of time was revealed. A profound sense of holiness took hold of me and for the first time in my life, I felt religious awe. This was a state of pure beatitude.

As I communed more fully with the holy presence, SAIINOV said, "Remember that time always flows. Remember the flow."

With that, the vision and the spirit retracted back into unconsciousness and I returned to my normal state of awareness. I banished the angel and closed the temple in a somewhat dazed state, still feeling the contact with the divine presence.

Now, another Jupiter Senior has impressed a magical sigil onto my aura, opening yet more channels to the ultimate transcendence. The symbol of most secret nature initiated me into the profound mysteries of Tiphareth and Thelema. The sevenfold star of this vision has initiated me into the mysteries of time and eternity, providing me a glimpse of a divine nature that underlies all reality. This could be considered an entry into Geburah. These angels of initiation are taking me on a journey of transcendent unfoldment as fast as I dare travel. There are truly no limits.

LIGDISA – Saturn Senior of Water
Sunday, September 8, 2002

LIGDISA, Saturn Senior of Water, has been evoked in due form. I am fundamentally altered as a result, to the innermost depths of my being, even to the quantum level. This kind of transformation is what magick is really all about. It's so thrilling that my personal magical ceremonies can initiate such radical transformations throughout my consciousness, even to the most impersonal of functions. Magick is life fulfilled.

The vision began with the appearance of the angel, an old man with very curly white hair and beard, like an ancient Greek sage, against the usual black background, calling me forth as I called him. He told me to remember that the universe is one.⁹ All the myriad appearances of nature are so much froth on a calm sea of one fluid. The universe is in every part of itself and is every part. There is only one amidst all the complexity. The quantum physicists of my world have it wrong. Ultimately, there are an unlimited number of subatomic particles that can be discovered, being a product of human science and its macrocosmic counterpart in the collective human consciousness. The phenomena of the universe are best understood from the holistic perspective.

The angel moved behind me, grew to enormous size, and held me up like a baby. I was then immersed in a bath of silky, pearly white fluid and felt a profound energy course through me. I surrendered to it completely, allowing this field of nurturing milky energy to envelope every aspect and function of my being. This was existence as it truly is in its holistic unity, a sea of pearly white potential, complete in itself. LIGDISA told me to behold myself emerging from this reality and I felt myself rising out of the silky white goo, like a fountain of concretizing potential, bubbling up from the depths. My personal being is the froth on the calm sea of my whole Self. Yet, I felt myself to be all the fluid, the one fluid. Visions of strings of impossibly large pearls surrounded me. All dimensional possibilities derive from the Great Sea. I remained in the oceanic bath for some time and then gave the angel license to depart. I closed the temple in due form, naturally with difficulty concentrating.

So, I am the child projection of my whole being, as seen in a vision corresponding to the nature of the Sephirah Binah. The energies of Water have fused with my psyche to such an extent as to transform me into a homogeneous fluid of pure emergent consciousness, reflective of the holographic nature of the cosmos. My aura is now made up of this superquicksilvery essence. I can now channel the power that so overwhelmed me in previous Water angel contacts. My attunement is complete.

Tuesday, September 24, 2002

I've suffered muscle spasms in my head, neck, and chest since the evocation, although these symptoms have been easing recently. I seem to be repressing some aspect of the silky, milky white energy I absorbed so much of during last Sunday's vision. Despite all the clarity, the detailed nature of the vision, and the coherent appearance of the Senior, I seemed to have missed some aspect of meaning of the angelic communication. My whole being received it all but my self consciousness continues to deny it by using muscular tensions and psychic short circuits to help repress it. My meditations have been much less effective due to this internal conflict. I've come too far, too fast. Perhaps, the missing piece will be revealed as I heal from the shock of the Watery power and adjust to the new quickening of consciousness. I'll face it when ready. There is no other choice. It's with me now, somewhere in my subconscious.

RAAGIOSL – King of Water
Monday, November 5, 2002

At long last, RAAGIOSL, great King of the West and Water, has been successfully evoked in due form. It has been a difficult adjustment over the last two months, as my muscular disequilibrium warded off the ultimate truth that the cosmos and I are one. Accepting that Self awareness has been a frightful process,¹⁰ losing the illusion that I am separate from the rest of existence. Now, the King has bestowed full consciousness of the universal Oneness flowing through all of spacetime to focus on this microcosm and then projecting back to the macrocosm, carrying with it the impress of my personal order. I've never been more established on the inner planes. My personal complex pattern gestalt has made a clear imprint on the plane of pure information, the quantum basis underlying all physical existence. Even my magical workplace has focused an impression in the transcendence, an impersonal template with which I connect through my cosmic temple, built up in meditation before my ceremonies. Connecting this inner plane establishment with my physical temple space has never been easier or more effective. I felt myself to be present on both planes at once during my operations with field as well as focused consciousness. The universe and I are one.

The vision began with the King evoking me. A new reality of self immediately presented itself to me. A torus made up of elliptical rings instead of perfect circles surrounded me. It had very high, narrow sides. This type of torus is called a dimpled sphere. A twisting ribbon of my personal self threaded the tiny central hole, at once the focus of all the energy flowing around the torus and the projector of all that Will power. Field consciousness revealed this focus and this flow as part of one encompassing hyperdimensional reality, source and effect of every Self/self gestalt. I exist as the two impossibly fused fields that produce the core contradiction, the center of the torus. This center is a nexus of all scales and dimensions where every unfoldment, may be linked with any other in any combination. The potential for the evolution of consciousness arising out of this all-worlds point is unlimited. Field, flow, and focused perspectives come together at this absurd nexus. At the center of the mind lay the entire universe and its source.

The microcosm is a little universe, complete with enfolded potential and unfolded actualization. It is complete within itself, yet intimately entangled with the macrocosmic source.

The process of continuing unfoldment, which produces ego consciousness, mirrors the objective world process of maintaining matter and energy through time. Image and object are constantly interconnected through similarity of pattern. Only the strict focus of attention on personal processes yields the illusion of separateness from the impersonal. Surrendering the false sense of self can open the mind to the greater reality of wholeness. This is a far better state of being than the isolated blindness, fulfilling all emptiness and reconnecting self with cosmic nature. The intellectual journey through darkness, begun during the last aeon of human consciousness, has reached an end in Thelema. “Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law.”

As the significance of what I’d become set in, I began to see details of this awesome vision. The central twisting thread was black while the torus itself was white. The transcendent background, however, was sheer brilliance reaching far beyond the three dimensions of normal space. This was the great King RAAGIOSL. His omnipresent voice welcomed me to my true estate as a being of transcendence. He proclaimed me as a Lord of all the lower realms and told me to fully realize myself in all states of being. I am to be the All in all, the full holographic image at all scales. Linking the All with the specific opens up a passageway through all scales to expand quantum indeterminacy to the size of human experience. Transcendence is made focused and enduring in physical reality as the coherence of the material world becomes motile and interactive.¹¹ The level of order and complexity increases with time instead of decreasing, as cosmic consciousness becomes focused on a particular perspective. Thus is the process of incarnation and its inherent connection with the universe, containing that which contains it. Projecting this paradoxical complexity to the surrounding world is magick.

After a while in this communion, I left the vision, banished, and closed the temple. The experience had been ultimately fulfilling but overwhelming, which affected my concentration during the closing ceremonies. However, there were no muscle spasms as I was able to handle the profound angelic energies to some degree. Nothing was being warded off or denied. I made some mistakes but nothing of any consequence. The feeling of overwhelm grew less as my contact with the inner planes eased in intensity. I'm confident that I'll soon be ready for the Fire angels. What that will entail, I can't hazard a guess. Greater initiation is coming my way. I must take my time with it. The divine presence that has entered me will guide me through. The angels really want me to succeed in their Path.

LSRAHPM – Mars Senior of Water
Sunday, February 9, 2003

LSRAHPM, Mars Senior of Water, has been evoked efficiently and completely. All energies were manageable, without overwhelm like the last time. I figured that my attunement to this energy needed to be perfected since my previous attempt met with such difficulty. A complete initiation into all the mysteries of Water is needed to properly prepare for the awesome forces of angelic Fire. Now, I have truly mastered this element and feel ready to begin with Fire tablet evocations next time.

I called forth and was called forth by the angel and was brought to an earthy scene at twilight. The Senior appeared as male this time but was definitely the same essence as encountered in previous evocations. This suggested that a more masculine, even intellectual expression of this spirit was to be conveyed.

LSRAHPM explained that I was to be introduced to a special mystery of Water involved with Earth. We came to a large patch of wet ground and then to a pool of black pitch. It was shiny and I could see my reflection in the obsidian darkness. LSRAHPM said that this was the basis of all matter and energy, their source. This was that foam I'd seen in other Water angel visions.

Then I realized that the watery essence of materiality was the zero point energy, the continuous vacuum fluctuations of quanta that exist throughout spacetime. I've just begun reading a book on harnessing this most subtle basis of the material world, its effect on matter and on consciousness. Interestingly, this hidden nature is referred to as quantum foam. It is purely random and not reachable by the usual means of working with subatomic particles. However, under the right influence, random systems may become self organizing and emerge higher levels of order. Consciousness is an extremely complex example of this phenomenon. The principle of order out of chaos could be used to harness the zero point energy technologically.

Chaos theory describes this type of process, understanding that order eventually emerges from chaos when certain corresponding patterns become established on all scales of size. This polarization of energy flow across the quantum, macroscopic (human), and macrocosmic levels, is called self similarity in mathematics. All the potential for the emergence of order in these realms superpose together to focus a more complete level of organization in chaotic systems. Cells of self similar, self organized order come forth temporarily. The flow of time is altered locally as the tendency for energy to become reduced to its lowest possible state, called entropy in physics, is reversed. Eventually, the source chaos reasserts itself in these systems and the higher order is disbursed. All life, consciousness, and evolution derive from these basic processes.

With all this lore in mind, I projected myself into the pool of dark, viscous liquid and emerged myself therefrom as a powerful whirlwind. Such manifestations of weather are examples of emergent order in the atmosphere. After a time, I withdrew myself from the funnel of dark energy potential and then it ceased to whirl.

Here was Earth, Air, and Water, but no Fire. The heavy Earth could be lightened by certain natural processes to focus energy into highly ordered patterns that could evolve over time, in a continuous cycle of birth and death. These ordered patterns are never destroyed with their disbursal on the physical level. They're preserved in the potential state and can reemerge in ever more complex forms as evolution unfolds. The collective unconscious of species is an example of such transcendent memory. I asked the Senior where the missing Fire was but he said that this was not the tablet to answer such a question. The Fire Tablet angels could answer me.

The message was given and the vision was done so I gave the angel license to depart and closed the temple. Ironically, it was during the closing ceremonies that I felt the orgasmic intensity of power that had overwhelmed me during my previous evocation of LSRAHPM. This time, however, I endured the sensations calmly and maintained poise throughout the experience. I am ready for Fire intensity and mystery.

CHAPTER XI

VISIONS OF THE GREAT SOUTHERN WATCHTOWER OF FIRE SECOND ROUND

ALNDVOD – Luna Senior of Fire
Monday, February 17, 2003

I've evoked ALNDVOD, Luna Senior of Fire, to partial success. A whole new level of transcendent space and psychic functioning has begun to open for me. It is difficult to find words to express the unusual character of the contact, so removed from normal human experience as it is. When transcendent impersonal consciousness first makes itself felt in waking awareness, it initiates new sensations, new visions, new understandings, and a contact with an encompassing field of life that has no correspondence to earthly experience. The energy is sharper, brighter, and causes a response from the totality of individual being that is as holistic as it is ecstatic. Where Water was dark and heavy, Fire is brilliant and hyperdimensionally energetic. All of incarnate life is as a tiny flame in the vast conflagration of angelic Fire.

The vision began as a scene of infinite sky, like that of Air, but with every point therein bursting forth with the essence of joy and song, although there was perfect silence throughout. Sudden bursts of fiery conflagration occurred frequently but then were reabsorbed into the sky field just as suddenly.¹ The blue of the sky was tinged with orange and yellow but these colors were far brighter and more intense than anything the physical eye could register. I call these hypercolors, showing not only the hue but also the essence of the idea of color bursting out at every point.

I was able to maintain this extremely transcendent vision only for brief periods. Each time, the energy became too much for me and my mind's eye fell into total darkness and nullity. I recovered myself and built up the psychic intensity again to achieve another brief glimpse but then fell back to darkness, overwhelmed. More experience with this new level of transcendence and further transformations are needed to channel this most profound energy effectively.

I called upon ALNDVOD while in one of the energized periods of vision. This effort resulted in my Ajna chakra, at the brow, radiating a ring of psychic projection around my physical head. It formed a few inches away from me and then promptly burst into curling blue and yellow flames, seen with the mind's eye's rendering of the space around me. My outer and inner vision spaces coexisted as one harmonious, continuous reality, with each field registering its action independent of the other. My whole nervous system surged with power as I caught glimpses of this great angel in the winking sky of Fire. He showed himself as a great head of pure glory, androgynous and wearing a garland of fluffy white cloud. His facial expression exhibited great thrill and ecstasy.

I got a clear sense of the Senior as myself projected more clearly than with any other angelic projection. I could feel myself there, being the angel in that divine setting as well as my terrestrial self. Yet, the fiction of separation was useful, just as the inner/outer vision space separation was useful, to lift myself from the mundane level to a state of uttermost transcendence. I withdrew my sense of identification with the angel and opened up to receive from that most extreme holoprojection.

ALNDVOD said that I wasn't yet ready to receive the full vision, now only glimpsed before being psychically exhausted by it. The key was to receive more completely than at any previous level of intensity. I perceived very clearly the heaviness and inertness of so much of my nervous system. Somehow, all this had to be volatilized to achieve the full vision of this angel and angelic Fire in general. This evocation was but the first step in my latest initiation. I'll call ALNDVOD again when I'm more prepared. Even now, this angel's first blessing is transmuting my psyche and nervous system, bringing more light to the darkness. I banished and closed the temple feeling cooked to the core.

ALNDVOD – Luna Senior of Fire
Monday, March 21, 2003

I've evoked ALNDVOD, Luna Senior of Fire, for the second time and with much greater success than before.

However, I am dazed by the contact. The energy absorbed is so transcendent and so intense that my center of thought and concentration has become loosened, generalized, less focused. My psychic functioning is fuzzy, diffused. A new kind of consciousness is needed to maintain coherent action while I'm absorbed by the unearthly energies of angelic Fire. A global fusion of field consciousness must be established in order to bring coherence to pure transcendence.

I discovered that the new style of evocation to be adopted for spirits of this caliber is to become the angel called forth and then project my entire enhanced nature onto my visionary/auric sphere of sensation. In doing this, my inner temple visualization became intimately connected to my innermost psyche and my physical temple space. Every object seemed imbued with its astral counterpart, making the very air seem to scintillate with activity. Every point of my vision space burst with fiery conflagration, which immediately canceled itself out. This added remarkable complexity and enhanced dimensionality to every scene and idea. This ubiquitous supercharge is the supreme manifestation of Will, the ultimate angelic Fire. In its myriad activity, all was one force, a transdimensional projection from beyond the confines of spacetime to the most specific coherent point.

The world of Fire, the zero point energy flow, the state of pure Will to emerge into physicality from pure potential, opened up to absorb me. Great rolls and rivulets of brilliant white circulating flame surrounded me on all sides, like the great Watchtower city of the King of Air, but of pure fiery flow. This is the impulse that could focus the forces of nature into a state where time and entropy reverse and higher order evolves. This is the source of True Will that can alter the cosmos in such a way as to emerge events according to individual intention, the process of magick.

I called for a voice to give me a teaching and then heard out of the Fire, "...Will is pure..." Two other attributes to Will were given but the words were garbled in the rush and crash of the coiling energy. Immense power built up in my nervous system at the reception of the voice, like during my last evocation of this angel. It reached a point where I shuddered from head to toe. This muscular action released some of the tension but the supercharge remained, intense yet subtle. There is still some short circuit in my psyche/aura that is disabling my efficient channeling of the raw force of Fire.

The deep, sonorous voice said that the vision was complete and about to end. The Fire dimension folded up all around me, returning to pure potential beyond the universe, and I was again in my physical temple. I banished and closed but with great difficulty concentrating and visualizing. I feel renewed, recreated, reemerged by this profound vision of another reality, the source of the source, having fulfilled the initiation of the Luna Senior of Fire. Evocation of the Mercury Senior of Fire is next.

ANODOIN – Mercury Senior of Fire
Sunday, April 20, 2003

I've evoked ANODOIN, Mercury Senior of Fire, in due form. My astral temple fit perfectly within my physical workspace, adding imminence to every object therein and a sense of energy flow throughout. The physical reached smoothly into the transcendent reality of my inner establishment. The various sigils and grams traced during the opening appeared clearly in the starry space of my torus temple, lighting up the scene with their inherent glow; reds, blues, and gold against the background of the consciousness of the continuity of cosmic existence. This is the magical auric holoprojection field in which I conjure my angels.

Upon calling ANODOIN and entering vision, I immediately saw the angel projected throughout the infinite Fire sky, as encountered in my first evocation of ALNDVOD. The whole scene turned brilliant, billowy white. He called me forth and I was uplifted into the great supersky. His form was of an old man with long white hair and beard, much like clouds. There was no water anywhere, however. Every particle of white essence was zero point energy.

I asked him the mystery of Fire and he told me that it was the gateway to all the worlds. All is connected by Fire. This reminded me of a contemplation I had way back in 1987, when I first began practicing ceremonial magick. It occurred to me that the flames of the candles at the four quarters formed gates through which the elemental energies could flood into physicality and through which I could skry into the spirit realm. I am now convinced that my old speculations are true, based on what the angels have taught me regarding the way psychic energy flows interdimensionally into the surrounding physical world and my own studies of the physics of chaos theory and emergent order. Burning wax is matter undergoing a phase transition, being reduced to smoke and various residual traces and with so much chemical energy being released.

Other phase transitions occur, such as when ice melts into water and when water boils into vapor. Such activity is occurring every second amid the myriad electrochemical interactions of the human brain, yielding many layers of complexity that build up into mind. The focal points of phase transitions open up the worlds of the various scales of size, such as the tiny subatomic realm, the world which is normally understood by human awareness, and the huge celestial level. Patterns at each level align to form transscale, self similar interconnections. These evolve emergent systems of all sizes as well as mental phenomena, such as evocation of spirits and expansion of consciousness.

Emergent order, consciousness included, expands in such fractal (fractional) dimensional patterns. These fall in between the normally understood three spatial dimensions of length, width, and breadth.² The process of expansion into normal space and time makes them spiral through the myriad possibilities of unfoldment potential to weave the complex structures of living systems.

The fractal unfoldment of emergent order follows the organizing principle that takes shape from the aligned transscale patterns. The transdimensional interconnection and the hyperdimensional field resulting from this principle are woven into the underlying fabric of reality to guide matter and energy into complex structures. I speculate that the preceding description answers to what quantum physicists call a quantum coherence field.³

A magical auric holoprojection can interact with this phenomenon to alter its underlying pattern. The Will of the magician is hereby imposed on the emergent system to transmute it into a higher level of order. This is the magick of the Fire philosophers. Elemental Fire is the zero point energy falling into the self similar transcale patterns of emergent order.

The angel went on to say that diversity was the unity of existence. The multiplication was its source. Reality is One. This is what underlies the myriad emergences that create all things. All is evoked by the interaction of the spirals, the interference of the waves of pure Fire. The chaos is the order. There is no meaningful distinction. Reality is a seamless, undivided wholeness.

At that point, an enormous interdimensional spiral of reddish orange Fire erupted all around my vision body and spread throughout my outer vision space as well. My entire reality was taken up by whirling, spiraling flame, the distinction between inside my mind and outside my body dissolved in continuous energetic unfoldment.

The torrent of Fire fusion eventually faded into the background of my psychic scene, giving my nervous system a much needed rest. The ecstasy and the understanding had been extreme but now my enhanced reality was cooling off. The Fire sky scene changed color under the influence of the residual transdimensional circulating current, now with hyperbrilliant reds, oranges, yellows, and amber. They were all interwoven in perpetual movement. These colors were carried by the frequent eruptions of sky Fire in continuing vibrancy, causing my nervous system to excite in sympathy. Happily, I was able to handle this spiking intensity with just a few slight bodily shudders.

Overall, I was comfortable with this level of Fire. My preparation in passing from the Water tablet to the Fire tablet, as well as all my previous training and experience, had really come to fruition in this most potent Work of my life. My efforts to pursue this round of Watchtower evocations correctly and effectively had proven successful in opening up and strengthening the subtle channels of my consciousness and aura. Even after this peak working, the residual energy was evenly distributed throughout my psyche and aura. My Kundalini was enhanced instead of becoming a pillar of blasting Fire which painfully raged up my spine, like during last round. This capability of maintaining the most powerful magical energies in balance will enable greater intensities of supercharge to be channeled. More was certain to come.

ANODOIN told me further that Fire is an infinite focus, continuing with the all-worlds gateway idea. This element focuses the whole of the universe onto specific points, states of becoming something different than before. It is the core of life and mind, connecting all states to all states, self and other. Existence is nothing but the interference of the Fiery spiral wave focusing and refocusing on itself repeatedly, under the guidance of the wholeness of the cosmos which draws it into activity from pure potential. Thus is the stamp of pure Will made manifest.

The fiery scene that surrounded and interpenetrated me reminded me of the Prince of Wands card from the Thoth Tarot deck. This card depicts the human figure driving a chariot drawn by a lion. The lion is an ancient symbol of Fire and an the emblem of the zodiacal sign, Leo. Sure enough, a lion of similar coloring appeared out of the flames and stared at me. I began talking to it but the voice of the angel told me to be silent and receive the lion's subtle, wordless message. After awhile, the lion disappeared back into the coruscating flames and I communed with the transdimensionally circulating flow of mighty force. No new messages, realizations, or power spikes occurred, so I exited the vision and closed the temple in due form. So far, nothing has consciously registered from the lion's communication. Perhaps, it was purely subconscious in nature, never meant to register to self awareness. At any rate, I feel as if I've achieved an understanding of Babalon and the Beast whereon she rides, the ubiquitous spiral connectedness and the cosmic totality.

AAPDOCE – Venus Senior of Fire
Sunday, May 11, 2003

AAPDOCE, Venus Senior of Fire, has been evoked in due form. Words cannot express the glory and wonder of the vision. At best, I can describe the images and shapes of things and simply record that they were wondrous. This is ever the limitation of language when applied to things metaphysical.

The angel appeared as enormous and hyperdimensional, coming to me from the myriad directions of enhanced inner vision, as well as below the floor of my magical temple. My astral temple was also filled with the angel's radiance. She had fiery red hair and a matronly face, somewhat like MARDALA, the great Queen of Air. AAPDOCE called me forth and told me to behold the vision not yet seen. My inner, outer, and astral spaces became one as the blazing infinite sky I beheld towards the end of my last Fire angel vision, with passionately flashing reds, oranges, yellows, and everything in between. The color bursts were there as well, giving a frenetic quality to every point of the sky. Soon the integrated space calmed down to a continuous orange background and a dull yellow tetrahedron, a triangular pyramid, appeared before me. Its six edges were sharply defined and its four points were very pointy. This object began to bounce and whirl about with great energy and speed.

The angel said, “Behold the core of it all.”

The tetrahedron began to expand and unfold, throwing out innumerable projections of triangles and copies of itself in red, orange, and yellow profusions. The swarm of multicolored geometric progressions and flowerings increased to a degree of complexity and dimensional alteration that boggled my mind. Space itself was expanding under the operations of the core structure. Through it all, I noticed that the source of all the action remained unaffected by its activities, no matter how much it unfolded and intermingled with its projections. The projections also intermingled with each other in splashes of color and complex patterning, building the pathways for matter and energy to follow to emerge higher order in normal space. The whole vision was hypnotic and truly wondrous. This order out of chaos is the core phenomenon by which all life and mind evolve.

AAPDOCE told me to approach the temple of the core and see the shrine within. Drawing nearer to the active yet stable tetrahedron, I saw at its center a shining steel sphere with a black equal armed cross jutting out from the top. My intuition understood this emblem to represent the initial emission of equal but opposite quantum particles from the vacuum of pure nothingness, the vacuum fluctuation out of which our universe was born. Each fusion of opposite projections brings those first two primal principles closer to mutual annihilation and return to the nothingness that is their source and destiny. The continuous emergence and instantaneous annihilation of this zero point energy goes on all around us while our source splitting-of-zero-into-two remains eternally separate, eternally poised for reconnection, ever reaching out towards itself in a grand dance of projective interaction. When there is enough emergent order in the cosmos, enough development of consciousness, the first two will finally come together to fulfill each other as well as the destinies of countless intelligences birthed by their mutual passion. The cross is the positive side, expansive and emanating all brilliance, while the sphere is contractive and indrawing, swallowing all light and life. Their mutual interaction has caused the exchange between the metallic brightness of the cross and the darkness of the sphere. They become each other as evolution progresses. Maybe all the zero point energy pairs create universes as they reach toward ecstatic annihilation.

The angel, with a huge arm, took the center device and placed it on my head like a crown. It was inside my crown chakra. I find it interesting that in my MARDALA vision, the Queen of Air placed me in her crown while in this vision, a profound alchemical device was placed in mine. Once again, I've experienced a trade in relationship with the angels, becoming ever more like them as their initiations take full effect.

The Senior told me to wear the crown as a king of Fire, wielding power over all emergence. To control this ultimate alchemical process is to control everything that results from it, including all life and all consciousness. The sphere-cross is truly the crown of all crowns. Intriguingly, it is also an inverted Venus symbol. The Great Mother is the flip side of pure nothingness, the root of all alchemical mystery.

I asked the angel about the nature of the ultimate nothingness out of which the cosmos-creating opposite-pair-split arose. She said that this nullity pervades all emergent order and its products. It lay at the core of each fusion/annihilation pair, which lay at the core of every system of emergent order. At the core of the core of the core of all reality is pure nothingness; nothingness to the sphere-cross to the tetrahedron to life and mind.

I remained for a time beholding the chains of being, feeling the bliss and wonder of the myriad processes going on around me. The angel's final message to me was to be the King of Fire and wield these powers to accomplish my True Will. Eventually, I gave her license to depart and closed the magical temple.

So, it seems I've been made the King of Fire and the Sphere of Fire long before having evoked this ultimate angel of the southern tablet. Is this another time paradox, feeling the effect of a powerful ceremony long before actually doing it? It may be that the seventh Sephirah of Netzach is intended here, the sphere of Fire and Venus, or perhaps the fourth Sephirah of Chesed, to which the "Sepher Yetzirah" attributes Fire. To stand outside of and rule over the magical creative force of all things would constitute me an Exempt Adept, a grade in the Golden Dawn and A.A.⁴ systems of initiation which is attributed to Chesed. This will be something to explore as AAPDOCE's initiation takes full effect. At any rate, my astral crown has been bestowed upon me and remains with me even now.

AAETPIO – Mars Senior of Fire
Sunday, August 10, 2003

AAETPIO, Mars Senior of Fire, has been evoked to fantastic effect. I have been initiated into the next Hall of Fire⁵, a higher state of emergent order than I've ever before experienced. The subtle power that underlies all of space is more awesome than can be described in words. It is overwhelming and of such a high vibration that it feels like extreme holiness. No wonder that whole religions have developed from this reality.

Usually, the Mars Senior of a given tablet initiates the evocator into a mystery involving control and mastery, in preparation for the onramp to the ultimate revelation of the element of that Watchtower. The Jupiter and Saturn Seniors gradually open the inner senses and connections so that they can receive the great power and blessing of the transcendent level, represented by the King. This time, however, there were no control issues dealt with. The whole vision was a grand introduction to a new level of being and becoming, that fused the intellectual enlightenment so many of these angels have bestowed on me with the most exalted connection to pure holiness. This begins my preparation for the grand initiation to come, the ultimate evocation of the Watchtower system.

The vision began with the appearance of AAETPIO as a transdimensional curl of reddish gold light, coming from beyond the cosmos, flowing through all the dimensions of space and mind, and twisting/expanding into my field of inner sight. Each curve of his inconceivably long body passed through a set of partially realized dimensions, spaces implicit within spaces, like an ever unfolding flower. Perhaps, these spatial modalities were created out of normal space by the spiraling effusion of the angel's body instead of them being independently existing backgrounds through which he passed.⁶ Each twist was also an expansion, coming from the infinitesimal that is the immensity of the whole universe⁷ to my incarnate psychic imagination. His serene face was at the end of the curl. Thus, my mind was connected to a pathway through myriad worlds of possibility, out to a state beyond anything I ever before conceived. The Senior told me to prepare myself for something completely new and then hurled me with his Will in the transdimensional direction of his sinuous body of light, out to his source beyond comprehensible reality.

What next struck my whole being is almost impossible to describe, at least in sensible terms. Here is my attempt. The revelation of this newly emerged state of consciousness showed itself as a brilliant white space, wherein every point shimmered and radiated gleaming white, curling snakes of flame. This great vista seemed solid with concentrated shooting, whirling bursts of pure essence of Fire, a cosmic crystal of hard flame filling all of empty space. The character as well as the intensity of this projection/contact was fundamentally different than any Fire scene I'd encountered before this. The only way to describe the impression is ever greater integration of lesser states of Fire to the point of saturation, concentrating power and activity until every spot of my vision space burst into overwhelming intensity and speed. All this was expressing my hyperactivated superconsciousness; a more complete and transcendent holoprojection than I was ever capable of emanating before. It occurred to me that each seraphic point in this vision was a sphere-cross/core zero point energy particle pair, but more energetic in emergence than those that normally extend into physical space. Here were true Hadit-father seeds reaching out from the Nuit-star mother. The psyche is a realm wherein potentials not normally realizable in physicality can emerge and be experienced by incarnate consciousness. Once the revelation is had, all that exists is forever changed.

I lost sight of AAETPIO at this point and remained in that ultimate transcendence for a while. Eventually, I entered more fully into the Fiery space and suddenly the coruscations of energy turned into thick, gray mist. There was no hint of moisture in this mysterious fog. It was perfectly dry and cool to the touch. The angel's booming voice came to me from everywhere and said that I had to pass a test to prove my worthiness to receive the Superlative. Not knowing what to do then, I waited where I was to allow the powers of the vision to guide me. After a short time, I found myself surrounded by a network of fine, white lines that appeared against the gray mist. A bright, white ball of light marked every intersection of two lines. I felt myself begin to distort and then unravel in a complex way, falling apart in myriad directions at once. My vision body was split down the middle, from head to foot, and then each half was reduced to gray mist. I found myself floating bodiless, completely formless, mist lost in mist. Time passed. Then, all of a sudden, I was whole again, in my vision body, remade from the mist that filled all of my inner space.⁸

So initiated and transformed to the core of my being (again), I moved forward through the mist and soon came to what seemed to be the wall of a large castle. However, the wall itself was only a thickening of the all pervasive gray mist. Eventually, the obscurity cleared up in my vicinity and I could see an entryway into a dark hall. The hall turned out to be a passage through the mist but at the end, there was just more fog. I tried to walk out the other end of the hall but some unseen barrier prevented me from doing so. Perplexed, I walked out the way I'd come and reentered the obscuring grayness. A feeling of blindness and helplessness came over me.

Suddenly, a brilliant golden key appeared floating in the mist before me. It was about half my size and glowed with warmth and life. It consisted of thick, golden lines that bent into two rounded rectangles, touching each other. One end was flat and the other bent into the classical shape of an ancient key.

A new bodiless voice came echoing through the mist and said, "Can you answer the mystery of the Superlative?"

Immediately, the key and I were moved into a long, dark hallway, different from the one before. At its end, there was a room that opened off to the right. Therein, I found an old man with a very long white beard and hair, wearing flowing white robes. He was in every way a classical wizard figure. I found him sitting on the floor of the empty room, in a meditative posture, facing a screen from which shown soft, white light.

The wizard opened his eyes, looked up at me, and asked, "What is this key used for?"

I thought for a minute in bewilderment and then was inspired to answer, "It unlocks the Superlative."

At that, he stood up, smiling broadly, and impressed the key onto my aura in the same way that the Jupiter Senior of Air had done with that symbol of utmost secret nature. These are permanent fixtures in my energy body, radiating their meaning to me always. My set of astral accoutrements was expanding.

At this point, I felt a rise of anxiety in the pit of my stomach but there was no discernable cause. A rush of supercharge began to spread throughout my nervous system that caused me much stress. Something was happening in my subconsciousness that was being covered by the ornate vision. Also, it was very hot in my apartment and my physical body was sweating profusely. I hoped that something in my inner experience would indicate what was happening.

The old wizard beckoned toward the screen. Therein, I saw a whirlwind of might and energy, which had appeared in several of my dreams. It was like a nuclear blast, which had so overwhelmed me that I was immediately awakened by its force. Now, here it was on the screen, although somewhat muted as a two dimensional figure. It wasn't as bright as it appeared in my dreams. I could face it fully, without panic. Here was a force beyond anything in my waking experience, magical or otherwise. It was pure, raw force but unusable and destructive.⁹

The wizard told me that this was the power of the Superlative and that I should strive to overcome it and use it. I gazed at the nuclear blast whirlwind of such awesome power and knew that this was the source of my rising anxiety. It also came to me that the unusual shape of the golden key modeled the dimensional twists I'd experienced during the discorporation of my vision body earlier on. The feelings of anxiety and nerve supercharge were becoming intense by this time, so the wizard told me to return to the world. Before exiting my trance, I asked the old man who he was. He said he was the Wizard Ebelijah. That's my magical name! Here is a strong metaphor for self initiation. Could it be that a future self had reached back to his past to help initiate his former self? Now there's time paradox!

I returned to the world and closed the magical temple in due form but even in the aftermath of the superconscious contact, I felt as if I'd just been through a hellish experience. Deep down in my psyche, I really must have been overwhelmed by the revealed energies. Something about that nuclear blast intensity whirlwind devastates me to a great degree. Eating dinner has helped to balance me in mind and body. The analysis of today's contact should reveal remarkable truths in the coming days. I hope that this vision will set me on the road to being able to not only conquer my fear of this profound Superlative force but also to learn how to harness it for my Will and my magick.

ADOEOET – Jupiter Senior of Fire
 Sunday, August 31, 2003

ADOEOET, Jupiter Senior of Fire, has been successfully evoked in due form. I have experienced another revolution of consciousness, another complete transformation of being both internal and external. It used to be that an entire tablet of initiatory angels had to be evoked fully, culminating in the revelation of the King, to achieve this complete a leap in transcendence. Now, with Fire, every angel has yielded a remarkable, earth shattering, life altering initiation, beyond imagination and perhaps, beyond the universe. Such is the exploration of cosmic transcendence, transcendent impersonal consciousness.

The new perfection was felt at the very outset of this working. I achieved a profound degree of clarity and intensity with all the visualizations involved in the opening ceremonies. All of my prior efforts in projecting hyperdimensional and transdimensional magical images and opening up inner plane spaces to hold them had reached an ideal issue. The composite red and blue hexagrams drawn during purification and consecration emanated the energy of the Golden Dawn tradition, filling my magical workspace with an atmosphere of holiness which could only have come from the egregore of the True and Invisible Order. I hadn't felt this type of beatitude since my days in a Thelemic oriented Golden Dawn style order. For the first time, my personal magick had matched the power and glory of that magnificent group establishment. I had created a true temple of Golden Dawn style magick as an emissary of the True and Invisible Order. My Work has been truly blessed and justified in perfection.

The Jupiter Senior of Fire emerged at every point of my vision space, the surrounding physical space, my innermost being, and the outermost extent of my holoprojections, complete at each spot and yet one continuous hyperdimensional, all encompassing person throughout. The angel appeared as an enormous, stately, old man with long, white, curly hair and beard. He called me forth by my magical name, Ebelijah, and told me to learn the mystery not yet revealed. All along, this mystery had been implied in all that had gone before but never overtly shown. Now, it was to be revealed at last.

The angel led me forward into vision with a gentle impetus from all around me and beneath me. His titan hand gestured toward an object floating in space that turned out to be a golden rose of many petals. It shown with brilliance like the sun, so that I could barely look at it.¹⁰

ADOEOET said in a thunderous voice, “Behold the great mystery that has now been revealed. It is the Rose of Gold, the transcendence beyond the ultimate transcendence. Come and take up this Rose and fulfill the destiny of humanity.”

I took the Rose in my hand and instinctively placed it on my forehead, in my brow chakra. My entire aura became supercharged with solar golden radiance but I was not overwhelmed by the energy. My inner and outer spaces became suffused with this glow, interpenetrating the interdimensional plenum that was the Senior’s presence. I felt/saw a great golden ring expand outward from my forehead to an extreme distance, both in vision space and out from my physical body, as well as all the dimensions in between. This hyperdimensional, transdimensional band carried along my sense of self as it reached through the barriers that hold existence together. By a consciously chosen act, I had taken another auric symbol unto myself and been transformed into a direct channel of the force that descends into the realm of normal space and time from the ultimate transcendence to constitute all mind, matter, and experience. The great solar golden Rose was blooming into wondrous life upon my crosslike body to lighten all the worlds of verging potential.¹¹

Then, the scene grew very dim and even the space surrounding my body relaxed in intensity. I found myself in a dull, grayish black area pervaded by a sense of imminent potential emergence. Once again, a thick, dark veil was covering me after a transcendent revelation of brilliant light. All went quiet for a while as I floated bodiless in a null space.

Then, a circle of light appeared before my mind's eye. A long series of rapidly shifting images were flashing from inside it, including the Sun-Rose glow I just saw.

The booming voice of ADOEOET came to me from all directions and said, "Behold how anything perceived is necessarily within oneself. All experience is an internal dialog but the self is always beyond it, encompassing it. There is no way to reach outside oneself since one is always beyond the perception of events. Be one, then, with that which brings perception to the mind. Merge with vergence."

I then understood that the vision space around me was the vergence field, that cosmic focusing of potential from which all actuality directly emerges. I knew myself to be the connection between vergence and emergence, the cosmic - holistic principle that is omnipresent in all experience and phenomena. All the whirls and rushing of the mind were just so much chaos before my true being, not of me at all. I am entirely beyond all such operations, aloof, alone. I am the core of the Solar-Phallus, the secret of all human life, yet, outside it, containing it. I was contained by what I contain, outside and inside at once. This was a completely new mode of consciousness, different than any mere expansion of awareness, a fusion of vergence and emergence, potential and actuality. I was one with the cosmic inspirer.

Several jolts of anxiety shot through my body as I maintained this new state of being.¹² I asked ADOEOET to show me the cause of the fear. The new sense of inside – outside wonder became clearer to me and I asserted this as my true and proper state of being. All fear dissolved at once. Such was the angel's wordless answer. I remained in this cosmic, transcendent unity for some time longer but nothing new occurred, so I exited the vision and closed the magical temple.

It is the destiny of all humanity to realize their true natures as cosmic principles of emerging life potentials, outside the world and beyond the experience of sense perceptions and mental processes. I have realized this step forward, which will make it easier for others to do the same. The circle of light wherein all my incarnate experiences continually flash in confusion is the Wheel of Samsara. The true nature of consciousness is ultimately independent of such chaos. The roar of the mind, which I noticed for the first time, having finally reached beyond it, is merely so much material energetic complexity. The source of life's becoming belongs to a different realm. Life and death are simply turns in the wheel of material emergence of biological processes, the wheel of the Gunas.¹³ Body consciousness wants to maintain the psyche's attachment to it. Rising beyond this limited state of attachment to foreign processes can be frightening at first. It scared me. However, acceptance of the truth yields liberation from all fears and their causes, realizing a state of pure ease. Only the wholeness of what is, is real, the ocean of pure being.

ARINNAP – Saturn Senior of Fire
 Sunday, September 28, 2003

ARINNAP, Saturn Senior of Fire, has been evoked in due form. The temple setup and opening were even more powerful and clear than before, the inner plane temple setting unfolding with more complex dimensionality than ever. This particular expression of my deep psyche is becoming ever more integrated with my magically enhanced vision reality. The sense of holiness and transcendence were immediate and effective in providing a fitting backdrop for my ceremonial evocations.

Upon entering vision, I perceived my inner plane identity as the Wizard Ebelijah surrounding me in the form of the eighth chakra, the great lotus wherein I exist as the stamen of the flower. The ancient face and body of the great wizard appeared on each petal while simultaneously encompassing the whole lotus as one continuous being. This was my whole Self complex, projected from that great source being whose head was constituted by my entire vision body. The angel ARINNAP appeared before the three expressions of me, MegaSelf, self, and projection, as a young man with thick, black, curly hair and beard. The Senior called me forth by my incarnate name and my inner plane name, summoning the fully unfolded three-in-one self complex to his reality. We stood together in the infinite starry space of Nuit and partook of the consciousness of the continuity of existence, all space and time and experience, as never ending flow and field.¹⁴ The ecstasy came from all the elements of vision at once, with myself as a small part in the overall joy.

“Come to the distant star.” said the great angel, pointing out to the myriads of stars that surrounded us, splashes from the milk of the paps of Nuit and the spate of ejaculation from the great Serpent Hadit.

I tried to move toward the star pointed to, instantly feeling a deep affinity for the distant glittering point, but it moved farther away the more I strove to reach it. The angel said that the distant star is who I truly am, the one star of all the stars from which I emerge. I relaxed and allowed my sense of unity with the special star to grow and suddenly, it rushed up and collided with me with enormous force. All the spaces and images and dimensions around me erupted with brilliant white fire, every spot a blazing sun. I felt my field of self blown all over the universe to join in every part of the body of Nuit in even greater wholeness and ecstasy than before. My psyche emerged in every twinkle and shine of every star, every expanse of dark emptiness, every moment and event.

The angel waved his hand and a great throne appeared in the midst of the stellar intensity. I sat down on this throne and ARINNAP placed a dark blue circlet on my head. The golden rose that I'd placed on my forehead in the previous vision moved on top of the circlet and affixed itself in place, still shining as before. The Senior said that this throne was at once made of gold and brass.¹⁵ Then, a small serpent head emerged from the center of the golden rose to complete an Egyptian style crown. The priest of the Gnostic Catholic Church wears this crown during Mass. The heart girt with the serpent and the egg surrounded by a serpent were ideas that relate to this symbolism.¹⁶

I remained like this for some time, feeling that my whole self was undergoing truly amazing transformations but I could only perceive their dimmest echoes. Eventually, ARINNAP told me to return to the world so I exited the trance and closed the magical temple in due form. My every action and word seemed clothed with holiness.

Thus, I've now been confirmed in a high celestial office, at one with the most transcendent natures and the earthiest experience. A Priest/Wizard crown has been bestowed on me in preparation for the coming apex of this Enochian operation, the evocation of the great King of Fire. I still feel the reverberations of that stellar impact. The Path of Thelema leads truly to beyond the beyond.

Later that night...

I've become aware of my whole Self more clearly than ever before. The stars in my visions are simply so many focuses of Self's attention. I no longer perceive myself to be the center of things but rather one among many intelligences projected by this master of being. This source of consciousness is pure impersonal being, the inspirer of emergence, truly Saturnian in nature. This state of impersonality is what the Fire King tried to introduce me to during my first evocation of him but wasn't quite able to succeed. This time, he'll be free to take me further.

All is brilliant light in the mind of the Whole. It appears as darkness to a point consciousness still obsessed with its own centrality. Embracing its relative and common nature allows a clearer perception of the impersonal being as pure light, of a nature so far beyond the little point projection. The broader context yields understanding of True Will.

EDLPRNAA – King of Fire
Friday, November 28, 2003

EDLPRNAA, Great King of the South and Fire, has been evoked in due form. This was by far my greatest magical working and, happily, I am not overwhelmed by the most extreme energies generated by this most wondrous experience.

I am completely transformed by the grand initiation, not only in psychic functioning but also in outlook and understanding. With this ultimate connection, my vision transcended time itself.¹⁷ I now feel true peace, having achieved such power, love, and wisdom.

Upon entering vision I saw a field of red tetrahedral flames emerging smoothly out of a black background of space. Then, I heard a high pitched roar and saw steadily flowing streams of particulate energy explode everywhere in a great whirlwind of power. The torrent soon quickened to an extreme degree, changing color from red to the brilliant blue of the hottest possible fire. The roar sounded continuously as these flames engulfed me, sending an extreme rush through every nerve in my body. My mind and aura were supercharged as never before, surpassing even the Superlative in intensity. I was able to withstand the onslaught of this psychic nuclear blast as it enveloped every fiber and energy of my being at all levels. The angels had trained me well for this supreme ordeal of quickening.

The inner and outer blazing blue flames resolved themselves before my dazzled mind's eye into none other than the Nighthawk, first seen in a profound and mysterious spontaneous vision I had in 1986, seventeen years before, and hinted at during my evocation of the Air King.¹⁸ He was hyperdimensionally huge, filling every partial and completely unfolded space, from inside the deepest recesses of my mind, out to the world around me, and beyond to the farthest horizon. His outstretched wings extended toward me and away from me at the same time, both near and far. This creature of pure Fire was exactly that which had shown itself to me seventeen years ago but was now close and in full communion with me¹⁹. His roaring caw had a much lower pitch than before, commensurate with his expanded size. This was EDLPRNAA, the greatest King of the Southern Watchtower and the element of Fire.

In a booming voice that sounded above the continuous hawk roar, the King told me to be a master of destiny, to own and affirm my life in all its circumstances. Every event must be thought of as an act of True Will and not as an unavoidable occurrence. I am never to think of myself as a helpless victim of the world around me, a slave to the appearances of life on earth. To be a real magician, I must affirm even the greatest trials and dangers as completely in accord with my True Will and not disasters tragically suffered in a harsh, unfair reality. I and the universe of space and time, events and experiences, are one.

He told me to look outward in my mind and I saw the tetrahedral red flame currents in the black space that appeared at the beginning of this vision. Beyond this, I beheld my own face, interpenetrating everything and the nothing out of which it emerges. I am one in All-in-all, the master of every inner becoming and life circumstance. I am the ubiquitous principle of all emergence patterns, the stable archetype by which all multiplicity derives. I am the All-State in which every cell, thought, feeling, and energy projection is connected.²⁰ I am one with that wholeness out of which all matter, energy, and consciousness emerge. All as each and every am I, whole and part, a true holographic existence. I am truly a focus of cosmic attention and supercosmic intent, center of the intersection of the life wave and the destiny wave which crisscross the fractal web of spacetime, its vergence field, and its null basis. I am the strange attractor and its emergent order.²¹

I remained in this superconnected and holistic beatitude, a master of destiny, for a long time but then the King told me that the vision was finished. I returned to the world of discrete events and closed the magical temple in due form. Now, I feel refreshed, remade, at ease, and fulfilled completely, without any ill aftereffects.

Thus, I've produced the paradox of my own magical becoming, unexpectedly called to the Great Work that night long ago, before ever practicing any form of occultism but having read about it for a few years. Now, I called forth what called me forth, then and now, uniting the paradoxical impulse of destiny with today's climactic revelation. This time warping influence was so powerful that two moments, seventeen years apart, were brought together. I live in time paradox, a future past of wonder in the mundane, workaday world of twenty-first century America. The new ultimate transcendence will now unfold in my life and mind as I work my job each day during the week. Magick and normality coexist in an experience where the subtlest potential and motivation are firmly united with the most overt and predictable circumstance. Fusion of opposites reveals beyond the beyond.

CHAPTER XII

VISIONS OF THE GREAT TABLET OF UNION

SECOND ROUND

RMTO – Earth of Spirit
Sunday, February 15, 2004

RMTO, Earth of Spirit angel of the Tablet of Union, has been evoked in due form. I decided to continue to employ the hexagram ritual in preparation to evoke these angels of the Tablet of Union in order to provide a sense of continuity of practice and to maintain the level of intensity developed with it. My conjurations are more closely linked in this way.

I was hit with a sudden intense burst of ecstasy just before setting up the magical temple, an immediate paradoxical future-connect to the evocation to come. These time shifts are bound to occur more frequently and powerfully now that the great King of Fire has uplifted me to the metatime state. I was able to recover from this episode of ecstatic paradox and assembled the magical temple with the usual detail.

The actual contact with this angel turned out to be gentler than the initial time shifted burst. Perhaps, the ecstasy was more than my consciousness could register, causing me to filter the intensity to a more muted level. In any case, my vision unfolded before me as the vast cosmic space with every scale of size and every partial dimension expressed with crystal clarity. Every point therein was luminous with all the most brilliant colors imaginable. Spiral patterns surrounded and flowed through each, layer upon layer of focus and flow in a ubiquitous self referential process. Here was physical space represented in its totality, one in All as One, an interconnected holographic plenum. The global connectedness in this trance was similar to that experienced during that greatest of visions with the King of Fire but the flow of becoming lacked that scintillating quality of the most active of elements. Earth of Spirit had a stable quality in the midst of its continuous functioning, a true metalevel of physicality.

Out of this ecstatic, holistic joy unfolded a giant head bathed in yellow light, whose facial expression was one of purest ecstasy. The head was of an old man with the usual long, white, curly hair and beard of an angel, very neatly quaffed and symmetrical. RMTO told me that there is perfect connection in the universe. A change to the whole system is instantly reflected in every point therein, all microcosms in and of themselves, and any change to any point is immediately emulated by every other, as well as the whole field.¹

I partook of the joy of this perfect integration on all scales of size and sets of dimensions and gazed at the yellow lighted head of RMTO.² I holoprojected my Will into the plenum and emerged wispy streams of yellow intelligence that joined in the continuous tapestry of interconnection.

RMTO bestowed his blessing and initiation on me then. I felt my entire being open in a more complete way than ever before. The receiving was so total that there was nothing left of me but a bubble of concentrated becoming, in which the whole of the universe of Spirit focused itself. Every nerve and spark of individual consciousness was open to this transcendence and so transformed thereby into another kind of life, another kind of being. I abode in this pure, ecstatic beatitude for some time as a new species of consciousness. Giving the angel license to depart, I closed the temple with the same old body but controlled by a new mind. Every thought seemed like a new universe. Every feeling was a novel creation. Every second of perceived time was a revelation of wonder. Eventually, a shadow of normalcy took hold of my concrete mind so that I could continue my mundane existence, but the overall transformation was permanent.

The lessons of this profound initiation manifested all at once as complete chains of ideas and understanding in my mind. To transform personal consciousness is to change the entirety of existence, if that change is complete enough. Magick demands that the entire psyche be wielded as one complete whole, not the slightest trace of psychic energy left out. Only this can make a holoprojection powerful enough to emerge a highly unlikely order in the surrounding world of chaos and entropy. The element of Spirit is the quintessential holistic integration that makes magick possible. My improved understanding, developed during this second round of Watchtower evocations, will help me to realize this metalevel of Spirit more completely than before. I will be able to understand the Tablet of Union angels far better this way and finally complete this system of initiation in perfection. Practical material magical work may follow.

XCAI – Air of Spirit
 Sunday, March 28, 2004

XCAI, Air of Spirit angel of the Tablet of Union, has been evoked in due form. He appeared as a swirl of fiery white light and evoked me as well. We then united to achieve a full circuit of interdimensional paradoxical consciousness. My first clear vision was of the anticosmos of white space and black stars, just as in my first evocation of XCAI. Soon, the black suns that were submergences³ in this reality dissolved into the background whiteness. Tremendous surges of brilliant white energy then began coursing through this antispacetime. White flames erupted from the power flow, causing infinite movement throughout. The whole of this universe had become alive.⁴

A great angel head unfolded within the brilliant white cosmic scale conflagration, a truly transscale and hyperdimensional manifestation. His was the classic appearance, with white hair and beard, perhaps the same angel as RMT0 but with a slightly different aspect. The nature of Spirit is unity and the Tablet of Union lacks the clear differentiation of the Watchtowers. This uniformity is bound to be reflected in the angels of this tablet.

XCAI told me to partake of the mystery of joy, the mystery beyond the universe. I felt myself unfolding continually along with the Spirit angel as one comprehensive becoming. My aura opened under the influence of the vision. Especially my heart chakra expanded beyond the confines of my physical body. The other auric lotus wheels expanded as well but to a lesser extent, all except my crown center. This grandest of power processes hadn't reached full development yet. Transdimensional curls of white fire, the zero point energy seen in my vision of the Luna Senior of Fire, poured through the open portal of my psychic/auric unfoldment to surround my body and flood the magical temple. I'd become a source/focus of supercosmic emergent unfoldment.

I asked XCAI about the crossover point between the two universes, where submergence meets emergence. All the brilliance and fiery flow of my anticosmic vision darkened into a dim, twilit scene. Every point therein was charged with extreme power but was not luminous. The energy therein was potential but closer to actualization than in normal space, a more direct vergence. All the while, the zero point energy whirls continued to flow through the wide open gate of my aura and nervous system into the magical temple.

I came to realize that union with my metalevel angelic holoprojection had completed my metapsychic circuit. XCAI had raised me to the state of supercosmic transcendence, the true source of Will. The whole spectrum of purpose, from cosmic intent to the individual True Will of every living system, derives from this ultimate beyond, creating and created by all manifestation. All the myriads of relationships which bind together matter and energy into bodies and intelligences are united here. Transcendence is the source of coherence. The novel states of complexity which develop out of the background possibility of the cosmos shape this All-State by bringing it into greater connectedness with the physical world.

The holomovement is quickened into more intense life.

This was the full unfoldment of transcendent impersonal consciousness that had eluded me during my first round of Enochian Watchtower evocations. I'd finally gained sufficient initiation and magical contact with the subtler states of being to become open enough to reach the source of sources, the inspirer of all action and purpose. My psyche and aura had become complex and connected enough to channel the All-State directly. The universe of my existence had been transformed into something new.

With this grand realization, I exited vision, banished, and closed in due form. I remain as an open gate, although the zero point energy is no longer flowing through me. The interdimensional lotus wheel of my being has flowered to receive inspiration from a new level of life under the blessing and initiation of XCAI.

Later that night...

It struck me as strange that the evocation of the Air of Spirit angel revealed such a fiery and Will oriented vision. After much contemplation, I realized that the element of Active Spirit is a highly energetic principle, just as Passive Spirit is stable in its holistic connectedness, a truth revealed by the Earth of Spirit angel. It is with great insight that the elements of Fire and Spirit are attributed to the same Path of Shin on the Tree of Life. The fires in today's vision were expressions of the hyperdimensional motion of a supercosmic principle that creates and sustains everything in existence. This reality could only appear as brilliant white flowing flames. The far reaching opening of my psyche and aura to the cosmic transcendence, especially at my heart center, is a trance of Tiphareth and corresponds to the nature of Air of Spirit. No doubt, what lay ahead with the higher elemental aspects of Spirit will echo these truths on an even more sublime and profound level.

AONT – Water of Spirit
Sunday, June 13, 2004

AONT, Water of Spirit angel of the Tablet of Union, has been evoked to wondrous effect. I now feel overwhelmed with a sense of joy and expansion which I've never known before. The Enochian system of magick never fails to yield ever greater peak experiences, ever more wondrous and intense emergences of spiritual transcendence and power. Dee and Kelly were in touch with something far beyond their imaginations, a distant future connect paradox of unlimited initiatory and transformative acceleration. This paradox reached even to today's temple opening. The background space surrounding my inner plane temple was quickened into the white flame cosmos revealed during my last evocation. My ceremonies were able to form a pocket of order and coherence in this blazing maelstrom, a focusing of supercosmic torrent into a sensible projection. It is uttermost wonder how each peak experience serves as the backdrop for the next, each superconscious projection leaping forwards as an entire aeon of cosmic and human unfoldment. As I accelerate evolutionarily, I can accelerate ever faster.

AONT appeared from out of the brilliant white, flooding flames surrounding my temple as a complete male figure of indeterminate age, both young and old, with fluffy white hair and beard, like clouds. He called me forth and I joined him out among the fires of joy. Streams of orange and yellow particles⁵, like tiny confetti, began upwelling in great spirals all around us. In their movements were purest joy and ecstasy. The angel told me to receive from all, yet be one.

Here was the Elixir of Life. Mix gold with gold and silver or electrum magicum and channel this through the processes of emergent order, the totality of the psyche at all levels, to confect the Philosopher's Stone. From this, generate the Elixir of unlimited Life. I felt my nerves open up to receive these streams of orange and yellow life. They were transmuted to purest gold, every last one. Receive from all, yet be one.

A greater sense of wholeness of reality took shape in my mind that remains with me still. A new complexity of totality emerged from my enhanced and transmuted nervous system, exciting me with new sensations of transcendence and interconnectedness. A greater metalevel had been evolved. AONT told me to take this into my heart, into my mind, and into my soul. My ecstasy developed into a sense of supreme religious beatitude and holiness, the likes of which were first revealed to me during my Water angel evocations of this round. Now, however, the energy was purified and rarified and very bright. Here was pure spirituality, devoid of any doctrine or belief, direct connection to that which religion can only hint at. Be all, and yet one emerged pure godhead in heart, mind, and soul.⁶ Emergence and the power behind it are holy and worthy of most heartfelt love.

The vision space became filled with universe bubbles similar to the one I'd become in response to RMTO's blessing. They were each a complete reality, a complete course of evolution of matter and energy in space and time. Yet, each was a part of the Limitless Light of the true source of existence and the potential thereof. These were my coherent holoprojections in this state of ultimate transcendence.

The vision was completed so I gave AONT license to depart, knowing absolutely that I was he and he was I. Mine is the flow of orange and yellow essences that transform me and uplift me to the next beyond. The closing was somewhat difficult, with so much supercharged psychic energy flooding my aura. What a brilliant success in magick this whole course has been. Much more will unfold from me in time to come.

PAAM – Fire of Spirit
Sunday, August 8, 2004

PAAM, Fire of Spirit angel of the Tablet of Union, has been evoked to truly wondrous effect. It's moments like these that make life worthwhile, which make existence justified. Once again, my inner being and the universe in which I live have been transformed.

The vision began in darkness, with a red pentagram far off in the distance. Then, from behind me came a deep, gruff voice that said, "Ha! You have missed the angel. I am Satan and you have got me!"⁷

He popped out from behind me on my left side, all grizzled and black, a bestial human like figure. I instantly recognized him as an aspect of myself, having met this negative projection in other visions.

I said to him, “I know you, Satan, and I’m not afraid.⁸ Come with me and partake with me of the blessing of the angel, PAAM, you, your servitors, and your servitors’ servitors, everyone. Let no one be left behind.”

A great burst of all encompassing, impersonal love entered my heart and I knew then that this test had been passed successfully.

The pentagram in the distance came to me then and entered my vision body, filling every nerve with its glorious supercosmic presence. My limbs were the lines of this great star of five. My entire being had been integrated into perfectly proportional beauty (beatitude). This supreme state of transcendence called an even greater supercosmic response as a milky white ray of pure light entered my head from infinitely high above me. Every atom, every spark, was imbued with pure and perfect love. The ecstasy became overwhelming as this milk from the ultimate transcendence pushed through every resistance to its flow through my every state and focus of consciousness. I withstood the joy and grace and drank in the love as much as possible with my all and each.

A voice of beauty came to me and said, “Accept the Milk of the Stars and shine it to all the worlds.”

I knew then that the Fire of Spirit angel, PAAM, was with me, bestowing on me his blessing and initiation. I bade all the worlds of which I am the nexus to receive the Milk of the Stars and transmit it throughout. I am the Gate connecting many worlds and I weave my consciousness with alternate realities. I am also the Gatekeeper, a personality that guides the workings of the Gate who I am.⁹

Suddenly, a great and thickly cloudy darkness erupted out of me, shooting far above my head. A deep and menacing voice said, "I am the darkness and evil that always accompanies the Light. I am its inescapable correlate. There is no Good where I am not."¹⁰

I accepted and embraced the rising darkness and continued to drink in the descending light. A hexagram formed over me, made up of a white ascending triangle and a black descending triangle. These colors were opposite to the directions of the flow of forces focusing on my vision presence and so indicated a reversal of the original relationship. The highest and the lowest aspects of my psyche had melded to generate a new complexity of holographic connectivity. This new internal reality was expressed by yet another magical figure which had been permanently impressed into my aura, just like the red pentagram described above. I took an oath then to always bring together the worlds, good, evil, or indifferent, in perfect harmony, to bestow the blessing of the Milk of the Stars. Rejection of any kind was now contrary to my spirituality and my magical formula.

The element of Fire has a dark, evil side that cannot be escaped. The principle of subconscious inversion of the meaning of symbols is clearly operative here. So many of the dream symbols reported in the annals of psychology represent the opposite of their obvious meaning. Often, the appearance of a little girl or a small man indicates the presence of the Higher Self. The ultimate truth behind such fusions of opposite meanings is beyond the rational mind and pertains to a metalevel of consciousness. Light and darkness, good and evil, love and hate, are all two sides of the same transcendent coin. This metalevel understanding uplifts one from the obsession with culture and sectarian attachment. Truth may be more directly apprehended. In this way may I, the Gate, project my Will to my surroundings to emerge higher order in accordance therewith.

I remained in this beatific ecstasy for some time, experiencing the fullness of complete being. Then, I called upon PAAM to show himself and he appeared in the center of a giant black hexagram as a black upright tau cross.¹¹ His dark bearded face was on the left side of the vertical bar. His expression was one of pure peace and fulfillment. From this, I understood that the force of creation was the force of evolution and the inspirer of spiritual enlightenment. It is magick in its purest form.

Nothing else was revealed in this vision so I gave the angel license to depart, banished, and closed the magical temple in due form. Underlying all my ritual actions was the certitude that I remain the focus of and emanator to the worlds. Thus is the action of Fire in its most sublime form.

EHNB – Spirit of Spirit
Saturday, October 9, 2004

I have evoked EHNB, Spirit of Spirit angel of the Tablet of Union, to excellent effect, thus completing this second round of elemental Watchtower evocations and crowing five and a half years of Work. Now I have completed and fulfilled what was done only partially during the first round. More than this, all the lessons and processes initiated during my time with the magical orders have reached a climax in this achievement. The Path of the Enochian angels is realized.

The vision began in total darkness, the black of passive Spirit. The bodiless voice of EHNB came rolling through the vision space, calling me forth, and proclaiming me as having fulfilled the evocation of the Watchtowers. He congratulated me for having come this far as I moved further into the vision. I beheld a dim light off in the distance and moved towards it, as it did towards me. It grew brighter as we drew closer and finally resolved into a blazing white rose of forty-nine petals. The angel bade me to sit in the center of it, as on a throne of angelic rulership. I did so and was surrounded by wavy petals that shimmered with the light of the ultimate eighth chakra.

The background space of the vision began to lighten and before me appeared another white rose, but smaller and with fewer petals. It began to fall into and through itself, each white petal rolling along the inside and outside of the flower. Then, the head of the angel EHNB unfurled out of this complex circulation made of pure, white light. He declared that I was a Lord of the Angels of the elemental Watchtowers and so was in full command of all the entities therein, including the four Kings. I felt the power and control bestowed by this coronation. All the magical devices that had been impressed into my aura intensified and resonated in perfect harmony. The Serpent Crown around my head vibrated with this energy. All the powers and contacts that had been developed throughout my Enochian magical Work, especially the nuclear blast intensity Key of the Superlative, came to focus in one all encompassing integration. The entire vision came to shine with brilliant white light.

EHNB's head began to spin, and it unfolded into a ten pointed star. He said, "Behold how the Ten is the entire universe but also merely the pendant and outcome of all before it. So let all be one as a whole and in every part thereof.”¹²

I felt my being expand throughout the inner cosmos of brilliance, as the whole and in every point therein, emerging in every scale of size and form. Angels big and small began appearing all over the place. The entire concourse of the Watchtowers was soon arrayed before me, from the great Kings to the tiniest servients.¹³ I gazed at their amassed wonder as I sat on my rose throne.

“Declare your Word, oh Lord of the Angels, and bring forth your Will through these angels,” said EHNB, now having fully appeared, far larger even than the Kings to express his ultimate transcendent station.

I declared my Word to be “Futiquity,” the simplest of ultimate expressions of what my intensions are in my life, to encourage the realization of the awesome futuristic potential revealed to humanity in this grand new age.

I commanded the angels of my magical projections to unfold this Will in all the worlds of vision, to fulfill the new consciousness of the Aeon of Horus. The angels entered into complex whirling, spiraling movements to emerge my creative impulse in their reality. I felt the power of my authority over this concourse that I’d earned through my many angelic initiations, a vital part of any phenomenological magick. My Word echoed throughout the vision space, carried by my ubiquitous presence in every scale of size and form and yet transcendent to all. This was the metalevel of my magick, a perfect fulfillment of all my personal Work as well as everything achieved through the initiatory orders in which I’d participated. Ever increasing power coursed through my physical body from head to foot, flooding every nerve and cell in a torrent of passion. Kundalini flows downward when used for magical projection.

I easily adjusted to this totality power and knew that I'd come as far in transformation as this regimen of magick could take me. The angelic power and initiation had been mastered. Now, I was at the controlling metalevel as a Lord of the Angels. My aura is fully charged, functioning, and integrated. I am ready to work confidently with the lesser Kerubic and Servient angels of the subquadrants of the elemental Watchtowers. Geoffrey James' book, "The Enochian Magick of Dr. John Dee," has clear instructions on how to do this work.

Fully satisfied with the vision and the level of mastery achieved, I gave the concourse and EHNB license to depart. I closed the magical temple in a state of calm, controlled ecstasy, fully confident as a Lord of the Angels, and looking forward to practicing new Enochian systems of magick.

CHAPTER XIII

IN CONCLUSION

My journey through the Enochian Watchtowers is complete and yet there is so much more to do. The angelic superconscious projections have taken me through the heights and depths of my mind and unveiled the human collective consciousness. It proved to be the source of all human destinies and wisdom as well as the repository of all human experience and knowledge. Even this turned out to be but a gateway to a far greater reality beyond anything recognizable as human. The spiral staircase through the various cosmic states of being led me to what is outside space and time, a megaverse of supercosmic transcendence that is the source of all True Will. Now my psyche stands as a complex hyperdimensional gateway connecting the most impersonal realms to my immediate material awareness of life on earth. I feel the ecstatic infinitude of the continuity of existence every second, although this is usually in the background of my normal waking consciousness. I still feel pain and anguish when troublesome circumstances arise but underlying every emotional state is a background of pure joy, peace profound.

The metalevel of evolution that is the hallmark of the new Aeon of Horus is a constant reality for me.

The future holds much more exploration and realization along the transcendent Path. Thorough practice with the Enochian version of “Liber Samekh” promises to take me farther in psychic and metapsychic integration, extending the reach of my magical holoprojections ever further into the world of matter. Scores of angels in the subquadrants of the Watchtower tablets await summoning to give their particular blessings. The Bonorum Tablets of the Heptarchia promise to reveal the ultimate transcendence on a planetary level, far beyond the terrestrial elements. An even greater Work lay ahead in the thirty aethyrs that brought Aleister Crowley beyond the Abyss to his ultimate destiny. The joy of magick is in its unlimited vistas. Let all who Will engage this Path. It is the birthright of all the new children of the stars.

ON THE DIVISIONS AND COLOR SCHEMES OF THE ENOCHIAN TABLETS

Each of the four elemental tablets of the Enochian magical system is divided into four quadrants, representing the subelements. For example, the tablet of elemental Earth is divided into the Earth of Earth quadrant, the Air of Earth quadrant, the Water of Earth quadrant, and the Fire of Earth quadrant. These divisions are separated by a great cross consisting of one row of twelve squares and two columns of thirteen squares each. The angelic names of the six Seniors and the King are taken from this tablet wide cross while names of the various subelemental angels may be found in the four areas bordered by it. Within each quadrant there is a smaller cross of five squares by six. Four squares are to be found above the cross and sixteen below it. Overall, there are 188 angelic powers encoded on the tablets.

The squares of each tablet are colored based on the elemental and subelemental attributions. The central great cross as well as the cross in each quadrant has the spirit colors of black on white. The other squares in the quadrants have the color of the element of the tablet for their background while the letters thereon have the color of the subelement. In those cases where the element of the quadrant is the same as the element of the tablet, the letters have the complimentary color. See the table below for these correspondences.

ELEMENT	COLOR	COMPLIMENTARY COLOR	POSITION ON TABLET
Spirit	White	Black	All Crosses on the Tablets
Fire	Red	Green	Lower Right
Water	Blue	Orange	Upper Right
Air	Yellow	Violet	Upper Left
Earth	Black	White	Lower Left

For example, the squares of the Air of Fire quadrant have a background color of red with yellow letters. The squares of the Water of Water quadrant have a background color of blue with orange letters. This color scheme gives each tablet a vibrant quality that aids in magical exaltation.

The Tablet of Union consists of four rows and five columns and represents the element of Spirit as a whole. Each row has the letters of a name of Spirit that rules over one of the four other elements. Thus, the background color for the entire tablet is white while the letters have the color of the element over which they control. The columns of this tablet spell the names of five angels which take after the five subelements of Spirit. These are listed along with the names of the Seniors and Kings in the appendix on the breakdown of the angelic names on the tablets.

Note on Pronunciation:

There are two main schools of thought on pronunciation of Enochian names. One is to pronounce them as if they were English words and the other is to vibrate each letter of the names as a whole syllable. John Dee and various magicians such as the author of this book have used the former method, whereas those trained in the Golden Dawn system of magick have used the latter method. The suggested pronunciations given in the above tables use English language rules. Specifically, combinations of ‘A’ and ‘O’ are pronounced like ‘Aou,’ as in house. The ‘AI’ combination is pronounced like ‘Ahee,’ as in by. Generally, follow a consonant with the vowel that makes it sound appealing. The most important consideration is that these magical names flow comfortably and rhythmically for maximum dramatic effect during conjuration. The Enochian language is magical only to the point where it opens the psyche to its source in transcendent reality.

indicated in the above diagram. In addition to these angel names, there is the name of an elemental King for each tablet. Tracing a spiral around the central two squares of the Great Cross may derive these eight lettered magical words. Start with the fifth square from the left as the first letter. Trace one row up and one column to the right to get the second letter. Trace one column to the right for the third letter. Trace one row down and one column to the right for the fourth letter. Trace one row down and one column to the left for the fifth letter. Trace one column to the left for the sixth letter. Trace one row up for the seventh letter. Finally, trace one column to the right for the eighth letter. This spiraling motion indicates a force transcendent to the Seniors as well as all the other angels of the tablet. Like many other eight lettered magical words, the angelic names of the Kings of the Watchtowers generate a fundamental force of creation that underlies all elemental and planetary forces. Study the Masonic Royal Arch formula for a clear example of this concept. For the purposes of attributing planets to these angels, use Sol for the Kings.

ENOCHIAN TEMPLE SETUP AND EVOCATION CEREMONY

Preparation:

Set up a double cubed Altar in the middle of a square or rectangular room. Place a pedestal in the center of each wall, marking out the four quarters of existence. Each direction is infinite and reaches into a higher than physical world. The reaches of infinity focus on the central altar from the east, south, west, north, above, and below. Thus, the altar is the center of the universe, the point of balance from which any energy may be launched to cause any effect anywhere.

Each pedestal marks the nature of its quarter, indicating the frequency of magical power emanating from that particular infinity. These four currents are symbolized by the four elements of classical Greek science: Air, Fire, Water, and Earth. Mark the nature of Air in the east by placing an emblem of that which rules the airy nature, such as the Angelic Air Tablet. Place a white votive candle in front of the tablet to light the darkling, mysterious abyss of the east. Place an emblem of the element itself with the candle, such as a hand fan or rose. Place the Angelic Spirit Tablet, called the Tablet of Union, in the far east raised above the other tablets.

In the south, place the symbols of Fire: the Angelic Fire Tablet, a white votive, and a red lamp, red candle, or candle in a red holder. In the west, place the symbols of Water: the Angelic Water Tablet, a white votive, and a cup or bowl of pure water. In the north, place the symbols of Earth: the Angelic Earth Tablet, a white votive, and a plate of salt.

Let the Altar, symbolizing the consciousness of the magician, center of his/her universe, be covered with a black cloth draping down on all sides to touch the floor or painted black. Place the four elemental weapons on top of the Altar, answering to the elemental natures of the quarters. Thus, place the Air Dagger on the eastern side of the altar, place the Fire Wand on the southern side, place the Water Cup on the western side, and place the Earth Pentacle on the northern side. In the center, the center of All, place a flask of fragrant Oil, symbolizing the ubiquitous element of Spirit. Oil of cinnamon or Abramelin oil is appropriate. A favored Holy Book may be placed underneath the flask if desired. In this way, the magician is expressed as a microcosm, an entire universe in miniature, whose several natures correspond to the forces of creation.

Place a Censor on the southern side of the Altar or the southern pedestal as desired, burning frankincense and myrrh or incense of Abramelin. Place the Bell at any convenient spot. Embellish the Altar with crystals, and black, white, or multicolored tapers, etc.

Prepare the water in the Cup on the altar by dropping a few particles of salt into it and say, "May the salt of Earth admonish the Waters to bear the virtue of the Great Sea."

Astral Temple Visualization and Auric Preparation:

Take three deep breaths to calm your mood and focus your attention. Close your eyes and visualize your body of light detach from your physical body. Feel yourself begin to rise upward. Reach the ceiling of your physical temple and then move through this. Continue rising above your building, high into the air at ever increasing speed. See the clouds fly by you as your energy body reaches beyond the earth's atmosphere.

Launch yourself with a great burst of acceleration into outer space, leaving the entire planet earth far behind. The sun becomes just a point of light in the midst of the darkness of the void, one among myriad others. Travel light years in seconds with the speed of thought as you finally reach the cosmic temple, set amidst the vastness of deep space. It is in the shape of a torus, like a huge donut. Each wheel of that greater wheel is a flow of brilliant white light. A current of blue power flows through the middle of all these wheels on the same plane as the torus. All the furniture and implements of the physical temple are placed in the central space, surrounded by the wheel of wheels, with the altar in the center of all. A spike of downward shooting brilliant white light passes through the middle of the altar, an axle of the wheel.

Move your body of light to the west side of the astral altar facing the east of the temple and perform a Middle Pillar Exercise or a Rousing of the Citadels ritual. Visualize a ball of brilliant white light above your head, its bottom point touching the top of your head. Vibrate the divine Name AHIH three times, pronounced as Ehayay.

Send a shaft of brilliant white light downward from the crown sphere, through your head, to your neck. Visualize a grayish white ball of light there and vibrate the divine Name IHVH ALHIM three times, pronounced as Yahweh Elohim.

Continue the shaft of light downward to the center of your chest and visualize a golden yellow ball there. Vibrate the divine Name IHVH ALVH VDOT three times, pronounced as Yahweh Eloah Va Dot.

Continue the shaft of light downward to a point two inches below your navel and visualize a violet ball of light there. Vibrate the divine Name ShDI AL ChAI three times, pronounced as Shaddaiee El Chaiee.

Continue the shaft of light downward to a point between your feet. Visualize an olive green ball there, half above the floor of the temple and half below. Vibrate the divine Name ADNI HARTz three times, pronounced as Adonaiee Ha Aretz.

Reinforce the visualization of all five colored balls with the connecting shaft of light and feel the integration of all the energy in your physical and light bodies. Start a current of energy moving from the top of your head down the front of your body to your feet and then back to the top of your head from behind. Send energy down the right side of your body and then up the left. Raise a stream of energy from your feet up the central shaft of visualization to your head and then out the top in a shower of sparks that fall all around your body. Finally, feel all the energies and currents of your physical and light bodies reach out to the farthest stars to establish a universal connection. You are now ready to do magick as a complete microcosm, a true mirror of all that was, is, and shall be.

Opening:

Stand on the west side of the Altar, facing east. Perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram or the Star Ruby.

Purify the Temple by taking the Cup, moving to the east wall, raising the Cup on high, and saying, “For pure will, unassuaged of purpose, delivered from the lust of result, is every way perfect.” (“Liber Legis,” Chapter 1, Verse 44)

Bring the Cup to heart level and say, “By the Lustral Waters of the Loud Resounding Sea, I purify this Temple and all objects and persons within.”

Mark the points of an inverse triangle with the Cup, upper left, upper right, and then lower center. Imagine a blue triangle hanging in midair.

Walk deosil to the south quarter and repeat the above paragraph. Repeat for west and north, return to the east, and walk back to the west side of the Altar in a deosil curve.

Consecrate the Temple by taking up the fuming Censor, moving to the east wall, raising the Censor on high, and saying, “So that thy light is in me; and its red flame is as a sword in my hand to push thy order.” (“Liber Legis,” Chapter 3, Verse 38)

Bring the Censor to heart level and say, “With the Sacred Fire which darts and flashes through the hidden depths of the universe, I consecrate this Temple and all objects and persons within.”

Mark the points of an upright triangle by swinging the Censor toward the upper center, lower left, then lower right. Ideally, a puff of smoke should be left when the Censor swings away from the point. Imagine a red triangle superimposed on the blue triangle, making a hexagram.

Walk deosil to the south quarter and repeat the above paragraph. Repeat for west and north, return to the east, and walk back to the west side of the altar in a deosil curve. Replace the Censor and take up the Wand.

Open each of the Angelic Tablets in turn, from east through south, west, and north as follows.

Stand before the eastern tablet with Wand in hand and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Air with the Great Eastern Quadrangle.”

Draw the invoking active spirit pentagram in black against a white background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate AHIH, then EXARP. Draw the invoking Air pentagram in violet against a yellow background, vibrating IHVH. Put down the Wand, take up the Fan, and draw the Kerubic sign of Aquarius in violet within the Air pentagram, creating a wind with the Fan. Vibrate Raphael and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Eastern Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Air.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the East, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the Wand as each Name is vibrated) ORO IBAH AOZPI, I call forth the Powers of Air.”

Hold Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) BATAIVAH, great King of the East, I call forth the Powers of Air.” Knock.

Go to the southern tablet with Wand in hand and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Fire with the Great Southern Quadrangle.”

Draw the invoking active spirit pentagram in black against a white background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate AHIH and then BITOM. Draw the invoking Fire pentagram in green against a red background, vibrating ALHIM. Put down the Wand, take up the Red Lamp, and draw the Kerubic sign of Leo in green within the Fire pentagram. Vibrate Michael and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Replace the Lamp, take up the Wand, and draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a deosil golden circle around the cross. Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Southern Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Fire.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the South, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the wand as each Name is vibrated) OIP TEAA PDOCE, I call forth the Powers of Fire.”

Hold Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) EDLPRNAA, great King of the South, I call forth the Powers of Fire.” Knock.

Go to the western tablet with Wand in hand and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Water with the Great Western Quadrangle.”

Draw the invoking passive spirit pentagram in white against a black background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate Atah Geboor Leolahm Adonai, then HCOMA. Draw the invoking Water pentagram in orange against a blue background, vibrating AL. Put down the wand, take up the cup or bowl, and draw the Kerubic sign of Scorpio in orange within the Water pentagram. Vibrate Gabriel and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Replace the Cup, take up the Wand, and draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a deosil golden circle around the cross.

Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Western Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Water.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the West, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the Wand as each Name is vibrated) MPH ARSL GAIOL, I call forth the Powers of Water.”

Hold Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) RAAGIOSL, great King of the West, I call forth the Powers of Water.” Knock.

Go to the northern tablet with Wand in hand and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Earth with the Great Northern Quadrangle.”

Draw the invoking passive spirit pentagram in white against a black background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate Atah Geboor Leolahm Adonai, then NANTA. Draw the invoking Earth pentagram in white against a black background, vibrating ADNI. Put down the wand, take up the plate of salt, and draw the Kerubic sign of Taurus in white within the Earth pentagram. Vibrate Auriel and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Replace the plate of salt, take up the wand, and draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a deosil golden circle around the cross. Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Northern Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Earth.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the North, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the wand as each Name is vibrated) MOR DIAL HCTGA, I call forth the Powers of Earth.”

Hold Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) ICZHIHAL, great King of the North, I call forth the Powers of Earth.” Knock.

Complete the circle and return to the west side of the Altar, facing east and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Spirit with the Tablet of Union.”

Draw the invoking passive spirit pentagram in white against a black background over the Tablet of Union, point to the center, and vibrate Atah Geboor Leolahm Adonai. Draw the invoking active spirit pentagram in black against a white background and vibrate AHIH.

Vibrate EXARP HCOMA NANTA BITOM, tracing the letters with the Wand, starting from the upper left letter and moving downward, one line per Name, and say, “In the Names and Letters of the Tablet of Union, I call forth the Powers of Spirit.” Ring 2-1-2 with the Bell.

Intone the first Enochian call: “Ol sonf vorz jee, goho Yad Balt, lonsh kalz vonfo; Sobra zol ror ee ta naz-psad, grah ta mal-perj; dee-es holk kwah no-thoa zimz, od ko-ma ta nob-loh zeen; So-ba theel jeh-nomp perj aldee; Dee-es urbz o-bo-le jee re-sam; Kasarm o-ho-re-la taba Pire; Dee-es zon-renj kab erm yad-na. Pee-la far-zm znurza adna go-no Yad-peel, dee-es hom-to; So-ba eepam, loo eepamis; Dee-es lo-ho-lo vep zomd poamal, od bog-pa a-ee ta pee-ap pee-ah-mol od voh-an. Za-ka-re, ka, od zamran; o-do see-kle kwah; zorj, lap zirdo no-ko Mad, ho-ath Yai-da.”

Raise the Wand on high and say, “Ye I evoke, oh Angels of the Celestial Spheres. Ye are the Guardians of the Gates of the Universe and of this Magick Sphere. Be here present to shine your transcendent Light on this Cosmic Temple and all within. Achud Rash Achudotho Rash Yechudotho Temoratho Achud.” Ring 3-1-3 with the Bell.

Go to the east and face south. Perform the Magick Circumambulation by giving the Sign of the Enterer and then walking around the Temple deosil three times, giving the Sign of the Enterer on passing the east each time. Imagine a current of white light passing through you each time this Sign is given. After three complete turns, return to the west side of the Altar in a deosil curve. A continuously flowing cylinder of subtle white force should have developed around the Temple.

Pronounce the Thelemic Declaration to dedicate every erg of magical energy generated in Temple to the Great Work of realizing the highest levels of consciousness in physical incarnation.

“Holy and Blessed art Thou, Oh Heru Ra Ha, Transcendent Glory that surpasses all things. May Your Infinite Love reach down to bless this temple, dedicated to Your service. Enlighten my mind and enliven my soul so that I may be better enabled to carry out Your Will, which is my Will, here on earth.

Thereby, let the Word of the New Law be pronounced once more so that the brilliant stellar consciousness may be further established in the soul of humanity.

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law. I declare that the purposes and operations of this temple are dedicated to spreading the Law of Thelema throughout the world on all planes to further the evolution of life everywhere. Let this new Covenant, the Third Dispensation of humanity's transcendence, the fulfillment of all previous Laws be realized in the Collective Consciousness for the healing of all races. Our individual Paths through infinite space are our personal Covenants with the Divine. So may we all come at length to full Self actualization. Love is the law, love under will."

Complete the opening by ringing a battery of 3-5-3 with the Bell, making eleven rings in total, and then make a statement of intent, declaring the purpose and intention of the Rite.

Evocation:

Perform the Lesser Invoking Ritual of the Hexagram with Thelemic Keyword Analysis in the following way, beginning with the declaration: “Let the energies of the temple be raised to celestial intensity with Ritual of the Hexagram.”

Upon completing the activation of the hexagrams in the four quarters and returning to the East to complete the circle, continue the circumambulation to the tablet from which the Senior or King is to be conjured.

Draw a fifth hexagram over this Watchtower with the wand, point to the center, and intone the sentence from which the notoriqon ARARITA is derived, “Achud Rash. Achudotho Rash. Yechudotho Temorotho Achud.”

Continue the circumambulation back to the East and then return to the west side of the altar facing East. Conclude the ritual with the final Thelemic Keyword Analysis.

Declare, “Let the Great <direction> Watchtower be opened and the great angel, <angel name> be evoked.”

Walk to the East with wand in hand and then proceed to the appropriate tablet. Point with the wand to the center and intone the appropriate Enochian call to open the Watchtower. Consult the bibliography for books on Enochian magick to find the text of these angelic conjurations.

Conjure the angel by pointing with the wand at the first letter of the name and then trace while intoning the name as many times as the number of the Sephirah to which its planet is attributed. For instance, if a Venusian angel is to be evoked, trace while intoning its name seven times, since the planet Venus is attributed to the seventh Sephirah Netzach. A Jupiterian angel would call for four repetitions, since Jupiter is attributed to Chesed. Use Sol for the Kings of the tablets and so six repetitions. Return to the East and complete the circle and then back to the altar when the conjuration is completed. Declare, "I shall now commune with the angel thus evoked."

Sit in a comfortable position, relax the body from head to toe, perform some rhythmic breathing, and then open the mind's eye to receive the vision and the power of the angel conjured. When satisfied with the results of the contact, exit the vision and return to body consciousness. Go to the west side of the altar and face East.

Take up the wand and banish the angel by declaring, "I hereby give <angel name> license to depart. Return unto your habitations and abodes. Let there ever be peace between you and I and be ready to come again when called. For now, depart!" Give one sharp rap on the altar with the wand. Proceed to the closing.

Closing:

Banish by using the banishing forms of whatever rituals were used to invoke. Perform the purification and consecration as in the opening. Close the Angelic Tablets as follows:

Go to the eastern tablet, Wand in hand, and say, “Let us banish the Powers of Air with the Great Eastern Quadrangle.”

Draw the banishing active spirit pentagram in black against a white background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate AHIH and EXARP. Draw the banishing Air pentagram in violet against a yellow background and vibrate IHVH. Draw the Kerubic sign of Aquarius with the Wand in violet within the Air pentagram and vibrate Raphael. Draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a widdershins golden circle around the cross. Point to the center and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Eastern Quadrangle, I banish the Powers of Air.” Knock once with the Wand.

Repeat appropriate banishing formulas for the other tablets in the south, west, and north. Complete the circle and return to the west side of the Altar, facing east and say, “Let us banish the Powers of Spirit with the Tablet of Union.”

Draw the banishing passive and active spirit pentagrams over the Tablet of Union, using the colors and vibrating the Names as in the opening. Point to the center and say, “In the names and letters of the Tablet of Union, I banish the Powers of Spirit.”

Perform the Magick Reverse Circumambulation by circling the Temple widdershins. Imagine a current of white light passing through you, counteracting the deosil current set up in the opening. After three complete turns, return to the west side of the Altar in a widdershins curve. The cylinder of subtle white force should be gone.

Raise the Wand on high and say, “I hereby give license to depart to any and all spirits that may have been attracted by this rite. Return unto your habitations and abodes, harming none on your way. Let there ever be peace between all of you and I and be ready to come again when called. For now, depart!” Knock forcefully with the wand on the altar. Declare the Temple closed and ring a battery of 3-5-3 with the Bell.

THE LESSER RITUALS OF THE PENTAGRAM AND HEXAGRAM

To perform the lesser ritual of the pentagram:

The Qabalistic Cross

1. Face magical east (whatever direction is convenient). Enter into a relaxed state and take several slow, deep breaths.
2. Stand straight and raise your right index finger above your head. Visualize a beam of white light coming down from the infinite above to meet your fingertip.
3. Draw the light down with your finger and touch your forehead. Intone “Atah” (unto Thee).
4. For the Thelemic version, continue drawing down the white light to the center of your chest and intone “Aiwass” (the name of Aleister Crowley’s Holy Guardian Angel and so the general guardian for the Aeon of Horus) or the name of your own Holy Guardian Angel if you know it. This step is optional.
5. Continue drawing down the white light to the genital region and intone “Malkuth” (the Kingdom). Feel the white light continue downward to the infinite below.
6. Raise your finger to your right shoulder and intone “ve Geburah” (and the Power).
7. Draw a line of white light to the left shoulder and intone “ve Gedulah” (and the Glory).

8. Bring your hands together over your chest in an attitude of reverence and intone “le olam. Amen” (to the ages. Amen). Strongly visualize the cross of white light on and through your body.

Pentagram Projection

1. Face or go to magical east. Draw a large pentagram with your finger or your dagger, visualized as electric blue lines. For the banishing form, start at the lower left point and draw upwards to the top point. Continue to draw the rest of the lines of the pentagram until returning to the lower left point. For the invoking form, start at the top point and draw downwards to the lower left point. Continue to draw the rest of the lines of the pentagram until returning to the top point. Maintain this image hanging in midair throughout the rest of the ritual.
2. Point to the center of the pentagram and vibrate the magical name “IHVH,” pronounced as Yahweh, Jehovah, or the letters Yod, He, Vav, He. Imagine the pentagram grow in power and size, projecting out to an extreme distance while continuing to be in the room with you.
3. Draw and visualize an electric blue line around the room to the south and draw another pentagram there, connected to the eastern star by the line. Vibrate “Adonai.”
4. Continue the process to the west, draw the pentagram as before, and vibrate “AHIH,” pronounced as Ehayay.
5. Continue the process to the north, draw the pentagram as before, and vibrate “Atah gebur le olam Adonai,” pronounced as Atah gayboor lay olam Adonai.

6. Return to the east and so completing your protective circle, all the while maintaining visualization of all magical figures.

Invocation of the Elemental Archangels

1. Hold your arms straight outward so that your body makes the form of a cross.
2. Say, "Before me" and then vibrate the magical name "Raphael," pronounced as Rah-fae-ay-el. Visualize the appearance of a huge archangel wearing a bright yellow robe in front of you and in front of the eastern pentagram.
3. Say, "Behind me" and then vibrate the magical name "Gabriel," pronounced as Gah-bree-ay-el. Visualize the appearance of a huge archangel wearing a dark blue robe behind you.
4. Say, "On my right hand," and then vibrate the magical name, "Michael," pronounced as Mee-kaee-ay-el. Visualize the appearance of a huge archangel wearing a bright red robe on your right.
5. Say, "On my left hand," and then vibrate the magical name, "Auriel," pronounced as Or-ee-ay-el. Visualize the appearance of a huge archangel wearing a black robe on your left.
6. Say, "For about me flames the pentagram and in the column shines the six rayed star."

Repeat the Qabalistic Cross as above described.

To perform the lesser ritual of the hexagram:

The Keyword Analysis

1. Face magical east (whatever direction is convenient).
Enter into a relaxed state and take several slow, deep breaths.
2. Let the left arm hang down at your side and hold your right arm over your chest with fist over your heart.
3. Intone the analysis of the Thelemic Keyword:
“H. E. R. U.
He Yod Resh Vav
The Star - Nuit - Star Mother
The Hermit - Hadit - Seed Father
The Sun - Ra Hoor Khuit - Crowned and Conquering Child United in The Hierophant, prophet of the New Aeon, To Mega Therion
Nuit - Hadit - Ra Hoor Khuit – ABRAHADABRA”

Hold your arms straight outward so that your body makes the form of a cross and say, “The Sign of the King.” The attitude is one of royalty and perfect self confidence.

Lean toward the left with your head bent toward the left, your left arm bent at the elbow, and your wrist bent so that the back of your left hand is level with the floor. Hold your right arm over your head in the same attitude as your left so that your right hand is level with your face. Bend your left knee and point it toward the left while bending your right knee and pointing it toward the left.

Your whole body should now make the form of the whirling cross, also known as the ancient Hindu sign called the

Swastika and say, “The Sign of the Whirling Star.”

The attitude is one of languid, dreamy ease and joy. Meditate on the Tarot cards the Star and the Universe following the analysis given in the appendix on the Thelemic Keyword Analysis to more fully understand this state of mind.

Stand straight up with your arms above your head spread out at a sixty degree angle, tilt your head upward, and say, “The Sign of the Rising Serpent.”

The attitude is one of wild ecstasy as one experiencing the rise of Kundalini up the spine. Meditate on the Tarot cards the Hermit and the Magus following the analysis given in the appendix on the Thelemic Keyword Analysis to more fully understand this state of mind.

Look straight ahead with your arms crossed over your chest, right over left, and say, “The Sign of the Triumphant One.”

Make the sign of the cross and then return to crossed arms position. The attitude is a fusion of all the previous signs. Meditate on the Tarot cards the Sun and Lust following the analysis given in the appendix on the Thelemic Keyword Analysis to more fully understand this state of mind.

Repeat the Sign of the Whirling Star and say, “L.”

Repeat the Sign of the Rising Serpent and say, “V.”

Repeat the Sign of the Triumphant One, crossed arms only, and say, “X. Lux. The Light of the King.”

Hexagram Projection

1. Face or go to magical east. Visualize this entire direction as a vast field of pure white light. Draw a large hexagram with your finger or your wand in golden yellow lines. For the invoking form, start at the top point of the upright triangle and draw down to the right, over to the left, and back to the top point. Move your finger or wand to a position below the center point of the bottom line of the upright triangle. Draw upward to the left, over to the right, and back down to the bottom point of the reverse triangle so that it overlaps with the upright triangle. For the banishing form, start at the top point of the upright triangle and draw down to the left, over to the right, and back to the top point. Move your finger or wand to a position below the center point of the bottom line of the upright triangle. Draw upward to the right, over to the left, and back down to the bottom point of the reverse triangle so that it overlaps with the upright triangle. The general rule for drawing hexagrams is clockwise to invoke and counterclockwise to banish. Maintain this image hanging in midair throughout the rest of the ritual.
2. Point to the center of the hexagram and vibrate, “ARARITA.” This is a notation for “Achud Rash. Achudotho Rash. Yechudotho Temorotho Achud,” meaning “One is His Beginning. One is His Individuality. His Permutation One.” Imagine the hexagram grow in power and size, projecting out to an extreme distance while continuing to be in the room with you.
3. Draw while visualizing a golden yellow line around to the south and draw another hexagram there, connected to the eastern star by the line. Vibrate “ARARITA.”

4. Repeat this process to the west and north and finish the circle by connecting to the eastern star, all the while maintaining visualization of all magical figures.

Repeat the Keyword Analysis as above described.

COMMENTARY ON THE THELEMIC KEYWORD ANALYSIS

The Keyword Analysis begins and ends each hexagram ritual as performed in the traditional Golden Dawn style. It is actually the complete formula of initiation into the Greater Mysteries, which involve operations of celestial magick such as hexagram invocations. By contrast, the Lesser Mysteries involve operations of terrestrial magick and are concerned with human personality, the physical mind and body. The Golden Dawn Neophyte Ritual is an example of an initiation into the Lesser Mysteries. Beyond the Greater Mysteries are the Grand Mysteries, which involve supercelestial levels of reality, beyond the stars, planets, and even creation itself. Initiation into the Grand Mysteries involves the crossing of the Abyss on the Tree of Life. The A.: A.: Grade of Master of the Temple is the rank of one who partakes of the Grand Mysteries.

The processes of entry into the Greater Mysteries are typified in the Keyword Analysis by the translation of a special Word, representing the higher nature of human aspiration, into a magical formula which elevates consciousness to that intensity. The letters of the Word are associated with certain cosmic forces according to the system of correspondences used in the Qabalah. These concepts are then related to each letter of the magical formula, thus spelling it out and so declaring the nature of the Work of the Greater Mysteries. In essence, the Keyword Analysis equates one Word with another, to declare the ultimate truth that “Deus est Homo” (God is Man).

The Keyword offered as a departure from the traditional Golden Dawn formula, which is inspired by Christianity, is H.E.R.U. This is the Egyptian name for what the Greeks called, Horus. This Word is appropriate for a Thelemic formula of initiation into the Greater Mysteries, Horus being the primary deity from which the Thelemic dispensation was received. It is hoped that this formula will help aspiring Thelemic magicians achieve the sublime level of Adept of the Mysteries and so become independent from older formulae based on ideals from previous aeons.

The first translation of the formula is into Hebrew, as He-Yod-Resh-Vav. The correspondences given are of the Tarot cards to which these letters are attributed. So, using Aleister Crowley's innovation of reassigning the letters of Trump IV and Trump XVII, The Star card is given to express the nature of He. The initiatory nature of this new Thelemic formula thus begins with Nuit, the Star Mother, the true ground of all existence, the undivided wholeness from which all being arises.

A clarifying symbol may be derived by considering that the zodiacal sign Aquarius is attributed to the Star card. The planet Saturn rules this sign and is attributed to the Tarot card called The Universe. In the Thoth deck of Aleister Crowley, the similarity of attitude and position of the central feminine figure of these trumps is self evident and speaks volumes of the inner meaning behind this first stage of the Thelemic adept initiation formula.

The Hermit card is given for Yod as emblem of Hadit, the Seed Father. Hadit is the natural correlate of Nuit, he being the ultimate infinitesimal to Her infinity. All expressions of existence begin with the first focusing of infinity onto a particular point. This is the seed and root of all phases of manifestation.

A related symbol is the Tarot card called The Magus, to which the planet Mercury is attributed, this ruling the zodiacal sign Virgo, which is attributed to The Hermit card. The Thoth deck version of The Magus depicts the central figure in the state of ecstasy and so is relevant to the E of H.E.R.U. Further, the serpentine nature of Mercury as symbol of Kundalini directly relates to Hadit. Not only is the power of creative visualization indicated but also the very root energies underlying all being and becoming.

The Sun card is given for Resh to express the nature of Ra Hoor Khuit, Crowned and Conquering Child, an active form of Heru. This God is the natural and inevitable product of Nuit and Hadit, just as the Sun is the product of the infinite energy potential of space and the interaction of myriad manifest particles. The Sun has always been a deific emblem, the giver of all life and light, the fit object of aspiration in the Mysteries throughout the world. It is the divine nature in every human psyche.

Working in reverse of the method employed with the previous two cards, it may be understood that the sun is the planet ruling the zodiacal sign Leo, attributed to the Tarot card called Lust. The design of this card in the Thoth deck depicts the Thelemic deities Babalon and the Beast whereon she rides. These are expressions of Nuit and Hadit on a lower plane of existence and their conjoining at this level shows the lion-serpent guided by the feminine wisdom. The whole gestalt relates tellingly to the nature of the Crowned and Conquering Child, Ra Hoor Khuit.

The Hierophant Card is given for Vav as the Prophet of the New Aeon, To Mega Therion. This is the human incarnation of God, Deity and Humanity conjoined. This ultimate magician delivers a message of cosmic import to the world, furthering the process of the deification of the species. The Seed Father, Yod, has extended itself into incarnation as Vav, the Prophet, as indicated by the shape of these letters. Ra Hoor Khuit resides in His rightly fitted temple that is the magician's mind and body, with Hadit hidden in Him under the persona of Hoor Paar Kraat, the Babe in the Egg. See Chapter 2 of "Liber Al vel Legis," verse forty-nine in particular, for more on these themes.

It may be noted that the zodiacal sign Taurus is attributed to The Hierophant, which is ruled by the planet Venus. This, in turn, is attributed to the Tarot card called The Empress. This aspect of the final stage in the formula of Thelemic Adeptship shows a return to the Great Mother, but now pregnant with the seed of the All Father. The perfectly balanced nature of The Hierophant is clearly shown in this symbol. Moreover, verse sixteen of chapter two of "Liber Al vel Legis" declares that Hadit is The Empress and The Hierophant. Along with The Fool, these cards and their associated Hebrew letter/numbers express the mystery of Hadit as being 8 and 11, the serpent and that which lay beyond manifest existence. The Father is identified with the Son hereby.

The whole formula can be seen as the process of incarnation of God in the psyche of the magician, so aptly symbolized by the hexagram of interlocking triangles. The descending triangle of inspiration is firmly united with the ascending triangle of aspiration. The fusion of above and below produces a beautifully symmetric synergy with the power to channel and manipulate the very source of life, star power. Thus, each magician may be their own Prophet, determining their own way through infinite space as the cosmic star that they truly are. No intermediary is needed. The Adept is free from blind adherence to other people's dictates forever more.

The entire formula is then identified with ABRAHADABRA, the initiatory formula given by Crowley for the New Aeon. This is a three part word of eleven letters by which some have crossed the Abyss to enter the Supernal nature beyond the stars. It also aptly expresses the nature of operations of the Greater Mysteries, having five A's or pentagrams among six other letters. The five and the six are conjoined; the human and the divine are integrated. H.E.R.U. is ABRAHADABRA. The process of incarnation of Deity in Humanity in the Aeon of Horus is the discovery of the inmost nature of consciousness as manifest on all levels. The root of consciousness is the heart of all that was, is, and shall be.

For one so realized, the signs of LVX become a declaration of royalty. The signs of the cross become the signs of the King, the true partakers of the spirit of Thelema, Will. The Mother is described as the ecstatic Whirling Star whose sign is the Swastika. The Father is exulted in through His movement as the Rising Serpent. The Child is proclaimed as the Triumphant One, for whom no circumstance can diminish. LVX is the Light of the King, the emanation of the consciousness of the Prophet of His or Her own Aeon, whose movements through the cosmos form a personal covenant with Deity.

H.E.R.U. -> Nuit + Hadit + Ra Hoor Khuit -> ABRAHADABRA. The King is One who has mastered this formula. A comprehensive symbol for this idea is given in Chapter Three of "Liber Legis." It is Heru Ra Ha, Lord of the New Aeon. This transcendent God includes Ra Hoor Kuit and Hoor Paar Kraat as One. The Solar-Serpentine essence is the epitome of Horus Aeon consciousness, encompassing the natures of both parents and their children.

Introduced here is a composite symbol to illustrate this newly realized potential in human destiny. The idea takes after the Sphinx as comprehending the four elemental Kerubic animals in one being. These are the Lion, the Serpent or Man, the Bull, and the Eagle. Rather than land based animals, mythic birds are used for this symbol of the higher level of reality. The Phoenix is the bird of the Sun and Tiphareth, representing the mystical union with the essence of Pure Will. The Hawk is the bird of Mars and Geburah, representing the active fiery nature which is the basis of magical energy. The Eagle is the bird of Jupiter and Chesed as well as the highest expression of Mars. This represents that essence which transcends the duality of matter and mind.

These three symbols may be fused into what is here called The Dragon. The head of the Hawk is united with the body of the Phoenix and the wings of the Eagle. It flies throughout all manifestation and its ground, is the heart of all action and Will, and partakes of the essence of the ultimate transcendence. Thus, each of the Adept grades is comprehended herein. The Solar-Phallic creative energy is united to the highest Father.

ABRA - HAD - ABRA can be identified with the Great Dragon as follows. AB-RA means Father-Sun, the life giving energies which form the basis of the higher enlightenment, hence the Phoenix. HAD is Hadit, whose motion forms the serpent which spirals through all the dimensions of reality to enable Will to take shape in the world of action, hence the Hawk. ABRA = 204 = 34*6. 34 is the fourth great number of Jupiter and so the whole may be interpreted as the eagle conjoined with the sun, which is Lord and Father. Thus, the magician who becomes conformed to the composite nature of the Great Dragon is the Adept whose being reaches to the farthest limits and the nearest confines of existence. Such a King is a Master of magick, mysticism, and divinity.

He Yod Resh Vav adds in Hebrew to 221 = 17*13. The Swastika, whose number is 17 by the Fylfot Cross of Golden Dawn symbolism, is a symbol of Kether and is the Whirling Star. This is the sign used for L in the LVX signs. 13 is the number of love and unity, another number of Kether. The stellar nature which forms all matter and energy is the undivided wholeness which is the basis of all consciousness.

221 = 200+20+1 -> Resh - Kaph - Aleph -> Sun - Jupiter - Air. The shape of Aleph is the Swastika, formed of 17 squares selected from a set of 25 squares which form the square of Mars. 2+2+1 = 5 -> Mars and Geburah and He. These numerical symbols echo the analysis of the Great Dragon.

ENOCHIAN EVOCATION RITUAL – SHORT FORM

This ceremony is a quick and easy method of conjuring the angelic forces of Enochian magick. No temple setup or implements are necessary, although some incense may be burned if desired. This method has been found useful as a general follow up to formal temple generated visions.

1. Perform a general banishing ritual such as the Lesser Banishing Pentagram ritual, the Star Ruby, or this simple method. Face east. Draw a cross of light over your body from head to toe and right shoulder to left shoulder while vibrating the name “Aiwass,” or that of your Holy Guardian Angel if you know it. Point to the ceiling and trace a great circle around yourself, down the right side of your body and up the left. Trace another great circle around yourself from behind to in front. Trace a third great circle around the room while turning your body 360 degrees. All three dimensions of space are covered in this way. Say, “I banish,” while tracing each circle. After this is done, raise your hands in the air and say, “I banish all discordant spirits from this place. I banish the Shells unto their abodes and habitations. This place is clean.” Clap your hands loudly to finish.
2. Perform the Lesser Invoking Pentagram ritual, drawing in as much of this energy as possible.
3. Intone the first Enochian call as specified in the temple ceremony.
4. Perform the Lesser Invoking Hexagram ritual, drawing in as much of this energy as possible.

5. Intone one of the other Enochian calls for whichever elemental angelic energies you wish to experience. See the bibliography for books on Enochian magick to find these other angelic conjurations.
6. Enter into trance and receive the angelic contact.
7. Banish as in step 1 when done.

ENOCHIAN FORM OF THE BORNLESS RITUAL
ADAPTED FROM LIBER SANEKH FULL TEMPLE CEREMONY

Preparation:

Set up a double cubed Altar in the middle of a square or rectangular room. Place a pedestal in the center of each wall, marking out the four quarters of existence. Each direction is infinite and reaches into a higher than physical world. The reaches of infinity focus on the central altar from the east, south, west, north, above, and below. Thus, the altar is the center of the universe, the point of balance from which any energy may be launched to cause any effect anywhere.

Each pedestal marks the nature of its quarter, indicating the frequency of magical power emanating from that particular infinity. These four currents are symbolized by the four elements of classical Greek science: Air, Fire, Water, and Earth. Mark the nature of Air in the east by setting up the Angelic Air Tablet. Place a white votive candle in front of the tablet to light the darkling, mysterious abyss of the east. Place an emblem of the element itself with the candle, such as a hand fan or rose. Place the Angelic Spirit Tablet, called the Tablet of Union, in the far east raised above the other tablets.

In the south, place the symbols of Fire: the Angelic Fire Tablet, a white votive, and a red lamp, red candle, or candle in a red holder. In the west, place the symbols of Water: the Angelic Water Tablet, a white votive, and a cup or bowl of pure water. In the north, place the symbols of Earth: the Angelic Earth Tablet, a white votive, and a plate of salt.

Let the Altar, symbolizing the consciousness of the magician, center of his/her universe, be covered with a black cloth draping down on all sides to touch the floor or painted black. Place the four elemental weapons on top of the Altar, answering to the elemental natures of the quarters. Thus, place the Air Dagger on the eastern side of the altar, place the Fire Wand on the southern side, place the Water Cup on the western side, and place the Earth Pentacle on the northern side. In the center, the center of All, place a flask of fragrant Oil, symbolizing the ubiquitous element of Spirit. Oil of cinnamon or Abramelin oil is appropriate. A favored Holy Book may be placed underneath the flask if desired. In this way, the magician is expressed as a microcosm, an entire universe in miniature, whose several natures correspond to the forces of creation.

Place a Censor on the southern side of the Altar or the southern pedestal as desired, burning frankincense and myrrh or incense of Abramelin. Place the Bell at any convenient spot. Embellish the Altar with crystals, black, white, or multicolored tapers, etc.

Prepare the water in the Cup on the altar by dropping a few particles of salt into it and say, "May the salt of Earth admonish the Waters to bear the virtue of the Great Sea."

Opening:

Stand on the west side of the Altar, facing east. Perform the Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram or the Star Ruby.

Purify the Temple by taking the Cup, moving to the east wall, raising the Cup on high, and saying, “For pure will, unassuaged of purpose, delivered from the lust of result, is every way perfect.” (“Liber Legis,” Chapter 1, Verse 44)

Bring the Cup to heart level and say, “By the Lustral Water of the Loud Resounding Sea, I purify this Temple and all objects and persons within.”

Mark the points of an inverse triangle with the Cup, upper left, upper right, and then lower center. Imagine a blue triangle hanging in midair. Walk deosil to the south quarter and repeat the above paragraph. Repeat for west and north, return to the east, and walk back to the west side of the Altar in a deosil curve.

Consecrate the Temple by taking up the fuming Censor, moving to the east wall, raising the Censor on high, and saying, “So that thy light is in me; and its red flame is as a sword in my hand to push thy order.” (“Liber Legis,” Chapter 3, Verse 38)

Bring the Censor to heart level and say, “With the Sacred Fire which darts and flashes through the hidden depths of the universe, I consecrate this Temple and all objects and persons within.” Mark the points of an upright triangle by swinging the Censor toward the upper center, lower left, then lower right. Ideally, a puff of smoke should be left when the Censor swings away from the point. Imagine a red triangle superimposed on the blue triangle, making a hexagram.

Walk deosil to the south quarter and repeat the above paragraph. Repeat for west and north, return to the east, and walk back to the west side of the altar in a deosil curve. Replace the Censor and take up the Wand.

Intone the Thelemic Keyword Analysis and perform the Signs of L.V.X.

Go to the east and face south. Perform the Magick Circumambulation by giving the Sign of the Enterer and then walking around the Temple deosil three times, giving the Sign of the Enterer on passing the east each time. Imagine a current of white light passing through you each time this Sign is given. After three turns return to the west side of the Altar in a deosil curve. A continuously flowing cylinder of subtle white force should have developed around the Temple.

Read the Thelemic Declaration to dedicate every erg of magical energy generated in Temple to the Great Work of realizing the highest levels of consciousness in physical incarnation as follows:

“Holy and Blessed art Thou, Oh Heru Ra Ha, Transcendent Glory that surpasses all things. May Your Infinite Love reach down to bless this temple, dedicated to Your service. Enlighten my mind and enliven my soul so that I may be better enabled to carry out Your Will, which is my Will, here on earth.

Thereby, let the Word of the New Law be pronounced once more so that the brilliant stellar consciousness may be further established in the soul of humanity.

Do what thou wilt shall be the whole of the law. I declare that the purposes and operations of this temple are dedicated to spreading the Law of Thelema throughout the world on all planes to further the evolution of life everywhere. Let this new covenant, the third dispensation of humanity's transcendence, the fulfillment of all previous laws, be realized in the collective consciousness for the healing of all races. Our individual Paths through infinite space are our personal Covenants with the Divine. So may we all come at length to full Self actualization. Love is the law, love under will."

Complete the opening by ringing a battery of 3-5-3 with the Bell, making eleven rings in total, and then make a statement of intent, declaring the purpose of the Rite.

Invocation of the Bornless One:

Perform the Door of the Macrocosm:

The outer circle is white or platinum, representing the cosmic component of consciousness.

The vesica points touch the topmost and bottommost points of the circle. It is blue or silver, representing the instinctual/intuitive aspect of consciousness.

The cross points touch the top and bottom of the vesica as well as its widest points. It is red or red gold, representing the intellectual and creative aspects of consciousness.

The inner circle surrounds the center of the cross, which is the center of all, one sixth the size of the outer circle. It is yellow or yellow gold, representing the ego consciousness.

Thus, the solar-phallus is conjoined with the lunar-kteis and all three Rays are shown, encompassed by the circle of eternity.

1. In the center, draw a circle above the head with the wand, widdershins, saying, "Nuit, the Consciousness of the Continuity of Existence."
2. Point to the heart and say, "Hadit, the flame that burns in every heart of man and in the core of every star."
3. Draw a cross from head to toe and then from right shoulder to left shoulder, saying, "Therion, the Stream of Will that darts and flashes throughout the universe."

4. Draw a vesica from top of head to left hip, to feet, to right hip, to top of head, saying, “Babalon, the Flood of Love that encompasses all things.”
5. Clasp hands over heart with wand pointed upward and say, “Let the Door of the Macrocosm be opened to reveal That which is neither the Many nor the All nor the Two nor the One nor the None...ABRAHADABRA

Preliminary Invocation:

Take up the wand and say:

Thee I invoke, the Bornless One.

Thee, that didst create the Earth and the Heavens.

Thee, that didst create the Night and the Day.

Thee, that didst create the darkness and the Light.

Thou art HERU RA HA, whom no man hath seen at any time.

Thou are AIWASS.

Thou art BABALON.

Thou art THERION.

Thou hast distinguished between the Just and the Unjust.

Thou didst make the Female and the Male.

Thou didst produce the Seeds and the Fruit.

Thou didst form Men to love one another, and to hate one another.

I am <your magical motto>, thy Prophet, unto Whom Thou didst commit Thy Mysteries, the ceremonies of Thelema.

Thou didst produce the moist and the dry, and that which nourisheth all created Life.

Hear Thou Me, for I am the Angel of HERU RA HA: this is Thy True Name, handed down to the Prophets of Thelema.

Air:

Go to the eastern tablet with Wand in hand. Take on the magical form of a human with an eagle's head and say, "Let us evoke the Powers of Air with the Great Eastern Quadrangle."

Draw the invoking active spirit pentagram in black against a white background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate AHIH and then EXARP. Give the Signs of the Rending and the Closing of the Veil. Draw the invoking Air pentagram in violet against a yellow background, vibrating IHVH. Give the Sign of Air. Put down the Wand, take up the Fan, and draw the Kerubic sign of Aquarius in violet within the Air pentagram, creating a wind with the Fan. Vibrate Raphael and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Replace the Fan, take up the Wand, and draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a deosil golden circle around the cross starting from the top point. Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Eastern Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Air.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the East, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the Wand as each Name is vibrated) ORO IBAH AOZPI, I call forth the Powers of Air.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) BATAIVAH, great King of the East, I call forth the Powers of Air.” Knock.

Draw an invoking golden hexagram with a golden letter Vav against a blazing white background on the wall behind the tablet. Point to the center and vibrate, “Aiwass.” Visualize an infinite clear, blue sky with a brilliant orange sun beyond the golden hexagram, tinged with its power. Project the magical space developed on the tablet into the sky, feeling the two sets of images and powers merge. Give the Sign of the Enterer and project your consciousness into the magical space. Incant the Enochian Call for Air, extending yourself ever farther into the astral in the form of a pillar made up of spirals of flowing force. Build up as much energy as possible with the extension and incantation.

At the end of the Call, withdraw all the force back into yourself, exiting the sky space and returning fully to your body. Feel the flood of intensified Air energy purging your being of unbalanced force. Intone:

“Hear me, and make all Spirits subject unto Me; so that every Spirit of the Firmament and of the Ether: upon the Earth and under the Earth, on dry land and in the water; of Whirling Air, and of rushing Fire, and every Spell and Scourge of God may be obedient unto Me.”

Fire:

Go to the southern tablet with Wand in hand. Take on the magical form of a human with a lion's head and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Fire with the Great Southern Quadrangle.”

Draw the invoking active spirit pentagram in black against a white background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate AHIH and then BITOM. Give the Signs of the Rending and the Closing of the Veil. Draw the invoking Fire pentagram in green against a red background, vibrating Elohim. Give the Sign of Fire. Put down the Wand, take up the Red Lamp, and draw the Kerubic sign of Leo in green within the Fire pentagram. Vibrate Michael and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Replace the Red Lamp, take up the Wand, and draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a deosil golden circle around the cross starting from the top point. Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Southern Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Fire.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the South, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the Wand as each Name is vibrated) OIP TEAA PDOCE, I call forth the Powers of Fire.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) EDLPRNAA, great King of the South, I call forth the Powers of Fire.” Knock.

Draw an invoking golden hexagram with a golden letter Yod against a blazing white background on the wall behind the tablet. Point to the center and vibrate, “Therion.” Visualize an infinite space of blazing white flames beyond the golden hexagram, tinged with its power. Project the magical space developed on the tablet into the fires, feeling the two sets of images and powers merge. Give the Sign of the Enterer and project your consciousness into the magical space. Incant the Enochian Call for Fire, extending yourself ever farther into the astral in the form of a pillar made up of spirals of flowing force. Build up as much energy as possible with the extension and incantation.

At the end of the Call, withdraw all the force back into yourself, exiting the sky space and returning fully to your body. Feel the flood of intensified Fire energy purging your being of unbalanced force. Intone:

“Hear me, and make all Spirits subject unto Me; so that every Spirit of the Firmament and of the Ether: upon the Earth and under the Earth, on dry land and in the water; of Whirling Air, and of rushing Fire, and every Spell and Scourge of God may be obedient unto Me.”

Water:

Go to the Western tablet with Wand in hand. Take on the magical form of a human with a serpent’s head and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Water with the Great Western Quadrangle.”

Draw the invoking passive spirit pentagram in white against a black background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate Atah Geboor Leolahm Adonai and then HCOMA. Give the Signs of the Rending and the Closing of the Veil. Draw the invoking Water pentagram in orange against a blue background, vibrating AL. Give the Sign of Water. Put down the wand, take up the cup or bowl, and draw the Kerubic sign of Scorpio in orange within the Water pentagram. Vibrate Gabriel and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Replace the Cup, take up the Wand, and draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a deosil golden circle around the cross starting from the top point. Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Western Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Water.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the West, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the Wand as each Name is vibrated) MPH ARSL GAIOL, I call forth the Powers of Water.”

Hold Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) RAAGIOSL, great King of the West, I call forth the Powers of Water.” Knock.

Draw an invoking golden hexagram with a golden letter He against a blazing white background on the wall behind the tablet. Point to the center and vibrate, “BABALON.” Visualize an infinite ocean of clear blue green water beyond the golden hexagram, tinged with its power. Project the magical space developed on the tablet into the waters, feeling the two sets of images and powers merge. Give the Sign of the Enterer and project your consciousness into the magical space. Incant the Enochian Call for Water, extending yourself ever farther into the astral in the form of a pillar made up of spirals of flowing force. Build up as much energy as possible with the extension and incantation.

At the end of the Call, withdraw all the force back into yourself, exiting the sky space and returning fully to your body. Feel the flood of intensified Water energy purging your being of unbalanced force. Intone:

“Hear me, and make all Spirits subject unto Me; so that every Spirit of the Firmament and of the Ether: upon the Earth and under the Earth, on dry land and in the water; of Whirling Air, and of rushing Fire, and every Spell and Scourge of God may be obedient unto Me.”

Earth:

Go to the Northern tablet with Wand in hand. Take on the magical form of a human with a bull’s head and say, “Let us evoke the Powers of Earth with the Great Northern Quadrangle.”

Draw the invoking passive spirit pentagram in white against a black background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate Atah Geboor Leolahm Adonai and then NANTA. Give the Signs of the Rending and the Closing of the Veil. Draw the invoking Earth pentagram in white against a black background, vibrating ADNI. Give the Sign of Earth. Put down the wand, take up the plate of salt, and draw the Kerubic sign of Taurus in white within the Earth pentagram. Vibrate Auriel and visualize Him standing behind the tablet.

Replace the plate of salt, take up the wand, and draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a deosil golden circle around the cross starting from the top point. Point to the center of the cross and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Northern Quadrangle, I call forth the Powers of Earth.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Three Great Secret Names that are borne upon the Banners of the North, (trace the letters of the horizontal line of the Great Cross with the Wand as each Name is vibrated) MOR DIAL HCTGA, I call forth the Powers of Earth.”

Hold the Wand on high and say, “In the Name of (trace the letters spiraling out from the center) ICZHIHAL, great King of the North, I call forth the Powers of Earth.” Knock.

Draw an invoking golden hexagram with a golden letter He against a blazing white background on the wall behind the tablet. Point to the center and vibrate, “Heru Ra Ha.”

Visualize an infinite land of rocky mountains beyond the golden hexagram, tinged with its power. Project the magical space developed on the tablet into the land, feeling the two sets of images and powers merge. Give the Sign of the Enterer and project your consciousness into the magical space. Incant the Enochian Call for Earth, extending yourself ever farther into the astral in the form of a pillar made up of spirals of flowing force. Build up as much energy as possible with the extension and incantation.

At the end of the Call, withdraw all the force back into yourself, exiting the earthy space and returning fully to your body. Feel the flood of intensified Earth energy purging your being of unbalanced force. Intone:

“Hear me, and make all Spirits subject unto Me; so that every Spirit of the Firmament and of the Ether: upon the Earth and under the Earth, on dry land and in the water; of Whirling Air, and of rushing Fire, and every Spell and Scourge of God may be obedient unto Me.”

Spirit:

Complete the circle and return to the west side of the Altar, facing east, and say, “Let us invoke the Powers of Spirit with the Tablet of Union.”

Draw the invoking passive spirit pentagram in white against a black background over the Tablet of Union, point to the center, and vibrate Atah Geboor Leolahm Adonai. Draw the invoking active spirit pentagram in black against a white background and vibrate AHIH. Give the Signs of the Rending and the Closing of the Veil.

Vibrate EXARP HCOMA NANTA BITOM, tracing the letters with the Wand, starting from the upper left letter and moving downward, one line per Name, and say, “In the Names and Letters of the Tablet of Union, I call forth the Powers of Spirit.”

Draw an invoking golden hexagram with a golden letter Shin against a blazing white background on the ceiling above. Point to the center and vibrate, “IHShVH.” Visualize an infinite cosmic space beyond the golden hexagram, tinged with its power. Project the magical space developed on the tablet into the cosmic space, feeling the two sets of images and powers merge. Give the Sign of the Enterer and project your consciousness into the magical space. Incant the first Enochian Call for Spirit, extending yourself ever farther into the astral in the form of a pillar made up of spirals of flowing force. Build up as much energy as possible with the extension and incantation.

After the Call, visualize a crystalline white sphere at the top of the spiral shaft which reflects all five elemental magical spaces. Feel all the power of the ceremony focus on the sphere. Intone:

“This is the Lord of the Gods.
This is the Lord of the Universe.
This is He whom the Winds fear.
This is He, Who having made Voice by His commandment is Lord of all Things; King, Ruler and Helper.”

Transfer your consciousness back to your body while maintaining visualization of the cosmic space penetrated by the spiral pillar topped with the white sphere. Strive against the upward pressure and intone:

“Hear me, and make all Spirits subject unto Me; so that every Spirit of the Firmament and of the Ether: upon the Earth and under the Earth, on dry land and in the water; of Whirling Air, and of rushing Fire, and every Spell and Scourge of God may be obedient unto Me.”

Transcendence:

Intone the Thelemic Keyword Analysis and give the LVX signs. Give the Sign of the Enterer and project your consciousness into and through the hexagram on the ceiling again, like a rocket taking off. Feel tremendous upward pressure as the answer from beyond takes hold of the pillar and incant the second Enochian Call for Spirit, extending yourself ever farther into the astral. Build up as much energy as possible with the extension and incantation.

After intoning the Call, explode the pillar and sphere like a supernova, dissolving consciousness throughout the space. Hear the entire transcendence intone:

“I am He! the Bornless Spirit! Having sight in the feet:
Strong, and the Immortal Fire!

I am He! the Truth!

I am He! Who hate that evil should be wrought in the World!

I am He, that lighteneth and thundereth!

I am He, from whom is the Shower of the Life of Earth!

I am He, whose mouth ever flameth!

I am He, the Begetter and Manifester unto the Light!

I am He, The Grace of the Worlds!

“The Heart Girt with a Serpent” is my name!”

Return to the body as you may and integrate the experience of transcendence with that of the coherence of waking consciousness. Intone:

“Come thou forth, and follow me: and make all Spirits subject unto Me so that every Spirit of the Firmament, and of the Ether, upon the Earth and under the Earth: on dry Land, or in the Water: of Whirling Air or of rushing Fire, and every Spell and scourge of God, may be obedient unto me!”

Vibrate with all levels of being, “IAO SABAO.” Say “Such are the Words.”

Closing:

Perform the pentagram banishing ritual if you haven’t absorbed all the energy generated by the rite. Purify and consecrate as in the opening. Close the Angelic Tablets as follows:

Go to the eastern tablet, Wand in hand, and say, “Let us banish the Powers of Air with the Great Eastern Quadrangle.” Draw the banishing active spirit pentagram in black against a white background over the tablet, point to the center, and vibrate AHIH and EXARP. Draw the banishing Air pentagram in violet against a yellow background and vibrate IHVH. Draw the Kerubic sign of Aquarius with the Wand in violet within the Air pentagram and vibrate Raphael. Draw a golden cross over the Great Cross of the tablet from top to bottom and then left to right. Draw a widdershins golden circle around the cross. Point to the center and say, “In the names and letters of the Great Eastern Quadrangle, I banish the Powers of Air.” Knock once with the Wand.

Repeat appropriate banishing formulas for the other tablets in the south, west, and north. Complete the circle and return to the west side of the Altar, facing east. Say, “Let us banish the Powers of Spirit with the Tablet of Union.” Draw the banishing passive and active spirit pentagrams over the Tablet of Union, using the colors and vibrating the Names as in the opening. Point to the center and say, “In the names and letters of the Tablet of Union, I banish the Powers of Spirit.”

Raise the Wand on high and say, “I hereby give license to depart any and all spirits that may have been attracted by this rite. Let there be peace between you and I and be ready to come when called.” Knock forcefully.

Perform the Magick Reverse Circumambulation by circling the Temple widdershins. Imagine a current of white light passing through you, counteracting the deosil current set up in the opening. After three turns, return to the west side of the Altar in a widdershins curve. The cylinder of subtle white force should be gone.

Declare the Temple closed and ring a battery of 3-5-3 with the Bell.

Notes

Earth Tablet – First Round

¹ See the appendix for details on the setup and performance of these angelic evocations.

² See “777 and Other Qabalistic Writings of Aleister Crowley” for the color correspondences of the Sephiroth of the Tree of Life in the four scales. The King scale corresponds to the deific world of Atziluth. Tiphareth is the sixth Sephirah on the Tree of ten numbers, the center and harmony of the whole structure.

³ See “Magick in Theory and Practice” or “Magick: Liber ABA” by Aleister Crowley for details of the pentagram and hexagram rituals.

⁴ The Greater Hexagram Ritual is used to evoke specific planets. Each planet must be invoked and then banished before another planet can be called. Experience has shown that mixing planetary energies tends to cancel them all out most of the time. The Lesser Hexagram Ritual generates general planetary level energy and so is useful in working with several different planets in succession.

⁷ See “Kabbalah of the Golden Dawn” by Pat Zalewski or “The Mystical Qabalah” by Dion Fortune for information on the five Partzufim and their correspondences to the Tree of Life.

⁸ See “The Vision and the Voice” by Aleister Crowley for information about this Thelemic deity.

⁹ See “The Holy Books of Thelema” by Aleister Crowley to find “Liber Legis” and other of his profoundly inspired and channeled writings.

¹⁰ To make a torus, take a sheet of paper and roll it up into a cylinder. Connect the two ends of the cylinder and you’ve got a torus.

Air Tablet – First Round

¹ These needles correspond to the interdimensional currents revealed by the Earth King. Each element has its own way of looking at how manifestation arises from a general background of pure potential. The angels of these elements have their own lessons to teach about performing magick.

² In the angelically enhanced vision space, it is possible to hold images expressing several different states of consciousness at once. With a little experience with this type of work, it is possible to shift perspective so as to change the apparent size and shape of the vision body. Images are malleable to the Will since they directly express mood, belief, and intent. Metaphysical dynamics can also be embodied, showing a whole new set of dimensions to reality. Different states can interweave and superimpose.

⁵ See “Liber Chanokh” by Aleister Crowley for information about the breakdown of the Watchtower tablets into sections, each of which has specific types of angels.

⁶ “Liber Al vel Legis” by Aleister Crowley, Ch. 3, v. 69.

⁸ A magical method of using the sex force to accelerate the process of evolution is suggested by this passage. Many books on sex magick are available.

⁹ See "Liber XV: The Gnostic Mass" by Aleister Crowley for the significance of the Communion of Saints in a Thelemic religious context.

¹⁰ "There is the dove, and there is the serpent. Choose ye well!" "Liber Al vel Legis," Ch. 1, v. 57.

¹¹ Any true act of sex magick involves these three paths.

¹² "existence is pure joy;" "Liber Al vel Legis," Ch. 2, v. 9.

¹³ "Liber Al vel Legis," Ch. 1, v. 12.

¹⁴ The Seniors have very specific functions in initiating the evoking magician. Answers are revealed slowly over time.

¹⁵ See the works of Carl Jung for information about the collective unconscious.

¹⁶ Above the Abyss, contradiction is unity. Below the Abyss, contradiction is conflict.

¹⁸ This turned out to be one of the worst mistakes of my magical career to this point. Although the King is an angel of an element, he is a direct projection of superconsciousness and so quite beyond anything I can recognize within my personal self. Clearly, ego issues were preventing me from attaining his full contact. This failure would hamper many subsequent visions in this round of Watchtower evocations and necessitate a second attempt at the entire course.

¹⁹ Sol is an image of Tiphareth and spiritual transcendence but it also represents the ego, self absorption. This self reinforcement was almost certainly part of the veil that was blinding my vision from the true King of the East rather than a presentiment of my H.G.A. Issues of authority were also involved in this thick veil, a sensitive ego sore spot. This would be a hard lesson to learn.

²⁰ This idea is not as audacious and absurd as it might first appear. There is a longstanding tradition of spirit sex practice. The goal is to allow greater angelic influence into the soul of humanity and, in certain instances, to actually incarnate an angel in human form. See the works of Ida Craddock for more information on this topic.

²¹ It's absurd that something as basic to human experience as religious worship should affect me so adversely, but this is the way I've always been. Even as a child, I've always understood that humanity is experiencing a new age of reason and personal awareness. The old religious paradigms are no longer considered absolute and so new paths of spirituality can be explored vigorously. I'm so engrossed in the new aeon that any return to old ways is a violence to my personal formula of life. My discovery of Thelema has fully justified every spiritual and sociological sentiment I've ever had.

²² The element of Water and the Hebrew letter Mem are attributed to this card.

²³ This workshop was done after my initial evocations from the Watchtower of Water. So intense was my result that I thought it best to undergo this final preparation before continuing with such greater energy.

²⁴ The Fylfot cross and the First Swirlings are symbols of Kether.

Water Tablet – First Round

¹ The concept of coherence as a holding together of the laws of nature to allow for matter and energy to evolve into living forms is key in all my Water angel visions. A profound understanding of the nature of potential and how it becomes realized in space and time developed through these superconscious contacts.

² In “Liber Al vel Legis,” Ch. 1, v.59, Nuit calls her hair the trees of eternity.

³ Essentially, a process of becoming is being described for both time and space. There is the initial crossover from a state of pure potential to one of actuality. There is the emergence into full, actualized existence, and finally, the integration with the rest of cosmic reality. These concepts will be described in other ways as the Water angel visions progress.

⁴ Here is another reference to “Liber Al vel Legis,” this time from Ch. 1, v. 26. The sign of Nuit’s presence is the conscious of the continuity of existence. This angel was signifying Nuit in a palpable, communicative form.

⁵ It is also possible that I somehow telepathically communicated my transcendent states of consciousness to my magical partner. She could have been sensitive to the magical projections I emanated in performing the evocation ceremony. This suggests that the value of the initiator is far greater than that of any magical system in bestowing new consciousness.

⁹ None of this makes any logical sense, which is appropriate to a state of consciousness that transcends the intellectual faculty. Words must fail to convey the true meaning of what is experienced and understood at this level.

¹⁰ See various alchemical books for images of alchemists being cooked in bottles and other vessels.

¹¹ Once again, I was foolish in ignoring the worthwhile warning given me by an angel. My obstinacy would prove self defeating in the long run. The angels need to be given more respect than this.

¹² This intensity of evocation wasn't realized until I began the Fire angel work. Touching such inspiring and extreme transcendence increased my overall ability to ceremonially project my magical energy, even with the most material of spirits. It is intriguing that my magical partner was able to perceive this same level of intensity, providing her with a real initiation and acceleration of her own Work.

¹⁶ It was difficult for me to listen to this message since I’ve always been pessimistic about romantic relationships. The peace of mind brought me by a life of confirmed bachelorhood has been a boon to my magical career. Fully focused on my life’s Work, I can operate in a direct, uninterrupted manner. I was surprised by the angel’s suggestion that I might be better off involved in a loving romantic relationship. Fortunately for me, these entities give true teachings, unconcerned with the sensibilities of those who evoke them. Superconsciousness derives from the heart of the collective unconscious.

Fire Tablet – First Round

¹ Emergent order results when an interdimensional organizing principle touches and flows through a physical system, activating the potential Fire within. Great transformations may be achieved by this life action, copying the development of life itself.

² This life changing event occurred during a continuous meditation I was doing as part of a training program given by a magical order inspired by the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn. Of course, it espoused Thelema rather than Christianity. The object of the meditation was not to raise the Kundalini but to promote a sense of unity among the moment-by-moment sensations and experiences of life. The thought that triggered the lightning bolt that charged up my spine was, “It is good to be human.”

³ See Appendix for the Thelemic Keyword Analysis and LVX Signs to find descriptions and related symbols of these ideas.

⁴ What is being described here is a process of dimensional unfoldment. Space, time, and the matter and energy that exist therein, emerge out of cosmic potential as a process of ever expanding complex relationships. The most basic pattern of this process is the spiral. It weaves the tapestry of reality against which it extends from dimension to dimension. An inversion and a duplication take place with each transition. The universe and individuated consciousness emerge as higher levels of order in this way.

⁵ None of this appeared to my physical sense of sight but rather a sense of tangibility and presence was had, as if a new dimension expanded from nothingness to surround and interpenetrate my mind and body. This added space was right next to me, within me, and reached to the furthest distance. My magical tracings appeared and had presence in this confected fourth dimension.

Tablet of Union – First Round

¹ These preliminaries to my temple ceremonial have proven extremely useful for promoting results. Any great magical effort needs considerable development on the astral and etheric planes. Even if this is merely an ornate mental exercise, it is helpful to have all the levels of being involved in order to channel the innermost psychic power to physical or quasiphysical manifestation.

Consult the works of Israel Regardie for details regarding the Middle Pillar Exercise. Students of Crowley may notice that he never mentioned this useful ritual. This is because Regardie invented the MPE.

² The Lesser Banishing Ritual of the Pentagram is a standard Golden Dawn style space cleansing ritual to start off more complex ceremonial actions. It is also a useful exercise by itself for the beginner in magick.

⁵ This angel was representing the presence of higher dimensions in physical space and time, that ubiquitous, connective, transcendent principle that lay at the heart of all life and intelligence.

⁶ In Hebrew Qabalah, Ralpern = RLPRN = $560 = 7 * 8 * 10 = 28 * 20 \Rightarrow$ Netzach and Jupiter; reduces to 2. 560 is the total of a Greek word meaning wizard and Hebrew words meaning sorceress and dragons. Ralpern is clearly a very magical entity whose formula resembles my own. I should conjure him directly.

Air Tablet – Second Round

¹ Nonlocality is a concept from quantum mechanics. Two subatomic particles are said to be in nonlocal contact, entangled, when what happens to one particle instantaneously affects the other particle, no matter how far away it may be. The information travels faster than the speed of light, so the agency of connection must be somehow metaphysical. All changes in the quantum realm are discrete, jumping from one state to another without passing through any in between states. Thus, the appearance of smoothness on the human, macroscopic level of existence is an illusion, an averaging of myriad tiny discrete states. As previous visions have revealed, reality is a web of interaction and not a plenum. It is interesting that what is revealed by one state/element gets changed by another.

² Refer to Wilhelm Reich's description of the function and process of the orgasm for an organic parallel to this idea.

³ See "The Function of the Orgasm," by Wilhelm Reich for a broad discussion of the significance of the function and patterns of sexual activity.

⁴ "Liber Legis" condemns virginity as a lying specter of the ages, dark and poisonous. This is an excellent expression of what happens to the psyche when sexual abstinence is imposed and enforced through fear and intimidation. No purity of mind and soul can come from such tyranny. Quite the reverse happens as obsession with the forbidden subject leads to unhealthy perversions and layer after layer of destructive neuroses. The spiritual transcendence of real purity can only come from a willing participation in abstinence, usually only for a limited period of time. The mind and body have needs which must be fulfilled for the maintenance of their health. Denial of any of these leads to nothing but destruction. The lying specter of the ages is the withered soul devastated by patristic societal cruelty. No holiness can come from such an ideal.

⁶ I consider this experiment in sexual magick to be a failure.

This formula is just not appropriate for this entity. My operation was improperly performed and the results were of a debased nature. Only the innate love of the Venusian nature kept me from descending into a completely perverse state of mind. This contact does not at all qualify as having evoked the Venus Senior of Air again, as instructed. I would need time to recover from this before my next attempt.

⁷ This shift in form might have been a lingering imbalance resulting from my application of the Luna formula to the Venus spirit. My relationship with this principle needed perfecting, as the ensuing visionary experience would show.

⁹ The transformation I underwent in shifting to the metalevel image took place primarily on a subconscious level, beyond what words can express. Much time and experience is usually needed to encounter and sort out these types of deep changes. A seed is planted deep within the psyche and then grows in darkness until the flowering reaches the light of day consciousness. For the most part, the ego is just along for the ride.

¹⁰ With this type of overly Yang attitude, it's no wonder I have so much difficulty understanding spirits of Venus. This entire vision is loaded down with testosterone, quite the opposite of this angel's formula. While I gained an invaluable initiation and contact with a transcendent principle, this wasn't my original intent. Once again, I failed to endure the Senior's initiation.

¹¹ See any number of books, including some physics books, to learn about theories of cocreation. The individual is as much a determining factor of how the universe came about as natural forces.

¹² Here is a parable not only of the nature of death in general but of the attainment of immortality through identification with a sun god who is sacrificed.

¹⁴ The pace I'd set for these evocations was clearly far too fast for my own good. My zeal for the Work had become overdone. The result of too much magick too soon is uncontrolled rising of unconscious contents. Much stress and anxiety follow until adjustment is made over time. Also, important details get lost in the confusion of so many lessons and energies. Eventually, the necessity of slowing down becomes overwhelming. To ignore the warning signs is to invite disaster.

¹⁵ This is a paraphrase of the first sentence of verse 2 of chapter 2 of "Liber Legis." The vision to come was to involve that aspect of Mercury dealing with the use of language to express high wisdom.

¹⁶ These are the Sephirothic and Planetary colors of the sun, respectively. The interchange of symbolism between Sol and Mercury in its higher sense is prevalent in western occultism. This identification further stresses the nature of Mercury being depicted in vision. The fusion of magick as language manipulation and the core human emanative nature is central to all attempts to master the self and nature through the use of subtle forces.

¹⁸ It often takes time for a radical transformation of the whole being to register to self consciousness. The barriers separating self consciousness and the subconscious serve to shield the delicate ego from this kind of extreme upheaval. Eventually, the psychic hyperactivity reaches the little self but somewhat buffered from the raw impact experienced by the wholeness of Self. This is not always enough to avoid being overwhelmed or prevent the fall into obsession. Extensive preliminary training in a magical regimen and/or psychotherapy can be very useful in strengthening the individual to withstand these kinds of subconscious onslaughts.

¹⁹ See “Wholeness and the Implicate Order,” by David Bohm for a detailed explanation of this term.

²⁰ According to the tropical system of astrology, my birth sign is Pisces and Saturn appears there in my birth chart. However, according to the sidereal system of astrology, my birth sign is Aquarius and Saturn is also located there. It is worth noting that indigo is the color of Capricorn, ruled by Saturn, and that both this sign and Pisces border Aquarius in the zodiac. Overall, my nativity is indicated.

²¹ It is ironic that the angel of the planet of death and the ending of things should preside over the birth of my higher self in this manner. An impersonal nature had come about, to be sure, which is in line with Saturn, but the demeanor of the baby was anything but Saturnian. It may be significant here that Jupiter rules Pisces. The antithetical payoff of Saturn and Jupiter played a large part in this vision.

²² In my Sahasrara chakra.

²³ The nature of this baby involves a life/death interchange, being a symbol of new life, and yet a guide into my deep subconscious, very like a guide of the dead. Qabalistically, he connected the chakras representing Kether, Tiphareth, and Yesod, the Middle Pillar of the Tree of Life above Malkuth. This new power was circulated throughout my aura by a method related to the Rousing of the Citadels ritual. My aura had extended to a life within, beyond the death of the body.

²⁴ The literature of occultism from around the world is replete with descriptions of high mountains and deep vaults where the gods live and where those found worthy are taken for initiation into the Mysteries. In the Western Mystery Tradition, the mountain of initiation is called Mount Abiegnus, described as a mountain of caverns. The paradox of being high above the earth and yet underground is significant here, a metaphor for the unconscious and for mystery in general.

²⁵ I believe the psychopompic baby that was hatched out of me by the Saturn Senior of Air is the guide inculcated by this lecture. All along, the Seniors have been preparing me for this grand initiation. As for swearing to keep secret these mysteries, it is the incommunicable secrets bestowed by these officers that are to be kept hidden and not the details of their lectures.

²⁶ See appendix for a description of my temple setup.

²⁷ My temple setup for this evocation was the same as all the others. I forgot to employ the intended changes to more closely simulate an Adept temple. As it turned out, it was just as well. Sometimes, mistakes carry real intention.

²⁸ It is important for the reader to understand that this vision didn't give me authority over any established group or even the authority to found my own order. This initiation was all about establishing certain connections within my own being and with the human collective consciousness, which lay at the heart of everyone's subconscious.

²⁹ Here is chaotic induction at its most profound, developing the greatest emergent order. See "Chaos," by James Gleick for a thorough and readable description of chaotic induction and its significance for natural processes, such as life and consciousness.

³⁰ Atu XII, The Hanged Man, the card of the reflecting waters, is attributed to the Path of Mem on the Tree of Life, which connects the eighth Sephirah, Hod, with the fifth Sephirah, Geburah.

³¹ This movement was more than just a shift of position. I passed through fields of size as well as dimension until I reached the scale of the human incarnate.

Water Tablet – Second Round

¹ These states appeared in vision as geometric shapes of multicolored light extending through the unlimited number of partial dimensions between the familiar three of space. They were like facets of a hyperdimensional jewel with no surface, only internal complexities. The reader may compare this description with Aleister Crowley's starsponge vision.

² The four worlds of the Qabalah are Atziluth, the state of pure Godhead; Briah, the consciousness of pure archetypes; Yetzirah, the world of specific images expressing the archetypes; and Assiah, the material world. Any image can be said to be Yetziratic but it is possible for such visualizations to conduct the consciousness of Briah or even Atziluth, the most transcendent World of Qabalah. A vision of Briah is significantly beyond anything possible in Yetzirah. Such an experience is a true breakthrough beyond the world of mere images, pieces of a greater whole.

³ Consult the works of alchemy to study the doctrine of natural signatures and correspondences in relation to this passage. Also consult popular expositions of modern physics, such as “Quantum Reality” by Nick Herbert, to study the concept of quantum entanglement in this regard. It is compelling to note how the most modern theories of physics explain magical and mystical phenomena so clearly. Somehow, consciousness is a principle that can control quantum randomness and establish entanglement between entities by an act of Will. Archetypes are the conduits through which the mind may project its energies to link disparate events in space and time.

⁴ The tapestry of interconnection between and among all objects in existence can be construed as intrinsic meaning, a meaning apart from any human value. This is the language of the living universe in which all incarnate beings live. See “Godel Escher Bach,” by Douglas Hofstadter for more information.

⁵ Contemplate the triangular geometry of each part of the Tree of Life to study the concept of source (equilibrium), emanation (force), and manifestation (form).

⁶ Consult the Royal Arch formula of Freemasonry for more information regarding the discovery of the hidden fourth transcendent principle within the three.

⁷ This book is part of the “Magnum Opus Hermetic Sourceworks” series by Adam McLean.

⁸ The eagle is the bird of Jupiter as well as the highest of the three animals attributed to Mars. The scorpion, representing the fear of Mars, symbolizes the lowest form. The serpent, representing the severity of Mars, symbolizes the middle nature. The highflying eagle symbolizes the most sublime aspect of Mars, representing divine justice. This merges with the benevolent nature of Jupiter.

⁹ This is the lesson taught in many Water angel visions. The oneness described, however, is not the unity of the One God over everything else but rather the nature of the homogeneous wholeness that is the truth underlying all appearance of multiplicity. The Truth is in wholeness, not in some imagined aloof overlord or a set of mathematical equations that model the apparent movements of things.

¹⁰ Letting go of the personal sense of separation from the rest of the universe involves a surrender of identification with temporal circumstance and attachment. This surrender reaches to the very depths of the psyche. The Path of the Wise is trodden as layer after layer of personal attachment is dissolved in this transmutation. Many initiations are needed to bring this process to the crisis point that can yield real success, if madness is avoided. The feeling of loss and dissolution is worse than any expectated gain. Much of this happens in subconsciousness but the echoes of this turmoil are very much felt by personal awareness. Yet, perseverance is worthwhile since adjustment is eventually achieved and the rewards are wonderful beyond words.

¹¹ According to alchemy, the fixed must be made volatile and the volatile must be made fixed to confect the Philosopher's Stone.

Fire Tablet – Second Round

¹ This scene reminds me of what I’ve read regarding the zero point energy, the underlying activity of the vacuum of the cosmos. Particles and antiparticles are constantly emerging out of nothing and then coming together again to mutually annihilate each other and so return to nothingness. This activity occurs so quickly that it doesn’t directly affect material processes, except on the subatomic level. Modern cosmological theory states that our cosmos began as just such a vacuum fluctuation that grew far beyond its norm. Some believe that consciousness itself derives from this zero point energy.

² See “The Mathematical Tourist,” by Ivars Peterson and “The Beauty of Fractals,” by H. O. Peitgen and P. H. Richter for more information on the mathematical device known as fractals.

⁴ Aleister Crowley reformulated the Order of the Golden Dawn after it split apart into what he called, The Astrum Argentum or Order of the Silver Star.

⁵ In the initiatory system of the Aurum Solis, an order comparable to the Golden Dawn, the First Hall consists of the grades attributed to introduction, Malkuth, and Yesod. The Second Hall covers the grades of Hod, Netzach, and the Portal just outside Tiphareth. The Third Hall leads to the Adeptship of Tiphareth and beyond. To move from one hall to another is to make a quantum leap forward in consciousness, wisdom, and power. In these initiatory angelic evocations, it sometimes feels like the Luna, Mercury, and Venus angels cover one hall, the Mars, Jupiter, and Saturn angels cover the next hall of the element, and the King reveals the next, ultimate hall of the tablet.

⁶ The question arises as to just how consciousness interacts with physical reality and what enhanced states of mind can do this. Some physicists believe that the touch of human awareness determines the outcome of quantum experiments, called the collapsing of the wave function. Others believe that consciousness itself is an intrinsic part of reality and that the mind and body are conduits through which it flows. The angels of the Watchtowers have taught me about the cocreative nature of the relationship between the human mind and the environment experienced by it. If normal waking awareness can determine at least some aspect of apparently objective reality, it follows that supercharged hypermind can enable radical shifts in the normal course of events. It seems that in this vision, the universe, or some aspect thereof, became much more complex. The possibility of truly magical effects seems justified in this view. If, as Einstein asserted, the fate of the universe depends on its geometry, then the presence of evolved consciousness must have profound implications for the conclusions of cosmology.

⁹ I encountered this supreme expression of primitive libido a few more times in my dreams after this vision. It appeared as a beautiful, young woman in the last one. We spoke for a short time but such was the emanation of raw force from her that I soon fled in terror, awakening after that. My meditations and trances became more effective and intense after that dream, as if this energy had finally been incorporated into my personal consciousness. This nuclear blast energy manifestation never appeared in my dreams again.

¹² In retrospect, I believe that the reason why so much anxiety was generated along with these profound and transcendent states of ecstasy was that my subconsciousness interpreted them as a type of death. The fits of anxiety were brought on by simple fear of death. I am reminded of the frequently mentioned connections between sex, death, and religion in much of the occult literature. Many of the sects of eastern Tantra deal with these archetypes. Some commentators and scholars believe that sex is at the core of the meaning of all religion. If so, then what was sex a veil for? In some cultures, the orgasm is called the little death. What sex, death, and religion have in common is a transcendence of spiritual state. The sense of self is taken away from its normal context and brought to a state of high intensity dimensional connectivity, far beyond the usual context of space and time. The inherent identification of such experiences with death, the final transcendence away from normal body consciousness, yields great fear. It's no wonder that so many people have an instinctual fear of all things occult. As with all fear, the only way to conquer it is to face it.

¹³ According to Hindu lore, there are three Gunas or qualities, tendencies. They are called Tamas or inertia, Rajas or energy, and Sattva or harmony. The corresponding alchemical elements are Salt, Sulfur, and Mercury, respectively. These energy types are said to be constantly revolving in a cycle, one reaching a fullness of expression and then giving way to another. A similar concept in Chinese mysticism is the wheel of Yin and Yang, two elements instead of three. Thus is the continuing emergence of order followed by the dissolution of its material components. Perhaps this cycle is actually a spiral, allowing for new and more complex expressions of emergent order as older ones dissolve and disappear from physicality. This would explain the process of evolution and how the collective consciousness of species develops. It may be that something of our individualities are preserved in the transcendence after death. A cosmic individual existence could develop after enough lives are lived.

¹⁴ In this vision, I played the part of Hadit, the simple, single focus of being, despite the complex unfoldment of my full Self. Nuit knows ever the simple and continuous reality that all things are, no matter how complex and emergent they may be.

¹⁵ Brass has been traditionally associated with copper and so both of these metals are attributed to Venus.

¹⁸ This early vision came as a complete surprise to me. I had just left work and was undoing the lock on my bicycle to ride home when suddenly I beheld in my mind a great hawk of brilliant blue fire, impossibly far off. It called to me in an extremely high pitched caw and then disappeared as if it had never been. This was in my college days, before I practiced any magick or been initiated into any order. Nothing I'd read up to that point in my occult books could explain this kind of revelation. For seventeen years, I remained in wonderment as to the nature of this event. Now, in the greatest magical moment of my life, the mystery was revealed. The Nighthawk was the great King of the South and Fire, my single greatest magical projection. It had reached back in time seventeen years to reveal itself and bring about its own revelation in a supreme trance. Indeed, my entire life is involved in a time paradox, inspired from the beginning by some far future emergence of power and transcendence beyond imagination. This may be the moment of my own death.

¹⁹ I still have no idea why this revelation had reached back to that ordinary moment in 1986. Nothing unusual was going on at the time. My only thought on this matter is that I was twenty-one years old at the time. Perhaps, I'd reached a certain psychic and spiritual maturity at that moment which naturally provided a link to another high point in my life, the apex of my Enochian Watchtower evocation working. Much goes on in the unconscious that never reaches waking consciousness. Some future revelation may yet shed light on this matter.

²⁰ I have reason to believe that the aura reaches not only every expression of mind and nerve but also the life of every cell in the body. Every least life process contributes to the overall emergence field that is the aura. Communing with the totality of one's incarnation, a complete microcosm, feels like a uniting with that cosmic transcendence in which every object, energy, and event exists as one, as well as individually, throughout the time of their evolution.

²¹ In becoming one with the totality of my being and becoming, I'd reached to the state where the microcosm unites with the macrocosm in holographic interconnection. This awesome vision gave me profound perception but no power over anything. It was a beatific, transcendental trance but was merely an initiation, an introduction to the metalevel of life in the universe. So much more needs to be done to fulfill the great possibilities suggested by this revelation.

Tablet of Union – Second Round

¹ Readers interested in quantum physics are recommended to study gauge theory in relation to this passage.

² Yellow is the King scale color of the Sephirah Malkuth. This vision depicts the wholeness of Malkuth as well as its various parts from a perspective outside of it, its metalevel. The yellow color at this level indicates the earthy expression of Spirit, the full unfoldment of the core creative pattern in all the scales of physical reality. Everything projects and expands from this prime archetype, which is the synergy of that all. The arrow of thought leads toward matter.

⁴ Evidently, the process of submergence became reversed and the ubiquitous tendency to energy increase expanded to the point of explosiveness. The fusion of opposites expressed by the union of myself and my projection, this flipside reality, completed a circuit that allowed outflowing light to return. The energy balance of all nature, was radically altered in this way. The whole situation is a wonderful metaphor for transpersonal mutation and is indicative of an integration with a deep level of the unconscious.

⁶ God does not exist until you invent Him or Her and bring Him or Her into your life.

⁷ The symbolism of the behind direction indicates the subconscious in a contrarian sense. The deepest parts of my psyche had responded to the supreme light of the Fire of Spirit angel.

⁸ Dark and disturbing images in vision are always expressions of some deepseated fear. Facing the image stalwartly serves to dissolve the fear phantasm and helps to overcome the subconscious fear directly. Doing this with an archetypal image of terror can only help to heal the species of its collective disturbance.

¹¹ A tau cross looks like an English capital 'T.' The symbol of the hexagram with a central tau is used in Royal Arch Freemasonry to represent the sudden impulse that created the universe. In the Qabalah, the Lightning Flash that created the Ten Sephiroth of the Tree of Life symbolizes this idea. The great serpent coiling up the Tree from Malkuth to Kether forms the 22 Paths and represents the rising Kundalini which carries the mystic as in a chariot along the Path of Return.

¹² This is a clear reference to the tenth Sephirah, Malkuth, and suggests the sublime mystery, "Kether is in Malkuth and Malkuth is in Kether, but after another manner.”

¹³ See “Golden Dawn Enochian Magic,” by Pat Zalewski for a description of the complex hierarchy of angels of the four elemental Watchtower tablets. The angels of the servient squares are at the bottom of this chain of command.

P R E F A C E ; AN INTRODUCTION TO THIS MANUAL

This manual is meant to provide a convenient and reasonably complete source of all information required by the serious practitioner of Enochian Magick. The branch of Magick called Enochian was disclosed in modern times by Dr. John Dee (1527-1608). Dee was an authority on mathematics, navigation, astronomy, and optics. He was also the Astrologer Royal to Elizabeth I. His magical Partner, Edward Talbott, who changed his name to Kelly, assisted him in the descriptions of the subtle regions known as the four Watchtowers and thirty Aethyrs. These, together with their presiding deities, formed the kernel of the powerful magical system now known as Enochian Magick. Dee has been called "a pioneer in spiritualism," because he kept meticulous records of all of his magical operations. However, his primary approach was through the process known as "skrying." Kelly would sit before a crystal, or "shew-stone," and describe whatever spirits or visions he saw. Dee scrupulously recorded all that Kelly told him. Often Angels from the Watchtowers or Aethyrs would assist them in their work. For example, one of their "guides" was a young elfin girl named Madimi who appeared over a period of seven years.

Little came of Dee's psychic investigations until late in the nineteenth century when a group of occultists and magicians took up the Magick. The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn used words and phrases from Dee's Enochian Magick in their magical rituals and writings. However, it was not until a magician rose to the grade of Adeptus Minor that he was given the keys to this magical system. Here Enochian invocations for skrying in the Spirit-Vision (a magical process sometimes called astral traveling) formed a part of their magical work. The Golden Dawn taught that Dee had merely rediscovered an ancient system known to the ill-fated Atlanteans thousands of years ago. The Enochian alphabet was said to have been a direct derivative of that which was used in Atlantis.

According to H.P. Blavatsky, "Enoch was a generic title, applied to, and borne by, scores of individuals, at all times and ages, and in every race and nation." (The Secret Doctrine) She equated Enoch with the Egyptian god Thoth, who gave language, law, medicine, and science to man. The term 'Enoch' meant Seer or Adept of the Secret Wisdom. Thus Enochian Magick was not created by a single individual but evolved gradually over time which is now lost in history. The Enochian alphabet and language may in fact be nearly as old as man, at least in this hemisphere. Certainly they bear striking similarities with the Necronomicon and with names used by Lovecraft and others, whose origins are now lost in our early history.

At the turn of this century, one of the Golden Dawn's members, Aleister Crowley, published some of the Order's magical papers dealing with Enochian Magick as well as some original work. Crowley acting as Kelly (a skryer), together with his associate, Victor Neuburg, who acted as Dee (a scribe), traveled through the Sahara Desert visiting one Aethyr each day (except the first two which Crowley had visited earlier when in Mexico). Crowley wrote of these visions in The Vision and The Voice, a remarkable work, although somewhat obscure and difficult to read, owing to the poetic and highly symbolic language used.

Using the works of Dee, the Golden Dawn, and Crowley, I attempted to gather together the quintessence of this Magick. I presented the basics of it in the book, Enochian Magic: A Practical Manual. This new manual is intended as a companion to that first book (hereafter referred to as ENOCHIAN MAGIC) by Llewellyn Publications. I have assumed that the reader has studied ENOCHIAN MAGIC or at least is familiar with the basic concepts of Enochian Magick. Enochian Magic contains the theory of how and why the Magick works. This manual, An Advanced Guide to Enochian Magick (with a final k), explores the many uses and applications of those basic principles.

The magical system described here and in Enochian Magic borrows heavily from both the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley. Students of this magical system are referred to The Golden Dawn by Israel Regardie and Crowley's The Vision and the Voice (Liber XXX), as well as Liber LXXXIX Vel Chanokh, both of which can be found in Gems of the Equinox by Israel Regardie. The Golden Dawn is available from Llewellyn Publications.

In my opinion, Enochian Magick ranks as one of the most powerful branches of Western Magick and occultism. It rivals the Hebrew Qabalah in scope, and provides an alternative to the more familiar system of Qabalism. One of the goals of this book is to open the Enochian system to the public and to make it as available as the Qabalah. Although steeped in Western Tradition, it has not until now, ever been fully revealed.

The Enochian magical system appeals to the brain as well as the heart. Those who desire Self-Initiation or those who seek meaning in their daily life will be attracted to its study. It offers a 'new way' for those who are dissatisfied with their current understanding of themselves and the world in which they live. Those who seek for 'scientific answers' and rational explanations for Magick will also be drawn, because such explanations are included in this system (detailed in my forthcoming book, Enochian Physics).

Enochian Magick, with its emphasis on individual study, may better serve those who prefer not to participate in the group ceremonies of more traditional Wicca or Occult organizations. Although similar in theory, Enochian Magick is probably best practiced alone and in secret.

All true religious, philosophical, occult, and magical systems lead the sincere aspirant to the same goal—a dearer understanding of the meaning of life. It is sometimes described as many paths, all leading up the same mountain toward the same invisible peak. Some paths slowly meander around the mountain. These paths require little effort, and offer great security and many resting places along the way. Others attack the mountain in a direct and aggressive ascent which is both steep and dangerous. There are advantages and disadvantages to each path up the mountain slopes. Enochian Magick is a steep and precarious path. It is one that should not be undertaken lightly. It offers quick rewards but warns of fatal penalties for the unwary or unprepared.

I have written this book to help clarify the highly complex system of Enochian Magick for those who wish to practice it. If Enochian Magick becomes better understood and more safely practiced as a result of this book, then its purpose will have been achieved.

MAGIC VS MAGICK

"The whole question has been threshed out and organized by wise men of old; they have made a Science of Life complete and perfect; and they have given to it the name of MAGICK"

Aleister Crowley, BOOK 4

Enochian Magic uses the more general and familiar term "magic" You should note that this Magician's Manual uses the spelling of Magick with a final " K " This is in keeping with Crowley's use of a final "k" for reasons of gematria as well as to distinguish his more specific system from Magic in general. Crowley defined Magick as "the science and art of causing change to occur in conformity with will." This extremely broad definition is exactly the meaning intended throughout this manual.

Magic is both a science and an art. Like music, only so much can be communicated in words. Its study demands practice. You will not become a magician simply by reading this or any other book You must put what you read into practical application. Enochian Magick is a very special category of Magick. After learning of the Watchtowers and Aethyrs, for example, you must then experience them.

Crowley's Magick is also associated in various degrees with a sexual element, which fact alone usually distinguishes it from most other magical systems. This sexual element is not considered in Enochian Magic. However, certain forces and atmospheres encountered in the Enochian system are decidedly sexual in nature. These forces constitute an essential difference between the more general Enochian Magic and the more specific Enochian Magick.

HOW TO USE THIS MANUAL

'There are only two operations possible in the universe, Analysis and Synthesis. To divide, and to unite. Salve et coagula' said the Alchemists."

Aleister Crowley, The Book of Thoth

This Magician's Manual is intended for use by a wide audience, ranging from beginners in Enochian Magick to experienced magicians. It is impossible to present a fully structured, progressive program of magical development that will be satisfactorily suitable for everyone. Some readers will be more attracted to the Watchtowers, others to the Aethyrs. Some will advance rapidly and effortlessly in certain areas while others may require more time in those areas before being ready to advance. For this reason, this manual has been especially designed to present all of the basic theoretical material together with guidelines for practical exercises that would be required for the beginner, the intermediate, and the advanced magician. You, the reader and practicing magician, must familiarize yourself with all of the information contained in this manual and then select those sections that especially appeal to you to work on. The only exception to this rule is the Aethyrs which should always be approached in serial order from TEX, the lowest, to LIL, the highest.

It is suggested that you begin your practice of Enochian Magick by browsing through this manual to learn where areas are located and what subjects are covered. The manual itself is presented in five major parts: general magical theory and background, invocations, the Watchtowers, the formulas of Enochian Magick, and the Aethyrs. Detailed figures of the Watchtower Squares can be found in the Appendices. The methods of their construction are given in Enochian Magic which is considered prerequisite reading.

Similarly, practical exercises for invocations are in Enochian Magic and are not repeated here.

If you want to practice Enochian Magick, you will need to memorize the Pentagram Ritual and the Hexagram Ritual presented in this manual because these will be used in most of your operations. You will also need to construct your own magical weapons, robe, and talismans, and begin a Magical Diary. The Test will be up to you. If you already have some experience then you should be able to begin at your own level and pace without difficulty. If you are a novice or beginner, then you should practice the exercises for beginners that are presented.

You should construct work sheets, as explained in Enochian Magic, for each exercise or operation that you perform. The work sheets contain all of the data that you will need for any particular exercise or operation and they thus assure that no data will be lost or ignored. Proper use of work sheets and your Diary will help guide you in your future exercises and operations. For example, poor results from an exercise or operation will demonstrate what will not work for you. If you carefully record the data, you will know what not to do the next time. You will find that good results are not necessarily repeatable. Everyone has good days and bad days; times when Magick can be performed easily and times when it will not work at all. With practice you will learn your own cycle and what preparations and rituals work best for you. A sample work sheet is provided in this manual.

Thirteen important Enochian rituals are presented at the end of this manual. Study them carefully before practicing them. Memorize the words and prepare the necessary weapons and instruments yourself. They do not have to be elaborate or expensive. The Ritual of TEX is designed for use by beginners. The Ritual of IAO invokes the feminine current and simulates a journey to the 5th Aethyr MAZ. The Ritual of the Priestess of the Silver Star invokes the feminine current and simulates a journey to the 19th Aethyr. The Ritual of the Pyramid invokes the masculine current and simulates a journey to the 18th Aethyr ZEN.

The Dragon Ritual is designed for the advanced magician who desires to assume the responsibilities of the Magical Dragon. The Ritual of Vretp stimulates a journey to the 14th Aethyr VTA and the City of the Pyramids. The Ritual of the Abyss simulates a journey to the Great Outer Abyss. The imagery used in these seven rituals is designed to simulate as closely as possible actual journeys to these Aethyrs.

The other six rituals include magical operations for invisibility, evocations, precipitations, power, health and longevity, and the mastery of death. These rituals are specifically designed for the advanced magician.

As an additional word on the rituals contained in this manual, the following quote should be remembered:

These rituals need not be slavishly imitated; on the contrary the student should do nothing the object of which he does not understand; also, if he has any capacity whatever, he will find his own crude rituals more effective than the highly polished ones of other people.

Aleister Crowley, Liber O

Whether you are a beginner, an intermediate, or an advanced magician, you are encouraged to experiment. Find the path that suits you best and follow it. A new world may be right around the bend.

THE HOLY GUARDIAN ANGEL

"It should never be forgotten for a single moment that the central and essential work of the Magicians is the attainment of the Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel anything apart from this course is a side issue and unless so regarded may lead to the complete ruin of the whole work of the Magician."

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

The Term Holy Guardian Angel was adopted by Crowley from the Golden Dawn, particularly from S.L. MacGregor Mathers' translation of The Sacred Magic of Abramelin, The Mage. Crowley used Abramelin to attain the Knowledge and Conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel. This name is especially appropriate in Enochian Magick. In each Aethyr that you enter, you will encounter at least one governing Angel. Crowley demonstrated that if you are properly prepared beforehand, at least one Angel will serve as your personal Cuide through each Aethyr. The Cuide that awaits you in the 8th Aethyr, ZID, is your own Holy Guardian Angel. You will confront him face to face when you enter ZID.

One problem that you must confront meanwhile is that ZID lies above the Abyss. The Holy Guardian Angel is often used by Magicians as an aid in crossing the Abyss.

This is possible because, even though a direct confrontation is not attained below the Abyss, you can nevertheless develop an intuitive feeling for your Holy Guardian Angel and call on him for assistance at any time. In fact, this is a prerequisite to entering the Abyss which is in ZAX, the tenth Aethyr.

But what is your Holy Guardian Angel? It is none other than your own spiritual self or genius. Enochian Magick teaches that every person has a spiritual counterpart, a spark of divinity, at the core of his being. You are inherently spiritual. Your physical body is an expression of your mirad. Your mirad is an expression of your soul. Your soul is an expression of your spirit. This inner spark of divine light acts on a higher level than your human mirad. It will appear to be separate from you and will seem to act independent of you. In Enochian Magick it is called your Holy Guardian Angel.

The Knowledge and Conversation with the Holy Guardian Angel refers to the act of the human self confronting the spiritual Self. It is a mystical experience in which the Human personality or ego melts into its Source. In the East, this 'blowing out' of the ego is called Nirvana. It involves a magical shift in your sense of identity. Your sense of identity will shift from the human personality to the spiritual individuality. This shift in identity is necessary to safely cross the Abyss and directly confront the Holy Guardian Angel in ZID.

THE GOALS OF ENOCHIAN MAGICK

"The first step is the separation of (what we call, for convenience) the astral body from the physical body. As our experiments proceed, we find that our astral body itself can be divided into grosser and subtler components. In this way we become aware of the existence of what we can, for convenience, the Holy Guardian Angel, and the more we realize the implications of the theory of the existence of such a being, the clearer it becomes that our supreme task is to put ourselves into intimate communication with him."

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

The ultimate goal or objective from practicing Enochian Magick is to unite the microcosm with the macrocosm; the subjective self with the objective universe. A more immediate goal for you, the Enochian magician, is to gain conscious control over your own life.

These goals can be achieved by progressively entering and experiencing the thirty Aethyrs. They can also be achieved by an invocation of your Holy Guardian Angel. The only valid objective in performing any of the lesser rituals is to purify or strengthen an aspect of yourself or your world in order to achieve success in the Ultimate Ritual.

Successful completion of the Ultimate Ritual is the Great Work of the true magician.

Enochian Magick is nothing less than a path of spiritual development. The rise upward through the thirty Aethyrs is a progressive, spiritual journey toward the essential nature of all things. It is a climb from Earth through Water, Air, and Fire into indescribable spiritual realms and beyond. Along the way you, the magician, will learn to see through illusion and deception. The innerbeing of your self and of others will slowly unveil before you. As you approach the Ultimate Ritual, you will discover your true purpose in life (called your True Will) and can then set about to express it in your daily life. Those who seek personal gain, psychic powers, or mastery over others, are advised to search elsewhere. The theoretical principles of Enochian Magick are too rooted in the laws of reincarnation and karma for any but the honest seeker who loves his fellowman to safely practice.

The practice of Enochian Magick will allow you to consciously control both yourself and your surroundings. It is the art and science of producing a willed change. Science tells us that we use only a small portion of our brain, and thus only a small portion of our inherent capabilities. Through a graduated practice of Enochian Magick, you will learn how to consciously control your thoughts, your emotions, and your actions. You will learn how to expand your capabilities. You will learn that your surroundings, in both the waking state and in dreams, are mirrored projections of our thoughts and emotions, and that external events themselves can be consciously controlled by the magical will. You will learn how to maintain a continuity of consciousness so that lapses or breaks cannot occur, and thus you will be able to remember your dreams as well as your past lives. Your everyday life will become more enriched and meaningful. Your goal in Enochian Magick is to obtain an understanding of your life while consciously directing your own destiny.

OUR WORLD ACCORDING TO ENOCHIAN MAGICK

The first step in Magick is "travel beyond the world of the senses."

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

The magical system presented by Sir John Dee, court astrologer to Queen Elizabeth 1, views the physical world as only the lowest in a graduated series of cosmic planes. There are many invisible worlds surrounding this Earth. The reason they are invisible is because they are composed of matter that is so tenuous that our eyes cannot see it. There are many degrees of matter's density. The most dense is the physical plane. The next, more ethereal and very close to the physical plane, is the etheric plane symbolized by the element Earth. The next more ethereal world is the astral plane which is usually divided into a lower half, symbolized by the element Air, and a higher half symbolized by the element Fire. The highest plane conceivable to human consciousness is the spiritual plane symbolized by the element Spirit (the Enochian system uses Spirit as a fifth element). Above this is the divine plane which is inconceivable to the human mind and no descriptions are possible.

There are seven cosmic planes in all. Little can be said of the highest two. The lower five cosmic planes are inhabited by man, although most people will acknowledge only the lowest of these, the physical.

Figure 1 shows the cosmic planes that surround our world. Actually, they are meant to be concentric, interpenetrating spheres, not separate levels like the skins of an onion. The astral plane is not up in the sky somewhere. It interpenetrates the Earth plane. However, its extension is larger than that of the Earth and so it is shown in the diagram as a larger sphere.

The Hermetic axiom, "as above so below," is used in Enochian Magick to explain how each cosmic plane can be divided into subplanes. There is an Air of Water subplane, and an Earth of Fire subplane, and so on. In addition, at the outer boundary of each cosmic plane is located a Ring-Pass-Not. This effectively prohibits passage of a lower cosmic element into a higher sphere. Earth can not pass into Water, nor Air into Fire. These are outlined in Figure 2.

You must take care not to confuse the cosmic element Earth with physical earth. Nor is the cosmic element Water the familiar H₂O of physical chemistry. Western occultism uses these terms because of their correspondences. Cosmic Water is somewhat like physical water. For example, it is reflective, and expressive. Both can be easily molded into any desired shape. But the similarities can only be stretched so far.

The Golden Dawn taught the Qabalistic doctrine of four worlds or planes as follows:

1. Atziluth, the divine world of archetypal ideas.
2. Briah, the creative world of the Archangels.
3. Yetzirah, the astral world of Angels and Demons.
4. Assiah, the physical world, the lowest and most material.

These bear striking similarities to the Enochian Earth, Water, Air, and Fire Tablets. You must always remember that the Earth Tablet refers to the etheric Plane rather than to our physical world. In the same way, the Hebrew Qabalah equates the lowest Sephira, Malkuth, with our planet Earth. The lowest of the Enochian Aethyrs, however, is just above (i.e., less dense than) the Earth and thus does not precisely equate with Malkuth. Correspondences between the Enochian system and the Hebrew Qabalah have impressive similarities, but the Enochian Aethyrs are not identical with the Qabalistic Sephiroth.

MAN ACCORDING TO ENOCHIAN MAGICK

"A man is what he maketh himself within the limits fixed by his inherited destiny; he is a pan of mankind; his actions affect not only what he calleth himself, but also the whole universe."

Aleister Crowley, Liber Librae

The Enochian magical system views man as a microcosm of the macrocosmic world. As the physical Earth is the lowest of a series of expressions, so your physical body is but the lowest of a graduated series. This view accords well with both Eastern and Western occultism. You have a body or vehicle to correspond with each cosmic plane. Immediately above or behind the physical body is the etheric body. Next, is the astral body followed by the mental and spiritual bodies. The physical body is the vehicle through which you view and interact with the physical cosmic plane. The astral body is the vehicle through which you view and interact with the astral cosmic plane whose symbolic cosmic element is Water. The physical body is limited by a Ring-Pass-Not to the physical cosmic plane. The etheric body is limited to the etheric cosmic plane. The astral body cannot enter the mental cosmic plane, and so on.

Man below the first Aethyr LIL is dualistic. However, above LIL, man is monadic. This monadic nature, often called "monadic essence" in occult terminology, is symbolized by a circle with a point in the center as shown in the figure on the following page. The circle's center is a geometric point of consciousness often called a "consciousness center." The surrounding circumference in the microcosm is called the "aura," while in the macrocosm it is called the "magical universe." A well-known axiom of occultism is that the aura of man is a magical mirror of the universe. In Enochian Magick, your aura is your personal replica of the magical universe.

Man is like a circle whose center is nowhere (microscopic) and whose circumference is everywhere (infinite). Enochian Magick represents this center by the god Hadit. The circumference is represented by the goddess Nuit.

THE FIVE ELEMENTS

"The earth is an element, and whatever is produced from it. So is the water and all produced there from. So then that is an element which produces. And an element is a mother, and there are four of them, air, Fire, water, earth. From these four matrices everything in the whole world is produced."

Paracelsus

Figure 1 shows that the cosmic elements of Earth, Water, Air, Fire, and Spirit are not to be taken as chemical elements but as quantifiers of density. Physical matter is the grossest or most dense cosmic element in our world-system. Spirit is the least dense (most ethereal) cosmic element. The other cosmic elements range in between. In Enochian Magick a thought is a thing; an entity, which is composed of the cosmic element, Air. An emotion is an object which is composed of the cosmic element, Water.

Table I on the following page contains three symbolic ways of representing these cosmic elements. The first group of symbols are magical and cover all five elements. The second group of symbols are Kerubic astrological sigils. The third alternate symbol group are the Eastern Tattwas adopted by the Golden Dawn.

THE MAGICAL UNIVERSE

"The Magician works in a Temple; the Universe, which is (be it remembered) coterminous withhimself."

Aleister Crowley, Book 4

The Magical Universe is the macrocosm of the magician. As a magician, you will have your own experiences in your own aspects, but no two magicians will see the subtle planes of the Watchtowers and Aethyrs in exactly the same way. These general agreements are called signposts. Like key sites on a map, the signposts will guide you through the major regions of the cosmic planes. However, no two tourists will have exactly the same experiences on a trip to a foreign country, and in the same way no two magicians will experience the Watchtowers or Aethyrs in exactly the same way. Even when the objective experience is similar, every-one's responses and interpretations will vary according to his personal background and karma. The Aethyr DES, for example, will be seen quite differently by the scholar and the artist. Your experiences in BAG will be substantially dependent on your personal opinion of yourself, and so on.

One way to understand the Magical Universe is to consider it as one half of a monad. The other half of this monad is consciousness. Because a monad is defined as a single indivisible unit, consciousness can never actually be separated from the universe. Imagine consciousness as a geometric point whose extension is zero. Imagine the universe as a circle whose circumference is infinite. Together the point within the circle symbolizes man within the Magical Universe. Crowley called the infinitely large circle Nuit. The Egyptian goddess of the night sky Nuit (or Nut) personified infinite space as well as the concept of objectivity. He called the infinitely small point Hadil. The Chaldean god Hadit (or Had) personified pure consciousness as well as the concept of subjectivity. The Egyptians used the symbol of the winged globe to represent a center of consciousness.

Whatever the symbol used, as a magician you will soon realize that the universe around you always faithfully expresses the thoughts and emotions that are within you.

Similarly, the thoughts and emotions within you are conditioned by the world environment around you. Wherever you go, try to see your inner world and your outer world as two sides of an equation. When you reach the point where this truth is realized as a fact of life, you will be able to control every situation by an exercise of your will. For example, if you are aware of this fundamental truth during a dream at night, you will be able to consciously control the dream content. Somewhat like a movie director, you can stop the dream at any point and make whatsoever changes you will. For this reason, you should use your dreams to practice your magic skills. Never waste a night. Keep your magical diary by your bed, and immediately after waking up down whatever you can remember of your dreams. Will yourself to remember your dreams before falling asleep. Dreams will serve as a very accurate barometer to indicate just how well you truly understand your Magical Universe.

THE ENOCHIAN ALPHABET

"It (Le., Enochian is not a jargon; it has a grammar and syntax of its own. It is very much more sonorous, stately and impressive than even Greek or Sanskrit, and the English translation, though in places difficult to understand, contains passages of a sustained sublimity that Shakespeare, Milton and the Bible do not surpass."

Aleister Crowley, Confessions

"The Enochian language is not just a haphazard combination and compilation of divine and angelic names drawn from the Tablets. Apparently, it is a true language with a grammar and syntax of its own." Israel Regardie, The Enochian Language

The Enochian alphabet was given to the public by Sir John Dee and Edward Kelly and enhanced later by the Golden Dawn and Aleister Crowley. Each letter has a specific magical meaning and gematria number associated with it. When letters are combined to form magical Words of Power, the individual letter meanings combine to indicate the overall formula of the word or name. In addition, the gematric value of individual letters combines (sums) to form a gematric value for the word or name. A study of words, names, phrases and even entire sentences with equal gematric values will reveal the existence of correspondences or relationships that are often otherwise hidden or occult. Table II contains a summary of the characteristics ascribed to the Enochian letters by Crowley. Table III shows four possible gematria schemes with the Enochian alphabet. The Aurum Solis values were determined from the experiences of that occult organization as described in The Magical Philosophy, Book V: Mysteria Magica by Melita Denning and Osborne Phillips (Llewellyn Publications). The Golden Dawn-Greek/Hebrew values are presented by David Allen Hulse in The Numerical Structure of Enochian. Here each Enochian letter is assigned the gematric value of its corresponding Greek and Hebrew letter. The Enochian letter A corresponds to Aleph and Alpha which have the gematric — value of 1. The letter B corresponds to Beth and Beta which have the value of 2, and so on. The Golden Dawn-Geomancy values were also presented by David Allen Hulse in the same work. Here sixteen letters of the Enochian alphabet are assigned a corresponding geomantic figure. The Golden Dawn correspondence between geomantic figures and Hebrew letters is then used to determine the gematric values. The remaining five letters are assigned values devised by Aleister Crowley. The fourth possible system of gematria is that used by Crowley in The Vision and The Voice. This is also the system employed in this manual. The student is advised to experiment with all of these systems. Let the results of your own experience determine which to use.

A MAGICAL THEOREM

Every man and every woman is a star.

Aleister Crowley, Book of the Law

A major theorem of Enochian Magick is that every man and every woman is inherently a star. Although this theorem is stated in Crowley's Book of the Law, the idea is a very old one. In ancient Egypt, for example, the highest and most spiritual component of man was the khabs, which together with the khu, constituted the spiritual body of man similar in definition to the atman of Vedanta. The Egyptian word khabs also translates as star.

As stars travel through the sky in their own orbits, so every man and woman have their own path to tread. Everyone has an inherent right to tread his own path without interference from another.

As a practitioner of Enochian Magick you must determine your True Will, decide upon your course of action, and carry it through without fear. You also must respect the inherent right of every other person to do the same.

Another way of stating this theorem is that every man and every woman is an inherently complete and self-sufficient individuality. The essence of man is monadic. Your Great Work is largely the process of realizing the truth of this theorem.

Aleister Crowley's famous dictum, "Do What Thou Wilt" is a direct corollary of this theorem. If the word 'thou' refers to the human ego or personality, this becomes a license to debauchery and will result in a misuse of Magick. But if the word 'thou' refers to the spirit, or individuality, then the dictum becomes a way of living that is in harmony with nature and natural law. You are already spiritual. You are a star in the hidden core of your being. Once this fact is seen to be so, your Great Work will be to express your spiritual nature in your daily life. "Do What Thou Wilt," is another way of saying, "Do outwardly in your life what is already inherently in the core of your being." It means first Know Thyself, and then, and only then, Be Thyself.

Enochian Magick teaches that when you, the magician, vise into the 8th Aethyr, ZID, you will confront your Holy Guardian Angel. Conversation with this Angel will reveal your True Will. After obtaining this knowledge, you can set about to tread your true Magical Path. Your motion through life will then be like a star following its orbit through space.

ANOTHER MAGICAL THEOREM

Let there be no difference made among you between any one thing and any other thing for thereby there cometh hurt.

Aleister Crowley, Book of the Law

Another major theorem of Enochian Magick is that man is capable of being and/or using, anything that he encounters, because everything that can be encountered by man is a part of his being.

You will probably not fully realize this theorem until you enter the higher Aethyrs (especially the third Aethyr, ZOM) but at least an intellectual understanding of it should be obtained at the beginning of your practice. This theorem is the underlying principle behind all operations of Enochian Magick. It explains how these operations work.

This theorem is directly related to the Hermetic Axiom, "as above so below," and the magical axiom that man is a microcosm. The outer world is a macrocosm of man the microcosm. Whatsoever is in the world of man has its counterpart somewhere within man himself. Whatsoever is in the world which is not within man, will not be encountered by man. This theorem holds true for all energies, forces, beings, and things throughout the universe.

The practice of Enochian Magick will demonstrate the truth of this theorem. The deities and demons encountered in the Watchtowers and Aethyrs will appear to be independent, of you, the magician. However, in the same way that dream images appear autonomous but are actually dependent, so are the deities of Enochian Magick. It is only after you become conscious of these esoteric correspondences that you can hope to control the Watchtower deities. There is a mystical relationship between the subjective self of the magician and the objective world in which the magician finds himself/herself at any point in time and space. They are two sides of a duality.

THE PRIMARY MAGICAL OPERATIONS

Magick is the Science of understanding oneself and one's conditions. It is the Art of applying that understanding in action.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

There are three primary magical operations.

1. Invocation/Evocation. The first consists of invoking or evoking Enochian forces, intelligent or otherwise. This involves those traditional magical operations wherein deities or demons are brought into materialization or physical embodiment under your conscious control.

2. Out of Body Traveling. The second operation consists of leaving the physical cosmic plane and traveling through the subtle cosmic planes that surround the Earth in your subtle body. This is sometimes called traveling in the astral body, or astral traveling. However, the Enochian system views the astral as only one of several cosmic planes and therefore prefers to call the process traveling in the Spirit Vision. The term Spirit Vision implies maintaining a consciousness which is higher than the normal brain consciousness. Traveling in the Spirit Vision differs from dreaming in that you must retain full consciousness during the operation and return to your physical body with unbroken memory.

3. Skrying. A third operation is called skrying. This consists of using a shewstone or other appropriate device to focus your consciousness on the subtle planes while retaining awareness of, and control over, your physical body. Skrying is a form of meditation. While the mind roams the Watchtowers and Aethyrs, the body can speak of the visions and voices that are encountered by the mind.

This operation was the favorite of Dee and Kelly. In addition, Crowley used the method of skrying to visit each of the thirty Aethyrs.

THE WATCHTOWERS

Regardless of their origin, these Tablets and the whole Enochian system do represent realities of the inner planes. Their value is undoubted, as only a little study and application prove.

Israel Regardie, Introduction to the Enochian System

A knowledge of these tables could then, if complete, afford an understanding of the Laws which govern the whole creation.

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn'.

The Book of the Concourse of the Forces

Each Watchtower is constructed of 12 squares by 13 squares. This gives a total of 156 squares per Watchtower and 675 total squares, although only 644 are importara (624 Watchtower Squares and 20 Tablet of Union Squares).

You must remember that these drawings are only crude representations of the Watchtowers. For example, the actual Watchtowers are not two-dimensional like the fiat paper of this book but extend in at least five dimensions: height, width, depth, time, and consciousness.

Each Watchtower Square represents a specific area or region of the inner worlds. Each is controlled by a hierarchy of deities. Some have demons, and some are associated with key Egyptian deities and corresponding sphinxes. Some squares are associated with astrology signs and Tarot cards. A detailed analysis of the many forces and currents that flow through these squares is described in Enochian Magic. The detailed results are included in the Appendices of this manual (see Appendices A through D). They are not haphazard, but represent a natural outcome of the Hermetic axiom, "as above so below." The mapping of the Watchtowers includes data from logical correspondences, experimentation, and intuitive insight. It is intended as a useful guide much like a roadmap for an uncharted country. As a magician, you must fill in the details for yourself as you discover them.

THE TABLET OF UNION

The Enochian Tablets are four in number, each referred to one of the elements of Earth, Air, Fire and Water. In addition to these four there is another smaller Tablet, which is called The Tablet of Union, referred to the element of Ether or Spirit. Its function, as its name implies, is to unite and bind together the four elemental Tablets.

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn The Book of the Concourse of the Forces

The Black Cross is shown in Figure 1, Appendix A, as the central horizontal row and vertical column of darkened squares. The two horizontal arms have 12 squares each and the top and bottom vertical arrays have 13 squares each. The central square at the midpoint of the tablet makes the total number of squares 51. This is the numerical value of the word GOSA (Goh-sah), meaning strange or unusual. The letters within this Black Cross spell out the four Cosmic Elements as follows:

EXARP (Ehtz-ar-peh) meaning Air is written:

7 Γ ↗ Ε Ω

HKOMA (Heh-koh-mah) meaning Water is written:

Ω Β Ζ Ε ↗

NANTA (Nah-en-tah) meaning Earth is written:

BITOM (Bee-toh-meh) meaning Fire is written:

The 51 squares of the Black Cross contain empty squares as well as repeated letters (each of the four elements is spelled out twice on the Black Cross). Therefore, they are usually arranged in four words of five letters each as shown in Figure 3, Appendix A. This arrangement of 20 squares is called the Tablet of Union. The name is derived from the fact that the Black Cross joins all four Watchtowers together into a single Tablet as shown in Figure 1, Appendix A. The letters of the Tablet of Union are used to prefix the names of specific Watchtower Angels (see Appendix B). The resultant names are the names of the Archangels. The letters of the Tablet of Union are also used to prefix the names of Demons. This is shown in the sixteen figures of Appendix B.

Each square of Figure 3, Appendix A, can be made into a truncated pyramid. The result is shown in Figure 15, Appendix A. Knowing how the four cosmic elements are combined within a square will usually shed light on the characteristics of that region.

Each row of the Tablet of Union is under the influence of the Cosmic Element whose name is spelled by the letters.

For example, the top row is under the influence of Air. Files or columns are influences by the names spelled by the letters in that column: EHNB, XKAI, AONT, RMTO and PAAM.

The gematric values of these names indicate the type and nature of the influence. For example, EHNB has the value 66 which is equal to the words TOTO meaning "cycles" and IA meaning "truth." The first squares of the Tablet therefore, contain forces of truth which tend toward periodic expression. The governing element of the first file is Spirit. The second file is governed by Air, giving squares in that file the quality of spiritual intelligence and consciousness. The third file is governed by Water, giving squares in that file the first finges of emotions and feelings. The fourth file is governed by Earth, giving form and the first stages of solidity to those regions. The last file is governed by Fire, which quickens those regions and gives them life.

MAJOR WATCHTOWERS DEITIES

'Astral' Beings possess knowledge and power of a different kind from our own; their 'universe' is presumably of a different kind from ours, in same respects It is more convenient to assume the objective existence of an 'Angel' who gives us new knowledge than to allege that our invocation has awakened a supernormal power in ourselves.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

Figure 9, Appendix A, shows the four Secret Holy Names of Divinity, which are given by the Watchtowers. These names are found by reading across the horizontal bar of the Great Crosses. The four Holy Names are:

- 1) Air OROIBAHAOZPI
(Oh-roh Ee-beh Ah-oh-zod-pee)
- 2) Water MPHARSLGAIOL
(Em-peh-heh Ar-ess-el Gah-ee-oh-leh)
- 3) Earth MORDIALHKTGA
(Moh-ar Dee-ah-leh Heh-keh-teh-gah)
- 4) Fire OIPTEAAPDOKE
(Oh-ee-peh Teh-ah-ah Peh-doh-keh)

Figure 10, Appendix A, shows how the names of the four Great Kings of the Watchtowers are determined. In addition, the correspondence between the four Watchtowers and the four Tarot trumps is given. The four Kings are:

- 1) Air BATAIVAH
(Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh)
- 2) Water RAAGIOSL
(Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel)

- 3) Earth IKZHIKAL
(E e-keh-zo d-he e-kal)
- 4) Fire EDLPRNAA
(Eh-del-par•nah-ah)

Figure 11, Appendix A, shows how the names of the 24 seniors are determined from the arms of the Great Crosses. There are six Seniors in each Watchtower. Figure 11 also shows the correspondence between the four Watchtowers and the four syllables of the Hebrew Tetragrammaton. The names of the Seniors are:

These names are extremely important in Enochian Magick. They must be recited outwardly and vibrated inwardly in most Enochian operations. Consult Enochian Magic for the proper methods of using these Names of Power, their meanings, and gematric values.

SEPHIROTHIC NAMES

I must now explain the real meaning of the terms Sephira and Sephiroth. The first is singular, the second is plural. The best rendering of the word is "numerical emanation." There are ten Sephiroth, which are the most abstract forms of the ten numbers of the decimal scale Among the Sephiroth, jointly and severally, we find the development of the persons and attributes of God.

Aleister Crowley, Gematria

The names of the presiding deities of the sixteen Sephirothic Crosses (also called Calvary Crosses) are shown in Figure 12, Appendix A. Consult Enochian Magic for gematria values and correct pronunciations. These deities must be addressed for all operations on any of the squares of the Sephirothic Crosses.

Observation of Figure 12, Appendix A, shows that in each subquadrant, one square is used for both the horizontal and vertical names of the Calvary Cross Angels. These 16 special letters can be arranged to spell the phrase ONDO-APIZE-BABALON (Oh-en-doh Ah-pee-zodeh Bah-bah-loh-en) which can be translated, "the eternal regions of BABALON," where BABALON is the name of an important goddess. She is equivalent to Kali, Kundali, Isis, and other feminine deities who are associated with the Qabalistic Sephira of Binah. The gematric value of this Enochian phrase, i.e., the value of the 16 letters that are assigned to these squares, is 318. This is the value of the Magick Square of OLAP as explained later in ENOCHIAN HEALING TECHNIQUES. Essentially, this means that these 16 squares all contain strong forces of healing and well-being.

GENERAL WATCHTOWER FORCES AND CHARACTERISTICS

*Thine is the Air with its Movement! Thine is the Fire with its Flashing Flame! Thine is the Water with its Ebb and Flow!
Thine is the Earth with its enduring Stability!*

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn

Figure 14, Appendix A, shows the major characteristics and astrological signs associated with the sixteen subquadrants of the Watchtowers.

The forces of Earth begin with chaotic violence. These lead gradually into formative forces, which result in establishing distinct forms. The forces of Water begin with raw emotional energy. These gradually build up into forces of cohesion and creativity. The forces of Air begin with nebulous formative relationships and progress systematically through a series of harmonious changes and knowledge. The forces of Fire begin with destructive violence. These forces advance gradually into creative transformations and the renewal of form.

You should study these figures carefully until you get an intuitive feel for how these different forces and energies course through the Watchtowers. Four major types of forces s can be found, creative, destructive, masculine and feminine.

WATCHTOWER PYRAMIDS

And the Angel sayeth: Verily is the Pyramid a Temple of Initiation. Verily also is it a tomb.

AleisterCrowley, The Vision and the Voice

Enochian Magic explains the specific procedures used to convert each Watchtower Square into a truncated pyramid. Figure 15, Appendix A, shows the results of converting the Tablet of Union Squares into truncated pyramids. Figures 16 to 31 show the pyramids of the four Watchtowers. These, or similar diagrams, can be used to focus your mirad when skrying the Watchtowers in the Spirit Vision.

In addition to providing a three-dimensional effect when gazing at the truncated pyramids, they are also helpful in showing how the cosmic elements are combined in each Watchtower Square. For example, when you look at the O in NAKO (Figure 18, Appendix A) you can see at a glance that it is composed of two parts Air, one part Earth, and one part Water. During a visit to this region, you would expect to see a lot of Air, some Water, and some Earth, but no Fire at all. Now look at the S in SHAL (also Figure 18, Appendix A). Here you can see at a glance that this region is three parts Earth and one part Air. You would not expect to see evidence of Water or Fire anywhere in this region. In this manner, the truncated pyramids that are shown in Figures 15 through 31 in Appendix A can be especially helpful in quickly summarizing the cosmic elements of the Watchtower Squares. The pyramid itself is a powerful magical symbol. Its base is four-sided and thus rooted in four, (four is the number for stability and firmness) while its peak is a single point high above. It represents the magical universe as a graduated expression in time, space, and form of BEING, from the highest spiritual spheres to the lowest material globes. The pyramid can also represent yourself; the base corresponds to your physical body and the topmost point to your Holy Guardian Angel.

As an aid in magical operations using Watchtower pyramids, you can make a sample pyramid out of cardboard as follows: Cut the pyramid out of white cardboard with a base of about four inches. Use a form such as that shown below. Fold the cutout at the dotted lines and paste the edges to make a truncated pyramid.

THE GREAT CROSSES

*The most important item on each Angelic Tablet is the Great Cross whose shaft descends from top to bottom and whose bar crosses the Tablet in the centre. This Cross comprises 36 squares, and has a double vertical line which is called linea Dei Patris Filiique, 'the Line of God the Father and the Son, and 'Linea Spiritus Sancti,' the Line of the Holy Spirit, crossing this horizontally, and containing one rank of letters. The 'Linea Spiritus Sancti' is always the seventh line or rank of letters from the top, while the two vertical columns of the 'Linea Dei Patris Filiique' are always the sixth and seventh columns counting from either right or left.*

The Book of the Concourse of the Forces

The central row of each Watchtower Tablet, together with the two central vertical columns, form what are called the Great Crosses of the Watchtowers. The squares of each Great Cross can be converted to truncated pyramids as shown in Appendix D. The outer arms of these crosses contain the letters O, M, E and L and the inner arms contain the letters O, M, I and A. Taken together they form the words OM-EL-OM-IA (Oh-meh el-oh meh-ee-ah) which means, "the highest understanding is the understanding of truth."

The figures in Appendix D show that each Great Cross contains two squares that are used for both the vertical and horizontal bars. The letters of these squares can be arranged to spell an important 8-lettered magical word: LAHALASA (Lah-hah-lah-sah).

This name (actually it is the phrase L-AHA-LAS-A) can be roughly translated as "supreme treasure zones." The gematric value of this word is 48, an important number in Enochian Magick: it is the number of the magical formula of IAO (see THE FORMULA OF IAO later in this manual). This word can also be used in magical operations in the form of a Magick Square as shown below. The gematric value of this square is 96 where $96 = 48 \times 2$. Each letter of the word LAHALASA is used twice in the square.

L	A	H	A
A	L	A	H
S	A	L	A
A	S	A	L

THE EFFECTS OF MULTIPLE LETTERS IN A SQUARE

*And all these things deceived me not, for 1 expanded them by my subtlety finto the Twelve Rays of the Crown.
And these twelve rays were One.*

Aleister Crowley, Liber Ararita

Some of the Watchtower Squares have multiple letters. Two squares (one in Water and one in Earth) have four letters each, and two squares (one in Water and one in Earth), have three letters each. Fifty-five squares have two letters each. Multiple letters express the variety of forces acting in these regions. Many of these squares can be seen in several different ways. For example, the element Fire is both destructive and creative because the enlivening of spirit implies the death of matter. In this way the Archangel of the square T/L in MSAT (L) in Fire of Earth can be spelled ALMSA or ATMSA where,

ALMSA = 117 = NANBA (thorns) ATMSA
= 118 = CONO (faith)

If you use the letter L, you will see the square in its destructive aspect. If you use the letter T, you can view the same square in its spiritual aspect. To slightly complicate matters a bit more, the letter T can be either a 9 or a 3 so that ATMSA himself has two aspects denoted by the numbers 118 and 112.

The last square of VSX(S)Y(L,N,H), in Water of Water, has four letters (Le., Y, L, N, and H). As a general rule, the first letter is the most important. Thus the Angel YVSX is the main ruler of this square. However, the Angels LVSX, NVSX and HVSX can also be found in this square. When you look at the gematric values of these names you will see:

YVSX = 537 LVSX =
485 NVSX = 527
HVSX = 478

Furthermore, because the letter X can also be an S (this square has hilo letters, S and X) you would also find,

YVSS = 144 LVSS
= 92 NVSS = 134
HVSS = 85

This gives a total of eight possible Angels, Archangels and Demons in this square. This variety of governing forces is consistent with the presiding Egyptian goddess, Isis, who herself has many aspects and roles. However, each ruler will be influenced by Saturn and the Universe (Atu XXI).

Multiple letters in squares, like multiple Gematria values for I, T and Z, result from the complexity of these regions. The potential forces of any square can only be fully investigated by looking at each of the letters assigned to it.

THE WATCHTOWER COLORS

Blue am I and gold in the light of my bride: but the red gleam is in my eyes; and my spangles are purple and green. Purple beyond purple: it is the light higher than eyesight. There is a veil: that veil is, black.

Aleister Crowley, The Book of the Law

The appropriate symbolic colors to use in making your own cards or charts are as follows:

AIR = yellow Air of Air = mauve or purple
Water of Air = blue lettering
Earth of Air = black lettering
Fire of Air = red lettering

WATER = blue Air of Water = yellow lettering Water of Water = orange lettering Earth of Water = black lettering Fire of Water = red lettering

EARTH = black Air of Earth = yellow lettering Water of Earth = blue lettering
Earth of Earth = green or white lettering Fire of Earth = red lettering

FIRE = red Air of Fire = yellow lettering Water of Fire = blue lettering Earth of Fire = black lettering
Fire of Fire = green lettering

The colors of the Great Cross are:

Aries, Leo, Sagittarius = Firey = red Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces = Watery = blue Gemini, Libra, Aquarius = Airy = Yellow Taurus, Virgo, Capricorn = Earthy = black

The colors of the Sephirothic Crosses are determined using each truncated pyramid as:

The colors of the Kurubic Squares are determined as:

where,

T __ Color of Tablet

K = Color of element of the Court Card of the Kerub

S = Same as triangle no. 1

A = Color of Angle

WANDS = Fire, Yod, red

CUPS = Water, He, blue

SWORDS = Air, Vau, yellow

PANTACLES = Earth, He, black

The colors of the Lesser Watchtower squares are determined from the astrological and planetary signs as follows:

RED = firey = Sun, Jupiter, Aries, Cancer, Libra, Capricorn

BLUE = watery = Mars, Taurus, Leo, Scorpio,

Aquarius

YELLOW = airy = Saturn, Mercury, Gemini,

Virgo, Sagittarius, Pisces

BLACK = earthy = Venus, Moon, Fire, Air,

Water, Saturn

As a general rule, complementary colors should be used when coloring the sides of truncated pyramids as follows:

BLUE squares/pyramid sides have orange lettering

YELLOW squares/pyramid sides have purple lettering

BLACK squares/pyramid sides have white lettering

RED squares/pyramid sides have green lettering

NAMES OF ARCHANGELS, ANGELS, AND DEMONS

Behold, Isis assumed the form of a woman who was adept with words .. Isis said to Ra, "Please tell me your name, O Divine Father, for the life of a person is invested in his name" ... The Divine Majesty, Ra, said, "I will give in, and go to Isis and send the divine name from my body to her body." The divinity hid himself, from the gods in the vast throne room on the Boat of Millions of Years. When events corresponded to the 'time of coming forth of the heart,' she said to her son Horus, "Forces of attraction are from the living mirror of God. God has turned his two eyes. The mighty god has given up his divine name ... Indeed, the mighty god has given up his divine name: Ra."... This was spoken by Isis, the Great One, the divine mistress of the gods, who knew Ra by his own name.

The Legend of Ra and Isis

Figures 1 to 16, Appendix B, show the names of the major deities of the 16 subquadrants of the Watchtowers.

The four squares at the top of these figures contain the Names of the Kerubic Angels. There are no demons or lesser Angels in these upper squares (i.e., they are upper in the sense that they are located above the horizontal Sephirothic Cross bars.) The names shown in the boxes over the tops of the squares are the Archangels. The Archangels reside over the respective files of squares including the Kerubim. As an example, Figure 1, Appendix B, shows Air of Air. You should see that in the first square the Archangel ERZLA (Erah-zod-lah) governs the Kerubic Angel RZLA (Ra-zodlah) who in turn governs the four squares in the file or column below the first square. EZLAR (Eh-zod-lahrah) is the Archangel who governs ZLAR (Zod-lah-rah) in the second file. The 16 lower squares are called the Lesser Squares of Air of Air. The first of these squares is governed by the Ruling Lesser Angel XKZNS (Tz-keh-zoden-seh) and the Lesser Angel KZNS (Keh-zoden-seh). The Demon XKZ (Tz-keh-zod) is also in this square.

As another example, look at Figure 12, Appendix B. You should see that the square T of STIM (reference Figure 6, Appendix A, foz letters) is governed by the Ruling Lesser Angel ATIMS (Ah-tee-meh-seh) and the Lesser Angel TIMS (Tee-meh-seh). The Demon ATI (Ah-tee) is also in this square which is presided over by the Kerubic Angel AOMI (Ah-oh-mee) and the Archangel NAOMI (Nah-oh-mee).

The appropriate hierarchy of deities must be addressed during all magical operations in the Watchtower squares. Use the following hierarchy for your invocations:

Kings
Seniors
Sephirothic Cross Angels Kerubic
Angels
Archangels
Angels
Lesser Angels
Demons

THE MAJOR MAGICAL INSTRUMENTS AND WEAPONS

Let the Adept be armed with his Magick Rood and provided with his Mystic Rose.

Aleister Crowley, The Star Sapphire

THE TEMPLE. As a magician, your temple is your universe. Enochian Magick does not recognize only one universe but a myriad of universes, one for each man. As our thinking tends to be similar to that of others, so our universes tend to overlap. As thinking (Le., our inner subjective universe) tends to be dissimilar, so our universes tend toward isolation. This fact is dearly seen in the third Aethyr, ZOM, where you can become a true Magus, the creator and master of your own universe. Man's nature above the first Aethyr, LIL, is monadic. Below LIL man's nature is dualistic. The two primary polarities of man's dualistic nature are objectivity (the universe) and subjectivity (consciousness).

THE CIRCLE. A cirde is the magical symbol of man's monadic nature above LIL. It should be used by you to define the limits of your magical operations. A cirde, usually green, is drawn on the floor around yourself. Divine names and appropriate symbols, such as the magical formulas, described later in this manual, are used to strengthen the cirde. Lamps or candles can be used outside the circle to ward off the forces of darkness.

THE ALTAR. An altar is usually placed within the de. It symbolizes the foundation of your work. The altar should be foursquare to symbolize the stable basis of the Magick to be used as well as your fixed will. The altar can be made of either oak (rigidity) or acacia (resurrection).

THE WAND. This is the most important of the magical instruments. The Wand symbolizes your Magical Will as well as your Wisdom and your Word. It is the principle weapon of the Magias. The Wand is used in both invocations and evocations. Yours is also an embodiment of your creative power. When charged with a masculine force it symbolizes the lingam. In Enochian Magick the Wand is the symbol of Fire, and is especially used in those operations involving the Watchtower of Fire.

THE CUP. The Cup is a passive instrument. It represents your magical understanding. In the beginning, your Cup is usually empty. Gradually, with effort and experience, it fills with your understanding of truth. It is by nature round, vulnerable, and receptive. When charged with a feminine force, it symbolizes the yoni. In Enochian Magick the Cup is the magical symbol of Water and is especially used in operations involving the Watchtower of Water.

THE SWORD. The Sword symbolizes your ability to reason. The magical Sword is the analytical faculty of the mind. As your mental faculties dissect complex ideas and theories, so the sharpness of the Sword will cut and pierce through things. When you pierce a demon with your Sword, you simultaneously strike it with rational logical thought. The Sword thus aids to see through illusion and complexity. The nature of this weapon is destructive. It is also divisive. The blade should be steel, the metal of Mars. It is considered a crude weapon and its use is usually restricted to the Watchtowers and lower Aethyrs. Its primary use is to free you from emotional entanglements that are often encountered in the Watchtowers. Its natural force is masculine. In Enochian Magick, the Sword is the magical symbol of Air, and is especially used in those operations involving the Watchtower of Air.

THE PANTACLE. The Pantacle is your food (often symbolized by bread). As the cup is hollow, so the Pantacle is flat. It also symbolizes your body. It serves chiefly as a source of strength and vitality. It is usually made in the shape of a disk and enscribed with appropriate magical symbols. For each quality or idea engraved on a Pantacle, the symbol for its opposite should also be included so that the forces embodied are always balanced. In many magical operations the Pantacle is used to represent the karma of the magician (occultism defines the pphysicalbody as the crystallization of one's past karma). Its natural force is feminine. In Enochian Magick, the Pantacle is the magical symbol of Earth, and is especially used in those operations iinvolving the Watchtower of Earth.

THE DAGGER. The Dagger symbolizes the piercing ability of thought. As you aquire experience and encounter the Aethyrs, you will gradually replace the cumbersome Sword with the quicker, and equally effective, Dagger. The sword dissociates and divides, but the dagger pierces te the heart. Its chief function is the letting of blood and thereby it forces calmness. Like the Sword, the Dagger is associated with the cosmic element Air.

NOTE: it is sometimes said that the Wand should be associated with Air because the Caduceus was the Wand of the god Mercury who has traditionally been associated. with Air. This would associate the Dagger and Sword with Fire. This fine of reasoning concludes that Crowley and the Golden Dawn used deliberate blinds here to fool the unwary. Rather than take sides on this issue, you should first experiment with both combinations and then choose whichever works best for you.

THE MAGICAL ROBE

The Robe is that which conceals, and which protects the Magician from the elements; it is the silence and secrecy with which he works, the hiding of himself in the occult life of Magick and Meditation.

Aleister Crowley, Book 4

The primary article of magical clothing is the robe. There are two main types: black with a hood, and white without a hood. Appropriate symbols can be used to decorate the robe according to your wat.

The chief function of the black robe is to protect you by concealing. It offers both silence and secrecy. It symbolizes your temporary withdrawal from the everyday bustle of life.

The white robe symbolizes your aura. Your aura is the invisible sheath or sphere of light that surrounds your physical body. Because of its shining nature it is often called the Body of Light. The magical nature of the white robe is shining, elastic, and impenetrable.

The nature of your specific magical operation will determine which robe you should wear.

ENOCHIAN WORDS FOR MAGICAL INSTRUMENTS

YOUR MAGICK CIRCLE

The first task of the Magician in every ceremony is therefore to tender his Circle absolutely impregnable.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

At all times complete the circle of the place before commencing any invocation.

The Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn

The Ritual of the Pentagram

A typical Magick Circle is shown in Figure 4. The four triangles outside the circle represent the four Watchtowers.

When conducting magical operations on the Watchtowers, sit or stand in a green circle (in general, green is appropriate for most operations. However, the color to use should correspond with the magical operation in which it is used) and face the appropriate triangle as follows:

Fire is a red BITOM in the South Earth is a black NANTA in the North Water is a blue HKOMA in the West Air is a yellow EXARP in the East.

Possible embellishments include:

- 1) Placing lamps in the triangles.
- 2) Burning incense.
- 3) Enscribing the appropriate deity name in the appropriate triangle.
- 4) Enscribing the magical formula within the circle or triangle as appropriate.

If a circle of this sort is impossible to physically construct, you can simulate it with a psychic circle. Draw a green circle as shown in Figure 4 with your magical imagin ation. You must also imagine the four triangles in the appropriate positions and colors. If you can imagine this so strongly that you can "see" the circle and triangles clearly in your mind, then you can use your psychic circle to conduct your operations. Successful construction of a psychic circle will allow you to conduct your magical operations anywhere and at any time.

Whether you use a physical or mental circle, it must be properly consecrated before any operation. This includes an appropriate banishing ritual. In Enochian Magick, you can use the banishing pentagram or hexagram rituals, or both.

However, it is not enough to simply draw the pentagram or hexagram in the air. Your physical actions must always be accompanied by appropriate mental activities. One of the most effective mental methods of consecrating a circle is to imagine a powerful psycho-physical force, like a mist, emanating from your body. Let it swirl around the atmosphere of the circle. Let it gradually form a protective spherical shell or wall around you at a distance equal to the circumference of the circle. This mental projection should accompany your tracing of pentagrams and/or hexagrams to banish all foreign elements and influences from your circle. A method used in Tibetan Yoga, which is quite effective, is to imagine millions of tiny rays of light emanating from your subtle body outward in all directions. The length of each ray is equal to the radius of your circle. At the end of each ray you must imagine the head of a fierce demon (a 'wrathful' deity) facing outward and snarling with protective power. Let these demon heads form a strong protective shell around you. Only when you can "feel" this protective wall surrounding you will your circle truly be consecrated and offer effective protection.

NAMES OF POWER

It may be conceded in any case that the long strings of formidable words which roar and moan through so many conjurations have a real effect in exalting the consciousness of the magician to the proper pitch-that they should do so is no more extraordinary than music of any kind should do so.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

These are the words to be spoken for one who arrives at the tenth pylon:... In a very loud voice, one must cry out an earnest request using the terrible Names of Power and Wisdom, and not be afraid of that which is in this region.

Chapter CXLVI, the Tenth Pylon, The Book of the Dead

The Enochian Names of Power, or Barbarous Names, should be spoken aloud for optimum effects. Music is well-known for its psychological influences on the listener. The same is true for you when you intone names or phrases in Enochian. Consult Enochian Magic for proper pronunciations.

During invocations and evocations you must always speak aloud the proper Names of Power. These are the Four Secret Holy Names, the names of the Four Great Kings, and so on. The repeating of these names out loud can have a definite effect in exalting your consciousness. This is especially so when the Names are vibrated. To 'vibrate' a name, you must mentally project the sound outward into your Magical Universe as you speak each syllable aloud. You must be able to psychically "hear" each syllable resound like "ten thousand thunders" throughout your Magical Universe. By physically speaking and mentally vibrating the Names of Power concurrently, a psycho-raagnetic link is established between yourself and the object of the name.

Use the following 6-step procedure to vibrate the Mames of Power:

STEP 1. Stand with your arras outstretched. Imagine your entice body as totally empty.

STEP 2. Breathe in deeply. Invagine the Name of the divinity entering into your body with the breath.

STEP 3. Let the Name descend through your empty body. Imagine it passing through your heart region, the area of your solar plexus, your navel, your abdomen, your pelvis area, and then clown your legs and into your feet.

STEP 4. When the Name touches your feet, advance your left foot about 12 inches. Then draw back your hands to the sides of your eyes and then lean forward. As you lean forward, shoot your arms (with fingers together and pointed before you) outward in front of you and imagine the Name rushing upward through your empty body while you exhale.

STEP 5. Imagine the Name to leave your body and thunder outward into the far comers of the universe. Let it vibrate throughout the universe like "the concourse of ten thousand thunders." Your mirad must be one-pointed and fuily focused on the Name.

STEP 6. Withdraw your left foot and stand upright. Let your normal perceptions slowly return. Take your time. Never vibrate the Mames of Power quickly.

Although these steps may seem awkward at first, with practice you will see that the procedure has a certain grace and natural ease associated with it. Speaking the name of a deity aloud is not sufficient to effect the desired results. By vibrating the name of a deity (or demon) in accordance with this procedure you will establish an occult link with that deity which is essential for success. If properly done, a single vibration will leave you exhausted and drained of energy.

EGYPTIAN DEITIES

The Egyptian Theogony is the noblest, the most truly magical, the most bound tome (or rather to it) by some inmost instinct, and by the memory of my incarnation as Ankh f n-Khonsu, that I use it (with its GraecoPhoenician child) for all work of supreme effort.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

I am like a god... ... Viere is no body component of mine that is lacking fits relationship] with a god.

The Book of the Dead, Chapter XLII

Enochian Magic describes the method of determining the Egyptian deities that preside over the lesser Watchtower Squares. Figures 1 to 16, Appendix C, show the sixteen Watchtower subquadrants with the appropriate Egyptian deity.

As an aid to properly understanding these deities, study the table below.

TABLE OF EGYPTIAN DEITIES

OSIRIS Renewal, regeneration, reincarnation, reimpodiment. Osiris is the son of Ra, the father of Horus and the brother of Isis and Nephthys. He is the God of the Dead.

ISIS Solidification, manifestation, nature, law, principle, love. Isis governs the forces of solidification. She gives form to the formless and thus rules over all birth processes. Her name means 'throne' and she is the source or seat of creative power. Isis is similar to the Tantric goddess, Kundalini.

NEPHTHYS Dispersion, fragmentation, dissociation, severity. She is the counterpart of her sister, 'sis. Her name means 'Lady of the House.' Nephthys roles over all dispersion processes. She turras forro into formless essence. Nephthys is similar to the Tantric goddess, Kali.

HORUS Attainment, fruition, man, humanity, the present as a result of the past. His title is 'the avenger of his father' because he fought Set and avenged his father, Osiris, whom Set slew. Horus is shown as a warrior. He is dynamic and aggressive. He is the spring which wins against winter and avenges the past summer.

UR-HERU Cause, maturity, responsibility. His name means 'the Elder Horus' and he is the counterpart of the child, Harpocrates.

HARPOCRATES Effect, faith, acceptance, innocence. He is Horus, the child. He is like the Fool of the Tarot. He is often shown sitting on a lotus with the first finger of his right hand resting against his closed lips in his role of the God of Silence.

HATHOR Maternal force, protection, sustenance, fertility. Hathor is the consort of Horas. Her name means 'House of Horus.' She has the form of a cow in role of the eternal mother.

SOTHIS Initiation (femiriine), evolution, growth Sothis is the goddess of the Dog Star whose annual rise into the heavens marked the advent of the Nile river's inundation and thus assured another year of bounty. She is shown naked to indicate that she holds no secrets from her followers.

APIS Emotions, sacrifice, passion, lust, desire. Apis has the form of a bula.

ANUBIS Initiation (masculine), intelligence, wisdom, rational mvnd__ Anubis is the son of Osiris and Nephthys and thus the step brother of Horus. He is called the 'Initiator of the Temple.' His chief function is to serve as a guide through the Tuat and to assist the dead through the after-death state. He is shown with the head of a jackal.

BAST Intuition, magick, irrational mirad. Bast is shown as a cat. Like a cat sees in the dark, so Bast can see into the past and future.

MESTHA Endurance, mental protective force, conscious control. He is the son of Horus and is shown with the head of a man.

HAPI Endurance, emotional protective force, abundance. He is the son of Horus and is shown with the head of an ape.

TUAMAUTEF Endurance, spiritual protective force, fertility. He is the son of Horus and is shown with the head of a jackal.

QEBHSENNUF Endurance, physical protective force, physical renewal. He is the son of Horus and is shown with the head of a hawk.

The following translations from Chapter CLIA of the Book of the Dead are included as a further aid in the study of these important deities:

SPEECH OF ISIS (Asi, "the goddess of the throne") "I have come here to protect you. I will fly with you through the air and I will initiate you with the North Wind. The breath of your flesh has returned to the god Tem (Le., the setting sun) but will return again to you should you hunger for flesh. You shall be like a god and your enemies shall be cast down under your feet. May you be found truthful before the goddess Nuit and strong enough to receive the flesh of the gods."

SPEECH OF NEPHTHYS (Nephthys, "the lady of the house") : "I accompany the Adept, my divine brother, Osiris. I have come here to protect you. You must be an Adept to overcome the forces of the Two Lands. Meditation will assist you. Indeed, truth-speaking will also help. You can be raised up by true words and deeds and then the god Ptah will cast down your enemies."

SPEECH OF MESTHA (Mestha, "the god within"): "I am the god Mestha, your divine son. I have come here to protect you. I have made a place for you to endure; a place for you to endure. May you have command over the god Ptah and likewise have command over the god Ra himself."

SPEECH OF HAPI (Hapi, "the god of secrets"): "I am the god Hapi, your son. I have come here to protect you. If you are associated with the Adepts, then your flesh will be defended for you and the death processes will be beneath you. May you be an Adept and be given my flesh which will last forever. May you be Osirified and be truth-speaking, may you be truth-speaking in peace."

SPEECH OF TUAMAUTEF (Tau-mut-f, "the god who exalts motherhood"): "I am the god Tuamautef, your son who loves you. I have come here to protect you. The brother of the divine father Osiris (Le., the god Set) can assist you. I will intercede for you and he will be beneath your feet forever. He will be beneath your feet forever. May you endure. May you endure in truth-speaking."

SPEECH OF QEBHSENNUF (Qebh-sen-f, "the god who refreshes his brothers"): "I am the god Qebhsennuf, your son. I have come here to protect you. I will join your bones together and I will gather your body components together for you. May it be said that you are mighty in the Throne Room of Truth by all those who live beneath it."

The following is a translation of Chapter CLXXXV of The Book of the Dead. It can be used as an invocation when dealing with Watchtower Squares presided over by the god Osiris:

This is a prayer to Osiris-Khenti-Amenti ("Osiris, the Initiator of Amentet"), Un-Nefer ('Beautiful One'), who is in Abydos. It is to be spoken by one who is truth-speaking in order to invoke the divine Lord and go forward for ever. One must say the following:

He who exists throughout Eternity is the divine Lord of Lords, and the divine King of Kings, and the Sovereign God of Gods, who gives new life to us. You stand over both gods and raen. You will make a throne for those who have entered into the Magical Universe, and those who periodically praised images of your ka will pass through millions and millions of years, when the end will come to be established. Now, when divinity is in each component of someone's body, then no further manifestation need appear in the world, and they will be like you, and they will come to you, the great ones as well as the lesser ones. May one be allowed to come and go within the Magical Universe. May one's ka not stray through the Cates of the Tuat.

The following is a translation from a vignette in The Papyrus of Hunefer. It can be used in Watchtower squares presided over by the god Anubis:

May Royal Peace be given by Osiris-Khenti Amenti, Lord of Eternity, Wise One throughout All Duration; and may be invoked the initiation of the company of the Gods;
and may be invoked Anubis, the subtle Dweller, the divine Initiator of the Temple, who allows the followers of Osiris to enter finto and to come forth from the Magical Universe, and who rewards the Lords and Masters so that their light will be strengthened and nourished.

ASTROLOGICAL INFLUENCES

Astrology in education is useful as geology is to the prospector; it tells you the sort of thing to look for, and the direction in which to explore.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

The stars impel, they do not compel.

ancient maxim

The astrological influences in the four Great Crosses are shown in Appendix D. How these forces influence the lesser Watchtower Squares is shown in Appendix C. The primary meanings of these signs are given below.

- ARIES: The First Cause, the life-principle, pure spirit.
- TAURUS: Pure Substance, undifferentiated matter.
- GEMINI: Motion, phenomena, elementary relationships.
- CANCER: Universal Womb, pure waters of life, the mother-principle.
- LEO: Creation made manifest, divine incarnation, creative activity, the ideal man.
- VIRGO: Organized matter purified and refined, the ideal woman.
- LIBRA: Ideal relationships, perfect harmony and balance, universal harmony.
- SCORPIO: Emotional power, regeneration, death.
- SAGITTARIUS: Aspiration, transformation of consciousness, the principle of perfection. 71

CAPRICORN: Crystallization of matter, matter organized for use, governing authority.

AQUARIUS: Universal Brotherhood, true knowledge.

PISCES: Emotion as Universal Solvent, dissolving of form, elimination of boundaries, cosmos into chaos.

PLANETARY INFLUENCES

The Universe is in equilibrium; therefore He that is without it, though his force be but a feather, can overturn the Universe. Be not caught within that web, O child of Freedom! Be not entangled in the universal lie, O child of Truth!

Aleister Crowley, The Book of Lies,

Every spiritual Ego is a ray of a "Planetary Spirit" according to esoteric teaching.

H.P. Blavatsky, Glossary to The Voice of the Silence

The planetary influences in the four Great Crosses are shown in Figures 1 to 4, Appendix D. How these forces influence the Calvary Crosses is shown in figures 16 to 31, Appendix A. The primary meanings of these signs are given below.

- SUN: Will power, vitality, creativity. It rules over Leo.
- MOON: Instinct, habit, personality, feeling, memory, imagination, receptivity. It rules Cancer.
- MERCURY: Power of communication, intelligence, reason, mobility, self-expression. It rules Gemini and Virgo.
- VENUS: Love, beauty, harmony. It rules Taurus and Libra.
- MARS: Passion, desire, energy, courage, initiative. It rules Aries and Scorpio.
- JÚPITER: Higher mind, wisdom, optimism, spontaneity.

taneity, enthusiasm, benevolence, generosity. It rules Sagittarius and Pisces.

SATURN: Satan, contraction, crystallization, concentration, ambition, self-preservation, caution, responsibility, pessimism, stability, endurance. It rules Capricorn and Aquarius.

MAGICAL PREPARATIONS

Thus shall We prepare him for the Confrontation of Choronzon and the Ordeal of the Abyss, when we have received him into the city of the Pyramids.

Aleister Crowley, Liber Os Abysmi

Proper preparation is the basic rule for every phase of the magical arts. Without this, only disaster can follow ahead.

Israel Regardie, The Complete Golden Dawn System of Magic, Vol 5

In addition to reading and comprehending Enochian Magic as well as other works on Magick, you would do well to assume a Magical Name, take a Magical Oath, and begin a Magical Diary. Initiation into a magical organization is not necessary. Self-initiation is just as reliable. The important thing is to make your Body of Light, or your "Magical Personality," as real as possible. Under normal circumstances a Magical Name and the Oath will aid in this objective (an oath taken by yourself to yourself and for yourself is as binding as any other kind of oath as far as karma is concerned).

1. THE MAGICAL NAME. Determine what or who you would most like to be. Then determine a name for this magical goal. It can be in English, French, Latin, Hebrew, Egyptian, or even Enochian. Any language will do. The only rule is that it must intuitively feel right to you. Take members of the Golden Dawn acquired a new magical name at each grade. Crowley, for example, was called Perdurabo,

"I shall endure" because he wished his message to survive. When you honestly feel that you have lived up to your magical name, then it will be time to adopt a new one.

2. THE MAGICAL OATH. Taking an oath is a solemn business. If sincere, it will activate a karmic force within you which can have dangerous consequences if broken. Only you will know for sure if you are sincere. This can take place inwardly as a simple mental and personal commitment to yourself, or outwardly in a magical ceremony saying the appropriate words aloud. A new oath should be taken at each step of your magical development.

One well-known Magical Oath is the Oath of the Abyss. This Oath must be taken by any magician who desires to cross the Great Outer Abyss, the realm of the arch-demon KHORONZON. The words of this Oath are: "I swear to interpret every phenomenon as a particular dealing of God with my soul." This means that you promise to view everything that happens to you from that moment on as the direct intercession of your inner god (your Holy Guardian Angel). This Oath has many terrible consequences but is essential for one to cross the Abyss safely. You are well advised to delay this oath until sufficiently prepared mentally and physically to accept its far-ranging implications.

3. THE MAGICAL DIARY. There are several reasons for beginning and updating a Magical Diary. It allows you to check your progress in a systematic and scientific manner. For example, any repetitive experiences or cyclic magical encounters will be more easily noted if a diary is at hand. It also allows you to record your psychic experiences while fresh in your memory so that you can accurately check them against known signposts and correspondences at a later date.

The modern magician can record his experiences on cassette tape or a floppy disk using a home computer. Data base programs allow storage and retrieval of magical reflections, and printouts will provide hard copies when needed. Whether you use a home computer or a pen and paper, up-to-date records are asure way for you to progress in a sane and intelligent fashion. Update your Diary as often as you can, and you will find yourself growing.

DEVELOPMENT OF THE SUBTLE BODY

Within the human body is another body of approximately the same size and shape; but made of subtler and less illusory material This body, which is called by various authors the Astral double, Body of Light, body of fire, body of desire, fine body, scin-laeca and numberless other names is naturally fitted to perceive objects of its own class in particular, the phantoms of the astral plane.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

May the ba (soul) see its khat (physical body). May it rest in its sahu (spirit body). May it not lose consciousness. May it not lose control over the body, ever.

Chapter LXXX X, The Book of the Dead

In order to investigate the Watchtowers and Aethyrs it is essential to be able to travel in the subtle body, known as the Body of Light. There are many good books available on this subject (Crowley's Liber O is an excellent example) that can provide useful details. The following is a summary of the most important steps in the development of your subtle body:

STAGE 1. Consecrate a circle and work within it. Forget deities, Watchtowers and Aethyrs for awhile and concentrate only on mentally leaving your physical body. Try to see your body as if you were standing in front of it.

STAGE 2. Observe astral counterparts of physical objects.

Create your own astral temple complete with furniture. Exercise your Body of Light and your magical imagination at regular intervals until your astral temple is as real to you as your physical temple.

STAGE 3. Confirme developing your Body of Light until it is as real as your physical body. Slowly, gradually, project it outward from your astral temple into the surrounding environment of the Astral Plane.

STAGE 4. Practice "rising on the planes," going higher and higher each time. Try to reach the spiritual planes beyond the mental.

NOTE: The development of the Body of Light is an ongoing process. The key to success is practice. The fruit of your efforts are the experiences and lessons that you will surely encounter as you advance. Remember, your subtle body already exists; you are simply becoming conscious of it.

WARNING: Do not confuse the planes. Always keep your subtle body on the subtle planes and your physical body on the physical plane. Mental imbalance can result from confusing the planes in your mirad. This is probably the chief error made by the novice magician.

WORK SHEET: Use the following sample work sheet to keep an on-going record of your operations. A sample completed work sheet is provided to demonstrate the kind of data that you peed to record. You will find this helpful in determining what works best for you. It is suggested that you construct and use Work Sheets such as this one for all of your operations.

Suggestions: I need to try this exercise again while standing. My mind wandered tonight and I had a hard time concentrating.

INVOCATION VS EVOCATION

I invoke Thee, the Terrible and Invisible God: Who dwellest in the Void Place of the Spirit.

Aleister Crowley, Liber Samekh

I invoke ye, ye angels of the celestial spheres, whose dwelling is in the invisible. Ye are the guardians of the gates of the universe, be ye also the guardians of this mystic sphere Let my sphere be pure and holy so that I may enter in and become a partaker of the secrets of the Light divine.

The Golden Dawn's Watchtower Ceremony

Technically, to invoke means to "call in" whereas to evoke means to "call forth."

Under normal circumstances you will invoke a deity when you want to assume its identity. You will evoke a deity when you want to communicate with that deity while retaining your own sense of identity.

A circle should be drawn around you to protect you during an operation as well as to symbolically remind you that you are a microcosm. To attract an Enochian deity into this circle (and hence into the microcosm of the magician) requires an invocation.

A triangle should be drawn outside your circle in order to attract an Enochian deity into your macrocosm (but not your microcosm). This attraction requires an evocation. One example of an evocation is Crowley's well-known materialization of the demon KHORONZON from the tenth Aethyr, ZAX. To invite such a being into your circle could be harmful and should not be done lightly.

When invoking, use the Cup as a symbol of your openness and receptivity. When evoking use the Sword to keep the entity separate from yourself.

When invoking, you will become identified with the deity. You will speak and act with the authority of that deity. Thus you may:

1. Speak oracles or expound the wisdom of one thing or another.
2. Bless a person or thing in the name of the deity.
3. Command those deities or entities that are lawfully under the jurisdiction of the deity.

When evoking, you will be able to embody the energy or virtue of the deity evoked into:

1. A talisman.
2. Any magical instrument or weapon.
3. A sacrament such as a wafer, or wine which can be consumed into your body or the body of another.

THREE PRIMARY METHODS OF INVOCATION

Inaoke me under my stars!

The Book of the Law, Chapter 1, verse 57

As a magician, you will have recourse to three main ways in which to invoke a deity. These are:

1. DEVOTION

This is the way of the heart. Sincere devotion to a deity, calling on the divine name, mantras, japa, and filling your mind with the known divine qualities and attributes will, in time, bring about a confrontation with that deity. This is the safest method, but also the slowest. Study Crowley's Liber Astarte for details of this method. This method is the Western equivalent of Bhakti Yoga.

2. CEREMONY

This is the way of the mind. It is the most direct method involving a straightforward invoking of the desired deity. The signposts presented in Enochian Magic and in this manual can be used to create the invoking ritual. Details are provided in Enochian Magic. The ritual should be such as to induce a degree of Samadhi or single-pointed concentration.

3. DRAMA

This method is the way of the combined heart, body and mind. It is difficult to perform by a single person, but years of tradition attest to its effectiveness. Crowley's Liber 777 can be used to determine the necessary magical correspondences.

However, the very fact that little is known of the Enochian deities precludes use of this method for most invocations. It can be used effectively for the Egyptian gods and goddesses of the lesser Watchtower squares.

this method you assume the appropriate god-form (i.e., let your 13ody of Light take on the liken'ess of the god) and then enact well-known incidents that involve the desired deity while assuming the role of that deity.

ELEMENTS OF AN INVOCATION

Every Magician must compose his ceremony in such a manner as to produce a dramatic clima At the moment when the excitement becomes ungovernable, when the whole conscious being of the Magician undergoes a spiritual spasm, at that moment must he utter that supreme aduration.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

The objective of an invocation is for you to identify yourself temporarily with the deity. The only magical instrument truly needed for an invocation (or evocation) is the wand (this is explained in Enochian Magic). However, a cup can be used for invocation (to unite) and a sword for evocation (to keep separate). In order to successfully invoke an Enochian deity, a degree of Samadhi (an advanced stage of transcendental meditation) is required. An outline of the primary stages is given below.

1. THE FORM. First the symbolic form of the deity must be carefully studied until you can hold a steady image in your mind. The attributes of the deity must be contemplated while you assume his form.

2. THE VOICE. Then you will hear the voice of the deity. The utterance of the deity must be in keeping with his/her characteristic nature.

3. THE ASSERTION. In the next stage you must assert your identity with the deity.

4. THE IDENTITY. In the final stage you must become the vehicle for the deity. After this stage the original objective of the invocation is stated.

A SUCCESSFUL INVOCATION/EVOCATION

Invocations of even the most positive Gods are dangerous, unless care can be taken to keep the personality of the God distinct from one's own.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

In order for an invocation or evocation to be successful, you must be able to elevate your mind to another dimension. You must be able to see and hear with the Body of Light, because the deities and demons of the Watch-towers and Aethyrs are not physical but etheric, astral or psychic beings.

The first step is imagination. You must imagine that the deity comes before you. The known signposts of the operation should be of service during this step. At the climax of the operation, you will actually see and/or hear the deity or demon invoked. If a demon strikes you, you will suffer the pain accordingly. However, no one else around you will probably be able to see or hear the deity except yourself. This in no way lessens the reality of the demon or deity. If a scribe is at hand, you will want to speak aloud what you see and hear.

If you can formulate your subtle body and rise on the planes, then you can go to the deity rather than have it come to you. The results will be the same except that full remembrance of astral traveling experiences is difficult.

After every successful invocation or evocation always banish the deity back to his natural residence. Every invocation or evocation establishes a psycho-magnetic link between you and that deity. This link must be properly broken after the ceremony, or the deity will be able to return to you at any time. The consequences of such a visitation could be harmful.

The most important invocation to be conducted by you, the Enochian magician, is that of your own Holy Guardian Angel. An exercise for such an invocation is presented later in this manual.

AN ENOCHIAN INVOKING RITUAL

The following ritual has been adapted from the Golden Dawn's Invocation Ritual called the 'Formula of Opening by Watchtower' (i.e., Regardie's Watchtower Ceremony).

STEP 1. Use your Sword to perform the appropriate Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram. The Enochian Pentagram and Hexagram Rituals are given later in this manual.

STEP 2. Enter your Body of Light. Hold your Wand before you. Stand facing the Watchtower of Fire in the South. See fire radiate from your Wand and say:

Behold, all the phantoms have vanished,
Arad I see that sacred and formless Fire; The Fire that flames and consumes The hidden depths of the universe, And I hear the Voice of Fire.

Trace the Fire Pentagram before you, and then trace a flaming red Enochian letter K (𐌒) within it. Maintain this flaming letter and say,

OIP-TEAA-PDOKE

(Oh-ee-peh Teh-ah-ah Peh-doh-keh) In the names and letters
Of the Great Southern Quadrangle, I invoke you, Angels
Of the Watchtower of the South.

Then vibrate the Great Holy Name of this Watchtower. Feel the Angels of the Watchtower of Fire rising up from within you.

STEP 3. Take your Cup in your hand. Turn toward the Watchtower of Water in the West. Sprinkle some water and say,

Now therefore I, a Priest of Fire,
Sprinkle lustral waters of the sea,
And hear the wrath of waves upon the shore;
The Voice of Water, now arad evermore.

Stand facing the Watchtower of Water. Trace the Pentagram of Water before you. Trace a blue Enochian letter Q (1 j) within it. Face the letter and say,

MPH-ARSL-GAIOL

(Em-peh-heh Ar-ess-el Gah-ee-oh-leh) In the names arad letters of the Great Western Quadrangle,
I invoke you, Angels
Of the Watchtower of the West.

Then vibrate the Great Holy Name of this Watchtower. Feel the Angels of the Watchtower of Water rising up from within you.

STEP 4. Take your Dagger in your hand. Turn toward the Watchtower of Air in the East. Strike the Air three times and say,

My mirad extends through realms of Air.
In formless Air comes the vision and the voice; Flashing, bounding, revolving,
It whirls forth, crying aloud.

Stand facing the Watchtower of Air. Trace the invoking Pentagram of Air before you. Trace a yellow Enochian letter H (~r)) within it. Face the letter and say,

ORO-IBAH-AOZPI

(Oh-roh Ee-bah Aah-oh-zod-pee) In the names and letters of the Great Eastern Quadrangle,

1 invoke you, Angels
Of the Watchtower of the East.

Then vibrate the Great Holy Name of this Watchtower. Feel the Angels of the Watchtower of Air rising up from within you.

STEP 5. Take your Pentagram and turn to the Watchtower of Earth in the North. Shake the Pentagram three times and say,

I stoop clown into a world of darkness Wherein lies unknown depths
And Hades shroud in gloom,
Delighting in senseless images;
A black ever-rolling Abyss,
A voice both mute and void.

Stand facing the Watchtower of Earth. Trace the Pentagram of Earth before you. Trace the Enochian letter X (~) within it. Face the letter and say,

MOR-DIAL-HKTGA

(Moh-ar Dee-ah-leh Heh-keh-teh-gah) In the names and letters of the Great Northern Quadrangle,
I invoke you, Angels
Of the Watchtower of the North.

Then vibrate the Great Holy Name of this Watchtower. Feel the Angels of the Watchtower of Earth rising up from within you.

STEP 6. Stand facing the East and trace the active and passive invoking Pentagrams of Spirit (reference Enochian Magic page 89) while saying,

EXARP (Ehtz-ar-peh) BITOM
(Bee-toh-meh)

NANTA (Nah-en-tah)

HKOMA (Heh-koh-rnah)

In the names and letters of the Mystical Tablet of Union,

I invoke you, Angels who are Divine Forces of the Spirit of Life.

Then vibrate the four names of the elements. Feel the Angels of the Tablet of Union rising up from within you.

STEP 7. Make the sigas of the Rending of the Veil (reference "Rending and Closing the Veil" later in this manual) and say,

I invoke you,
Angels of the celestial spheres, Whose dwelling is in the invisible. You are the Guardians
Of the Cates of the Universe. May you also be the Guardians Of this mystic sphere.
Keep away the evil and the unbalanced.
Strengthen and inspire me So that I may preserve in purity This abode of the mysteries. Let my sphere be pure and holy
That I may enter in and become a Partaker
Of the Secrets of the Light.

Feel all of the Angels of the Watchtowers and the Tablet of Union rising up together from within your Body of Light.

STEP 8. Turn three times to each Watchtower while holding your Wand. Then face the East and say,

I am the Lord of the Universe.
I am He Whom Nature has not Formed. I am the Vast and the Mighty One.

Lord of the Light and of the Darkness. Lord and King of the Earth.

See yourself as an embodiment of the spiritual forces of the universe.

STEP 9. Conclude by feeling the might and power of all the Enochian deities rising up in your Body of Light. Hold this feeling for as long as you can. May you thus assume their qualities. Indeed, in this way you may assume their qualities and powers. When your spiritual identity is firmly established, lose by repeating the Banishing Rituals.

TALISMANS

A talisman is a storehouse of some particular kind of energy, the kind that is needed to accomplish the task for which you have constructed it.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

In construction of a talisman, symbolism should be exact and in harmony with universal forces.

The Golden Dawn's Talismans and Flashing Tablets

S.L. MacGregor Mathers, a leader of the Golden Dawn and tutor for a time to Aleister Crowley, defined a talisman as "a magical figure charged with the force it is intended to represent." A talisman is any object that you construct and charge with a magical force for a specific purpose. It is "charged" by those psychic forces that you channel through yourself for this purpose. Every magician should charge his own talismans, but as with every thing else, a karmic force will also seep into the object and link it with its creator.

With proper use, your magical weapons will automatically become powerful talismans. They will become charged with your own emotional and psychic energies. Additional talismans can be made for specific purposes but all should come under the following general headings:

EARTH:	Taurus, Virgo, Capricorn, Venus, Moon, Pentacle, black, North.
WATER:	Cancer, Scorpio, Pisces, Mars, Cup, Blue, West.
AIR:	Gemini, Libra, Aquarius, Saturn, Mercury, Sword, yellow, East.
FIRE:	Aries, Leo, Sagittarius, Sun, Jupiter, Wand, red, South.

When you practice the exercise to gain the Knowledge and Conversation of your Holy Guardian Angel, you will need to design and make your own talisman of ILIATAI. Figure 5 shows an example of such a talisman design.

The Watchtowers and Tablet of Union can be used for talismans. Figures 15 through 31 in Appendix A can each make an excellent talisman of these regions. Technically, talismans should be constructed and charged for specific purposes by using appropriate consecration rituals. Use Crowley's Liber 777 or the signposts provided in Enochian Magic and in this manual for correct correspondences. As a general rule for charging a talisman: always be in harmony with the effect that you want to produce. A charged talisman should be wrapped in white silk or linen to avoid contamination or leakage of the charge.

SIGILS OF WATCHTOWER DEITIES

If the student uses a little ingenuity and imagination in this matter, he will discover quite a lot as to the nature and import of Sigils. The significance of the emblems may be divined, from one point of view, by employing them as "doors" through which to skry in the spirit-vision. More can be learned this way concerning the real implication of Sigils than almost by any other method.

The Golden Dawn's Talismans and Sigils

The Rase of Letters shown in Figure 6 is adapted from the Golden Dawn Rose Cross Lamen, which is specifically designed for use with the Hebrew alphabet. Figure 6 contains the Enochian equivalent. There are three rows containing a total of 21 regions and 26 letters. The symbolism of the Rose is as follows:

1. The inner three regions surrounding the central circle symbolize the active cosmic elements of Water, Air and Fire which surround, and operate upon, the Earth.
2. The second row of seven letters represents the seven sacred planets.
3. The third and outermost row of eleven regions represents the pentagram and hexagram united ($5+6=11$).
4. Each region of letters represents a petal of the Rose. Using AIK BKR (reference AIK BKR AND THE AETHYRS later in this manual) the petals/regions add to 3 ($3+7+11=21=2+1=3$), the number of rows in the Rose.

The Rose is used to determine the sigils for the deities of the four Watchtowers. Begin with the first letter of the name in the corresponding petal of the Rose. Draw straight lines from letter to letter as they appear in the name. The pattern so drawn is the sigil of the deity. Always begin each sigil with a small circle. At the last letter, end the sigil with a short fine or dash, perpendicular to the last fine drawn. If two letters come together, represent it by a crook or wavy fine at that point. If a sigil has three letters along a single straight fine, and the center letter is needed in the name, then represent it by a small noose or circle tangent to the fine at that point. The following five sigils provide typical examples of how to use the Rase:

The sigil of ABMO:

The sigil of STIM:

The sigil of PAKO:

The sigil of OPNM:

The sigil of AIRA:

The sigil of ERZLA:

TRACING THE PENTAGRAM

The Pentagram, symbol of the squaring of the circle by virtue of ALHIM = 3.1415, symbol of man's will, of the evil 4 dominated by man's spirit

Aleister Crowley, Gematria

Traced as a symbol of good, it should be placed with the single point upward, representing the rule of the Divine Spirit. For if thou shouldst write it with the two points upward, it is an evil symbol, affirming the empire of matter over that Divine Spirit which should govern it.

The Golden Dawn's The Ritual of the Pentagram

The five-pointed pentagram represents the five cosmic elements of the Watchtowers. The following diagram shows this relationship:

The pentagram should always be traced with the single point of spirit above the four lower elements. When invoking, the first line drawn is towards the point which corresponds to the operation. When banishing, the tracing begins at the corresponding point and the first line is drawn away from that point. This is shown in detail in Figure 7.

In all cases, trace the pentagram with your Wand in the air in front of you and imagine that each line is being drawn in the appropriate color. After a successful tracing, you should be able to clearly "see" the pentagram suspended and shimmering in the air before you.

AN ENOCHIAN PENTAGRAM RITUAL

Use the following ritual in your magical operations for banishing or invoking, or make modifications to it as you will. It is an Enochian adaptation of the Golden Dawn's Lesser Ritual of the Pentagram.

STEP 1. Touch your forehead and say ZAH (Zod-ah: within is).

STEP 2. Touch your left breast and say ONDOH (Ohendoh: the Kingdom).

STEP 4. Touch your left shoulder and say BUZD (Boozod-deh: the Glory).

STEP 5. Touch both hands together on your right breast and say PAID (Pah-ee-deh: forever).

STEP 6. Turn to the East, trace a yellow Pentagram of Air before you, and say EXARP (Etz-ar-peh: Air).

STEP 7. Turn to the South, trace a red Pentagram of Fire before you, and say BITOM (Bee-toh-meh: Fire).

STEP 8. Turn to the West, trace a blue Pentagram of Water before you, and say HKOMA (Heh-koh-mah: Water).

STEP 9. Turn to the North, trace a black Pentagram of Earth before you, and say NANTA (Nah-en-tah: Earth).

STEP 10. Extend your arras outward in the form of a cross while still facing the North and say,

Before me KZHIKAL (Ee-heh-zod-hee-kal) Behind me
EDLPRNAA (Eh-del-par-nah-ah) On my right BATAIVAH (Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh) On my left RAAGIOSL (Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel) Behold, the four flaming pentagrams
And 1 alone in the midst.

NOTES: During the first five steps, use your right hand to trace a pentagram beginning at your forehead. Enochian Gematria reveals that the five words spoken in these steps add up to a total of 449, the number for the word PARAKLEDA (Par-rah-kel-eh-dah) which means "marriage" or "wedding" This demonstrates the binding force behind these words. The four elements are addressed in Steps 6 through 9. These names are from the Tablet of Union. Step 10 calls upon the names of the four Great IGns of the Watchtowers. While executing this ritual, you must be able to "see" the flaming pentagrams in the air after tracing them with your wand. At the end of Step 10 you should be able to feel the four kings and yourself together as a living pentagram.

HEXAGRAMS OF THE ELEMENTS

The Hexagram, symbol of the Macrocosm and Microcosm interlaced, and hence of the End of the Great Work.

Aleister Crowley, Gematria

The Hexagram is a powerful symbol representing the operation of the Seven Planets under the presidency of the Sephiroth Usually, it is traced with the single point uppermost. It is not an evil symbol with the two points upward, and this is a point of difference from the Pentagram.

The Golden Dawn's The Ritual of the Hexagram

When invoking, evoking, or banishing deities of the Watchtowers you should always include tracing the proper hexagram. In addition to the hexagrams described in Enochian Magic, the following may also be used:

FIRE. Face toward the South and trace the Hexagram of Fire as follows:

NOTES: Trace two equal triangles pointing upward. Trace the upper triangle first in the direction shown for invoking or banishing. The second triangle begins at the center of the first and is traced in the same direction.

EARTH. Face the North and trace the Hexagram of Earth as follows:

Invoking

Banishing

NOTES: Trace the upper triangle first in the direction shown. The second triangle intersects the first and points downward.

AIR Face the East and trace the Hexagram of Air as follows:

NOTES: Trace the upper triangle first in the direction shown. The second is inverted and the bases coincide.

WATER Pace the West and trace the Hexagram of Water as follows:

NOTES: The first triangle is traced the same way for all of the hexagranas. Here the second triangle is inverted and the apexes coincide.

AN ENOCHIAN HEXAGRAM RITUAL

Use the following ritual in your magical operations for banishing or invoking, or make modifications to it as you will. It is an Enochian adaptation of the Golden Dawn's Lesser Ritual of the Hexagram and is normally performed after the Pentagram Ritual.

STEP 1. Stand with your feet together, your left arm down at your side and your right arm across your body holding your wand (or other weapon) upright in front of you.

STEP 2. Turn to the East and say IVITDT ((Ee-veh-eeteh-deh-teh) while tracing the yellow Hexagram of Air before you. Vibrate one letter of this sixlettered formula as you trace a corresponding side of the hexagram. Then say,

Behold, the Burning Sanies of Truth that consume sorrow, sin and death.

STEP 3. Turn to the South and say ZTZTZT (Zod-tehzod-teh-zod-teh) while tracing the red Hexagram of Fire before you. Vibrate one letter of this sixlettered formula as you trace a corresponding side of the hexagram. Then say,

Behold, the Way of Love is to sacrifice All into the CUP.

STEP 4. Turn to the West and say IVITDT in the same manner as in STEP 2 but trace the blue Hexagram of Water.

STEP 5. Turn to the North and say ZTZTZT in the same manner as in STEP 3 but trace the black Hexagram of Earth.

STEP 6. Extend your arms outward in the form of a cross while still facing the North and say,

Before me MORDIALHKTGA (Mohar Dee-ah-leh Hehkeh-teh-gah)

Behind me OIPTEAAPDOKE (Oh-eepeh Teh-ah-ah Peh-dohkeh)

On my right OROIBAHAOZPI (Oh-roh Ee-bah Ahoh-zod-pee)

On my left MPHARSLGAIOL (Em-pehheh Aress-el Gah-eeoh-leh)

Above me and below me, My Magical Universe, And behold, I alone in the midst.

NOTES: The formulas of IVI TDT and ZTZTZT are explained later in this manual. As you trace the hexagrams in the air before you, you should vibrate the letters of these formulas. While executing this ritual, you must be able to "see" the flaming hexagrams in the air and trace them with your Wand. The four Holy Names of Divinity spoken in STEP 6 are explained in Enochian Magic and shown in Figure 9, Appendix A. These four Names of Power together with the ultimate duality of object (the universe) and subject (your own self) constitute a living hexagram.

WAND INVOCATION

The following is a ritual that you can conduct to consecrate your magical Wand:

STEP 1. Consecrate a circle.

STEP 2. Hold your Wand in y o u r right hand, face the Watchtower of Fire and say, EDLPRNAA (Eh-del-par-nah-ah), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Fire to come forward and instill the Power of Change within my Wand (see the power to produce changes entering into your Wand).

STEP 3. Address the Seniors and say,

AAETPIO (Ah-ah-etch-pee-oh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Fire to come forward and bestow the Energy of Mars upon my Wand (see creative energy entering into your Wand).

ADAEOET (Ah-dah-eh-oh-etch), I invoke y o u from the Watchtower of Fire to come forward and bestow the Enthusiasm of Jupiter upon my Wand (see energized enthusiasm entering finto your Wand).

ALNKVOD (Ah-len-keh-voh-deh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Fire to come forward and bestow the Imagination of the Moon upon my Wand (see the power of imagination entering finto your Wand).

AAPDOKE (Ah-ah-ped-oh-keh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Fire to come forward and bestow the Beauty of Venus upon my Wand (see beauty enter-mg finto your Wand).

ANODOIN (Ah-noh-doh-ee-neh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Fire to come forward and bestow the Mobility of Mercury upon my Wand (see the power of motion entering finto your Wand).

ARINNAP (Ah-ree-neh-nah-peh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Fire to come forward and bestow the Ambition of Saturn upon my Wand (see the forces of ambition entering into your Wand).

STEP 4. Know your Wand to be the physical embodiment of these Fire qualities. Hold up your Wand before you and say,

KAB BITOM-ZIZOP

(Kah-beh Bee-toh-meh-zodee-zodoh-peh) The Wand is a Container of Fire.

STEP 5. Know your Wand to be fully charged with the forces of the Seniors of Fire.

STEP 6. End this invocation with an appropriate Banishing Ritual.

SWORD INVOCATION

The following is a ritual that you can conduct to consecrate your magical Sword:

STEP 1. Consecrate a circle.

STEP 2. Hold your Sword in your right hand, face the Watchtower of Air and say, BATAIVAH (Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Air to come forward and instill the Power of Discernment within my Sword (see the power to discern and discriminate entering into your Sword).

STEP 3. Address the Seniors and say,

HABIORO (Hah-bee-oh-roh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Air to come forward and bestow the Courage of Mars upon my Sword (see courage entering into your Sword).

AAOZAIF (Ah-ah-oh-zodah-ee-feh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Ah. to come forward and bestow the Wisdom of Jupiter upon my Sword (see the discerning power of wisdom entering into your Sword).

HTNORDA (Heh-teh-noh-rah-dah), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Air to come forward and bestow the Instinct of the Moon upon my Sword (see the discerning power of the instinct entering into your Sword).

AHAOZPI (Aha-oh-zod-pee), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Air to come forward and bestow the Harmony of Venus upon my Sword (see the harmony of right discrimination entering into your Sword).

AVTOTAR (Ah-veh-toh-tah-rah), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Air to come forward and bestow the Intelligence of Mercury upon my Sword (see the discriminative power of intelligence entering into your Sword).

HIPOTGA (Hee-poh teh-gah), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Air to come forward and bestow the Preservation of Saturas upon my Sword (see the quality of endurance entering into your Sword).

STEP 4. Know your Sword to be the physical embodiment of these Airy qualities. Hold up your Sword before you and say,

NAZPZ TOL-TOH VAOAN

(Nah-zod-peh-zod Toh-el-toh-heh Vah-oh-ah-neh) The Sword is all-victorious truth.

STEP 5. Know your Sword to be fully charged with the forces of the Seniors of Air.

STEP 6. End this invocation with an appropriate Banishing Ritual.

CUP INVOCATION

The following is a ritual that you can conduct to consecrate your magical Cup:

STEP 1. Consecrate a arde.

STEP 2. Hold your Cup in your right hand, Pace the Watchtower of Water and say, RAAGIOSL (Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Water to come forward and instill the Power of Reflection within my Cup (see the power of passive reflectivity entering into your Cup).

STEP 3. Address the Seniors and say,

LSRAHPM (Less-rah-pem), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Water to come forward and bestow the Passion of Mars upon my Cup (see passion entering into your Cup).

SAIINOV (Sah-ee-ee-noh-veh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Water to come forward and bestow the Benevolence of Jupiter upon my Cup (see benevolence entering into your Cup).

LAVAXRP (El-ah-vahtz-ar-peh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Water to come forward and bestow the Receptivity of the Moon upon my Cup (see the passive power of receptivity entering into your Cup).

SLGAIOL (Sel-gah-ee-oh-leh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Water to come forward and bestow the Love of Venus upon my Cup (see the forces of love entering into your Cup).

SOAIZNT (Soh-ahee-zoden-teh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Water to come forward and bestow the Self-Expression Mercury upon my Cup (see the power of self-expression entering into your Cup).

LIGDISA (Elee-geh-dee-sah), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Water to come forward and bestow the Stability of Saturn upon my Cup (see the forces of stability entering into your Cup).

STEP 4. Know your Cup to be the physical embodiment of these Watery qualities. Hold up your Cup before you and say,

TALHO AFFA-ADPHANT

(Tah-leh-ho Ah-feh-fah-ah-deh-peh-hah-en-teh) The Cup is an indescribable emptiness.

STEP 5. Know your cup to be fully charged with the forces of the Seniors of Water.

STEP 6. End this invocation with an appropriate Banishing Ritual.

PANTACLE INVOCATION

The following is a ritual that you can conduct to consecrate your magical Pantacle:

STEP 1. Consecrate a circle.

STEP 2. Hold your Pantacle in your right hand, face the Watchtower of Earth and say, IKZHIKAL (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Earth to come forward and instill the Power of Fruitfulness within my Pantacle (see the forces of fruitfulness entering into your Pantacle).

STEP 3. Address the Seniors and say,

LAIDROM (El-ahee-dar-ohem), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Earth to come forward and bestow the Desire of Mars upon my Pantacle (see the forces of desire entering into your Pantacle).

AKZINOR (Ah-keh-zodee-noh-rah), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Earth to come forward and bestow the Generosity of Jupiter upon my Pantacle (see the forces of generosity entering into your Pantacle).

LZINOPO (El-zodee-noh-peh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Earth to come forward and bestow the Memory of the Moon upon my Pantacle (see the power of memory entering into your Pantacle).

ALHKTGA (Ah-leh-hek-teh-gah), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Earth to come forward and bestow the Fruitfulness of Venus upon my Pantacle (see the forces of fruitfulness entering into your Pantacle).

AHMLLKV (Ah-rnel-el-keh-veh), I invoke you from the Watchtower of Earth to come forward and bestow the Reason of Mercury upon my Pantacle (see the power of reason entering into your Pantacle).

LIUANSA (Elee-ee-ah-ness-ah) ,1 invoke you from the Watchtower of Earth to come forward and bestow the Concentration of Saturn upon my Pantacle (see the forces of concentration entering into your Pantacle).

STEP 4. Know your Pantacle to be the physical embodiment of these Earthly qualities. Hold up your Pantacle before you and say,

KHR KAOSGN-KIIDAO

(Keh-har Kah-oh-seg-en-keh-hee-dah-oh) The Wheel is the Diamond of the Earth.

STEP 5. Know your Pantacle to be fully charged with the forces of the Senior of Earth.

STEP 6. End Chis invocation with an appropriate Banishing Ritual.

AIQ BKR

the nature of every number is a thing peculiar to itself, a thing inscrutable and infinite, a thing inexpressible, even if we could understand it. In other words, a number is a soul, in the proper sense of the terco, an unique and necessary element in the totality of existente.

Aleister Crowley, Liber 777 Appendix B

The method of AIQ BKR or 'the Qabalah of Nine Chambers' is often used to reduce large numbers to a single number from 1 to 9. To use this method, add up the individual numbers in each digit position of the large number. If this sum has more than one digit, then add these together. Keep adding in this way until only one digit remains. For example, the number 1234 reduces to 10 ($1+2+3+4=10$) which again reduces to 1 ($1+0=1$). After the final digit from 1 to 9 is determined, use the following table to deduce the occult significante:

AIQ BKR REDUCTIONS

1. Unity, oneness, extension, spirit, self.
2. Duality, divine will, ego.
3. Matter, manifestation, intelligence, space, soul.
4. Solidity, firmness, time, memory.
5. Spirit and matter mixed, man, motion, will.
6. Animation, Me, mirid, imagination.
7. Completeness, satisfaction, wholeness, desire.
8. Cycles, spirals, creativity, intellect, reason.
9. Stability in change, animal being, consciousness.

RENDING AND CLOSING THE VEIL

Purely artificial gestures comprehend in their class the majority of definitely magick signs, though some of these simulate a natural action-e.g. the sign of Rending of the Veil

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

Two special signs or postures are especially the worthwhile for you to learn and use. These are the Rending of the Veil and the Closing of the ~ UAethyrRande Closing of to enter a Watchtower Square the Veil when you leave.

RENDING OF THE VEIL. Stand facing forward with both arms outstretched in front of you Turn your palms downward and hold your fingers together. Your hands should be about a foot or so apart. Now take one slow step forward. This posture signifies forcing yourself through a barrier into the region beyond.

CLOSING OF THE VEIL. Stand facing forward with feet together. Stretch both arms straight in front of you with palms facing inward, fingers together. Bring your hands slowly together until the palms touch. This posture signifies forcing yourself out of an area and reclosing the barrier behind you.

SPIRIT VISION IN THE WATCHTOWERS

A Beginner's Method

Thus, it is necessary that the technique of Magick should be perfected. The Body of Light must be rendered capable of going everywhere and doing everything. It is, therefore, always the question of drill which is of importance.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

To aid in developing the Body of Light to see into the Watchtower Squares using the Spirit Vision, you should try the following skrying procedures:

PREPARATION. Construct a card of the desired region to be viewed, one for each subquadrant or cross of the Four Watchtowers. These can be similar to Figures 1 through 16 in Appendices 13 or C except they should be in bright colors. If desired, you can make the squares into truncated pyramids like those shown in Figures 15 through 31, Appendix A. In any case use appropriate colors.

STEP 1. Consecrate a work area by conducting the Ritual of the Pentagram for banishing. Face the corresponding direction and with your wand, trace the hexagram of the appropriate Watchtower in the air before you in the corresponding color of the Tablet.

STEP 2. Place the card with the desired region in front of you. You may need to pin it to a wall or to an appropriately colored drape. It should be at eye level.

STEP 3. Hold the appropriate magical instrument. This will depend on the region you are viewing and the exact nature of your objective.

STEP 4. Gaze smoothly, relaxed but alert, at the card and concentrate on the square or truncated pyramid that you want to "see".

STEP 5. Mentally imagine the square or pyramid as expanding before you. Enlarge it in your mind to the size of a door. See the details clearly.

STEP 6. Imagine yourself passing through the symbolic doorway. If necessary, use the Rending of the Veil. Gaze through the door and see what is there. With practice you should be able to see more and more of the regions that lie behind the symbolic door.

STEP 7. Return by visualizing the door closing behind you. If necessary, use the Casing of the Veil. Know yourself to have returned. Mentally shrink the door back to its original size on the card. Close the operation with another banishing Ritual of the Pentagram.

NOTE: If you find this method difficult, try it while sitting in a comfortable chair. If you can "see" the expanding square become a realistic door in front of you, then you are very near to success.

SPIRIT VISION IN THE WATCHTOWERS

An Advanced Method

I can travel like the sun. I can travel like the sun. I can tread the path. I can travel about.

The Book of the Dead Chapter
CXLVII, the sixth Arit,

After sufficient development of the Body of Light and success with the beginning method of Spirit Vision, you should be able to advance to the following exercise:

PREPARATION. In addition to the cards used in the beginning exercise, you must memorize the signposts of the desired square. This includes the proper Call, the Enochian Names of Power and the presiding Egyptian deity and sphinx if the goal is one of the lesser Watchtower squares.

STEP 1 Consecrate the area around you by executing the Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram for banishing. Use an appropriate magical formula.

STEPS 2-5 of the beginning method. (See page 118)

STEP 6. Recite the appropriate Cali (see Enochian Magic for details on the Calls). Vibrate the Names of Power in appropriate order: the Holy Name, the Great King, the six Seniors, the two Calvary Cross Angels, the Archangel, and the Angel.

STEP 7. Concentrate on the door before you and the known attributes of the square behind it.

STEP 8. Project yourself into your Body of Light and pass through the doorway into the Watchtower Square. If necessary, use the Rending of the Veil.

STEP 9. You should move about until you encounter the presiding deities of the square. If this is a lesser square these will include an Egyptian deity and sphinx. Carefully notice every detail of your surroundings. Use your magical weapons and/or Words of Power and magical formulas to thwart the Demon of the square and hold him in check.

STEP 10. Determine the main vibrational tone or atmosphere of the square. Do not place any labels on anything, such as good or evil, at this time. Simply accept whatever happens and mentally note what you see and hear.

STEP 11. When ready, return through the door and return to your physical body. If you used the Rending of the Veil, you should now use the Closing of the Veil. Repeat the banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

STEP 12. Record exactly what happened in as much detail as you can in your Magical Diary.

STEP 13. Check your written Diary records against the known signposts and correspondences of the square. Update your data base accordingly.

A BEGINNER'S EXERCISE FOR SUBTLE BODY DEVELOPMENT

There is little danger that any student, however idle or stupid, will fail to get some result; but there is great danger that he will be led astray, obsessed and overwhelmed by his results, even though it be by those which it is necessary that he should attain. Too often, moreover, he mistaketh the first resting place for the goal, and taketh off his armour as if he were a victor ere the fight is well begun. It is desirable that the student should never attach to any result the importance which it at first seems to possess.

Aleister Crowley, Liber O

This exercise is provided for you to practice as often as necessary until you can successfully travel in the Spirit Vision.

STEP 1. Properly prepare yourself and your surroundings.

STEP 2. Imagine your body as being empty. See your body as one that is completely empty but similar in outline to your physical body and enveloping your physical body.

STEP 3. Transfer the seat of your consciousness to your imagined body.

STEP 4 . Move forward.

STEP 5. Rise up into the air to a great height above the earth.

STEP 6. Return to your physical body and transfer the seat of your consciousness back to it.

STEP 7. Record your experiences in your Magical Diary.

NOTES TO STEP 1. If you have a magical robe, wear it. If you have a magical temple, or special room used only for Magick, use it. If not, wear something comfortable (or nothing at all) and use a room that is quiet and comfortable for you to be in. Hold a magical weapon, if you have one. Try incense of various kinds. Try the exercise while either standing or sitting. Always use a banishing ritual, but otherwise it is a good idea to experiment with different things. What will work well for one person may not work for another. Your Magical Diary will show you what works or doesn't work for you.

NOTES TO STEP 2. This technique is used in Tibetan Yoga and is remarkably effective. When you "feel" your empty body coexisting with your physical body, then you will be able to experience your subtle body or aura. With mastery you will find that this subtle body contains the nadis and chakras of Kundalini Yoga.

NOTES TO STEP 3. This is the critical step in this exercise. Normally you associate your body with the physical. Now you must shift your consciousness to a new plane of orientation. Although this may seem to be a difficult task, you do it automatically every night when you fall asleep.

NOTES TO STEP 4. If the transference of consciousness was successful, you will be able to move in any direction you like simply by thinking of it. The only difference between your state in this step and a dream is that here you are conscious of what you are doing. If you will to, you can see your physical body in the position you left it.

NOTES TO STEP 5. This step will allow you to observe the earth from a distance. It will also demonstrate to you the ability of your subtle body to leave your physical body and the physical Earth without harm.

NOTES TO STEP 6. Make your subtle body coincide with your physical body again. Usually the desire to do so is sufficient. You will find that this step is exactly like waking up after a nap.

NOTES TO STEP 7. Record the results of each of your exercises. Document what preparations you tried and the results that you obtained. With time and practice you should be able to find a ceremony that produces good results for you.

AN ADVANCED EXERCISE-RISING ON THE PLANES

You have got to go out Rising on the Planes every day of your life, year after year. You are not to be disheartened by failure, or too much encouraged by success, in any one practice or set of practices.

Aleister Crowley, Magick in Theory and Practice

All powerful magic is within me. I am one who can travel in strength without forgetting his name. I am Yesterday. "Seer of Millions of Years" is my name. I can travel along the paths with those who influence the gods.

Chapter XLII, The Book of the Dead

The following exercise for rising on the planes is intended for your magical preparation. It is adapted from Crowley's Liber O, Chapter VI. Perform the operation as often as necessary until you have attained the one-pointed concentration of Dharana or a degree of Samadhi. You should attain some success with the exercise for subtle body development before attempting this more advanced exercise.

STEP 1. Properly prepare yourself and your surroundings.

STEP 2. Project your subtle body straight up. You should rise up above the earth on a line that is exactly perpendicular to the Earth's surface at the point where your physical body is located.

STEP 3. Continue rising.

STEP 4. When fatigue or inertia finally overwhelm you, let yourself relax and sink back into your physical body.

STEP 5. Record your experiences in your Magical Diary.

NOTES TO STEP 1. The preparation for this exercise is identical to that for A Beginner's Exercise for Subtle Body Development given earlier.

NOTES TO STEP 2. This step assumes some prior development of the subtle body. You should be able to feel yourself rising up into the air. You should feel yourself passing through the ceiling and roof if you are inside a building. "See" the ground falling away from you as you rise upward.

NOTES TO STEP 3. No matter what happens, will yourself to rise higher. Keep going on and on without stop. You may see figures or objects. If so, ignore them and continue rising. The goal of this exercise is to rise above all forms into the vast formless void of the higher cosmic planes. This goal is far harder to achieve than you may think, but with practice and patience, it is likely that you will attain some degree of success.

NOTES TO STEP 4. A successful operation will result in a degree of Samadhi, a state of deep transcendental meditation. This is equivalent to entering the formless cosmic planes of the Aethyrs above UN. Whether you achieve this or not, you will inevitably reach a point where it is unbearable to continue to rise higher. When this point is reached (and it will vary from one person to another and from one day to another) you should begin to end the operation.

NOTES TO STEP 5. Faithfully record your results. In time you may be able to establish patterns which are not otherwise recognizable.

RITUAL OUTLINE FOR A JOURNEY TO SQUARE B OF OYVB IN WATER OF AIR

Use the following outline to create your own ceremony to travel in the Spirit Vision to the Watchtower of Air, the subquadrant Water of Air, the square B of OY (V) V (U) B.

STEP 1. Consecrate a arde and enscribe it with the formulas of KAL and TOOG (see Formulas of Enochian Magick). Execute the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram. Stand with your Sword or Dagger and face East. Trace the yellow Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Air. Fill the room with the scent of galbanum or peppermint.

STEP 2. Recite the third Cali as follows:

"Behold," declares your God, "I am a circle on whose hands stand Twelve Kingdoms. Six of these are seats of life, the rest are like sharp Sickles, or like the Horns of Death. Because of this, the creatures of Earth live or die only in my own hands, which sleep and then rise again."

"In the beginning I made you stewards, and placed you in the twelve seats of government. I gave every one of you an appropriate level of power over the 456 true ages of time. My intent was that from the highest vessels and the farthest corners of your governments, you might work my Power and pour down the fires of life and multiply upon the earth. Thus you have become the skirts of justice and truth."

In the name of this same God, lift yourselves up I say. Behold, His mercies flourish, and His Name has become mighty among us. In Him we say, move, and descend. Apply yourselves to us as you would to partakers of His Secret Wisdom in your creation.

STEP 3. Recite the seventh Cali as follows:

The East is a House of Virgins who sing praises among the flames of the first glory. There the Lord opened his mouth, and they became 28 living dwellings wherein the strength of man rejoices. They are clothed with ornaments of brightness, and they work wonders on all creatures. Their kingdoms and continuance are like the Third and Fourth; strong towers and places of comfort, the seats of merey and continuance.

O you Servants of Mercy, move and appear! Sing praises to the Creator, and be mighty among us, so that this remembrance will give power, and our strength will grow strong in our Comforter.

STEP 4. Vibrate the following Names of Power:

BATAIVAH (Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh)

HABIORO (Hah-bee-oh-roh) AAOZAIF (Ah-ah-oh-zodah ee-feh) HTNORDA (Heh-teh-noh-rah-dah) AHAOZAPI (Aha-oh-zodah-pee) AVTOTAR (Ah-veh-toh-tah rah)

HIPOTGA (Hee-poh-teh-gah)

STEP 5. Enter your Body of Light and precede to the sub-quadrant Water of Air and then to the square of B in OYVB. Use the Opening of the Veil if necessary.

STEP 6. You will see mostly Water here but with some Air clearly present. The combinations of Water and Air can be seen to act and react quickly together. The net result is the appearance of tremors or waves of agitation throughout the atmosphere. The Water and Air appear to be acting together to create all manner of forms. Designs and patterns of intricate shapes and delicate puses will appear and then dissolve again.

STEP 7. You will see the goddess Isis in this region in her capacity as the Fire of Solidification. She is the power behind the continual formation of shapes and colors in this square. The female sphinx here looks like a huge hawk with human arras and hands. The atmosphere of this square is charged with a strong feminine current. The net result is that the entice square vibrates with creative forces that sculpt and mold the elements into beautiful multa-colored designs but with little conscious planning or purpose. There seems to be no other purpose to the shape-shifting than the very desire to create forms.

STEP 8. The Archangel here is ABOYV (Ah-boh-yeh-veh) whose number is 171, the number for the word APOPHRASZ ;meaning motion. The Angel is BOYV (Boh-yeh-veh) and his word is law here. If he speaks to you, it will be very hard to resist doing whatever he says. Use your Sword to maintain control if necessary.

STEP 9. The demon in this square is ABO (Ah-boh) whose number is 41, the number for the words TOL (all) and EFAFAFE (vessels). ABO is male and is highly creative. His demonic nature is such that he is not definitive but instead seeks to create all manner of bodies. His impetuous desire to create new forms coupled with the power of solidilication given by Isis causes the chaotic and ceaseless creation of forms in this square.

STEP 10. The astrological force working here is Taurus, and the Tarot influence is the Hierophant. This force adds to the constant precipitation into form that characterizes this square.

STEP 11. After observing the square sufficiently, return to your physical body using the Closing of the Veil and then employ the Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Air. Be sure to record your experiences in your Magical Diary.

RITUAL OUTLINE FOR A JOURNEY TO SQUARE A OF PALI IN FIRE OF FIRE

Use the following outline to create your own ceremony to travel in the Spirit Vision to the Watchtower of Fire, the subquadrant Fire of Fire, the square of A of PALI.

STEP 1. Consecrate a circle by executing the banishing Ritual of the Pentagram and Hexagram. Inscribe it with the formula of MZKZB. Stand with your Wand and face South. Trace the red Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Fire. Fill the room with the scent of olibanum or cinmmon.

STEP 2. Recite the sixth Cali as follows:

The spirits of the fourth Angle are nine who are mighty in the Firmament of Waters, who the First has planted as a torment to the wicked anda garland to the righteous.
He gave them fiery darts to cover the earth, and 7699 continual workmen, whose courses visit the earth with comfort and who are in government and continuance like the Second and the Third. Therefore listen to my voice. 1 have spoken of you, and 1 have advanced you in power and presence. Your works shall be a song of honor, and the praise of your God shall be in your creation.

STEP 3. Vibrate the following Names of Power in orden:

OIP-TEAA-PDOKE (Oh-ee-peh-Teh ah-ah Peh doh -keh)

EDLPRNAA	(Eh-del-par-nah-ah)
AAETPIO	(Ah-ah-eteH-pee-oh)
ADAEOET	(A h dah-eh-oh eteh)
ALNKVOD	(Ah-len-keh-voh-deh)
AAPDOKE	(Ah-ah-ped-oh-keh)
ANODOIN	(Ah-noh-doh-ee-neh)
ARINNAP	(Ah-ree-neh-nah-peh)

STEP 4. Enter your Body of Light and procede to the sub-quadrant Fire of Fire and then to the square of A in PALI (Pah-lee).

STEP 5. You should see a combination of Air and Fire in this square. There will be turmoil and swiftly changing shapes and forms.

STEP 6. You should see the goddess Bastas outwardly soft and feminine yet inwardly hard and stern. The male sphinx here is a lion with a human head. The atmosphere in this square is charged with a strong masculine current which is somewhat balanced by the femininity of Bast.

STEP 7. The Angel ALIP (Ah-lee-peh) may confront you. Her nature is to quickly disperse or dissipate the lower coarser elements of anything entering this square (ALIP 83 = FIFALZ meaning to eliminate or weed out).

STEP 8. Be wary of the Demon of this square who is named MAL (Mah-leh) which means "arrow." She is single-minded in her attempts to create forms (MAL = 104 = 52 x 2 and 52 = QAA meaning "creation"). The creation of forms is a demonic perversion in this region.

STEP 9. The astrological force working here is Gemini and the Tarot influence is the Lovers. This illustrates the dualistic tug-of-war between. Fire and Air in this region. This square is extremely active being the region wherein complex thoughts are broken up into their essential and more simplified ideas.

STEP 10. After seeing the square sufficiently, return to your physical body and employ the Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Fire. Be sure to record your experiences in your Magical Diary.

RITUAL OUTLINE FOR A JOURNEY TO SQUARE L OF RNIL IN FIRE OF WATER

Use the following outline to create your own ceremony to travel in the Spirit Vision to the Watchtower of Water, the subquadrant Fire of Water, the square L of R(N,A)IL.

STEP 1. Consecrate a circle by executing the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram. Inscribe it with the formula of TOOG. Stand with your Cup and face West. Trace the blue Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Water. Fill the room with the scent of myrrh or ginger.

STEP 2. Recite the fourth Cali as follows:

"I place my feet in the South, and look about me and say, Are not the thunders of increase numbered 33, and do these not rule in the second Angle? I have placed 9639 servants under them. None have yet numbered them, but One. In them, the Second Beginnings of Things exists and grows strong. They are the successive Numbers of Time. Their powers are like those of the first 456. Arise, you Sons of Pleasure, and visit the Earth. I am the Lord your God, who is, and who lives forever. In the name of the Creator, move and show yourselves as pleasant deliverers, and praise Him among the sons of men."

STEP 3. Recite the twelfth Cali as follows:

"O you who range in the South, and who are the 28 Lanterns of Sorrow, bind up your girdles, and visit us. Bring down your 3663 servants so that the Lord may be magnified. His name among you is Wrath. Move I say, and show yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest."

STEP 4. Vibrate the following Names of Power:

RAAGIOSL (Rah-ah-gee-oh--sel) LSRAHPM
(Less-rah-pem) SAIINOV (Sah-ee-ee-noh-veh) LAVAXRP (El-ahvahtz-ar-peh) SLGAIOL (Selgah-eeoh-leh) SOAIZNT (Soh-ah-ee-zodenteh)
LIGDISA (Elee-geh-dee-sah)

STEP 5. Enter your Body of Light and proceed to the sub-quadrant Fire of Water and then to the square of L of RNIL (Rah-nee-el).

STEP 6. You will notice an almost even mixture of Fire and Water swirling together in this square. Passions are strong creative forces in this region of the Tablet of Water. You will find many of your strongest fears and desires taking external shape here.

STEP 7. Search the square for the Egyptian deity. You should see the goddess Sothis, a beautiful naked woman. As goddess of evolutionary development, she can initiate you into the mysteries of the feminine current which is strong in this square. The sphinx that accompanies Sothis in this square is a large lion with strong wide wings whose legs end in sharp eagle claws. This sphinx possesses both feminine and masculine characteristics.

STEP 8. The Archangel of this square is ALRNI (Ah-larnee). His number is 224, the number for MI-IAL meaning "the power to consume. The Angel is LRNI (L' ar-nee), "he who stirs up." His number is 218, the number for the word TORZU, "to rise up." The fiery nature of this square is due to the nature of ALRNI and the flowing streams of emotional forces is caused by the power of LRNI.

STEP 9. The demora in this square is ALR (Ah-lar). His number is 114, the number for BABALOND meaning "harlot." He is a creature of the feminine current and will seduce you into it if you are not careful. Use your Cup to remand you of your proper goals here and thus to break his enchantment_ ALR is of the same nature as Sothis, but lacks the latter's spiritual insight and initiatory abilities. The forces of this square are of a spiritual nature because the ruling Kerubic square is Leo (see Figure 8, Appendix C). The demonic nature of ALR is his refusal to heed this spiritual impulse,, but instead he uses the feminine current to give shape to the emotional forces of any who enter here. If you have any subconscious fears or desires when you enter here, ALR will project them outwardly before you. If you remain in control, you can command the powers of ALRNI to extinguish these fiery astral forms.

STEP 10. The astrological force working in this square is Leo, the solar creative power. The Tarot influence is Strength/ Lust which manifests here as a very strong desire to create. The presence of the feminine current of Sothis and the masculine current of Leo will produce a blissful feeling in anyone who sees these currents in union here. The sexual nature of this square is similar in content to that encountered in the 16th Aethyr, LEA.

STEP 11. After observing this square sufficiently, return to your physical body and employ the Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Water. Record your experiences in your Magical Diary.

RITUAL OUTLINE FOR A JOURNEY TO SQUARE L OF RLMU IN WATER OF EARTH

Use the following outline to create your own ceremony to travel in the Spirit Vision to the Watchtower of Earth the subquadrant Water of Earth, the square L of RLMU

STEP 1. Consecrate a circle by executing the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram Inscribe it with the formulas of QAA and IVITDT. Stand with your Penta cle and face North. Trace the black Banishings Pentagram and Hexagram of Earth in the air before you. Fill the room in the the scent of musk or sandalwood.

STEP 2. Recite the fifth Call as follows:

Mighty sounds have entered into the third Angle, and have become like olives on the Olive Mount. They look with gladness upon the Earth and dwell in the brightness of the heavens like continual comforters. On them I have fastened 19 Pillar of Gladness and gave them vessels to water the earth together with her creatures. They are the brothers of the first and second They have begun their own seats and have decorated them with 69,636 ever-burning lamps. Their numbers are as the Beginnings, the Ends, and the Contents of Time. Therefore come and obey the purpose of your Creation. Visit us in peace and comfort. Perfect us as receivers of yours myteries. Why? Because our Lord and Master is the All-One

STEP 3. Recite the 14th Call as follows:

"O Sons of Fury, O Children of the just One, who sits uPon 24 seats, who vex all creatures of the Earth with age, and who have 1636 servants under you, • Behold, the Voice of God, the promise of Him who is called among you, Fury or Extreme justice. Move and show yourselves! Unveil the mysteries of your creation. Be friendly to me, because I am a servant of this same God, a true worshipper of the Highest."

STEP 4. Vibrate the following Names of Power:

IKZHIKAL (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal) LAIDROM (El-ahee-dar-oh-em) AKZINOR (Ah-kehzodee-noh-rah)
LZINOPO (El-zodee-nohpoh) ALHKTGA (Ah-leh-hek-teh-gah) AHMLLKV (Ah-mel-el-keh-veh)
LIANSANSA (Elee-ee-ah-ness-ah)

STEP 5. Enter your Body of Light and proceed to the sub-quadrant Water of Earth and then to the square of L in RLMU (ar-lem ue).

STEP 6. You will notice that this region is mostly solid dry Earth dotted with small lakes and streams. It is a beautiful and harmonious region. Lush forests and fields, green glens and meadows, meandering riverlets and quiet ponds abound in this square. It is a wonderland of nature.

STEP 7. Search the square for the Egyptian deity. You should see the god Horus, a handsome and friendly man. He is the main force behind the lush vegetation and animal life found in this square. He represents the natural forces of invigoration and growth. The sphinx that accompanies him is a huge cow with broad wings whose udder is swollen with milk

STEP 8. The Archangel here is NLMUR (Nel-mu-ar). His number is 318, the number for HARG-BLIOR meaning "to plant with cor Port." Because of NLMUR, planting and sowing is extremely easy in this region of rich fertile soil. The Angel is LMUR (El-mu-ar) whose number is 268, the number for MOZ-MA-OF-FAS meaning "joy that cannot be measured" and also BALTOH-BLIORA which means "righteous comfort." LMUR gives all who enter this region the lawful right to enjoy themselves and to be at peace with the strong forces of nature that dominate this square.

STEP 9. You may need your Pantacle to repel the demon of this square. Her name is NLM (Nel-em) and her number is 148, the number for the word ORSBA meaning "drunken" or "intoxicated." The demon NLM will try to make you drunk with the pleasures of this square. It is very easy to lose yourself in the peace and fascination of the natural landscapes of this region.

STEP 10. This square lies under the domination of the Kerubic Taurus which directly affects its physical conditions. The astrological influence here is Saturn. The Tarot influence is the Universe. These influences, acting harmoniously together under the conscious direction of Horus, have resulted in a scenic fairyland of natural beauty, a woodland paradise.

STEP 11. After observing this square sufficiently, return to your physical body and employ the Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Earth. Record your experiences in your Magical Diary.

THE THIRTY AETHYRS

Andan Angel cometh forth, and he taketh me aside into a little chamber in one of the nine towers. This chamber is furnished with maps of many mystical sities. There is a table, and a strange lamp, that gines light by jettingfour columns of vortex rings of luminous smoke. And he points to the map of the Aethyrs, that are arranged as a flaming Sword, so that the thirty Aethyrs go into the ten Sephiroth. And the first nine are infinitely holy.

Aleister Crowley, The Vision and the Voice, the 9th Aethyr

Enochian Magick describes thirty Aethyrs or Aires that are situated above/behind our physical world. Unlike the Watchtower Squares, the Aethyrs are positioned in serial order from number 30, TEX, the lowest and most material, to number 1, LIL, the highest and most spiritual.

Here again you must remember that "high" and "low" are not to be tallen literally, but figuratively. These Aethyrs can be compared to the Sephiroth and Tarot Paths of the Qabalistic Tree of Life, but the only exact correspondence is the tenth Aethyr, ZAX, which is the Abyss, the location of the eleventh Sephiroth, Daath.

The Aethyrs are shown in Appendix E and each is fully described in Enochian Magic. Like the Qabalistic Tree of Life, they serve as a powerful structure for the subtle cosmic planes and subplanes that are invisible to our physical eyes but are nonetheless real. The diagrams in Appendix E can serve as crude road maps through these regions for anyone who decides to travel there. Each region has a presiding atmosphere and contains forces, intelligent and non-intelligent, that are characteristic of that region. Table IV is a summary of the major signposts of the thirty Aethyrs.

THE AETHYRS AND MAGICAL GRADES

Thou canst not travel on the Path before thou hast become that Path itself.

H.P. Blavatsky, The Voice of the Silence

Many magical orders have taught that each Sephiroth on the Tree of Life corresponda to a magical grade. The ten Sephiroth often structure the grades of an Order. Under the conditions of self-initiation, if you could raise your consciousness sufficiently to enter a Sephiroth (i.e., a cosmic subplane between the most spiritual, Kether, and the most material, Malkuth) then you effectively attained that magical grade. The same is true in Enochian Magick with the Aethyrs.

Table VI shows these correspondences. For example, if you raise your consciousness to the 21st Aethyr, ASP, and meet your own Reincarnating Ego and see yourself in past lives, then you will have effectively achieved the grade of Adeptus Minor and can be considered a Minor Adept in Enochian Magick. If you are able to enter VTA and see the City of the Pyramids without becoming ensnared by it, then you will have effectively attained the grade of an Exempt Adept in Enochian Magick. Remember here that entering any Aethyr assumes that you have mastered all of the Aethyrs below it and have assimilated all of the lessons and experiences within them. Also remember that the Aethyrs listed in Table VI are not exactly equivalent to the corresponding Sephiroth, but do exist on approximately the same cosmic subplane.

The formal rites and initiation ceremonies that were bestowed by such groups as the Golden Dawn at each magical grade are not necessary in Enochian Magick. Many organizations pass on candidates simply because they have waited the required time period and have seemed interested in the organization. In some groups, friendship alone is enough to move to a higher grade. Formal attainment of a grade in a magical organization does not guarantee that one has actually attained the knowledge and abilities of that grade. Crowley, for example, soon realized that many Golden Dawn leaders were not actually qualified. None, including the highest leaders, had actually crossed the Abyss. It was not until Crowley himself had crossed the Abyss that he was able to perceive this fact. For this reason, grades should remain an entirely personal matter. Let your own conscience (but not your ego) guide you.

SEX IN ENOCHIAN MAGICK

For us, Sex is the first unconscious manifestation of Chiah, the Creative Energy; and although (like everything else) it is shown both on the spiritual and the physical planes, its most important forth-showing is on the "Magical" plane, because it actually produces phenomena which partake of all these ... Thus in Sex we find every one of the primary Correspondences of Chokmah.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

The first Aethyr, LIL, and all the inconceivable realms above the first Aethyr are without sex, which is to say that masculinity and femininity do not exist as separate qualities in those sublime regions. However, below LIL each subplane downward into the physical plane is charged with forces that are either masculine or feminine or combinations of both. Masculinity and femininity are two sides of a duality. Your Great Work is to unite all dualities.

The union of microcosm and macrocosm, the subjective self with its objective world, implies the union of all dualities including sexual polarities. It is your task as a magician to seek within yourself all of those qualities characterized as masculine or feminine. Modern psychology suggests that every man has a feminine psychic component and that every woman has a masculine psychic component (this idea is expressed in the Jungian descriptions of the anima and animus). In other words, a person outwardly male is inwardly female and vice versa. This idea echoes the magi-cal theorem that every individual is essentially sufficient to himself.

A part of the Great Work of every magician is to cultivate those virtues and qualities in which he/she is deficient. To do this a man may invoke one of the female Enochian deities, or one of the Egyptian goddesses who presides over certain of the lesser Watchtower Squares such as Isis or Nephthys. He can then identify himself with her and adopt her qualities as his own. Similarly, a woman may invoice one of the male deities and identify herself with him and adopt his qualities as her own.

Knowledge of the sexual currents that flow within the subtle spheres surrounding our Earth will be essential if you are to advance in Enochian Magick. Several Aethyrs, for example, are so highly charged sexually that ignorance of these currents can lead you to disastrous consequences. The story of John Dee's psychic partner, Edward Kelly, directly confronting the sexual forces in DEO, the seventh Aethyr, is told in Enochian Magic. Kelly, totally unprepared for such an encounter, left Dee and gave up Magick from that moment. Crowley on the other hand, was fully pre-pared and so was able to directly experience all of the Aethyrs up to and including LIL.

The physical body is a sexual organism. Sex can not be avoided, nor should it be. The Enochian magician accepts sexuality as an important part of life. The Great Work is the unification of the dualistic poles that comprise the basis of our universe. This unification includes the duality of male and female. It takes place in the mind, not the body (i.e., in the mental body rather than the physical body). Every physical act of sex should be a creative conscious expression of the Great Work. As such, every physical act of sex should be a magical act.

THE USE OF SEX

Sex is, directly or indirectly, the most powerful weapon in the armory of the Magician; and precisely because there is no moral guide, it is indescribably dangerous.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

The use of sexual techniques to aid in invocations, evocations or traveling in the Spirit Vision is, in the last analysis, an option that you will have to decide for yourself. Similarly the decision to practice Magick alone or with one or more partners is a personal one which you must make for yourself.

Sexual techniques for magical operations are not essential nor should they always be preferred over other methods. Sex is a magical weapon that is inherent in your magical arsenal. If you choose to use it or ignore it, then so be it. Either choice has its karmic consequences as well as its dangers and benefits.

However, sex itself, in the form of sexual currents and forces, cannot be ignored. If you take up the practice of Enochian Magick, you will inevitably confront such forces sooner or later whatever techniques you use. This is because sexual currents and atmospheres already exist in the Aethyrs and to a lesser extent in certain Watchtower

Squares. When you enter these places, you will confront your own sexual nature and unleash sexual energies within yourself whether you consciously desire to do so or not. The sexual force is one of the strongest within your magical universe. In itself, it is neither good nor evil, but like most things it will be up to you to use it wisely and not to let it control you (obsession is a very real possibility for the unwary magician).

According to Crowley, "the Phallus is the physiological basis of the Oversoul" (Of the Nature of the Gods). The 153 supernal Father is said to have risen up from the depths and uttered the Word which led to the creation of the world. It was not a deliberate conscious act so much as a spontaneous outward expression of inherent internal creative forces. The same is true of the phallus, at least to a degree. The entire world arose from the creative impulse of the divine Father contacting the material nature of the divine Mother. The Father is Chockmah, Wisdom and Pure Consciousness. The Mother is Binah, Understanding, the Sea, the Matrix, Field, or Space, in which creation finds itself. The Self is masculine. The N o t Self is feminine. Subjectivity is masculine. Objectivity is feminine. Every being is a geometric point of consciousness (the masculine Hadit) looking out at a world of things and events (the feminine Nuit). The sexual force thus lies at the very roots of our essential nature and it is the same creative force that originally split Non-duality into the dualistic universe of Fire, Air, Water and Earth.

THE SEXUAL CURRENTS

*For I am divided for love's sake, for the chance of union.
This is the creation of the world, that the pain of division is as nothing, and the joy of dissolution all.*

Aliester Crowley, Book of the Law

The sexual currents, both masculine and feminine, that course through the Aethyrs are summarized in Table VII. These currents are the natural result of the division of monadic essence into the duality of all things below LIL.

The chief characteristic of the masculine current is consciousness devoid of feeling. The chief characteristic of the feminine current is bliss devoid of intelligence. The masculine current is cold, uncaring, logical, and highly intelligent. It is unaffected by Sword or Dagger but can be turned by the Cup. The feminine current is hot, irrational, and highly charged with varying emotional forces. It is impervious to the Cup but can be checked in various degrees with the Sword, Dagger or Wand.

These currents will increase in intensity as you rise into the higher Aethyrs. In some Aethyrs both currents will be encountered with almost equal strength. You must remember that each Aethyr will always have both currents somewhere within it. Table VII contains the one that is usually the strongest, but in those Aethyrs where the currents are of approximately equal strength, the Table shows "both."

THE THREE DEGREES OF SEX MAGICK

Take an Athanor and Cucurbite, and prepare a flask for this Wine of the Holy Ghost. Thou needest also a flame for the distillation. In the Athanor is thy Lion, in the Cucurbite thine Eagle. Use a gentle heat, increasing at last to full flame until, the Lion passeth over. Pour immediately thy distillation into the flask prepared for it ... The Elixir being then prepared solemnly and in silence, do thou consume it utterly ... This elixir is the germ of life.

Aleister Crowley,

The Book of the Unveiling of the Sangraal

Sex Magick has many variations and expressions. In conjunction with Enochian Magick there are three major degrees. These three degrees are identical to the three taught in Tibetan Tantra as follows:

1. KARMAMUDRA. The three degrees are all called 'madras' which can mean symbolic positions (you may already be familiar with the mudras as hand positions used in meditations). This is the first and lowest stage. It is Magick using an external partner. Any magical operation which is conducted by two or more people which calls on or uses sexual forces or currents is of the Karmamudra type. If you are interested in this degree, you should study Sex Magick by Louis T. Culling and The Magick of Sex by Melita Denning and Osborne Phillips. Both of these references are Llewellyn publications. Be advised, however, that the name 'karma'-mudra is not without meaning here.

2. JNANAMUDRA. This is the second and middle stage. It is Magick using a mental or internal partner. Any magical operation which is conducted by a sole magician who calls on or uses sexual forces or currents is of the Jnanamudra type. In this stage you must create your own "partner" with your magical imagination and will. This is especially easy to do in Enochian Magick because the Aethyrs, and certain of the Watchtower Squares, already contain willing partners. In POP, if you are a male for example, is the Priestess of the Silver Star, in ZIP is the Daughter of Babalon, and in ARN is Babalon herself. In the same way, male "partners" await you, if you are female, in other Aethyrs (for example, Pan is in LIN, Jupiter is in KHR, Horus is in ZEN and Hermes is in VTA). Preliminary exercises and operations of the Jnanamudra type are there-fore essential for you to advance in Enochian Magick.

3. MAHAMUDRA. This is the third and highest stage. Literally the name means "Great Symbol." In this degree a "partner" is no longer needed. When you reach this stage you will realize that both the feminine and masculine currents are of equal intensity within yourself. This stage is sometimes called "experienced unity." The Mahamudra stage is fully realized in the 4th Aethyr, PAZ, but can be practiced successfully after crossing the Abyss in the 10th Aethyr, ZAX. For details on Mahamudra and an excellent yoga to practice, read Tibetan Yoga and Secret Doctrines by W.Y. Evans-Wentz.

NOTE: In spite of what you may have read elsewhere, the Karmamudra stage is the lowest and most dangerous to . practice. If you have any reservations, skip it and proceed to Jnanamudra. The sole practical benefit of Karmamudra, as far as Enochian Magick is concerned, is that successful practice will often allow you to advance to Jnanamudra easier than directly attempting Jnanamudra. However, your goal is Mahamudra. The first two degrees are but steps to this goal.

A PREPARATIONAL MEDITATION

Thought is the commencement of action, and if a chance thought can produce much effect, what cannot fixed thought do?

Aleister Crowley, Liber Librae

It is recommended that you swear a magical oath to practice the following meditation for 15 to 60 minutes a day for at least six months. At any convenient time during the day or night when you are alone, sit quietly and conduct the meditation described below or as given by Crowley in Liber HIIH Chapter SSS from which this was taken. It is most important not to miss a single day no matter what your daily schedule or health is like. It is also important to record each day's results in your Magical Diary. When your sworn time period is over, go through your diary and you will find that you had good results on some days and poor results (or no results at all) on some days. A plot of scaled results versus time will show your personal meditational cycle. The results themselves can vary from physical perspiration and muscle spasms to a measurable increase in body temperature (it is a good idea to measure and record your temperature before and after each meditation as a scientific check on your progress. An increase in 3 to 5 degrees is not unusual) . You may also hear sounds or voices, and have visions of one sort or another. Whatever happens, write down exactly what happened after each exercise. Do not do more than one operation a day. The time period for each operation should be allowed to vary with the time that you have available as well as with the results. The primary purpose of this meditational technique is to prepare your bodies (your physical as well as your subtle bodies) to receive the forces and energies of the higher Aethyrs, especially the sexual currents that flow through these Aethyrs. If you can wear your robe and conduct each operation in your magical temple, so much the better.

STEP 1. Sit comfortably with spine erect. Keep your feet together. Keep your hands together.

STEP 2. Concentrate on your spinal column. Begin at the base of your spine and "feel" each vertebra upward one at a time.

STEP 3. Imagine your brain to be a yoni, the Womb of Isis, a receptacle of Infinite Space. Imagine your spine to be a lingam, the Phallus of Osiris, a receptacle of Infinite Energy.

STEP 4. Concentrate to the brink of Samadhi. Be conscious of both brain and spine. Imagine a hunger of one for the other. Imagine this hunger to be increasing. Continue to increase this tension as long as you can.

STEP 5. Imagine a current of light about the width of a fine hair, the color of deep azure flecked with scarlet, pass up and down your spine.

STEP 6. Release the tension. Relax. Imagine your body as completely empty. Review the exercise that you have just finished and consider its implications. Record the results in your Magical Diary.

NOTES ON STEP 1. It is very important to be comfortable. The exact mudra or position you assume is up to you. The reason for hands and feet together is that this will allow prana (sometimes called psychic heat) to flow freely through your body. There will be psycho-electrical forces set into action and you will need to open up channels for it. After establishing success in prana flow (as measured by body temperature, perspiration and/or psychic experiences) separate your hands and feet. You should be able to feel an immediate dissipation of psychic heat.

NOTES ON STEP 2. This is a preparatory exercise. If results are poor here, then you may as well end the meditation.

NOTES ON STEP 3. Use your magical imagination. See the region of your head as intensely feminine. See the region of your spine and the base of your spine as intensely masculine. Choose your own symbols here to aid your imagination. The masculine spine and feminine head must be seen as two separate and distinct areas of your body.

NOTES ON STEP 4. Samadhi is the state of one-pointed concentration wherein all else is dissolved. Your mind should be solely focused on the mental hunger of your head and your spine. If this step is successful you should begin perspiring and/or find your body twitching. If so, don't worry. Let it twitch. You are opening up unused channels in your etheric and astral bodies and you are simply feeling the physical effects. If pain is felt, you are probably trying too hard. Lessen the tension and progress at a slower but safer pace.

NOTES ON STEP 5. If the meditation has had a degree of success to this point, this step should have definite physical and psychic results. Try to vary the width of this current of light until it fills your entire body as it passes through you. Complete success should feel like an orgasm throughout your entire body. It should not be concentrated in any specific area. The orgasmic bliss resulting from this meditation is exactly the same bliss that you will encounter in ZIP and is but a foretaste of what awaits you in ARN. It is the Amrita of the Tantras and the Ananda of Hinduism and Buddhism. It is caused by the so-called Body of Bliss, the spirit body that is behind/above the causal body.

A JNANAMUDRA MEDITATION

*Blessed art thou, who hast seen, and yet hast not believed.
For therefore is it given unto thee to taste, and smell, and feel, and hear, and know by the inner sense, and by the inmost sense, so that sevenfold is thy rapture.*

Aleister Crowley, *The Vision and the Voice, the 9th Aethyr

It is recommended that you swear a magical oath to practice the following meditation (or one of your own like it) daily for a selected period of time. Be sure to record your daily results in your Magical Diary. This meditation is specifically for a male magician. A woman will need to make appropriate changes to convert the feminine current to a masculine one. This exercise should be practiced as a preparation for entering ZIP. Crossing the Abyss of ZAX will not of itself allow you to enter ZIP or ZID.

STEP 1. Consecrate a circle, trace the Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Fire, and then sit relaxed within the circle.

STEP 2. Concentrate on blackness. Fill your mind with formless darkness.

STEP 3. Imagine the blackness to descend as if you were slowly rising above an immense black cliff. Slowly rise above the edge of the cliff and see yourself in a lush well-tended, colorful and fertile garden.

STEP 4. Imagine a giant-sized, perfectly formed maiden standing naked in the center of this garden. She should be as sexually attractive as your imagination can form her. Let yourself be the size of a fly or gnat by comparison. Begin at her feet and slowly, gradually, rise upward facing her bare skin all the way to the top of her head. See the hairs and cells of her body.

STEP 5. Imagine yourself either expanding or the lady decreasing in size until you are both comparable. Let her face you and smile enticingly.

STEP 6. Let her approach you slowly and seductively until the front of her body touches yours. Then let her continue until her body merges itself totally in your body. Feel the combination of her body and yours as your own body.

STEP 7. Bathe in the bliss of this union.

STEP 8. Let the woman depart back to her garden. Stand and again trace the Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram of Fire.

STEP 9. Record the results in your Magical Diary.

NOTES TO STEP 1. It is of no consequence whether you wear a robe, street clothes or nothing at all during this exercise. The main thing is to relax and be aware of your Body of Light rather than your physical body.

NOTES TO STEP 2. This is the blackness of ZAX. As you progress with this exercise, see this as the Abyss itself.

NOTES TO STEP 3. This simulates rising out of ZAX into ZIP. Because this is a simulation and a preparatory exercise, do not use the Calls nor the Names of Power at this time.

NOTES TO STEP 4. This woman simulates the Daughter of Babalon who resides in ZIP. She should represent all of the alluring aspects of objectivity; everything that is desirable and attractive to you in the universe. She is the projected image of your anima, the feminine part of your own psyche.

NOTES TO STEP 5. This step should have the psychological effect of placing the Daughter of Babalon and yourself on an equal footing.

NOTES TO STEP 6. During this step, do not concentrate on any specific part of your body. Imagine your body, and hers, to be equally empty of any content except that your body contains the masculine current and hers the feminine current. Because your bodies are subtle, not physical, they can actually be merged together.

NOTES TO STEP 7. The primary effect of a successful Jnanamudra meditation will be an intense bliss (Ananda) throughout your subtle body. Even the physical body will be affected. It should feel to you like an orgasm in every part of your body simultaneously.

NOTES TO STEP 8. Follow this step as given at first. As you attain success, change it by leaving the woman within yourself. At first she will depart on her own soon enough, but gradually she will remain for longer intervals. When she becomes a normal part of yourself you will be ready for Mahamudra.

M A H A M U D R A OUTLINE FOR A BEGINNER'S EXERCISE

Withhold thy mind from all external objects, all external sights. Withhold internal images, lest on thy soul-light a dark shadow they should cast.

H.P. Blavatsky, The Voice of the Silence

Mahamudra is the "Great Symbol" or "great Attitude." It is the chief meditational path to attain mental concentration, or one-pointedness of mind. The following outline can be used to make an appropriate magical exercise for the beginning magician:

STEP 1. Choose one single idea of Enochian Magick upon which to perform this operation. This can be a deity, an Aethyr, a Watchtower Square, or a simple shape such as a circle or triangle. The symbols of the cosmic elements are ideal to use for this purpose.

STEP 2. Assemble the appropriate magical instruments to correspond with the idea of the operation. For example, if your object is the Aethyr KFR and specifically, the Wheel of KHR, then you will want the colors violet and blue, perhaps an amethyst or lapis lazuli, wood from an oak, poplar or fig tree, and the scent of saffron. Your weapon would be a sceptre, and so on. You can use Crowley's Liber 777 to determine exact correspondences, but you are encouraged to use your own intuition and imagination as well. The important thing in this step is to make your surroundings "feel right" to you.

STEP 3. Imagine the object, deity or place that you have chosen clearly before you. "see" the colors and shape distinctly. Concentrate so hard that no other thought whatsoever enters your mind for as long as you can.

STEP 4. Record the results in your Magical Diary. These should include:

- (1) The chosen object of the operation.
- (2) Date and time of exercise.
- (3) Description of instruments used, posture taken, and any rituals performed as preparation.
- (4) Time periods in seconds (or minutes if you are adept at this exercise) that you were able to concentrate without a distraction.
- (5) Number of distractions (i.e., the number of times an unrelated thought came into your mind such as, "I wonder how long I have been at this exercise?").

NOTE: If you perform this operation on a regular basis and are honest with yourself, you will soon discover what will produce good results and what will produce bad results. Good results are lengthy meditations without distractions. Practice should show you a definite improvement with time, but after you find what preparations work best for you, stick with them until you have mastered one-pointed concentration.

OUTLINE FOR AN INTERMEDIATE EXERCISE

Dreams are imperfections of sleep; even so is consciousness the imperfection of waking. Dreams are impurities in the circulation of the blood; even so is consciousness a disorder of life. Dreams are without proportion, without good sense, without truth; so also is consciousness. Awake from dream, the truth is known: awake from waking, the Truth is-The Unknown.

Aleister Crowley, The Book of Lies

After success with one-pointed concentration, you will be ready to practice the exercise described below. This exercise will help you to remain conscious during sleep. Your dreams are a magical barometer of your spiritual progress and this exercise is designed to allow you to get the most out of them. You should take a Magical Oath to practice this exercise every night for a specific period of time. The ultimate goal is to be able to maintain an unbroken continuity of consciousness throughout the waking and dream states. Normally when you "fall" asleep, consciousness snaps and you lapse into an unconscious state wherein you are a victim of circumstances rather than in control of events. In the same way, when you "wake up" consciousness snaps back and you forget the many experiences that you underwent in your dreams. This interruption or break in the continuity of consciousness impairs growth. It also occurs at death and again at rebirth. This is the reason why most people do not remember their past lives. If you master the ability to remember and control your dreams, you will be ready to remember your past lives and control the events of your rebirth.

STEP 1. Prepare for sleep. Make a formal resolve to remember your dreams. Will yourself to remember them when you wake.

STEP 2. Relax, but remain aware of your body and your surroundings as you drift off to sleep. Mentally observe the mechanics of the process. Notice your limbs as they become numb and heavy. Try to know the exact point at which you fall asleep.

STEP 3. Regard whatever dreams you have as a magical experience. As a magician, will yourself to control each dream as it unfolds.

STEP 4. As soon as you wake, record your dreams and the results of this exercise in your Magical Diary.

NOTES TO STEP 1. This resolve can be an informal oath or a magical ritual. The important thing is to sincerely make the resolve. In order to remember your dreams when you wake, you must firmly resolve to do so just before you fall asleep. The resolve, if directed by will, acts subconsciously and is amazingly effective.

NOTES TO STEP 2. The mechanics of falling asleep are identical to leaving your physical body in your subtle body during your Spirit Vision operations as well as during death. However, it is usually done automatically (i.e., subconsciously). You may discover that the exact point at which you fall asleep is impossible to determine. Nevertheless, trying will put you in the proper mental framework for this exercise. With practice your physical body will be asleep while your mind is fully conscious. In the morning you will wake mentally feeling like you never went to sleep but your physical body will be refreshed and rested. Adepts never waste time in dreams. They use sleep to rest their physical bodies while their subtle bodies are consciously active in the subtle regions of the Watchtowers or Aethyrs.

NOTES TO STEP 3. Dreams are magical. Anything that you can do during a magical operation such as visit a Watchtower or Aethyr, you can also do in your dreams. In dreams you will be uninhibited. The morals and ethics of society are stripped away. A more authentic you will express itself and do things that you would never do during the waking state. With practice you can remain in control of your dreams. If something is about to happen that is contrary to your desires, you can change the dream contents (i.e., the plot) by an exercise of will and thereby avoid the experience. Practice of this exercise at the very least should eliminate nightmares or unpleasant dreams for you. In order to get a feeling for how this process works, try daydreaming and deliberately change the events as you please. You will find that only a small degree of consciousness is needed to make significant changes in dream contents.

NOTES TO STEP 4. It is important to record your dreams as soon as possible after waking. If your resolve is sincere, you will wake with full memory of the last dream that you had. However, the details will usually diminish with time. With practice your retention span will grow larger. In time you should be able to review your diary and see patterns in your dreams. Some dreams will stand out as more vivid and more realistic than others. Some will be repetitive. In some dreams you will find yourself with a totally different personality, family, friends and memories than in your waking state. Such dreams could be reviews, in degree, of past lives.

M A H A M U D R A OUTLINE FOR AN ADVANCED EXERCISE

Samadhi is the state in which the ascetic loses the consciousness of every individuality including his own. He becomes-the ALL.

H.P. Blavatsky, *Glossary to
The Voice of Silence*

After success with the beginner's and the intermediate's exercises, you will be ready to practice a more advanced magical operation. This exercise will prepare you for the higher Aethyrs. If you can successfully perform the exercise outlined below, you should have little difficulty in entering the Aethyrs above NIA.

STEP 1. Wear your black robe and hold your magical Sword. Any other preparations will be up to you.

STEP 2. Enter your mental body. As soon as any thought comes into your mind, cut it off with your Sword. This is called "cutting off a thought at the root." Do not allow a single thought to lodge in your mind. Continue in this manner for as long as you can.

STEP 3. Relax your mind and allow thoughts to enter as they will. Pay attention to them but let them continue to come and go as they will. Notice the serial flow of your thoughts as they pass through your mind one after the other. Notice the exact point when one thought ends and another begins. Concentrate on that point. Prolong it for as long as you can.

STEP 4. Relax your mind and watch the continuous flow of your thoughts. See yourself as an external observer. Imagine yourself as a silent watcher resting on the peaceful shore of a river. Watch the river of your thoughts flow by you. Know yourself to be separate from your thoughts. This "shore" is called the tranquil state. Abide in it as you watch your thoughts rise and fall. Concentrate on the shore, not on the river. Whatever thought comes to your mind, do not react to it, but let it pass. Any reaction will stir emotions and pull you into your astral body. Remain in the mental body, without emotion of any kind. Do not control or direct your thoughts but let them come to you as they will. Watch them. Do not react to them. Do not judge them. Do not try to stop or change them. Continue in the tranquil state for as long as you can.

STEP 5. Go back to STEP 2 and repeat the exercises through STEP 4 for as many times as you can.

STEP 6. Record your results in your Magical Diary.

NOTES. Step 2 will cause tension. Step 3 begins with relaxation and then ends with tension. Step 4 will cause relaxation. You will experience continual shifts between states of tension and relaxation as you go through these steps. This will prevent your mind from ever becoming too tense or too relaxed.

THE FORMULAS OF ENOCHIAN MAGICK

Help Nature and work on with her; and Nature will regard thee as one of her creatures and make obeisance. And she will open wide before thee the portals of her secret chambers, layy bare before thy gaze the treasures hidden in the very depths of her pure virgin bosom.

H.P. Blavatsky. The Voice of the Silence

Magical formulas are an expression of natural motion. They establish procedures for action; ways of doing something in the world. The best formulas, and among the most powerful, are those that dovetail with natural law. The fact that a natural law is not widely known, or perhaps even rejected as impossible by the logical thinking of the majority, in no way negates the power of the formula itself. Formulas of immense power include those that correspond with the cyclic laws of manifestation and creative expression. This manual addresses twelve formulas of Enochian Magick as shown in Table VIII. Their meaning and derivations are presented together with their gematric correspondences. Each represents an attitude toward life and describes a particular form of motion through time and space. Each is also an intelligent force and as such, defines the name of a powerful deity that may be invoked into the psychic constitution of the magician by means of appropriate ritual (rituals, like formulas, are expressions of motion).

The major formulas of Enochian Magick are presented here for you to study and use. You will find some of these formulas to be useful while others may seem obscure or difficult. You should try each in your Work and determine for yourself which are best suited to you and your personal Path. At different points along your Path you may find certain formulas to be more useful than others. Rather than present a standardized regimen for these formulas, specifying when to use any one formula as opposed to any other, you are free to work through them at your own pace applying or discarding them as you will. The formulas are summarized in Table VIII.

TABLE VIII, FORMULAS OF ENOCHIAN MAGICK

NAME	NO. Type of Operations Most Beneficial

THE FORMULA OF KAL

Lazily, hungrily, ardently, patiently, so will I work.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word KAL, pronounced either Kah-leh or Kah-el, is comprised of the first letters of the words, ICICLE AAI-LNNIA which means, "the mysteries of the Beast within you." The entire phrase adds up to 924, the number for LUKIFTIASKHIDAO which means, "the brightness of diamonds." AIQ BRK reduces 924 to 6 which is the number for yellow diamonds (see Crowley's Liber 777). Also, $924 = 77 \times 12$ where 77 is the number for ED-NAS (one who receives) as well as THIL (seat). It is also the number for the 5th Aethyr, LIT, as well as the number for TOOG and its magical formula.

The letters of KAL add up to 314 which is the sum of BABALON (110) and the Beast (LNNIAO = 204). In Enochian, the word KAL means "to solidify."

The formula of KAL is associated with the mystery of Babalon and the Beast and their ultimate union. This is shown in the number 314 which is, equal to IA-IDON- TOANT meaning "all powerful union." This mystical union is none other than the Great Work. Also $314 = 157 \times 2$ where 157 is the number for ZORGE which can mean love, friendship or kindness, and the number for BATAWAH, the King of the Watchtower of Air.

The formula of KAL is expressed in its letters: The Hierophant of Taurus (A) with the Fire of judgement (K) on his left and the Chariot of Cancer (L) on his right. In other words, it is the formula of consciousness acting through proper discrimination. The Beast is the developing spiritual consciousness within you, the magician. This consciousness acts according to its perceptions which change as spiritual insight grows. KAL is the way of white Magick. It is the process of the yogi whose daily meditations gradually solidify the inner spirit. It is the formula of true alchemy. The letters Veh, un, and ur are written:

THE FORMULA OF LAO

I am like a maiden bathing in a clear pool of fresh water.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word IAO, pronounced Ee-ah-oh, is comprised of the first three letters of the words, IADNAH ATH OOLORAT which means, "the highest work is man." The entire phrase adds up to 326, the number for the word YARRY which means "fate" or "providence" in the sense of karma. Also $326 = 163 \times 2$, where 163 is the number for RIT which means "mercy." AIQ BKR reduces 326 to 2, the number for duality.

This phrase also adds up to 314 (the T can be either 9 or 3), the number for the formula KAL. The formulas of KAL and IAO are therefore closely related.

The letters of IAO add up to 96, the number for both QAA-OBZA, "creation of duality" and ELZAP-TALHO, "the way of the Cup" where Cup must be taken in its magi-cal sense. Also $96 = 48 \times 2$, where 48 is the number for TALHO which means "cup." The cup symbolism explains the passive nature of this formula. AIQ BKR reduces 96 to 6, the number for life. IAO is the formula for a passive acceptance of life in the sense of karma-less action.

The formula of IAO is that spiritual/magical capability (Temperance/Art in Sagittarius) together with spiritual insight (Hierophant in Taurus) will result in the best karma (Justice in Libra). The formula is therefore one to use to improve one's karmic burden.

The letters gon, un, med are written,

THE FORMULA OF QAA

We made us a temple of stones in the shape of the Universe, even as thou didst wear openly and I concealed.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word QAA, pronounced Qah-ah, is comprised of the first letters of the words QUASAH-ATH-AR

Which means, "the delight in the works of the sun." The entire phrase adds up to 312 which is the number for ANANAEL-BASGIM meaning "the secret wisdom of the day."
This shows the solar nature of this formula. AIQ BKR reduces 312 to 6, the number for life.

This phrase also adds up to 306, the number for DAMPLOZ OLPRT, meaning "a variety of light." AIQ BKR reduces 306 to 9, the number for stability in change.

The formula itself adds up to 52 and $52 \times 6 = 312$. Thus the formula of QAA is directly associated with its paren phrase.
AIQ BKR reduces 52 to 7, the number for desire, the most essential ingredient in any creative process.

The formula of QAA is closely associated with the formula of VRELP because $52 \times 13 = 676$ (see the Formula of VRELP).
The following are hints for understanding this formula:

$52 \times 2 = 104 = \text{MAL (arrow)}$

$52 \times 3 = 156 = \text{DAMPLOZ (variety)}$ $52 \times 4 = 208 = \text{SA-}$

$\text{ETHARZI (in peace)}$ $52 \times 5 = 260 = \text{FISISMOZ (to act}$ with joy)

The letters of the word QAA suggest that true creation is the magical process of the Hanged Man in 178

Water followed by a double dose of spiritual insight (Hierophant in Taurus). Thus creation under the formula QAA implies the conscious giving of oneself.

The letters ger, un, un are written:

THE FORMULA OF KIKA

Let me go back into the world; yea, back into the world.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word KIKA, pronounced Key-kah, is comprised of the first letters of the words, which means, "the enduring truth of the changeless circle." The entire phrase adds up to 947, the number for NIBM TA KHR PARRY meaning, "an equal turn of the Wheel of Fate." This reduces to 2 by AIQ BKR, the number for divine will.

KAFAM IA KOMSELHA AP

The two main words of the phrase (i.e., KAFAM KOMSELHA) add up to 866, the names of the three Governors of KHR, the 20th Aethyr, the Aethyr of the Wheel (ZILDRON= 255, PARZIBA=189, TOTOKAN=422 and 255+189+422=866). AIQ BKR reduces 866 to 2.

The letters of KIKA add up to 666 which Crowley adopted as his own number, being that of the Beast of the New Testament. The word KIKA means "mystery." AIQ BKR demonstrates how close this formula is to MZKZB: 1746 and 666 both reduce to 9 because both are formulas of slow but sure cyclic spiritual development.

The number 666 is equal to ELZAP-MIKA-LNNIA which means "the way of the Great Beast." The word LNNIA (beast) is 174 which is the number for OLORA which means "man." The number 666 is also equal to IA-KHORONZON which means "the truth of KHORONZON" where KHORONZON is the archdemon of the Abyss.

The exact nature of this formula is expressed by the letters themselves:

Your judgement (the Fire of Judgement/Aeon) should be couched in experience (Temperance/Art of Sagittarius) in order to have true insight (Hierophant in Taurus). This formula expresses the scientific attitude of tempering judgment with actual experience in order to see things without prejudice.

The letters veh, gon, veh, un are written:

THE FORMULA OF TOOG

O my beautiful God! I swim in Thy heartlike a trout in the mountain torrent.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word TOOG, pronounced Toh-oh-geh, is comprised of the first letters of the phrase,

TABGES ORS-OXEX GRAA which means, "an emanation from the dark recesses of the moon." This phrase adds up to 1142 which is the sum of the names of the three Governors of the 19th Aethyr, POP:

T O R Z O X I	=	6 3 2
A B R A I O N D	=	2 6 1
O M A G R A P	=	2 4 9

1142

Furthermore, 1142 is the number for KA-KAKOM BABALON which means "the vigorous nature of BABALON." AIQ BKR reduces 1142 to 8, the number for cycles.

This phrase also adds up to 1136 which AIQ BKR reduces to 2, the number for duality.

The word TOOG adds up to 77 with an alternate value of 71 (the letter T can be either 9 or 3). This connects the formula with the 5th Aethyr, LIT. AIQ BKR reduces 77 to 5 while 71 reduces to 8 (notice the recurrence of 5 and 8 in many of these formulas). In addition, $71 \times 16 = 1136$, which connects the formula with its parent phrase.

The words T-OOG mean "like a chamber." Both 77 and 71 are values for the word T-IL meaning "like an Aethyr." The formula of TOOG is thus associated with the feminine current. It is not surprising that 77 is the number for ODOSA which means "to open up what is within." The name itself suggests lust (the creative desire of Leo) joined to motion (the Chariot of Cancer) by the two modes of karmic retribution (the justice of Libra). Karma is both personal and collective and can result in either harmony or conflict, good or evil This dualistic nature of justice was personified by the Egyptian goddess Maati (Maati was the twofold aspect of Maat, goddess of truth and justice, consort to the god Thoth, whose Hall of Maati contained the balance where all were weighed against her feather of justice).

THE FORMULA OF MZKZB

I am hard and strong and male; but come Thou! I shall be soft and weak and feminine.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word MZKZB is pronounced Em-zodkeh-zod-beh. These are the first letters of the words

MADRID-ZOKH KHIRLAN ZAKARE BAEQUIB which means, "the iniquities of the past changing to the joy of righteousness."

The entire phrase adds up to 1746 which is the sum of the names of the three Governors of LEA:

KUKUARPT = 864

LAUAKON = 470

SOKHIAL = 412

1746

In addition:

1746=873x2 where 8873 is the number for YOLKI-HKRA.L ("one who brings forth joy").

1746582x3 where 582 is the number for IOLKAMBALIT ("to bring forth the just").

1746 = 291x6 where 291 is the number for GNETAABISRO ("to rule with hope").

1746 = 194x9 where 194 is the number for GNETAABT MAD ("to be governed by your own god"). Also, 194 is the number for BITOM (fire).

1746= 97x18 where 97 is the number for TABBANZA ("the ruler within").

Also AIQ BKR reduces 1746 to 9, the number for stability in change.

The letters of the formula add up to 413, the number for TOANTAH-IA-VAOAN-IAL which means "the lust for truth that is truly consuming." In addition, the abbreviation for this phrase/ 1711, adds up to 199, the number for GOSAORSBA which means "strange intoxication" (this is an example of a formula within a formula).

Notice that the idea of cyclic progress is carried through this formula. To strengthen this idea, 413 adds to 88 by AIQ BKR and 8 is the number for cycles and spirals.

A second number for MZKZB is 401 (this is because the letter Z can be either 9 or 3). This is the number for K HR, the 20th Aethyr, the Aethyr of the Wheel.

The Enochian formula of MZKZB expresses the spiritual impulse which is cyclic and yet continuous. The special aspect of this formula addresses the intoxicating effects of truth on the magician.

The letters of this formula touch on a special aspect of Qabalistic doctrine. The Emperor (M) and the Star (B) are the two extremes of this formula. Crowley switched the places of these two Tarot paths on the Tree of Life to better accord with his message. According to the formula of MZKZB, it doesn't matter which position they take because BZKZM is an identical formula. The Emperor and the Star acting together encircle the impulse to create (Z) which is tempered by experienced judgement (K).

The sigil of MZKZB from the Watchtower of Earth is:

The letters tal, ceph, veh, ceph, pe are written:

THE FORMULA OF VOVIN

We attained to be starry grains of gold dust in the sands of a slow river. Yea, and that river was the river of space and time also.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The word VOVIN can be pronounced either Voh-veeneh or Voh-vee-en. It is derived from the first letters of the words which means, "the mighty wings of the eagle that carry you through the Void."

VPAAH OXI VABZIR IN NISAN

This phrase adds up to 1175, the number for the sum of the three Governors of the 24th Aethyr, NIA:

ORAKAMIR = 692

KHIASALPS = 404

SOAGEEL = 79

1175

AIQ BKR reduces 1175 to 5, the number for man and motion. The word VOVIN means "dragon" and its formula is the formula of the Magical Dragon.

The word VOVIN adds up to 280 where 28 is the number for BALT which means "justice." Also $280 = 140 \times 2$ where 140 is the number for IL-IA meaning "to consume with truth," and AIQ BKR reduces 140 to 5. In addition, $280 = 70 \times 4$, where 70 is the number for IAD, "a god" and $280 \times 2 = 560$, the number for OMP-ZAKARE meaning an understanding of mobility."

The Magical Dragon is a magician of very high rank. He is aware of his inner divinity, his Holy Guardian Angel. He is one who has crossed the Abyss. His formula is to move ceaselessly through the Watchtowers and Aethyrs dispensing justice and proclaiming his Word. The formula itself reveals his methodology in its letters: A sense of justice (Justice in Libra) is the core of a healthy love of life (the Devil in Capricorn) which is checked by experience (Temperance/Art in Sagittarius) but allowed constant change in expression (Death in Scorpio).

The sigil of VOVIN from the Rose (Figure 6) is:

The letters vau, Hied, gon, drun are written:

THE FORMULA OF VRELP

My God! O my God! I am but a speck in the stardust of ages; I am the Master of the Secret of Things.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word VRELP, pronounced Var-ee-elpeh, is comprised of the first letters of the words VRAN ROR-ELZAP LAIAD PLAPLI

which means, "seeing the orbit of the sun and partaking of the secrets of truth." The entire phrase adds up to 676 which is the number for the sum of the names of the three Governors of the 14th Aethyr, VTA:

TEDOAND	=113
V O A N A M B	= 2 5 7
VIVIPOS	=306

676

The 14th Aethyr contains the City of the Pyramids and the formula of VRELP can aid in entering this exalted city. Also $676=26 \times 26$, where 26 is the number for ATHZAH meaning "the works that are within."

The word VRELP means "a strong seer" and indeed this is the formula for developing psychic abilities. Gematria gives a value of 197 for VRELP which is also the number for the word LAS-OLLOR meaning "a rich man." However, the treasure stored up by one whose formula is VRELP is not money, but spiritual wealth. The words OMP-IL mean "understanding the Aethyrs" and add up to 197 as well as T -IL-OM, "the Aethyrs have knowledge."

The exact nature of the formula is obtained from the letters and their arrangement. In the center of the word is the Hermit of Virgo. He is flanked on the left by the lunar reflective forces of the Moon in Pisces, and on the right by the solar creative forces of Strength/Lust in Leo. In addition, he has the love of life expressed by the Devil in Capric on his left and mobility expressed by the Chariot in Can on his right. VRELP is thus the individuality that he learned to balance the forces of duality in his life.

With an understanding of this formula, you can enter the City of the Pyramids without becoming trapped there (the letter vau will assure that you not carry detachment to extremes).

The sigh of VRELP from the Rose (Figure 6) is:

THE FORMULA OF IVITDT

*I pluck Thee, O my God, like a purple plum upon a sunny tree.
How Thou dost melt in my mouth, Thou consecrated sugar of the Stars!*

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word IVITDT is pronounced Ee-veetehdeh-teh. It is comprised of the first letters of the words

IAL-PRG VAOAN IAL TIBIBP DOALIM TELOK which means, "the burning flames of truth that consume sorrow, sin and death."

The entire phrase adds up to 1130, the number for the sum of the names of the three Governors of the 15th Aethyr, OXO:

TAHAMDO = 140

NOKIABI = 511

TASTOXO = 479

1130

AIQ BKR reduces 1130 to 5, the number for man and motion. Also $1130 = 565 \times 2$, where 565 is the number for TOH-KHIRLAN which means, "the triumph of joy."

The letters of IVITDT add up to 212. This reduces to 5 by AIQ BICR, with an alternate number of 200 (T can be either Leo=9 or Caput Draconis=3). The number 212 is equal to TORZU LIALPRT, "the First Flame." Also $212 = 106 \times 2$ and .106 is the number for AR, "the sun." All of these correspondences show that IVITDT is a solar formula and has to do with the magical process of purification by fire. The words I-VI-I-D-T can be translated "the Second is to be like unto the third." In other words, the polar forces of duality (two) are to be made manifest (three) by this formula.

The correct execution of this important formula is expressed by its letters as follows: the joy of living (the Devil in Capricorn) must be checked by magical ability (Temperance/Art in Sagittarius) while the fruit of the Work (Spirit of the Empress) will be found centered in the joy of creativity (Strength/Lust in Leo). This six-lettered formula expresses a double concept: on one hand existence is delight and bliss is a natural condition of living while on the other hand excessive revelry must be tempered by spiritual insight. IVITDT suggests a balance between the joy of the spiritual impulse and the desires of the world.

THE FORMULA OF NIAKOD

Nor by memory, nor by imagination, nor by prayer, nor by fasting, nor by scourging nor by drugs, nor by ritual, nor by meditation; only by passive love shall he avail.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word NIAKOD is pronounced Nee-ahkoh-deh. It is comprised of the first letters, of the words

NAZPS IL-AMNIA KIAOFI ORS DODRMNI which means, "a sword for the cursed Aethyr of fear, darkness and confusion."

This phrase adds up to 1275 which is the sum of the names of the three Governors of the 10th Aethyr, ZAX:

LEXARPH = 534 KOMANAN =

532 TABITOM = 209

1275

Also, 1275 $= 51 \times 25$, where 25 is the number for the word BESZ which means "matter" and 51 is the number for the word GOSA meaning "strange," "new," or "original." Further-more, 1275 is the number for ZIRN MIKA KHORONZON which means "the wonder and might of KHORNZON" where KHORONZON is the name of the demon of the Great Outer Abyss of ZAX. AIQ BKR reduces 1275 to 6 and also reduces 600 (KHORONZON=600) to 6. In addition, the formula is composed of six letters.

The letters of NIAKOD add up to 450 which is equal to EFAFAGE-ZAX meaning, "vessels of ZAX" where ZAX is the 10th Aethyr. The word KOMO, "a window," is also equal to 450. In addition, $450 = 45 \times 10$, where 45 is the number for the word TABGES which means a cave or recess and 10 is the number of ZAX. These correspondences show and travel through the Abyss of ZAX. The Enochian words NIA-KOD can be translated "safe traveling, or a means "of passage.

The correct way to use this formula is suggested by its letters: You must face your personal annihilation (Death in Scorpio) in ZAX using your magical ability (Temperance/ Art in Sagittarius) and initiated consciousness (Hierophant in Taurus). When your magical judgement (the fiery Aeon) tells you that you are ready, you can then safely enter ZAX. If your karma (Justice in Libra) permits it, you will be successful (Spirit of the Empress).

NIAKOD is a mental sword that should accompany you when you enter or cross the 10th Aethyr, ZAX. The degree of protection afforded by NIAKOD is in direct pro-portion to your understanding of this formula.

The sigh of NIAKOD from the Watchtower of Fire

The letters drun, gon, un, veh, med, gal, are written:

THE FORMULA OF ZTZTZT

O my God, but the love in Me bursts over the bonds of Space and Time; my love is spilt among them that love not love. My wine is poured out for them that never tasted wine. The fumes thereof shall intoxicate them and the vigour of my love shall breed mighty children from their maidens.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

This magical word is pronounced Zod-teh-zod-tehzodteh. The formula is derived from the first letters of the words which means, "the way of love is to sacrifice all into the Cup" where the Cup refers to the Sangreal of the 12th Aethyr, LOE. The phrase adds up to either 404 or 362. This formula is universal because $404 = 101 \times 4$, where 101 is the number of the word LONSA meaning "everyone." The number 404 is the value of TELOK-SOE which means "the death of a savior" and thus relates this formula to that of the dying gods. The number 362 is the value of the words ZIZOPMONONS meaning "vessels of the heart" AIQ BKR reduces 404 to 8 and 362 to 2.

ZAR-TOANT ZEN TOL ZA TALHO

The word ZTZTZT adds up to 54, the number for TALHO, "a cup." The word Talho can also add up to 48, the number for LOE, the 16th Aethyr. ZTZTZT can also add up to 36, the value of the word ELZAP, meaning a "way" or "course" and 18, the value of the word AFFA, "empty." ZTZTZT is thus a feminine formula. AIQ BKR reduces 54, 36 and 18 to 9, the number for stability in change. It is interesting to note that $18 \times 2 = 36$ and $18 \times 3 = 54$.

Because Z and T can both be either 9 (Leo) or 3 (Caput).

Draconis) the formula itself can have three separate modes of operation. The first, acting through the number 54, is the way of the lover. The second, acting through the number 36, is the way of the adherent. The third, acting through the number 18, is the way of the hermit (See Crowley's Magick Without Tears for a detailed explanation of these three magi-cal types, and also ZIM, The Garden of Nemo later in this manual).

This formula is a play on the mixing of the qualities of Leo (creativity) and the initiatory awareness of the High Priestess (Caput Draconis). One is the downward creative impulse, the other the upward spiritual impulse. ZTZTZT expresses the proper balance necessary between these two complementary forces.

The sisil of ZTZTZT from the Watchtower of Air is:

The letters ceph, gisa, ceph, gisa, ceph, gisa are written:

THE FORMULA OF ILIATAI

I who was priest of Ammon-Ra, who saw the Nile flow by for many moons, for many, many moons, am the young fawn of the grey land.

Aleister Crowley, Liber VII

The Enochian word ILIATAI, pronounced Ee-lee-ahtahee, is comprised of the first letters of the teaching,

INSI LAMA-IAIDA ANANAEL TOANTOH AAI-IAD which means, "to tread the highest path of the secret Wisdom is to unite with the god within yourself."

The entire sentence adds up to 836 (this reduces to 8 by AIQ BKR) . The formula itself adds up to 209 and $209 \times 4 = 836$. The formula is thus directly related to its parent phrase. The number 209 is also equal to the word BLIORA which means "comfort" Also $209 \times 2 = 418$, the number in Crowley's system for the Word of the Aeon, Abrahadabra. In addition, $209 = 11 \times 19$ where 19 is the number for SA-A meaning "within me," indicating the arena of operation for this formula.

This powerful formula is connected to the first Aethyr, LIL, through the number 76 (UL= 76) because $76 \times 11 = 836$.

This is probably the most important of the Enochian formulas. It should be used only for operations directly connected to the Great Work. ILIATAI is the formula for the Knowledge and Conversation with your Holy Guardian Angel.

The letters demonstrate the exact nature of the formula: Movement (the Chariot of Cancer) is guarded by Temperance/Art, and indeed the entire working of this formula is encompassed by Temperance/Art. Also, the desire for creativity (Strength/Lust in Leo) is carefully guarded by initiated consciousness (Hierophant in Taurus).

The letters gon, ur, gon, un, gisa, un, gon are written:

TEX AND RH, THE LOWEST AETHYRS

Without the cube-the material world-is the sphere-system of the spiritual world enfolding it.

Aleister Crowley, A Comment Upon the Nature of the Aethyrs, found in The Vision and the Voice

The two lowest Aethyrs are TEX, the 30th Aethyr, and RII, the 29th TEX is "the Aethyr that is in four parts" but actually RII is usually divided into four parts as well. You must enter these two Aethyrs consciously before attempting to enter any of the higher Aethyrs. The word "consciously" is stressed, because you already enter them periodically but usually subconsciously. They are entered in dreams at night, in daydreams and psychic visions during the day, and after death of the physical body.

TEX is usually considered to be divided as follows:

- 1) Karma and strong karmic forces in the North.
- 2) Desire and strong emotional forces in the East.
- 3) Silence and strong forces of inertia in the South.
- 4) Limiting and restrictive forces in the West.

TEX is on the Etheric Plane and coincides with those regions normally included under the cosmic element of Earth. Traveling to TEX in the Spirit Vision is a big first step for you, the Enochian Magician. It implies a working knowledge of your subtle bodies.

RII includes the heavens of the world's religions. It is usually divided into four sections as follows:

- 1) Your karmic burdens as well as your karmic necessities must be faced in the North.
- 2) Your desires for rewards or punishments will be faced in the East.
- 3) Your awareness of life without a physical body must be faced in the South.

- 4) Your sense of helplessness and human frailty must be faced in the West.

The beginning magician must become familiar with TEX and RII. You must learn to leave your body and mentally travel through these regions with full conscious control and memory. The lessons that you will learn in these Aethyrs will be needed when you enter any of the Aethyrs beyond RH.

BAG, A MAGICAL BATTLE

The Magick Sword is the analytical faculty; directed against any demon it attacks his complexity. Only the simple can withstand the sword.

Aleister Crowley, Book 4

In some of the Watchtower Squares and Aethyrs you will have to do battle with the presiding Angel or Archangel. Only by winning a battle in a direct face-to-face confrontation can you proceed to the next higher stage.

Don't worry, you cannot kill these beings, but you can, and must, win through their defenses to control them, else they will bar your rightful passage. The third Aethyr, BAG, presents an excellent example of this. In BAG you must fight the Angel whose name is LDCIPSP.

Crowley encountered this Angel in BAG. He described him as wearing shining black garments that are lined in white with opal veils. He carries a long and deadly flail.

His face is black with white eyes that are without pupils. He has the belly of a fish, large wings with black and white feathers, lots of short legs and claws like a centipede, a long scorpion-like tail, and tentacles for arms. Crowley managed to pierce his breast with his magical sword. His reward was information which included the Angel's name in a code which Crowley later worked out to be LDCIPSP. In this way, Crowley earned the right to enter ZAA. Failure to fight and conquer LDCIPSP will prohibit you from entering the Aethyrs above BAG without severe visual distortion.

Each of the Aethyrs should be entered in serial order beginning with the lowest, TEX. Mastering TEX will give you the lawful right to proceed into RH. Mastering MT will allow you to enter BAG, and so on. Each Aethyr serves as an initiatory preparation for those Aethyrs above it.

Let's assume that you have mastered TEX and RII, and that you are now ready for BAG. With your Magical Sword raised before you, you should make the appropriate Call. Next you should trace the sigils of the three Governors and vibrate their names:

TABNI P Tah-ben-eetz-peh

FOKLSNI Foh-kel-ess-nee

OXLOPAR Ontz-loh-par

Now assume your Body of Light and enter BAG.

Focus your mind on the known signposts. If this operation is successful, you should immediately sense the heavy guilt-ridden atmosphere of this Aethyr. The sense of your own guilt and unworthiness will almost overwhelm you and you must use your Magical Will to withstand it. Know that this atmosphere applies only to the lowest part of your nature, not to the higher spiritual part. As you search the Aethyr you will encounter your own past words and actions. Keep searching until you meet the huge form of the Angel who is called LDCIPSP. Do not be afraid. He will know it if you have any fear within you at all. Face him. Notice him carefully. He will not look exactly like the picture Crowley presented. He will be seen through your own perceptions. You will see him in your own way. If he rushes at you to engage in battle, you must use your Sword and defend yourself as best you can. If he wins, you will awake in your physical body again and you will surely consider yourself unworthy to continue.

In order to do battle with LDCIPSP, or any other Angel, you must know exactly what it is that you are dealing with. You cannot simply rely on your swordsmanship. Swordsmanship might be the deciding factor in a physical battle, but in the Aethyrs you are in your subtle body. Your mind and emotions will ultimately determine whether you win or lose these battles. The primary weapons of the mind are the signposts.

The name LDUPSP (pronounced Elee-tzee-peh-sehpeh) adds up to 553 in Enochian Gematria. The number 553 is also equal to UNKHI-AAI which means "to confuse that which is within." Also $553 = 79 \times 7$ and 79 is equal to ODO-ZA which means "to open up that which is within" as well as IA-SA which means "the truth that is within." Gematria thus discloses the true nature of LI IPSP. He represents a powerful force that seeks to dig up your deepest subconscious psychic contents and complexes and expose them openly to you. LIXIPSP is a mirror of your very soul. Your battle with LDCIPSP will have grave consequences to you whether you win or lose. The battle itself will expose hidden biases, desires and faults that you have previously ignored or forgotten. Memories of past deeds and thoughts that reveal to you your weaknesses and human frailties will come before you. If you did or said anything in the past which you currently find embarrassing (and who hasn't?) these will spring forth from your subconscious now with a terrible vengeance. Obviously your experiences in this encounter will be your own. How you face up to LDCIPSP is your own private concern. If you fail, you can always try again at a later time. The degree of guilt or self-doubt within you will determine the measure of your success because these are the elements that strengthen LDCIPSP.

ZAA, AN ADVENTURE WITH YOURSELF

Maya or illusion is an element which enters into all finite things, for everything that exists has only a relative, not an absolute, reality, since the appearance which the hidden noumenon assumes for any observer depends upon his power of cognition.

H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

After you have successfully entered the three lowest Aethyrs, TEX, RU, and BAG, you will be ready for an adventure in loneliness; a meeting with yourself alone. This takes place in the 27th Aethyr, ZAA, the Aethyr of Solitude.

The three Governors of ZAA are:

SAZIAMI	Sah-zodee-ah-mee
MATHVLA	Mah-teh-hev-lah
KORPANIB	Koh-rah-pah-nee-beh

ZAA is located in the highest region of the astral plane. It is a region where the emotions and feelings which characterize the astral plane are almost absent and the mentation of the mental plane beyond is impending. On the Watch-towers, ZAA is somewhere in or near Fire of Water. Two of the first things that you will probably notice when entering ZAA are (1) its lunar nature and (2) the almost total absence of anything except yourself. On the Tree of Life, ZAA is somewhere between the Path of the Moon (Pisces) and the Path of Temperance/Art (Sagittarius) below the Sephiroths of Netzach and Tiphareth.

You will be totally alone in ZAA except for a few Angels and the Governors. Although this may actually be true for other Aethyrs as well, in ZAA the sense of loneliness is acute and oppressive. It can be likened to entering a dark and silent chamber and remaining there for a very long time by yourself. Because you are an individual, you are separate from everyone else. In ZAA this fact of life is emphasized until the sense of solitude itself pervades the entire Aethyr like a force.

The Guide here has two aspects. She is both the goddess Diana; young, energetic, and attractive, and the goddess Hecate; old, selfish, and repulsive. These two aspects of femininity are lunar and complementary. Under normal circumstances you will meet Diana first. Later, as you become more familiar with this Aethyr, you will meet Hecate and realize that she and Diana are the same Guide. If you are more familiar with Egyptian deities, you may see Isis and her sister Nephthys in ZAA. Isis is warm, loving, and motherly while Nephthys is cold, stern, and impersonal. The forms that these two lunar qualities (i.e., the waxing and the waning Moon) take for you may vary, but you are certain to encounter the qualities themselves in some form or another.

The loneliness in ZAA is the sense of separation that we all share. This is the Great Heresy of Mahayana Buddhism. Your main lesson to learn in ZAA is to accept individuality, but not loneliness. The terrible sense of loneliness in ZAA is a result of distorted thinking. The truth is that you are never alone. The entire universe is always a part of yourself. Realizing this is an initiatory preparation for the higher Aethyrs.

The most effective weapon to use in ZAA is the Cup although you may find the Pantacle worthwhile as well. The Cup is symbolic of space and its primary function is acceptance. ZAA is a region of introspection somewhat like BAG. However, BAG is more heavily charged with emotions than ZAA. ZAA is designed to allow you to mentally digest the various experiences of your life. It is also a region of rest. It is closely associated with the deep, dreamless sleep state that you enter periodically at night, and with the Devachan of Theosophy.

DES, THE EGO

Lipikas, the Recorders of the Karmic ledger, make an impassible barrier between the personal Ego and the impersonal Self, the Noumenon and Parent-Source of the former . . . They circumscribe the manifested world of matter within the Ring "Pass-Not. "

H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

After the solitude in ZAA, you will be prepared to face and understand the limitations of the human mind. These are fully encountered in the 26th Aethyr, DES. The three Governors of DES are:

POPHAND Poh-peh-hah-en-deh

NIGRANA Nee-gar-ah-nah

BAZHIIM Bah-zod-hee-ee-meh

These Governors are all interested in division. They divide up ideas into component thoughts and thus perpetuate the logic and reason that characterizes the human mind,

The human mind is a manifestation in time, space and form of the divine mind. It is often referred to as 'the son of the father.' Just as a son often rebels against his father to stand independently on his own, so the human mind tries to stand on its own. It denies its inherent dependency. The being confronted in DES will be your own ego. If you see an Angel or other being in DES, know it to be an aspect of your own human mind. When Crowley entered DES he saw his ego in the form of a golden eagle, but it can take on many forms.

Below DES the ego appears to have a supreme control over things. Most people worship their egos in one way or another. In DES you see it for what it really is and the intuitive feeling will come to you that there is much more to your inner being, your Self, than this ego.

Zen Buddhism teaches that the ego is a social fiction. In DES this fiction is stripped away. The ego is not supreme, nor is it independent. Crowley's golden eagle said to him, "I am the great god adored of the holy ones. Yet am I the accursed one, child of the elements and not their father." Although worshipped by many, the ego is a creation of circumstantial events rather than a creator of events. Children come into the world without a sense of ego. This very fact gives children their innocence and purity. The sense of ego must be acquired and developed in them as they grow in order to function properly in society.

Soon the ego beings to think that it is something very special in the scheme of things. Eventually it begins to consider its own survival after death of the body. But the ego in DES is not the Ego in ASP as your experiences in these Aethyrs will demonstrate.

VTI, THE FIRST STAGE OF THE BEAST

This confusing of the real immortal Ego in man, with the false and ephemeral 'personalities' it inhabits during its Manvantaric progress, lies at the root of every such misunderstanding.

H.P. Blavatsky, Theories About Reincarnation and Spirits

The 25th Aethyr, VTI, is the region of the first stage of what Crowley called the Beast. Although not clearly developed until the 16th Aethyr, LEA, the Beast will make its first appearance in VTI. The Governors of VTI are:

MIRZIND	Mee-rah-zodee-en-deh
OBVAORS	Oh-beh-vah-oh-rah-seh
RANGLAM	Rah-neh-geh-lah-meh

All three Governors are concerned with those regions of the mind that are just beyond logic and reason. They represent those psychic forces that conned the superconscious with normal human consciousness. For example, the name OBVA-ORS means "she who is half darkness." This clearly suggests a being who is halfway between consciousness and unconsciousness.

You must directly confront your ego in DES. You must rise above your ego in order to enter VTL Consciousness that is just above the normal egoic human consciousness is viewed as a beast because it is as yet unruly and undisciplined. If you are a novice magician entering VTI for the first time, you will be a beast indeed. You will also be susceptible to the intense spiritual pride that permeates this Aethyr. Although your consciousness has now risen into a higher, more rarified atmosphere, it is nevertheless still joined to the lower personality and physical body. This union will inevitably distort your spiritual vision for as long as it takes to purify the lower components of your constitution. For most magicians, this is the work of many years. It is alchemy in its true sense. As you gain experience and purify your lower nature, the "beast'within you will grow and mature until in LIL, the first Aethyr, it will be as a young child.

When Crowley entered VTI he encountered the Angel of the Aethyr who said, "TAOTZEM is the name by which I am blasphemed." The name TAOTZEM adds gematrically to 163, the number for the King of Air, BATAIVAH, but more especially for RIT which means "mercy." Blind mercy is a blasphemy for what actually lies beyond the human condition because here there is neither grace nor guilt. An alternate gematric number for this name is 145, the number for MA-OF-FAS, "not to be measured" and NOIB, "affirmation." The Angel of VTI thus expresses those positive psychic forces that become degraded by labels or names and thus are better to remain nameless. The name TAO-T-ZEM can mean "he who has your own likeness." This Angel is actually none other than your own self above your ego. He is a reflex of your Holy Guardian Angel who awaits in the 8th Aethyr, ZID.

MA, MOVEMENT THROUGH TIME & SPACE

In the occult teachings, the Unknown and the Unknowable MOVER, or the Self-Existing, is the absolute divine Essence. And thus being 'Absolute' Consciousness, and 'Absolute' Motion-to the limited senses of those who describe this indescribable-it is unconsciousness and immoveableness.

H.P.Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

This I persisteth not, posteth not through generations, changeth momentarily, finally is dead. Therefore is man only himself when lost to himself in The Charioting.

Aleister Crowley, The Book of Lies

The 24th Aethyr, NIA, is the Aethyr of motion. In NIA you will learn to travel through both time and space. The three Governors of NIA are:

ORAKAMIR Oh-rah-kah-mee-ar KHIASALPS
Keh-hee-ah-sal-pens SOAGEEL Soh-ah-geh-el

These Governors are all intimately connected with forces of motion. NIA is the highest of the lower Aethyrs. Mastery of NIA and the lower Aethyrs is the primary qualification of the magical grade of Philosophus. Its mastery is the first ordeal of the VOVIN or Magical Dragon. It marks a definite stage in magical development: the primary separation between the Novice and the Adept.

When Crowley entered NIA he was taken on a journey in a chariot of mother-of-pearl and ivory. His Guide stated that, "Every moment that we fly shall cover an aeon. And every place on which we rest shall be a young universe rejoicing in its strength." This dearly shows how human concepts of time and space will shift in NIA.

Crowley's Guide was female. She had golden hair and skin, blue eyes, and scented breath. She wore see-through robes of the seven major colors. She was an aspect of the goddess Venus, or perhaps Venus herself. She told him, "The price of the journey is little, though its name be death." Death of the human self is a small thing relative to the higher self, and is the price of spiritual Adeptship. You must die to your lower nature in order to be born again to your higher nature. The method used to accomplish this birth and death process is called initiation.

The Guide in NIA is an aspect of BABALON. She will welcome you like a returning lover. She told Crowley, "If once I put thee apart from me, it was for the joy of play. Is not the ebb and flowing of the tide a music of the sea?" This is but a taste of the feeling of oneness that will be encountered in the higher Aethyrs. You must be able to accept joy as a natural condition of spirituality in order to master NIA and rise above the Ring-Pass-Not that encloses it.

TOR, STABILITY IN CHANGE

To beget is to die; to die is to beget. Cast the Seed into the Field of Night.

Aleister Crowley, Book of Lies

After you have mastered the lower seven Aethyrs, you will be ready to pass through the Ring-Pass-Not above NIA. This Ring-Pass-Not will not allow your astral body to enter. You must leave your astral body on the astral plane in the same way that you leave your physical body on the physical plane when you travel to any of the Aethyrs. You must be able to travel in the mental body in order to enter the 23rd Aethyr, TOR. Also, as a preparation for TOR, you are advised to carefully study the formula of KAL.

As soon as you enter TOR you will see symbols of power and generative energy. Crowley saw a black bull, furiously pawing up the ground with flames shooting from its mouth. This was the Apis bull of ancient Egypt which represented generative energy. Whatever you see or hear, simply take mental note of it and continue into the Aethyr. The three Governors of this region are:

RONOAMB Roh-noh-ah-meh-beh ONIZIMP Oh-nee-zodee-em-peh ZAXANIN Zod-ahtz-ah-nee-en

The Aethyr of TOR contains the labor that sustains the world. It generates the raw energy needed to perpetuate the lower planes by converting spirit (energy) directly into matter. You should be able to feel the almost infinite energy that charges the atmosphere here.

A successful experience in TOR should allow you to understand the Qabalistic equation of stability= change. You will see for yourself that stable energy and fluctuating expressions of that energy are two aspects of the same thing. How this idea presents itself to you will vary, but the meaning of stability=change should be dear to you. The number 9 expresses this equation. Using AIQ BKR, the names of the three Governors of TOR reduce to 9 (see AIQ BKR AND THE AETHYRS).

TOR begins the cosmic plane of Air. Therefore, you will probably see symbols for Air such as eagles or other winged beings. The idea of stability=change may express itself as Earth=Air. If so, you will observe that the power symbols seen earlier will take on airy forms. Bulls may turn into eagles, for example, or vice versa.

Another pair of symbols often seen in TOR is the Rose and the Cross. In addition to being symbols for femininity and masculinity, the Rose is the infinitely large while the Cross is the infinitely small (however, sometimes their roles are seen reversed). When seen in TOR, they usually symbolize the concept of extension in space.

LIN, LOOKING AT THE FORMLESS

*The infinite Lord of Light and Love Breaks on the soul like dawn. See! See! Great God of Might and Majesty! Beyond sense, beyond sight, a brilliance Burning from his glowing glance!
Formless, all the worlds of flame Atoms of that fiery frame!*

Aleister Crowley, Aha

After your experiences in TOR you will be ready for the 22nd Aethyr, UN. This is the Aethyr of the Void. UN marks the first stage in the mystical state called Samadhi. Here the beginning of form can be seen looking downward as a sense of extension in space while the beginning of the formless can be seen looking upward. The Aethyr of UN is the region where form and the formless merge into each other. There are four Governors of this Aethyr:

OZIDAIA	Oh-zodee-dah-ee-ah
KALZIRG	Kal-zodee-ar-geh
LAZDIXR	Lah-zodee-tzar
PARAOAN	Pah-rah-oh-ah-en

These Governor's names add up to 1460 (175+491+587+207=1460) which is the number for DRIX-KIA.OFIZAKARE which means, "to bring about a terrible change."

UN is an area of change and after your experiences here, you will never be the same.

The Guide here is the god Pan. Crowley saw Pan as winged and multi-colored with an air of pride and strikingly handsome. He often plays his pan-pipe of the seven holy metals. You may hear this, but owing to the personal nature of these experiences, you also may not. The main thing to remember, as in all of these Aethryrs, is to keep an open mind and carefully observe whatever you see and hear. For example, you should be able to feel the immense expanse of this Aethyr. It will seem to go on forever in all directions. But although UN is enormous in size, you should be able to observe the minutest details of its inhabitants.

There is a rapture here that can catch and hold you spellbound. In a sense, it is the music of the pan-pipe, but in another sense it is Samadhi. You can easily lose your sense of time completely as you leave form and enter the formless areas of this Aethyr.

As you gain experience here you should be able to rise to the highest part of the Aethyr and gaze downward into the birth of form. Form can be seen from LIN in two ways:

- (1) As objective, symbolized by the circle or sphere.
- (2) As subjective, symbolized by the cross which extends in equal directions from a central point.

When Crowley was in LIN he had the impression, "I am the eye." The eye is a glyph for consciousness. In Enochian, the word for eye is OOAON which has the numerical value of 146. This number corresponds to the four Governors because $146 \times 10 = 1460$. The feeling that you will have in UN is that your upper eyelid is spirit while your lower eyelid is matter. With experience you should be able to see both aspects of reality in this Aethyr.

ASP, YOUR REINCARNATING EGO

Esoteric philosophy teaches the existence of two 'Egos' in man, the mortal or 'personal' and the higher, the divine or 'impersonal' calling the former "personality, " and the latter "individuality."

H.P. Blavatsky, glossary to The Key to Theosophy

The 21st Aethyr is the Aethyr of Causation, ASP. The word ASP has the number 22, which is also the number for T-SA which means "the likeness within" and the number of paths on the Tree of Life. This the Aethyr of the Reincarnating Ego. The three Governors of ASP are:

KHLIRZPA Keh-helee-rah-zod-pah

TOANTOM Toh-ah-en-toh-em

VIXPALG Veetz-pah leh-geh

When you first enter ASP you will notice an atmosphere similar to that in ZAA. You will be totally alone with yourself. There will be no colors, no sounds, and no forms. Gradually, as you accustom yourself to this region you will sense time and destiny flowing together. This o p will take on form in a symbolic way, possibly as an avenue and/or a blowing wind. You will observe that the center of the Aethyr contains a throned Angel. Even if you do not see a throne, the impression of this Angel will be one of a ruler, an authority whose word cannot be ignored. The current emanating from this Angel will seem cold and masculine. This is also the impression that you will get from staring into his face.

This Angel will be difficult to talk to. You cannot use words in the normal way. Communication will be possible only with pure ideas. As soon as an idea comes into your mind, whether it is simple or complex, he will hear it immediately. Similarly you will get quick, subtle impressions from him that you will have to translate into words yourself. One of the first things you will notice about this Angel is that his eyes are set to see into the Aethyrs below ASP but he cannot look upward into the higher regions. His nature is fixed, and should he view the higher Aethyrs, certain destruction would follow.

This encounter is initiatory. If successful, you will realize that this Angel is your own Reincarnating Ego. It is that part of yourself that takes on manifestation into the lower realms of existence in order to express itself in time, space and form. If he were to look upward into the real truth of his existence, you, yourself, would cease to be expressed (i.e., you will die to the Aethyrs below ASP). His refusal to look upward is thus your guarantee of returning safely to your physical body after this encounter.

The proximity of this Aethyr to Tiphareth should enable you to understand the nature of its atmosphere. It lies directly below Kether and shares the formlessness and sense of desolation traditionally associated with the Path of Gimel.

KHR, THE WHEEL

The Great Wheel of Samsara.
The Wheel of the Law [Dhamma].
The Wheel of the Taro.
The Wheel of the Heavens.
The Wheel of Life.
All these Wheels be one.

Aleister Crowley, The Book of Lies

As a preparation for entering KHR, you are advised to study the formula of K.I.K.A. When you enter the 20th Aethyr, KHR, you will see the entire world as a huge rotating wheel. The word KI-IR itself means "wheel." It is equal to the number 401 which is also the number for TOTONOR-MOLAP meaning "the cycles of the sons of men."

The three Governors of KHR (pronounced Keh-har) are:
ZILDRON Zodee-el-dar-oh-en
PARZIBA Par-zodee-bah
TOTOKAN Toh-toh-kan

These Governor's names add up to 866 (255+189+422+=866) which is the number for KAFAFAM KOMSELHA, meaning "an enduring cycle."

This Aethyr contains the masculine energy of Jupiter combined with the feminine energy of Juno. This is because of its proximity to the Sephiroth Chesed which is ruled by Jupiter. These combined currents cause a mixture of visions to be encountered when you first enter here. As you accustom yourself to the atmosphere you will see that these currents form themselves into a gigantic spinning wheel. Everyone who enters KHR will probably see this wheel slightly differently. Crowley saw it as one wheel composed of forty-nine smaller wheels set at different angles to make a sphere. Each wheel had forty-nine concentric tires at equal distances from the center. He also noticed that whenever the rays from any two wheels met, there would be a blinding flash of light. An interesting feature was that although the wheel was seen in such minute detail, the overall impression was of a single, simple object. Crowley saw the jovial god, Jupiter, spinning the wheel as though it were a toy.

Another way of viewing this wheel is as if the rim were a huge emerald snake and in the center, a scarlet heart. This symbolism is the "heart girt with a serpent" found in many occult teachings including Crowley's Liber LXV. It is a form of the snake encircling the world with its tail locked in its mouth.

Yet another possible way of seeing this wheel is in the form of the Wheel of Fortune of Atu X of the Tarot. This path leads down from Chesed through the Veil of the Temple until it connects with Netzach. The Wheel of Fortune is the Western equivalent of the Hindu Wheel of Samsara whose spokes are the three Gunas or modes of energy: sattvas, rajas and tamas. It is also equivalent to the Tibetan Wheel of Life which divides life into eleven phases of an endless cycle and which is held by the terrible Goddess of Time, Kali.

The great turning wheel is our universe. With practice you will be able to see it in at least two of its major aspects: (1) It is a necessary field of learning in which man slowly grows from the outermost rim toward the center, and (2). because of an inherent strong seductivity, it is a place of distortion and deception. The symbols for the latter aspect are the wolf, for the desires of the flesh, the raven, for the desires of the mind, and the combined lamb and flag (symbolic of Earth's two chief deceptions: religion and politics), for the desires of the soul.

As you gaze upon the wheel of KHR, try to comprehend all of the lessons and principles that are expressed by the vision. You should be able to directly observe the universe without bias and without your own personal beliefs coloring your view. You may be surprised by how deeply your beliefs are either modified or strengthened by this experience.

POP AND ZEN, INITIATION

What is the meaning of Initiation? It is the Path to the realization of your Self as the sole, the Supreme, the absolute of all Truth, Beauty, Purity, Perfection!

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

There has been a lot written about initiation and its importance in Magick. It is more than simply adding further knowledge. It implies a death of something and a rebirth of something else. After you are initiated, in the true sense of the word, you will not be the same as you were. Initiation always implies a drastic change. Initiation into Magick implies accepting a totally new outlook on life and even more important, a new view of yourself.

Many of the Aethyrs contain initiations, or require initiation before you can safely enter. You do not need to join a club or society in order to achieve such initiations, although they could be helpful to you. The true initiation is not in the outward ceremony or magical rite. It takes place within you, in your mind and emotions. This is sometimes called self initiation and it is truly the only kind worthy of attainment.

Your grade in an outer magical organization should reflect the extent of your inward perception, but unfortunately this is not always the case. Because Magick is a highly personal experience, outer organizations are not necessary to achieve valid initiations. You will discover as you gain insight into the Aethyrs that each contains its own initiations. Two excellent examples of these are POP and ZEN.

The first, POP, contains an initiation into the feminine current. The Table of Sexual Currents (Table VII) shows POP to be the first Aethyr with a strong sexual content. In the same way the next Aethyr, ZEN, contains an initiation into the masculine current As a general rule, a male magician will have a strong sexual encounter in POP but not in ZEN, while a female magician will have a sexual experience in ZEN but not in POP. The experiences themselves will, of course, be highly personal and no two are likely to be identical.

The Guide in POP is known as the Priestess of the Silver Star. This title refers to the goddess Isis in her role as feminine initiator. On the Qabalistic Tree of Life the Priestess is on the path of Gimel, the camel, located just above Tiphareth. The initiation in POP thus has to do with raising consciousness above the human mind. This Guide personifies the spiritual impulse in its feminine aspect (somewhat like the Dakini of Tibetan Buddhism). She will appear as extremely lovely and sexually alluring. Crowley called her the "arch-harlot, always ready to seduce and to intoxicate him who lusts after her." If you accept that these words are to be taken figuratively and recall that she is a psychic thought form, not a physical woman, then the correct meaning will be quite clear. Successful initiation here leads to the grade of Magister Templi (Master of the Temple). The first ordeal of this grade is fully encountered in the next Aethyr, ZEN.

Zen contains the Vault in which a candidate for the grade of Magister Templi must lie. In ZEN you will encounter an initiation into the true meanings of crucifixion and sacrifice. The Guide here is a sexually attractive male (sometimes, but not always, seen as the god Horus) who will lead you to an imposing Vault Crowley's interpretation was an Egyptian scene complete with pyramids and Egyptian deities. ZEN need not be seen this way. This Aethyr is located near the path of the Hanged Man on the Tree of Life (i.e., just below Geburah) and it is the Hanged Man that you must become in ZEN.

The initiation in ZEN involves the dissolution of personality as a necessary preparation for an encounter with the individuality. Sacrifice need not be a terrifying business nor even unpleasant. No one will hold a gun to your head and demand that you sacrifice yourself for others. Your own desire will impel you. You will lie in the Vault of ZEN, however you care to interpret or experience it, and be submerged in the masculine current until you are initiated.

Such initiations as you will undergo in POP and ZEN will prepare you for entering ZAX. Initiation in the Great Outer Abyss is best left until you are well along in your development. Meanwhile, there is an appropriate initiation waiting at each Ring-Pass-Not. These rings are shown in Figure 2. The first of these is at the top of NIA. In order to pass beyond NIA into TOR, you must be able to leave your astral body in the same way that you must leave your physical body to enter TEX or any other Aethyr above TEX. Your astral body cannot enter TOR or any Aethyr above TOR. In the same way, your mental body cannot enter ZAX or any Aethyr above ZAX. What does in fact pass through these Aethyrs is your consciousness divorced of personality. This divorcing process is the purpose of the initiation in ZEN.

TAN,THE BALANCE

Karma neither punishes nor rewards; it is simply 'the one' Universal Law which guides unerringly and, so to say, blindly, all other laws productive of certain effects along the grooves of their respective causation.

H.P. Blavatsky, Glossary to The Key to Theosophy

The doctrine of Karma is plain common sense.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

After the initiations in POP and ZEN you will be ready to view the Karmic Balance that lies in the 17th Aethyr, TAN. Karmic forces can be found in every Aethyr below LIL but in TAN these forces combine to give the impression of a huge scale or balance of these forces struggling endlessly for equilibrium. The Governors of TAN are:

SIGMORF	See-geh-moh-rah-feh
AYDROPT	Ah-yeh-eh-roh-peh-teh
TOKARZI	Toh-kar-zodee

The Guide of TAN is the Angel MadimL When Crowley saw Madimi she told him that "TAN is that which transformeth judgment into justice. BAL is the sword, and TAN the balances." The name MAD-I-MI can mean, "your own powerful god/goddess." This reveals her true nature as a feminine reflex of your own Holy Guardian Angel. The word BAL means "justice" and the word TAN means "equilibrium." Judgment is harsh, stern, and masculine. Justice is merciful and feminine. The name MADM adds up to 310, the number for GNAY-BAEQUIB which means "to bring about fairness." The combination of BAL and TAN add up to 84 (19+65=84) and 84 is the number of the Enochian word PIAP which means "a balance" or "a scale."

All of this demonstrates the real nature of the 17th Aethyr.

Karma is a natural law or principle that acts on all cosmic planes. It seeks to bring an equilibrium condition to the polar forces of duality below LIL. Any duality will create karma. As long as you think in terms of good and evil, right and wrong, spirit and matter, or subjectivity and objectivity, you will be under the bonds of karma. A balance such as that found in TAN has two pans and a scale. A known weight or standard is placed on one pan and the object to be weighed on the other. Any unbalanced condition will be detected by the scale. In ancient Egypt such a balance was said to be located in the after-death state. The standard weight used was one feather, the symbol of the goddess Maat, the goddess of truth and justice and the wife of the god Thoth. The balance of the Egyptians was operated by the god Anubis. In addition to measuring one's karmic propensities after each life, the Balance of Maat was also used as a type of initiation ordeal. The candidate was obliged to weigh himself on the divine Scale against the feather of Maat (i.e., his karmic burden had to be as light as a feather) in order to progress to a higher magical grade. In the same way, you must undergo an initiation in TAN. You must con-front your own karma and recognize it and deal with it.

As an aid to this initiation, you should remember that all beings below LIL are immersed in karma to a degree. Only when you enter LIL and beyond will you be truly karmaless. The point here is not to eliminate your karmic burdens but to simply realize them as a necessary part of life.

After your meeting with Madimi, you will probably see other Angels. Crowley saw several: one was "like he were carven in black diamonds" and another was dressed in silver armor and had mother-of-pearl wings. The latter of these told him, "justice is the equity that ye have made for yourselves between truth and falsehood." In whatever form the Angel may appear to you, the central message of the relativity of truth and error will be the same. If properly prepared, you will receive this message and then you will never be quite the same again (which is the way of all initiations). Your ideas about what is right and what is wrong will be seen in a new light.

LEA, BABALON AND THE BEAST

This is the secret of the Holy Graal, that is the sacred vessel of our Lady the Scarlet Woman, Babalon the Mother of Abominations, the bride of Chaos, that rideth upon our Lord the beast.

Thou shalt drain out thy blood that is thy life into the golden cup of her fornication.

Thou shalt mingle thy life with the universal life. Thou shalt keep not back one drop.

Aleister Crowley, Liber Cheth

Crowley taught a key element of his Magick using allusions to what he called Babalon and the Beast. He described Babalon as a beautiful naked young girl who is riding upon a beast who is often (but not always) described as a bull or bull-like. The pair of Babalon and the Beast is ascribed to the Tarot path of Strength, Atu XI, which Crowley renamed Lust. There are some arguments about Atu XI (for example, many popular Tarot cards use this position for justice and place Strength in Atu VIII) but Crowley, right or wrong, is at least consistent. He places Babalon and the Beast in Atu XI because they appear together in the 16th Aethyr, LEA, which lies along Atu XI somewhere between Geburah and Chesed on the Tree of Life.

In Enochian, the word BABALON means "wicked" or "evil" and the word BABALOND means "harlot." Enochian Gematria equates BABALON with TOANTA through the number 110. The word TOANTA means "lust." Crowley thus considered the symbolism ideal for an earthy sexual description of the Aethyr and indeed there is a strong feminine current in LEA as well as a masculine current. You are advised to study the formula of MZKZB before attempting to enter LEA.

When you enter LEA, you will find yourself in a turmoil 226 of change. The entire Aethyr is filled with the anticipation of death on the one hand and new life on the other. The guide is the King of the old Aeon. An Aeon is a time period of approximately 2000 years, but the important thing here is that a change in the very nature of things is immanent. The Guide will lament his replacement, although he will openly admit that his replacement is superior to himself. When Crowley entered LEA, this Guide called his replacement the "Beast" and implied that it was Crowley himself. Crowley was, of course, known as the Beast 666 (a reference from the New Testament Book of Revelations) but the -`beast'in LEA is of a different sort. The fact of the matter is that the guide of LEA intends the beast to be any who can enter consciously into LEA. You will be the Beast yourself when you enter this Aethyr. The Guide is a part of your own psyche. It is that part which is dying as you learn and grow in Enochian Magick. Zen Buddhism teaches that we are never the same one moment to the next. Life is a series of little deaths or changes. On a longer time scale, we die as children to become adults. The bachelor dies to become the husband and father, and so on. Life requires death. This is an esoteric concept which is very hard to put correctly into words but is seen directly in the Aethyrs. In LEA you are progressing spiritually to a special level. At this point in your growth you are ready to become something else than what you were before. You are approaching the important grade of Magister Templi (Master of the Temple). You will subconsciously know that you are changing, but the exact direction of the new growth is not yet known. Because of the unruly nature of the new you, it is called a beast. The symbolism of Babalon and the Beast can be explained as your own unruly and unpredictable consciousness being driven around the Aethyr by the seductive nature of the environment.

The feminine current in LEA is one of strong fascination.

The environment is seen as especially alluring. This may or may not be seen in a sexual context. Babalon may not appear as a beautiful harlot (this term is used only because the beauty of Babalon is open to all who enter here) to you. But whatever your personal experience in LEA, you will feel the seductive beauty of the environment around you and the unruliness of your own consciousness as it begins its change into a higher dimension of awareness. The 'lust' that is in LEA is the powerful attractive force between subjectivity and objectivity, self and not-self, that finds its ultimate fulfillment in the first Aethyr, LUL.

OXO, THE AETHYR OF JOY

There is joy in the setting-out; there is joy in the journey; there is joy in the goal.

Aleister Crowley, Liber Tzaddi

The primary feeling throughout the 15th Aethyr, OXO, is intense joy. There is a strong feeling of the love of life for its own sake. The idea that life is a dance or play is also strong in OXO. If your initiations in the lower Aethyrs were successful, OXO will seem like a wonderful region. However, there are many who fear and misunderstand it as a terrible blaspheme. The three Governors of OXO are:

TAHAMDO	Tah-hah-meh doh
NOKLABI	Noh-kee-ah-bee
TASTOXO	Tah-seh-toh-tzoh

You are advised to study the formula of IVITDT before attempting to enter OXO.

When you first enter here you will be caught up in the jjoyous atmosphere. The Angels will dance and sing and will all appear extremely happy. Crowley saw the Dance of Salome where Salome was a reflex of the goddess Nuit. Whatever you actually see, the happiness and gaiety of the Aethyr will flood your being as it does all who enter here.

As you enter deeper into the Aethyr you will see that it contains an important initiation that you must undergo. It is the Mystery of the Rose and the Cross. The Rosy Cross is a symbol for the union of the masculine and feminine currents. These currents rhythmically swirl through OXO. The feminine current is the strongest and is emphasized, but enough of the masculine current is here to provide the initiation. A successful initiation in OXO will furnish an understanding of the true purpose of life. It is a divine dance, the tila' of Hinduism, a creative expression of the Music of the Spheres. The ultimate purpose of Life is to live. The purpose of Being is to be. From the viewpoint of the serious and time-oriented ego, such an initiation is an abomination to be avoided. Many who enter OXO leave in disgust, convinced that it is an evil region, although good and evil are always in the eyes of the beholder. These usually windup in the next Aethyr, VTA, which is the complementary opposite of OXO.

VTA, THE CITY OF THE PYRAMIDS

O ye who dwell in the city of the Pyramids beneath the Night of Pan, remember that ye shall see no more light but that of the great fire that shall consume your dust to ashes.

Aleister Crowley, The Book of Lies

The Aethyr called VTA by the Golden Dawn and UTI or VTI by Crowley contains the City of the Pyramids. The name VTA suggests "the Aethyr of semblances." This name is quite appropriate because all of the residents of this Aethyr look very much alike and all share in the overall atmosphere of the Aethyr. The three Governors are from the Fire Tablet. These are:

TEDOAND	Teh-doh-ah-en-deh
VIVIPOS	Vee-vee-poh-seh
VOANAMB	Voh-ah-nah-em-beh

Their sigils and general descriptions are given in Enochian Magic. VTA is located in a region near the Sephiroths, Geburah and Daath. You are advised to study the formula of VRELI' carefully before trying to enter here.

The first impression that you will have when entering VTA is of utter darkness. It is indeed an Aethyr of blackness, but after a time your "eyes" will adjust. You will soon notice the intense feeling of solemnity and stern thoughtfulness that pervades every inch of VTA. It will seem a universe away from the previous Aethyr of OXO. Its atmosphere is, in fact, almost the complementary opposite of that in OXO.

There is a strong feeling of death here that turns back most who try to enter. You must neither ignore this feeling nor flee from it. You must face it, if you can. In order to enter into the Aethyr itself you must totally accept the atmosphere of death that will confront you. Crowley had difficulty in entering this Aethyr. He discovered that it was easier to enter VTA at night rather than in the day. You are advised to do the same.

The darkness of VTA is a reflection of the Sephiroth, Binah which is located above it. It is the total darkness from which all light springs during creation. There is no creativity in VTA. There is no life there as we usually think of it. At first you will see only an ocean of darkness which is but a glimpse of the sea of Binah. Even the desire for light is absent. If this desire rises in you at this point, you will probably be ejected from the Aethyr.

This is because the residents here have no desire for light of any kind. As you gain experience in VTA you will meet with its inhabitants. They all look very much alike and are totally devoid of emotions and feelings. They have severed desires of every kind. They are detached from their surroundings and from themselves. They are embodiments of the masculine current and are totally lacking the feminine current. For this reason the masculine current is quite strong in VTA while the feminine current is too weak to even be noticed.

Crowley described these residents as being shaped like pyramids of dust. Pyramids were used as both places of initiation and as tombs by the ancient Egyptians. In the same way, you can think of your body as either a Temple of the Spirit (an initiatory chamber) or as a prison (a tomb). The former view is held by the residents of VTA. The symbolism of dust was used to emphasize their lack of life. The vast numbers of residents, all quietly sharing the same detachment and unconcern, gave rise to the name City of the Pyramids.

Crowley's Guide here was the god Hermes who described these residents as those "whose eyes are sealed up, and whose ears are stopped, and whose mouths are clenched, who are folded in upon themselves, the liquor of whose bodies is dried up, so that nothing remains but a little pyramid of dust."

This Aethyr holds the fate of those who have detached themselves from their humanity. Study them well and see where their yogas and their meditations have led them.

to be learned VTA for all who practice There is a lesson any form of yoga or meditation.

ZIM, THE GARDEN OF NEMO

He is, as said, the "Nameless One" who has so many names, and yet whose names and whose very nature are unknown. He is the "Initiator," called the "GREAT SACRIFICE "For, sitting at the threshold of Light, he looks into it from within the circle of Darkness, which he will not cross; nor will he quit his post till the last day of this Life-cycle ... It is under the direct, silent guidance of this MAHA GURU that all the other less divine Teachers and instructors of mankind became, from the first awakening of human consciousness, the guides of early Humanity.

H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

After a successful initiation in the City of the Pyramids, you are now ready to see the Garden of NEMO which lies in the 13th Aethyr, ZIM. The initiatory processes from POP to VTA are specifically designed to elevate you to the magical grade of Magister Templi (Master of the Temple). You must be at least a Magister Templi, or equivalent, to lawfully enter ZIM or any of the Aethyrs above ZIM. What this actually means is that only a Magister Templi will be able to correctly perceive and understand what he see and hears. Illegal entrance into any of the Aethyrs will result in distortion and false interpretations of that Aethyr. The three Governors of ZIM are:

GEKAOND Geh-kah oh-en-deh

LAPARIN Lah-pah-ree-neh
DOKEPAX Doh-keh-pahtz

The Aethyr will at first appear golden. The pure pale gold colors symbolize the dawning life that exists above the City of the Pyramids. If you have successfully reached the grade of Magister Templi you will soon see a tremendous and beautiful garden. Crowley saw this as if on the terrace of a great castle that is sitting on a rocky mountain. Your own perception may differ in details but you will certainly see a garden of some kind. It is called the Garden of NEMO. NEMO is the title of the Angel of the Aethyr whose task it is to tend the garden.

The word NEMO adds up to 180 using Enochian Gematria. This is the number for the words LIMLAL meaning "a treasure" and MAD-NETAAB meaning "divine government." Also $180 = 90 \times 2$ where 90 is the number for SONF which means "to reign." Using AIK BKR, the word NEMO reduces to 9, the number for "stability through change." Also ZIM is equal to 153 which reduces to 9.

NEMO is the title of the Silent Watcher who tends the garden in ZIM. It is therefore a magical grade in the Great White Brotherhood (white refers to the color of the Magick used, not to race) which is sometimes called the Hierarchy of Compassion. It is this esoteric organization that keeps the spirit of love and brotherhood alive in the world. If you have love for your fellow man in your heart, then you are already a member of this organization. It is this organization or Lodge that periodically sends selected members into our world to keep truth alive and to stir the human mind to see beyond itself. Such beings are known as avatars, mahatmas, adepts, bodisattvas or simply good people who try as best as they can to make the world a better place to live. Most remain anonymous and shun publicity. Many are not consciously aware of their self-imposed tasks but diligently carry them out anyway. Some are cast into the public limelight and must bear the jeers and derision of those whom they came to help. Most of our religious founders and leaders, our philosophers and philanthropists are from this Lodge, consciously or unconsciously. Only those who are actively against the Lodge are truly not members. These are called the Black Brothers (black refers to their Magick, not their race). They seek their own personal salvation and refuse to help others, often refusing to admit that others need assistance. They usually end up as citizens in the City of the Pyramids or as one of the deaf and blind who dwell in the lowest portions of the 7th Aethyr, DEO.

Crowley saw the Angel who was NEMO as a young man dressed in white linen robes. You may see NEMO differently. He is one who has had the Knowledge and Conversation of his Holy Guardian Angel and is now actively trying to help others do the same. He has no thought of any reward. Although his goal is to grow and cultivate another NEMO, he tends the garden (a symbol for the Earth) without trying to single out any special plant (candidate). ZIM contains not just one garden but many. In fact, there is a special garden waiting for everyone who enters this Aethyr. If the initiation here is successful, you will become a NEMO yourself. As a NEMO you will have three possible paths to take:

1. The Adherent. This is the path of one who does his best to live his remaining days on Earth adhering to the principles and concepts that he learned in Enochian Magick. He puts those lofty principles into daily practice in his life.

2. The Lover This is the path of one who vows to spend the remaining days of his life helping others. He freely gives up his personal life for his fellowman by daily teaching and setting examples for others to follow.

3. The Hermit. This is the path of one who gives his understanding and knowledge to others but keeps his personal life to himself.

One of these paths must be taken by every Magister Templi. You can be the Adherent like many members of the secret Golden Dawn; outwardly just like anybody else, keeping your knowledge and understanding a private matter. You can be the Lover like Blavatsky, Crowley, and many others who publicly announced and explained their knowledge and understanding. You can be the Hermit like Lao Tze who gave a book of precious knowledge to the world and then disappeared from history.

After you have assumed the role of NEMO you must carefully choose the path that you will tread.

LOE, THE CUP OF BABALON

And behold! If by stealth thou keep unto thyself one thought of thine, then shalt thou be cast out into the abyss for ever; and thou shalt be the lonely one, the eater of dung the afflicted in the Day of Be-With-Us.

Aleister Crowley, Liber Cheth

The Cup of Babalon, the Sangreal, can be seen in the 12th Aethyr, LOE. The 12th Aethyr has the same gematric number as the 19th Aethyr (LOE=48=POP) and thus shares in its characteristics. In LOE the feminine current is stronger than it is in POP and the initiation is similar, but of a higher order. You will see the Cup of Babalon (the Enochian word for cup is TALHO which also has the gematric value of 48) or its equivalent in this Aethyr. The Governors of LOE are:

TAPAMAL Tah-pah-mal

GEDOONS Geh-doh-oh-ness

AMBRIOL Ah-embeh-ree-oh-leh

You are advised to carefully study the formula of ZTZTZT before attempting to enter LOE.

The 12th Aethyr lies along the Tarot path of Cheth on the Tree of Life. This is the path of the Chariot, and the Aethyr shares in the characteristics of Atu VII. Crowley saw the Cup of LOE being held by a charioteer, an Angel in golden armor, studded with sapphires and on the crest of his helmet was a crab. Your vision will probably differ in details, but the central subject of this Aethyr is the Cup or Sangreal, and if you travel through LOE you will surely encounter it in some way. The Angel told Crowley that "the wine of the cup is the blood of the saints." The Cup is thus filled with the lives of those who have devoted themselves to helping others. Another name for this wine is compassion.

LOE, like most of the Aethyrs, contains an initiation. This initiation is called the Mystery of Babalon. In this initiation you will be required to shed your blood into her Cup and share in her Great Work, and unite yourself with her. The result of this union is understanding. LOE is below the Abyss but is very close to the Sephiroth, Binah, and you will probably experience some of the powerful feminine forces flowing down from Dinah.

After a successful initiation you will see a vision of Babalon and the Beast somewhat like you did in the 16th Aethyr, LEA. However, because of your experience in VTA you will now recognize the Beast to be the Lord of the City of Pyramids.

The symbolism here is very important for you to clearly understand. The residents of VTA have shed their blood and are reduced to a "little pyramid of dust." But they did not shed their blood into the Cup of Babalon and are thereby confined to VTA. The Lord of the City of the Pyramids is also reduced to a "pyramid of dust" but he shed his blood into the Cup of Babalon and thus shares in both the masculine and feminine currents. One of your magical tasks is to earn the title of the Lord of the City of the Pyramids yourself.

In addition to the leaders of the Hierarchy of Compassion who have dedicated their lives in the tradition of the bodhisattvas of Mahayana Buddhism, LOE also contains their complement, the so-called Black Brothers. These are people who have risen in spiritual understanding to this lofty height but who refuse to shed their blood into the Cup. They are higher in understanding than the residents of the City of the Pyramids, but have erected thick towers of egotism around themselves and are thereby shut off from their surroundings. This sharp distinction between the Lodge and the so-called Black Brothers led to the rift in Buddhism between the Mahayana and the Hinayana and to similar splits in many occult organizations. It is a distinction involving the concept of spiritual selfishness and you will need to understand it before going beyond LOE.

IKH, THE HOLY CITY

The Finite cannot conceive the Infinite, nor can it apply to it its own standard of mentalexperiences ... Infinity cannot comprehend Finiteness. The Boundless can have no relation to the bounded and the conditioned.

H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

The Holy City is the name given to the highest inhabited region below the Abyss. It is located in the eleventh Aethyr, IKH, and you will see it whenever you enter this Aethyr.

IKH is the Aethyr of Tension which is a result of its location at the brink of the Abyss. The three Governors are:

MOLPAND Moh-el-pan-deh

VSNARDA Ves-en-ar-deh

PONODOL Poh-noh-doh-leh

The tension in the atmosphere often leads to visions of warriors or soldiers tensed and vigilant. Crowley saw the Angels of IKH as warriors with swords and spears for arms. They had wings on their helmets and heels and were all wearing complete suits of armor. Some were seated on elephants, but none were actually moving. The symbolism is quite clear: the Angels of IKH express their proximity to the Abyss and the overwhelming sense of anticipation that pervades here.

The Abyss that is called ZAX is a Ring-Pass-Not for the human mind. Your mental body will therefore serve you no higher than the Holy City. When you enter IKH you will find yourself at the very edge of your mind. The outward tension in IIQ I will be echoed inside yourself as you struggle to remain conscious in this lofty region. You will feel a strong sense of duality, like a psychic tug-of-war throughout the Holy City. You may even have a vision of the Egyptian god, Shu whose task is to maintain the separation of the sky (spirit) and the Earth (matter). In IKH, Shu would be in his highest aspect, equivalent to the god Zeus, the "orderer of all things."

You will have the feeling of being on the highest peak of a mountain in a vast mountain range. As you move through this Aethyr you will see fortresses, bastions, stockades, bulwarks and entrenchments. Crowley saw nine huge towers of iron along the upper frontier of the Aethyr. Whatever you actually see, the idea of elaborate defenses against hostile invading forces will be strong. Even the Holy City itself will appear this way. You will probably see bastions and sprawling towers and parapets with high thick walls suggesting an enormous medieval castle. The Holy City is the "fastness of the Most High" and houses the "legions of eternal vigilance." It sits protectively near the edge of thought and guards the manifested universe against the attacks of the demon KHORONZON. It has a few faded colors here and there, but is largely colored in shades of gray like the entire Aethyr.

Not far from the city are the final outposts. These are small structures standing right on the brink of a tremendous precipice. If you pass these gray but proud outposts you will find yourself standing on the very edge of the known universe. If you detect the faintest trace of fear within you at this point you are advised to turn back immediately. However, you should face the Outermost Abyss several times in IKH before you attempt its crossing.

THE INITIATION OF ZAX-CROSSING THE ABYSS

The Abyss is passed by virtue of the mass of the Adept and his Karma. Two forces impel him: (1) the attraction of Binah, (2) the impulse of his Karma: and the ease and even the safety of his passage depend on the strength and direction of the latter.

Aleister Crowley, Liber Thisharb

Exoterically it (ie., the word TCshetra9 means simply-"field," while esoterically it represents "the great abyss" of the Kabalists, the chaos and the plane (cteis or yoni), in which the creative energy implants the germ of the manifested universe. In other words they are the Purusha and Prakriti of Kapila, the blind and the cripple producing motion by their union, Purusha supplying the head and Prakriti the limbs.

H.P. Blavatsky, The Theosophist,
Vol V, No. 5 (53)

One of the most significant milestones in the life of a magician is the crossing of the Great Outer Abyss. Enochian Magick reserves the 10th Aethyr for the Abyss which is called ZAX. Much has been said about the Abyss, some wise and some foolish. If you have been able to enter the Aethyrs below the Abyss in serial order, then you will be well prepared to enter ZAX. The information and suggestions given here should aid in your task. However, you must supply the courage and determination to perform the actual operation from within yourself.

Because of the importance and serious nature of this operation, it is suggested that you sit in an especially protected circle. Use Names of Power to fortify the circle as well as the powerful formula of NIAKOD. Wear your black robe and arm yourself with your Magick Dagger. Perform the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram. Call on the Names of Power and when ready recite the Call of the 10th Aethyr.

The first thing in ZAX that you will be aware of is the constant whirling about of forms. You will see forms of every description churning and changing shape with great rapidity.

Speak out the formula: ZAZAS, ZAZAS, NASSATANADA, ZAZAS (Zodah-zodah-seh Zodah-zodah-seh Nah-ess-sah-tah-nah-dah Zodah-zodah-seh). This fourfold formula can open up the Abyss. These are the first words that KHORONZON spoke to Crowley when he entered ZAX. Enochian Gematria results in a value for ZAZAS of 37, a prime number and the value of the words GAH BALT which means "spirit of justice." Also $37 \times 18 = 666$, the number of the Beast, the role Crowley assumed for him-self. An interesting note here is that $37 \times 3 = 111$, $37 \times 6 = 222$, $37 \times 9 = 333$ and so on; the number 37, in multiples of three, yields equal three-digit numbers and the word ZAZAS is spoken three times in the formula. The word NASSATANADA (a variant of the Hindu Sat-Cit Ananda or Being-Consciousness-Bliss) adds up to 150 and $150 \times 4 = 600$, the number for KHORONZON. Also 150 is the number for the word IM which means "to apply" in the sense of practical application, and also the word GROSB meaning "a bitter sting." Furthermore, $150 \times 3 = 450$, the value of the magical word NIAKOD. The entire four-word formula can be added together to yield 261, the number for the word ZAMRAN meaning "to appear." The bottom line here is that the words of this formula are magically suited to make a visible form appear out of the chaotic forces that circulate and flow through the vast openness of ZAX. The form that you will see, which is the form taken on by KHORONZON, will be a product of your own karma. In other words, no two magicians are likely to see this Archdemon in exactly the same way.

When confronting KHORONZON, whose number is 600, you must maintain silence. If you speak out using logic and reason, you will be doomed. If you speak out from love and compassion, you will also be doomed. Crowley's scribe who attended him in evoking KHORONZON concluded that "for Choronzon, in the confusion and chaos of his thought, is much terrified by silence. And by silence can he be brought to obey." In other words, you must hold a quiet singleness of purpose in your mind. You should enter ZAX while in Samadhi and while there hold fast to your purpose without losing concentration. Fill your mind with the word NIAKOD (Nee- ah-koh-deh) and let nothing else disturb you.

If all traces of egoity are erased, you should be safe enough. Most dangers arise from a tiny spark of human personality remaining in the subtle body. As if he had matches, KHORONZON will ignite that spark if he can find it, and from the flame will;inevitably arise your worst enemy-your own fear. It is almost impossible to eliminate any fear that you might have at this point. KHORONZON will en-flame the smallest amount of fear and cause it to grow until you will be undone. The only sane method here is to eradicate it prior to entering ZAX. Your initiations in the lower Aethyrs are designed to do this. You must be able to identify yourself totally with your Magical Personality rather than your human personality in order to enter ZAX safely and confront KHORONZON. Otherwise, your Dagger will probably be of little help.

No human being can cross the Abyss. But you are more than human. Just as you left the physical body behind to enter TEX and the astral body to enter TOR so you must now cast off the mental body and raise your consciousness to the spiritual body. ZAX is a Ring-PassNot for the mental body. With consciousness firmly centered in your spiritual body you can cross ZAX and enter the higher Aethyrs easily and safely.

RITUAL FOR THE KNOWLEDGE AND CONVERSATION OF YOUR HOLY GUARDIAN ANGEL

And then shall you f i r s t be able t o put to the test . . . how well and worthily you shall have laboured in the quest of the Wisdom of the Lord; since you shall see your Guardian Angel appear unto you in unequalled beauty; who also will converse with yyou, and speak in words so full of affection and of goodness, and with such sweetness, that no human tongue could express the same . . . In one word, you shall be received by him with such affection that this description which I here give unto you shall appear a mere nothing in comparison.

Abraham the Jew, The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage

This invocation, the Knowledge and Conversation of your Holy Guardian Angel, is the primary goal of Enochian Magick. It is the magical experience of your encounter with your own inner divinity, the divine spark at the core of your being. It will be fully experienced in the 8th Aethyr, ZID. Until then, you can achieve various degrees of this Knowledge and Conversation. The exercise below can be practiced at any time to prepare you for this encounter, but it must be done on a regular basis for best results.

STEP 1. Set aside a special chamber or area to be used only for this exercise. There should be no windows or distractions of any kind. Suspend a magical lamp with red glass from the ceiling and use it to burn olive oil. Beneath the lamp set up your Magical Altar. On the altar place a copy of the Watchtower Tablets that you have made yourself, and your magical weapons including a Wand made by yourself 247 from almond or hazel wood.

STEP 2. Hold your talisman of ILIATAI in your left hand.

STEP 3. Hold your Magical Wand in your right hand and consecrate the chamber or area. Invoke the elements with the invoking pentagrams and hexagrams in the order Fire, Air, Water, and then Earth.

STEP 4. Invoke your Holy Guardian Angel by a suitable prayer that you wrote yourself.

STEP 5. Banish the Watchtower forces and clear the area with the banishing pentagrams and hexagrams in the order Fire, Air, Water, and then Earth.

STEP 6. Record the results of each operation in your Magical Diary.

NOTES TO STEP 1. This is a greatly simplified version of the ritual given by Crowley in The Vision and The Voice, the 8th Aethyr, ZID. Crowley's ritual requires a dedication of 91 consecutive days to perform. Although his ceremony maybe a bit excessive, a few mandatory things such as making your own copy of the Watchtower Tablets and your own Wand is considered a prerequisite to success. For one thing, you will appreciate these things more if you put your time and energy into making them. For another, you can charge them like talismans while you make them. For purposes of this exercise, professional quality in the preparational items is not as important as having a direct link between them and yourself.

NOTES TO STEP 2. You must make and charge this talisman yourself. It should embody the formula, sigils and numbers of ILIATAI. The size and shape of this talisman is up to you. Think of this talisman as a precipitation into matter of the formula of ILIATAI. Figure 5 shows a typical design for such a talisman.

NOTES TO STEP 3. While invoking the four elements, thereby drawing to yourself the combined forces of the Watchtowers, attain one-pointed concentration on your inner divinity-your Holy Guardian Angel whose symbol is the geometric point, the center of your Magical Universe whose circumference is symbolized by the Magick Circle. The point is masculine while the surrounding circle is feminine. See yourself as an infinitesimal point of consciousness surrounded in all directions by infinite space.

NOTES TO STEP 4. You must make up your own prayer. As a minimum, key elements in this prayer should include:

1. The formula of ILIATAI.
2. The number 8.
3. The numbers 836 and 209 or the formula $209 \times 4 = 836$.
4. The pyramid(s).
5. The word GAH meaning "spirit" whose number is 15.
6. The word BESZ meaning "matter" whose number is 31.
7. The word GLO meaning "things" whose number is 46.
(i.e., the sum of GAH and BESZ)

The prayer should be of such a nature that it allows you to actually feel an inner divinity. It should establish a link between your humanity and your spirituality, your human nature and your spiritual nature.

NOTES TO STEP 5. After the invocation, banish the forces that you have called up, back to their respective regions. Be sure to record your results. In time, your Diary should show a definite improvement in the results of this important exercise.

GENERAL NOTE: Although this ritual could be your most important, it must be carefully designed to fit the needs of each magician. There is no one overall ritual that will work for everyone. For this reason, only an outline is provided here. Use this outline to structure your own ritual. Take advantage of your personal experience (your Magick Book) and understanding of Magick (your Cup) to tailor the specific contents of your ritual to give you the best results. Ritual itself is but a means to an end. If you record the results of each operation in your Diary, you can easily determine what works for you, and what doesn't work

MAGICK SQUARES

So far as human evidence goes, it would seem that such magic words do exist.

H.P. Blavatsky, Isis Unveiled

These Symbols (i.e., Magick Squares), then, be made for you to avail yourself of them when you be in the company of other persons; also you must have them upon you, so that in touching or handling them simply, they may represent your wish. Immediately then he unto whom the Symbol appertaineth will serve you punctually.

Abraham the Jew, The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage

The theory of Magick Squares is a very old one. Their use stems from the principle of the power of words to name things, and that knowing the name of something gives you a degree of power or control over it. Refer to The Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage translated by Mathers for the theory and use of Magick Squares.

Enochian Magick also includes Magick Squares. They can be used as aids in meditation or as talismans. Five of the most important of these squares are presented below.

N	£	™	⊙
£	™	⊙	Ɔ
™	⊙	Ɔ	Ɔ
⊙	Ɔ	Ɔ	⊙

NEMO. This square adds up to 516, the number for MIKA-SOESA meaning "the mighty savior within." Also $516 = 129 \times 4$ where 129 is the number for MOZ which means, "joy." Furthermore, $516 = 12 \times 43$ where 43 is the number for BALT-ZA meaning "in justice." AIK BKR reduces 516 and 129 to 12 which reduces to 3, "the son or sum of one" (the supernal father) and "two" (the supernal mother). This is the square of NEMO, the Magister Templi or Master of the Temple.

A	M	M	A
M	T	I	F
M	I	R	F
A	F	F	A

AMMA. This square adds to 625 which is the number for YRPOIL-TELOKH meaning "the separation of death." Also $625=25 \times 25$ where 25 is the number for BESZ, matter. The word AMMA means "cursed," MTIF can mean "a visit like no other," MIRE can mean "a visitation of torment," and AFFA means "'empty." This square embodies the idea of the inherent limitation and mortality of matter and of all physical existence. It should be used carefully.

ROR. This square adds up to 524, the number for IALKOMO which means, 'burning windo' and KHR TOANT BESZ which is, "wheel that unites matter." AIQ BKR reduces 524 to 2, the number for "Divine Will." ROR is the Enochian word for "the sun" and ODO means "to open." The name of the Egyptian solar god, Ptah, means "the Opener" and this Magick Square expresses the same creative forces that are associated with Ptah. This square embodies the forces of the solar current.

R	O	R
O	D	O
R	O	R

GRAA _ This square adds up to 618, the number for ZIN- DOBIX which means "a waterfall," and PARADIZ-KNILA which is "virgin blood." AIQ BKR reduces 618 to 6, the number for imagination. GRAA is the moon and this square embodies the forces of the lunar current. Note that the

G	R	A	A
R	A	O	R
A	O	R	S
A	R	S	A

word GRAA, meaning "moon," is an anagram of AG-AR which means "not the sun." Each of the four words of this square has or implies the words ROR or AR which both mean "the sun" The second word, RAOR is an anagram of A-ROR meaning "he of the sun" and the last word AR-SA means "within the sun," and is an anagram for RAAS meaning "the east," the traditional location of the rising sun. But the word ORS means "darkness" and therefore the entire square is a play on the concept of the moon being itself a kind of sun, a dark sun or sun of the night.

B	A	B	A	L	O	N
A	D	A	N	O	D	O
B	A	H	A	N	O	Q
A	N	A	N	A	E	L
L	O	N	A	S	M	I
O	D	O	E	M	N	A
N	O	Q	L	I	A	D

BABALON. This square adds up to a total of 1183, the number for KA-KAKOM-ZORGE meaning "to make love to flourish." Also $1183 = 169 \times 7$, where 169 is the number for RIT which means "mercy" and PIR, "bright." AIQ BKR reduces 1183 to 4, the number for definition through memory. BABALON is the feminine current encountered in the Aethyrs, ADNA-ODO implies opening up to the concept of obedience; BAHA [L]-NOQ [01 is "the cry of a faithful servant;" ANANAEL means "the secret wisdom;" LONSA-MI suggests the power or energy that lies latent in everyone; ODO-EMNA can mean "to open yourself up henceforth" and NOQ[01-L-IAID can mean "the supreme servant (or minister) of God."

An interpretation of this Magick Square is:

O BABALON

Obeisance to you.

Receive me,

Your faithful servant

Who proclaims your Secret Wisdom.

You are the power that resides in everyone.

Receive me,

For now and for ever.

In addition to these five squares, each Watchtower is associated with a Magick Square as follows:

N	A	N	T	A
A	N	O	A	N
N	O	N	K	P
T	A	K	A	L
A	N	P	L	A

NANTA. This Watchtower of Earth can be translated as forces of the

O Earth

I am like you;

A precipitation of events.

H	K	O	M	R
K	N	I	L	R
O	I	O	D	I
M	L	D	O	T
R	R	I	T	R

HKOMA. This square sums up to 1227 and embodies the forces of the Watchtower of Water. It can be translated as:

O Water,
You are my very blood; Your Name is like my own.

E	X	R	R	P
X	F	R	I	O
R	R	I	T	I
R	I	T	O	L
P	O	I	L	P

EXARP. This square sums up to 1488 and embodies the forces of the Watchtower of Air. It can be translated as:

O Air,
You come to me
With the same mercy that you have For all divided Beings.

B	I	T	O	M
I	A	I	A	L
T	I	A	D	P
O	A	D	P	R
M	L	P	R	G

BITOM. This square sums up to 786 and embodies the forces of the Watchtower of Fire. It can be translated as:

O Fire,
Your Truth consumes me, Like jaws of fiery flame.

NOTE. The gematric values of each of the four Magick Squares of the Watchtowers is reduced by AIQ BKR to 3, the number for manifestation.

HOW TO USE THE MAGICK SQUARES

If thou shalt perfectly observe these rules, all the following Symbols (i.e., Magick Squares) and an infinitude of others will be granted unto thee by the Holy Guardian Angel; thou thus living for the Honour and Glory of the True and only God, for thine own good, and that of thy neighbors.

Let the Fear of God be ever before the eyes and the heart of him who shall possess this Divine Wisdom and Sacred Magic.

Abraham the Jew, The Book of the Sacred Magic of Abramelin the Mage

When used for meditation, each letter represents a force. The nature and relational positions of each letter one to another, in each square, comprise a statement describing an important part of your magical universe. Such magical statements often lose their power when put into words or when they are logically defined by the rational mind. The meanings of the Enochian letters are shown in Table II.

In meditation, let your mind wander through the letters of a square. Note the occult relationships and correspondences as you move among the letters but do not even try to put your observations into words until after the meditation.

As an example, meditate on the square of ROR. You will see that the square contains only three different letters:

R-Moon in Pisces O--- Justice in Libra D-- Empress in Spirit

An overview will show you that as the Empress connects the masculine, CHOKMAH with the feminine, BINAH on the Qabalistic Tree of Life (see Figure 19 in Enochian Magic), so the letter D connects the masculine letter O with the feminine letter R. A strong sense of justice pervades this square. It is interesting to note that the letter R, which occurs in all four corners, is the letter of the moon although the overall square is for the solar current (ROR is the Enochian word for the sun). Thus the sun has the moon within it, just as the moon square of GRAA contains references to the sun within it. This reflects the occult maxim that every truth contains its opposite within it.

Another view of the square of ROR will show Spirit (D) within equal areas of Air (O) and Water (R). This suggests the creative emergence of consciousness from its unconscious Source. This scenario is symbolized in nature by the rising sun, and in Magick by the scarab or beetle-headed god of the Egyptians, Khepera. Further reflection on this square will yield additional solar correspondences. As an exercise, you should meditate on all of the Magick Squares in this manual.

MAGICAL OPERATIONS OF THE VRELP

Now the grade of a Magister teacheth the Mystery of Sorrow, and the grade of a Magus the Mystery of Change, and the grade of Ipsissimus the Mystery of Selflessness, which is called also the Mystery of Pan. Let the Magus then contemplate each in turn, raising it to the ultimate power of Infinity. Wherein Sorrow is Joy, and Change is Stability, and Selflessness is Self

Aleister Crowley, Liber B VetMagi

The VRELP (Var-el-peh), the mystical Seer of Enochian Magick, is one who aspires to become a Magus. A Magus is one who has mastered the third Aethyr, ZOM. The VRELP is an important stage in the development of any Enochian magician and one in which each magician works to attain. To aid in this development, use the Magick Square for VRELP as a talisman:

This Magick Square adds gematrically to 680, where 68 is the number for the word ADNA which means "obedience" (68x 10=680). AIQ BKR reduces 680 to 5, the number for man. The square is a play on the words VRELP-ARF-EL-E AFE implying that the VRELP is an ideal vehicle in which to unite with divine creativity (literally, "VRELP is a supreme vessel in which to . visit the sun"). The VRELP is obedient to divine Law, not to human society. In fact, he is often considered a renegade or eccentric by society and has historically been feared and shunned through misunderstanding. He is portrayed as the evil wizard with a pointed hat and flowing beard who speaks in ambiguities and casts curses and evil spells on the townfolk at a whim. Middle Age literature has stereotyped him into either a witch or warlock depending on sex. Because

E	F	A	F	E
L	E	F	A	R

he/she is always speaking against Christianity, he/she is 'ipso facto' evil. The truth, as is often the case, is not what it seems on the surface.

The VRELP is equivalent to an Exempt Adept (the Adeptus Exemptus of the Golden Dawn). As such he (or she as the case might be) has realized that right and wrong are relative views and that morality itself is a yardstick devised by society and used by society for society. He sees himself as an embodiment in time, space and form of the sun-not the physical sun which is itself but an embodiment, but the spiritual sun, the Sun of the sun (in Egyptian teachings it was known as the hidden god, Amen), which is the Source of all manifestation. All things are alive (i.e., things= beings) because all things express this living Sun. All things are conscious because all things express the conscious Sun. Some beings are no longer aware of these facts and therein has ignorance risen up in the world. But all things/beings are under the Law of Karma and therefore they create their own truth and their own ignorance. The VRELP sees some people creating their own heavens, while others create their own hells according to their beliefs. Then he watches them experience their creations and their experiences reinforce their beliefs. He observes this as a continuous circle whose beginning is lost in time but whose end can come at any moment. The end to this circle is called enlightenment and the VRELP is one who senses that the end of his own Cycle of Ignorance is quickly approaching.

The following exercises are provided for you to practice on your Path to the VRELP:

An Intermediate Meditation.

STEP 1. Meditate on the many correspondences between your physical body and the Watchtower of Earth.

STEP 2. Meditate on the many correspondences between your feelings and emotions (astral body) and the Watchtower of Water.

STEP 3. Meditate on the many correspondences between your thoughts and your thinking processes (lower mental body) and the Watchtower of Air.

STEP 4. Meditate on the many correspondences between your consciousness and your sense of being (upper mental body) and the Watchtower of Fire.

STEP 5. Meditate on the many correspondences between your spirit (spiritual body) and the Tablet of Union.

STEP 6. See yourself as the living embodiment of all of the ideas and energies that are in the Watchtowers. Concentrate on this idea for as long as you can.

The VRELP Dedication Ritual.

STEP 1. Wear a white robe. Make your own talismans of the Magick Squares of ARSOE and LAHA. Consecrate a circle.

STEP 2. Face the Watchtower of Fire. Visualize the Aethyrs of ZIM and LOE. Hold your Wand in your right hand and your Talisman of ARSOE in your left hand. Trace a red sigh of ARSOE in the air before you and say,

ARSOE-OXI-AR-SIBIS (Ar-soh-eh-Oh-tzeeAh-rah-See-bee-seh) Behold, LOE (Loh-eh), The Aethyr of the Cup,

The Region of the Savior,

The House of SOE (Soh-eh)

Who is ARSOE (ah-rah-soh-eh)

Who sits over ZIM (Zodee-meh)

Beyond the Garden of NEMO (Neh-moh) SAH-OMA-EL

(Sah-Oh mah-Eleh)

STEP 3. Hold your Cup in your right hand and the Talisman of LAHA in your left hand. Leave your physical body and travel in your Body of Light to the Aethyrs of ZIM and LOE. Confront BABALON in the form of a beautiful woman standing before you. Hold out your Cup to her and say,

LAHALASA-IAO

(Lah-hah-lah-sah-Ee-ah-oh) I present to you my Cup, The Holy Graal, Filled with the Blood of the Saints, That is my life.

I have kept not back one drop.

LAHALASA-IAO

(Lah-hah-lah-sah-Ee-ah oh)

See your purpose for life (your True Will) in the form of your Cup being received by BABALON and resolve to dedicate your life to helping others in her name.

STEP 4. Return to your physical body. Conduct the appropriate Banishing rituals.

An Advanced VRELP meditation.

STEP 1. Meditate on the meaning and correspondences of the Magick Square of VRELP. Consider its similarities with the Magick Squares of ARSOE and LAHA.

STEP 2. Meditate on the Magick Square of VRELP itself. Consider the balance of its letters. Consider the four corners which include V (the Devil in Capricorn) and P (the creative Lust of Leo).

STEP 3. Meditate on yourself as a solar expression. Consider the similarities between the light of the sun and the light of consciousness.

STEP 4. Transfer the magical forces embodied in the Talisman of the Magick Square of VRELP to yourself. Consider your own Body of Light as a possible vehicle in which to visit the sun.

STEP 5. Imagine your consciousness to be one with the light of the sun. Maintain that image for as long as you can.

MAGICAL OPERATIONS OF THE DRAGON

In every ancient language the word 'dragon' signified what it now does in Chinese-Clang) i.e., "the being who excels in intelligence" ... "the Dragons of Wisdom"-were the first disciples of the Dhyanis, who were their instructors; in short, the primitive adepts of the Third Race, and later, of the Fourth and Fifth Races."

H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

As you advance in Enochian Magick you will reach a level where you can lawfully work for the title of a Magical Dragon whose formula is VOVIN. It will be helpful at this point to make a Magical Dagger inscribed with the formula and its sigil. This Dagger should be consecrated with an appropriate ceremony (to include a magical oath) and given the name "truth that consumes" (IA-IAL). You should construct a talisman similar to that shown in Figure 8 and charge it appropriately.

The ordeals required by

VOVIN are:

1. Mastery of the modes of traveling through time and space, and therefore mastery of the 24th Aethyr, NIA.
2. Mastery of the City of the Pyramids, and therefore mastery of the 14th Aethyr, VTA.

Figure 8. A Talisman for V.O.V.I.N.

3. Ability to cross the Abyss, and therefore mastery of the 10th Aethyr, ZAX.

4. Knowledge and Conversation of the Holy Guardian Angel, and therefore mastery of the 8th Aethyr, ZID.
5. Understanding of love in all of its many aspects, and therefore mastery of the 7th Aethyr, DEO.

These five ordeals should be specific goals within your Great Work. They imply a significant understanding of Enochian Magick and an awesome attainment of magical powers.

The first ordeal will bestow the power to travel consciously through time and space.

The second ordeal will bestow the power to transcend your humanity and align yourself with divinity.

The third ordeal will bestow the power to enter the spiritual realms at will. You will have full control over the demon KHORONZON.

The fourth ordeal will bestow the power of spiritual insight. You will assume your spiritual identity and will obtain supernatural knowledge.

The fifth ordeal will bestow the power of love. Your sole remaining link with this world will be your compassion for others.

If successful, the five ordeals will give the VOVIN the following necessary characteristics:

1. Mobility
2. Detachment
3. Knowledge
4. Understanding
5. Compassion

In addition to acquiring a new Magical Name, you will also need a Magical Word. As a VOVIN you must be able to condense your magical understanding (i.e., that which is within your Magical Cup) into a single word Your primary duty as a VOVIN is to traverse the Aethyrs and Watchtowers proclaiming your Word to all who will listen. You are also a "dispenser of justice" and thus you must constantly strive to express your Word wherever you go. You may have to use your Dagger to keep demons from undoing your work, but the power that you will command should allow you to win such encounters. Of course, your missionary zeal must be tempered by the love and respect for others that you learned in DEO.

As a Magical Dragon, you will have a great deal in common with NEMO. However, NEMO remains in the 13th Aethyr, ZIM, preferring to wait for candidates to come to him. As a VOVIN you are mobile, and roam the cosmic sub-planes to establish your Word wherever you can. You can breathe forth Fire (your spiritual Word), Air (your intellectual Word), and Water (your emotional Word), as well as Earth (your literal or physical Word).

ADDMONAL NOTES ON VOVIN

... the earliest Initiates and Adepts, or the "Wise Men," for whom it is claimed that they were initiated into the mysteries of nature by the UNIVERSAL MIND, represented by the highest angels, were named the "Serpents of Wisdom" and "Dragons". .

H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

The VOVIN is very similar to the VRELP, but there is one major distinction. The VRELP is largely an expression of the solar current while the VOVIN is largely an expression of the lunar current. The VRELP uses the masculine current for his work. The VOVIN works chiefly through the feminine current. The student is reminded however, that the ultimate work itself, i.e., the Great Work, is the same. The VOVIN and his/her work is an extremely important part of Enochian Magick. To aid in your study and approach to the VOVIN, the following Magick Square can be used as a talisman:

The Magick Square of VOVIN adds gematrically to 1876, where $1876 = 67 \times 28$ and 28 is associated with the VOVIN because the word VOVIN is 280 and $280 = 28 \times 10$. The word VOVIN and its Magick Square are thus related through the number 28. The Square is a play on the words VOVIN-OL-OXI-VO-IOV which can be translated, "the Dragon is one who has fortified his soul" (literally, "the Dragon has made his indwelling soul to be mighty").

V	⊙	V	I	N
⊙	L	⊙	X	I
V	⊙	I	⊙	V
I	X	⊙	L	⊙
N	I	V	⊙	V

The Dragon, or VOVIN, is thus said to be one who is very advanced in Magick. He has been able to strengthen his subtle bodies (the "soul" is a general term that refers to those subtle bodies between the physical and the spiritual). AIQ BKR reduces 1876 to 4 and reduces 1068 (this is the value of the words VOVIN-OL-OXI-IOV) to 6. In general, odd numbers (1, 3, 5, 7 and 9) are masculine while even numbers (2, 4, 6 and 8) are feminine. AIQ BKR thus reveals the feminine nature of the VOVIN.

The VRELP is largely concerned with lifting human consciousness upward into the higher spheres of spiritual consciousness. The VOVIN is largely concerned with bringing spiritual consciousness down into the lower spheres of human consciousness. The formula of VRELP includes the techniques of Raja Yoga. The formula of VOVIN includes the techniques of Kundalini Yoga.

There are at least four specific Orders of the Dragon as follows:

1. VOVIN-TELOKH, the Dragon of Death whose number is 638. This Dragon is closely related to TORZ OXI, a Governor of the 19th Aethyr, POP.
2. VOVIN-TOANT, the Dragon of Love whose number is 384. This Dragon is closely related to PAKASNA, a Governor of the 2nd Aethyr, ARN.
3. VOVIN-MATORB, the Dragon of Cycles whose number is 514. This Dragon is closely related to TOKARZI, a Governor of the 17th Aethyr, TAN.
4. VOVIN-BALT, the Dragon of Justice whose numbers are 308 and 302. This Dragon is closely related to ONIZIMP, a Governor of the 23rd Aethyr, TOR

The following ritual should be conducted to charge your Magick Square of VOVIN into a powerful talisman.

STEP 1. Make your own Magick Square of VOVIN.

STEP 2. Wear a black robe. Consecrate a circle. Place your Magick Square, Wand, Sword, Cup and Pantacle before you on the altar.

STEP 3. Hold your Pantacle in both hands before you, face the Magick Square and say,

MORDIALHKTGA (Moh-ar-Dee-ah-leh-Hehkeh-teh-gah)
IKZHIKAL
(Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal)

While repeatedly vibrating the word NANTA, visualize the Power of Earth being transferred in the form of a black ray from your Pantacle into the Magick Square of VOVIN. Maintain this until the Magick Square appears black from the Earth energy that is charging it.

STEP 4. Hold your Cup in both hands before you, face the Magick Square and say,

MPHARSLGAIOL (Em-peh-heh-Ar-ess-elGah-ee-oh-ieh)
RAAGIOSL
(Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel)

While repeatedly vibrating the word HKOMA, visualize the Power of Water being transferred in the form of a blue ray from your Cup to the Magick Square of VOVIN. Maintain this until the Magick Square appears blue from the Water energy that is charging it.

STEP 5. Hold your Sword in both hands before you, face the Magick Square and say,

OROIBAHAOZPI
(Oh-roh-Ee-bah-Ah-oh-zod-pee)
BATAIVAH
(Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh)

While repeatedly vibrating the word EXARP, visualize the Power of Air being transferred in the form of a yellow ray from your Sword to the Magick Square of VOVIN. Maintain this until the Magick Square appears yellow from the Air energy that is charging it.

STEP 6. Hold your Wand in both hands before you, face the Magick Square and say, OIPTEAAPDOKE (Oh-ee-peh-Teh-ah-ah-Peh-doh-keh)

EDLPRNAA

(Eh-del-par-nah-ah)

While repeatedly vibrating the word BITOM, visualize the Power of Fire being transferred in the form of a red ray from your Wand to the Magick Square of VOVIN. Maintain this until the Magick Square appears red from the Fire energy that is charging it.

STEP 7. Hold the Magick Square of VOVIN in your right hand and say,

VOVIN-OL-OXI-VO-IOV

(Voh vee-neh Oh-leh-Oh-tzee-Voh-Ee-oh-veh)

Know your Magick Square to be a fully charged talisman incorporating all of the powers of the Watchtowers.

STEP 8. Conduct the Banishing rituals.

The following is an advanced VOVIN meditation exercise: STEP I.

Meditate on the meaning and correspondences of the Magick Square of VOVIN.

STEP 2. Meditate on the Square itself. Consider the balance of its letters. Consider the four corners which include V (the Devil in Capricorn) and N (Death in Scorpio). Consider the two diagonals of the letter O (justice in Libra). Consider the center and two diagonals of the letter I (Art in Sagittarius). Consider the placement of L (Chariot in Cancer) and X (Universe in the element of Earth). Consider the square to be an expression of the Formula of the Dragon

STEP 3. Meditate on yourself as a lunar expression. Consider the similarities between the reflected and cyclic light of the moon with the human condition.

STEP 4. Transfer the magical forces embodied in the tabernacle of the Magick Square of VOVIN to yourself. Consider your bodies to be a series of cyclic vehicles each a reflection in time, space and form of the other, from spirit down ward to your physical body. Consider your physical body as a Temple of the Body of Light.

STEP 5. Meditate on the lunar nature of your series of bodies. Consider the relationship between the sun and the moon and the relationship which exists between your consciousness and your bodies. Hold that idea for as long as you can.

THE SUN-SAVIOR

Cosmologically, then, all the Dragons and Serpents conquered by their "Slayers" are, in their origin, the turbulent confused principles in Chaos, brought to order by the Sun-gods or 'creative' powers.

H.P. Blavatsky, The Secret Doctrine

A sun-savior in Enochian Magick is called an ARSOE (Ahrah-soh-eh). The sun-savior is equivalent to the Hindu avatar, the Buddhist Bodhisattva and the Hanged Man of the Tarot. It is a manifestation of solar forces and energies in human form. Tradition holds that the sun-savior embodies himself periodically on earth in order to alleviate the sufferings of man and to keep the light of truth burning in men's hearts. The sublime concept of the SOE (savior) and especially of the ARSOE (sun-savior) is one of the most revered in occult tradition. It is nothing less than a deity deliberately embodying in flesh as a result of compassion. It is the Son of God self-made into the Son of Man.

In Enochian Magick the word SOE (pronounced Soh-eh) is the magical formula of the Messiah or Savior. SOE is derived from the parent phrase, SAH-OMA-EL (Sah-hehohrnah-el) which means "the highest understanding is within." This phrase has a gematric value of 158, the number for NOQOL which means "servants." The SOE is not only the Son of Man, but he/she is also the servant of Man.

The Magick square for SOE is at the left:

This square adds up to a total gematric value of 158. AIQ BKR reduces 158 to 5 ($1+5+8=14=1+4=5$), the number for man. The square is a play on the word SOE, "savior" and the word ODO, "to open" which in this context also means "to be open." The savior's mission is to open up the hearts of others and also to be open or receptive to them.

The Magick Square for ARSOE is:

R	R	S	O	E
R	R	I	X	O
S	I	B	I	S
O	X	I	R	R
E	O	S	R	R

The ARSOE square is magically very powerful. It adds up to a gematric value of 1637, a prime number that AIQ BKR reduces to 8, the number for "cycles." The words ARSOE means "sun-savior." OXI-AR means "mighty sun" and SIBIS (a variant of SIBSI) means "covenant." The square thus suggests that the sun-savior is one who is able to link the solar creative forces of divinity with man.

The sigil of the sun-savior from the Watchtower of Fire is:

The letters of SOE illustrate the basic formula of the sun_savior in Enochian Magick. The Lovers of Gemini (S), the Justice of Libra (O) and the Hermit of Virgo (E). This suggests the powerful forces of love and karma manifesting together within a single individual person. The invocation of such a being is an important step in realizing the Great Work

ENOCHIAN HEALING

Within every man and woman is a force which directs and controls the entire course of life. Properly used, it can heal every affliction and ailment to which mankind is heir.

Israel Regardie, The Art of True Healing

To heal diseases it is not indispensable, however desirable, that the psychopathist should be absolutely pure; there are many in Europe and elsewhere who are not. If the healing be done under the impulse of perfect benevolence, unmixed with any latent selfishness, the philanthropist sets up a current which runs like a fine thrill through the 'sixth' condition of matter, and is felt by him whom you summon to your help . .

Master KH., The Mahatma Letters

The influence of mind over the body is so powerful that it has effected miracles in all ages.

H.P. Blavatsky, Isis Unveiled

Enochian Magick has a magical formula that is used primarily for healing sickness and disease. The formula is GONO (pronounced goh-noh). This is an Enochian word that means "faith" The formula is derived from the phrase:

GIGIPA-OLLO G-NAPZS-OLPRT

which means "The living breath of every man is a Sword of Light." The term 'living breath' should be taken in the sense of the aura-everything that is man minus the physical body. The aura itself is often called the Body of Light and it is the starry nature of the aura that prompted the designation "astral body." Healing of the physical body must begin in the aura that surrounds and pervades it. The Gematric value of the parent phrase is 472. The Gematric value of the formula GONO is 118 and $118 \times 4 = 472$.

The letters of this formula express the idea that motion or action (the Chariot of Cancer) is on the left while death (Death in Scorpio) is on the right—a clear choice being available. However, surrounding death on each side is one's karma (Justice in Libra). The formula thus implies that the decision to accept death (the ultimate result of disease) or to restore health (the ultimate result of moving away from death) is purely karmic. The formula for healing in Enochian Magick must therefore take karma and the patient's personal karmic burden into account. This fact is further sustained when we consider that $118 = 59 \times 2$, where 59 is the number for BALTOH which means "righteous" or "just."

The following Magick Square is especially related to healing and can be a powerful talisman when used properly:

This square states the message
OL-A' LAMA A-MAD PA-DO which means, "Restore the path to your god whose name is BE-ING." The word PA in the last line is translated "being" or "that which endures." Notice that the top line of the square contains the word AP which means "the same as before" and is the reverse of PA. The word PA is also found in the first word of the parent phrase, GIGIPA (a variant spelling of GIGIPAH) which means "living breath." When this talisman is used as an embodiment of the desire to return consciousness to its inner source, the divinity within each human being, it can be used as an effective instrument of healing. The magician uses it to heal the mind or soul of the patient. The physical healing will then follow along automatically.

The Gematric value for the Magick Square of OLAP is 318. AIQ BKR reduces 318 to 3, the number for the manifestation of the soul in matter (i.e., the sickness or health of the soul is expressed in the health of the physical body). In addition, the number 318 is equal to the words EOLIS BLIOR which means "to make comfortable."

A final point of interest is that the number 318 is equal to the name of the Ruling Lesser Angel NRLMU and his three co-rulers of the squares RLMU in the subquadrant

Water of Earth (see Figure 10, Appendix B and also the Ritual Outline for a journey to Square L of RLMU in Water of Earth in this manual). The number 472 is equal to the Angel IZXP and his three co-rulers in Fire of Earth (ZXPI, XPIZ and PIZX whose names each add to 472). Also the name of the Archangel NIAOM in Fire of Earth adds to 236 where $236 \times 2 = 472$. As you would expect, all of these Watchtower squares contain strong forces of growth and healing.

ENOCHIAN MAGICK HEALING TECHNIQUES

By turning the fiery penetrating power of the mind inwards upon itself, and exalting the emotional system to a certain pitch, we may become aware of previously unsuspected currents of force. Currents, moreover, almost electric in their interior sensation, healing and integrating in their effect.

It is the willed use of such a force that is capable of bringing health to body and mind.

Israel Regardie, The Art of True Healing

The magical healing techniques that follow require that you first construct, and charge, a talisman of the Magick Square of OLAP. In each case, carefully record the results of your magical operations in your Diary.

A Beginner's Healing Ritual.

This ritual is addressed to self-healing but can be easily changed to address the healing of others.

STEP 1. Consecrate a magick circle using the Pentagram and Hexagram Rituals. Hold your Talisman of OLAP in your right hand and your Pantacle in your left hand. Consider the magical meaning of each STEP 2. Face the Watchtower of Earth with your right arm extended before you and say,

MOR DIAL-HKTGA

(Moh-ar-Dee-ah-leh-Heh-keh-teh-gah)

I call upon you, IKZHII(AL, (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal) Great King of Healing Earth, Instill your Healing Earth within my talisman.

While vibrating this King's name, visualize a black dry cool mist of healing energy entering into your talisman from the Watchtower of Earth.

STEP 3. Face the Watchtower of Fire with your right arm extended before you and say, OIP-TEAA-POKE (Oh-ee-peh-Teh-ah-ah-Peh-doh-keh)

I call upon you, EDLPRNAA, (Eh-del-par-nah-ah) Great King of Healing Fire,

Instill your Healing Fire within my talisman.

While vibrating this King's name, visualize a red dry hot mist of healing energy entering into your talisman from the Watchtower of Fire.

STEP 4. Face the Watchtower of Air with your right arm extended before you and say,

ORO-IBAH-AOZPI
(Oh-roh-Ee-bah-Ah-oh-zod-pee)

I call upon you, BATAIVAH, (Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh)
Great King of Healing Air,

Instill your Healing Air within my talisman.

While vibrating this King's name, visualize a yellow warm moist mist of healing energy entering into your talisman from the Watchtower of Air.

STEP 5. Face the Watchtower of Water with your right arm extended before you and say, MPH-

ARSL-GAIOL
(Em peh-heh-Ar-ess-el-Gah-ee-oh-leh)

I call upon you, RAAGIOSL, (Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel)
Great King of Healing Water,

Instill your Healing Water within my talisman.

While vibrating this King's name, visualize a blue cool moist mist of healing energy entering into your talisman from the Watchtower of Water. Know your talisman to be fully charged.

STEP 6. Face the Watchtower of Earth. Visualize the healing forces of the four Watchtowers leaving your magically charged talisman and slowly covering your entire body. See yourself surrounded by a rose-colored mist of healing energy and say,

GIGIPA-OLLOG-NAPZS-OLPRT

(Gee-gee-pah-Oh leh-geh-Nah-peh-zodessOh-leh-par-teh)

Behold, the living breath
Of every breathing being
Is a Sword of Light.

OLAP-LAMA-AMAD-PADO (Oh-lah-peh-Lahmah-Ah-mah-deh-Pah-doh) I restore the inward Path to my god Whose Secret Name is BEING.

May this mist of shining stealth Bathe my body and hasten health.

STEP 7. Feel the healing effect of this magical force. Visualize yourself to be healthy and whole. Rest in the Psychic energy of this visualization for as long as you can while repeating the two Enochian formulas: GIGIPA-OLLOG-NAPZS-OLPRT and OLAP-LAMA-AMAD-PADO.

STEP 8. Banish the forces that you have invoked by using the Banishing Pentagram and Hexagram Rituals.

Intermediate Healing Ritual. Healing Yourself.

STEP 1. The Consecration. Consecrate a circle using the Pentagram and Hexagram Rituals.

STEP 2. The Names of Power. Hold your Talisman of OLAP in your right hand and your Pantacle in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Earth and slowly vibrate the following Names of Power:

GIGPA-OLLOG-NAPZS-OLPRT (Gee-gee-pah-Oh-leh-loh-geh-Nah-peh-zodess-Oh-leh-par-teh) MOR-DIAL-HKTGA (Moh-ar-Dee-ah-lehHeh-keh-teh-gah)
 1KZHIKAAL (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal)
 LAIDROM (II-ghee-dar-oh em)
 AKZINOR (Ah-keh-zodee-noh rah)
 LZINOPO (el-zodee-noh-poh)
 ALHKTGA (Ah-leh-hek-teh-gah) AHMLLKV (Ah-nnel-el-keh-veh)
 LIIANSA (elee-ee-ah-ness-ah)
 OPMNIR (Oh-pem-nee-ar) LLPIZ (Eel-pee-zod) NIAOM
 (Nee-ah-oh-meh) IAOM (Eeah-oh-meh) AIZXP (Ahee-zodtz-peh) AZXPI (Ah-zod-tz-pee) AXPIZ (Ah-tz-pee-zod) APIZX (Ah-pee-zod-tz) IZXP (Eezodtz-peh) ZXPI (Zod-tz-pee) XPIZ (Tz-pee-zod)
 PIZX (Pee-zod-tz)

STEP 3. The Banishment of Demons. While you slowly vibrate the Names of Power listed in Step 2, see your body as whole, healthy, and complete. Realize the very thought or suggestion of illness/discord to be a Demon and then exorcise it with your Will. After you are deansed, say,

In the name of the Angel IZXP (Ee-zodtz-peh), I banish the Demon AIZ (Ah-ee-zod).

See pain leaving your physical body in the form of a cold black mist.

In the name of the Angel ZXPI (Zod-tz-pee), I banish the Demon AZX (Ah-zod-tz).

See sickness leaving your physical body in the form of a cool dark grey mist.

In the name of the Angel XPIZ (Tz-pee-zod), I banish the Demon AXP (Ahtz-peh).

See discord leaving your physical body in the form of a cool grey mist.

In the name of the Angel PIZX (Pee-zodtz), I banish the Demon API (Ah-pee).

See the last vestiges of discomfort leaving your physical body in the form of a cool smoke-grey mist.

STEP 4. The Visualization. See the healing forces of the Names of Power leave the Magick Square of OLAP and enter your Pantacle. Let these forces radiate outward from your Pantacle through your arm until your entire body is enveloped in a rose-pink hue of healing mist. Feel this healing power like an electric current running through you in a wide circle. Let the mist circle from the talisman to the Pantacle, through you, and back to the talisman (if necessary, bring your arms together until the talisman just touches the Pantacle). Feel this Circle of Force. Bathe in it for as long as you can. Repeat the Holy Name MOR-DIALHKTGA throughout this operation like a sacred mantra.

STEP 5. The Conclusion. Banish all forces from the circle and know yourself to be healed.

Intermediate Healing Ritual. Healing Others at a Distance.

STEP 1. The Consecration. Consecrate a circle using the Pentagram and Hexagram Rituals.

STEP 2. Establishing the Link. Hold your Talisman of OLAF in your right hand and your Pantacle in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Earth. Leave your physical body and see yourself in your Body of Light. Go to the patient and face his/her Body of Light (alternate: establish and hold a very detailed visualization of the patient before you).

STEP 3. The Visualization. While continuously chanting the four words of the Magick Square of OLAP, visualize a Vortex of Power over the patient. This Vortex of Power must extend from beyond the Abyss downward through the Aethyrs into the patient. It consists of a funnel-like swirling force of healing and cleansing energy. The patient must be clearly seen as becoming healthy and whole as a result of this Vortex of Power. Let the Vortex mingle with the subtle bodies of the patient and harmonize their elements. Know that you control this Vortex of Power through your magical Will.

STEP 4. Continue repeating STEP 3 until the patient is dearly seen to be healed.

STEP 5. Return to your physical body. Banish the Vortex of Power and know your patient to be healed.

An Advanced Healing Ritual.

STEP 1. The Consecration. Consecrate a circle. Hold your Talisman of OLAF in your right hand and your Pantacle in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Earth.

STEP 2. The Physical Vibration. Vibrate the four great secret Holy Names and the four words of the Magick Square of OLAP.

STEP 3. The Subtle Vibration. Leave your physical body and repeat STEP 2 in your Body of Light

STEP 4. The Visualization. Clearly visualize the patient (or yourself if this ritual is conducted for your own healing)

Magick before you as whole and healthy.

STEP 5. Return to your physical body. Know that a healing has taken place. Do not banish the healing forces that you have invoked but rather let them remain with you.

An Advanced Healing Meditation.

STEP 1. Meditate on the balance and harmony that exists between the letters in your Magick Square of OLAP.

STEP 2. Meditate on the balance and harmony that exist between the organs and other components of your physical body.

STEP 3. Meditate on your physical body being a Magick Square, an expression in time, space and form of a spiritual idea. Know that this idea is your own Holy Guardian Angel.

STEP 4. Meditate on the magical correspondence between the Magick Square of OLAP and the body. Magically transfer the harmony of OLAP to your body.

ALCHEMY OF THE BODY

Kundalini is called the "Serpentine" or the 'annular' power on account of its spiral-like working or progress in the body of the ascetic developing the power in him-self. It is an electric fiery occult or 'Fohatic' power, the great pristine force, which underlies all organic and inorganic matter.

H.P. Blavatsky, Glossary to The Voice of the Silence

The practice of alchemy has often been associated with the chemical process of turning base metals into gold. How-ever, Enochian Magick recognizes another important branch of alchemy-turning ignorance into wisdom, sickness into health, and mortality into longevity. It is symbolically called the Philosopher's Stone, the stone of the magician, and it works through a magical process of transmutation. It is not just a physical process but mental as well. The 'base metal' is the human body and mind, and the 'pure gold' is the body immunized against sickness and age with mind enlightened to the true nature of things.

Within and around the human body is an aura, a subtle Body of Light with several gradations. The lowest of these is called the etheric body. The etheric body consists of an electromagnetic field. Like any magnet, there is a North pole and a South pole. In the male body the North pole is in the region of the loins while the South pole is in the chest. In the female body the poles are reversed; the North pole is in the chest while the South pole is in the loins. The North pole is a region of egress. The South pole is a region of ingress. The North pole is active and outgoing. The South pole is passive and receptive. As with any magnet, like poles repel while opposite poles attract. The task of the magician is to consciously control this magnetic field and direct its magical forces throughout the physical body which is its expression in flesh. The "stone" is magical fire that radiates through the body and, in time, effects the transmutation. This magical fire (sometimes called psychic heat) is produced by means of combined meditational and breathing exercises that follow.

The magical fire that transmutes the physical body is known in Tantricism as Kundalini and in Tibet as Fohat. It is the natural force of the evolution of man that lies latent in the Body of Light at a point that corresponds to the base of the spine in the physical body. In time, this force will cause man to blossom and grow from the human being to a divine Son of the Sun. Enochian Magick, like Kundalini Yoga, teaches that this evolutionary development can be hastened or -`quickened' by appropriate meditational and magical techniques.

An Intermediate Meditational Exercise.

STEP 1. Sit comfortably. Be relaxed and ready to concentrate.

STEP 2. Visualize your body as containing the four Watchtowers and the Tablet of Union as follows:

See the region of your head as the Watchtower of Air. See the region of your loins as the Watchtower of Fire.

See your left side as the Watchtower of Water. See your right side as the Watchtower of Earth. See your spine as the Tablet of Union.

STEP 3. Place your hands together in your lap and your feet together. Know this to be the joining of the Watchtowers of Earth and Water.

STEP 4. As you slowly inhale, see your breath descending through the Watchtowers to enter into the Watchtower of Fire. As you exhale, see it going up into the Tablet of Union and residing there (let the air leave through the nose, but let the essence of that air enter into the Tablet of Union).

STEP 5. As you breathe, feel the breath of life rushing downward through all four Watchtowers until it enters the Watchtower of Fire. Let this Watchtower stir the air to a great heat. Know this to be psychic heat, the magical fire of the magician. Cause this magical fire to enter into the Tablet of Union and reside there.

STEP 6. Let the magical fire radiate outward from the Tablet of Union into all regions of the universe (let it flow from your spine into all parts of your body thereby transmuting it).

An Advanced Variation.

Advanced students should practice the above exercise while also performing the following:

1. Visualize the Enochian letter T (or Z) in the Watchtower of Fire. See it hot and glowing with the color of red.
2. Visualize the Enochian letter A in the Watchtower of Air. See it as cool and white.
3. During the breathing exercises, let the hot T (or Z) warm and melt the white A. See it dripping downward onto the Watchtowers and quickening them.
4. Each drop of the melting A will cause magical fire to flare up throughout the Watchtowers and the Tablet of Union.

Let it be so.

A Beginner's Meditation.

1. Stand up straight, hands at your sides and feet together.
2. Visualize the lines of force of the etheric body. See it as going from the top of your head downward along the outside of your body and then flowing back into your body from your feet and upward through the center of your body to return to your head. It should be egg-shaped on the outside and column-shaped on the inside of your body.

3. Maintain this visualization until you can feel the current flowing through your body. It should have a masculine feel to it.

4. Let the direction of the current be reversed. Maintain the flow and notice the distinct feminine feeling to this current.

5. Continue oscillating between the two polarized currents and let them filter throughout your body for as long as you can.

ENOCHIAN TAROT

Then there are the Elemental Tablets of Sir Edward Kelly and Dr. John Dee. From these you can extract a square to perform almost any conceivable operation, if you understand the virtue of the various symbols which they manifest. They are actually an expansion of the Tarot.

Aleister Crowley, Magick Without Tears

The thirty Aethyrs and the Qabalistic Tree of Life are both maps of the same subtle regions. Although they vary in details, they constitute a structuring of the subtle planes and subplanes that exist between spirit and matter. Because the Tree of Life and the Aethyrs have such striking correspondences, it is not surprising that the Aethyrs can also be used in a divinatory role. Enochian Tarot is therefore a valid and viable divinatory technique and can be used in the same way as the standard Tarot.

The thirty Aethyrs can be used to make a deck of thirty cards, one for each Aethyr: an Enochian Tarot. As a deck of cards, it is similar to the major arcana of the standard Tarot and can be used for either divination or meditation.

One of the challenges of Enochian Magick is to enter each of the Aethyrs and learn the lessons of life directly. Initiation, in the true sense, is a direct confrontation with reality or fact. Each of the thirty Aethyrs offers an initiation into one of the mysteries of life. Meditation on a specific card is an excellent technique for entering that region.

The cards of Enochian Tarot will have the following meanings:

THE LAYOUT. The thirteen-card layout is shown in Figure 9. This can provide a useful Tarot layout using the 30-card deck. The number 13 gematrically corresponds to the word SA meaning "within" or inner and $13 \times 6 = 78$ where 78 is the number of cards in a traditional Tarot deck. When using this layout, each position is as follows:

1. The present atmosphere of the questioner.
2. Masculine influences (father, son, husband, brother, friend, etc.)
3. Feminine influences (mother, daughter, wife, sister, friend, etc.)
4. Harmonious aspects-the best that can be hoped for under the present circumstances.
5. Discordant aspects-the worst that can be expected under the present circumstances.
6. Creative aspects-creative potential of the questioner at present.
7. Emotional aspects-emotional atmosphere of the questioner at present.
8. Intellectual aspects-conscious/mental atmosphere of the questioner at present.
9. Hidden/repressed aspects-Influences present but not consciously known to the questioner at present.
10. The likely outcome of the question under the present circumstances.
11. General past influences and tendencies.
12. General present influences and tendencies.
13. General future influences and tendencies.

NOTE. As with any form of divination, the magician's psychic ability to "see" the applicable meanings of the cards in context with the overall layout is the key to a reliable reading. For further information on Enochian Tarot see the forthcoming Enochian Tarot from Llewellyn.

TELESMATIC FIGURES

Know, then, that if thou essay in the imagination to form an astral image from the Names, the first letter shall be the head of the Figure or Form, and the final letters shall be its feet. The other letters shall be, and represent in their order, its body and members.

The Golden Dawn's Telesmatic Figures

The Golden Dawn method of creating Telesmatic Figures of deities can also be used in Enochian Magick. Each letter of the deity's name corresponds to a part of that deity's form. The first letter corresponds to the head. The last to the feet. The letters in between correspond to the body in order from the head to the feet. The exact correspondence depends on the number of letters in the name.

To build up a Telesmatic Image, you can either use your magical imagination to construct it in the etheric or astral planes, or you can draw it on paper first, one part at a time. The Golden Dawn divided these images into four types, depending on the world (i.e., Atziluth, Briah, Yetzirah, or Assiah). In general, Kings, Seniors, and Governors should be considered archetypal and therefore, Telesmatic Figures cannot apply. Archangels and Kerubic Angels are creative and original. Telesmatic Figures only apply to these in a restricted sense. For example, they should be shadowy and barely discernible. The Greater and Lesser Angels of the Watchtowers, however, are formative. Telesmatic Figures apply quite well to these deities (as well as Demons). To build an image, use the information contained in Table IX. The sex of the figure depends on the predominance of the masculine or feminine letters in the name. Actually each letter partakes of both sexes, but for purposes of forming these images, Table IX gives the predominate sex.

ENOCHIAN RITUALS

Magick ceremonies proper are merely organized and concentrated attempts to impose our Will on certain parts of the Cosmos.

Aleister Crowley, The Commentaries of AL

The thirteen following rituals that end this manual synthesize all of the major elements of Enochian Magick. All of the talismans, weapons and formulas of Enochian Magick presented in this manual are used in these rituals. Successful execution will bestow a broad range of magical power and knowledge. The degree of magical power obtained will be proportional to the degree of success.

Each of these rituals are designed to be conducted by a single magician. Each combines meditations, visualizations, actions, and speeches so that all of your various components (i.e., body, speech and mind) will be engaged together in a dynamic simulation of actual Spirit Vision experiences in the Aethyrs. It will avail nothing to simply go through the physical motions and speeches. Your mind is the golden key which can open up the gates to the Aethyrs. To do this, you must be able to employ your Magical Imagination. Conduct these rituals alone. Silence your rational and logical mind for a time. Take your time. You will not be able to concentrate properly if you are worried about time. Slowly and carefully begin each ritual with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram as given earlier in this manual. This will not only prepare your circle, but (and much more to the point) will prepare your mind and body for the coming ritual.

In order to execute these rituals effectively some degree of magical experience is necessary. Practice the exercises given earlier for subtle body development and Mahamudra prior to conducting these rituals. Study each ritual carefully before executing it. If you have poor results, go back and practice the exercises for magical development. Do not expect to have complete success on the first try. This is the work of many lifetimes and is not something to be rushed.

In each case you will need to acquire and charge your own talismans. The talismans can be as elegant or as simple as you feel comfortable with. To charge a talisman, hold it in your hands and concentrate on the meaning/idea behind it. Will the force/energy behind the idea to flow through your mind into your body and through it into the talisman like a psychic current. A talisman is the physical embodiment of the idea/entity that it represents. In the rituals, your mind and your body must cooperate together in unison. Your body is a crystalization into matter of your mind. So your talisman is a crystalization in matter of the psychic energy/ force behind it. As your mind concentrates/focuses on the specific ideas of the ritual, your hands will hold the physical manifestation of that idea. In this way your entire being will enter the ritual and its effectiveness will be much more than if your mind or your body were participating alone.

RITUAL OF TEX

This ritual is intended for beginners in Enochian Magid. It simulates a journey in the Spirit Vision to the lowest Aethyr, TEX (Teh-etz).

PART 1. Preparation. Wear your white robe. Consecrate a circle. Hold your Sword in your right hand. Leave your physical body and enter your Body of Light (imagine yourself to be in your subtle body rather than your physical body).

PART 2. Face the North and raise your Sword before you. Trace the sigil of TAOAGLA:

See this sigil blazing with a vivid blue color and then say,

NOR-M OLAP-SA-LUKAL

(Noh-rah-Moh-lah-peh-Sah-Lu-kah-leh) Oh mighty TAOAGLA, (Tah-oh-ah-geh-lah) Whose Word is AMBZ: (Ah-meh-beh-zod) Come forth and take away my karma.

LAMA BABALON (Lah-mah Bah-bah-loh-en)

While vibrating the name TAOAGLA, know your karmic burdens to be given over to this Governor of TEX. Meditate for a few moments on the significance of your past karma being expressed in the dark northern regions of TEX.

PART 3. Face the East and raise your Sword before you. Trace the sigh of GEMNIMB:

See this sigh blazing with a vivid blue color and then say,

IAIADIA-SA-RAAS

(Ee-ah-ee-ah-dee-ah-Sah-Rah-ah-seh)

Oh mighty GEMNIMB, (Geh-em-nee-em-beh) Whose Word is ABFMA: (Ah-beh-feh-mah) Come forth and take away my desire. LAMA BABALON
(Lah-mah Bah-bah-loh-en)

While vibrating the name GEMNIMB, know your selfish desires to be given over to this Governor of TEX. Meditate for a few moments on the significance of your personal desires being expressed in the airy eastern regions of TEX.

PART 4. Face the South and raise your Sword before you. Trace the sigil of ADUORPT:

See this sigh blazing with a vivid blue color and then say,

KIKLE-ATH-BABAGE

(Ke e-keh-leh-Ah-teh-heh-Bah-bah-geh)

Oh mighty ADUORPT, (Ah-du-oh-rah-peh-teh) Whose Word is Silence;

Come forth and take away my ignorance. LAMA
BABALON (Lah-mah Bah-bah-loh-en)

While vibrating the name ADUORPT, know your restless and ever-chattering brain/mind to be given over to this Governor of TEX. Meditate for a few moments on the significance of your thoughts being expressed in the fiery southern regions of TEX.

PART 5. Face the West and raise your Sword before you. Trace the sigil of DOZIAAL:

See this sigil blazing with a vivid blue color and then say,

MIKA-OMP-SA-SOBOLN

(Mee-kah-Oh-meh-peh-Sah-Soh-boh-leh-neh) Oh mighty DOZIAAL; (Doh-zodee-ah-ah-leh) Whose word is AN; (Ah-neh)

Come forth and take away my limitations. BALT
(Bah-leh-teh)

ZA-TOL (Zodah-Toh-leh)

LAMA BABALON (Lah-mah Bah-bah-loh-en)

While vibrating the name DOZIAAL, know all of your self-imposed restrictions to be given over to this Governor of TEX. Meditate for a few moments on the significance of your limitations being expressed in the waters of the western regions of TEX.

PART 6. Place your Sword before you on the Altar. With empty hands outstretched before you, say,

By the power of BALTOH spoken seven times, I have gained mastery over TEX.

By the power of the Word of TAOAGLA I rise above the Forces of Karma.

By the power of the Word of GEMNIMB, I rise above the Forces of Desire. By the power of the Word of ADUORP, I rise above the Forces of Ignorance. By the power of the Word of DOZIAAL, I rise above the Forces of Restriction. I rise up. I rise up

Through the four radiant regions of TEX. I retain full consciousness throughout. May I never forget the Kingdoms of TEX And ever hold the Wisdom of the Heavens. PAPNORLONDOH-TEX

(Pah-peh-noh-ar-Loh-en-doh heh-Teh-etz)

ANANAEL-PIRIPSOL

(Ah-nah-nah-el-Pee-ree-peh-soh leh)

TEX! TEX! TEX! TEX!

May the four Fountains of Heaven Pour forth the Seven to form Eleven.

PART 7. Imagine yourself to be without karma (i.e., without guilt or regret), without selfish desires of any kind, in full consciousness and without limiting yourself in any way. Remain in this state for as long as you can.

PART 8. Return to your physical body. Banish the forces around you and record the results in your Diary.

ENOCHIAN RITUAL OF IAO

This ritual is for magicians at all levels of Enochian Magick. It employs the formula of IAO. Perform it to transmute your karmic debts by letting them become projected from you and then dispelled. The ritual first invokes a typical feminine current and then uses the masculine current of MAZ for balance and completeness.

PART I. The Preparation. Charge your Talismans for IAO, ZTZTZT, NIAKOD and the Magick Square of LAHALASA. Stand wearing your white robe. Place your Cup and Sword (or Dagger) on your Altar. Hold your Wand in your right hand. Consecrate a circle with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram. Replace the Wand with either a Sword or Dagger.

PART 2. The Cross. Raise your weapon upward before you and say,

IA.DNAH (Ee-ah-deh-nah-heh)

Lower your weapon toward the ground tracing a white vertical line and say,

ATH (Ah-teh-heh)

Trace a white horizontal line from left to right intersecting the horizontal line at its center and forming a white shining cross and say,

OLORA (Oh-loh-rah)

See this white cross glimmering clearly before you.

PART 3. Rising through the Aethyrs. Replace your Sword or Dagger with the Talisman of NIAKOD. Hold it before you and say,

By the prevailing power of NIAKOD, (Nee-ah-kohdeh) In the endless emptiness of ZAX; (Zod-ahtz) I pass safely beyond the Dark Realm

00Of the mighty KHORONZON

(Keh hoh-roh-en-zodoh-en)

And come unto mystical MAZ, (Mah-zod) Where the Six is in the Nine.

May the Unveiler of All Mysteries return And guide me now to the Temple of the Urn.

As you speak these words, imagine yourself slowly rising above the Abyss into the 6th Aethyr, MAZ. Let yourself rise high above the white cross.

PART 4. The Urn. With your magical senses, see the silvery Urn of MAZ floating unsuspended before you. Visualize the Urn clearly. Let it be made of fixed mercury. Hold your Cup toward the mystic Urn and say,

Behold, the Urn of Guilt and Grace At the very center of Infinite Space.

PART 5. The Cloud. Let a dark cloud form above the Urn/ Create this cloud using all of your past Karma. Let your guilts and your failures and your wrongs-done-to-others leave your aura and lodge in this cloud. Let the dark cloud be seeped full with your Karma. Continue until your body is completely empty even as your Cup is empty. With the power of your Magical Will, let the loud which is your karma, slowly descend into the Urn.

PART 6. The Consumption of Karma. Hold the Talisman of IAO before you in your right hand and hold your Talisman of LAHALASA in your left hand and say,

I, A, O (Ee Ah Oh) IADNAH
ATH OLORA

(Ee-ah-deh-nah-heh Ah-teh-heh Oh-loh-rah) Behold, the highest works of man.

IADNAHMAD AR OLLAR (Ee-ah-deh-nahheh-mahdeh Ah-rah

Oh-leh-lar-rah

Behold, the god of your god Is the Sun of Man.

IAD AAI OIAD

(Ee-ah-deh Ah-ah-ee Oh-ee-ah-deh)

And behold, the god within you Is a just god.

I,A,O

LAHALASA (Lah-hah-lah-sah)

May the penetrating power of the four Great Crosses Consume my Karma-Cloud. LAHA-ALAH-SALA-
ASAL

(Lah-hah-Ah-lah-heh-Sah-lah-Ah-sah-Ieh)

May it be so now and forever.

LAHALASA (Lah-hah-lah-sah)

Let the power of these words consume the cloud of your past Karma. Let the cloud within the Urn be burned utterly until only a little pile of dust remains in the Urn. See this dearly.

PART 7. The Pardon. Hold the Talisman of ZTZTZT in your right hand and your Cup in your left hand and say,

By the pardoning power of IAO (Ee-ah-oh) And of ZTZTZT (Zod-teh-zod-teh-zod-teh) KNILA SAH TALHO,

(Keh-nee-lah Sah-heh Tah-leh-hoh) I behold
the Blood in.the Cup.

And it is the Life of the Saints.

May my cup now fill

With Love under Will.

Behold, the Urn that holds my dust.

Behold, the Cup that holds my trust.

IA-IAL-A-ZOKH

(Ee-ah-Ee-ah-Ieh-Ah-Z odoh-keh-heh)

I consume my past with truth. ZTZTZT
(Zod-teh-zod-teh-zod-teh)

PART 8. The Return. With your Sword or Dagger trace the sigil of ZTZTZT in blazing white before you and let this sigil banish the Urn. Let yourself return below the Abyss.

PART 9. The Banishment. With your Wand, banish forces (intelligent and otherwise) that you have attracted during this operation with the Banishing rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

ENOCHIAN RITUAL OF THE PRIESTESS OF THE SILVER STAR

This ritual is designed for the intermediate and experienced magician. It simulates the initiatory processes that are encountered in the 19th Aethyr, POP. If properly executed, it will invoke a strong feminine current characteristic of that encountered in POP.

PART 1. The Preparation. Wear your white robe. Charge your Talismans for IAO, QAA and TOOG. Also make and charge Talismans for the Magick Squares of ROR and GRAA. Place your Cup and Pantacle on your Altar. Hold your Wand in your right hand and consecrate a circle with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

PART 2. The Invocation. Raise the Talisman of IAO in your left hand, your Cup in your right hand and say,

IAO, ELO-TALHO

(Ee-ah-oh, El-oh-Tah-leh-hoh)

The highest work is man

IAO, ELZAP TALHO

(Ee-ah-oh, El-zodaah-peh Tah-leh-hoh)

I worship in the body the things of the body. I worship in the mind the things of the mind. I worship in the spirit the things of the spirit. IAO, (Ee-ah-oh)

TALHO (Tah-leh-hoh)

PART 3. The Tree. Enter your Body of Light. Let it be empty and cause it to pass through the four Watchtowers of Earth, Water, Air, and Fire, one at a time. Imagine a golden cross before you. As you watch, let it become a little narrow door. Slowly enter through this door. See yourself standing before a wide hill upon which stands an old and gnarled Tree. Let the atmosphere around you be charged with the desire for both life and death mingled together as if a great battle had recently been fought beneath the tree.

PART 4. Life. Know the Tree to be the Tree of Life. Hold your Talisman of QAA in your left hand and your Talisman of ROR in your right hand. Face the Tree and say,

OM-QUASAH-ATH-AR

(Oh-meh-Que-ah -sah-hee-Ah-teh-heh-Ah-rah) I know delight in the works of the sun. OMA-DAMPLOZ-OLPRT

(Oh-mah-Dah-meh-peh-loh-rod-Oh-leh-par-teh)

I know the Shades of Light.

At the end of all destruction lies creation For the end of death is the birth of life.

ROR-ODO-ROR

(Roh ar-Oh-doh-Roh-ar)

TOANT TOTO-QAA-KAL

(Toh-ah-en-teh Tohtoh-Qah-ah-Kah-leh) The Sun is the Opener;
The Sun is Love,
The Cycles of the Sun
Are creation and solidification.

Hold your Wand before you and say,

KAB-HOM (Kah-beh-hoh-meh) Behold,
the Rod of Life.

Feel the magical life that lies embodied in your Wand.

PART 5. Death.Behind the Tree lies a vast Desert. Face this endless and lifeless Desert. Hold the Talismans of TOOG and GRAA in your hands and say,

May the three governors, TORZOXI, (Toh-razodoh-tree) ABRAIOND, (Ahbar-ahee-oh-en deh)

OMAGRAP, (Oh mah-gar-ah-peh)

Initiate me into the Mystery of POP (Poh-peh) TAB GES-ORS-OXEX-GRAA

(Tah-beh-geh-seh-Oh-ar-seh-Ohtz-etz-Geh-rah-ah)

At the end of all creation lies destruction

For the end of life is the birth of death. GRAA-RA-OR-A-ORS-AR-SA-A

(G eh-rah-ah-Rah-Oh-ar-Ah-Oh-ar-seh-Ah-raSah-Ah)

Behold the moon, the Dark Sun,

And behold, I know the Darkness

That lies behind the Sun.

Hold your Pantacle before you and say,

KA-KAKOM BABALON

(Kah-Kah-koh-meh Bah-bah-Ioh-en) Behold, the Invigoration of BABALON (Bah-bah-loh-en).

I know the strife

That comprises life.

DRJX-L-IOU DAX

(Deh-ree-etz-El-Ee-oh-ue-Dahtz) The Supreme Soul lies in the loins. I know the fire

That comprises desire.

PART 6. Isis. Visualize a gigantic figure of the goddess Isis, young and beautiful before you. See her standing with one bare foot on the cool moist grass near the Tree and the other in the hot dry sand of the Desert. Let her long hair be flowing in the wind. Let her be radiating love and patient acceptance.

PART 7. TheAddress. Stand facing Isis (Asi) with your Wand in your right hand and your Cup in your left hand and say,

Asi, I have seen your Light
Asi, I have seen your Darkness.
You are the Giver of Life
And the Giver of Death,
Isis, the ruler of POP (Poh-peh)
Isis, DAZIS-POP (Dah-zodee-seh-Poh-peh) You are the Angel of the Moon. You are the Love of the Unknown.
You are the blind ache in the heart of man ISIS, DAZIS-POP (Dah-zodee-seh-Poh-peh) You are the Priestess of the Silver Star, The Priestess of the Silver Star.
THIL-QUASAH (Tehhee-leh-Que-ah-sah-hee)
You are Isis, the infinite Source of Delight.

PART 8. Closing. Know her to be a part of your Self. Remain in her presence for as long as possible and then return to your physical body. Use your Wand to execute the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

ENOCHIAN PYRAMID RITUAL

This ritual is designed for the experienced magician. Beginners are advised to carefully study the ritual, its symbolic meanings and gematric correspondences before practicing it. It simulates the initiatory processes that are encountered in the 18th Aethyr, ZEN, and will invoke the strong masculine current that pervades the Vault of Zen. All Enochian names and phrases must be vibrated properly during the execution of this ritual.

PART 1. Preparation. Wear your black robe. Charge your Talismans for MZKZB, VOVIN, IVITDT, VRELP, ZTZTZT and ILIATAL Place your Cup, Pantacle, Sword and Dagger on the Altar before you. Also place there a Talisman for each of the four Watchtowers that you charged yourself. Lastly, charge a Talisman of the Magick Square of AMMA. Hold your Wand in your right hand and consecrate a circle with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

PART 2. Face the Watchtower of Earth in the North with the Talisman of MZKZB in your left hand and your Sword in your right hand. With your Sword, trace the sigil of MZKZB in black before you and say,

MZKZB (Em-zod-keh-zod-beh)

Behold, the iniquities of the past
Are now the joys of Righteousness.
TOANTAH-VAOAN-IAL-TOTO

(Toh-ah-neh-fah-heh-Vah-oh-ah-neh-Ee-ah-leh-Toh-toh)

The Lust of Truth

That consumes the cycles,
Is the Power of MZKZB.

PART 3. Still facing North, visualize an enormous stone Pyramid, such as that of Cheops, before you. Stand facing the only opening into it. Let this opening be a black square leading downward into the bowels of the Pyramid. Hold the Talisman of the Watchtower of Earth in your left hand and your Pantacle in your right hand and say,

IKZHIKAL, (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal) Great
King of Earth,

Come, accept my offering. O-

KAOSGO NANTA

(Oh-Kah-oh-seh-goh Nah-en-tah)

Earth to Earth,

NAMBAOMI (Nah-bah-oh-ranee) ZAFASAI

(Zodah-fah-sahee) VALPAMB (Val-pah-mehbeh) You Governors of ZEN, (Zod-en)

Come, accept my body.

PATRALX, (Pah-teh-rah-letz) Stone of Stone.

PATRALX. (Pah-teh-rah-letz)

PART 4. Let your physical body be given unto the King of Earth. Enter your Body of Light and enter into the Pyramid through the opening. Let your Body of Light descend down the sloping passage until you enter a chamber deep beneath the Pyramid. On the west side of this chamber is a deep pool of water. Face toward the pool. Hold the Talisman of the Watchtower of Water in your left hand and your Cup in your right hand and say,

RAAGIOSL, (Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel) Great King of Water,

Come, accept my offering.

ZJN-A HKOMA

(Zodee-en-Ah-Heh-koh-mah) Water to Water.

Here in the Eight Outer Chambers of ZEN, Come, accept my body.

ZUMVI-PARM TALHO-A (Zodue-em-vee-Pah-rameh Tah-lehhoh-ah) May my Cup overflow. Hold the Talisman of VRELP before the pool and say,

By the power of VRELP (Vah-ra-el-peh) I give you this body

A n d p a s s t h r o u g h Z I N - L A I A D , (Zodee-en-Lah-ee-ah-deh)

I now pass through
The Waters of the Secrets of Truth.

PART 5. Let your astral body be given unto the King of Water.
Assume your mental body and pass over the pool. Let your mental body rise up a narrow shaft cut through the rock of the Pyramid. Let it rise to a bright spacious room. Let the east wall show a small air shaft cut through to the out-side of the Pyramid.
Face the air shaft. Hold the Talisman of the Watchtower of Air in your left hand and your Dagger in your right hand and say,

BATAIVAH, (Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh) Great King of Air,
Come, accept my offering.
GIGIPA-GA EXARP,
(Gee-gee-pah-Gah Etz-ar-peh)

Air to Air.

Here in the Ten Inner Chambers of ZEN, Come,
accept my body.

MIKALZO-ZrLDAR (Mee-kah-Ieh-zodohZodee-lehdar) Mine is the power to fly.

Hold up the Talisman of VOVIN before the air shaft and say,

VOVIN TORZU-ANGELARD

(Voh-vee-neh Toh-ra-zodue-Ah-neh-gel-ar-deh) The Dragon rises Up above his thoughts. I give you this body And pass through SALMAN-LUKIFTIAS, (Sah-leh-mah-neh-Luekee-feh-tee-ah-seh) I now pass through
The House of Brightness.

PART 6. Let your mental body be given unto the King of Air. Assume your spiritual body and pass upward through a narrow shaft in the ceiling. Rise up until you arrive at a fiery red chamber at the geometric center of the Pyramid. Let there be a stone sarcophagus along the south wall. Let the sarcophagus be lidless and let it contain the Eternal Flame. Face the flame in the sarcophagus. Hold the Talisman of the Watchtower of Fire in your left hand and your Wand in your right hand and say,

EDLPRNAA, (Eh-del-par-nah-ah)
Great King of Fire,
Come, accept my offering. O-PRGE
BITOM,
(Oh-Par-geh Bee-toh-meh)
Fire to fire.
Here within the Five-Walled Parapet
Of the Vault of ZEN, Come, accept my body. IAL-A MALPRG
OBZA,

(Ee-ah-leh-Ah Mah-leh-par-geh Oh-beh-zodah) May I be consumed
By the fiery Flames of Duality.

Hold the Talisman of 1 VITDT before the Eternal Flame

and say,

IVITDT, LIALPRT MA-OF-FAS, (Ee-vee-tehdeh-teh, Lee-ah-Ieh-par-teh Mah-Ohfeh-Fah-seh)

The First Flame

Is not to be measured;

A cleansing fire to be treasured.

I give you this body

And pass through

P O A M A L - P R G E - Z E N (P o h - a h - m a h - Ieh-Paz-geh-Zod-en) I now pass through

The Palace of Sacrificial Fire.

PART 7. Let your spiritual body be given unto the King of Fire. Know yourself to be formless, bodiless consciousness. Rise straight up through the dark stones of the ceiling. Let this rising open into a small silent chamber at the heart of the Pyramid. Let this chamber be bare with no entrances or exits. Hold the Talisman of ZTZTZT in your left hand and the Talisman of ILIATAI in your right hand and say,

By the power of ZTZTZT

(Zod-teh-zod-teh-zod-teh)

And by the power of ILIATAI

(Ee-lee-ah-tah-ee)

Behold, the Seven-Sided Vault of ZEN.

My body lies in the Watchtower of Earth.

My emotions lie in the Watchtower of Water.

My thoughts lie in the Watchtower of Air. My life lies in the Watchtower of Fire. Thus am I truly

The Son of the Universe.

Thus I am truly

The Father of the Universe. B y

the strength of ILIATAI (Ee-lee-ah-tah-ee) I rise to the Father.
By the virtue of ZTZTZT (Zod-teh-zod-teh-zod-teh) I descend to the Son.

PART 8. Hold the Talisman of AMMA before you and say, Behold, the Emptiness of Form Is the Form of Emptiness. ZEN-IF-ZEN
(Zod-en-Ee-peh-Zod-en)
Behold, the sacrifice that is not a sacrifice. OTHIL-A-LUSDI TELOKH,
(Oh-teh-hee-Ieh-Ah-Lue-seh-dee Teh-loh-keh-heh) Behold, I set my feet on death. In Emptiness it is written: Cursed is Form.
In Form it is written:
Cursed is Emptiness. ZEN-I-T-
ZEN,
(Zod-en-Ee-Teh-Zod-en)
Behold, the sacrifice that is indeed a sacrifice.
IPSI-A HOM TELOKH,
(Ee-peh-see-Ah Hoh-meh Teh-loh-keh-heh)
Behold, I unite life and death together.

PART 9. Attain Samadhi and maintain it for as long as possible (let it seem like three days and three nights).

PART 10. Descend through the Pyramid and in turn resume each of your bodies held in protective care by the Kings of the Watchtowers.

PART 11. Cleanse the area with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

ENOCHIAN DRAGON RITUAL

This ritual is for those Enochian Magicians who seek the title of Magical Dragon. It is based entirely on the formula of VOVIN. When executing this ritual, be sure to vibrate each Enochian word properly.

PART 1. The preparation. Wear your black robe. Charge your talismans for the formulas of VOVIN, VRELP, TOOG, NIAKOD, ILIATAI and ZTZTZT. Place these and your weapons on your Altar together with a talisman for each of the four Magick Squares of the Watchtowers and a Talisman of the Magick Square of BABALON. Hold your Wand in your right hand and consecrate a circle with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

PART 2. Earth. Face the Watchtower of Earth in the North with your Pantacle in your right hand and your Talisman of NANTA in your left hand. Fix your mind on the Watchtower of Earth and say, NANTA-A-NOAN-NONKP-TA-KAL-AN-PLA (Nah-en-tat-Ah-Noh-ah-neh-Noh-.en-keh-peh-Tah-Kah-leh-Ah-neh-Peh-lah)

Behold, Earth:

The place wherein my thoughts and emotions Are become solidified.

Trace a black Invoicing Pentagram and Hexagram of Earth.

PART 3. Water. Face the Watchtower of Water in the West with you Cup in your right hand and your Talisman of HKOMA in your left hand. Fix your mind on the Watchtower of Water and say, HKOMA-KNILA-O-IODI-M L-DO-T-AAI-TA (Heh-koh-mah-Keh-nee-lah-Oh-Ee-oh-dee-Em-El-Doh-Teh-Ah-ah-ee-Tat)

Behold, Water:

Where my Original Name

Is the very blood that flows within me.

Trace a blue Invoking Pentagram and Hexagram of Water.

PART 4. Air. Face the Watchtower of Air in the East with your Dagger in your right hand and your Talisman of EXARP in your left hand. Fix your mind on the Watchtower of Air

and say,

EXARP-XFA-IO-AAI-TI-RIT-OL-POILP (Etz-ar-pet-Etz-efah-Ee-oh-Ah-ah-ee-Tee-Ree-teh-Oh-let-Poh-ee-let-pet)

Behold, Air:

Where that which is within

Is turned outward with mercy And with discrimination.

Trace a yellow Invoking Pentagram and Hexagram of Air.

PART 5. Fire. Face the Watchtower of Fire in the South with your Wand in your right hand and your Talisman of BITOM in your left hand. Fix your mind on the Watchtower of Fire

and say,

BITOM-IA IAL-T-IADP-OAD-PR-MLPRG (Bee-tot-metEe-ah-Eeah-leh-Teh-Ee-ah-deh-peh Oh-ah-dehPar-Em-el-par-get)

Behold, Fire:

Where fiery flames intertwine with godhead And all is consumed with Truth.

Trace a red Invoking Pentagram and Hexagram of Fire.

PART 6. Mobility. Hold the Talisman of TOOG before you. Focus your mind on the 24th Aethyr and say,

By the power of TOOG (Toh-oh-geh) I enter the Aire of NIA (Nee-ah). I ride the Chariot of the Gods,

Mobility.

Part 7. Detachment. Hold the Talisman of VRELP before you.
Focus your mind on the 14th Aethyr and say,

By the power of VRELP (Var-el.-peh) I enter the Aire of VTA (Veh-tah). I rest in the City of the Pyramids, And pass on with Detachment.

PART 8. Knowledge. Hold the Talisman of NIAKOD before you.
Focus your mind on the 10th Aethyr and say,

By the power of NIAKOD (Nee-ah-koh-deh) I enter the Aire of ZAX (Zod-ahtz)
I gaze into the face Of the mighty KHORONZON, (Keh-hohroh-en-zod-oh-en)
And pass on with Knowledge.

PART 9. Understanding. Hold the Talisman of ILIATAI before you.
Focus your mind on the 8th Aethyr and say,

By the power of ILIATAI (Ee-lee-ah-tah-ee) I enter the Aire of ZID (Zodee-deh).
I commune with my own Holy Guardian Angel, And pass on with Understanding.

PART 10. Compassion. Hold the Talisman of ZTZTZT before you.
Focus your mind on the 7th Aethyr and say,

By the power of ZTZTZT (Zod teh-zod-teh-zod-teh) I enter the Aire of DEO (Deh-oh). I embrace the body of BABALON (Bahbah-loh-en) And pass on with Compassion.

PART 11. The Goddess. Hold the Talisman of BABALON before you. Focus your mind on the goddess BABALON as a reflex of NUIT
and say,

BABALON (Bah-bah-loh-en)

Daughter of Infinite Space,

ADAN-ODO-BAHA-NOQ

(Ah-dah-neh Oh-doh-Bah-hah-Noh-qeh) I give obeisance to your receptive nature And call upon you as your faithful servant. ANANAEL-LONSA-MI (Ahnah-nah el-Lohen-sah-Mee)

You are the Secret Wisdom, the power Inherent in all beings. ODO-EMNA-NOQ-If LAD (Oh-doh-Em-nah-Noh-qeh-El-Ee-ahdeh)

I am opened up unto you, O Goddess. I am your favored servant.

PART 12. The Dragon. Hold the Talisman of VOVIN before you.
Focus your mind on the Watchtowers and Aethyrs as a totality and say,

VPAAH-OXI-VABZIR NISAN-IN (Veh-pah-ah-heh-Oh-tzee- Vah-beh-zodee-ar-Nee-ee-sah-neh-Ee-neh)

Behold, the nughty wings of the eagle

Carry me through the Void.

I roam the Watchtowers and Aethyrs. INSI-A-

LAMA-VOVIN-AX-L -IAL-PRT

(Ee-neh-see-Ah-Lah-mah-Voh-vee-neh-Ahtz-El-Ee-ah-leh-Par-teh)

I tread the Path of the Dragon

Whose name is the First Flame.

VOVIN (Voh-vee-neh)

BABALON-L-SONF-AAI (Bah-bah-loh-en-II-Sohne-feh-Ah ah-ee) VOVIN (Voh-vee-neh)

See yourself as a Magical Dragon and hold that concept for a time.

PART 13. The Banishing. Cleanse the area with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

ENOCHIAN RITUAL OF VRELP

This ritual is for those Enochian Magicians who seek to safely enter the City of the Pyramids. It is based entirely on the formula of VRELP. It should be conducted in darkness, and preferably at night.

PART 1. Preparation. Wear your black robe. Charge your talismans for the formulas of VRELP, KAL and IVITDT. Also charge your talismans for the Magick Squares of NEMO, AMMA and ROR. Place these and your Sword on your Altar. Hold your Wand in your right hand and consecrate a circle with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

PART 2. Vibrate the name TEDOAND (Teh-doh-ah-ende) while tracing his sigil with your Wand:

Vibrate the name VIVIPOS (Vee-vee-poh-seh) while tracing her sigil with your Wand:

Vibrate the name VOANAMB (Voh-ah-nah-em-beh) while tracing his sigil with your Wand:

See these three sigils glowing red before you and say the following (place your own Magical Name in the blanks):

TEDOAND (Teh-doh-ah-en-deh) Demander of Obediance, Come,

And remove my Pride, For I am _____
VIVIPOS (Vee-vee-poh-seh)

Maker of Cycles,

Come,

And remove my Karma,

For I am _____

VOANAMB (Voh-ah-nah-em-beh)

Seer of Relativity,

Come,

And remove my Ignorance,

For I am _____

Let these commands be carried out. See pride, karma and ignorance as aspects of your own ego and rise above them by assuming your Magical Name and Magical Personality.

PART 3. Hold the Talisman of ROR in your right hand and the Talisman of AMMA in your left hand and say,

Behold, I have combined

Each square of AMMA (Ah-meh-mah)

With the three letters of ROR (Roh-ar)

And have thus seen the Nineteen Ways.

I have given my sin unto BAG (Bah-geh) -

And my Pride unto VTI (Veh-tee) And my karmic Laboring unto TOR (Toh-ra). I am ready to enter VTA (Veh-tah), And to join the spirit of LIL (Lee-leh) With the tension of IKH (Ee-kehheh).

In my right hand,

The Light of the Sun

In my left hand,

The Darkness of the Abyss.

Within me the Sun at Mid-day

And the Sun at Mid-night

Are one Sun.

I am ready to enter the domain

Of the Great One
Of the Night of Time.

PART 4. Hold the Talisman of KAL before you and say, KIKLE-AAI LNNIA (Kee-keh-Ieh-Ah-ah-eeEl-en-.nee-ah)

By the power of KAL (Kah-Ieh)
I enter the Currents of VTA (Veh-tah), I renounce my Name,
I sit in the City of the Pyramids,
I am one with the Adepts, I renounce my Name.

See yourself as a geometric point of consciousness without shape or definition. You must eliminate any trace of ego or of your human personality.

PART 5. Imagine the four Watchtowers in the darkness before you. See each Watchtower as a square-shaped region containing 156 pyramids (12x13). The Black Cross which divides them is a bottomless Abyss. Each Watchtower Square should be seen as a pyramid. Let the entire scene be shrouded in the darkness of the region. Let the four regions of pyramids be surrounded by the endless Sea of Blackness. As you gaze at this scene with your magical sight, see each pyramid as a black-robed Master sitting in meditation. Each is identical to the other. Hold the Talisman of VRELP and address the 156x4 masters and say:

VRAN ROR-ELZAP LAIAD PLAPLI

(Veh-rah neh Roh ra-El-zodah-peh Lah-ee-ahdeh Pel-ah-peh-lee)

By the power of VRELP (Var el-peh) I behold the City of the Pyramids And the Masters who dwell herein.

Truly is the pyramid a temple of Initiation. Truly is the pyramid a tomb.

I have cast aside my Name. I have cast aside my Desire. I have cast aside my Life. I am a pile of dust
In the City of the Pyramids.
Fifty are the Gates of Understanding;
This is my dual nature.
One hundred and six are the seasons thereof; EOPHAN
(Eh-oh-peh-hah-neh) This colors me with Sorrow. MI-L
DOSIG-KOKASB

(Mee-El Doh-see-geh-Koh-kah-ess-beh)

PART 6. Remain in the City of the Pyramids for as long as you can.
When ready to leave, hold the Talisman of IVITDT before you and say the following (place your own Magical Name in the blanks) :

IAL-PRG VAOAN IAL TIBIBP DOALIM TELOK

(Ee-ah-leh-Par-geh Vah-oh-ah-neh Ee-ah-leh Tee-bee-beh-peh Doh-ah-lee-meh Teh-loh-keh) By the power of IVITDT (Ee-vee-teh-deh-teh);

I take back my Life.

I take back my Desire. I take back my Name. I am _____

I turn again to the world And to the Ways of Man. I am _____

Hold the Talisman of NEMO in your left hand and your Sword in your right hand and say,

NEM O-EM OA-M OAD-OADO

(Neh-moh-Eh-moh ah-Moh-ah-deh-Oh-ah-doh) I am NEMO (Neh-moh). Therefore,

I am Lord

Of the City of the Pyramids,
And Prince in the Palace of Understanding.
With my piercing Sword of Truth, I am as a Flaming Sword. I drop through the Abyss
And I will appear in the heaven of Jupiter As a morning star,
Or as an evening star.
And my light will shine upon the earth And bring hope and help to those Who dwell in the darkness of thought And who drink of the poison of life.

PART 7. Return to your physical body and surroundings. Use your Wand to execute the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

THE RITUAL OF LAHALASA

The magical word LAHALASA is formed from the letters contained in the central squares of the four Great Crosses. This ritual can be used to evoke power from these regions and transform it down to the magician who can then use it for his own purposes.

STEP 1. Wear your white robe. Place a charged talisman of LAHALASA on the Altar before you. Prepare eight talismans, one for each of the central Squares of the Great Crosses (a truncated pyramid makes a suitable talisman). Prepare four small cakes (cupcakes, for example); one black and heavy such as chocolate, one blue and cool such as pudding or cream, one yellow and light such as marsh-mallow, and one red and hot such as spice or cinnamon. Place these cakes, suitably decorated, on the Altar. Consecrate a circle using the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

STEP 2. Hold the Talisman of the Square A from the Watchtower of Earth in your right hand. Hold the black cake in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Earth and say,

MORDIALHTGA

(Moh-ar-Dee-ah-leh-Heh-keh-teh-gah)

IKZHIKAL (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal) Great King of Earth

Who rules over the Square A In the Great Cross of Earth, Come to me.

ALHKTGA (Ah-leh-hek-teh-gah) AKZINOR (Ah-keh-zodee-noh-rah) AHMLLKV (Ah-mel-elkeh-veh) Mighty Seniors of the Square A In the Great Cross of Earth, Come to me.

Bring the steady Power of Aquarius And lunar receptivity Here to me.

Concentrate on the Square A of the Great Cross of Earth. See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing out-ward from the Great Cross of Earth into the black cake in the form of a thick black mist.

STEP 3. Replace the Talisman of the Square A with that for the Square L and say,

MORDIALHTGA

IKZHIKAL

Great King of Earth

Who rules over the Square L In the Great Cross of Earth, Come to me.

LAIDROM (El-ahee-dar-oh-em)

LZINOPO (El-zodee-noh-poh) LIANSA

(Elee-ee-ah-ness-ah) Mighty Seniors of the Square L In the Great Cross of Earth, Come to me.

Bring the stinging Power of Scorpio And the raw Energy of Mars Here to me.

Concentrate on the Square L of the Great Cross of Earth. See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing out-ward from the Great Cross of Earth into the black cake in the form of a thick black mist.

STEP 4. Hold the Talisman of the Square S from the center of the Great Cross of Water in your right hand. Hold the blue cake in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Water and say,

MPHARSLGAIOL (Em-Peh-heh-Ar-ess-elGah-ee-oh-leh) RAAGIOSL (Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel)

Great King of Water

Who rules over the Square S In the Great Cross of Water, Come to me.

SLGAIOL (Sel-gah-ee-oh-leh) SOAIZNT (Soh-ahee-zoden-teh) SAIINOV (Sah-ee-ee-noh-veh) Mighty Seniors of the Square S In the Great Cross of Water, Come to me.

Bring the creative Power of Leo

And the unbounded Energy of Mars Here to me.

Concentrate on the Square S of the Great Cross of Water. See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing from the Great Cross of Water into the blue cake in the form of a pale blue mist.

STEP 5. Replace the Talisman of the Square S with that of the Square L and say,

MPHARSLGAIOL

RAAGIOSL

Great King over the Square L In the Great Cross of Water, Come to me.

LSRAHPM (Less-rah-pem) LAVAXRP (el-ah-vahtz-ar-peh) LIGDISA (Elee-geh-dee-sah) Might Seniors of the Square L In the Great Cross of Water, Come to me.

Bring the stabilizing Power of Taurus And the Speed of Mercury Here to me.

Concentrate on the Square L of the Great Cross of Water. See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing from the Great Cross of Water into the blue cake in the form of a pale blue mist.

STEP 6. Hold the Talisman of the Square A from the center of the Great Cross of Air in your right hand. Hold the yellow cake in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Air and say,

OROIBAHAOZPI (Oh-roh-Ee-bah-Ah-oh-zod-pee)

BATAIVAH (Bah-tah-ee-vah-heh) Great King over the Square A In the Great Cross of Air, Come to me.

AHAOZPI (Aha-oh-zod-pee) AAOZAIF (Ah-ah-oh-zodah-ee-feh)

AVTOTAR (Ah-veh-toh-tah-rah) Mighty
Seniors of the Square A In the Great Cross of Air, Come to me.

Bring the stinging Power of Scorpio
And the Harmony of Venus Here to me.

Concentrate on the Square A of the Great Cross of Air. See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing from the Great Cross of Air into the yellow cake in the form of a light yellow mist.

STEP 7. Replace the Talisman of the Square A with that of the Square H and say,

OROIBAHAOZPI

BATAIVAH

Great King over the Square H
In the Great Cross of Air,
Come to me.
HABIORO (Hab-bee-oh-roh)
HTNORDA (Heh-teh-noh-rah-dah)
HIPOTGA (Hee-poh-teh-gah) Mighty
Seniors of the Square H In the Great Cross of Air, Come to
me.
Bring the creative Power of Leo
And the Stability of Saturn Here to me.

Concentrate on the Square H in the Great Cross of Air. See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing from the Great Cross of Air into the yellow cake in the form of a light yellow mist.

STEP 8. Hold the Talisman of the first Square A from the center of the Great Cross of Fire in your right hand. Hold the red cake in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Fire and say,

OIPTEAAPDOKE

(Oh-ee-peh-Teh-ah-ah Peh-doh-keh)

EDLPRNAA (Eh-del-par-nah-ah) Great King over the first Square A
In the Great Cross of Fire, Come to
me.

AAPDOKE (Ah-ah-peh-doh-keh) ADAEOET (Ah-dah-eh-oh eteh) ANODOIN (Ah-noh-doh-ee-neh) Mighty Seniors of the first Square A
In the Great Cross of Fire, Come to
me.
Bring the balancing Power of Libra

And lunar receptivity Here
to me.

Concentrate on the first Square A in the Great Cross of Fire.
See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing from the Great Cross of Fire into the red cake in the form of a fiery red mist.

STEP 9. Replace the Talisman of the first Square A with that of the second Square A and say,

OIPTEAAPDOKE

EDLPRNAA

Great King over the second Square A

In the Great Cross of Fire,

Come to me.

AAETPIO (Ah-ah-ete-pee-oh) ARINNAP (Ahree-neh-nah-peh) ALNKVOD (Ah-len-leh-voh-deh) Mighty Seniors of the second Square A In the Great Cross of Fire,

Come to me.

Bring the mobile Power of Gemini

And the Enthusiasm of Jupiter

Here to me.

Concentrate on the second Square A in the Great Cross of Fire.
See the power that abounds in this region to be flowing from the Great Cross of Fire into the red cake in the form of a fiery red mist.

STEP 10. The absorption of the power of the eight supreme treasure zones may now begin. Hold your Talisman of LAHALASA in your right hand before you and say,

By the black power of MORDIALHKTGA That stabilizes the Squares AL

I now receive, according to my Will,
The Enthusiastic Energy of Earth.
(now eat the black cake)

By the blue power of MPHARSLGAIOL
That reflects in the Squares SL
I now receive, according to my Will,
The Wanton Well-being of Water.
(now eat the blue cake)

By the yellow power of OROIBAHAOZPI
That courses through the Squares AH I now receive, according to my Will, The Authoritative Action of Air.
(now eat the yellow cake)

By the red power of OIPTEAAPDOKE That kindles the Squares AA I now receive, according to my Will, The Forceful Ferocity of Fire.
(now eat the red cake)

By the power of LAHALASA,,
The Eight Supreme Treasure Zones
Of the Four Watchtowers;
Being the central creative energy
Of the four Great Crosses,
And the eight Lakes of Power
From which streams forth
The Cosmic Planes of Manifestation:
I am now filled. I am now fixed.
I am now fortified.
I am now freshened.
L-AI-IA-LAS-A L-AHA-A-LAHSA-
LA-A-SA-L
L•AHA-LAS-A

See the rich magical power, which is both creative and healing, as having entered your body via the four cakes. When finished, vibrate the magical word, LAHALASA, four times and feel the power of these subtle Watchtower regions radiating through your body from the agency of the cakes.

STEP 11. Banish any unwanted forces with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

ENOCHIAN RITUAL OF MAGICAL ELIXIR

This ritual is for magicians of all levels. The potency of the elixir produced will be proportional to the experience and training of the magician.

STEP 1. Wear your white robe. Prepare sixteen talismans, one for each of the subquadrants of the Watchtowers (Figures 16 through 31, Appendix A, would be suitable here). Pour wine into your Cup and place it on the Altar to act as a base for the elixir. Consecrate a cirde.

STEP 2. Hold the Talisman of Earth of Earth high above your Cup and say,

May the Holding Angels of Earth
Come to me now.
Those who give pain
To what they maintain;
By the power of NRONK (En-roh-en-keh) And the warrior god Horns,
The Protector of Man,
Do I command you.

See a thick black ray of light emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Holding Angels of Earth of Earth has entered your Cup.

STEP 3. Hold the Talisman of Water of Earth high above your Cup and say,

May the Generative Angels of Earth Come to me now.
Those who ingrain
What they maintain;
By the power of NPHRA (En-peh-har-ah) And the great god Tuamautef,

The Protector of Mothers, Do I command you.

See a black ray of light flecked with blue emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Generative Angels of Water of Earth has entered your Cup.

STEP 4. Hold the Talisman of Air of Earth high above your Cup and say,

May the Sustaining Angels of Earth Come to me now.
Those who sustain
What they maintain;
By the power of NBOSA (En-boh-ess-ah) And the guiding god Anubis,
The Initiator of the Temple,
Do I command you.

See a black ray of light flecked with yellow emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Sustaining Angels of Earth has entered your Cup.

STEP 5. Hold the Talisman of Fire of Earth high above your Cup and say,

May the Desiring Angels of Earth
Come to me now. Those who regain What they maintain;
By the power of NIAOM (Nee-ah-oh-meh)
And the bull god Apis, The Lust of the Blood, Do I
command you.

See a black ray of light flecked with red emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Desiring Angels of Earth has entered your Cup.

STEP 6. Hold the Talisman of Earth of Water high above the Cup and say,

May the Cohesive Angels of Water Come to me now.

Those who hold true
To what they renew;
By the power of HMAGL (Heh-mah-gel) And the cow goddess Hathor,
The Mother of Heaven,
Do I command you.

See a pale blue ray of light flecked with black emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Cohesive Angels of Water has entered your Cup.

Hold the Talisman of Water of Water high above the Cup and say,

May the Regenerative Angels of Water Come to me now.
Those who review
What they renew;
By the power of HTDIM (Heh-teh-dee-meh)
And the moon goddess Isis, The loving Lady of Heaven, Do I command
you.

See a pale blue ray of light emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Regenerative Angels of Water has entered your Cup.

STEP S. Hold the Talisman of Air of Water high above the Cup and say,

May the Illusion Angels of Water
Come to me now. Those who misconstrue
What they renew;
By the power of HTAAD (Heh-tah-ah-deh) And the child god Harpocrates,
The Lord of Silence,
Do I command you.

See a pale blue ray of light flecked with yellow emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Illusion Angels of Water has entered your Cup.

STEP 9. Hold the Talisman of Fire of Water high above the Cup and say,

May the Passionate Angels of Water
Come to me now. Those who pursue What they renew;
By the power of HNLRX (Heh-nel-artz)
And the naked goddess Sothis,
The Lady of the Dog Star, Do I
command you.

See a pale blue ray of light flecked with red emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the Passionate Angels of Water has entered your Cup.

STEP 10. Hold the Talisman of Earth of Air high above the Cup and say,

May the Changing Angels of Air Come to STEP 17. Hold the Talisman of Fire of Fire high above the Cup

and say,

May the Violent Angels of Fire Come to me now. Those who blame

What they can name;
By the power of BZIZA (Beh-zodee-zodah) And the beautiful goddess Nephthys, The Lady of Dispersion,
Do I command you.

See a bright red ray of light emanate from the talisman and strike the contents of the Cup. Know that the power of the violent Angels of Fire has entered your Cup.

STEP 18. Hold the Cup in both hands before you and say,

May this Magical Elixir
Hold my health and longevity.
May this Magick Distillation
From the Forces of the Watchtowers Bless my body with its powers.

Drink the consecrated elixir completely and feel the energies and powers from the sixteen Watchtower subquadrants enter your body and uplift it.

STEP 19. Say a short prayer of gratitude. Close with an appropriate banishing ritual.

ENOCHIAN RITUAL FOR INVISIBILITY

The following Enochian version of the Golden Dawn's Invisibility Ritual is for use by advanced magicians to bring about a temporary state of invisibility. After some degree of success in a magical environment (robe, weapons, instruments, magick circle, and so on) the advanced magician can use the basic techniques employed to mentally invoke a condition of temporary invisibility at any time. All names in this ritual should be vibrated when pronounced.

STEP 1. The Preparation. Wear your black robe. Consecrate a circle with your Wand. On your Altar, position talismans of the four Watchtowers and the Tablet of Union in such a way that you face the Magical Universe.

STEP 2. The Invocation. In turn, invoke the forces of the four Kings of the Watchtowers. A method of invoking Kings is given in Enochian Magic.

STEP 3. The Charge. Hold your Wand in your right hand. Face the Magical Universe on your Altar and say:

In the name of KAOS (Kah-oh-seh)
And the name of KOZMOS (Koh-zod-moh-seh)
With the 92 Governors Of the 30 Aethyrs, I invoke your power,
I charge you, O Light Invisible,
And Light Intangible, Whereupon
all thoughts
And deeds of all men are written,
I charge you, by all the Symbols
And Words of Power,
By the light of my Godhead;
That you leave your places of habitation
And concentrate around me,

Invisible, Intangible;

A Shroud of Darkness, A Formula of Defense;
That I may become invisible, So that seeing me,
Men see not,

Nor understand the thing that they behold. Visualize the dualistic forces of Chaos to be surrounding your body and coalescing into a dark cloud. Then say,

Lady of Darkness,
Who dwells in the Night Which no man may approach
Wherein is Mystery and Depth unthinkable
And awful Silence:
I charge you,
In the name of Infinite Space, The Lady NUIT (Nu-ee-teh), To grant my request.

Clothe me with your Veil Woven from that silent Darkness That surrounds your abode Of Eternal Rest,
O Goddess of the Night Sky; Our Lady NUIT (Nu-ee-teh).

Feel the dark cloud surrounding you intensify as you vibrate the name of the goddess, NUIT (Nu-ee-teh).

STEP 4. The Governors of Paz. Rise in your Body of Light to the fourth Aethyr, PAZ, and address the three Governors as follows:

O THOTANF, (Teh-hoh-tah-neff) [trace her sigil before you] She whose coming means Victory;
BAMS, BAMS, BAMS (Bah-meh-seh)

By your power, all those who see me Will forget the seeing, That I may pass by unnoticed.

O AXZIARG, (Ahtz-zodee-ah-rah-geh) [trace his sigil before you]
He whose Name is Flame;
OVKHO OOAONA
(Oh-veh-heh-hoh Oh-oh-ah-oh-nah) By your power, all those who see me Will confound their eyes, That I may pass by unnoticed.

O POTHNIR, (Poh-teh-henee-ar) [trace his sigil before you] Son of the Three-fold Throne;
MAZBA ORS (Mah-zod-bah Oh-rah-seh)
By your power, all those who look upon me
Will see your Robe of Darkness That I may pass by unnoticed.

STEP 5. TheFormulation. Face the three Governors of PAZ and say,

Thus do I formulate a barrier
Without my astral form
That it may be to me a Wall
And as a Fortress,
And I now declare that it is so formulated,
To be a basis and receptacle
For the Shroud of Darkness,
The Egg of Blue
Which is wrapt around my physical form. Thus do I charge you,
Collect yourselves about me,
And clothe this my astral form
With an Egg of Blue,

A Shroud of Darkness,
And shroud my form in your substantial Night.
Clothe me and hide me, But at my control. Darken man's eyes That he see me not.
Gather at my Word,
For you are the Watchers,
And my soul is the Shrine.
Now I wear a Robe of Night,
A shroud to blacken out the Light
To repel eyes,
And confound sight.

Clearly visualize a Shroud of Darkness enveloping you at a distance of 18 inches from the surface of your body.

STEP 6. The Shroud. Know this Shroud of Darkness to be under your control, ready to be dispersed and re-formed at your Word. Then further charge these Governors:

By the power of the words
OVKHO EXARP (Oh-veh-keh-hoh Eh-tzar-peh) I
charge you,
Governors of PAZ (Pah-zod)
To confound the Air
About my body
For as long as I have need of it.
OVKHO EXARP (Oh-veh-keh-hoh Eh-tzar-peh) In the name of EXARP (Eh-tzar-peh)
In the name of HKOMA (Heh-koh-mah)
In the name of NANTA (Nah-en-tah)
In the name of BITOM (Bee-toh-meh)
I charge you
And I invoke the Shroud of Concealment.
Gather together,
O Flakes of Astral Light,

To shroud my form

In your substantial Night.

STEP 7. The Practice. Let your Body of Light enter into you physical body. Feel the Shroud of Darkness surrounding you.

Face the North and say,

I have shrouded myself

In mystery and concealment. May I enter the Path of Darkness. I am the only being

In an Abyss of Darkness.

Face the West and say,

Invisible, I now pass by

The Gate of the Invisible

By virtue of the Name of Darkness.

Darkness is my Name.

I am the Great One,

Invisible on the Paths of the Shades.

Face the East and say,

Invisible, I now pass by

The Gate of the Invisible

By virtue of the Name of Light.

I am Light shrouded in Darkness. I am the Wielder

Of the forces of the Great Balance.

Face the South and say,

Thus have I formulated

This Shroud of Darkness and of Mystery As a concealment and a guard.

I am concealed from the eyes of all men,

From all things

Of Sight and Sense.

STEP 8. The Banishment. After invoking and using the Shroud of Darkness, banish it by saying:

0 Shroud of Darkness and of Mystery
Which has well served my purpose,
You may now depart to your ancient ways.
But be ready to return to me
Quickly and forcibly,
At my request,
Again to shroud me from the eyes of men.
And now I say to you,
Depart in peace
With my Blessing,
And be ready to come
When you are next called.

Use the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram to send the Shroud back to its own sphere.

RITUAL FOR EVOKING THE WATCHTOWER DEITIES

EVOCATION RITUAL: THE EARTH ANGEL AXIR

The following evocation is a typical ritual for evoking the Watchtower deities. It is provided for use by advanced magicians. This ritual is specifically designed for the Earth of Earth Angel, AXIR, but the principles incorporated here can be applied to any Watchtower deity.

STEP 1. Construct a magick circle. To the North create a triangle so that the triangle lies just outside the circle. The deity is to be evoked into this triangle while you, the magician, remain in the circle. Consecrate your circle using the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram. Use a strong heavy-bodied incense (for example, musk) for this ritual. Create a Pantacle inscribed with the name AXIR, the number 566, and his sigil from the Rose. Place it on the Altar before you.

STEP 2. Open the ritual as follows:

Hold your Wand in your right hand, face South and say, I see the holy and formless Fire
Which darts through the hidden depths of the universe.
I hear the Voice of Fire.
OIP-TEAA-PDOKE
(Oh-ee-peh Teh-ah-ah-Peh-doh-heh) I invoke
you,
Angels of the Watchtower of the South.

Hold your Cup in your right hand, face West and say, I see the holy and formless Water
Which flows through the hidden depths of the universe.
I hear the Voice of Water.

MPH-ARSL-GAIOL

(Em-peh-heh-Ar-ess-el-Gah-ee-oh-leh) I invoke you,
Angels of the Watchtower of the West.

Hold your Dagger in your right hand, face East and say, I see the holy and formless Air

Which blows through the hidden depths of the universe.
I hear the Voice of Air.

ORO-IBAH-AOZPI

(Oh-roh-Ee-bah-Ah-oh-zod-pee) I
invoke you,
Angels of the Watchtower of the East.

Hold your Pantacle in your right hand, face North and say,

I see the holy and formless Earth

Which lies at the hidden depths of the universe. I hear the Voice of Earth. MOR-DIAL-HKTGA

(Moh-ar-Dee-ah-leh-Heh-keh-teh-gah) I invoke
you,

Angels of the Watchtower of the North.

Raise your Censer in your right hand and use it to trace the two invoking pentagrams of Spirit:

While tracing these, say, EXARP (Eh-tzar-peh) BTOM (Bee-toh-meh) NANTA (Nah-en-tah) HKOMA (Heh-koh-mah) In the names of the letters Of the Tablet of Union I invoke
you,
Divine Forces of the Spirit of Life.
O Guardians of the Gates of the Universe,
Be you also guardians Of this Magick Circle That I may enter in And become a partaker
Of the secrets of the Divine Light.

STEP 3. Hold your Pantacle of AXIR before you, face the Watchtower of Earth and say,

MOR DIAL-HKTGA (Moh-ar-Dee-ah-lehHeh-kehteh-gah) IKZHIKAL. (Ee-kehzod-he e-kal)
O King of the Earth,
Who uses the Earth for a footstool, Who solidifies the past;
I invoke you into my heart
To help me in this invocation
To help me in the Great Work
And thereby to help others.

STEP 4. Vibrate the names of the six Seniors of Earth. Feel the presence of the King and Seniors of Earth. Then vibrate the Calvary Cross names:

ABAFT (Ah-bah-leh-peh-teh) ARBIZ
(Ar-bee-zod)

vibrate the Angels of Earth of Earth:

NRONK (Neh-roh-en-heh) RONK
(Roh-en-keh)

TAXIR (Tah-etzee-ar)

AXIR (Ah-tzee-ar)

STEP 5. Hold your Dagger in your right hand, the Pantacle of AXIR in your left hand, and say,

O Lords of the Land of Life
Hear this Call of mine
To the Angel AXIR (Ah-tzee-ar) In the Earth
Angle
Of the Northern Quadrangle
By whose Magical Seal I now bind With a triple cord of bondage.

Trace the sigil of AXIR in the air before you while vibrating his name:

STEP 6. Feel the presence of AXIR. Continue the evocation by saying:

O mighty and powerful Angel AXIR (Ah-tzee-ar) I call you. I bind you.
In the name of your King
IKZHIKAL (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal) I call you. I bind you.
In the name of the formula
MIKA BABALON (Mee-kah Bah-bah-loh-en)
Whose number is your own;
Five hundred, six, and sixty.

I call you. I bind you.

PIRIPSOL, PIRIPSOL (Pee-ree-pess-oh-leh) MIKA BABALON (Mee-kah Bah-bah-loh-en) I call you. I bind you.

From your Square A of Black Earth Where Horns milks his Cow

Where the influence of the element Water Produces the Hanged Man,
Come forth and appear in this triangle. In the name of TAXIR (Tah-etzee-ar) I call you. I bind
you.

By these names I evoke you.

Leave your abode in the Kingdom of Earth And appear to me here

In the Magical Triangle without this Circle In fair shape and true.

Come forth AXIR (Ah-etzee-ar) And manifest yourself before me.

STEP 7. You should be able to see the Angel AXIR forming in the air above the triangle. If not, repeat STEP 6 until he so appears. As he materializes before you, say:

O mighty AXIR (Ah-etzee-ar) Perform all of my demands Help me in the Great Work. Purify my earthy self
And fix herein the glory
Of mine Holy Guardian Angel That I may find the Hidden Stone
Whereon a new spiritual Name shall be written.
Teach me the mystery of the earthy self
And how it may be made creative. Swear by the mighty Seal That I hold before
you
That you will do this for me.

Whenever I call upon you
By Word or Will or Magical Ceremony,
You will be a perpetual link of communication Between the Lords of Earth
And my human soul.

STEP 8. Commune with this Angel, who should be clearly before you.
Learn from him according to your will.

STEP 9. The Banishment. Now banish the Angel by saying:

I charge you that from this day
You will bring no harm to me Or to my home
Or to my family Or to my friends
And that you will not deceive me.
AXIR (Ah-tzee-ar) Depart in Peace To your habitation
In the Kingdom of Earth.
Let there be peace between us
And let you come forth again
When you are called.

STEP 10. Perform the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

ENOCHIAN PRECIPITATION RITUAL

The magical ability to bring invisible objects into visible appearance is well-known. It involves the conscious precipitation of psychic and/or astral objects into physical manifestation. All physical objects are such precipitations, following the natural law of manifestation. The magician can use this law according to his own will, and make his own physical manifestations. To be successful, the magician must consciously direct and quicken the natural tendency of an astral object to assume physical form. The following ritual is provided for advanced magicians.

STEP 1. Wear your black robe. Consecrate a circle. Place a charged Talisman of LAHALASA on the Altar before you. See the object to be precipitated clearly in your mind. Give it a name. Reserve a place for it on the Altar where it will appear.

STEP 2. Hold your Wand in your right hand and the Talisman of LAHALASA in your left hand. Face the Watchtower of Fire. Concentrate on the two center squares of this Watchtower and say, OIP-TEAA-PDOKE (Oh-ee-peh-Teh-ah-ah-Peh-doh-keh) May the power

In the squares A (Ah) and A (Ah)
Come to me now And assist me. - AA (Ah-ah)

Face the Altar and see an image of the object to be precipitated at the desired position.

STEP 3. Face the Watchtower of Air. Concentrate on the two center squares of this Watchtower and say, ORO-IBAH-AOZPI (Oh-roh-Eo-bah-AhBah-Zodpee) May the power

In the squares A (Ah) and H (Heh) Come to me now
And assist me.
AH (Ah-heh)

Face the Altar and see the image of the object clearly and in greater detail.

STEP 4. Face the Watchtower of Water. Concentrate on the two center squares of this Watchtower and say,

MPH-ARSL-GAIOL (Em-peh-heh-Ar-ess-elGah-ee-oh-leh) May the power
In the squares S (Seh) and L (Leh)
Come to me now
And assist me.
SL (Seh-leh)

Face the Altar and see the image of the object with great clarity and detail.

STEP 5. Face the Watchtower of Earth. Concentrate on the two center squares of this Watchtower and say,

MOR-DIAL-HKI'GA (Moh-ar-Dee-ah-lehHeh-kehteh-gah) May the power In the squares A (Ah) and L (leh)
Come to me now
And assist me.
AL (Ah-leh)

Face the Altar and see the object precipitated in perfect detail.

STEP 6. Vibrate the letters of the word LAHALASA while tracing its sigil in the air before you. The sigh, from the Rose, is:

See the sigil blazing in the four Enochian colors before you as follows:

L-black A-r e d
H - - yellow
A-red L-blue A-yellow
S---blue A-black

Will this sigh to slowly condense into a cloud and let this cloud sink down and enter into the single object on the Altar. Let the four forces of the Watchtowers impel the object into visible appearance.

STEP 7. While facing the object on the Altar, call on the forces of the 23rd Aethyr, TOR, as follows:

Vibrate the name RONOAMB (Roh-noh-ah-meh-beh), while tracing his blazing black sigil before you,

And then say,

O RONOAMB,
Protector of All Precipitations,
to me now,
And safeguard this manifestation.

Come

Vibrate the name ONIZIMP (Oh-nee-zodee-em-peh), while tracing his blazing black sigil before you,

And then say,

O ONIZIMP
Doer of All Deeds,
Come to me now
And carry out this manifestation.

Vibrate the name ZAXANIN (Zod-ahtz-ah-nee-en), while tracing his blazing black sigil before you,

And then say,

O ZAXANIN,
Namer of All Names,
Come to me now
And define this manifestation

Of _____ (speak the name of the object)

Feel the presence of these Governors in the circle with you.

STEP 8. Say the following: By my

Will,

The Power of LAHALASA (L,ah-hah-lah-sah) Is multiplied by the power of BESZ (Bess-zod)
Whereupon the Product is the strength Of RONOAMB (Rah-noh-ahembeh)
And of ONIZIMP (Oh-nee-zodee-empeh) And of ZAXANIN (Zod-ahtz-ahnee-en)
Whose Product is One and Two, Whose Sum is Three,
Whose final number
Is the intelligent manifestation Of Matter and Space.

MIKALZO-KAFAFAM PIRIPSOL (Mee-kah-leh-zodoh-Kah-fah-fah-meh Pee-ree-peh-soh-leh) The Power of TOR (Toh-roh) Sustains the Heavens

While holding up the Earth. By this mighty Creative Power Do I fulfill my
Will.

The object should now be fully materialized on the Altar. If not, repeat Steps 6, 7 and 8.

STEP 9. Do not use a banishing ritual lest it remove your precipitation with it. Instead, give appropriate gratitude to those powers that have faithfully carried out your Will.

ENOCHIAN RITUAL OF THE ABYSS

The following ritual is provided for those magicians who will to face into the Abyss and dare to cross beyond it. It can be used in preparation for either offices of VRELP or Dragon. Throughout the ritual, where a blank line is used, substitute your own Magical Name.

STEP 1. Wear your white robe. Place the Altar in the center of the circle. Place your Sword on the Altar. Prepare a Talisman of NIAKOD and place it on the Altar. Place four small tables in the circle around the Altar. Locate each table at one of the four directions. Place a talisman of the Watchtower of Earth on the table to the north of the Altar. Place a talisman of the Watchtower of Water on the table to the west of the Altar. Place a talisman of the Watchtower of Air on the table to the east of the Altar. Place a talisman of the Watchtower of Fire on the table to the south of the Altar. These four talismans should be in the form of the four Watchtower Tablets. Place a lit candle on each of the four tables. Use a black candle at the North, a blue candle at the West, a yellow candle at the East, and a red candle at the South. Let no other light be visible. Consecrate a large circle around this area using an appropriate banishing/cleansing ritual. The light from the candles as the Watchtowers should illuminate the inside of the circle. Outside the circle should be total darkness (this ritual is best conducted at night).

STEP 2. Begin by facing the Altar. Take your Sword in your right hand. Hold the Talisman of NIAKOD in your left hand and say,

It is my Will to touch and kiss

The awesome void of the Outer Abyss.

Concentrate on the goal of this ritual. Will your mind to become calm and receptive.

STEP 3. Leave the Altar and stand before the Watchtower of Earth. Point your sword at this Tablet and say,

In the holy name of MORDIALHKTGA I,
_____,_command you,
Mighty IKZHIKAL,
Great King of Earth:
Let me now pass through
Your Watchtower of Earth.

Concentrate on Earth. Circle this table while vibrating the name TEX. Then circle the table a second time while vibrating the name RII.

STEP 4. Leave the North and stand before the Watchtower of Water. Point your sword at the Tablet and say,

In the holy name of MPHARSLGAIOL I,
_____,_command you,
Mighty RAAGIOSL,
Great King of Water;
Let me now pass through
Your Watchtower of Water.

Concentrate on Water. Circle this table five times. With each circuit, vibrate the names of BAG, ZAA, DES, VTI and NIA in turn.

STEP 5. Leave the West and stand before the Watchtower of Air. Point your sword at this Tablet and say,

In the holy name of OROIBAHAOZPI I,
_____,_command you,
Mighty BATAVIAH,
Great King of Air;
Let me now pass through
Your Watchtower of Air.

Concentrate on Air. Circle this table seven times. With each circuit, vibrate the names of TOR, UN, ASP, KHR, POP, ZEN, and TAN in turn.

STEP 6. Leave the East and stand before the Watchtower of Fire in the south. Point your Sword at this Tablet and say,

In the holy name of OIPTEAAPDOKE I, , command
you,
Mighty EDLPRNAA,
Great King of Fire;
Let me now pass through
Your Watchtower of Fire.

Concentrate on Fire. Circle this table six times. With each circuit, vibrate the names of LEA, OXO, VTA, ZIM, LOE, and IKH in turn.

STEP 7. Go to the Tablet in the North. Stand between the Tablet of Earth and the arc of your circle with your back to the Tablet. Face outward from the circle into the blackness of the Abyss. Thrust your Sword into this darkness. Let it pierce the Abyss but be sure to remain standing within the circle. Then say,

O Mighty KOMANAN

I, _____, stand before you. I know you.

I know your name.

I know your formulating nature. You give yourself to all forms And rebuke the emptiness.

Yours is the Knowledge of structure.

I, _____, know you Who sits in the North

Where all things are clothed. By the power of NIAKOD You will obey me.

STEP 8. Move to the East and stand with your back to the Tablet there. Thrust your Sword into the darkness outside the circle and say,

O Mighty LEXARPH

I, _____, stand before you.

I know you.

I know your name.

I know your catalytic nature.

You stand between form and void; A virgin untouched by either. A harlot intimate with both.

Yours is the Knowledge of Means. I,

_____, know you

Who sits in the East

Where all things are commenced. By the power of NIAKOD

You will obey me.

STEP 9. Move to the South and stand with your back to the Tablet there. Thrust your Sword into the darkness outside the circle and say,

O Mighty TABITOM

I, _____ stand before you.

I know you.

I know your name.

I know your dispersive nature.

You give yourself up to voidness And rebuke all aggregates.

Yours is the Knowledge of Suchness. I,

_____, know you

Who sits in the South

Where all things are consumed. By the power of NIAKOD

You will obey me.

STEP 10. Move to the West and stand with your back to the Tablet there. Thrust your Sword into the darkness outside the circle and say,

O Mighty KHORONZON I, _____, stand before you.

I know you.

I know your name.

I know your incoherent nature. You are the great Demon, The Lord of the Abyss, Whose kiss is madness And whose touch is death.

Yours is the Knowledge of Form. I,

_____, know you Who sits in the West

Where all things are completed. By the power of NIAKOD You will obey
me.

Even you, the Archdemon Will obey my Will.

STEP 11. Point your Sword downward to the circle. Lift up the Talisman of NIAKOD before you and say,

I have truly tread the Path

To stand at last upon the brink

And dare the breath of demon's wrath. I stare! I bend! I leap! I sink!

In the name of NIAKOD

KOMANAN help me.

TABITOM uphold me.

KHORONZON stand aside for me.

See the depths of the Abyss surrounding you in your protected circle. Let the demons of the Abyss be as black swirling clouds upon a midnight sea but unable to harm you.

Remain in this state for as long as you can.

STEP 12. Return to the Altar and perform an appropriate banishing ritual.

ENOCHIAN DEATH RITUAL

The following Enochian ritual is provided for advanced magicians. It invokes the natural death processes and is therefore a powerful ritual of initiation into life. If properly conducted, you, the magician, will directly face your own death and transcend it. You will understand death to be a necessary part of life.

STEP 1. Wear your black robe. Conduct an appropriate opening ceremony such as the Enochian Formula of Opening by Watchtower. Enter your Body of Light.

STEP 2. Face the Watchtower of Earth and say:

MOR-DIAL-HKTGA (Mor-ar-Dee-ah-lehHeh-kehteh-gah)

O [KZHIKAL (Ee-keh-zod-hee-kal)

I return my body to you

In the Watchtower of Earth

TELOKH, TELOKH (Teh-loh-keh-heh) SIATRISNANTA (See-ahteh-ree-seh-Nah-en-tah) PI-BLIAR BABALON (Pee-Beh lee-ar Bah-bah loh-en) O Death, you carry away my body

To the Scorpions of Earth

But I escape you

To the Great Place of Comfort;

The Palace of Our Lady Babalon.

Visualize the Lord of Death coming before you. See your physical body as dead and cold. See yourself as leaving it forever. See yourself as leaving the Earth behind you as you say these words. Clearly separate your sense of identity from your body which now faces disintegration.

STEP 3. Face the Watchtower of Water and say:

MPH-ARSL-GAIOL

(Em-peh-heh-Ar-ess-el-Gah-ee-oh-leh)

○ RAAGIOSL (Rah-ah-gee-oh-sel)

I return my blood to you

In the Watchtower of Water. TELOKH,

TELOKH (Teh-loh-keh-heh)

NAZPS-TELOKH (Nah-zod-pess-Teh-loh-keh-heh) HKOMA
(Heh-koh-mah)

E-KNILA (Eff-Keh-nee-lah) PI-

BLIAR ZEN BABALON

(Pee-Beh-lee-ar Zod-en Bah-bah-loh-en)

○ Sword of Death

You pierce through to my blood

But I escape you

To the Great Place of Comfort;

The Palace of Our Lady Babalon.

See all attachment to your body and your past life come to an end.
Clearly separate your sense of identity from your personality which now faces certain disintegration.

STEP 4. Face the Watchtower of Air and say:

ORO-IBAH-AOZPI

(Oh-roh-Ee-bah-Ah-oh-zod-pee)

○ BATAIVAH (Bah-tah-ee-vah) I return my breath to you

In the Watchtower of Air

TELOKH, TELOKH (Tel-oh-keh-heh) ADPHANT-ORS TELOKH
(Ah-deh-peh hah-en teh-Oh-ra-seh Tel-oh-keh-heh) EXARP

(Ehtz-ar-peh)

PI-BLIAR SALMAN BABALON (Pee-Beh lee-ar Sah-leh mah-neh Bah bah-loh-en) O unspeakable Darkness of Death You hide away my breath But I escape you

To the Great Place of Comfort; The Palace of Our Lady Babalon.

See all normal brain/mind thinking come to an end. The logic and reason of your brain/mind has died with your body. Clearly separate your sense of identity from your lower mind which now faces certain disintegration.

STEP 5. Face the Watchtower of Fire and say:

OIP-TEAA-PDOKE

(Oh-ee peh-Teh-ah-ah-Peh-doh-keh) O

EDLPRNAA (Eh-deb par-nah-ah) I return my life to you

In the Watchtower of Fire

TELOKH, TELOKH (Teh-loh-keh-heh) NOQOLBITOM

(Noh-quo-leh-Bee-toh-meh) PI-BLIAAR BABALON

(Pee-B eh-lee-ar Bah-bah-loh-en)

O Death, you give my life

To the Servants of Fire

But I escape you

To the Great Place of Comfort;

The Palace of Our Lady Babalon.

See human consciousness come to an end for you. Your memory is gone. Your personality is dispersed. Your name is forgotten.

STEP 6. Empty your mind of its contents and say:

TELOKH (Teh-loh-keh-heh)

O Death, to me is the Victory.

You have taken my Body and my Mind, But my Spirit remains;

A Light in the Darkness.

ABAI-MALPIRG ABAI-MALPIRG ABAI-MALPIRG (Ah-bah-ee-Mahleh-pee-rah-geh)

I am the stooping Life-Spark
In a Well of Darkness. I am the Light of Wisdom And the Light of Mercy.

Behold, there is healing in my wings.
Life from my Spirit springs.
I am he that has life and am dead.
He who from life to life is led. I hold the ivory Keys of Hell. I hold the keys of Death as well.

BLIORB-OLPRT (Beh lee-oh-ra-beh-Oh-leh-par-teh)
The Comfort of Light is upon me.

I rest in the Great Place of Comfort;
The Palace of Our lady, BABALON (Bah-bah-loh-en) I am the Lord of Life,
The Opener of the Day.
Triumphant over Death, I prepare a Pathway
Through the Darkness. I am the Bennu.

I am the Bornless One.

Life and Death abide in me. I am the Bennu,

The Soul of Rai
The Guide of the Gods.

Osiris comes forth

As a Master of the Earth

To do whatsoever his ka desires. I am the Son of Osiris,

And a Master of the Earth.

And behold, I will do

Whatsoever my ka desires.

ABAI-MALPIRG

BLIOR-OLPRT

TELOKH.

Stay in this formless, thoughtless state of death for as long as you can.

STEP 7. Return slowly through the Planes of Manifestation. Pass through the Watchtower of fire and say: Here I receive my life.

Recover your sense of being. Pass through the Watchtower of Air and say:

Here I receive my breath.

Recover your sense of mind. Pass through the Watchtower of Water and say:

Here I receive my blood.

Recover your sense of personality. Pass through the Watchtower of Earth and say:

Here I receive my body.

Recover your sense of body and return to your Body of Light.

STEP 8. Return to your physical body. Banish the invoked forces with the Banishing Rituals of the Pentagram and Hexagram.

The diagram is a large, complex cross-shaped talisman, composed of numerous small squares arranged in a grid. Each small square contains a letter or symbol, often surrounded by the word "SPIRIT" or "AIR". The central vertical column is the longest, with horizontal arms extending to the left and right. The diagram is highly symmetrical and appears to be a form of magical or occultic talisman.

ENOCHIAN MAGIC—A Practical Manual

by Gerald J. Schueler

The powerful system of magic introduced in the 16th century by Dr. John Dee, Astrologer Royal to Queen Elizabeth I, and as practiced by Aleister Crowley and the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, is here presented for the first time in a complete, step-by-step form.

There has never before been a book that has made Enochian Magic this easy!

In this book you are led carefully along the path from "A brief history of the Enochian Magical System," through "How to Speak Enochian," "How to Invoke," "The Calls," "Egyptian Deities" and "Chief Hazards" to "How to visit the Aethyrs in Spirit Vision (Astral Projection)." Not a step is missed; not a necessary instruction forgotten.

THE ENOCHIAN TAROT

by Gerald and Betty Schueler

The popular deck of cards known as the Tarot has been used for many centuries for divination, fortunetelling and self-initiation through meditation. The Enochian Tarot, an 86-card deck, is the first to utilize the mystery and magical power inherent in Enochian Magic.

The Enochian Tarot explains in detail the meaningful correspondences behind the structure of this deck. It discusses, for example, the difference between the 22 Paths on the Qabalistic Tree of Life, on which traditional Tarot decks are based, and the 30 Aethyrs of Enochian Magick (the Enochian deck has 8 extra cards because there are 8 more Aethyrs than Paths). The book also includes tables and figures for easy comprehension of an otherwise difficult subject, as well as tips for reading the cards for fun or profit.

The unique system of Enochian Magick was revealed to John Dee, court astrologer to Queen Elizabeth I of England, and his partner Edward Kelly by the Enochian Angels who inhabit the Watchtowers and Aethyrs of the subtle regions of the universe. The authors are foremost authorities on this subject and have published a number of books that have made a fascinating magical system accessible to a wide audience. 0-87542-709-X, 352 pgs., 5-1/4 x 8, illus., softcover

ENOCHIAN PHYSICS

by Gerald J. Schueler

Gerald Schueler has taken the latest discoveries of modern physics and compared them to the laws of Enochian Physics. He shows how the magical universe is a natural extension of Einstein's space/time continuum. The only ingredient that Einstein left out was consciousness. When this factor is included, the magical universe is revealed. According to modern physics, matter is a form of energy. In Enochian Physics you will see that this same energy, the energy of modern physics, is the very substance, or "matter," of the magical universe.

The book incorporates magick and the latest concepts in the ever-changing field of theoretical physics. Quantum mechanics, black and white holes, alchemy and levitation, quarks and the Big Bang, the four elements and the four elementary forces are all brought together within a Grand Unified System of the magical universe. Included are such tantalizing scientific puzzles as the fluidity of time, the possibility of parallel universes, matter and antimatter, and the fate of the stars and galaxies. Those seeking a clear explanation of magical phenomena such as invisibility, astral travel and psychic healing will find it in the pages of Enochian Physics. Anyone practicing magick or interested in how magick works should read this book.

COMING INTO THE LIGHT

by Gerald Schueler

Coming Into The Light is the name that the ancient Egyptians gave to a series of magickal texts known to us today as The Book of the Dead. Coming into the Light provides modern translations of these famous texts, and shows that they are not simply religious prayers or spells to be spoken over the body of a dead king, but rituals to be performed by living magicians who seek to know the truth about themselves and their world. Basic Egyptian philosophical and religious concepts are explained and explored, and ritual texts for a wide variety of magickal use are presented. For example, the Ritual of the Opening of the Mouth, perhaps the most well-known of Egyptian rituals, allows a magician to enter into the higher regions of the Magickal Universe without losing consciousness. Enough of this ancient wisdom has been passed down to us so that today we may gain a unique insight into the workings of those powerful magicians who performed their operations thousands of years ago.

THE GOLDEN DAWN by Israel

Regardie

The Original Account of the Teachings, Rites and Ceremonies of the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn as revealed by Israel Regardie, with further revision, expansion, and additional notes by Regardie, Cris Monnastre, and others. Expanded with an index of over 100 pages!

Originally published in four bulky volumes of some 1200 pages, this 6th Revised and Enlarged Edition has been entirely reset in modern, less space consuming type, in half the pages (while retaining the original pagination in marginal notation for reference) for greater ease and use. This edition contains revisions and additional text and notes by noted scholars and by actual practitioners of the Golden Dawn system of Magick, with an Introduction by the only student ever accepted for personal training by Regardie.

Also included are Initiation Ceremonies, important rituals for consecration and invocation, methods of meditation and magical working based on the Enochian Tablets, studies in the Tarot, and the system of Qabalistic Correspondences that unite the World's religions and magical traditions into a comprehensive and practical whole.

This volume is designed as a study and practice curriculum suited to both group and private practice. Meditation upon the Initiation Ceremonies, and following them with the Active Imagination, is fully experiential without need of participation in group or lodge. A very complete reference encyclopedia of Western Magick.

GOLDEN DAWN ENOCHIAN MAGIC

by Pat Zalewski

Enochian magic is considered by most magicians to be the most powerful system ever created. Meister Crowley, "The Great Beast," learned this system of magic from the Hermetic Order of the Golden Dawn, which had developed and expanded the concepts and discoveries of Elizabethan magus John Dee. This book picks up where the published versions of the Enochian material of the Golden Dawn leave off.

Based on the research and unpublished papers of MacGregor Mathers, one of the founders of the Golden Dawn, Golden Dawn Enochian Magic opens new avenues of use for this system. New insights are given on such topics as the Sigillum Dei Aemeth, the Angels of the Enochian Aires applied to the 12 tribes of Israel and the Kabbalah, the 91 Governors, the Elemental Tablets as applied to the celestial sphere, and more. This book provides a long-sought break from amateurish and inaccurate books on the subject; it is designed to complement such scholarly classics as Enochian Invocation and Heptarchia Mystica.

MODERN MAGICK

by Don Kraig

Modern Magick is the most comprehensive step-by-step introduction to the art of ceremonial magic ever offered. The eleven lessons in this book will guide you from the easiest of rituals and the construction of your magickalt tools through the highest forms of magick: designing your own rituals and doing pathworking. Along the way you will learn the secrets of the Kabbalah in a clear and easy-to-understand manner.

You will also discover the true secrets of invocation (channeling) and evocation, and the missing information that will finally make the ancient grimoires such as the Keys of Solomon, not only comprehensible, but usable. Modern Magick is designed so anyone can use it, and is the perfect guidebook for students and classes. It will also help to round out the knowledge of long-time practitioners of the magickal arts.

MYSTERIA MAGICA

by Denning and Phillips

For years, Denning and Phillips headed the international occult Order Aurum Solis. In this book they present the magickal system of the order so that you can use it. Here you will find rituals for banishing and invoking plus instructions for proper posture and breathing. You will learn astral projection, rising on the planes, and the magickal works that should be undertaken through astral projection. You will learn the basic principle of ceremonies and how to make signs and talismans. You will learn practical Enochian magick plus how to create, consecrate and use your magickalt tools such as the magickal sword, wand and cup. You will also learn the advanced arts of sphere-working and evocation to visible appearance.

Filled with illustrations, this book is an expanded version of the previous edition. It is now complete in itself and can be the basis of an entire magickal system. You can use the information alone or as the sourcebook for a group. It is volume 3 of The Magical Philosophy, the other two books being The Sword and The Serpent and The Foundations of High Magick. If you want to learn how to do real magick, this is the place you should start.

THE ELECTRIC TAROT

Software created by Betty and Gerald Schueler

The New Age has finally met the computer age—and they have united in this complete and truly practical software for your PC. For the first time, a computer can do a Tarot reading for you.

The Electric Tarot is an easy-to-use program created for IBM and all IBM compatible PC systems. Attractively packaged in a dust-proof case, the package includes 5-1/4" floppy disk, complete easy-to-follow operating instructions, and an informative booklet outlining the history and many uses of the Tarot.

Even if you have never seen a Tarot deck in your life, you can give complete, in-depth, accurate readings by using The Electric Tarot. Load the program and simply press a key to shuffle the "deck," another key to choose a spread for the cards. Make your own interpretation, or press another key and the computer will interpret the cards for you, and synthesize them into a complete, coherent, overall reading. The possibilities are endless.

Volume # 11

This Book is Volume #11

The Enochian Materials have been around for a few hundred years.

What I will say now, is My Opinion:

We have 2 types of people interested in these Materials.

-Those who sit on the Materials:

Procrastinating over them, mulling over them, contemplating them...

`...But never really doing anything to advance the Materials into a workable format.

It is one step forward and 2 steps back.

Due to this- much of Enochian Magick is still performed like it was over 100 years ago.

-Then, there is the other type...

My goal is to move the sleeping Enochian Egregore- Forward.

In my 11 Attempts- whether I am 100% correct, or 100% incorrect- does not matter.

I am applying New Current to it.

Apply electrical current to an inanimate object and it will move.

If I can shake the Egregore enough, It will roll over.

Morphic Resonance will instill it's magickal properties for the benefit all Enochian Magickians...

When the Egregore moves up a notch- all Enochian Mages will glean the effects of it- and move with it.

Whatever new information can be discovered-will advance everyone else.

If it is static- then I am applying that dynamic jolt.

*This Document shares Insight which is very important.
It will make the Enochian Materials much easier to understand.*

Thank YOU for participating!

“The Book of Enoch” is sometimes included in Gnostic Bibles.
Compilations of various tracts, depicting Gnostic thought - was the major competitor to “The Church Fathers/Bible-Makers of Judeo-Christendom”

I [and Geoffrey James] believe Dee & Kelley had access to Gnostic texts. The one I will be using is from the 3rd century.
Written in Alexandria Egypt ... which is being burned to the ground [Egypt Uprising- February 2011] ... as I type this.

Irony how History come full circle.

[See My Other Books]

Dee & Kelley also owned “Liber Juratus”, from which they and the Enochian Entities [EE] ‘borrowed’ from.

Dee/Kelley believed the EE gave them “The Book of Enoch”.
On this premise- [Dee searching for extra-biblical literature]
I believe Liber Loagaeth [& all of the EE Doctrines] runs parallel to the Gnostic Knowledge circulating in their own timeframe.

If you have read My Other Books- I showed that Galvah was Sophia.
I also showed similarities between other Enochian characters and Their Gnostic counterparts.

Let's make some Enochian and Gnostic Comparisons:

John Dee's diary - June 8, 1584:

-Jesus was not God.

-No prayer should ever be made to Jesus.

-There is no sin.

-Man's soul goes from one body to another child's

...quickening or animation [Reincarnation]

-“There are as many men and women as are now, have always been alive upon the Earth”

[Not everyone has a Soul...]

-The generation of mankind from Adam and Eve, is not a History, but allegory/analogy

-There's no Holy Ghost.

-The EE would not suffer him to pray to Jesus Christ... but would rebuke him, saying, that he robbed God of his honor

→ There are many assumptions in Enochian study.

Uriel, Gabriel, Raphael, Michael, were not Enochian Entities.

These were archangels, introducing and sometimes ‘narrating’ and overseeing the communications to obtain the Enochian Materials.

The EE are totally SEPARATE ENTITIES

Liber Mysteriorum Quintas:
“Raphael, or one like him...”

Dee was not even sure who he was addressing quite a few times.

Demons would channel through often.

One demon, Lundrumguffa, gave Dee the wrong Lamen the first time. The archangels stood idly by, and Dee had to banish them himself, even when one was going to attack his own daughter.

Another misconception is the “Enochian Alphabet”

The erroneously labeled “Enochian Alphabet”
Was correctly called-“Adamical” in Dee’s journal.

Speaking of which...

Let’s examine some Gnostic “similarities”...

-IAD IALDabaoth

-Iad Baltoh [God of Justice] - Ialdabaoth

There is also a Gnostic “God of Justice” ...read on...

-Luciftias [Brightness] - Lucifer [Light-Bearer]

-Christeos [Let There Be] - Christ [Logos]

-Babalon [Whore] - Babylon [Beast Riding Harlot]
 (“Book of Revelation”)

-Iehusoz [Mercy] - Iehus [Jesus]

Christeos [Let There Be] Iehusoz [Mercy]
Christ [Logos] Iehus [Jesus]

“Let there be LUX”

Christeos [Let There Be] Luciftias [Brightness]

-Madrid [Iniquity] - Madrid [Spain = Was At War With England]

So...there must also be an ‘England’ somewhere in the Enochian Language...

-Londoh [Kingdom] – London [England = Dee & Kelley]

As long as we are making Comparisons, let’s briefly examine what affect “Liber Juratus”...

a.k.a. = The Sworne Booke of Honorius/Liber Sacer/Sacratus/Consecratus/Grimoire of Honorius/Sloane MSS #313

...might have had:

-Dee took the Sigillum Dei Aemeth “prototype” from Liber Juratus

Compare:

-The 92 chapters of Liber Juratus & the

92 Governors of the 30 Aethyrs

[*Enochian Entities: "Ohorela Papers" (Paper #2 –Scarlet) By SaToGa]

*"...wherefore we called on generall counsell off all the masters in the which counsell of 811 masters..."* Liber Juratus

-Gematria:

IAO (Iota, Alpha, Omega)

IAO is 10 (Iota) + 1 (Alpha) + 800 (Omega) = 811

IAO = IAD = IA/Dabaoth

Iad.baloth

BalToh = Righteousness...A Strong Gnostic Suggestion

Psalms 82:1 describes a plurality of gods (elōhim), which an older version in the Septuagint calls the "assembly of the gods"

→The Gnostic Terminology of "Aeons" bear a number of similarities to Judaeo-Christian angels, including their roles as servants and emanations of God, and their existence as beings of light.

Aside from the Vedas- the religious texts which are 'richest' in Extra-Terrestrial flavor is the Gnostic texts...

Heptarchia means 7-fold Hierarchy...

Heptarchia Mystica is the Mystery of the 7 Powers

Venus is the #7

Venus plays a large role in the Enochian Materials

King Carmara is King of the Moon

Monday- [Matriarchal] Sabbath Day

King Carmara is also King of Venus

...King Baligon is the King of Venus, though

Prince Haganel is Prince of Venus and serves King Carmara

King Carmara is the only one that wears a 3-fold Crown as all the other Kings & Princes wear Golden Head Bands.

King Carmara and His Prince Haganel are special in the Heptarchia Mystica as Their names do not begin with the 'redundant' letter "B" as it is the case with all the other names.

Haganel and the other Princes shows the Heptagon Stellar, which Dee figures it should be molded from copper.

Now Dee gives Venus 'priority' over the other planets.

The 7 planets are ruled by one King/Prince.

Kelley received these names letter by letter from a cross that is made of 7 letter squares with 49 letters in each of them.

The 49 angelic names, arranged- Tabula Angelorum Bonorum 49 [7x7]

Sevens, Venus and 'the King of the Kings' Carmara of Venus.

Venus was Lucifer because Venus is Brightness...

Luciftias [Brightness] - Lucifer [Light-Bearer]

The First Table of Liber Loagaeth contains this:

Gàscampho:

A word “accidentally” revealed out loud by Kelley.

It was spoken by God to Lucifer:
“Why didst Thou so?”

The context of this Leaf reveals God condemning Lucifer, as there are also relevant parts that speak about everlasting fire, & starting over again.

Occult Students and Biblical Scholars all know that Satan is not Lucifer- it was an allegory of Nebuchadnezzar in Isaiah 14:12

So why is God calling Satan, Lucifer?

Are the Enochian Entities dropping hints, nonchalantly- to cause Kelley to “accidentally slip-up”...?

--I spoke about these “Accidental Slip-Ups with the EE” In My Other Books

We need to identify who this “God” is- then maybe we can figure out why Lucifer is in this most important First Leaf [given last by Galvah]

Up to this point-

Liber Loagaeth, for the most part- goes undeciphered.
We can only draw some conclusions

By reviewing Gnostic texts, we can piece together, what the EE have as an agenda with-Dee, Kelley, Politics and what Spiritual Doctrine the EE are pushing for as a One World Religion.

Recall this Doctrine was to be used as a “Flayle” [a whip], to usher in the ‘End of the World’ and ‘Begin a New Aeon’...

ON THE ORIGIN OF THE WORLD (II, 5 AND XIII, 2)

Introduced by

HANS-GEHBARD BETHGE

Translated by

HANS-GEHBARD BETHGE and ORVAL S. WINTERMUTE

The modern title On the Origin of the World is used to name a tractate which has been transmitted without a title but which discusses what this hypothetical title suggests. On the Origin of the World is a compendium of essential Gnostic ideas, a work written in the form of an apologetic essay offering to the public an explanation of the Gnostic world-view. Although the treatise does not represent any known Gnostic system, there are reminiscences of Sethian, Valentinian, and Manichaean themes; the author obviously draws upon a variety of traditions and sources. For example, some sort of connection with the Hypostasis of the Archons (II, 4) is clear, though the precise nature of this relationship is uncertain. On the Origin of the World was probably composed in Alexandria at the end of the third century C.E. or the beginning of the fourth. The place and date of composition are suggested by the juxtaposition of various sorts of materials: the varieties of Jewish thought, Manichaean motifs, Christian ideas, Greek or Hellenistic philosophical and mythological concepts, magical and astrological themes, and elements of Egyptian lore together suggest that Alexandria may have been the place where the original Greek text was composed.

The translation that follows is based on the text of Codex II. The fragmentary parallel texts from Codex XIII and from the British Library may also be consulted.

On the Origin of the World

["The Untitled Text"]

Translated by Hans-Gebhard Bethge and Bentley Layton

Seeing that everybody, gods of the world and mankind, says that nothing existed prior to chaos, I, in distinction to them, shall demonstrate that they are all mistaken, because they are not acquainted with the origin of chaos, nor with its root. Here is the demonstration. How well it suits all men, on the subject of chaos, to say that it is a kind of darkness! But in fact it comes from a shadow, which has been called by the name 'darkness'. And the shadow comes from a product that has existed since the beginning. It is, moreover, clear that it existed before chaos came into being, and that the latter is posterior to the first product. Let us therefore concern ourselves with the facts of the matter; and furthermore, with the first product, from which chaos was projected. And in this way the truth will be clearly demonstrated.

After the natural structure of the immortal beings had completely developed out of the infinite, a likeness then emanated from Pistis [Faith]; it is called Sophia [Wisdom]. It exercised volition and became a product resembling the primeval light. And immediately her will manifested itself as a likeness of heaven, having an unimaginable magnitude; it was between the immortal beings and those things that came into being after them, like [...]: she [Sophia] functioned as a veil dividing mankind from the things above. Now the eternal realm [aeon] of truth has no shadow outside it, for the limitless light is everywhere within it. But its exterior is shadow, which has been called by the name 'darkness'. From it, there appeared a force, presiding over the darkness. And the forces that came into being subsequent to them called the shadow 'the limitless chaos'. From it, every kind of divinity sprouted up [...] together with the entire place, so that also, shadow is posterior to the first product. It was <in> the abyss that it [shadow] appeared, deriving from the aforementioned Pistis.

Then shadow perceived there was something mightier than it, and felt envy; and when it had become pregnant of its own accord, suddenly it engendered jealousy. Since that day, the principle of jealousy amongst all the eternal realms and their worlds has been apparent. Now as for that jealousy, it was found to be an abortion without any spirit in it. Like a shadow, it came into existence in a vast watery substance. Then the bile that had come into being out of the shadow was thrown into a part of chaos. Since that day, a watery substance has been apparent. And what sank within it flowed away, being visible in chaos: as with a woman giving birth to a child - all her superfluities flow out; just so, matter came into being out of shadow, and was projected apart. And it did not depart from chaos; rather, matter was in chaos, being in a part of it.

And when these things had come to pass, then Pistis came and appeared over the matter of chaos, which had been expelled like an aborted fetus - since there was no spirit in it. For all of it [chaos] was limitless darkness and bottomless water. Now when Pistis saw what had resulted from her defect, she became disturbed. And the disturbance appeared, as a fearful product; it rushed to her in the chaos. She turned to it and blew into its face in the abyss, which is below all the heavens.

And when Pistis Sophia desired to cause the thing that had no spirit to be formed into a likeness and to rule over matter and over all her forces, there appeared for the first time a ruler, out of the waters, lion-like in appearance, androgynous, having great authority within him, and ignorant of whence he had come into being.

Now when Pistis Sophia saw him moving about in the depth of the waters, she said to him, "Child, pass through to here," whose equivalent is 'yalda baoth'.

Since that day, there appeared the principle of verbal expression, which reached the gods and the angels and mankind. And what came into being as a result of verbal expression, the gods and the angels and mankind finished. Now as for the ruler Yaltabaoth, he is ignorant of the force of Pistis: he did not see her face, rather he saw in the water the likeness that spoke with him.

And because of that voice, he called himself 'Yaldabaoth'.

But 'Ariael' is what the perfect call him, for he was like a lion.

Now when he had come to have authority over matter, Pistis Sophia withdrew up to her light.

When the ruler saw his magnitude - and it was only himself that he saw: he saw nothing else, except for water and darkness - then he supposed that it was he alone who existed.

His [...] was completed by verbal expression: it appeared as a spirit moving to and fro upon the waters. And when that spirit appeared, the ruler set apart the watery substance. And what was dry was divided into another place. And from matter, he made for himself an abode, and he called it 'heaven'. And from matter, the ruler made a footstool, and he called it 'earth'.

Next, the ruler had a thought - consistent with his nature - and by means of verbal expression he created an androgyne. He opened his mouth and cooed to him. When his eyes had been opened, he looked at his father, and he said to him, "Eee!" Then his father called him Eee-a-o ['Yao']. Next he created the second son. He cooed to him. And he opened his eyes and said to his father, "Eh!" His father called him 'Eloai'. Next, he created the third son. He cooed to him. And he opened his eyes and said to his father, "Asss!" His father called him 'Astaphaios'. These are the three sons of their father.

Seven appeared in chaos, androgynous. They have their masculine names and their feminine names. The feminine name is Pronoia [Forethought] Sambathas, which is 'week'.

And his son is called Yao: his feminine name is Lordship.

Sabaoth: his feminine name is Deity.

Adonaios: his feminine name is Kingship.

Elaio: his feminine name is Jealousy.

Oraio: his feminine name is Wealth.

And Astaphaios: his feminine name is Sophia [Wisdom].

These are the seven forces of the seven heavens of chaos. And they were born androgynous, consistent with the immortal pattern that existed before them, according to the wish of Pistis: so that the likeness of what had existed since the beginning might reign to the end. You will find the effect of these names and the force of the male entities in the Archangelic [Book] of the Prophet Moses, and the names of the female entities in the first Book of Noraia.

Now the prime parent Yaldabaoth, since he possessed great authorities, created heavens for each of his offspring through verbal expression - created them beautiful, as dwelling places - and in each heaven he created great glories, seven times excellent. Thrones and mansions and temples, and also chariots and virgin spirits up to an invisible one and their glories, each one has these in his heaven; mighty armies of gods and lords and angels and archangels - countless myriads - so that they might serve. The account of these matters you will find in a precise manner in the first Account of Oraia. And they were completed from this heaven to as far up as the sixth heaven, namely that of Sophia. The heaven and his earth were destroyed by the troublemaker that was below them all. And the six heavens shook violently; for the forces of chaos knew who it was that had destroyed the heaven that was below them. And when Pistis knew about the breakage resulting from the disturbance, she sent forth her breath and bound him and cast him down into Tartaros. Since that day, the heaven, along with its earth, has consolidated itself through Sophia the daughter of Yaldabaoth, she who is below them all.

Now when the heavens had consolidated themselves along with their forces and all their administration, the prime parent became insolent. And he was honored by all the army of angels. And all the gods and their angels gave blessing and honor to him. And for his part, he was delighted and continually boasted, saying to them, "I have no need of anyone." He said, "It is I who am God, and there is no other one that exists apart from me." And when he said this, he sinned against all the immortal beings who give answer. And they laid it to his charge.

Then when Pistis saw the impiety of the chief ruler, she was filled with anger. She was invisible.

She said, "You are mistaken, Samael," [that is, "blind god"]. "There is an immortal man of light who has been in existence before you, and who will appear among your modelled forms; he will trample you to scorn, just as potter's clay is pounded. And you will descend to your mother, the abyss, along with those that belong to you. For at the consummation of your [pl.] works, the entire defect that has become visible out of the truth will be abolished, and it will cease to be, and will be like what has never been." Saying this, Pistis revealed her likeness of her greatness in the waters. And so doing, she withdrew up to her light.

Now when Sabaoth, the son of Yaldabaoth, heard the voice of Pistis, he sang praises to her, and he condemned the father [...] at the word of Pistis; and he praised her because she had instructed them about the immortal man and his light.

Then Pistis Sophia stretched out her finger and poured upon him some light from her light, to be a condemnation of his father.

Then when Sabaoth was illumined, he received great authority against all the forces of chaos. Since that day he has been called "Lord of the Forces".

He hated his father, the darkness, and his mother, the abyss, and loathed his sister, the thought of the prime parent, which moved to and fro upon the waters.

And because of his light, all the authorities of chaos were jealous of him. And when they had become disturbed, they made a great war in the seven heavens. Then when Pistis Sophia had seen the war, she dispatched seven archangels to Sabaoth from her light. They snatched him up to the seventh heaven. They stood before him as attendants. Furthermore, she sent him three more archangels, and established the kingdom for him over everyone, so that he might dwell above the twelve gods of chaos.

Now when Sabaoth had taken up the place of repose in return for his repentance, Pistis [Galvah] also gave him her daughter Zoe [Life] [Madimi], together with great authority, so that she might instruct him about all things that exist in the eighth heaven. And as he had authority, he made himself first of all a mansion. It is huge, magnificent, seven times as great as all those that exist in the seven heavens.

And before his mansion he created a throne, which was huge and was upon a four-faced chariot called "Cherubin". Now the Cherubin has eight shapes per each of the four corners, lion forms and calf forms and human forms and eagle forms, [Magickal Wards] so that all the forms amount to sixty-four forms - and seven archangels that stand before it; he is the eighth, and has authority. All the forms amount to seventy-two.

Furthermore, from this chariot the seventy-two gods took shape; they took shape so that they might rule over the seventy-two languages of the peoples. And by that throne he created other, serpent-like angels, called "Seraphin", which praise him at all times.

Thereafter he created a congregation of angels, thousands and myriads, numberless, which resembled the congregation in the eighth heaven; and a firstborn called

Israel - which is, "the man that sees God"; and another being, called Jesus Christ, who resembles the savior above in the eighth heaven, and who sits at his right upon a revered throne. And at his left, there sits the virgin of the holy spirit, upon a throne and glorifying him. And the seven virgins stand before her, [...] possessing thirty harps, and psalteries and trumpets, glorifying him. And all the armies of the angels glorify him, and they bless him. Now where he sits is upon a throne of light <within a> great cloud that covers him. And there was no one with him in the cloud except Sophia <the daughter of> Pistis, instructing him about all the things that exist in the eighth heaven, so that the likenesses of those things might be created, in order that his reign might endure until the consummation of the heavens of chaos and their forces.

Now Pistis Sophia set him apart from the darkness and summoned him to her right, and the prime parent she put at her left. Since that day, right has been called justice, and left called wickedness. Now because of this, they all received a realm in the congregation of justice and wickedness, [...] stand [...] upon a creature [...] all.

Thus, when the prime parent of chaos saw his son Sabaoth and the glory that he was in, and perceived that he was greatest of all the authorities of chaos, he envied him. And having become wrathful, he engendered Death out of his death: and he [viz., Death] was established over the sixth heaven, <for> Sabaoth had been snatched up from there. And thus the number of the six authorities of chaos was achieved. Then Death, being androgynous, mingled with his [own] nature and begot seven androgynous offspring. These are the names of the male ones: Jealousy, Wrath, Tears, Sighing, Suffering, Lamentation, Bitter Weeping. And these are the names of the female ones: Wrath, Pain, Lust, Sighing, Curse, Bitterness, Quarrelsomeness. They had intercourse with one another, and each one begot seven, so that they amount to forty-nine androgynous demons. Their names and their effects you will find in the Book of Solomon.

And in the presence of these, Zoe, who was with Sabaoth, created seven good androgynous forces.

These are the names of the male ones: the Unenvious, the Blessed, the Joyful, the True, the Unbegrudging, the Beloved, the Trustworthy. Also, as regards the female ones, these are their names: Peace, Gladness, Rejoicing, Blessedness, Truth, Love, Faith [Pistis]. And from these are many good and innocent spirits. Their influences and their effects you will find in the Configurations of the Fate of Heaven That Is Beneath the Twelve. And having seen the likeness of Pistis in the waters, the prime parent grieved very much, especially when he heard her voice, like the first voice that had called to him out of the waters. And when he knew that it was she who had given a name to him, he sighed. He was ashamed on account of his transgression. And when he had come to know in truth that an immortal man of light had been existing before him, he was greatly disturbed; for he had previously said to all the gods and their angels, "It is I who am god. No other one exists apart from me." For he had been afraid they might know that another had been in existence before him, and might condemn him. But he, being devoid of understanding, scoffed at the condemnation and acted recklessly. He said, "If anything has existed before me, let it appear, so that we may see its light."

And immediately, behold! Light came out of the eighth heaven above and passed through all of the heavens of the earth. When the prime parent saw that the light was beautiful as it radiated, he was amazed. And he was greatly ashamed. As that light appeared, a human likeness appeared within it, very wonderful. And no one saw it except for the prime parent and Pronoia, who was with him. Yet its light appeared to all the forces of the heavens. Because of this they were all troubled by it.

Then when Pronoia [Babalon] saw that emissary, she became enamored of him. But he hated her because she was on the darkness. But she desired to embrace him, and she was not able to. When she was unable to assuage her love, she poured out her light upon the earth. Since that day, that emissary has been called "Adam of Light," whose rendering is "the luminous man of blood," and the earth spread over him, holy Adaman, whose rendering is "the Holy Land of Adamantine." Since that day, all the authorities have honored the blood of the virgin. And the earth was purified on account of the blood of the virgin. But most of all, the water was purified through the likeness of Pistis Sophia, who had appeared to the prime parent in the waters. Justly, then, it has been said: "through the waters." The holy water, since it vivifies the all, purifies it.

Out of that first blood Eros appeared, being androgynous. His masculinity is Himireris, being fire from the light. His femininity that is with him - a soul of blood - is from the stuff of Pronoia. He is very lovely in his beauty, having a charm beyond all the creatures of chaos. Then all the gods and their angels, when they beheld Eros, became enamored of him. And appearing in all of them, he set them afire: just as from a single lamp many lamps are lit, and one and the same light is there, but the lamp is not diminished. And in this way, Eros became dispersed in all the created beings of chaos, and was not diminished. Just as from the midpoint of light and darkness Eros appeared and at the midpoint of the angels and mankind the sexual union of Eros was consummated, so out of the earth the primal pleasure blossomed. The woman followed earth. And marriage followed woman. Birth followed marriage. Dissolution followed birth.

After that Eros, the grapevine sprouted up out of that blood, which had been shed over the earth. Because of this, those who drink of it conceive the desire of sexual union. After the grapevine, a fig tree and a pomegranate tree sprouted up from the earth, together with the rest of the trees, all species, having with them their seed from the seed of the authorities and their angels.

Then Justice [GOD OF JUSTICE - Iad Baltoh] created Paradise, being beautiful and being outside the orbit of the moon and the orbit of the sun in the Land of Wantonness, in the East in the midst of the stones. And desire is in the midst of the beautiful, appetizing trees. And the tree of eternal life is as it appeared by God's will, to the north of Paradise, so that it might make eternal the souls of the pure, who shall come forth from the modelled forms of poverty at the consummation of the age.

Now the color of the tree of life is like the sun.

GOD OF JUSTICE - Iad Baltoh creates the Garden of Eden and the Tree of Life

And its branches are beautiful. Its leaves are like those of the cypress. Its fruit is like a bunch of grapes when it is white. Its height goes as far as heaven. And next to it [is] the tree of knowledge [gnosis], having the strength of God. Its glory is like the moon when fully radiant. And its branches are beautiful. Its leaves are like fig leaves. Its fruit is like a good appetizing date. And this tree is to the north of Paradise, so that it might arouse the souls from the torpor of the demons, in order that they might approach the tree of life and eat of its fruit, and so condemn the authorities and their angels. The effect of this tree is described in the Sacred Book, to wit: "It is you who are the tree of knowledge, which is in Paradise, from which the first man ate and which opened his mind; and he loved his female counterpart and condemned the other, alien likenesses and loathed them." Now after it, the olive tree sprouted up, which was to purify the kings and the high priests of righteousness, who were to appear in the last days, since the olive tree appeared out of the light of the first Adam for the sake of the unguent that they were to receive.

And the first soul [psyche] loved Eros, who was with her, and poured her blood upon him and upon the earth. And out of that blood the rose first sprouted up, out of the earth, out of the thorn bush, to be a source of joy for the light that was to appear in the bush.

Moreover, after this the beautiful, good-smelling flowers sprouted up from the earth, different kinds, from every single virgin of the daughters of Pronoia. And they, when they had become enamored of Eros, poured out their blood upon him and upon the earth. After these, every plant sprouted up from the earth, different kinds, containing the seed of the authorities and their angels. After these, the authorities created out of the waters all species of beast, and the reptiles and birds - different kinds - containing the seed of the authorities and their angels.

But before all these, when he had appeared on the first the first day, he remained upon the earth, something like two days, and left the lower Pronoia in heaven, and ascended towards his light. And immediately darkness covered all the universe.

Now when she wished, the Sophia who was in the lower heaven received authority from Pistis, and fashioned great luminous bodies and all the stars. And she put them in the sky to shine upon the earth and to render temporal signs and seasons and years and months and days and nights and moments and so forth. And in this way the entire region upon the sky was adorned.

Now when Adam of Light conceived the wish to enter his light - i.e., the eighth heaven - he was unable to do so because of the poverty that had mingled with his light. Then he created for himself a vast eternal realm. And within that eternal realm he created six eternal realms and their adornments, six in number, that were seven times better than the heavens of chaos and their adornments. Now all these eternal realms and their adornments exist within the infinity that is between the eighth heaven and the chaos below it, being counted with the universe that belongs to poverty. If you want to know the arrangement of these, you will find it written in the Seventh Universe of the Prophet Hieralias.

And before Adam of Light had withdrawn in the chaos, the authorities saw him and laughed at the prime parent because he had lied when he said, "It is I who am God. No one exists before me." When they came to him, they said, "Is this not the god who ruined our work?" He answered and said, "Yes. If you do not want him to be able to ruin our work, come let us create a man out of earth, according to the image of our body and according to the likeness of this being, to serve us; so that when he sees his likeness, he might become enamored of it. No longer will he ruin our work; rather, we shall make those who are born out of the light our servants for all the duration of this eternal realm." Now all of this came to pass according to the forethought of Pistis, in order that man should appear after his likeness, and should condemn them because of their modelled form. And their modelled form became an enclosure of the light.

Then the authorities received the knowledge [gnosis] necessary to create man. Sophia Zoe - she who is with Sabaoth - had anticipated them. And she laughed at their decision. For they are blind: against their own interests they ignorantly created him. And they do not realize what they are about to do. The reason she anticipated them and made her own man first, was in order that he might instruct their modelled form how to despise them, and thus to escape from them.

Now the production of the instructor came about as follows. When Sophia let fall a droplet of light, it flowed onto the water, and immediately a human being appeared, being androgynous. That droplet she molded first as a female body. Afterwards, using the body she molded it in the likeness of the mother, which had appeared. And he finished it in twelve months. An androgynous human being was produced, whom the Greeks call Hermaphrodites; and whose mother the Hebrews call Eve of Life [Zoe], namely, the female instructor of life. Her offspring is the creature that is lord. Afterwards, the authorities called it "Beast", so that it might lead astray their modelled creatures. The interpretation of "the beast" is "the instructor". For it was found to be the wisest of all beings.

Now, Eve is the first virgin, the one who without a husband bore her first offspring. It is she who served as her own midwife. For this reason she is held to have said:

It is I who am the part of my mother; and it is I who am the mother.

It is I who am the wife; it is I who am the virgin.

It is I who am pregnant; it is I who am the midwife.
It is I who am the one that comforts pains of travail.
It is my husband who bore me; and it is I who am his mother.
And it is he who is my father and my lord.
It is he who is my force; What he desires, he says with reason.
I am in the process of becoming; yet I have borne a man as lord.
Now these through the will <...> The souls that were going to enter the modelled forms of the authorities were manifested to Sabaoth and his Christ.
And regarding these, the holy voice said, "Multiply and improve! Be lord over all creatures." And it is they who were taken captive, according to their destinies, by the prime parent. And thus they were shut into the prisons of the modelled forms until the consummation of the age.
And at that time, the prime parent then rendered an opinion concerning man to those who were with him. Then each of them cast his sperm into the midst of the navel of the earth. Since that day, the seven rulers have fashioned man with his body resembling their body, but his likeness resembling the man that had appeared to them. His modelling took place by parts, one at a time. And their leader fashioned the brain and the nervous system. Afterwards, he appeared as prior to him. He became a soul-endowed man. And he was called Adam, that is, "father", according to the name of the one that existed before him.
And when they had finished Adam, he abandoned him as an inanimate vessel, since he had taken form like an abortion, in that no spirit was in him. Regarding this thing, when the chief ruler remembered the saying of Pistis, he was afraid lest the true man enter his modelled form and become its lord. For this reason he left his modelled form forty days without soul, and he withdrew and abandoned it. Now on the fortieth day, Sophia Zoe sent her breath into Adam, who had no soul. He began to move upon the ground.
And he could not stand up.
Then, when the seven rulers came, they saw him and were greatly disturbed. They went up to him and seized him. And he [viz., the chief ruler] said to the breath within him, "Who are you? And whence did you come hither?" It answered and said, "I have come from the force of the man for the destruction of your work." When they heard, they glorified him, since he gave them respite from the fear and the anxiety in which they found themselves. Then they called that day "Rest", in as much as they had rested from toil. And when they saw that Adam could stand up, they were glad, and they took him and put him in Paradise. And they withdrew up to their heavens.

After the day of rest, Sophia sent her daughter Zoe, being called Eve, as an instructor, in order that she might make Adam, who had no soul, arise, so that those whom he should engender might become containers of light.

When Eve saw her male counterpart prostrate, she had pity upon him, and she said, "Adam! Become alive! Arise upon the earth!" Immediately her word became accomplished fact. For Adam, having arisen, suddenly opened his eyes. When he saw her, he said, "You shall be called 'Mother of the Living'. For it is you who have given me life."

Then the authorities were informed that their modelled form was alive and had arisen, and they were greatly troubled. They sent seven archangels to see what had happened. They came to Adam. When they saw Eve talking to him, they said to one another, "What sort of thing is this luminous woman? For she resembles that likeness which appeared to us in the light. Now come, let us lay hold of her and cast her seed into her, so that when she becomes soiled she may not be able to ascend into her light. Rather, those whom she bears will be under our charge. But let us not tell Adam, for he is not one of us. Rather let us bring a deep sleep over him. And let us instruct him in his sleep to the effect that she came from his rib, in order that his wife may obey, and he may be lord over her."

Then Eve, being a force, laughed at their decision. She put mist into their eyes and secretly left her likeness with Adam. She entered the tree of knowledge and remained there. And they pursued her, and she revealed to them that she had gone into the tree and become a tree. Then, entering a great state of fear, the blind creatures fled.

Afterwards, when they had recovered from the daze, they came to Adam; and seeing the likeness of this woman with him, they were greatly disturbed, thinking it was she that was the true Eve. And they acted rashly; they came up to her and seized her and cast their seed upon her. They did so wickedly, defiling not only in natural ways but also in foul ways, defiling first the seal of her voice - that had spoken with them, saying, "What is it that exists before you?" - intending to defile those who might say at the consummation [of the age] that they had been born of the true man through verbal expression. And they erred, not knowing that it was their own body that they had defiled: it was the likeness that the authorities and their angels defiled in every way.

First she was pregnant with Abel, by the first ruler. And it was by the seven authorities and their angels that she bore the other offspring. And all this came to pass according to the forethought of the prime parent, so that the first mother might bear within her every seed, being mixed and being fitted to the fate of the universe and its configurations, and to Justice. A prearranged plan came into effect regarding Eve, so that the modelled forms of the authorities might become enclosures of the light, whereupon it would condemn them through their modelled forms.

Now the first Adam, [Adam] of Light, is spirit-endowed and appeared on the first day. The second Adam is soul-endowed and appeared on the sixth day, which is called Aphrodite. The third Adam is a creature of the earth, that is, the man of the law, and he appeared on the eighth day [...] the tranquility of poverty, which is called "The Day of the Sun" [Sunday]. And the progeny of the earthly Adam became numerous and was completed, and produced within itself every kind of scientific information of the soul-endowed Adam.

But all were in ignorance.

Next, let me say that once the rulers had seen him and the female creature who was with him erring ignorantly like beasts, they were very glad. When they learned that the immortal man was not going to neglect them, rather that they would even have to fear the female creature that had turned into a tree, they were disturbed, and said, "Perhaps this is the true man - this being who has brought a fog upon us and has taught us that she who was soiled is like him - and so we shall be conquered!"

Then the seven of them together laid plans. They came up to Adam and Eve timidly: they said to him, "The fruit of all the trees created for you in Paradise shall be eaten; but as for the tree of knowledge, control yourselves and do not eat from it. If you eat, you will die." Having imparted great fear to them, they withdrew up to their authorities.

Then came the wisest of all creatures, who was called Beast.
[Serpent] And when he saw the likeness of their mother Eve he said to her, "What did God say to you? Was it 'Do not eat from the tree of knowledge'?" She said, "He said not only, 'Do not eat from it', but, 'Do not touch it, lest you die.'"
He said to her, "Do not be afraid. In death you shall not die. For he knows that when you eat from it, your intellect will become sober and you will come to be like gods, recognizing the difference that obtains between evil men and good ones. Indeed, it was in jealousy that he said this to you, so that you would not eat from it."
Now Eve had confidence in the words of the instructor. She gazed at the tree and saw that it was beautiful and appetizing, and liked it; she took some of its fruit and ate it; and she gave some also to her husband, and he too ate it. Then their intellect became open. For when they had eaten, the light of knowledge had shone upon them. When they clothed themselves with shame, they knew that they were naked of knowledge. When they became sober, they saw that they were naked and became enamored of one another. When they saw that the ones who had modelled them had the form of beasts, they loathed them: they were very aware.

Then when the rulers knew that they had broken their commandments, they entered Paradise and came to Adam and Eve with earthquake and great threatening, to see the effect of the aid. Then Adam and Eve trembled greatly and hid under the trees in Paradise. Then the rulers did not know where they were and said, "Adam, where are you?" He said, "I am here, for through fear of you I hid, being ashamed." And they said to him ignorantly, "Who told you about the shame with which you clothed yourself? - unless you have eaten from that tree!" He said, "The woman whom you gave me - it is she that gave to me and I ate." Then they said to the latter, "What is this that you have done?" She answered and said, "It is the instructor who urged me on, and I ate."

Then the rulers came up to the instructor. Their eyes became misty because of him, and they could not do anything to him [Serpent]. They cursed him, since they were powerless. Afterwards, they came up to the woman and cursed her and her offspring. After the woman, they cursed Adam, and the land because of him, and the crops; and all things they had created, they cursed. They have no blessing. Good cannot result from evil.

THIS IS VERY IMPORTANT!
THE SERPENT OF EDEN [who was called Beast], WHO 'BEGUILES' EVE TO EAT THE FRUIT WAS CONSIDERED AN INSTRUCTOR- THE WISEST ONE!
THE DEMIURGE AND HIS ILK WERE POWERLESS
OVER THE SERPENT AND COULD NOT CURSE THIS INSTRUCTOR.

From that day, the authorities knew that truly there was something mightier than they: they recognized only that their commandments had not been kept. Great jealousy was brought into the world solely because of the immortal man. Now when the rulers saw that their Adam had entered into an alien state of knowledge, they desired to test him, and they gathered together all the domestic animals and the wild beasts of the earth and the birds of heaven and brought them to Adam to see what he would call them. When he saw them, he gave names to their creatures.

They became troubled because Adam had recovered from all the trials. They assembled and laid plans, and they said, "Behold Adam! He has come to be like one of us, so that he knows the difference between the light and the darkness. Now perhaps he will be deceived, as in the case of the Tree of Knowledge, and also will come to the Tree of Life and eat from it, and become immortal, and become lord, and despise us and disdain us and all our glory! Then he will denounce us along with our universe. Come, let us expel him from Paradise, down to the land from which he was taken, so that henceforth he might not be able to recognize anything better than we can." And so they expelled Adam from Paradise, along with his wife.

And this deed that they had done was not enough for them. Rather, they were afraid. They went in to the Tree of Life and surrounded it with great fearful things, fiery living creatures called "Cheroubin", and they put a flaming sword in their midst, fearfully twirling at all times, so that no earthly being might ever enter that place.

Thereupon, since the rulers were envious of Adam they wanted to diminish their [viz., Adam's and Eve's] lifespans. They could not [, however,] because of fate, which had been fixed since the beginning. For to each had been allotted a lifespan of 1,000 years, according to the course of the luminous bodies. But although the rulers could not do this, each of the evildoers took away ten years. And all this lifespan [which remained] amounted to 930 years: and these are in pain and weakness and evil distraction. And so life has turned out to be, from that day until the consummation of the age.

Thus when Sophia Zoe saw that the rulers of the darkness had laid a curse upon her counterparts, she was indignant. And coming out of the first heaven with full power, she chased those rulers out of their heavens, and cast them down into the sinful world, so that there they should dwell, in the form of evil spirits [demons] upon the earth.

[...], so that in their world it might pass the thousand years in Paradise - a soul-endowed living creature called "phoenix". It kills itself and brings itself to life as a witness to the judgment against them, for they did wrong to Adam and his generation, unto the consummation of the age. There are [...] three men, and also his posterities, unto the consummation of the world: the spirit-endowed of eternity, and the soul-endowed, and the earthly. Likewise, the three phoenixes <in> Paradise - the first is immortal; the second lives 1,000 years; as for the third, it is written in the Sacred Book that it is consumed. So, too, there are three baptisms - the first is the spiritual, the second is by fire, the third is by water. Just as the phoenix appears as a witness concerning the angels, so the case of the water hydri in Egypt, which has been a witness to those going down into the baptism of a true man. The two bulls in Egypt possess a mystery, the sun and the moon, being a witness to Sabaoth: namely, that over them Sophia received the universe; from the day that she made the sun and the moon, she put a seal upon her heaven, unto eternity.

And the worm that has been born out of the phoenix is a human being as well. It is written [Ps 91:13 LXX] concerning it, "the just man will blossom like a phoenix". And the phoenix first appears in a living state, and dies, and rises again, being a sign of what has become apparent at the consummation of the age. It was only in Egypt that these great signs appeared - nowhere else - as an indication that it is like God's Paradise.

Let us return to the aforementioned rulers, so that we may offer some explanation of them. Now, when the seven rulers were cast down from their heavens onto the earth, they made for themselves angels, numerous, demonic, to serve them.

And the latter instructed mankind in many kinds of error and magic and potions and worship of idols and spilling of blood and altars and temples and sacrifices and libations to all the spirits of the earth, having their coworker fate, who came into existence by the concord between the gods of injustice and justice.

[gods of injustice and justice!]

And thus when the world had come into being, it distractedly erred at all times. For all men upon earth worshiped the spirits [demons] from the creation to the consummation

- both the angels of righteousness and the men of unrighteousness. Thus did the world come to exist in distraction, in ignorance, and in a stupor.

They all erred, until the appearance of the true man.

Let this suffice so far as the matter goes. Now we shall proceed to consideration of our world, so that we may accurately finish the description of its structure and management. Then it will become obvious how belief in the unseen realm, which has been apparent from creation down to the consummation of the age, was discovered.

I come, therefore, to the main points regarding the immortal man: I shall speak of all the beings that belong to him, explaining how they happen to be here.

When a multitude of human beings had come into existence, through the parentage of the Adam who had been fashioned, and out of matter, and when the world had already become full, the rulers were master over it - that is, they kept it restrained by ignorance. For what reason? For the following: since the immortal father knows that a deficiency of truth came into being amongst the eternal realms and their universe, when he wished to bring to naught the rulers of perdition through the creatures they had modelled, he sent your likenesses down into the world of perdition, namely, the blessed little innocent spirits. They are not alien to knowledge. For all knowledge is vested in one angel who appeared before them; he is not without power in the company of the father. And <he> gave them knowledge. Whenever they appear in the world of perdition, immediately and first of all they reveal the pattern of imperishability as a condemnation of the rulers and their forces. Thus when the blessed beings appeared in forms modelled by authorities, they were envied. And out of envy the authorities mixed their seed with them, in hopes of polluting them. They could not. Then when the blessed beings appeared in luminous form, they appeared in various ways. And each one of them, starting out in his land, revealed his [kind of] knowledge to the visible church constituted of the modelled forms of perdition. It [viz., the church] was found to contain all kinds of seed, because of the seed of the authorities that had mixed with it.

Then the Savior created [...] of them all - and the spirits of these are manifestly superior, being blessed and varying in election - and also [he created] many other beings, which have no king and are superior to everyone that was before them.

Consequently, four races exist. There are three that belong to the kings of the eighth heaven. But the fourth race is kingless and perfect, being the highest of all. For these shall enter the holy place of their father. And they will gain rest in repose and eternal, unspeakable glory and unending joy. Moreover, they are kings within the mortal domain, in that they are immortal. They will condemn the gods of chaos and their forces.

Now the Word that is superior to all beings was sent for this purpose alone: that he might proclaim the unknown. He said, "There is nothing hidden that is not apparent, and what has not been recognized will be recognized." And these were sent to make known what is hidden, and the seven authorities of chaos and their impiety. And thus they were condemned to death.

So when all the perfect appeared in the forms modelled by the rulers, and when they revealed the incomparable truth, they put to shame all the wisdom of the gods. And their fate was found to be a condemnation. And their force dried up. Their lordship was dissolved. Their forethought became emptiness, along with their glory.

Before the consummation of the age, the whole place will shake with great thundering. Then the rulers will be sad, [...] their death. The angels will mourn for their mankind, and the demons will weep over their seasons, and their mankind will wail and scream at their death. Then the age will begin, and they will be disturbed. Their kings will be intoxicated with the fiery sword, and they will wage war against one another, so that the earth is intoxicated with bloodshed. And the seas will be disturbed by those wars. Then the sun will become dark, and the moon will cause its light to cease. The stars of the sky will cancel their circuits. And a great clap of thunder will come out of a great force that is above all the forces of chaos, where the firmament of the woman is situated. Having created the first product, she will put away the wise fire of intelligence and clothe herself with witless wrath. Then she will pursue the gods of chaos, whom she created along with the prime parent. She will cast them down into the abyss. They will be obliterated because of their wickedness. For they will come to be like volcanoes and consume one another until they perish at the hand of the prime parent. When he has destroyed them, he will turn against himself and destroy himself until he ceases to exist.

And their heavens will fall one upon the next and their forces will be consumed by fire. Their eternal realms, too, will be overturned. And his heaven will fall and break in two. His [...] will fall down upon the [...] support them; they will fall into the abyss, and the abyss will be overturned. The light will [...] the darkness and obliterate it: it will be like something that has never been. And the product to which the darkness had been posterior will dissolve. And the deficiency will be plucked out by the root [and thrown] down into the darkness. And the light will withdraw up to its root. And the glory of the unbegotten will appear. And it will fill all the eternal realm.

When the prophecy and the account of those that are king becomes known and is fulfilled by those who are called perfect, those who - in contrast - have not become perfect in the unbegotten father will receive their glory in their realms and in the kingdoms of the immortals: but they will never enter the kingless realm. For everyone must go to the place from which he has come. Indeed, by his acts and his knowledge, each person will make his [own] nature known.

Demiurge:

The Ophites & Sethians taught the creation of Earth is by 7 Archons..& their leader is "Yaldabaoth"
[also known as "Yaltabaoth" or "Ialdabaoth"]

Apocryphon of John [120-180 AD] - the Demiurge arrogantly declares that he has made the world by himself:

Now the archon (ruler) who is weak has three names.
The first name is Yaltabaoth, the second is Saklas ("fool"), and the third is Samael. And he is impious in his arrogance which is in him.

For he said, "I am God and there is no other God beside me," for he is ignorant of his strength, the place from which he had come.

He is Demiurge and maker of man, but as a ray of light from above enters the body of man and gives him a soul, Yaldabaoth is filled with envy; he tries to limit man's knowledge by forbidding him the fruit of knowledge in paradise.

The Demiurge, fearing lest Jesus, whom he had intended as his Messiah, should spread the knowledge of the Supreme God, had him crucified by the Romans.

At the consummation of all things all light will return to the Pleroma.
But Yaldabaoth, the Demiurge, with the material world, will be cast into the lower depths.

In Pistis Sophia Yaldabaoth has already sunk from his high estate and resides in Chaos, where, with his forty-nine demons, he tortures wicked souls in boiling rivers of pitch, and with other punishments.
He is an archon with the face of a lion, half flame and half darkness.
Yaldabaoth is frequently called "the Lion-faced", leontoeides, with the body of a serpent. We are told also that the Demiurge is of a fiery nature, the words of Moses being applied to him, "the Lord our God is a burning and consuming fire," a text used also by Simon.

Under the name of Nebro (rebel), Yaldabaoth is called an angel in the apocryphal Gospel of Judas. He is first mentioned in "The Cosmos, Chaos, and the Underworld" as one of the 12 angels to come 'into being to rule over chaos and the underworld'.

He comes from heaven, his "face flashed with fire and whose appearance was defiled with blood".

Nebro creates six angels in addition to the angel Saklas to be his assistants. These six in turn create another twelve angels "with each one receiving a portion in the heavens."

According to Marcion, the title God was given to the Demiurge, who was to be sharply distinguished from the higher Good God.

The former was díkaíos, severely just, the latter agathós, or loving-kind; the former was the "god of this world" (2 Corinthians 4:4), the God of the Old Testament, the latter the true God of the New Testament. Christ, though in reality the Son of the Good God, pretended to be the Messiah of the Demiurge, the better to spread the truth concerning His heavenly Father.

The true believer in Christ entered into God's kingdom, the unbeliever remained forever the slave of the Demiurge.

Aeon:

In many Gnostic systems, the Aeon are the various emanations of the superior God & often in male-female pairings called syzygies.

Some identify their number as being thirty. The aeons as a totality constitute the pleroma, the "region of light". The lowest regions of the pleroma are closest to the darkness; that is, the physical world- such as TEX

Archon:

In late antiquity some variants of Gnosticism used the term Archon to refer to several servants of the Demiurge. In this context they may be seen as having the roles of the angels and demons of the Old Testament.

According to Origen's Contra Celsum, a sect called the Ophites posited the existence of seven archons, beginning with Iadabaoth or Ialdabaoth, who created the six that follow: Iao, Sabaoth, Adonaios, Elaios, Astaphanos and Horaíos.

[Dee and Kelley's Relationship Ended After 7 Years...]

Genesis 2 (King James Version)

17 But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.

The Lord God (Yahweh / IHVH) says... that the Day Adam eats from the tree of knowledge,.. is the Day that Adam would die.

Genesis 3 (King James Version)

1 Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field which the LORD God had made. And he said unto the woman, Yea, hath God said, Ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden?

3 But of the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, God hath said, Ye shall not eat of it, neither shall ye touch it, lest ye die.

4 And the serpent said unto the woman, Ye shall not surely die:

The serpent [Gnostic “Beast” & “Instructor”] informs Adam & Eve that they would NOT die the Day they eat of the tree.

5 For God doth know that in the day ye eat thereof, then your eyes shall be opened, and ye shall be as gods, knowing good and evil.

The serpent also promises them that not only will they NOT die that Day- but their eyes will be opened, & become like god.

7 And the eyes of them both were opened

The Serpent was Truthful here

22 And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil.

& the Serpent was Truthful here.

Genesis 5 (King James Version)

5 And all the days that Adam lived were nine hundred and thirty years: and he died.

Obviously, Adam did NOT die the Day he ate from the tree.

& the Serpent was Truthful here.

So, the very First Liar in the bible was Lord God (Yahweh / IHVH)

John 8 (King James Version)
44 When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

Jesus keeps the Lie, too.

Isaiah 45:6,7 (King James Version)
6 That they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me. I am the LORD, and there is none else.
7 I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil: I the LORD do all these things.

But...doesn't everyone, including Jesus himself, say Satan is the entity who causes evil?
...and is the original liar?

Yahweh says there is NO ONE ELSE though, Just "Him"

The Serpent (Satan/HVHI) actually told the Truth-wanting Adam & Eve to lose their original bondage of ignorance, and have their "eyes opened" so they can be like god.

Yahweh admits that "Now they have become as one of Us"

Satan means 'Adversary'...But who's adversary?

He tried to help Adam & Eve to Evolve into Godhood.

Satan was not Adam & Eve's 'adversary'.

Satan did destroy Yahweh's [the Demiurge] plan to keep Adam & Eve in bondage though.

Maybe, Satan is only Yahweh's 'Adversary'?

Obviously, Satan was the original 'Truth Teller'.

We know now, that Jesus was in on the original Lie conspiracy, as well.

Who else?

Revelation 12 (King James Version)

7 And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels,

8 And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven.

9 And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him.

Satan, who was a serpent and got promoted to becoming a dragon- is cast out, along with his Angels

(Not Demons, but 'Angels')

It says Satan was 'the Deceiver'.

But, we now know, Yahweh & Jesus were the Deceivers.

Now, a whole puppet regime of Liars are in place, in heaven.

So, who has 'Demons'?

The Truth Tellers who tried to elevate Adam & Eve into god status?

Or the puppet master regime who Lies and tries to enslave humanity with guilt?

Isaiah 45:6,7 (King James Version)

6 That they may know from the rising of the sun, and from the west, that there is none beside me. I am the LORD, and there is none else.

7 I form the light, and create darkness: I make peace, and create evil: I the LORD do all these things.

If Yahweh makes "Darkness" & Lucifer means "Light Bearer"... were we being Lied to, all along?

2 Corinthians 11:3 (King James Version)

3 But I fear, lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in Christ.

Wait...'Beguiled'?
Who was the original 'Liar'?

Obviously, we have a huge conspiracy being perpetrated upon us, & for a very long time.

The Liars are being portrayed as the Truth-Tellers...& vice-versa.

If demons Lie...who's team are they on?

How many events in the bible involve "angels" slaughtering thousands?

Who sent these 'destroying angels'?

When demons are cast out of 'possessed individuals', in whose name are they cast out in?

Jesus' name...

Wait, is not Jesus in on the Original Lie?

Perchance these demons are, in fact, really 'Angels'...who follow along with Deceiving everyone?

They get expelled in the name of Jesus, who we know is also in on the whole Scam.

→ Let's review briefly...

what's been discussed up this point.

- Gabriel the ArchAngel is the harbinger of New Material that will alter Religio-Political Events.
- ` There were at least 7 Entities [all “Big Shots] who spoke on the Liber Loagaeth
- To bring some sort of temporary closure to Loagaeth, we can assume, at least, partially- that it is picking up the slack of Dee & Kelley finding other Gnostic texts- such as “The Book of Enoch”. Some Gnostic Bibles include many of the pseudo-Enoch writings. Some even contain the Kabbalah [I own a couple of them, myself]. Since then, many Gnostics Texts have found their way into modern circulation. This maybe the reason Liber Loagaeth goes undeciphered and unused. The discovery of the Gnostic Texts have ‘superseded’ Them & is no longer a requirement for the Enochian Entities.

April 21st, 1584- Gabriel says:

"Man in his Creation, being made Innocent, was also authorized and made partaker of the Power and Spirit of God... until that Choronzon (for so is the true name of that mighty Devil) envying his felicity, and perceiving that the substance of his lesser part was frail and unperfect in respect of his pure Esse, began to assail him, and so prevailed: that offending so became accursed in the sight of God; and so lost the Garden of felicity, the judgement of his understanding: but not utterly the favour of God, and was driven forth (as your Scriptures record) unto the Earth which was covered with brambles"

The Enochian Material leans towards the Old and New Testament, when convenient, to keep Dee interested. The EE used many plays in the same way to keep Dee enticed. The Enochian Materials also contain a wealth of Gnostic Doctrines. Many of the Names and character descriptions are almost identical.

We have Ialdabaoth, the Demiurge who is the Biblical Yahweh/IHVH.

Sabaoth - Jesus.

Sabaoth: Hebrew term used in the New Testament (Rom. 9.29; James 5.4) & in the title of God, translated in the Bible as "Lord of Hosts" (Isa. 1.9)

Various personalities of Galvah, Madimi [Aspects of Sophia=Wisdom]

Various aspects of the Choronzon, Death Dragon-Teloch Vovi[m]n- the Beast- the Instructor...and how to meet Him in ZAX.

We have Babalon and Babylon who is, most likely- Pronoia.

We have a God of Justice [Iad Baltoh] who creates the Garden of Eden. We also have a God of Injustice, too.

These Archons & Aeons are Angels, and Demons.
But most are just called, generic Gods.

Psalms 82:1 describes a plurality of gods (elōhim), which an older version in the Septuagint calls the "assembly of the gods"

If we can correctly assume that the Enochian Entities represent Gnostic Forces rather than Old Testament/New Testament Currents- we can grok a lot of information here.

First, the Bible makes it clear nothing new maybe added to it's 66 Chapters. So another "Angelic Revelation" is something we do not need- plus, it would be considered "Satanic" by adding.

Gabriel already gave Mohamed the Koran, and it started wars up till today.

We just do need some senile Jehovah threatening us with more out dated laws.

But- as the cliché goes:
“The Proof is in the Pudding!”

Enochian Practitioners can attest to the fact that these Enochian Entities are Not Preachy.

The EE bring with Them, strong Gnostic Doctrine.
Gnostic- Gnosis, is KNOWLEDGE.

Biblical threats are NOT knowledge- they are consequences.

Much of the Gnostic/EE current is Daoism.

If we try to tie up some loose ends...

The EE were always on some type of Time Restraint ...a schedule. They had an Agenda, and They used tactics that can be described as sometimes: misleading, vague and impatient.

The EE IAD, resembles Ialdabaoth.
The Heptarchia Mystica – the 7 Rulers, closely resemble Ialdabaoth’s ‘co-rulers’. [Groups of 7]

The 30 Aires/Aethyrs resemble the Gnostic schematic of the Universes and It’s inhabitants.

The WatchTowers are the Hierarchies.

And, all this is tied to Liber Loagaeth as discussed in My Prior Books.

Back to:

Luciftias [Brightness] - Lucifer [Light-Bearer]

The First Table of Liber Loagaeth contains this:

Gàscampho was a word “accidentally” revealed out loud by Kelley.

It was spoken by God to Lucifer:

“Why didst Thou so?”

The context of this Leaf reveals God condemning Lucifer, as there are also relevant parts that speak about everlasting fire, & starting over, again.

Occult Students and Biblical Scholars all know that Satan is not Lucifer- it was an allegory of Nebuchadnezzar in Isaiah 14:12

So why is God calling Satan, Lucifer?

We need to identify who this “God” is- then maybe we can figure out why Lucifer is in this most important First Leaf

This First Leaf was given last...

[which is really first because Enochian is read like Hebrew]

...it was the ushering in of Christ and the New Kingdom.

Now, let's get down to basics, and cut to the chase.

The Enochian Entities are pacifying Dee and Kelley.

Dee gave the EE a hard time in completely Liber Loagaeth- basically Dee was hoping either Galvah or some other EE would help him with the completion of the Book.

Kelley accidentally slips up and says “Lucifer” out loud.
Dee winds up finishing the Book, later on- and the EE send him and Kelley off to another place- never speaking about it again.

Everybody was disappointed in everybody at this junction.

The Enochian Entities wanted Gnosticism out of the box, and into the World. The Church father’s religion is not a spiritual system, but is rather a ball and chain...spiritual imprisonment- which Galvah/Sophia was all too familiar with.

Compare:

“The Daughter of Fortitude” to “The Thunder, Perfect Mind”

Daughter of Fortitude

I am the daughter of fortitude, & ravished every hour, from my youth, for behold, I am understanding, & science dwelleth in me : & the heavens oppress me,
They covet and desire me with infinite appetite few or none that are earthly have embraced me for I am shadowed with the circle of the sun : and covered with the morning clouds: My feet are swifter than the winds, & my hands are sweeter than the morning dew. My garments are from the beginning: & my dwelling place is in my self. The lion knoweth not where I walk : neither do the beasts of the field understand me. I am deflowered & yet a virgin. I sanctify & am not sanctified happy is he that embraceth me. for in the night season
I am sweet, in the day full of pleasure my company is a harmony of many cymbals
And my lips sweeter than health itself. I am a harlot for such as ravish me : and a virgin with such as know me not : for lo I am loved of many : & I am a lover to many: and as many as come unto me as they should do, have their entertainment. Purge your streets o you sons of men, & wash your houses clean
Make your selves holy, & put on righteousness
Cast out your old strumpets, & burn their clothes Abstain from the company of other women that are defiled, that are sluttish, & not so handsome, & beautiful as I. And then will I come & dwell amongst you. And behold I will bring forth Children unto you: & they shall be the sons of comfort
I will open my garments, & stand naked before you that your love may be more enflamed toward me.
As yet, I walk in the clouds, As yet, I am carried with the winds : And can not descend unto you for the multitude of your abominations, & the filthy loathsomeness of your dwelling places. Behold these fowre, who is he, that shall say, they have sinned : or unto whom shall they make account? Not unto you, you sons of men, nor unto your children : for unto the lord belongeth the Judgment of his servants
Now therefore, let the earth give forth her fruits unto you : And let the mountains forsake their barrenness where your footsteps shall remain. happy is he that saluteth you : & cursed is he that holdeth up his hands against you. & power shall be given unto you from hence forth to resist your enemies : & the lord shall always here you in the times of your troubles. And I am sent unto you to play the harlot with you : And am to enrich you with the spoils of other men : prepare for me, for I come shortly. Provide your Chambers for me that they may be sweet & cleanly : for I will make a dwelling place amongst you : and I will be common with the father & the son, yea and with all them that truly favoereth you for my youth, is in her flower and my strength is not to be extinguished with man. Strong am I above & below. Therefore, provide for me. for behold I now salute you. And let peace be amongst you : for I am the Daughter of Comfort. Disclose not my secrets unto women : nether let them understand how sweet I am. for all things belongeth not unto every one I come unto you again.

The Thunder, Perfect Mind

I was sent forth from the power, and I have come to those who reflect upon me,
and I have been found among those who seek after me.
Look upon me, you who reflect upon me,
and you hearers, hear me.
You who are waiting for me, take me to yourselves.
And do not banish me from your sight.
And do not make your voice hate me, nor your hearing.
Do not be ignorant of me anywhere or any time. Be on your guard!
Do not be ignorant of me.
For I am the first and the last.
I am the honored one and the scorned one.
I am the whore and the holy one.
I am the wife and the virgin.
I am <the mother> and the daughter.
I am the members of my mother.
I am the barren one
and many are her sons.
I am she whose wedding is great,
and I have not taken a husband.
I am the midwife and she who does not bear.
I am the solace of my labor pains.
I am the bride and the bridegroom, and it is my husband who begot me.
I am the mother of my father and the sister of my husband and he is my offspring.
I am the slave of him who prepared me.
I am the ruler of my offspring.
But he is the one who begot me before the time on a birthday.
And he is my offspring in [due] time,
and my power is from him.
I am the staff of his power in his youth,
and he is the rod of my old age.
And whatever he wills happens to me.
I am the silence that is incomprehensible and the idea whose remembrance is frequent.
I am the voice whose sound is manifold and the word whose appearance is multiple.
I am the utterance of my name.
Why, you who hate me, do you love me,
and hate those who love me?
You who deny me, confess me,

and you who confess me, deny me.
 You who tell the truth about me, lie about me,
 and you who have lied about me, tell the truth about me.
 You who know me, be ignorant of me,
 and those who have not known me, let them know me.
 For I am knowledge and ignorance.
 I am shame and boldness.
 I am shameless; I am ashamed.
 I am strength and I am fear.
 I am war and peace.
 Give heed to me.
 I am the one who is disgraced and the great one.
 Give heed to my poverty and my wealth.
 Do not be arrogant to me when I am cast out upon the earth, and you will find me in those that are to come.
 And do not look upon me on the dung-heap nor go and leave me cast out, and you will find me in the kingdoms.
 And do not look upon me when I am cast out among those who are disgraced and in the least places, nor laugh at me.
 And do not cast me out among those who are slain in violence.
 But I, I am compassionate and I am cruel.
 Be on your guard!
 Do not hate my obedience and do not love my self-control.
 In my weakness, do not forsake me,
 and do not be afraid of my power.
 For why do you despise my fear and curse my pride?
 But I am she who exists in all fears and strength in trembling.
 I am she who is weak,
 and I am well in a pleasant place.
 I am senseless and I am wise.
 Why have you hated me in your counsels?
 For I shall be silent among those who are silent, and I shall appear and speak,
 Why then have you hated me, you Greeks?
 Because I am a barbarian among the barbarians?
 For I am the wisdom of the Greeks and the knowledge of the barbarians.
 I am the judgement of the Greeks and of the barbarians.
 I am the one whose image is great in Egypt and the one who has no image among the barbarians.
 I am the one who has been hated everywhere and who has been loved everywhere.
 I am the one whom they call Life,
 and you have called Death.
 I am the one whom they call Law,
 and you have called Lawlessness.
 I am the one whom you have pursued,
 and I am the one whom you have seized.
 I am the one whom you have scattered,
 and you have gathered me together.
 I am the one before whom you have been ashamed, and you have been shameless to me.

 I am she who does not keep festival, and I am she whose festivals are many.
I, I am godless,
 and I am the one whose God is great.
 I am the one whom you have reflected upon,
 and you have scorned me.
 I am unlearned,
 and they learn from me.
 I am the one that you have despised,
 and you reflect upon me.
 I am the one whom you have hidden from,
 and you appear to me.
 But whenever you hide yourselves,
 I myself will appear.
 For whenever you appear,
 I myself will hide from you.
 Those who have [...] to it [...] senselessly [...].
 Take me [...] understanding] from grief.
 and take me to yourselves from understanding and grief.
 And take me to yourselves from places that are ugly and in ruin, and rob from those which are good even though in ugliness.
 Out of shame, take me to yourselves shamelessly;
 and out of shamelessness and shame,
 upbraid my members in yourselves.
 And come forward to me, you who know me and you who know my members, and establish the great ones among the small first creatures.
 Come forward to childhood, and do not despise it because it is small and it is little.
 And do not turn away greatnesses in some parts from the smallnesses, for the smallnesses are known from the greatnesses.
 Why do you curse me and honor me?
 You have wounded and you have had mercy.
 Do not separate me from the first ones whom you have known.
 And do not cast anyone out nor turn anyone away [...] turn you away and [...] know] him not.
 What is mine [...].
 I know the first ones and those after them know me.
 But I am the mind of [...] and the rest of [...].
 I am the knowledge of my inquiry, and the command of those who ask of me,

 and the power of the powers in my knowledge of the angels, who have been sent at my word, and of gods in their seasons by my counsel,
 and of spirits of every man who exists with me,
 and of women who dwell within me.
 I am the one who is honored, and who is praised,
 and who is despised scornfully.
 I am peace, and war has come because of me.
 And I am an alien and a citizen.
 I am the substance and the one who has no substance.
 Those who are without association with me are ignorant of me, and those who are in my substance are the ones who know me.
 Those who are close to me have been ignorant of me, and those who are far away from me are the ones who have known me.

 On the day when I am close to you, you are far away from me, and on the day when I am far away from you, I am close to you.
 [I am ...] within.
 [I am ...] of the natures.
 I am [...] of the creation of the spirits.
 [...] request of the souls.
 I am control and the uncontrollable.
 I am the union and the dissolution.
 I am the abiding and I am the dissolution.
 I am the one below,
 and they come up to me.
 I am the judgment and the acquittal.
 I, I am sinless,
 and the root of sin derives from me.
 I am lust in [outward] appearance, and interior self-control exists within me.
 I am the hearing which is attainable to everyone and the speech which cannot be grasped.
 I am a mute who does not speak,
 and great is my multitude of words.
 Hear me in gentleness, and learn of me in roughness.
 I am she who cries out,
 and I am cast forth upon the face of the earth.
 I prepare the bread and my mind within.
 I am the knowledge of my name.
 I am the one who cries out,
 and I listen.
 I appear and [...] walk in [...] seal of my [...].
 I am [...] the defense [...].
 I am the one who is called Truth and iniquity [...].
 You honor me [...] and you whisper against me.
 You who are vanquished, judge them [who vanquish you] before they give judgment against you, because the judge and partiality exist in you.
 If you are condemned by this one, who will acquit you?
 Or, if you are acquitted by him, who will be able to detain you?
 For what is inside of you is what is outside of you, and the one who fashions you on the outside is the one who shaped the inside of you.
 And what you see outside of you, you see inside of you;
 it is visible and it is your garment.
 Hear me, you hearers
 and learn of my words, you who know me.
 I am the hearing that is attainable to everything;
 I am the speech that cannot be grasped.
 I am the name of the sound and the sound of the name.
 I am the sign of the letter and the designation of the division.
 [...] the great power.
 And [...] will not move the name.
 [...] to the one who created me.
 And I will speak his name.
 Look then at his words and all the writings which have been completed.

Give heed then, you hearers and you also, the angels and those who have been sent,
and you spirits who have arisen from the dead.
For I am the one who alone exists, and I have no one who will judge me.
For many are the pleasant forms which exist in numerous sins, and incontinencies,
and disgraceful passions,
and fleeting pleasures,
which [men] embrace until they become sober and go up to their resting place.
And they will find me there,
and they will live,
and they will not die again.

Valentinus assumed, as the beginning of all things, the Primal Being or Bythos, who after ages of silence and contemplation, gave rise to other beings by a process of emanation. The first series of beings, the Aeons, were thirty in number, representing fifteen syzygies or pairs sexually complementary.

One common form is outlined below:

To understand the generation of the thirty Aeons from the Ogdoad, we have only to take the first eight numbers and add them up, leaving out six—for it is the Episemon and not a letter of the usual Greek alphabet:—

$$1 + 2 + 3 + 4 + 5 + 7 + 8 = 30$$

Each of these 30/91 revolving and rotating machines are unique, with Their Own Laws, Governments and Rulers...
91 Zones- 92 Governors- 30 Aires/Aethyrs

“Enochian Entities - Book B” – By SaToGa
Volume #2

In the “ZAX Vision”, the EE explained it as:
 This is the Analogy of Correlation
 (This Volume: “ZAX Vision: Get Thee Behind Me- Satan!”)
 “Think of the 18 Calls as The Keys that Open the Tumblers
 of the Loagaeth cities.
 The WatchTowers contain It’s occupants, &
 the Governors of the 30 Aethyrs” [the 19th Key]
 The Holy Table- is as the -Loagaeth & 30 Aethyrs.
 The 7 Ensigns- is as the -Heptarchial Mystica
 Sigillum Dei Aemeth- is as the -WatchTowers
 Microcosm- is as the –Macrocosm
 The EE Infrastructure: “Knitting Together”
 30 Aethyrs are “of” the Cities of Loagaeth
 Previously, I wrote:
 “Dee’s diaries are vague in establishing a direct link between the Enochian Keys/Calls and the Watchtower tablets.”
 The WatchTowers contain the ‘Census’ [inhabitants] of the 30 Aethyrs, 91 Parts and Loagaeth.
 Think of the WatchTower as a telephone directory.
 Find the occupant and dial it in!
 The EE were very interested in the World’s Kingdoms.
 We see this as an interest because the EE Hierarchy is composed of a “Theocracy”- like the 12 Tribes of Israel.
 EE has Kings, Seniors, Princes, Ministers and of course,
 God(s)...and a God of Justice
 (Scales of Balance)
 The purpose of Loagaeth:
 Circulating it’s Energy Matrix/Theocratic Kingdom .. then- “The End of the World”.
 Again...
 “But in the same instant when Adam was expelled, the Lord gave unto the world Her time, and placed over Her Angelic keepers, Watchers & Princes”
 “As an instrument of the thrashing...This Doctrine is a Flayle”
 “Therefore you may do anything” –Mapsama

IN OPERIBUS SIGILLO DEI AEMETH

Part IV: The Thrones. The Names Drawn from the Circumference of the Sigillum.

By David R. Jones

Who is the image of the invisible God, the firstborn of every creature: For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him: And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.

Colossians 1:15-17

As was pointed out in the last installment of this series, the letters and numbers that are contained within the divisions of the circumference of the Sigillum form a kind of cipher from which a series of names are derived. The algorithm of this cipher is purely arithmetic, and is similar to the kinds of ciphers found in the works of Trithemius particularly his Stenographia.¹ The rules for deriving the names are as follows:

1. In general, the capital letters indicate the initial of the name.
2. If the number is above the letter, count toward the right or clockwise.
3. If the number is below the letter, count toward the left or counterclockwise.
4. If there is no number with the letter/letters you have reached the termination of the name.
5. When there is a double vowel, the duplicate is eliminated; except when it falls at the beginning of the name.

The example of Thaoth was given in the previous article, so we shall use the next clockwise example to review the problem. The second division of the circumference contains 9G, so the name begins with G and is counted 9 places to the right for the next letter landing on 6a. Count therefore 6 more to the right to 18. The number 8 being below the letter l, the count reverses direction counting 8 spaces to the left to 20a, then 20 spaces to the right, landing on 8a, proceeding 8 more spaces to the right ending at the s with no number. Thus the name derived is Galaas. Double vowels are reduced to singles, unless they fall at the beginning of the word, so the final name is Galas.

These seven principle names are thus rendered:

Thaoth	4 T	>4
	22 h	>22
	11 A	>11
	a 5	<5
	o 10	<10
	t 11	<11
	h

Galas	9 G	>9
	6 a	>6
	l 8	<8
	20 a	>20
	8 a	>8
	s ²

Gethog	7 G	>7
	e 21	<21
	t 9	<9
	h 14	<14
	og

Horlwn	H 12	<12
	22 o	>22
	r 16	<16
	26 l	>26
	6 w	>6
	n

Aaoth³	11 A	>11
	a 5	<5
	o 10	<10
	t 11	<11
	h

Innon	15 I	>19
	7 n	>7
	14 n	>14
	o 8	<8
	n

Galethog	5 G	>5
	α 24	<24
	l 30	<30
	ε 21	<21
	t 9	<9
	h 14	<14
	og

In this way 7 names are derived, beginning with the capital letters. They are in clockwise order:

1. Thaoth
2. Galas
3. Gethog
4. Horlon
5. Aaoth
6. Innon
7. Galethog

The archangel Michael reordered these names as follows:

1. Galas
2. Gethog
3. Thaoth
4. Horlon
5. Innon
6. Aaoth
7. Galethog

Drawn from the Circumference of the Sigillum, the complete set of patterns describing the principle names can be seen in the following diagrams.

The seven names given above do not use all of the letters in the Circumference, a fact ignored by Dee in his analysis of the formulation of the Circumference of the Sigillum. It is notable, in this regard, that there are two places where the information received by Kelly and Dee is essentially improperly transferred from the text of the Spirit Actions to the form of the Sigillum constructed by Dee. Both of these locations are keys to understanding the letters not accounted for in the seven principle names given. These locations are the 22nd and 32nd divisions of the circumference. The first of these is given in the Spirit Action as y15 but shown in Dee's rendering of the Sigillum as y14. The second is the infamous A666; which is reduced to 6A in the Sigillum, by the action and instruction of Michael. These places are notable because it is from them that the remaining letters may be accounted for by the method of deriving names used for deciphering the principle seven.

If the value for the 22nd division is taken as y15, which was properly assigned in the Spirit Action, then by the formula the next division would be 6m, six to the right of that is 18o, and 18 further to the right is n, yielding the name Ymon. The A666 is a bit more complicated. If we read it as corrected by Michael we get 6A to a5 and the pattern thereafter replicates the name Aaoth in full, which is not a problem per se, but it doesn't account for any of the otherwise unused letters. On the other hand, if the 6 is read counterclockwise, then the next division is 10b, 10 to the right is o17, 17 to the left is 13r and 13 to the right returns to the A666 yielding AborA. This repeats and accounts for all of the remaining unused letters. Thus these two/three names account for all of the divisions and letters otherwise unaccounted for in the original seven names.

Their respective derivation is:

Ymon	y	15	<15
	6	m	>6
	18	o	>18
		n
Aaoth	6	A	>11
		a	5
		o	10
		t	11
		h	<11
AborA		A	6
	10	b	>10
		o	17
	13	r	>13
		A	666

The Eight Companies of Five and Their Sigils.

Notes:

1. An admirable introduction to the subject can be found in Wayne Shumaker's Renaissance Curiosa (Binghampton, New York: Medieval and Renaissance Texts and Studies, 1982), but reference can be made to Trithemius two original works on the subject, the Steganographie: Ars per occultam Scripturam (1st published 1508 facs. of the 1561 Paris ed. available at <http://www.scribd.com/doc/4290684/Trithemio-IOanne-Steganographia-Latin>) and the Polygraphia (first published 1508 facs of the 1561 Frankfurt ed. <http://www.scribd.com/doc/2555288/JTrithemePolygraphie-Polygraphia-1561>).
2. This s is also given as alternatively the number 5 in the Spirit Action. The 5 is not only significant in that the value is critical for the sum of the umbers of the Circumference to equal 440, the gematria of Teli or serpent (cf. Coph Nia Wand, Vernal Equinox 2009 e.v.), but here in that the 5 returns the sequence back to the capital G which begins this name. Similar significant curiosities abound in the variations of the values given for the divisions in the Spirit Action, and the diligent student is recommended to explore them all and their various implications.
3. This Aaoth is both contained completely within the name Thaoth but also repeated in the dual formula of the derivation from the A666 division.

John Dee and the Magic Tables in the *Book of Soyga

Jim Reeds

‘Oh, my great and long desyre hath byn to be hable to read those tables of Soyga’.
— John Dee¹

1. John Dee and the Book of Soyga

Until recently the Book of Soyga was known only by repute, through mention in the diaries of John Dee (1527–1608). Dee’s association with the Book of Soyga is conveniently summarized by Christopher Whitby:² On 18 April 1583 Dee was unable to find his Book of Soyga: it has been mislaid. On 29 April 1583 Dee remembered a detail about the missing book: ‘...E[dward] K[elley] and I wer talking of my boke Soyga, or Aldaraia and I at length sayd that, (as far as I did remember) Zadzaczadlin, was Adam by the Alphabet therof...’ On 19 November 1595 Dee recovered his Book of Soyga. Many years later Elias Ashmole (1617–1692) reported that ‘the Duke of Lauderdale hath a folio MS. which was Dr. Dee’s with the words on the first page: Aldaraia sive Soyga vocor’.

In addition to these unremarkable appearances of the Book of Soyga in Dee’s nachlaß —unremarkable, for who does not sometimes mislay and later recover a valued book? — there is the singular exchange held between Dee and the angel Uriel on the occasion of their first conversation, at Mortlake on Saturday, 10 March 1581/1582, the very first scrying session mediated by Dee’s most famous scryer, Edward Kelley (1555–1595?), also known as Kelly and Talbot.³ In the following, Δ is Dee, VR is Uriel:

Δ — ys my boke, of Soyga, of any excellency?

* I gratefully acknowledge: the Bodleian Library, University of Oxford, for permission to publish the illustration of Bodley 908, fol. 180^r; the Department of Manuscripts, British Library, for permission to publish the illustrations of Sloane 8, fols. 102^v and 103^r, and Sloane 3189, fols. 56^v and 58^v; and Robert O. Lenkiewicz, for permission to publish the illustration of the ‘Tabula combinationum Ziruph’. I am most grateful to Drs S. Clucas, K. de Leon-Jones, J. V. Field, D. E. Harkness, J. C. Lagarias, and K. Δ— What may I, or must I do, to haue the sight, and presence, of Michael, that blessed Angel?

VR— Presentias n[ost]ras postulate et invoke, sinceritate et humilitate. Et Anchor, Anachor, et Anilos, non sunt in hunc lapidem invocandi. [Request and invoke our presence with sincerity and humility. Anchor, Anachor and Anilos are not to be called into this stone.]

Δ— Oh, my great and long desyre hath byn to be hable to read those tables of Soyga.

VR— Haec maximè respiciunt Michaëlem. Michaël est Angelus, qui illuminat gressus tuos. Et haec revelantur in virtute et veritate non vi. [These things are mostly to do with Michael. Michael is the angel who illuminates your steps. And these things are revealed in virtue and truth and not by force.]

Δ— Is there any speciall tyme, or howre to be observed, to deale for the enioying of Michael?

VR— Omnis hora, est hora nobis. [Every hour is ours.] ... ⁴

To summarize: Uriel confirms Dee's high estimation of the Book of Soyga's value. Dee wants angelic help in understanding his Book of Soyga, but only the angel Michael is cleared to talk about this topic. If, as some scholars believe, Kelley was a charlatan, then here we find him (in the voice of Uriel) being characteristically evasive. As a newcomer to Dee's household he does not want to commit himself to any more specific statements about the Book of Soyga, about which he knows very little beyond the fact that it fascinates Dee.⁵

There things rested for roughly four centuries. Dee prized his Book of Soyga, but since the book was lost, modern scholars could only guess about its contents and possible influence on Dee's magic system, especially for the version in his Book of Enoch.⁶

But then in 1994 Deborah Harkness — like the hero of Poe's 'The Purloined Letter' — located not one but two copies in the obvious places, in this case in two of England's greatest libraries. They had been catalogued under the title Aldaraia instead of Soyga.⁷

At last we can examine the Book of Soyga, and in particular its tables, and see for ourselves what it was that Dee prized so highly.

The Book of Soyga is an anonymous late-mediaeval or early modern Latin magical work extant in two sixteenth century manuscript copies: one in the Bodleian Library, which I refer to as Bodley 908, and the other in the British Library, which I refer to as Sloane 8.⁸ Since there is as yet no edition or translation of either of the two manuscripts for me to refer to, nor even a synopsis of their contents, I offer the following brief description.⁹

The Sloane 8 copy (but not the Bodley 908 one) bears the title Aldaraia sive Soyga vocor at the head of the text and on the leaf preceding the text, both in the same hand as the text, fitting Ashmole's description. Sloane 8's preceding leaf also bears the description Tractatus Astrologico Magicus, written in a different hand. Both copies contain the equation of 'Adam' with 'Zadzaczadlin', so there can be no doubt that Harkness's Book of Soyga is closely related to Dee's Book of Soyga; on Ashmole's Aldaraia sive Soyga vocor evidence, and based on the arguments I present at the end of section 5, it is easy to guess that Sloane 8 was in fact Dee's copy of the Book of Soyga.¹⁰

The 197 leaves of Bodley 908 contain three named works, Liber Aldaraia, Liber Radiorum, and Liber decimus septimus (of 95, 65, and 2 leaves, respectively) as well as a number of shorter unnamed works totalling about 10 leaves. The final 18 leaves contain the tables that are the subject of this paper. Sloane 8 has 147 leaves, and seems largely identical with Bodley 908, except that the tables occupy 36 leaves and the Liber Radiorum is present only in a 2 leaf truncated 'executive summary' version.

A cursory inspection of the Book of Soyga shows it is concerned with astrology and demonology, with long lists of conjunctions, lunar mansions, names and genealogies of angels, and invocations, not much different from those found, say, in pseudo-Agrippa.¹¹ A single example, of a list of spirits of the air, is illustrative of the whole:

Adracty, Adaci, Adai, Teroccot, Terocot, Tercot, Herm, Hermzm, Hermzisco, Cotzi, Cotzizi, Cotzizizin, Zinzicon, Ginzecohon, Gincheccon, Saradon, Sardon, Sardeon, Belzebuc, Belzscup, Belcupe, Saraduc, Sarcud, Carc, Sathanas, Satnas, Sacsan, Contion, Conoi, Conoison, Satnei, Sapnn, Sappi, Danarcas, Dancas, Dancasnar.¹²

Some of the spells or incantations have a vaguely Christian or alchemical air to them, as 'Petra Ouis Angelus Agnus Lapis Sponsus' and 'Diunitas Christus Venturus Iustorum Humanitatis Vnitas',¹³ but the overall impression is that it is no more an alchemical treatise than it is a devotional work.

Several features of the Book of Soyga seem worth particular mention, as being untypical of a standard late mediaeval or Renaissance magical work, or of the run-of-the-mill necromancy handbook.¹⁴ In contrast to most mediaeval or Renaissance works, the text has extremely few references to known authors or personalities. There are no recognizable auctores. Other than the occasional mention of a few Old Testament names, and two references to Libro Geber, and a puzzling marginal gloss ‘Steganographia’ in the same hand as the text, which is presumably a reference to the work of Johannes Trithemius (1462–1516), there are no references to recognizable personalities.¹⁵

Instead, it makes numerous references to what are presumably mediaeval magical treatises, works such as liber E, liber Os, liber dignus, liber Sipal, liber Munob, and the like.

Throughout the book much importance is placed on writing words backwards. This can be seen in some of the titles mentioned above: Sipal backwards is Lapis, and Munob reversed is Bonum. Phrases such as ‘Retap Retson’ occur throughout. This principle is reflected in the form of the tables, as discussed below. The name of the work, Soyga, is itself explained to be ‘Agyos, literis transvectis’.¹⁶

Throughout the book there is a preoccupation with letters and combinations of letters, assignments of numerical values to letters, assigning letters to planets and to elements, listing combinations of letters associated with houses of the moon, recombining letters and syllables in incantations to form new magic words, listing new names for the 23 letters of the Latin alphabet, sometimes taken in reversed Z through A order, listing new symbols for the 23 letters, and so on.

And, towards the end of the book there is the set of thirty-six large square tables, described in section 2 of this paper, filled with a seemingly random jumble of letters. (One of these is illustrated in my Plates I and II.) These tables do not appear to be like any illustrated in, say, Shumaker’s survey of mediaeval and early modern magic works.¹⁷

The Book of Soyga’s preoccupation with letters, alphabet arithmetic, Hebrew-like backwards writing, and so on, is of course characteristic of the new Cabalistic magic which became popular in the sixteenth century, exemplified by the great compilation of Agrippa of Nettesheim (1486–1535), and borrowing authority both from the Renaissance humanist interest in the Kabbalah expressed by such figures as Pico and Reuchlin and from the supposed Biblical antiquity of the Kabbalah.¹⁸ Although large square tables are not themselves a characteristic feature of the traditional Kabbalah, they had by Agrippa’s time become an integral part of the Christian magical Cabala.¹⁹

Such a work must have appealed to Dee since it encompassed so many of the ingredients associated with early modern magical and Christian Cabalist texts; we know the tables in the Book of Soyga excited John Dee's interest, as seen in the dialogue with Uriel. They certainly also excited mine as a professional cryptologist. Were they, I wondered, filled with a random (and hence pointless) selection of letters, or were they a cryptogram (with a hidden 'plain text' meaning, which might at least in principle be recoverable by cryptanalysis), or was there some other structure or pattern to them? I approached the tables as I would any cryptographic problem, first transcribing the data and entering it into the computer, and then trying out what I knew of the bag of code-breakers' tricks. The results, which I describe in sections 3 through 6, were unexpectedly gratifying.

This paper, then, indirectly addresses the question of the Book of Soyga's possible influence on Dee by examining and comparing the form (or method of construction) of the tables in the Book of Soyga and those found in other early modern magic tables (including Dee's and Agrippa's), rather than their function (i.e., purpose or method of use).

2. The Magic Tables of the Book of Soyga

The Book of Soyga contains thirty-six tables; each table is a square grid of 36 rows and columns; each grid cell contains a letter of the Latin alphabet.²⁰ These tables turn out to be formed by a completely deterministic calculation method, or algorithm, starting from an arbitrary 'code word' for each table. This construction algorithm is so intricate that it is unlikely that its presence would be detected on casual examination of the tables.

Each of the thirty-six tables is headed with a number and a label. I summarize these in my Table I. For convenience I will refer to them as T1, T2, and so on. T1 through T12 are labelled with the signs of the zodiac, Aries through Pisces; as are T13 through T24. T25 through T31 are labelled with the seven planet names, and T32 through T35 with the four element names. T36 is labelled with the word 'Magistri'. See my Plates I and II for the Bodley 908 and Sloane 8 versions of T1 'Aries'.

Eight of these tables also appear copied in Dee's notebook, the Book of Enoch, joined in pairs: 'The First Table' in the Book of Enoch is a 72-row table, filling both pages of an opening, the first 36 rows of which are Soyga's T1 and the last 36 rows of which are Soyga's T13, the two

Table I. Soyga Tables.

‘Aries’ tables, and so on, as indicated in my Table I.²¹ See my Plate III for the Book of Enoch version of T1 ‘Aries’.

The tables are written with italic letters, mostly lower case, written into a neatly pencilled regular grid. In Bodley 908 the grid cells measure approximately one quarter of an inch, so a complete table fits on one page. In Sloane 8 the grid cells are approximately one third of an inch in size, and each table occupies the two facing pages of an opening. In each book there is occasional use of the short s; much more common is the long s. The writing becomes more even after the first few tables, with greatly diminished use of upper case letters, as if the copyist became accustomed to what must have been an unusually irksome and tedious task of copying completely senseless data which offered no obvious contextual clues for correcting mistakes. In Bodley 908 upper case L is used exclusively, presumably to avoid confusion with long s. In Sloane 8 lower case l is used exclusively.

The handwriting in Bodley 908 is quite even, and pains seem to have been taken to make the letters clearly distinguishable. The handwriting in Sloane 8 is less clear, so that n and u are often hard to tell apart, as are the pairs c/e and l/i. Sloane 8 shows obvious signs of proofreading, with dots, double dots, and cup strokes marking errors or doubtful readings. Occasionally a cell contains, in addition to its main letter, a tiny f followed by another tiny letter; I surmise f means falso and the following letter is the suggested correction. Some corrections seem to have been made by erasure and overwriting; the handwriting also seems to change part way through.

The left hand margin in each table is special. Each table has a ‘code word’, e.g., T1 ‘Aries’ has code word NISRAM. The left margin is composed entirely of the code word and the reversed code word, e.g., NISRAM MARSIN NISRAM MARSIN ... repeated until the margin is filled.

The code words are listed in the third column of my Table I. All thirty-six of them are exactly 6 letters long. The treatise in the Book of Soyga which discusses the tables, ‘Liber Radiorum’, has a series of paragraphs mentioning the code words for twenty-three of the tables, together with number sequences which stand in unknown relation to the words.²²

Note that the code words for T13–T24 are the reverses of those of the corresponding T1–T12. Thus, T1 ‘Aries’ has code word NISRAM and T13, also ‘Aries’, has code word MARSIN.

In Bodley 908, T36 ‘Magistri’ has a blank 13th line—the first line after the first complete MOYSES/SESYOM cycle on the left. The Sloane 8 version the table has the same 35 non-blank lines, but they have ‘closed ranks’ so it is the last line of 36 which is blank.

This may be seen in T1 ‘Aries’, shown in Plates I and II, where the first three lines soon fall into repetitions of the 4 letter motifs dizb, lytr, and xiba, respectively, and the next two rows into repetitions of the 12 letter motifs qsrnylfdzly and ohqtauiducis, respectively. Many of these motifs are found in several of the tables.

repetitions in the text could be sought, patterns counted, and proof sheets printed.

In the course of this work it was noticed that in the vast majority of cases where a pair of adjacent m's appeared, the letter above the second m was usually an n. That is, the pattern $\begin{bmatrix} ? \\ \mathbf{m} & \mathbf{m} \end{bmatrix}$ was almost always actually $\begin{bmatrix} \mathbf{n} \\ \mathbf{m} & \mathbf{m} \end{bmatrix}$. This led to a tabulation of all triplets of letters occurring in a $\begin{bmatrix} N \\ W & X \end{bmatrix}$ configuration, and it was found that in a large majority of cases the letter occupying the X position was predictable from the letters in the N and W positions. (The names of these variables are meant to represent the letter at the spot marked by X, the letter to its North, and the letter to its West.)

This led to discovery of an equation of form

$$X = N + f(W)$$

where $f(W)$ is a function of W and the addition is taken modulo 23. Here the letters are assigned numerical values according to their positions in the 23 letter Latin alphabet: a = 1, b = 2, ... , u = 20, x = 21, y = 22, z = 23, so that z + 2 = b, etc. The final ingredient in this formula, the auxiliary function f , is known to us only by a table of values determined empirically.

Table II. Auxiliary function values.

W	$f(W)$	W	$f(W)$	W	$f(W)$	W	$f(W)$ a	2	g	6	n	14	t	8
b	2	h	5	o	8	u	15
c	3	i	14	p	13	x	15
d	5	k	15	q	20	y	15
e	14	l	20	r	11	z	2
f	2	m	22	s	8

Expressed another way: a letter is obtained by counting a certain number of letters after the letter immediately above (i.e., north of) it in the table. The number of letters to count is determined by the letter standing to the immediate left (i.e., west). If the letter to the left is an f, for instance, we are to count two letters past the letter above.

So, continuing the example, if the letter above is an l, then the letter in question must be n, which is 2 letters past l: $\begin{array}{|c|} \hline \text{ } \\ \hline \text{f} \quad \text{n} \\ \hline \end{array}$. If the end of the alphabet is reached in this letter counting one starts over at the beginning, treating a as the letter after z, and so on.

For letters in the top row of a Soyga table, for which there is no N letter, the following formula holds:

$$X = W + f(W)$$

where the addition is again performed modulo 23. That is, for letters in the top row one applies the rule for letters in the interior of the table, acting as if the letter appearing to the left also appears above.

4. Directions for Creating the Tables

This, then, is a recipe for recreating the tables, although almost certainly not expressed in the same terms the Soyga author would have used. Starting with a code word, such as NISRAM, and an empty grid of 36 rows and columns:

4.1. LEFT COLUMN:

Write the code word followed by its reverse into the cells of the left hand column, starting at the top and working downwards, repeating the process until the column is full.

Fill in the remaining 35 cells of the top line, working from left to right, repeatedly applying the formula $X = W + f(W)$.

In our example, the first application of this formula yields $\mathbf{n} + f(\mathbf{n})$, that is, the letter $f(\mathbf{n}) = 14$ places after n in the 23 letter alphabet, which is d. (Thus: n is the 13th letter; $13 + 14 = 27$; reduced modulo 23, 27 is 4, which is d.) Write the letter d in the second cell in the top row, just to the right of the n of NISRAM.

The second application yields $\mathbf{d} + f(\mathbf{d})$. Since $f(\mathbf{d}) = 5$, this gives us i, the fifth letter after d. Write an i in the third cell of the top row.

The third application yields $\mathbf{i} + f(\mathbf{i})$. Since $f(\mathbf{i}) = 14$, this gives us z, the 14th letter after i. Write a z in the fourth cell of the top row.

The fourth application yields $\mathbf{z} + f(\mathbf{z}) = 23 + 2 = 25 = 2 = \mathbf{b}$; put a b in the fifth cell.

The fifth application yields $\mathbf{b} + f(\mathbf{b}) = 2 + 2 = 4 = \mathbf{d}$; put a $\mathbf{d}$ in the sixth cell. At this point we have fallen into a cycle: the next application yields $\mathbf{d} + f(\mathbf{d})$ which we have already seen before is $\mathbf{i}$, and the rest of the first row will continue to repeat $\mathbf{dizb\ dizb\ ...}$

At this point the top few rows of the partially filled in table will look like this:

ndizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdiz
i.....
s..... r.....

4.3. INTERIOR OF TABLE:

Now, starting with the second row and working left to right within rows, fill in the interior cells as follows. With each blank cell encountered, if the work has progressed in normal European page-reading order, the cell just above the blank cell and the cell to the left have both been filled in. Call the letters appearing in those cells N and W , respectively, and use the formula $N + f(W)$ to determine what to write into the blank cell under consideration.

For example, the first blank cell in row 2 is the second cell. It has a $\mathbf{d}$ above it and an $\mathbf{i}$ to its left. So the letter $\mathbf{d} + f(\mathbf{i}) = 4 + 14 = 18 = \mathbf{s}$ is written in that blank cell.

The next cell, cell 3, in row 2 has an $\mathbf{i}$ above it and an $\mathbf{s}$ to its left (the $\mathbf{s}$ which we just wrote). So we put $\mathbf{i} + f(\mathbf{s}) = 9 + 8 = 17 = \mathbf{r}$ in cell 3 of row 2. The next cell gets $\mathbf{z} + f(\mathbf{r}) = 23 + 11 = 11 = \mathbf{l}$, and so on. The top few rows now look like this:

ndizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdizbdiz
isrl.....
s.....

This process, carried out row by row, left to right, will eventually fill the table.

Alternatively, instead of working row by row, left to right in each row, as described here, one could equivalently work column by column, working downwards within each column. The final results would be the same.

Of course I make no claim that the Soyga author intentionally used my $X = N + f(W)$ formula. Whatever means were actually used to construct the tables clearly had this formula's mathematical structure implicitly 'built in', but we can only guess at its implementation. The arithmetic modulo 23, for instance, could have been effected equally well by paper-and-pencil computations, by consultation of charts, by letter counting on finger tips, or by the use of Lullian wheels.

5. Error Analysis and Genealogy

In fact the tables found in the two extant manuscripts of the Book of Soyga are not identical with those I produced by a computer programmed to carry out the above rules, starting with the same code words as in the manuscripts. This is for two reasons:

1. The law of formation for the tables is sufficiently intricate that the Soyga author occasionally made mistakes in working out the original tables.
2. The copyists made new mistakes when transcribing so much apparently unpatterned text.

Fortunately for us, these two kinds of errors have radically different consequences. If a cell in the original is miscalculated, the mistake spoils the calculation of the cells to its right and below it, resulting in an avalanche of error with an easily recognizable rectangular shape. A mere copying error, however, will not have a cumulative effect, and will be classifiable into one of several familiar types: transposition, deletion, eye skip, and replacement.

In short, the constraints placed on the tables by the $X = N + f(W)$ formula allow an aggressive form of textual emendation of the received tables in Bodley 908 and Sloane 8. A similar technique has been used to trace copying of logarithm tables by Charles Babbage (1792–1871), but is of course not generally applicable.²³ Only texts with a well-defined mathematical structure are amenable to this method of detecting and correcting errors of generation and transcription.

5.1. PRINCIPLES OF ERROR DIAGNOSIS: AN ARTIFICIAL EXAMPLE

This can all be seen in an artificial example, concocted so as to display every kind of pathology in the first few lines of the table. Suppose the code word is SARTON. Ideally, the first few lines of the table would be

```

Call this the ideal original table. Suppose, however, that in working this out a mistake was made: an e was put down instead of a p in the fifth cell of the second line. This mistaken letter will cause mistaken values to be calculated for the sixth cell of the second line and for the fifth cell of the third line, and those mistakes will beget others. The resulting actual original table will be (with the erroneous e capitalized)

```

Finally, suppose we receive this table, derived from the original but with a variety of copying errors:

```

rfcmqzblkazxgtxbnmpxp sxsx ztdgsdsicbm
...

Our task is to recover the ideal original and actual original and diagnose the copying errors.

First we inspect the left margin, where we see SARRON UOTR... etc, which is a damaged version of SARTON NOTRAS etc.; the code word is SARTON. (The left margin contains in all six copies — forward and reversed — of the code word, so in practice there is no doubt about what the code word is.)

From this we work out the ideal original table, and examine those positions where the received table differs from it. This diagram displays places where the received table agrees with the ideal original with a dot and places where they disagree with the value seen in the received table:

```

....u.....h.....k.....

..f.r..inixtpnnzlxqhzhq.cnhpqbmtagmyk
..f..qz.lkazxgtxbnmpx.skxs.tdgsdsicbm
...

Here we see an essentially solid rectangular region of disagreement, starting in the fifth cell of row 2, with the value e, which is due to an error in the original. The ‘pepper and salt’ pattern of sporadic disagreements elsewhere is characteristic of copying errors. So we conclude that an e was put down by mistake in row 2, cell 5 in the original.

Now we work out the corresponding putative original, and display the disagreements between it and the received copy:

```

....u.....h.....k.....
.....f.....ut...t..rt...t.....
.....n.....xibaxibaxi.....
r.....t.....f.....
...gl.....r.n...e.....
.....s.....s.yixfeafbylbtcahpxq
u.....p...i....alsolxkrkcckuqefzf
.....f.....r..qhzhcnhpqbmtagmek
..f.....z.....
...

Since the remaining rectangular regions of disagreement do not reach to the bottom of the table, we conclude that they are not due to errors in the original. (Further examination will show they are due to eye skip.) No further errors seem to have been made in the original, so our putative original table is finished.

We are now in a position to diagnose the copying errors. The mistakes in cells 21 through 30 of line 3 are easily seen to be due to elision of an a from one of the repeating baxi groups; the pattern ends on the right foot again in cell 31 by the insertion of an extra i. We might term this a horizontal eye skip error. The errors in cells 19 through 36 in lines 6, 7, and 8 are seen to result from a vertical eye skip error, as follows. The rightmost 18 cells of lines 6, 7, 8, and 9 of the original are

brgoaxqruterukfkha
yixfcasbylbteahpxq alsolxkrkcekuqefzs qhzqhcnhpqbmtagmyk
```

and of the received copy are

```
yixfeafbylbtcahpxq alsolxkrkcckuqefzf qhzqhcnhpqbmtagmek

so we see that the copyist deleted the right half of line 6 and duplicated the right half of line 9. There is a transposition error in row 5, cells 4 and 5: the original has lg and the copy has gl. The remaining errors are simple replacements of one letter by another.

5.2. SUMMARY OF ACTUAL ERRORS

In fact all of the types of errors illustrated above occur in both the Sloane 8 and Bodley 908 versions of the tables. There seems to have been one set of original tables which I call A. Our extant versions, Bodley 908 and Sloane 8, seem to have been derived independently from a flawed intermediate version which I call C.

Table III. Errors in Originals.

Table	Row/Col.	Err.	Row/Col.	Err.	Row/Col.	Err.
T5	15 / 24	t
T8	28 / 25	r

T32	6 / 25	l	7 / 24	e	34 / 27	k
T35	19 / 23	d

The originals A were constructed with the code words as listed in my Table I, by application of the $N + f(W)$ formula; the errors in applying the formula are listed in my Table III. Since errors in applying the $N + f(W)$ formula propagate and spoil everything below and to the right of the error locus, we can be sure that this is the complete list of errors in A. Out of the 46,656 cells in the complete set of tables, only 13 errors were made in applying the formula.

The alternative, that Bodley 908 and Sloane 8 did not share a common original, would require us to believe that exactly these same particular errors (and no others) were committed in working out the originals for both Bodley 908 and for Sloane 8. This is so unlikely under any reasonable model for errors that I reject this alternative in favour of a single shared common original A.

Bodley 908 and Sloane 8 same; A different	394	223
A, Bodley 908, and Sloane 8 all agree	45541	45936

A number of gross eye skip errors were committed in the descent of Bodley 908 and Sloane 8 from A. In Bodley 908's version of T2, row 3, cells 20–35 read axibaxibaxibaxib instead of xibaxibaxibaxiba; that is, an a was inserted at cell 20. In both Bodley 908's and Sloane 8's versions of T24, the right hand half of row 35 was elided and the right hand half of row 34 was duplicated. In both Bodley 908's and Sloane 8's versions of T36, row 3, cells 30–36 read baxibax instead of A's ibaxiba, and row 12 is elided.

I detected seven transposition errors, some unique to Bodley 908 and to Sloane 8, and some shared, as listed in my Table IV.

A tabulation was made of all corresponding places where Sloane 8, Bodley 908, or A were all legible but failed to give unanimous readings of cell entries, except for those involved in the gross eye skips noted above. The tabulation was made again, where all differences explainable by mere confusion of i/l, u/n, f/s, e/c, or t/r were censored, in an attempt to compensate for possible transcription errors on my part (especially in reading Sloane 8).

The results, in my Table V, again show Bodley 908 and Sloane 8 each have a large number of unique errors in addition to a larger number of shared errors. If either of Sloane 8 or Bodley 908 were copied from the other, the errors unique to the ancestor would have had to have been corrected in the child. Because the text is incoherent, there is no natural ‘self repair’ mechanism analogous to a scribe’s knowledge of orthography or grammar allowing emendation of errors, at least in the large areas of the tables lacking repeating motifs. If both Bodley 908 and Sloane 8 were independently derived from the original A, the 394 (or 223) shared errors would all be the result of accidental occurrence of precisely the same mistakes, independently committed in copying Bodley 908 from A and in copying Sloane 8 from A. This is very unlikely under any reasonable model of copying errors. So we conclude instead that both Bodley 908 and Sloane 8 were derived from a common flawed copy, which I call C, of the originals. Because Bodley 908 seems to have fewer disagreements with A than Sloane 8 does, we conclude that Bodley 908 is a more accurate copy of C than Sloane 8 is. Overall, there seems to be a 3/4% copying error rate in going from A to C, a 1/2% error rate in going from C to Sloane 8, and a 1/3% error rate in going from C to Bodley 908.

The same techniques can be used to see what relation Dee’s copy of the eight Soyga tables appearing in Sloane 3189, the Book of Enoch, has to Bodley 908 and Sloane 8.

In the first place, the T13 of Sloane 3189 shows the same mistake in applying the $N + f(W)$ formula (in row 18, column 2) present in the T13 of A. Hence even if not copied directly from Bodley 908 or Sloane 8, the Soyga tables in Sloane 3189 are, like those of Bodley 908 and Sloane 8, ultimately derived from A. A fortiori, they are copies of the Soyga tables, rather than simply creations inspired by, or in the same style as, the Soyga tables.

Secondly, the T2 of Sloane 3189 lacks the gross eye skip error found in row 3 of T3 of Bodley 908. This suggests Sloane 3189 was not copied from Bodley 908, but not strongly so: the eye skip error occurs in the repeating baxibaxi area and could have been corrected by a naive but alert copyist.

Third, looking only at locations where all four of A, Bodley 908, Sloane 8 and Sloane 3189 supply legible values, I found the results in my Table VI. The agree-disagree counts seem to make Sloane 3189 slightly but insignificantly closer to Bodley 908 than to Sloane 8.

Fourth, and more tellingly, the transposition error in T3 of Bodley 908, where there is a kq instead of the correct qk in row 22, is not present in the T3 of Sloane 3189. Unlike the T2 eye skip error, this error is well outside the area of repeating motifs, and so uncorrectable by a naive copyist.

On balance, then, it seems that the Soyga tables in Dee’s Book of Enoch, Sloane 3189, are closer in manuscript transmission to Sloane 8 than to Bodley 908.

Table VI. Summary of cell differences between Sloane 3189 and A, Bodley 908 and Sloane 8.

Sloane 3189 compared with	Raw		Censored
	Disagree	Agree	Disagree	Agree
A	288	9877	209	9956
Bodley 908	203	9962	149	10016
Sloane 8	208	9957	155	10010

Assuming that the Sloane 3189 Soyga tables were copied from Sloane 8, the most common copying error was replacing z by x: out of the 477 occurrences of the letter z in the Sloane 8 tables which have corresponding Sloane 3189 versions, it was rendered correctly 441 times, rendered as an x 34 times, and as a q and an r each once. There are 9 instances where an i was written instead of a y. Overall, there is a 1.5% copying error rate from Sloane 8.

Regardless of which particular manuscript the Book of Enoch got its Soyga table copies from, the questions of why they were copied and what relation they have to the Enochian system are central to furthering our understanding of Dee's relation to the Book of Soyga. On the one hand it is possible that Dee deliberately copied them (or had them copied) into his notebook (in rearranged sequence: T1, T13, T2, T14, and so on, so both 'Aries' tables were visible on an opening, both 'Taurus' tables visible on the next, etc.) for ready reference, possibly with motives similar to mine in section 3 of this paper, or possibly in order to use them in magical operations. This might have happened some time before 1582, that is, before his 'Enochian' period, in which case their appearance with the Enochian material in Sloane 3189 would be the accidental result of reuse of a largely blank notebook. On the other hand, they might have a more direct connection with the Sloane 3189 Enochian material: they might have been revealed the same way the rest of the Book of Enoch material was (in which case the copying errors could be attributed either laudably to angelic emendation or deplorably to mundane data-entry-clerk error), or they might have been accorded a semi-privileged status, not themselves revealed but worthy of inclusion as an appendix to the Book of Enoch by a principle of virtue-by-association. Even though I see no way to use the methods of this paper to distinguish between these possibilities, I do not hesitate to speculate in the next section about one possible stylistic connection between the Soyga tables and the rest of the Book of Enoch.

6. Comparison with other tables

Large square tabular arrays of letters are quite common in early modern magic works, exhibiting a variety of forms as yet unsurveyed in the scholarly literature. Here I present a brief taxonomy of magic tables according to their internal structure.

The more usual point of view, represented by Yates, pays primary attention to the authors' theories of magic and scant attention to the actual form of the tables:

... in Agrippa's Third Book [on Occult Philosophy] there are elaborate numerical and alphabetical tables for angel-summoning of the type [my emphasis] which Dee and Kelley used in their operations... These can be seen in Dee's manuscript 'Book of Enoch', British Museum, Sloane MSS. 3189. Cf. the 'Ziruph Tables' in Agrippa's De occult. phil., III, 24. Agrippa was not Dee's and Kelley's only source for practical Cabala, but their minds run on these things within the Agrippan framework.²⁴

In fact Dee's tables and Agrippa's have completely different forms (as can be seen by glancing at my Plates IV and V), so Yates must be using 'of the type' to refer to the authors' intentions and not to their tables' actual appearance or formation.²⁵

My tentative taxonomy begins by crudely dividing all square magic tables into two classes, the small and the large, according to whether they have, say, fewer than fifteen rows and columns or more. Among the small tables are those with letters forming words when read either vertically or horizontally, as in the famous square found at Herculaneum,

S	A	T	O	R
A	R	E	P	O
T	E	N	E	T
O	P	E	R	A
R	O	T	A	S

which are nowadays known as 'word squares'. Word square charms have been in continuous use from Roman times to the present. Many such squares appear in Abraham ben Simeon's Cabala Mystica, which Patai concludes — based in part on an analysis of the text in the squares themselves — was written around 1400.²⁶

Small numerical tables like

11	24	7	20	3
4	12	25	8	16
17	5	13	21	9
10	18	1	14	22
23	6	19	2	15

nowadays known as ‘magic squares’, have also been used since the late middle ages in Europe and in Asia for far longer as charms or arithmetical amusements.²⁷ (The numbers in each of the rows, columns, and two main diagonals all add up to the same sum, in this case 65.) Such a small numerical square appears in the 1514 print Melencolia I of Albrecht Dürer (1471–1528); many others are to be found in Agrippa’s Book II, where each planet is assigned its own magic square, each square being presented in both Arabic and equivalent Hebrew numerals.²⁸

As far as I know, all large magic tables in mediaeval or early modern sources are alphabetic. We may divide them into unpatterned and patterned; the latter are subdivided into those in which the form of the pattern is obvious and those in which the pattern is hidden.

Most of Dee’s tables in the Book of Enoch are unpatterned: squares and lozenge shaped arrays with 49 rows and columns filled with text in the ‘Enochian’ language described by Laycock and Whitby.²⁹ One of these is illustrated in my Plate IV. The text is inscribed in the tables line by line, left to right, one letter per cell, with no space between words. The eight Soyga tables appearing in the same book are of course patterned, but with a hidden pattern; it is tempting to believe that Dee’s favourite table size, 49, was inspired by the size of the Soyga tables, 36, since $49 = 7 \cdot 7$ is the next perfect square after $36 = 6 \cdot 6$. Similarly there are 36 Soyga tables and, as Kelley informed Dee on 24 March 1582/1583, there are to be 49 Enochian tables.³⁰

There are many large patterned tables in one of Agrippa’s Cabalistic chapters.³¹ They include: an angel chart of no interest to us, a ‘right table of commutation’, an ‘averse table of commutation’, an ‘irrational averse table of commutation’, a ‘table of Ziruph’, and a ‘rational table of Ziruph’.

The three tables of commutation are examples of what are nowadays known as ‘Latin squares’, N by N tabular arrays of symbols from an N symbol alphabet — in this case the $N = 22$ letter Hebrew alphabet — arranged in such a way that each letter appears just once in each row and in each column.³²

It is possible that Agrippa received the idea of the ‘tabula commutationum recta’ from Trithemius. Book 5 of Trithemius’s Polygraphia (written in 1508 but printed in 1518) contains a ‘recta transpositionis tabula’ and a ‘tabula transpositionis aversa’ of exactly the same form as Agrippa’s but based on a hybrid 24 letter alphabet formed by adjoining ‘w’ to the end of the standard 23 letter Latin alphabet.³³ These Latin squares are of a particularly simple type, where each row is a shift of its predecessor, giving the table an overall barber-pole pattern of diagonal stripes.

Agrippa’s third table of commutation, the ‘tabula aversa dicat irrationalis’ is a more complex Latin square. The top row and right-hand vertical margin contain the alphabet in its usual order; the bottom row and the left-hand vertical margin contain the alphabet in reversed order. The interior of the table is partially patterned. Most rows contain blocks of letters in consecutive alphabetical order. Because most of these blocks are shifted by one square from corresponding blocks in neighbouring rows, much of the area of the table has a diagonally striped pattern. But there does not seem to be a simple rule specifying the overall conformation of the table. It seems to be the result of an attempt to construct a Latin square as diagonally striped as possible, consistent with the given normal and reversed alphabets appearing in the margins.

Agrippa’s table of Ziruph, illustrated in my Plate V, is possibly copied from Johann Reuchlin (1455–1522), who in turn owes much to the thirteenth century Kabbalist Abraham Abulafia (1240–1292).³⁴ It consists of 22 rows, each with 11 cells per row. In each cell is a pair of Hebrew letters, placed in such a way that each letter appears exactly once in each row. Each row represents a reciprocal substitution alphabet: the letters in each of the 11 pairs are to be substituted for each other. One of these rows gives the ‘Atbash’ alphabet according to which the first and last letters of the Hebrew alphabet (aleph and taw) are interchanged, the second and second from last (beth and shin), and so on.³⁵ Successive rows are obtained by alternately shifting all the left hand elements of the pairs to the pair to the left or all the right hand elements to the pair to the right (with a provision for reversing direction when the end is reached) in a kind of contredanse.³⁶

Such substitution alphabets are used in the branch of the practical Cabala known as temurah (permutation) in connection with the operation of tseruf (combination). The intent is to enlarge the scope of Cabalistic correspondences between words and phrases: two words are related not only if they have the same numerical sum, as in usual gematria, but also if the one is equal to the Atbash-transformed version of the other, and so on. The ‘rational table of Ziruph’ is possibly Agrippa’s invention. The size, shape, and general appearance of this table is the same as the Ziruph table, but the pattern by which the letters shift from row to row is slightly different.

Not all large patterned tables appearing in the early modern period are magical, however. For instance, a manuscript of Thomas Harriot (1560–1621) contains letter squares intended to illustrate a combinatorial calculation.³⁷ These tables, like the Soyga tables, are derived from a key word or phrase, but unlike the Soyga tables, the pattern is completely obvious. Harriot used the key phrases HENRICVS PRINCEPS FECIT and SILO PRINCEPS FECIT to form squares of 21 and 17 rows respectively. The following artificial example based on the key word VERITAS illustrates the pattern. (The key phrase starts at the centre and emanates in concentric lozenges towards the corners.)

S	A	T	I	T	A	S
A	T	I	R	I	T	A
T	I	R	E	R	I	T
I	R	E	V	E	R	I
T	I	R	E	R	I	T
A	T	I	R	I	T	A
S	A	T	I	T	A	S

Each of these tables is accompanied by a numerical calculation, which turns out to give the number of ways the given key phrase can be spelled out in the square, following a path of vertical and horizontal moves to adjacent cells, starting in the centre and finishing in a corner. (The present VERITAS specimen has 80 such paths; the general formula is 4 times the binomial coefficient $\binom{2n}{n}$, when the key phrase has $2n + 1$ letters.)

And finally we have the tables in the Book of Soyga as our sole examples of large patterned tables whose pattern is hidden. None of the other tables, intricate as they are, have so complex an underlying pattern as that given by the $N + f(W)$ formula used in the Book of Soyga. It is no wonder that Dee found them perplexing.

³ Scrying, a cooperative magical operation during which privileged visual and aural information — in this case from angels — is conveyed to the participants, was much used by Dee. Three differing views of what ‘really went on’ are presented in Meric Casaubon, A True and Faithful Relation (London, 1659) (which I have not seen), in Whitby, Actions with Spirits, I, and in D. E. Harkness, 'Shows in the Showstone: A Theater of Alchemy and Apocalypse in the Angel Conversations of John Dee (1527–1608/9)', Renaissance Quarterly, 49 (1996), 707–737.

⁵ A marginal note on Sloane 3188, fol. 9^r, transcribed in Whitby, Actions with Spirits, II, p. 18, seems to say Kelley and Dee had met for the first time two days previous to this: 'Note: he had two dayes before made the like demaunde and request vnto me: but he went away vnsatisfied. For, his coming was to entrap me, yf I had any dealing with Wicked spirits as he confessed often tymes after...' See my note 16 for evidence of Kelley's continued ignorance of basic facts about the Book of Soyga a month later.

Both guess the Book of Soyga might well have influenced Dee or Kelley. Harkness, p. 415, suggests that the Book of Soyga's Adamic association — in particular its use of an Adamic language, discussed by Uriel and II, in Sloane 3188, fols. 9^r and 89^v — would have especially appealed to Dee. Whitby, Actions with Spirits, I, p. 147, cites I. R. F. Calder as conjecturing that the Book of Soyga is the Voynich manuscript (Yale University, Beinecke Rare Book & Manuscript Library, MS 408), the notorious cipher manuscript described by J. M. Manly, 'Roger Bacon and the Voynich MS', Speculum, 6 (1931), 345–391; if true, this would be a case of solving one mystery by replacing it with a greater. I see no connection between the two books, other than their probable ownership by Dee. The Book of Enoch, also called Liber Logaeth and Liber mysteriorum sextus et sanctus, British Library, MS Sloane 3189, was in effect Dee's lab notebook, written concurrently with the Spiritual Diaries, Sloane 3188. Whitby, Actions with Spirits, I, p. 143, gives a description of its contents.

But this directly contradicts what the spirit 'II' said during a scrying session with Edward Kelley and John Dee on Thursday 18 April 1583, as recorded in Dee's Spiritual Diaries, Sloane 3188, fol. 89^v, transcribed in Whitby, Actions with Spirits, II, p. 332: 'Soyga signifieth not Agyos. Soyga alca miketh.' (Dee's—or II's—emphasis.) One might take this as evidence of Kelley's unfamiliarity with the Book of Soyga at this early stage in his residence in Dee's household.

²⁵ That is, Yates did not care to pay attention to the differences between the tables, possibly because she did not know how to. It is also possible that for Yates, magic tables — unlike texts or images — are not subject to the processes of copying, emulation, improvement, and confusion; that is, they are neither vehicles for ideas nor potential sources of evidence in intellectual or cultural history.

²⁸ Heinrich Cornelius Agrippa of Nettesheim, De Occulta Philosophia libri tres (Cologne, 1533). I rely on the edition of V. Perrone Compagni (Leiden: Brill, 1992). In a supercilious scholium, Shumaker, The Occult Sciences in the Renaissance, p. 139, takes Agrippa to task for a mistake in one of his magic squares. However the mistake is clearly a typographic error present only in the Arabic numeral form of the square, and only in the particular edition Shumaker looked at. (Shumaker, p. 158, note 70, seems to say he relies on 'Henricus Agrippa ab Nettesheym, Opera (Lugduni, c. 1650?)', which he understands to be printed in London instead of Lyons!) For a discussion of Agrippa's magic squares, see K. A. ³⁰ Sloane 3189, fol. 62^v, transcribed in Whitby, Actions with Spirits, II, p. 227. Apparently one of the tables is not to be written, leaving only 48 to be put in the Book of Enoch. It is tempting to compare this with the Book of Soyga's T36 'Magistri', which has a missing row.

³¹ Agrippa, De Occulta Philosophia, III, 25, sigs. yii^r–yiiii^r. These tables are surveyed in a modern reissue of the J[ohn] F[rench] translation (London, 1651) of Agrippa: Three Books of Occult Philosophy, edited by Donald Tyson (St. Paul, Minnesota: Llewellyn Publications, 1993), appendix VII, pp. 762–767.

³² J. Dénes and A. D. Keedwell, Latin Squares and their Applications (New York: Academic Press, 1974).

³³ Johannes Trithemius, Polygraphiae libri sex (Oppenheim, 1518), v, sigs. oij^r and oij^v. It is barely possible that Trithemius received the idea of such tables from Agrippa, possibly when they met in the winter of 1509/1510. In 1510 Agrippa sent Trithemius a draft of his De occulta philosophia which, according to Compagni (p. 58), lacked the chapter containing the Ziruph tables and tables of commutation. Trithemius's use of the tabula recta is purely cryptographic, and most printed works on cryptography ever since include such diagrams, often under the name of 'Vigenère table'. Since Agrippa's text does not discuss his tables of commutation it seems more likely, absent any further direct evidence, that Agrippa copied from Trithemius.

³⁴ Johann Reuchlin, De Arte Cabalistica (Hagenau, 1517), Book III, sig. Nvi^r; I rely on the parallel-text translation of M. Goodman and S. Goodman, of 1983, reissued with introduction by Moshe Idel (Lincoln, Nebraska: University of Nebraska Press, 1993). For gematria and the Reuchlin-Abulafia connection: Gershom Scholem, 'Gematria' in Encyclopaedia Judaica (Jerusalem: Macmillan, 1971) and Gershom Scholem, Major Trends in Jewish Mysticism, second edition, reissued (New York: Schocken, 1995), p. 127.

³⁵ A somewhat similar table of reciprocal substitution alphabets occurs in Giovanni-Battista della Porta, De Occultis Literarum Notis (Naples, 1563) II, 16; I rely on a facsimile (Zaragoza: Cátedra de Criptografía del Centro Politécnico Superior de la Universidad de Zaragoza, 1996) of the 1593 Montbéliard edition. This is a cryptographic work, and Porta's tables are almost as much a fixture in cryptographic literature as Vigenère tables. Porta's table is based on a 22 letter Latin alphabet with the letter K omitted. In Porta's table but not in the Ziruph table letters from the first half of the alphabet are paired only with letters from the last half.

³⁶ There appears to be one deviation from this pattern. In the seventeenth row of both Reuchlin's and Agrippa's tables the letters sade and resh are paired, as are tet and taw. The rule used to produce the rest of the table would pair taw with sade and pair tet with resh.

³⁷ British Library, Additional MS 6782, fols. 27, 28, with associated calculation on fol. 57. These are briefly described in John W. Shirley, Thomas Harriot: a Biography (Oxford: Oxford University Press, 1983), pp. 419–420, who apparently did not understand the calculation on fol. 57. I intend to address these Harriot tables in a subsequent paper.
